400. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent gathering) at the Hotel Algonquin at 12:30 pm (possibly in the lobby, or elsewhere, depending on how many people show up). If you're planning to attend, please let Anne Cotton know (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@mediaone.net>.
401. The BSI annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); there will be an open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the usual traditional and untraditional entertainment, and the cost of the event is $45.00 (details below) or $55.00 at the door.
402. Oct 01 #8: And the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal brunch on Sunday, at 11:30 am at the Baker Street restaurant at 1152 First Avenue (at 63rd Street); it's open to all, and reservations are advised, to Marina Stajic (425 East 51st Street #4-A, New York, NY 10022) <mstajic@aol.com>.
403. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $179.00 a night (Tuesday through Sunday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI (the special rate is the equivalent of $156.00 plus tax). Other charges (room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians; contact the Algonquin directly (there's a firm mid-December cutoff deadline) and ask for the Baker Street Irregulars rate (212-840-6800).
404. And here are the details: you can request a reservation form for the Thursday lecture, the Martha Hudson breakfast, and the Saturday reception, from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; please see that your reservations are received by Mike by Dec. 15.
405. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. Ask for the lowest available rate, don't be shy about asking for discounts (AAA, senior, corporate), and if you plan to arrive on Thursday you should confirm that weekend rates apply, and request written confirmation.
406. Quality Inn (59 West 46th St.) $80 corporate single/double (212-719-2300); Best Western President (234 West 48th St.) $84 single $92 double (212-246-8800); Vanderbilt Y (224 East 47th St. at Second Ave.) $85 single/$95 double (shared baths) (212-756-9600); Red Roof Inn (6 West 32nd St.) $90 corporate single/$100 double (212-643-7100); Hampshire Hotel (157 West 47th St.) $99 single/$109 double/$139 suite (212-768-3700); Wellington Hotel (55th St. at 7th Ave.) $119 "America's special" single/double (212-247-3900); Pickwick Arms Hotel (230 East 51st St.) $125 single/double (212-355-0300); Hotel Pennsylvania (401 7th Ave. at 33rd St.) $129 single/double (212-736-5000); Holiday Inn (440 West 57th St.) $129 "great rate" single/double (212-581-8100). Mary Ellen also recommends <<http://www.nycvisit.com>> for specials and general information, and <<http://www.site59.com>> for last-minute bargains.
407. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.

408. Nov 01 #1: Bouchercon 2001 ("A Capital Mystery") attracted 1,600 fans and authors to Washington; Sue Grafton was the American guest of honor, Peter Lovesey was the international guest of honor, and Edward D. Hoch was honored for lifetime achievement. There was a panel on "Sherlock Holmes and His Creator", another on "Gaslight Detectives", and Daniel Stashower did an excellent job of impersonating Harry Houdini on the panel on "Keeping in Character". And Peter Lovesey spoke at the awards banquet and brought a letter from a distinguished Briton who couldn't attend the convention because he was a hundred years old. The letter was from Baskerville Hall, and Lovesey read it: "Woof! Woof!"
409. Audiocassettes of all the Bouchercon 2001 panels and interviews are available from the Audio Recording Service, 1414 John Brown Road, Queenstown, MD 21658) <<http://www.ars-service.com>>.
410. Bouchercon 2002 ("Longhorns of the Law") will be in Austin, Oct. 17-20; the guests of honor will be Mary Willis Walker and George Pelecanos (Box 27277, Austin, TX 78755) <<http://www.bouchercon2002.org>>. Bouchercon 2003 ("Where the Odds Favor Mystery") will be held in Las Vegas, Oct. 16-19; the guests of honor will be James Lee Burke and Ian Rankin (SHP, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147) <<http://www.bconvegas2003.org>>. And (planning well ahead) Bouchercon 2004 will be in Toronto, Oct. 7-10 (Box 7, Thornhill, ON L3T 3N1, Canada) <almark-co@rogers.com>.
411. Trevor Raymond reports that the anthology STORIES AND POEMS FOR EXTREMELY INTELLIGENT CHILDREN OF ALL AGES, edited by Harold Bloom (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2001; 578 pp., $27.50), is arranged by season, and includes (in the section for "Autumn") "The Problem of Thor Bridge".
412. Spradlin & Associates (Box 863, Lapeer, MI 48446) offer an attractive deck of playing cards, with Paget and Steele portraits of principal characters on the court cards (Moriarty's on the jokers), and Canonical quotations on the others; $12.00 a deck, plus shipping. Also available are three different coffee mugs with Paget artwork and appropriate quotations; $8.00 each, plus shipping. Credit-card orders per order, and you can write for an illustrated flier.
413. Sorry about that: 1stBooks Library is at 2595 Vernal Pike, Bloomington, IN 47404 (088-938-8640) <<http://www.1stbooks.com>>; they publish Philip J. Carraher's pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEAD RABBITS SOCIETY (Oct 01 #6).
414. Some of us are old enough to recall the days when society newsletters were produced in purple ink on hectograph machines, and it was considered daring to use overlays in red and green ink. And the world certainly has changed, thanks to computers and scanners and printers that allow newsletter to show high-quality photographs and full color. The Oct. 2001 issue of the Illustrious Clients Newsletter is a fine example of this modern technology, with 16 colorful and well-illustrated pages devoted to "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and society activities; you can purchase a copy of the issue ($2.00 postpaid) from Steven Doyle (540 W. Sycamore St. Zionsville, IN 46077).

415. Nov 01 #2: SHERLOCK HOLMES' STRANGEST CASES, illustrated by Spain Rodriguez (San Francisco: Cottage Classics, 2001; 117 pp., $17.95 in paper covers), has five cases ("The Speckled Band", "The Engineer's Thumb", "The Musgrave Ritual", "Black Peter", and "The Devil's Foot") and interesting artwork. Rodriguez was (with Robert Crumb) one of the founders of ZAP Comix, and was a leading contributor to underground comics, and his artwork is a dramatic match with the more macabre of Holmes' cases. Also available in cloth (signed, $40.00) and (signed, with an insert of original art-work, $160.00). Cottage Classics is an imprint of Word-Play Publications (1 Sutter Street #205, San Francisco 94104) <<http://www.word-play.com>>.
416. Don Izban's SBIOS (Sherlockians by Invitation Only Society) has a new lapel pin (in pewter), available for $20.00 postpaid from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.
417. The conference in Toronto last month was an occasion for exhibits at three different sites: the Toronto Reference Library showed its delightful "Footprints of the Hound" display of manuscripts and other material; the Merrill Collection (of science fiction and fantasy) offered "Mysterious Worlds: A Tribute to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" with four display cases of books in that genre, by Conan Doyle and others; and the Osborne Collection (of children's books) showed some interesting Conan Doyle material and related items. The catalog for the "Footprints of the Hound" exhibit is well written and well illustrated; copies are available on request (and free) from Victoria Gill, Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada <vgill@tpl.toronto.on.ca>.
418. And one of the conference souvenirs offered Peter Calamai's careful historical research: "MASTERLY INACTIVITY": THE CANADIAN BASKERVILLES: THE COUNTRY'S FIRST SHERLOCKIAN SCION, 1945-1961 is a 32-page pamphlet that costs $10.00 (or CA$13.00) postpaid from The Bootmakers of Toronto, 5 Brownlea Avenue, Etobicoke, ON M9P 2R5, Canada.
419. It also was interesting to see just how cosmopolitan a city Toronto is: the Toronto Public Library system offers children's programs in Cantonese, English, French, Mandarin, Persian, Polish, and Vietnamese.
420. There has been discussion among some of the subscribers to the electronic Sherlockian mailing list The Hounds of the Internet about how to pronounce the word "S'ian" (a usage found occasionally in this newsletter). "S'ian" is, of course, a contraction rather than a word, and it is a contraction I use (to avoid confusion) only if the word "Sherlockian" has appeared earlier in the same paragraph. For those who feel a need to pronounce (rather than merely read) the contraction, I would suggest that the pronunciation "sher-lock-i-an" will serve nicely.
421. "Agatha Christie and Archaeology: Mystery in Mesopotamia" is a new exhibition at the British Museum, about her work with her husband Max Mallowan at sites such as Ur, Nineveh, and Nimrud. The exhibition opened on Nov. 8 and runs through Mar. 24, according to the flier at hand from John Baesch, and during the first month (act quickly) you have an opportunity to explore an Orient Express carriage in the forecourt of the museum. There's a web-site at <<http://www.thebritishmuseum.ac.uk/agathachristie>>.
422. Nov 01 #3: Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481) (800-544-7297) <<http://www.bitsandpieces.com>> continues to offer its mystery jigsaw puzzles in "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes": "The Watson Inheritance" and "The Case of the Fallen Actress" cost $10.95 each, or $16.95 for the pair.
423. Charles J. Blinderman, whose THE PILTDOWN INQUEST (1987) covered the hoax in great detail, with discussions of all the likely and unlikely suspects (one of the unlikely being Sir Arthur Conan Doyle), has joined with David Joyce to create a web-site at <<http://www.clark.edu/~piltdown>> that offers thorough cover of the affair. They have another web-site about T. H. Huxley, whose work influenced Darwin and others, and might have influenced Sherlock Holmes (although that's not covered at the web-site); "The Huxley File" is at <<http://aleph0clarku.edu/huxley>>.
424. Jerry Wachs offers lapel pins for the 25th anniversary of The Sir James Saunders Society, and for The Epilogues of Sherlock Holmes; they cost $10.00 each (plus $1.00 for shipping per order) from Jerry (One Lincoln Plaza, 20 West 64th Street #32-J, New York, NY 10023).
425. Further to the report (Sep 00 #6) about Rodger Garrick-Steele's claim that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was a plagiarist and a murderer (he allegedly colluded with his publishers to deny B. Fletcher Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail for THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and then in 1907, worried that his affair with Fletcher Robinson's wife Gladys would be discovered, poisoned Fletcher Robinson with laudanum), Garrick-Steele never did find a publisher for his book detailing his expose. Now, according to a story, in the Torquay Herald Express (Nov. 2), reported by Jon Lellenberg, Garrick-Steele has charged Conan Doyle with the murder of British naturalist Charles Dawson, the motive being that Dawson was aware that Conan Doyle had perpetrated the Piltdown hoax. Garrick-Steele's evidence was found during an excursion to the Northern Territories in Australia, and he plans to send a dossier to Scotland Yard. He also has challenged "devoted Sherlockians" to refute his charges: "If this is true, they are covering for a serial murderer. If they don't know this then they are fools indeed."
426. The eleventh volume of The Shoso-in Bulletin, published by The Men with the Twisted Konjo and edited by Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes, is a fine collection of articles, essays, pastiches, parodies, and artwork from contributors in 14 countries on four continents, with 226 pages (and everything's in English). $12.00 plus postage from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; creditcard orders welcome. Or £9.00 postpaid (in the U.K.) from John Hall, 20 Drury Avenue, Horsforth, Leeds LS18 4BR, England. The Shoso-in Bulletin also has a web-site at <<http://www.parkcity.ne.jp/~hirayama/index.htm>>.
427. Mark Alberstat's 2002 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.

428. Nov 01 #4: "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" debuted this month on a record-breaking 6,000 screens in the United States, according to Alona Wartofsky's story in the Washington Post (Nov. 11); the story was filed from London and said that "one recent report detailed survey findings that Harry Potter is the most famous character in all of British literature (ahead of Sherlock Holmes, Oliver Twist, James Bond, and, alas, Winnie the Pooh)." The survey, conducted by the marketing research group NOP World, involved asking 1,000 people of all ages to name the first fictional character that came into their heads; 22 percent said it was Harry Potter (not all that surprising, in view of the deluge of publicity for the film). And Elvis Mitchell, in a review in the N.Y. Times (Nov. 16), suggested that the film was "Young Sherlock Holmes" as written by C. S. Lewis from a story by Roald Dahl."
429. Further to the mention (Oct 01 #5) of "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (the five-part radio series now in production for BBC radio with Clive Merrison as Sherlock Holmes and Andrew Sachs as Dr. Watson), scriptwriter Bert Coules notes that information about cast and crew, and studio photographs, can be seen by the electronically enabled at his web-site at <<http://freespace.virgin.net/bert.coules/further.htm>>.
430. Michael S. Greenbaum (Janus Books, Box 40787, Tucson, AZ 85717) (800-986-1165) <<http://janusbooks.com>> has issued a new catalog (List H) of detective fiction and Sherlockiana (and there's a lot of S'iana); it's available at his web-site, and by mail.
431. "Sex and Drugs and Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on a story in the September issue of the British Airways in-flight magazine High Life, at hand from Ev Herzog. The story was about Marylebone, described as "the central London village no one knows. So the area has long been a perfect hide-out for pop stars, poets, society pimps -- and fictional detectives." According to Simon Kuper, Christine Keeler drank whisky and messed around at Wimpole Mews with a Soviet intelligence officer named Ivanov, and then engaged in an affair with Britain's Secretary of State for War, John Profumo.

John Lennon and Yoko Ono were busted for cannabis in Ringo Starr's flat on Montague Square (Lennon later claimed that the drugs had been left behind by a previous resident, Jimi Hendrix), And Sherlock Holmes was "a natural Marylebonian." Kuper also notes that Conan Doyle modelled did not model 221b on the building that houses the Sherlock Holmes Museum in Baker Street, but rather what is now 48 Baker Street, across the road from the head office of Marks and Spencer.

432. Jenny Laird died on Oct. 31. Her acting career on stage, screen, and television lasted from the 1930s into the 1980s, and she was a director and a writer as well. She played Mrs. Hudson in Peter Cushing's television film "The Masks of Death" (1984).
433. Marco Zatterin reports that a new play "Sherlock Holmes e il Mistero della Tomba Egizia" (which he wrote with Raffaele Castria) will be performed at the Teatro Stabile del Giallo in Rome from Dec. 21 to Feb. 4. Holmes, on his way from Khartoum to Alexandria and Montpellier, stops at Thebes, meets a young Howard Carter, and solves the mystery of the Egyptian tomb. The theater's address is 871 via Cassia, 00198 Roma, Italy.

434. Nov 01 #5: Naxos AudioBooks offers four sets of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (with four stories, abridged) read by David Timson, each on three CDs (£13.99) or three cassettes (£9.99); Hesketh Pearson's ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE (abridged) read by Tim Pigott-Smith on two CDs (£10.99) or two cassettes (£8.99); and FOUR SHORT STORIES by Conan Doyle (abridged) read by Carl Rigg (the stories are "The Horror of the Heights", "The Terror of Blue John Gap", "Lot No. 249" and "The Sealed Room") on two CDs (£10.99) or two cassettes (£8.99). 34 Holmethorpe Avenue, Redhill, Surrey, RH1 2NN, England) <<http://www.naxosaudiobooks.com>>.
435. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists gathered for dinner at Cornwall's in Boston on Nov. 7, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America, to honor the world's first forensic geologist. Scott Monty welcomed the visitors on behalf of the locals. Our next dinners will be in Houston in March, and in Denver in October. Convention activities included honors for Sarah Andrews, whose series of mystery novels starring forensic geologist Em Hansen won her an award from the National Association of Geoscience Teachers: the James H. Shea Award is given "in recognition of exceptional contributions in the form of writing and/or editing of earth science materials that are of interest to the general public." Sarah's next book will be FAULT LINE, due from St. Martin's Press in January, just in time for the Winter Olympics, and appropriately so, since the novel is set in Salt Lake City during the Winter Olympics.
436. Peter Lovesey's pastiche "The Four Wise Men" (previously published in the anthology MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS) (Nov 99 #5) has been collected in his THE SEDGEMOOR STRANGLER AND OTHER STORIES OF CRIME (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 2001; 200 pp., $42.00 signed in cloth, $17.00 in paper); Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (877-622-6656) <<http://www.crippenlandru.com>>.
437. Sotheby's next sale of "valuable printed books and manuscripts" on Dec. 13 (34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England) <<http://www.sothebys.com>> includes interesting books by Conan Doyle, many of them inscribed (some to his first wife Touie or to his second wife Jean), and books by other authors (from Conan Doyle's library, and often signed), and a presentation copy of Bram Stoker's THE MYSTERY OF THE SEA (1902) inscribed by the author to Conan Doyle. And some original watercolors by Richard Doyle (Conan Doyle's uncle). Much of the material was sent to auction by "a great nephew of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
438. Varro E. Tyler died on Aug. 22. He was an internationally recognized expert on herbal medicine, and the author of more than 270 publications, including three popular books in the field, and was on the faculty at Purdue University for more than 30 years, including 20 years as dean of its School of Pharmacy and Pharmacal Sciences; he also was a renowned philatelist, and the foremost expert in the field of philatelic forgeries (in the foreword to his book FOCUS ON FORGERIES he suggested: "If you, too, enjoy the thrill of the hunt and wish to avoid the disappointment felt when the forgery you purchased turns out to be genuine, I believe this volume will be helpful to you"). His contribution to our literature was including a section on "The Devil's Foot Root" in a presentation on "The Physiological Properties and Chemical Constituents of Some Habit-Forming Plants" to the American Society of Pharmacognosy (it was published in the Dec. 1966 issue of Lloydia).
439. Nov 01 #6: Roger Johnson's "The Great Detective: The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" is an interesting play with an intriguing concept: Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle hold a press conference, talking with reporters about Conan Doyle and Watson and Holmes; the play was written for the Chelmsford Theatre Workshop and performed last month, and the 46-page script is available from The Pyewacket Press (Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England); £4.00 postpaid (checks payable to Roger Johnson) or $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to Jean Upton).
440. Further to the report (Sep 01 #6) on BBC Worldwide's plans to issue videocassettes of some of the "Sherlock Holmes" series that starred Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock, Roger Johnson happily notes that the first release is to be "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1968). They also will issue cassettes of "The Picture of Dorian Gray" (1976, with John Gielgud and Jeremy Brett) and "Count Dracula" (1977, with Louis Jourdan). It's likely that the releases will be on PAL-format cassettes, and multi-region DVDs.
441. The Ferret Company's calendar for 2001 featured an amusing photograph of a deerstalkered ferret with a magnifying glass, and the photograph's now offered on a Grin&ferret greeting card ("Do I detect a birthday?"); $1.95 each (with envelope). Box 7161, Redwood City, CA 94063 <www.ferretcompany.com>.
442. The Sherlock Holmes Pipe Tamper Collection is a set of six pipe tampers in a velvet-lined black-walnut case (with tampers showing Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, Mrs. Hudson, Lestrade, and Wiggins), available for $130.00 postpaid from the Catnip Hill Trading Co. (2201 Catnip Hill Road, Nicholasville, KY 40356) <<http://www.catniphill.com>>; you can request their full-color illustrated flier.
443. June Thomson's Sherlock Holmes pastiche "The Case of the Scottish Tragedy" (previously available only on a Random House audiocassette) (Jul 98 #6) was published last year in a mystery anthology edited by Otto Penzler: CRIMINAL RECORDS (London: Orion, 2000; 465 pp., £10.99).
444. Further to the item (Apr 01 #2) about the BBC's new television version of "The Lost World" (starring Bob Hoskins, Peter Falk, James Fox, Elaine Cassidy, and Matthew Rhys), Catherine Cooke reports that the two 75-minute episodes will air on BBC-1 over Christmas. And of course there's a web-site, at <<http://www.bbc.co.uk/lostworld>>.
445. Volume two of William S. Dorn's A STUDY GUIDE TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (Denver: Pencil Productions, 2001; 301 pp., $19.95) offers quizzes, questions, and exercises in chronology, and illustrations by Nancy Beiman, for THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, HIS LAST BOW, and THE CASE BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES; it is based on the courses on Sherlock Holmes that Bill has taught at the University of Denver for more than 25 years, and it offers welcome guidance to both teachers and students. The publisher's address is 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210, and the postpaid cost is $21.45 (to the U.S.) or $22.45 (to Canada) or $24.45 (elsewhere) postpaid. A CD-ROM disk with both volumes of the study guide costs $11.45/$12.45/$14.45 postpaid.
446. Dec 01 #1: Late-breaking news about the birthday festivities: Judith Freeman reports that the video compilation "What a Hound It Was" (produced by Paul Singleton and Maribeau Briggs and premiered for an enthusiastic audience at the "Footprints of the Hound" conference in Toronto in October) will be shown on Saturday at 7:00 pm in St. John's Hall at St. Mary the Virgin Church at 145 West 46th Street; $5.00.

447. Richard Bernstein's "A Reading List for a Troubled Land" (in the N.Y. Times on Nov. 8) noted that "Afghanistan, for centuries a country of brutal wars between local tribes and foreign armies, has inspired a substantial literature, fiction and nonfiction, military history, and semicomical fantasy." He began with Rudyard Kipling's "The Man Who Would Be King" and then mentioned James Bond and Dr. Watson, and praised Henry Hanna's THE SECOND AFGHAN WAR: ITS CAUSES, ITS CONDUCT AND ITS CONSEQUENCES (that's the war in which Watson was wounded), and Karl E. Meyer and Shareen Blair Brysac's TOURNAMENT OF SHADOWS: THE GREAT GAME AND THE RACE FOR EMPIRE IN CENTRAL ASIA (Watson is in the book, likely thanks to Meyer, who is a member of The Baker Street Irregulars), and George MacDonald Fraser's FLASHMAN. Bernstein's discussed many other books of interest to those who would like to know more about the history of Afghanistan.
448. The eleventh annual Watsonian weekend will be a joint event with The STUD Sherlockian Society on May 3-5, 2002, starting with a gathering at the home of Susan Diamond and Allan Devitt on May 3, and continuing with the Solar Pons/Fortescue Honours Brunch in Oak Park and the STUDS' annual dinner in Chicago on May 4, and the 43rd annual running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Track in Cicero on May 5. Details are available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@attbi.com>.
449. The Pleasant Places of Florida offer their lapel pin, window decal, water glasses, and Wanda and Jeffery Dow's RODGER BASKERVILLE'S LONELY HOUND FROM HELL; and an illustrated sales-list is available from Wanda Dow, 1737 Santa Anna Drive, Dunedin, FL 54698 <wjced.dunedin@worldnet.att.net>.
450. Spencer Holst died on Nov. 23. He was an award-winning writer and storyteller who once said: "In the geography of literature I have always felt my work to be equidistant between two writers, each born in Ohio - Hart Crane and James Thurber - but my wife says don't be silly, your stories are halfway between Hans Christian Andersen and Franz Kafka." Holst's parody "The Giant Rat of Sumatra" appeared in Oui (Nov 1973) and was collected in SPENCER HOLST STORIES (1976).
451. "I am a little nervous," Thaddeus Sholto said (in "The Sign of the Four"), "and I find my hookah an invaluable sedative," He had brought his hookah with him from India, and Indian water pipes were included in an exhibition of "Water Pipes from the Islamic World" at the Israel Museum in Jerusalem from fall 2000 to fall 2001. "Have a Nargileh" was the alternate title of the exhibition. The catalog offers interesting discussion of hookahs and other waterpipes, in English and Hebrew, and full-color illustrations, and costs $5.00 postpaid (currency only, please) from the Israel Museum (attn: Mrs. Na'ama Brosh), P.O. Box 71117, Jerusalem 91710, Israel.

452. Dec 01 #2: Dick Wright reports that Joe Bell still is remembered in Edinburgh, where (to quote from a web-site), "The Joseph Bell Centre for Forensic Statistics and Legal Reasoning has been set up to evaluate, present, and interpret evidence. The Centre draws on skills in statistics, law and artificial intelligence from the University of Edinburgh, Glasgow Caledonian University, and the Lothian and Borders Police Force. Researchers from Australia, Belgium, England, and the United States are collaborating with the Scottish researchers. Dr. Joseph Bell was a professor of Medicine at the University of Edinburgh, when he encountered Arthur Conan Doyle, the future author of the Sherlock Holmes stories. Bell was the man who inspired the character of Sherlock Holmes and shared many qualities with the famous detective." There's more information about the Centre at <<http://www.cfslr.ed.ac.uk/cfslr>>.
453. Peter Ackroyd's LONDON: THE BIOGRAPHY, published last year by Chatto & Windus in London, has an American edition (New York: Nan A. Talese/Doubleday, 2001; 801 pp., $45.00), and it's a delightful book. "The image of London as a human body is striking and singular," Ackroyd notes, and his book is full of anecdotes and insight and fine writing (and there are occasional mentions of Conan Doyle and Holmes, of course).
454. Bill Ward ("Major Prendergast") died on Nov. 22. He was born in Oklahoma, and as a child was a movie star, from the age of three in "The Amazing Mrs. Holliday" (1943) to the age of seven in "The Foxes of Harrow" (1947), and thus was one of the few members of The Baker Street Irregulars to have appeared in movies as an actor. He had a career in resort management in St. Petersburg Beach, and was an energetic and enthusiastic member of The Pleasant Places of Florida (in which his alias was "Red Indian" in tribute to his being half Cherokee), and a fine Sherlockian poet; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
455. "There are no exact details to hand, but the event seems to have occurred about twelve o'clock in Regent Street, outside the Cafe Royal" (according to the newspaper quoted in "The Illustrious Client"); John Baesch reports that visitors to the Cafe Royal will find a portrait of Conan Doyle on the wall in Daniel's (the restaurant's coffeeshop/bar), with an explanation of the reference in the story, and the assertion that Conan Doyle came there often and liked it.
456. Patrick Horgan has played both Sherlock Holmes and William Gillette on the stage, and his unabridged readings of A STUDY IN SCARLET, THE SIGN OF FOUR, and THE VALLEY OF FEAR are available on ten audiocassettes in BEST OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, VOLUME 1 from The Literate Listener (Redmond: CounterTop Software/Topic Entertainment, 2000; $29.98). They're nicely done.
457. Colin Bruce's CONNED AGAIN, WATSON!: CAUTIONARY TALES OF LOGIC, MATH, AND PROBABILITY, published earlier this year (Mar 01 #1), now is available as a trade paperback (Cambridge: Perseus Publishing, 2001; 290 pp., $15.00). He uses Holmes and Watson to explain scams, game theory, and statistics, and does a good job of making it all sound easy; his earlier THE EINSTEIN PARADOX AND OTHER SCIENCE MYSTERIES SOLVED BY SHERLOCK HOLMES (Dec 98 #1) used a similar approach for scientific paradoxes. The author has a web-site at <<http://members.aol.com/OxMathDes/ColinBruce.html>>.
458. Dec 01 #3: SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERY TALES, by Frank Thomas (New York: Gryphon Books, 2001; 154 pp., $16.00), offers 13 stories, most of them adapted from pastiches published in Popular Bridge in the 70s and 80s; shipping extra, and the publisher's address is Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228 <<http://www.gryphonbooks.com>>.
459. The new film of "The Lord of the Rings" is getting lots of publicity, and of course there's an official web-site at <<http://www.lordoftherings.net>>, Ratana Ngini reports, where the section on the cast has a nice biography of Christopher Lee, who is noted as the only actor who has portrayed Sherlock Holmes and his brother Mycroft (Lee plays the wizard Saruman in "The Lord of the Rings"). You'll also see John Rhys-Davies (Gimli); he played Prof. Challenger in "The Lost World" and "Return to the Lost World" (1994).
460. The other notable film this season ("Harry Potter") also has some Sherlockian actors: Alan Rickman (Prof. Severus Snape) has played Sherlock Holmes on stage and Prof. Moriarty on screen, and John Cleese (Nearly Headless Nick) has played both Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Sherlock-Holmes on television, and Richard Harris (Headmaster Albus Dumbledore) has played James McParlan on screen (perhaps not strictly Sherlockian, but McParlan was the real Birdy Edwards).
461. Further to the report (Nov 01 #6) on BBC Worldwide's plans to issue videocassettes of some of the "Sherlock Holmes" series that starred Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock, "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1968) is advertised at their web-site, with the two 50-minute episodes on videocassette (so far only in PAL format) or DVD (multi-region); £19.99 each plus shipping (which varies depending on your country); you can order by mail (Video Offer,

- BBC Learning, Room A3022, 80 Wood Lane, London, W12 0TT, England) or on-line at <www.bbcworldwide.com/vet/specialinterests/content/titles/Baskervilles.asp> and credit-card orders are welcome.
462. M. C. Black reports that The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's informal first-Friday-of-the-month Club Nights have been successful, and they will continue each month through June at the New Commonwealth Club at 18 Northumberland Avenue (between Trafalgar Square and the Embankment underground station); members, prospective members, visitors, and friends are welcome: just show up at any time between 6:00 and 9:00 pm. There's no charge except for drinks or food purchased from the bar. There's no formal agenda.
463. Grave Matters' catalog #143 (mystery and detective fiction) featured Toni L. P. Kelner's amusing Sherlockian poem "The Crime Before Christmas", and the electronically-enabled can read it on the World Wide Web at their website <<http://www.gravematters.com/kelnerpoem.htm>>. Catalog #144 (available in January) also will have Sherlockiana for sale; Box 32192, Cincinnati, OH 44232.
464. The Hansom Wheels will hold the first Intergalactic Sherlockian Festival in Columbia, S.C. on Apr. 26-28, offering the world premiere of English actor Howard Burnham's dramatic monologue "Dr. Watson Recalls Sherlock Holmes", distinguished speakers, and (of course) wining and dining. Additional information is available from Robert E. Robinson (6117 Lakeshore Drive, Columbia, SC 29206, or at <<http://www.capnbilly.com/hansomwheels.htm>>.

465. Dec 01 #4: David P. Phillips and five colleagues at the University of California at San Diego wondered whether Sir Charles Baskerville's death was based on medical intuition or literary license: "are fatal heart attacks and stress linked in fact as well as in fiction?" Their methodology was ingenious: determining whether cardiac mortality is abnormally high on days considered unlucky (Chinese and Japanese people consider the number 4 unlucky, while white Americans do not). And they concluded, in an article on "The *Hound of the Baskervilles* effect: natural experiment on the influence of psychological stress on timing of death" in the Dec. 22 issue of the British Medical Journal, that "the Baskerville effect exists both in fact and in fiction." They also concluded that "Conan Doyle was not only a great writer but a remarkably intuitive physician as well." The article is available on-line (with a photograph of Christopher Lee as Sir Charles) at <<http://bmj.com/cgi/content/full/323/73271/1443>>.
466. Boys' Life has been published by the Boy Scouts of America since 1911; the first known Sherlockian item in the magazine was Percy K. Fitzhugh's "Sherlock Nobody Holmes" (Mar. 1918), and the most recent is "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Nov. 2001), adapted by Shannon Lowry and illustrated by Mike Vosburg; it's a 16-page graphic novel, and the artwork is spectacular. You don't need to be a Boy Scout to subscribe to the magazine ($18.00 a year), and they've kindly agreed to supply single issues with the "Hound" to Sherlockians: send a self-addressed 9" x 12" envelope (without postage), a note requesting the Nov. 2001 issue, and a check payable to Boys' Life for $3.00 (or $6.00 for two copies, the maximum allowed), to Boys' Life (S-302), Boy Scouts of America, 1325 West Walnut Hill Lane, Irving, TX 75038.
467. Thomas A. Sebeok died on Dec. 21. He was a pioneer in semiotics (the study of the nature of signs in language), and taught at Indiana University for almost 50 years, becoming chairman of its Research Center for Language and Semiotic Studies before he retired in 1991. His "You Know My Method': A Juxtaposition of Charles S. Peirce and Sherlock Holmes" (written with his wife Jean Umiker-Sebeok) was published in Semiotica in 1979 and reprinted by Jack Tracy's Gaslight Publications in 1980, and he was co-editor (with Umberto Eco) of the collection THE SIGN OF THREE: DUPIN, HOLMES, PEIRCE for the Indiana University Press in 1983.
468. Spotted by Stu Shiffman: Ruse #1, a comic book from Crossgen (Nov. 2001; $2.95); it's not directly Sherlockian, but there's lots of good Victorian flavor, and some nice artwork (Stu describes the beautiful Baroness Miranda Cross as "a subtle mixture of Isadora Klein, Professor Moriarty, and Morgaine le Fay"). There's a web-site at <<http://www.crossgen.com>>.
469. Jack Tracy's THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA SHERLOCKIANA was and still is a valuable and interesting reference work; it was published in 1977, and is still in print (and soon to have a new Japanese edition), and Christopher and Barbara Roden's "On the Shoulders of Giants" (this year's Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal) offers excellent insights into Jack's life and career, and into the trials and tribulations (for both Jack and his publisher) involved in getting the book into print. The annual costs $11.00 postpaid in the U.S. (checks only, please), and $12.00 postpaid elsewhere (credit-card orders welcome) from the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); you also can order at the BSJ's web-site <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>.
470. Dec 01 #5: Nigel Hawthorne died on Dec. 26. He was a splendid actor, best known as the suave (and all too often frustrated) civil servant Humphrey Appleby in the television series "Yes, Minister" (1980-1983) and its sequel "Yes, Prime Minister" (1986-1987), and as the King on stage and screen in Alan Bennett's "The Madness of George III" in 1992 and 1994; his obituary in The Guardian noted that it was once said that Hawthorne "spent the first 20 years of his distinguished career being ignored and the rest of it being discovered." He was awarded a CBE in 1987, and he was knighted in 1999. In 1982 he made guest appearance on television on "The Morecambe and Wise Show" as the butler in a murder-mystery skit, with Eric Morecambe (as Holmes) and Ernie Wise (as Watson).
471. More news about the broadcast of the new dramatization of "The Lost World" by the BBC this month: Catherine Cooke reports that the BBC has announced that the show is the most pre-sold drama they've ever done, and that Peter Falk was cast in the program because of funding from the U.S. And there's to be a DVD release likely in multi-region format.
472. Stephen Kendrick's NIGHT WATCH (New York: Pantheon, 2001; 258 pp., $23.00) is an interest dual pastiche: it's Christmas in 1902, and a gruesome murder has been committed in a church in London, and Sherlock Holmes is called in to solve the mystery, and meets a young Catholic priest named Paul Brown, whose deductive prowess is impressive, and who at the end of the book calls at Baker Street to explain a clue that Holmes overlooked. Kendrick's HOLY CLUES (1999) was an interesting exploration of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and NIGHT WATCH also is interesting, and well-written.
473. Barbara and Christopher Roden report that they've seen the shooting script ("remarkably faithful," they note) for a new version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that's now in production in Britain, with broadcast scheduled for Christmas in 2002. They believe the company is Tiger Aspect (which has produced some fine series, including "The Vicar of Dibley" and "Mr. Bean"), and that the writer is Allan Cubitt (whose credits include "Prime Suspect 2" and the recent mini-series "Anna Karenina").
474. The latest issue of Scarlet Street (#43) continues the magazine's exploration of the dramatizations of "The Picture of Dorian Gray", which is a story of more than passing interest to Doyleans and Sherlockians: in August 1889 Arthur Conan Doyle met Oscar Wilde at dinner in London, where editor J. M. Stoddart asked both men to write stories for Lippincott's. Wilde's story was "The Picture of Dorian Gray", and Conan Doyle's story was "The Sign of the Four" (in which careful readers will find echoes of Wilde). And there is the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. $42.00 a year (six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>.
475. White Chapel Productions (Muse) filmed in Montreal in December, Wilfrid de Freitas reports, for their fourth television film starring Matt Frewer as Holmes and Kenneth Welsh as Watson. "It is 1892 and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are on the prowl through the streets of East London investigating a series of murders at a monastery. Is the killer really a vampire, as people are saying, with vengeance on its mind and grudge against the monk?" Wilfrid notes that they say "The Case of the Whitechapel Vampire" will be broadcast next fall.

476. Dec 01 #6: One of the nicer things about the birthday festivities in New York is that they offer an opportunity to arrive a bit early for the Saturday-afternoon cocktail party at the National Arts Club, and stroll around Gramercy Park and think about what a genteel New York neighborhood was like in the 1890s: when Arthur Conan Doyle visited the city in 1894, he would have seen almost exactly what we see today. Paula Cohen's GRAMERCY PARK (New York: St. Martin's Press, 2002; 357 pp., $24.95) is set in 1894, and opens in a Gramercy Park mansion, it and offers a delightful picture of what life was like in that era, for people who could afford it. It's also a story of dark secrets and bitter revenge, and a young woman in real danger. And it's a well-written page-turner, and it's easy to see why it has been picked up by four major book clubs. GRAMERCY PARK is not Sherlockian, but it's a good read, and recommended.
477. The Sir James Saunders Society (for Sherlockian dermatologists) is one of the older "professional" S'ian societies, meeting for lunch (with toasts, papers, and a quiz) each year; their next meeting will be in New Orleans on Feb. 25, from noon to 2:00 pm, at the Ernst Cafe, and details are available from Don Hazelrigg, 15 Victoria Drive, Newburgh, IN 47630.
478. The famous (perhaps infamous) "tent joke" has been voted the world's funniest joke, in an on-going "Laughlab" experiment that was launched in September by British psychologist Richard Wiseman. According to a story in The Guardian (Dec. 20), more than 100,000 people from 70 countries have visited the Laughlab web-site, submitting and rating 10,000 jokes. The "tent joke" (which was rated the funniest by about 47,000 people) it isn't new, to the despair of some Sherlockians who can't stand to hear a joke more than once, or perhaps more than twice or thrice; Les Moskowitz has noted that it was posted to The Hounds of the Internet on July 2, 1998 (without credit to a source), and it first appeared in print in "Laughter, the Best Medicine" in the Reader's Digest (Nov. 1998), credited to <www.funnybone.com>. And for those who haven't yet heard the joke, or who would like to see the Reader's Digest version, here it is:
- Sherlock Holmes and Watson were camping in the forest. They had gone to bed and were lying beneath the night sky. Holmes said, "Watson, look up. What do you see?"
- "I see thousands of stars."
- "And what does that mean to you?" Holmes asked.
- "I suppose it means that of all the planets in the universe, we are truly fortunate to be here on Earth. We are small in God's eyes, but should struggle every day to be worthy of our blessings. In a meteorological sense, it means we'll have a sunny day tomorrow. What does it mean to you, Holmes?"
- "To me, it means someone has stolen our tent."
479. The experiment will continue until September 2002, and the electronically-enabled are welcome to participate at <<http://www.laughlab.co.uk>>. There is quite a bit to see at the web-site, including the other jokes, and an analysis of what sort of people like which kinds of jokes.

Jan 02 #1:

1. The birthday festivities in New York began midweek with an ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's for dedicated enthusiasts seeking a truly long weekend, and continued on Thursday morning with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox, and a rendezvous with other Morley enthusiasts at McSorley's for lunch. Thursday evening's main event was at the Williams Club, where Bert Coules was the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker, and he told grand tales about his work on the BBC Radio 4 series featuring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams, and provided the world premiere of excerpts from the soon-to-be-aired pastiches starring Merrison and Andrew Sachs.
  2. The Hotel Algonquin was a nice venue for an informal Mrs. Hudson Breakfast on Friday morning, and more than 140 people were on hand for the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Andrew Joffe and Paul Singleton offered their version of Bravo's "Inside the Actors Studio" (with James Lipton interviewing Sherlock Holmes). And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  3. There were more than 170 present for the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars at the Union League Club, where George McCormack toasted Joyce Saunders as *the* Woman during the pre-prandial cocktail party (Joyce then went on to dine at the Algonquin with others who have received that honor). The dinner agenda was thoroughly international, with toasts and reports by Sherlockians from Denmark, Canada, Japan, England, Italy, and Germany. To detail only a few: Jean Upton toasted Dr. Watson's Second Wife (explaining that standing next to Mike Whelan at the lectern she felt like Harry Potter standing next to Hagrid); Enrico Solito was an enthusiastic leader of a responsive reading of the Musgrave Ritual (in Italian); and Catherine Cooke offered a delightful toast to old Irregular Lord Donegall.
  4. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours: the Two-Shilling Award ("for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty") to Susan Rice, and Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Henry W. Boote ("Meyers, Toronto"), Marilynne McKay ("Violet de Merville"), Enrico Solito ("Gennaro Lucca"), Christopher Roden ("Sir Henry Baskerville"), Michael Dirda ("Langdale Pike"), Mark Gagen ("Sir James Damery"), Bob Schultz ("The *Gloria Scott*"), Mary Campbell ("Brenda Tregennis"), Pasquale Accardo ("Gorgiano of the Red Circle"), and Richard J. Sveum ("Dr. Hill Barton"). And Jon L. Lellenberg received The Silver Penguin Award (a 1930s cocktail shaker) in appreciation of his peerless history of the BSI.
  5. The Baskerville Bash also took place Friday evening, at the Manhattan Club and with more than 90 people on hand, and with entertainment that included a "Bash-In" tribute to Rowan and Martin's beloved television series, with Queen Victoria (aka Maribeu Briggs) saying "Sock it to me!" and receiving a whipped-cream pie in the face from Dr. Watson (aka Andrew Joffe); a rendition of "Tip-Toe Through the Grimpen" by Tiny Tim (aka Howard Einbinder), and the park-bench skit performed by Ruth Buzzi (aka Catalina Hannan) and Artie Johnson (aka Warren Randall). It would appear that no one performed in a bikini as Goldie Hawn ("we couldn't find anyone to do the body-painting," someone explained).
6. Jan 02 #2: On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was as usual crowded with sellers and buyers, and shortly after noon The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Watson and Wodehouse) commandeered the lobby for their now-traditional Junior Bloodstain, which featured a reading of A. B. Cox's "Holmes and the Dasher".
  7. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted more than 230 people to the National Arts Club, where Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies who have been honored as *the* Woman over the years, and Al Rosenblatt reported in verse on the events of the previous evening and the previous year. Tom Cynkin was applauded as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year (his article on "James Watson, M.D." in the winter issue), and the Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from June Kinnee's energetic sales of raffle tickets for Jeff Decker's portrait of the winner (Michael Dirda), and from enthusiastic bidders in the traditional auction.
  8. On Sunday more than 70 locals and visiting long-weekenders gathered at the Baker Street Pub and Restaurant for a convivial brunch arranged by the (Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes. And (for those who wish to plan ahead) the next birthday dinners will be held on Friday, Jan. 10, 2003.

9. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than fit into print here, it is quite likely that there will be much longer reports in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $22.50 a year ($25.00 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) can be sent to the BSJ at Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331 there's a web-site at <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>.
10. The multicolor BASH 2002 lapel pin, with the same psychedelic design featured on publicity for this year's Baskerville Bash during the birthday festivities in New York, is available for $9.00 postpaid from Warren Randall, 15 Fawn Lane West South Setauket, NY 11720.
11. This year's Christopher Morley Walk was the occasion for the publication of MORLEY IN MANHATTAN 2002, an attractive guidebook to some of the sites and sights and participants sauntered by. The 38-page booklet is attractively illustrated, and also contains some of Morley's own thoughts about Manhattan, and copies are available from James D. Cox, 452 Ivy Street, San Francisco, CA 94102; $15.00 postpaid.
12. Sorry about that: Alan Rickman (Dec 01 #3) has played Sherlock Holmes on stage, but he hasn't played Prof. Moriarty on screen (and thanks to Christopher Roden, who was the first to spot my mistake). I was thinking of Anthony Higgins (who played Moriarty in "Young Sherlock Holmes").
13. Ted Friedman's interesting series about Sherlockian philately for Topical Times continues with his two-page article "The Great Hiatus" in the January-February issue; it's illustrated with stamps from Saudia Arabia, Persia, and the Sudan, and a cover mailed from Tibet (the magazine costs $5.00 postpaid from the American Topical Association, Box 50820, Albuquerque, NM 87181) <atastamps@juno.com> (credit-card orders welcome).

14. Jan 02 #3 Douglas Brinkley, director of the Eisenhower Center for American Studies at the University of New Orleans, was interviewed on National Public Radio's "Weekend Edition" on Dec. 23, 2001, in a segment about the World War I battlefield truce between the Germans and the British on Christmas Eve in 1914, and he noted that "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, best known for Sherlock Holmes whodunits, deemed a Christmas truce an amazing spectacle, believing history would honor it as one human episode amid all the atrocities which have stained the memory of the war."
15. Paul Landres died on Dec. 26. He began his career in motion pictures as an assistant editor at Universal Studios in 1931, becoming an editor and eventually a director on film and television. He was the editor of Basil Rathbone's "The Scarlet Claw" (1944).
16. The winter 2001 issue of The Serpentine Muse offers news from, about, and by The Adventuress of Sherlock Holmes; Marilynne McKay's scrapbook on The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's cruise through the Baltic (replete with hats, and a few wigs); and an Internet discussion-group cast list for "The Crooked Man" (winners of the voting ranged from Jeremy Irons as Holmes to Helena Bonham Carter as Teddy the Mongoose). The Muse is published quarterly and costs $10.00 a year (checks payable to the Adventuresses, please) from Evelyn A. Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011).
17. There's a cuddly plush Sherlock Holmes pooch, timely for Valentine's Day ("Our love is no mystery" is embroidered on his paw) in the spring mail-order catalog from What on Earth (2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087) (800-945-2552) <<http://whatearthcatalog.com>>; he has the traditional magnifying glass and pipe and deerstalker, and is 7.5" high (item AK9212) and costs $16.95 plus shipping.
18. Gary Lovisi reports that Ralph Vaughan's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TERROR OUT OF TIME (New York: Gryphon Books, 2002; 121 pp., $15.00) is now available; "Holmes and Challenger battle the minions of Cthulhu in London." Shipping extra, and the publisher's address is Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228; there's a web-site at <<http://www.gryphonbooks.com>>.
19. Philip Attwell has reported that Hugh Laurie is reading "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC Radio 2 on Fridays at 21:15 GMT; the eight-part, 15-minute, weekly series began on Jan. 18. And Bert Coules' "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" began airing on BBC Radio 4 on Wednesdays at 14:15 GMT on Jan. 30; this is a series of five 45-minute pastiches starring Clive Merrison as Holmes and Andrew Sachs as Watson (four of the shows will be released by the BBC as a two-cassette set on Feb. 4 priced at £9.99. If you can listen to radio on the Internet, you can hear BBC Radio shows live at <<http://www.bbc.co.uk>>.
20. The Queen's New Year's honours list included a knighthood for Ben Kingsley, who played Dr. Watson in "Without a Clue" (1988). And Denis Quilley, who was awarded an OBE [Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire], played Dr. Leon Sterndale in the Granada television version of "The Devil's Foot" (1988) and Bob Carruthers in the BBC Radio 4 dramatization of "The Solitary Cyclist" (1993); thanks to Scott Monty for this news.

21. Jan 02 #4: One of the nicer things about the World Wide Web is that it's getting easier and easier for people to do interesting things: The Sherlock Holmes Society of France offers a "Worldwide Holmesian Photo Gallery" displaying photographs of Sherlockians, organized by individuals and by societies. The URL is <<http://www.sh-whoswho.com>>.
22. Edward Gorey, who died last year (Apr 00 #4) first drew Holmes and Watson in 1967, and contributed Canonical artwork to various books into the 1990s; his fans, Sherlockian and otherwise, will surely welcome ASCENDING PECULIARITY: EDWARD GOREY ON EDWARD GOREY, selected and edited by Karen Wilkin (New York: Harcourt, 2001; 292 pp., $35.00). It's S'ian only in passing (he told an interviewer in 1998 that "at the moment I'm re-reading all of Sherlock Holmes, for no particular reason"), but it offers a splendid look at what it was like listening to him talk about himself, and his many enthusiasms.
23. Nabisco is celebrating the 100th anniversary of Barnum's Animal Crackers, a story in the Washington Post noted (Dec. 28), by adding a new animal to the box (and fans can vote on whether it will be a koala, a walrus, a penguin, or a cobra). More important to Sherlockians, perhaps, is that Christopher Morley, founder of The Baker Street Irregulars, was recalled by journalist Jennifer Frey for his couplet: "Animal crackers, and cocoa to drink,/That is the finest of suppers, I think..." It's from his poem "Animal Crackers" (first published in 1917 in his book SONGS FOR A LITTLE HOUSE).
24. Ruse #2 (Dec. 2001) is in the comic-book shops ($2.95); it's part of a continuing mini-series that offers nice Victorian (but non-Sherlockian) atmosphere and artwork. There's a web-site at <<http://www.crossgen.com>>.
25. The November issue of Brad Keefauver's The Holmes & Watson Report arrived on Jan. 7, and it was of course enjoyable, and it was easy enough to read the contents, after I got through opening the pages carefully, since they were slightly stuck together, as if the ink had been a bit sticky. And I wondered when it had been mailed, and looked at the cancellation, which was November just-one-digit, and it finally dawned on me that there might be an interesting explanation of the seemingly sticky ink and the late delivery: the envelope and its contents might have been in one of the suspect batches of mail that were shipped from the anthrax-infested Brentwood sorting station in the Washington suburbs off to Ohio (I think) to be decontaminated. I like to think that I now have a journal that has been rendered officially non-threatening.
26. The latest bargain-books catalog from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031) <<http://www.edwardrhamilton.com>> offers Loren D. Estleman's SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. DRACULA in paper covers ($14.00 discounted to $9.95) and Jamyang Norbu's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MISSING YEARS ($23.95 discounted to $16.95).
27. "Sherlock Holmes and the Eye of Venus" is the mystery that Holmes and Watson and participants in a "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" will attempt to solve this year, on Mar. 8-10 and Nov. 1-3 in Cape May. The weekend includes a tour of the town's Victorian homes, and additional information is offered by the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <<http://www.capemaymac.org>>.

28. Jan 02 #5: The winter issue of Friends of the Library (the newsletter published by the University of Minnesota Libraries) includes Julie McKuras' warm tribute to the late E. W. McDiarmid, who was one of the founders of The Norwegian Explorers and who devoted many years to assisting the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the Wilson Library. Copies of the newsletter are available from Lanaya Stangret (499 Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <stangret@tc.umn.edu>.
29. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine celebrated the birthday festivities in the Feb. 2002 issue, with an attractive Sherlockian cover by John Bowdren showing "The Long Shadow of Holmes", a cartoon by Bob Meyer, a crossword puzzle by Robert Kesling, and amusing poems by Cynthia Ruffy and Donald A. Yates.
30. It's nice to see some of the older Sherlockian books back in print, including THE DREAMERS: A CLUB, by John Kendrick Bangs (Holicong: Wildside Press, 2001; 246 pp., $15.95); a trade paperback with Edward Penfield's illustrations, and Bangs' parody "The Mystery of Pinkham's Diamond Stud". There's also Maurice Leblanc's ARSENE LUPIN VERSUS HERLOCK SHOLMES (Holicong: Wildside Press, 2001; 282 pp., $17.50); also a trade paperback ("a classic tale of the world's greatest thief and the world's greatest detective"). Wildside also has reprinted David Dvorkin's TIME FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES and Bang's R. HOLMES & COMPANY. The Wildside address is: Box 301, Holicong, PA 18928 <<http://www.wildsidepress.com>>.
31. Reported by Stu Shiffman: Avram Davidson's THE OTHER NINETEENTH CENTURY: A COLLECTION, by Avram Davidson (New York: Tor Books, 2001; 327 pp., $27.95); contents include "The Singular Incident of the Dog on the Beach" (reprinted from Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine, Dec. 1986).
32. Noted by Jack Koelle: TEACHING LITERATURE AND MEDICINE, edited by Anne Hunsaker Hawkins and Marilyn Chandler McEntyre (New York: Modern Language Association, 2000; 406 pp., $27.00), with Kathryn Montgomery's seven-page article "Sherlock Holmes and Clinical Reasoning" about a five-week seminar at Northwestern University Medical School that pairs the Canon with analytic studies of diagnostic reasoning.
33. Writers such as Twain and Arthur Conan Doyle described the Mormons in terms similar to those the press uses to describe the Taliban today," Lawrence Wright notes in a long and interesting article about the Mormon in The New Yorker (Jan. 21). That was in Victorian times, of course; when Conan Doyle finally visited Salt Lake City in 1923, he was warmly received, and it was in the Mormon Tabernacle that he lectured on Spiritualism.
34. The same issue of The New Yorker has John Lahr's excellent profile of Judy Dench. "She has clowned with the comedians Eric Morecambe and Ernie Wise," Lahr reports. "She has locked herself in a bathroom with Maggie Smith to escape the advances of the English comic character actor Miles Malleon." Malleon played Thaddeus Sholto in Arthur Wontner's film "The Sign of Four" (1932), and Bishop Frankland in Peter Cushing's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959). And Dench played Mrs. Hudson, with Clive Merrison as Sherlock Holmes and her husband Michael Williams as Dr. Watson, in the BBC Radio 4 broadcast of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1998). That's the end of this month's theatrical trivia.

35. Jan 02 #6: Reported: Dana M. Batory's THE FEDERATION HOLMES: CASEBOOK NUMBER ONE has been published by George A. Vanderburgh (174 pp., $33.00 postpaid); it has twelve of his Sherlock Holmes/Star Trek parodies first published in The Holmesian Federation from 1978 to 1991, and one new story. The publisher's address is Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; autographed copies are available from the author (402 East Bucyrus Street, Crestline, OH 44827) for $35.00 postpaid.
36. The latest catalog from Peter L. Stern (55 Temple Place, Boston, MA 02111) <psbook@aol.com> includes some nice Doyleana and Sherlockiana, including a two-page holograph letter from Conan Doyle to his publisher George Newnes, dated Nov. 19, 1893 ($8,500); a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, bound without wrappers, advertisements, or contents page ($37,500); a copy of the Collier's Once a Week Library first (and pirated) separate American edition of "The Sign of Four" ($12,500).
37. The 2001 issue of Beeman's Christmas Annual, published by The Occupants of the Empty House and edited by Janet Bensley, has "Geography in the Canon" as its theme, with a report by Doris and Richard Dale on last year's excursion through the Baltic, and a detailed discussion by David Bensley of the Battle of Maiwand, both with excellent illustrations in color. The 48-page booklet costs $15.50 postpaid; checks (payable to the society) can be sent to Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999).
38. The Conan Doyle material at auction at Sotheby's in London in December (Nov 01 #5) now has new owners: the most expensive item (sold at £19,800 including the buyer's premium) was a copy of Bram Stoker's THE MYSTERY OF THE SEA (1902) inscribed by the author to Conan Doyle. A copy of the first American edition of the ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES that Conan Doyle inscribed to his wife Louise in 1893 sold for £8,225, and a copy of the first British edition of THE POISON BELT inscribed to his wife Jean sold for £4,112.
39. Theatrical news: Ev Herzog reports that "Murder in Baker Street" (described in an announcement as a "deadly comedy" by Judd Woldin) will be presented by Theater by the Blind at The Mint Space in New York from Feb. 22 through Mar. 10. The theater is at 311 West 43rd Street (5th floor) (212-206-1515) <www.smarttix.com>.
40. And a few commercials: a 16-page list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, *the* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.20 postpaid. An 80-page list of 790 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 424 active societies, is $4.60 postpaid. A run of address labels for 352 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.50 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).
41. The list of irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <<http://members.cox.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>>. Please note that "Sherlocktron" has a new URL.

42. Feb 02 #1: The birthday festivities in January saw the launch of The Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series, which makes available to the public "facsimile editions of manuscripts and other documents relating to Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, with insightful commentary by talented Sherlockian and Doylean writers," as general editor Leslie S. Klinger notes on the dust jackets. And work is underway on the next volume in the series. For now:
43. ANGELS OF DARKNESS: A DRAMA IN THREE ACTS, begun by Arthur Conan Doyle in the 1880s and never finished, now published for the first time, with a facsimile of the first scene and a transcription of the complete manuscript (now owned by the Toronto Public Library), with scholarly commentary on the play and its theatrical context, and on the Mormon subplot and the absence of Sherlock Holmes, and on the manuscript's history (New York: The Baker Street Irregulars, 2001; 191 pp., $35.00). And yes: Sherlock Holmes is indeed absent, but many others from "A Study in Scarlet" (including John Watson, MD) are active participants.
44. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (CHAPTER XI) offers a facsimile and a transcription of the only complete chapter surviving (and now in the Berg Collection at the N.Y. Public Library), with commentary on the story by ten Sherlockian and Doylean scholars (New York: The Baker Street Irregulars, 2001; 109 pp., $35.00). It's always a pleasure to be able to see an author at work, and manuscripts are a delightful way to do just that, watching the author change his mind, and speculating as to the reasons.
45. As noted, $35.00 each, plus shipping ($8.00 each or $9.50 for both; $9.50 each or $12.00 for both outside North America), and the books are available from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>.

46. The fourth volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, with a thoughtful introduction by Nicholas Meyer (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2002; 150 pp., $22.95); as with previous volumes in the series, the annotations draw upon old and new Sherlockian scholarship, and on the manuscript for Chapter XI, and there's discussion of the many candidates for Baskerville Hall. $25.70 postpaid from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46260).
47. Stratford Johns died on Jan. 29. His acting career began on stage in 1948, and he was one of the biggest stars on British television in the 1960s and 1970s as police officer Charlie Barlow in the series "Z Cars" and "Softly Softly" and "Barlow at Large". And he played the Chief Commissioner, with John Cleese and Arthur Lowe, in the television film "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It" (1977).
48. The 2002 edition of Ron Fish's THE COMMONPLACE BOOK: A DIRECTORY OF SHERLOCKIANS AND SHERLOCKIAN SOCIETIES has names, addresses, and telephone numbers for 163 Sherlockians, and contact information and (when available) the meeting dates for 174 Sherlockian societies; $7.00 postpaid ($9.00 outside North America). A new edition is due next January, and Ron will be happy to make additions; Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919 <commonplacebook@aol.com>.
49. Feb 02 #2: Like William Gillette, David L. Hammer has proclaimed more than one farewell tour, suggesting that his current venture surely is his last, but (fortunately for the Sherlockian traveler) he continues to find new stories to tell about places to visit. And A DEEP GAME: THE TRAVELERS' COMPANION TO THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2002; 178 pp., $22.95) is a delight: he has collected and rewritten material from his earlier guidebooks, and he has added new sites and sights and stories. If you're not able to arrange for David to be your personal tour guide, you'll do almost as well with his books. $25.70 postpaid from Gasogene (Box 68303, Indianapolis, IN 46268).
50. And David is far more than a travel writer: he's a grand story-teller, and some of his best stories are about (and on) himself, and the people he has known. THE GAME IS UNDERFOOT! THE MEMOIR OF A SHERLOCKIAN PUBLISHER (Shelburne: The Battered Silicon Dispatch Box, 2001; 142 pp., $15.00) is a fine collection of stories about Jack Tracy, and Michael Harrison (who included a chapter about "The Night I Raped the Succubus" in his unfinished sexual biography), and Sam Gringras, and Michael and Mollie Hardwick, and Tom Stix (his "only known joke" noted in the index), and others; David has a splendid gift with language, and it's nice to be able to read stories well told. Available from the publisher (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada) for $18.00 postpaid.
51. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (the society for devotees of the stories written by both P. G. Wodehouse and Dr. Watson) have an new and attractive lapel pin, which is available ($11.80 postpaid from Anne Cotton (at 12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075).
52. There's still time to see the major exhibition of "Pearls" at American Museum of Natural History in New York (through Apr. 14); there are all sorts of pearls, natural and cultured, and in all colors including black (no mention of the Borgias, however).
53. John Thaw died on Feb. 21. He began his acting career on stage in 1960 in Liverpool, and made his television debut in 1961 with Granada in the anthology series "The Younger Generation"; his first film was "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner" (1962). He starred in television series such as "Redcap" and "The Sweeney" and "Kavanagh QC" in the 1960s and 1970s, and in the long-running series "Inspector Morse" (1987-2000). And he was a splendid Jonathan Small in Granada's dramatization of "The Sign of Four" (1987).
54. Further to the mention of Dame Judi Dench having played Mrs. Hudson in the BBC Radio 4 series, Lenny Picker has noted that she has also appeared in a Sherlockian film: "A Study in Terror" (1965); she played Dr. Murray's niece Sally Young, who worked at the mission in Whitechapel.
55. The winter 2002 issue of the Tonga Times offers news of the world of Sherlockian miniatures, with lots of color photographs of the work of members of The Mini-Tonga Scion Society); membership (including three issues of the newsletter) costs $10.00 a year ($11.00 to Canada, $13.00 elsewhere) from Trish and Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229, and there's a web-site at <<http://hometown.aol.com/mini-tongasociety/mini1.htm>>.
56. Feb 02 #3: Eve Titus ("Young Master Rucastle") died on Feb. 4. She was an excellent pianist and a truly talented author, well-known for her children's books, especially her series BASIL OF BAKER STREET (1958), BASIL AND THE LOST COLONY (1964), BASIL AND THE PYGMY CATS (1971), BASIL IN MEXICO (1976), and BASIL IN THE WILD WEST (1982); Basil and Dr. Dawson also starred in Disney's animated film "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986). Her imaginative "Message from the Mouster" was published in the Apr. 1960 issue of The Baker Street Journal, and she enjoyed meeting with The Praed Street Irregulars when she lived in Los Angeles in the 1970s; she received her Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1993.
57. Spotted by Francine Kitts in a new mail-order catalog from Signals (Box 159, Cedar Rapids, IA 52405) (800-669-9696) <www.giftcatalog.com>: a Paddington Station Clock imported from England (9" in diameter). According to the catalog, Paddington is "where Holmes met Watson at the start of 'The Boscombe Valley Mystery,'" and "the London terminal of the Great Western Railway is more than a train station; it's a literary landmark." $79.00 plus shipping.
58. QUOTABLE SHERLOCK, compiled and edited by David W. Barber (Westport: Quotable Books, 2001; 118 pp., $14.95), collects (and categorizes) hundreds of quotations from the Canon. The categories allow the reader to note some of Holmes' occasional contradictions, such as "I have no time for trifles" (A Study in Scarlet) and "there is nothing so important as trifles" (The Man with the Twisted Lip). It's distributed in the United States by Firefly Books <<http://www.fireflybooks.com>>.
59. THE BAKER STREET DOZEN: SHERLOCKIAN EXERCISES, by Donald B. Izban, is a 42-page booklet offering Dr. Watson's advice on "how to be and stay fit at any age" (actually, it's Sherlock Holmes' advice, since it's obvious from Paul Churchill's illustrations that it's Watson who needs the advice). The pamphlet can be ordered from The Battered Silicon Dispatch Box (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada); $11.00 postpaid.
60. "Great Books" is a one-hour series broadcast by The Learning Channel (up to now the only Canonical connection has been a mention of Sherlock Holmes in their 1996 show on "Plato's Republic"), and a program on "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is now in development, targeted to air this fall.
61. The 21st annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held on Mar. 8-10 at the Holiday Inn in Fairborn, Ohio, with a schedule that includes speakers, theatrics and other fun and games. Additional details are available from Cathy Gill, 4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223 (513-681-5507) <chirpworth@fuse.net>.
62. Radio Times had a tie-in offer when the BBC's new television mini-series of "The Lost World" was broadcast in December: the story read (unabridged) by Matthew Rhys on six audiocassettes from BBC Cover to Cover (2001); £21.95. Rhys was Edward Malone in the television mini-series, and he does very well with the reading. It's available from The Audio Book Collection, Ashmans Court, Locksbrook Trading Estate, Bath, BA1 3EH, England; their web-site is at <<http://www.audiobookcollection.com>>.
63. Feb 02 #4: Chuck Jones died on Feb. 22. His first work in films was as a child extra in Mack Sennett comedies, and he began his career as an animator working for Ub Iwerks in 1932. He helped to create classic Warner Bros. characters such as Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Porky Pig, and the Road Runner, and he won four Oscars for his work, including a special Oscar for lifetime achievement in 1996, when the Academy Awards tribute included a clip from his Sherlockian "Deduce, You Say!" (1956).

64. "Any resemblance between the characters of this story and those of history is a mistake!" according to the opening credits of the film "The Adventures of Gerard" (1970); the film was directed by Jerzy Skolimowski and the stars included Peter McEnery (Colonel Gerard), Eli Wallach (Napoleon Bonaparte), Claudia Cardinale (Countess of Morales), and John Neville (Duke of Wellington). The film was never formally released (the studio decided that profits wouldn't cover the distribution costs); it was broadcast in Britain by BBC-2 in 1994, and if you'd like to see it in a theater, come to Washington on Aug. 30, when it will be shown at the Mary Pickford Theater in the Madison Building at the Library of Congress at 7:00 pm. There's no charge, and there are only 64 seats in the theater, and you can reserve by phone (202-707-5677) one week before the screening.
65. Markus Geisser, now in Thailand working for the International Committee of the Red Cross, hopes to start a Sherlockian society there, and would appreciate hearing from anyone who has correspondents in Thailand, and from anyone who has information on translations of the Canon into Thai; his address is ICRC, 36 Sirimangkalajarn Road, Soi 11, Tambon Suthep, Muang District, Chiang Mai 50200, Kingdom of Thailand <marcus_geisser@hotmail.com>.
66. JUSTICE HALL (New York: Bantam Books, 2002; 331 pp., $23.95) is Laurie R. King's sixth novel about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes, set in 1923 in Berkshire (and in Paris and London) after their visit to Dartmoor in THE MOOR, and it's well up to her high standards, with interesting characters and an intriguing mystery, and the reappearance of old friends.
67. Laurie will be writer in residence at Hanover College (Hanover, IN) on Mar. 4-8, with a public lecture on Mar. 7 at 7:30 on "The Mystery of Theology: Using Crime Fiction as a Platform for Theological Inquiry"; and on Mar. 21-24 she will be appearing at Left Coast Crime (Portland, OR).
68. And she will be on tour reading and signing JUSTICE HALL; here's the tentative schedule: Mar. 27 at Annie's Bloom at 7:30 (Portland, OR); Mar. 28 at Seattle Mystery Books at 12:00, and Third Place Books at 7:00 (Seattle, WA); Apr. 2 at the Capitola Book Cafe at 7:30 (Capitola, CA); Apr. 5 at Bay Book & Tobacco at 7:00 (Half Moon Bay, CA); Apr. 7 at M Is for Mystery at 3:30 (San Mateo, CA), and Book Passage at 7:30 (Corte Madera, CA); Apr. 10 at Books Inc. at 7:00 (Carmel, CA); Apr. 11 at Diesel Books at 7:30 (Oakland, CA); Apr. 14 at High Crimes at 3:00 (Denver, CO); Apr. 15 at Poisoned Pen at 7:00 (Scottsdale, AZ); Apr. 16 at Vroman's at 7:00 (Los Angeles, CA); Apr. 18 at Cody's at 7:30 (Berkeley, CA); Apr. 24 at Bookshop Santa Cruz at 7:00 (Santa Cruz, CA); Apr. 27 at the Los Angeles Times Book Festival; May 1-3 in New York; July 17 at the Book Passage Mystery Writer's Conference (Corte Madera, CA). You can check for updates and details at her web-site at <<http://www.laurierking.com>>.
69. Feb 02 #5: John McAleer's REX STOUT, first published in 1977, was a splendid biography of a fine writer and a fascinating men (and Stout was an important figure in the early years of The Baker Street Irregulars); the book won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 1978, and it's to be reprinted (Rockville: James Rock Publishing, 2002; 608 pp., $44.95 in cloth, $26.95 in paper) with a new introduction by John McAleer, an afterword by John's son Andrew S. McAleer, additional photographs, an expanded index, and a revised title: REX STOUT: A MAJESTY'S LIFE (which is what John wanted for the first edition). And the publisher offers a $5.00 discount on orders received by Apr. 1 (113 North Washington Street, Rockville, MD 20850) (800-411-2230) <<http://www.rockpublishing.com>>.
70. The Occupants of the Empty House will celebrate their 25th anniversary at a weekend gathering on Apr. 12-13 in Carbondale, Ill. Details are available from Debbie Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999) <srtin@hotmail.com>.
71. The Rev. Sherlock S. Holmes, D.D., runs "The Baker Street Marketplace" online at <<http://www.sherlockholmes.com>>, where he offers all sorts of Sherlockian merchandise. And he offers a 10% discount on books if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt"); enter the word in the "coupon" section.
72. Stam and Pilou are found in a series of comic books launched last year by the Belgian post office, and they play detective in the first issue: Droles de Detectives [in French] or De Super Speurneuzen [in Flemish]. E13.88 euros] each, plus shipping, from The Post Philately, Egide Walschaertsstraat 1, 2800 Mechelen, Belgium <<http://www.philately.post.be>>.
73. Barry Foster died on Feb. 11. He began his acting career in the film "The Battle of the River Plate" (1956), and also appeared on stage and television; he was best known as the star of the television series "Van der Valk" in the 1970s, and once said that "the trouble is that people often mistake me for someone else. They think I'm Inspector Morse, or else John Pertwee from Doctor Who, or Keith Barron. In fact I attribute a good deal of my success to being confused with these people." And he was a fine Sherlock Holmes in a 13-episode "Sherlock Holmes" series on BBC Radio 4 in 1978.
74. News for Gertrude Mahoney's friends: she has moved to the Sunrise Assisted Living facility at 2863 Hunter Mill Road, Oakton, VA 22124-1006 (703-319-7176), and has a nice room with sunshine and a view, and is settling in and looking forward to celebrating her 96th birthday.
75. SHERLOCKIANS ABROAD: THEIR ADVENTURES ON AND MEMOIRS OF THE SHERLOCK HOLMES SOCIETY OF LONDON GOLDEN JUBILEE CRUISE 2001, collected and edited by Susan E. B. Vizoskie, has interesting and amusing reminiscences and photographs by participants; 60 pp., $5.00 postpaid. And there's TEAS AND TOASTS WITH THE THREE GARRIDEBS, collected and edited by Susan, with 65 pages of toasts and recipes, all nicely done, by members of The Three Garridebs, celebrating last years' 10th anniversary of the society's annual picnic and afternoon tea; $5.00 postpaid. Or $8.50 postpaid for both volumes; the postpaid costs are higher outside the U.S., and details are available from Susan (90 (90 Ralph Avenue, White Plains, NY 10606) <svizoskie@aol.com>.

76. Feb 02 #6: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is a new British CD, with words and music by Clive Nolan and Oliver Wakeman, with 14 tracks (and about 100 minutes) of narration, instrumentals, and vocals, and it's an interesting performance. It's VGCD022 from Verglas Music, P.O. Box 19, Virginia Water, Surrey GU25 4YE, England <<http://www.verglas.com>>; and the cost is £14.00 postpaid anywhere in the world. The cast includes Robert Powell as the narrator and Dr. Watson; he played Sherlock Holmes in a BBC radio broadcast of "A Study in Scarlet" in 1974, and on stage in a touring production of "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" in 1993.
77. Noted by Bruce Southworth: Conan Doyle's OUR AFRICAN WINTER, reprinted last year by Duckworth in London at £14.99 (Feb 01 #3); discounted at $14.98 at Half Price Books in New York (and presumably available elsewhere). It's an interesting account of the family's tour of eastern and southern Africa in 1928-1929.
78. The seventh issue of the new Strand Magazine is an expanded holiday issue, revising a tradition often followed by the original Strand Magazine; many of the stories are Christmas stories, by authors such as H. R. F. Keating, John Mortimer, and Edward D. Hoch, and including a Sherlockian pastiche by Barrie Roberts, and there's an interesting interview with Peter Lovesey by editor Andrew F. Gulli, and reviews and articles. Subscriptions (four issues) cost $24.95 (U.S. and Canada) or $35.95 (elsewhere), and the magazine address is Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (UK: 800-961-280) <<http://www.strandmag.com>>.
79. Great-Scot, 278 Holburn Street, Aberdeen AB10 6DD, Scotland, Great Britain <<http://great-scot.co.uk>> is offering attractive and colorful prints from a new painting of Arthur Conan Doyle, by Ian R. Thomson ($64.00 or £45.00 or £73.00 postpaid); payment by check or in currency, please, and the company kindly offers a 15% discount if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt"). You can see the print at their web-site, and you can request an illustrated flier.

80. Jane Hincley (4 Crown Street Hicksville, NY 11801) is selling her collection of Sherlockiana (books, pins, videocassettes, audiocassettes); there are 120 items on the list, individually priced, and copies are available on request (please send Jane a 34c self-addressed stamped envelope).
81. It's the Year of the Horse, and the U.S. Postal Service has continued its "Chinese New Year" series. There are so many horses mentioned in the Canon that it's hard to select one, but we can consider one of the horses Sherlock Holmes helped the ostlers rub down in the Serpentine Mews (in "A Scandal in Bohemia").
82. Details and a registration form for the eleventh annual Watsonian weekend (now a joint event with The STUD Sherlockian Society) on May 3-5, are now available Susan Diamond and Allan Devitt (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@attbi.com>.
83. Mar 02 #1: There will be a Victorian Festival in Staunton, Va., on Apr. 19-21, and the events will include a Victorian mystery game throughout the festival, and (on Apr. 20) a Victorian boxing exhibition, a lecture on "Sherlock Holmes in America", and a Sherlock Holmes Look-Alike Contest. There's lots more on the schedule, and I won't be the only Sherlockian on hand; more information is available from the Staunton Downtown Development Association, 116 West Beverley Street, Staunton, VA 24401 (540-332-3867); and at a web-site at <<http://sdda.staunton.va.us>>.
84. Spike Milligan died on Feb. 27. In 1951 he joined Peter Sellers, Harry Secombe, and Michael Bentine to create a BBC radio series called "Crazy People" (soon retitled "The Goon Show"), and their antic genius was credited as highly influential by the new generation of comedy stars that included Robin Williams and members of Monty Python and The Firesign Theatre. "The Goon Show" often featured skits sketches about a defective detective called Ned Seagoon, with Milligan as the perpetual villain Jim Moriarty; Milligan also played a policeman in the Peter Cook/Dudley Moore film version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978), and he celebrated his 80th birthday with a special edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES ACCORDING TO SPIKE MILLIGAN published by Virgin Books in 1998.
85. Richard M. Lackritz's splendid collection of detective fiction is going to auction at Christie's in New York, in three parts: from Voltaire's "Zadig" (1747) to 1920 on Apr. 17, followed by material from 1920 to 1945 on Sept. 24, and post-war literature on Dec. 19. The first part has some interesting Sherlockian and Doylean material, of course, including some manuscripts (but not the manuscript of "The Three Garridebs"). One additional item to be offered on Apr. 17 (from another owner) is the original typed manuscript of Bram Stoker's "Dracula" (estimated at $1,000,000 to $1,500,000). All of the items will be on view Apr. 11-16 at Christie's at 20 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020 (212-636-2010) <<http://www.christies.com>>.
86. THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN (a six-issue comic-book mini-series, published by America's Best Comics in 1999-2000, with a story by Alan Moore and powerful artwork by Kevin O'Neill) seems likely to be a movie, according to reports noted by Stu Shiffman. Twentieth Century-Fox was in Prague scouting locations, according to a story in Variety (Feb. 5), and Sean Connery was in final negotiations to play Allan Quatermain, Variety reported on Feb. 20. Holmes and Moriarty appeared in the comic-book story, but may or may not be seen in the movie; fan web-sites report that Tom Sawyer has been added to the cast of characters (as an American detective) in response to studio demands for a younger character in the mix.
87. The world premiere of the new play "The West End Horror (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from the novel by Nicholas Meyer) has a new venue, and new dates, Paul Singleton reports: the play will open at the Bay Street Theatre (Bay & Main Street, Sag Harbor, NY 11963) on June 18, and close on July 7, 2002. Sag Harbor is near the eastern end of Long Island, decidedly off-off-Broadway; there's no word yet of arrangements for a theater party. The box-office telephone number is 631-725-9500, and the play's web-site URL is <<http://www.thewestendhorror.com>>.

88. Mar 02 #2: "The 100 Best Characters in Fiction: From Sherlock to Scarlett to Harry Potter" is the cover blurb on the Mar.-Apr. issue of Book magazine, but (alas) Sherlock isn't ranked first. The magazine asked writers, journalists, professors, actors, and directors to select and rank the 100 best characters since 1900, and Sherlock Holmes came in sixth, preceded by Jay Gatsby, Holden Caulfield, Humbert Humbert, Leopold Bloom, and Rabbit Angstrom. And ahead of Atticus Finch, Molly Bloom, Stephen Dedalus, Lily Bart, Holly Golightly, and Gregor Samsa.
89. I was asked: in which Sherlock Holmes story does he receive a letter written in lemon juice? I can't recall any such story (in print or on film or television) -- if you know the answer, please let me know.
90. Ray Betzner spotted a new comic-book series FANTASTIC STORIES, created by Don Marquez and published by Amryl <<http://www.amryl.com>>: the first issue (Dec. 2001; $2.95) includes a 10-page adaptation of "The Disintegration Machine". A three-part adaptation of "When the World Screamed" will appear in future issues, and then he plans a Challenger pastiche in the form of an old-fashioned serial. Don Marquez also did "The Lost World" in two parts for Millennium in 1996, and a one-issue adaptation of "The Poison Belt" for Tome in 1997, and he offers the earlier comic books for $3.00 each (plus $3.50 shipping per order); his address is 1313 Young Wo Circle, Folsom, CA 95630 <<http://www.cartuneland.com>>.
91. The April-May issue of British Heritage has a nice (and nicely illustrated) seven-page article by Tom Huntington about "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Edinburgh". The issue costs $6.00; the magazine address is 6405 Flank Drive, Harrisburg, PA 17112 (800-358-6327); and British Heritage has a web-site at <<http://www.britishhistory.about.com/heritage>> that has other Sherlockian articles such as "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Case of George Edalji" and "Baker Streets Around the World" (about various reproductions of "the most famous room that never existed").
92. Irene Worth died on Mar. 10. Born in Lincoln, Neb., she began her acting career on tour in 1942 and made her Broadway debut in 1943; she then studied acting in London, and learned stage English so well that audiences often assumed she was British. Irene Worth was her stage name (and Sherlockians should note that she used the pronunciation eye-ree-nee); she was an honorary Commander of the British Empire, and won many other honors for her acting. In 1983 she recorded T. S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats" with Sir John Gielgud for Caedmon; it's still available, and you can hear her perform "Macavity: The Mystery Cat".
93. There's no word on whether or when we will get to see the film "O Xango de Baker Street" (based on Jo Soares' pastiche, which was called A SAMBA FOR SHERLOCK when it was published in an English translation in 1997); the film stars Joaquim de Almeida as Sherlock Holmes, and it was released in Portugal in Sept. 1999, and in Brazil in Oct. 2001. Alan Ryan, in his "Letter from Rio" in the Washington Post (Book World) on Mar. 17, notes that Soares often has writers as guests on his five-nights-a-week television program. "Short, fat and round, in a world of slim, body-conscious Brazilians ('Beijo do gordo!' he calls out every night--'A kiss from the fat man!'), he's an engaging personality who enjoys both popularity and respect."

94. Mar 02 #3: The March issue of Firsts: The Book Collector's Magazine has an interesting article on "Collecting Stephen Leacock" by John Conrad, who quotes Leacock: "Indeed the first edition hobby is one of the minor forms of mental derangement, seldom ending in homicide and outside the scope of the law." Conrad also notes that "in the aftermath of World War One, Stephen Leacock was the most famous humorist in the English language," and reports that his NONSENSE NOVELS received a promotional boost when President Theodore Roosevelt quoted one of the most popular sentences in the book, in a spoof of Victorian novels in which one of the love-smitten principal characters "flung himself from the room, flung himself on his horse and rode madly off in all directions." NONSENSE NOVELS also has Leacock's first Sherlockian parody ("Maddened by Mystery; or The Defective Detective"), and he wrote others; it is a mark of his skill that he and John Kendrick Bangs were the only authors to have more than one piece selected

- for Ellery Queen's landmark anthology THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES. First costs $4.95 in bookstores; $40.00 a year for ten issues (4493 North Camino Gacela, Tucson, AZ 85718).
95. The Raymond F. Neuzil Memorial Sherlock Holmes Collection, created at Illinois Benedictine College in Lisle, Ill., in 1983, was discontinued in 1994, John Brousch has learned; all of the books were integrated into their general collection, and other items (artifacts, periodicals, clippings, etc.) were placed in storage, and recently recovered. Anyone who donated items other than books can ask for their return, describing the material to John (16727 Olcott Avenue, Tinley Park, IL 60477) <jbrouschships@aol.com>. A committee of Chicago-area Sherlockians will eventually decide what to do with what's left.
  96. John also reports that the Sherlock Holmes Center (in the Harold Washington Library Center), created when the new downtown library opened to the public in 1991, was discontinued about five years ago and placed in storage; John has not been able to recover that material.
  97. This is the sort of thing that underscores the importance of having an energetic and enthusiastic group of locals providing both support and oversight for a special collection. That's available in Minneapolis and Toronto and Boston and London, where libraries are kept aware of the importance of the Sherlockian and Doylean material. When it's not available, terrible things can happen: the Harry S. Truman Presidential Library once had a copy of the Baker Street Irregulars special edition of THE BLUE CARBUNCLE, inscribed to Truman by Edgar W. Smith. But it's not there now, thanks to a curator who decided that the book (and all of the other fiction owned by Truman) wasn't important to the library. Fortunately, the inscribed copy of THE BLUE CARBUNCLE is now in the hands of a collector, who acquired it from the dealer who acquired it from the presidential library.
  98. Collectors can also provide support for special collections, of course, by donating or bequeathing material from their own collections. It's also always nice to donate or bequeath money that special collections can use to maintain and expand their holdings; special collections can also generate funding by disposing of duplicate material, and that's indeed what they do, since there's no sense in keeping half a dozen identical copies of the same book, absent inscriptions or other things that might make a copy unique.

99. Mar 02 #4: "Holmes!" is a work-in-progress musical with book and lyrics by Brett Nicholson and music by Hans Vollrath, first performed in concert at the Disney Institute in Orlando in Sept. 1997. There have been other concert readings since then, and there were "producers readings" in New York on Mar. 25-26 for invited theatrical professionals and producers. There's much more at their web-site at <<http://www.holmesthemusical.com>>, and that's where to order the CD ($15.99 postpaid, with a 16-page booklet, and signed by Nicholson and Vollrath on request); those who don't have access to the Internet can order from Holmes!, Box 2242, Windermere, FL 34786 (credit-card orders welcome). It's nicely done, and it will be fun to see a full-scale production.
  100. Watch for a repeat of the "Saturday Night Live" program that aired on Mar. 16 on NBC-TV, with Sir Ian McKellen as guest host, and in Sherlockian costume in a hot-air-balloon murder-mystery skit. Jeremy Irons was guest host on "Saturday Night Live" on Mar. 23, 1991, and appeared as Sherlock Holmes in one of the skits, and that same month won an Oscar for his performance (as Claus von Bulow in "Reversal of Fortune"), but McKellen was not as fortunate: he was nominated but didn't win the this year's Oscar for best supporting actor (as Gandalf in "The Lord of the Rings").
  101. Tony Harries, who was Sherlock Holmes' secretary at Abbey House in London in 1990 and then toured the United States, speaking to Sherlockian societies and appearing on television (on "To Tell the Truth" and "Good Morning America") now is a writer, and he has his own web-site, which the electronically-enabled can visit at <<http://www.tonyharries.co.uk>>.
  102. Forecast: THE HAMSTER OF THE BASKERVILLES: A CHET GECKO MYSTERY, by Bruce Hale, from Harcourt Children's Books in April; 132 pp., $14.00. "Something is trashing the classrooms at Emerson Hicky Elementary School, and sixthgrade private eye Chet Gecko sets out to find the creature that's responsible. Chet Gecko doesn't believe in the supernatural. His idea of voodoo is his mom's cockroach ripple ice cream. But when a teacher reports seeing a monster by the light of a full moon, it falls to Chet and his sleek-winged partner, Natalie Attired, to answer the burning question: Is this the work of a vicious, supernatural werehamster on the loose? Or just another science fair project gone wrong?"
  103. Issue #47 of Sherlock (that's the new title for Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine) has Bert Coules' interesting "studio diary" reporting on the ten days it took to record the five new programs in "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" for BBC radio and Chris Senior's review of the series, Gavin Collinson's report on the new BBC videocassette with Peter Cushing's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (from the 1968 television series, which had the highest ratings in the United Kingdom of any Sherlock Holmes series before or since), Trish and Jay Pearlman's history of the Mini-Tonga Society (for Sherlockian miniaturists), and much more (S'ian and otherwise). Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £20.00 (U.K.)/£22.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England; there's a web-site at <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Classic Specialties is their agent in the U.S. (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders are welcomed at both addresses, and back issues are available.

104. Mar 02 #5: Naxos AudioBooks, which offers recordings of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and other Doylean books (Nov 01 #5), has added A STUDY IN SCARLET to its list, read by David Timson on four CDs (£14.99) or four audiocassettes (£11.99); 34 Holmethorpe Avenue, Redhill, Surrey RH1 2NN, England <<http://www.selectmusic.co.uk>>.
  105. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner at Mia Bella Trattoria in Houston on Mar. 13, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, to honor the world's first forensic geologist. The local Sherlockians were led by Bruce R. Parker, whose toast to Sherlock Holmes was only one of many offered during the evening. Our next meetings will be in Denver in October, and in Salt Lake City in May 2003.
  106. David W. Bradley died on Mar. 16. He had been a research assistant for the Tennessee State Legislature for 29 years, and he was an energetic member of the Sherlockian societies in Nashville, especially interested in the Sherlockian aspects of stage, screen, radio, and television.
  107. Prescott's Press, published by The Three Garridebs, offers an excellent review of the birthday festivities in its 30-page Jan. 2002 issue, including Warren Randall's script for the Baskerville Bash's "Bash-In" tribute to Rowan and Martin's television series. Subscriptions cost $12.00 ($14.00 outside the U.S.) for four issues (and you can start with the January issue), to Warren Randall, 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720.
  108. Ev Herzog spotted a story in the New Haven Register reporting that Gillette Castle will reopen on Memorial Day weekend (that's May 25-27 this year) after major renovation work. According to an earlier report (Mar 01 #3) visitors will now be able to see the steam and electric trains that once ran on track installed by William Gillette (the trains were purchased years ago by an amusement park in Bristol, and last year returned to the Castle).
  109. The film "Zero Effect" (1998) starred Bill Pullman as Daryl Zero, the best private detective in the world (utterly brilliant, a deductive genius, emotionally unstable, and a user of disguises) and Ben Stiller as Steve Arlo (the steady, reliable aide who eventually leaves to get married); Jake Kasdan, who wrote and directed the film, told an interviewer that "There's a bunch of detective stories that have been important to me, and Sherlock Holmes is certainly among them." And stories in Variety and the Hollywood Reporter last month reported that Alan Cumming will star as Daryl Zero in an NBC-TV pilot for a series to be produced by Warner Bros. TV/Castle Rock.

110. Laurie R. King's new Mary Russell/Sherlock Holmes novel JUSTICE HALL (Feb 02 #4) is available from Recorded Books, read unabridged by Jenny Sterlin on ten cassettes ($49.50, or $18.50 rental); they're at 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-638-1304) <<http://www.recordedbooks.com>>.
111. William S. Dorn offers his latest CD-ROM disk THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THEN SOME, with the text of the 60 Canonical stories plus "The Man with the Watches" and "The Lost Special" (with an illustration for each story); it's in searchable PDF format. Bill's address is 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210; and the postpaid cost is $11.45 (to the U.S.) or $12.45 (to Canada) or $14.45 (elsewhere).

112. Mar 02 #6: The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library are honoring the founding curator of the collection with an annual Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture; the first lecture, at the Toronto Reference Library (at 789 Yonge Street) at 2:00 pm on Apr. 20, will be on "The Berg Collection: A Tale of Literary Taste and Scholarship" by Isaac Gewirtz, curator of the Berg Collection at the N.Y. Public Library (which also owns some splendid Sherlockian and Doylean material). There's no charge for the event, and the collection will be open for visiting following the lecture.
113. Fans of the excellent "Nero Wolfe" series running on Arts & Entertainment cable will welcome the news that "Death of a Doxy" will debut on Apr. 14; according to Sharon Doyle (who dramatized the story), it's set in 1965, the year Rex Stout wrote the story. The series will continue with "Die Like a Dog", "The Next Witness", "The Mother Hunt", "Murder is Corny", "Poison A La Carte", "Too Many Clients", "Help Wanted Male", "Before I Die", "Silent Speaker", "The Cop Killer", and "Immune to Murder".
114. Celebrations of the centenary of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" continue: on Mar. 23, Sherlockians from Italy (and England and Japan) assembled in Firenze for the unveiling of a new bronze bust of Sherlock Holmes, sculpted by Giancarlo Buratti. The formal unveiling took place on Mar. 24 at the Biblioteca Civica Ernesto Regionieri, and the bust will be moved soon to the Sesto Fiorentino railway station, where (according to Uno Studio in Holmes, the local Sherlockian society) Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson arrived in 1891 on their way to Florence. Firenze isn't the only city in Italy to have a different name in English (Livorno's another); the British seemed to find it quite easy to do that in the days of the Grand Tour. Marco Zatterin reports that the Italian newspaper La Stampa kindly hosts a "Sherlockiani italiani" website at <http://www.lastampa.it/\_web/\_RUBRICHE/Libri/default\_sherlock.asp>, where you can read more (in Italian) about the bust and about other aspects of the Sherlockian world in Italy. Marco works for La Stampa, which surely helps to explain why the newspaper is so kind to Sherlockians.
115. Thanks to Dave Morrill for spotting a new CD of John Scott's score for his first film "A Study in Terror" (1965). It's a new recording, by the Hollywood Symphony Orchestra (conducted by Scott), and the accompanying booklet includes an interesting discussion by the composer of his work for the film and for the CD; he explains that "If any authoritarian, purist, film music specialist, collector should ask 'Why didn't I include the pub piano music heard on the film and on the original LP?' my answer would be that I never did enjoy pub pianists. But if anyone misses it that much I can recommend some pubs where the pianists are every bit as bad as the one performing on the original sound track." The CD is available in shops, and ($16.99 plus shipping) from Intrada (2220 Mountain Boulevard #220, Oakland, CA 94611) <<http://www.intrada.com>>. And fans of John Scott's music will want to visit Randy Levy's web-site at <<http://webhome.idirect.com/~rlevy>>.

116. Apr 02 #1: Patrick Macnee has performed as Sherlock Holmes, and as Dr. Watson, and as a psychotic former British secret agent who believes he is Sherlock Holmes, and (as John Steed) he was involved with Sir Arthur Doyle. And now he's an excellent guide to Sherlockian London in a 45-minute videocassette ("In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes") available from Chip Taylor Communications (2 East View Drive, Derry, NH 03038 (800-876-2447) <www.chiptaylor.com>. The cassette costs $29.95 plus shipping (credit-card orders welcome); $99.99 to schools and libraries.
117. Billy Wilder died on Mar. 27. He was a Hollywood legend, the winner of six Oscars, and the only person to win three times for the same film: as director, producer, and co-writer of "The Apartment" (1960). His "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) was splendid fun, and might have been more even fun if United Artists hadn't insisted on leaving almost a third of the film on the cutting-room floor. But one can see some of the longer film, on a two-laserdisc set issued in 1994 with the film (in letterbox format), production stills, a shooting script, music cue sheets, a pressbook, "The Dreadful Business of the Naked Honeymooners" (film only, with subtitles), "The Curious Case of the Upside Down Room" (sound only), an interview with Ernest Walter (the editor of the film), and the theatrical trailer.
118. MPI Home Video is continuing its DVD series with programs from the Granada series. Volume 4 offers "The Greek Interpreter" and "The Norwood Builder" ($14.98); if you can't find it locally, try Critics' Choice Video (Box 749, Itasca, IL 60413 (800-367-7765) <<http://www.criticschoicevideo.com>>. Their current catalog also has videocassettes of John Neville's "A Study in Terror" (1965) ($19.95) and Matt Frewer's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2000) ($14.95).
119. And Signals Video offers 30 of the Granada programs in boxed sets of videocassettes ($89.95 to $219.95); videocassettes of Ian Richardson's "The Sign of Four" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" ($29.95 the pair); and audiocassette and CD sets (from the Smithsonian Institution) of "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" ($59.95/$69.95) with ten hours (20 programs) from the 1947-48 radio series that starred John Stanley and Alfred Shirley.
120. THE HIDDEN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES II, by Bill Paxton (Independence: Omnibus Enterprises, 2001; 153 pp., $25.00), has two short pastiches and a novella that involves Holmes once again with the Knights Hospitaller in an adventurous pursuit of treasure long lost undersea off the coast of Egypt. $25.00 postpaid from the publisher (12907 East 36th Street Terrace, Independence, MO 64055. His earlier THE HIDDEN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Aug 00 #6) is available for the same price, and both volumes cost $40.00 postpaid.
121. The "Left Coast Crime 12" convention in Portland (Mar. 21-24) featured Laurie R. King as one of the guests of honor, and included a session on "Sherlock Through Time: The Detective We Can't Stop Reading About" with Michael Kurland, David Haugen, Stanley Johnson, and John Schilke. On Site Taping recorded the sessions and offers cassettes or CDs ($8.75/$15.99 postpaid); 29318 Quall Run, Agoura Hills, CA 91301) <conftape1@aol.com>.

122. Apr 02 #2: Milton Berle died on Mar. 27. He began his entertainment career in vaudeville in 1908, and went on to become "Mr. Television" (he didn't invent it, but he was first seen on television in 1929, on an experimental broadcast in Chicago). He played Sherlock Holmes on "Texaco Star Theatre" in 1949 (with Victor Moore as Watson) in "Sherlock Holmes in the Mystery of the Sen Sen Murder". Basil Rathbone often was a guest on Berle's programs, and in Berle's autobiography he recalled Rathbone's first guest appearance: "Nobody ever had it worse on the show than Basil Rathbone -- or at least, that's what he thought at the time. In fairness to him, it must have been rough for a man of Basil's dignity to find himself in front of the camera with Martha Raye and me. Both of us can go pretty wild in the low-comedy department when we forget our lines. Which is exactly what happened in some sort of Sherlock Holmes takeoff that was dreamed up for Basil's guest shot. We just ran wild around him, pushing, shoving, ad libbing, mugging, swinging burlesque bladders. Mr. Rathbone looked stunned throughout the whole thing. As soon as he got off stage, he said to the first person he met, 'Nevah again will I work with those two fucking people! Nevah!' He was on the show three weeks later, after everyone he knew had congratulated him on how marvelous he looked and on what a real flair for comedy he had displayed."

123. Great Britain issued six high-tech stamps in 1991 honoring the 100th anniversary of the Nobel Prize: the physics stamp had a hologram that showed a molecule; the medicine stamp was scratch-and-sniff with the odor of eucalyptus; and the 45p literature stamp had the entire text of T. S. Eliot's poem "The Ad-dressing of Cats" in 0.1mm-high microprinting (readable with a good magnifying lens, but not in the illustration here). The poem is from OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS (which has two Sherlockian poems).
124. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) notes that THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 7 now is available, with 74 pages of wit, scholarship, pastiche, and artwork by 16 members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new, but a few items have appeared elsewhere. The cost is $10.00/CA$15.00/£6.00/€10.00/AU$12.00 postpaid by air; payment in currency or by PayPal to <bbarnes@ozemail.com.au> preferred, but checks are acceptable.
125. Further to the report (Mar 02 #6) on the festivities in Firenze celebrating the 100th anniversary of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in March, Uno Studio in Holmes has published two items of interest. SOTTO ORDINI DEL MEDICO E SOTTO IL SOLE ITALIANO/UNDER DOCTOR'S ORDERS AND UNDER THE ITALIAN SUN is an analysis by Philip Weller of a letter from Arthur Conan Doyle to William Gillette (undated, but the accompanying envelope was postmarked on Mar. 26, 1902); the 32-page booklet, with a color facsimile of the letter, is in Italian and English, and the postpaid cost is $10.00. The letter is owned by Gabriele Mazzoni, and his collection is a fine one: LA MALEDIZIONE DEI BASKERVILLES is the catalog of an exhibition during the celebration, with 461 items all related to the story, from first editions to comic books, in various languages, and games, records, videocassettes, and DVDs; 82 pp., with by a colorful poster, $15.00 postpaid. Order from Gianluca Salvatori, Casa Postale 140, 55042 Forte dei Marmi (Lucca), Italy; currency only, please.
126. Apr 02 #3: Dudley Moore died on Mar. 27. He was a talented musician, comedian, and actor, from the start of his career in "Beyond the Fringe" in 1960 to starring roles in "10" and "Arthur. He shared screenplay credit with Peter Cook for a comedy version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978) and played three characters in the film: Dr. Watson, Mrs. Ada Holmes, and Mr. Spigot.
127. I've suggested in the past that it would be grand to see a film or television dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" starring a Hound created George Lucas' computer wizards at Industrial Light & Magic, that being the only way, really, to bring a truly terrifying Hound to the screen. And we're now going to have a chance to see such a Hound on television, thanks to the BBC, which is planning to use the same computer technology that generated the dinosaurs in its recent version of "The Lost World" in a "chilling thriller for the 21st century" (according to Jane Trantor, controller of drama commissioning at the BBC). Jay Hyde has forwarded a report in The Independent (Apr. 2) that says the dramatization will be set in 1901, and will star Richard Roxburgh (who played the Duke in "Moulin Rouge") as Sherlock Holmes, Ian Hart (he was Quirrell in "Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone") as Dr. Watson, Richard E. Grant as Stapleton, and John Nettles as Mortimer. Also according to the story, Holmes and Watson will be "portrayed as young and athletic men in their mid-30s, in contrast to the mature and paternalistic figures of most screen versions."
128. Reported: WRITING THE URBAN JUNGLE: READING EMPIRE IN LONDON FROM DOYLE TO ELIOT, by Joseph McLaughlin (Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 2000; 256 pp., $55.00 cloth, $18.50 paper); two of the book's seven chapters are "Holmes on the Range: Frontiers Old and New in 'A Study in Scarlet'" and "The Romance of Invasion: Cocaine and Cannibalism in 'The Sign of Four'" (which Karen Murdock found "heavily freighted with academic language and far-fetched observations").
129. The Thalia was one of New York's best art-film theaters for decades; almost derelict for a decade, it has been renovated and is now open again as the Leonard Nimoy Thalia (renamed in honor of Nimoy because he paid for much of the renovation). And it has a Doylean connection: it may be the only theater in the U.S. to have screened Peter McEnery's "The Adventures of Gerard" (1970), which had a brief run at the Thalia in Dec. 1978. The film will be screened again (probably for the second time in the U.S.) at the Library of Congress in August (Feb 02 #4).
130. "Sherlock Holmes (Meitantei Holmes)" is a boxed DVD set issued in Japan in 2001 with all 26 episodes of the animated television series produced there in 1983 (and better known here as "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound"). The soundtrack's in Japanese, and there are five disks (with total running time of 636 minutes), a 44-page booklet, television promotion spots, imageboard stills, and trailers, and it is formatted in NTSC for region 2 (Japan and Europe) and costs ¥31,500 ($236.66). You can order on-line, at a web-site at <<http://www.cdjapan.co.jp/detailview.html?KEY=PIBA-3020>>. The series also is being issued here on DVD by Pioneer Entertainment, but not (yet) as a set: "Sherlock Hound: Case File 1" was issued in February ($29.98) with five episodes; "Case File 2" was released in April ($29.98) with five episodes; and "Case File 3" is due in June ($29.98) with four episodes.

131. Apr 02 #4: Commentary on a re-reading of "The Hound of the Baskervilles": "But Sherlock Holmes was a comedy character; and I cannot call up any picture of what a real interview between him and a real ghost would be like. Sherlock Holmes, having the kind of cleverness that belongs to a comedy character, has also the kind of stupidity, or at least the kind of limitation, which belongs to a man who could never have had a chat with a ghost." G. K. Chesterton, in his essay "On Ghost Stories, Crime Stories, the Rules, & Holmes" in the Illustrated London News (May 30, 1936); it was reprinted in All Things Considered (the newsletter of the Ottawa Chesterton Society), and kindly forwarded by Pat Accardo.
132. House of Ascot sells a wide variety of architectural bookends and models sculpted by Timothy Richards, including 221b Baker Street (modeled after the Sherlock Holmes Museum); it's item TRSL, 7.5 in. high, $69.95 plus shipping, and the new catalog offers a 10% discount until May 15 (quote code AM4); their address is 365 Boston Post Road #244, Sudbury, MA 01776) (800-717-3105) <<http://www.houseofascot.com>>.
133. Richard Bradford died on Mar. 23. He lived in Santa Fe since he was twelve years old, and his novel RED SKY AT MORNING (1968) established his reputation as one of the best writers about the southwest (and it was made into a film that starred Richard Thomas and Claire Bloom). His musical melodrama "Sherlock" (written with Tim Thompson and Marianne De Pury) was produced in Santa Fe in 1972 and had good reviews (members of The Brothers Three of Moriarty, led by John Bennett Shaw, were at the opening night, of course).
134. Marcel Theroux's THE CONFESSIONS OF MYCROFT HOLMES: A PAPER CHASE (Jun 01 #2) now is available as a trade paperback (New York: Harvest Books, 2002; 228 pp., $14.00); it's not Sherlockian, but it's an intriguing mystery.
135. The new production at Chaffin's Barn Dinner Theatre is John Chaffin's dramatizations of ""The Resident Patient", "The Final Problem", and "The Empty House"; the production opened on Apr. 9 and will run through May 18. The theater's address is 8204 Highway 100, Nashville, TN 37221) (800-282-2276) <<http://www.dinnertheatre.com>>.
136. Bantam Doubleday Dell has begun a reprint series of Laurie R. King's novels about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes as trade paperbacks; THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE is now available, with new cover art (368 pp., $11.95).
137. "A Hound It Was..." is a video compilation produced by Paul Singleton and Maribeau Briggs; it had its world premiere for an enthusiastic audience at the "Footprints of the Hounds" conference in Toronto last October, and it was revised and shown again during the birthday festivities in New York in January. Copies of the 65-minute videocassette are available ($20.00 postpaid, $23.00 to Canada) from Maribeau Briggs (On-the-Fly Video Productions, 46 East 29th Street #3-F, New York, NY 10016). The cassette also is available in formats for other countries; Sherlockians overseas should ask about shipping costs <onthefly@peoplepc.com>.

138. Apr 02 #5: A review of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" noted by Willis Frick in "Book Reviews by Kids" in the Los Angeles Times (Mar. 27): "Sherlock Holmes is a great detective who solved many cases. He has a partner named Dr. John Watson who helps solve many of his cases. Holmes possesses an intelligent and clever mind. His motto is 'eyes and brains.' Many people try to challenge him, but he's never failed a case yet!" (Gil, 10, Overland Avenue Elementary, Los Angeles). Well, you won't find "eyes and brains" as Sherlock Holmes' motto in Canon, but it is his motto in the animated television series "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (which you can see in re-runs on local Warner Bros. channels, usually on weekend mornings). It was produced by DIC Entertainment and Scottish Entertainment and first shown in 1999, with 26 30-minute episodes; Holmes, preserved in honey after his battle with Moriarty, is revived in the 22nd century, teamed with a robotic Dr. Watson and assisting a (female) descendant of Insp. Lestrade, and the shows are based (sometimes loosely) on Canonical stories. And it's interesting to see what the producers and writers have done.
139. A DVD with episodes from "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" was issued by Trimark Entertainment in April: its title is "The Fall and Rise of Sherlock Holmes" ($14.99), and its length is 78 minutes, suggesting that it has at least four episodes. And "The Great Mouse Detective" has been forecast on DVD from Walt Disney Home Video in July ($29.99); this will include additional material about the film.
140. Reported: an American edition of SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CROSBY MURDER, by Barrie Roberts (New York: Carroll & Graf, 224 pp., $24.00); according to Publishers Weekly, "Roberts captures the flavor of the originals but little of their drama."
141. Barry Took died on Mar. 31. He was a noted British comedian and writer; he worked on radio series such as "Round the Horne" and "The Army Game", was one of the producers for a television series the BBC planned as "Baron Von Took's Flying Circus" and then as "Owl Stretching Time" before launching it as "Monty Python's Flying Circus". He also produced the 1973 BBC-1 television program "Elementary, My Dear Watson" with John Cleese as Holmes and William Rushton as Watson.
142. Reported: THE CAMDEN HOUSE COOKBOOK 2: RECIPES FROM THE EMPTY HOUSE, edited by Janet Bensley; 200 pp., $24.00 postpaid to the U.S., $26.00 elsewhere), available from Stan Tinsley, Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999.
143. The Holmes & Watson Report continues to provide interesting reading written by "publisher, editor-in-chief, and absolute scapegoat" Brad Keefauver and others. In the Jan. 2002 issue Brad expands on Chris Redmond's suggestion that Sherlockians need a new Game: Sherlockian role-playing; it's an intriguing idea, as Brad discovered when he appeared as guest speaker John Clayton at the annual banquet of the Hansoms of John Clayton. Other contributors included David Morrill, who reminisces about the Great Revival of the 1970s; Bill Mason, who offers some thoughtful comments on last year's Baker Street Journal Christmas Annual; and Jennie Paton, who reviews the four new programs in the "Murder Rooms" television series. $16.00 a year (six issues), $22.00 outside North America; $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
144. Apr 02 #6: Robert Urich died on Apr. 16. He began his television career in 1973, and became best known as Dan Tanna in the television series "Vega$" (1978-1981), and in the title role in "Spenser: For Hire" (1985-1988). He had Sherlockian dialogue in both series, and one "Vega$" episode ended with Dan Tanna being made a member of the British Detectives and given a deerstalker and calabash.
145. There will be 17 lots of Sherlockiana and Doyleana from the collection of Fred Stutman at auction on May 16 at Samuel T. Freeman & Co. (1808 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103 <<http://www.freemansauction.com>> (215-563-9275).
146. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Richard Lancelyn Green's "100 Years Ago" article about statues honoring Sherlock Holmes (the first proposal for such a monument appeared in Tit-Bits on Dec. 29, 1901), John Bergquist's "50 Years Ago" report on the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition in 1951 and the founding of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and news of the special collections. The March issue has Richard J. Sveum's report on Christopher and Barbara Roden's gift to the collections of a file of letters from John Bennett Shaw to Jack Tracy (from the archive on which they based their 2001 Baker Street Journal Christmas Annual), Julie McKuras' "50 Years Ago" article about A. A. Milne, and other news. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
147. If you want to bid on a damaged and incomplete copy of the first British edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, contact Richard Howe in England <richardh1461@yahoo.co.uk> before the end of June.
148. The comic-book mini-series RUSE continues; #5 ($2.95) has a new mystery for Emma Bishop to solve, and nice Victorian (but not-quite-Sherlockian) atmosphere and artwork, and someone lurking behind an easily identifiable portrait of Arthur Conan Doyle.
149. The auction at Christie's of the first part of Richard M. Lackritz's detective fiction library (Mar 02 #1) on Apr. 17 was lively and interesting: the two-page manuscript of Conan Doyle's working draft for his introduction to Harold Baylor's THE UNDISCOVERED COUNTRY brought $3,346; a lot with 79 single issues of The Strand Magazine (with all the stories that were published in the magazine) sold for $26,290 (including the buyer's premium, which now is 19.5%); an inscribed copy of Vincent Starrett's "The Unique Hamlet" (one of 10 imprinted for the friends of Vincent Starrett) went for $38,240 (well over the estimate of $3,000-5,000); and another inscribed copy (one of 190 imprinted for the friends of Walter M. Hill) brought $1,434. Bram Stoker's corrected typed manuscript of "Dracula" (estimated at $1,000,000-1,500,000) sent to auction by another owner went unsold at $700,000.
150. Two items were withdrawn before the sale: an autograph manuscript signed by Vincent Starrett of his poem "221B", and a Frederick Dorr Steele portrait of Sherlock Holmes inscribed to Starrett by the artist; both were forgeries (the portrait being a carefully inked-over print) with provenance that originated with the late Michael Murphy, who was Starrett's literary executor.

151. Apr 02 #7: The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers Janice McNabb's reminiscences about working with Cameron Hollyer (excerpted from a talk she gave at a ceremony honoring Cam during the "Footprints of the Hound" conference last year), and other interesting reports. Copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwig@sympatico.ca>.
152. Further to the report (Dec 01 #1) on BBC Worldwide's plans to issue videocassettes and DVDs of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1968) starring Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock, they're now available; the recording is excellent, 100 minutes long, with fine color (there are four other programs in the BBC vaults, and one hopes they will issue them as well). £19.99 plus shipping for the PAL cassette or DVD, or £25.00 plus shipping for the NTSC cassette. You can order by mail (Video Offer, BBC Learning, Room A3022, 80 Wood Lane, London, W12 0TT, England) <www.bbcworldwide.com/vet/specialinterests/>, and credit-card orders are welcome.
153. "Graphic Classics" is an attractive series of single-author anthologies edited and published by Tom Pomplun, and the second issue is devoted to Arthur Conan Doyle (Mount Horeb: Eureka Productions, 2002; 144 pp., $9.95); the contents include "The Adventure of the Speckled Band" (illustrated by Nestor Redondo and adapted from the version that Pendulum Press published in 1974); "The Lost World" (illustrated by Don Marquez and reprinted from the version he published in 1994); and many new stories (including "The Adventure of the Copper Beeches" illustrated by Rick Geary, "The Los

- Amigos Fiasco", "How It Happened", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Available in comic-book shops, and ($11.95 postpaid) from Eureka Productions, 8778 Grove Road, Mount Horeb, WI 53572 <www.graphicclassics.com>.
154. Harry Alan Towers has worked in radio, films, and television for more than six decades, primarily as a producer and screenwriter; he produced the 1954 John Gielgud/Ralph Richardson BBC radio series, and the two 1992 television films that starred Christopher Lee and Patrick Macnee, and in 1994 the two "Lost World" television films with John Rhys-Davies as Challenger. And he is still at work at the age of 81, planning a new film ("The Baker Street Irregulars") starring Malcolm McDowell as Holmes, and (Towers hopes) Edward Hardwicke as Watson. You can read more about that, and his many other productions, in an excellent interview by Terry Pace in the latest issue (#44) of Scarlet Street, which also offers a fine interview with Christopher Lee by David Del Valle. $42.00 a year (for six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>.
155. "Following Lord Peter Wimsey" is the title of a Book Adventures tour (July 12-22) of Dorothy L. Sayers' England with members of the Dorothy L. Sayers Society and other experts, and there will be an optional Scotland Extension at the end of the tour, into "The Five Red Herrings" country (one assumes that the experts are aware of Sayer's interest in Sherlock Holmes). Additional information is available from Book Adventures, 512 West Venice Avenue #102, Venice, FL 34285 <<http://www.bookadventures.com>>.

156. May 02 #1: Occasionally readers of this newsletter have asked about back issues. I've always felt that there's nothing sillier than stale gossip, but if you want to see what has (or hasn't) happened since I acquired my first computer in 1985, and have access to the World Wide Web, Willis G. Frick has generously provided expanded web-space for all those bits and bytes (text only) at his Sherlocktron web-site at <<http://members.cox.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>>.
157. Marina Stajic has reported that the annual meeting of the Society of Forensic Toxicologists will be held on Oct. 13-17 at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn, Mich; a "Sherlock Holmes Workshop: The Adventure of the Devil's Foot" is scheduled for Oct. 17 (2:00-4:00 pm) with a panel of five eminent forensic toxicologists presenting their opinions on the true identity of *Radix pedis diaboli*. Local Sherlockians are welcome (and encouraged) to attend.
158. THE POISON BELT is available in a trade paperback reprint (93 pp., $11.95) in a series of science-fiction classics published by the University of Nebraska (Edgar Rice Burroughs' PIRATES OF VENUS also was issued this year).
159. Big Feats! Entertainment's 30-minute "Wishbone" series (broadcast by PBSTV) has won a lot of fans over the years ("Wishbone is a short-haired Jack Russell terrier whose active imagination lands him--in full costume--smack in the middle of signature scenes from classic works such as 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'"). That story ("The Slobbery Hound") first aired on Oct. 18, 1995, and it was issued on videocassette by Polygram Video, and again (to bedevil the completists) by Lyrick Studios as "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (both are now out of print, but they turn up at auction on eBay).
160. The first four of Laurie R. King's novels about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes have been translated into Japanese and published by Shueisha, with attractive cover artwork that the electronically-enabled can see at Naomi Tanaka's Japanese web-site at <<http://village.infoweb.ne.jp/~beekeep>>.
161. "That painting was by Jean Baptiste Greuze," said Sherlock Holmes (in "The Valley of Fear"). An exhibition devoted exclusively to the artist's drawing ("Greuze the Draftsman") opened at the Frick Collection in New York on May 14, and it will run through Aug. 4 (and it will open at the Getty Museum in Los Angeles in September). The Frick Collection is at 4 East 70th Street in New York <<http://www.frick.org>>.
162. Terry Walsh died on Apr. 21. He was an actor, stuntman, stunt coordinator, and fight arranger, beginning his career on television in the "Doctor Who" series in 1963 (doubling for Jon Pertwee and then for Tom Baker, Jay Pearlman notes), and he was a stuntman on "Without a Clue" (1988).
163. If anyone knows of a mention in print of Conan Doyle having helped Dorando at the marathon finish line at the 1908 Olympics, earlier than THE PEOPLE'S ALMANAC PRESENTS THE BOOK OF LISTS NO. 2, by Irving Wallace, Amy Wallace, and David Wallechinsky (1980), please communicate with Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada) <goldfarb@netrover.com>. Cliff's working on an article demonstrating that no one in that famous photograph is Conan Doyle, who was in the stands when the race was run.

164. May 02 #2: Those who remember Doctor Who from seeing Jon Pertwee on television, or Tom Baker, or any of the other actors who have appeared as the Doctor, and who may have avoided novels that have extended the series should take another look, at least at Lloyd Rose's THE CITY OF THE DEAD (London: BBC Worldwide, 2001; 278 pp., $6.95). It's a dramatic story (she has been the Washington Post's drama critic) that has brought the Eighth Doctor (played by Paul McGann in a television film in 1996) to New Orleans; there are surprises and humor, and a minor allusion to Sherlock Holmes. Her next Doctor Who novel (CAMERA OBSCURA) is due this year, and Lloyd reports that it's set in England in 1893, and full of Sherlockian references.
165. Paul Petrucci's PRODIGAL LOGIC (Bangor: Booklocker, 2002; 240 pp., $14.95) is a first novel, featuring Ray Gabriel, a computer programmer who lives on a houseboat in Seattle and who is working on a "Sherlock-in-a-Box" program based on the "thumb-rules" found in the Sherlock Holmes stories; he becomes involved in a murder investigation, and his computer program helps with the solution. Booklocker's address is Box 2399, Bangor, ME 04402, and the book can be downloaded from their web-site; you can use a link at Petrucci's own web-site at <<http://www.paulpetrucci.com>>.
166. Howard Merrill died on Apr. 20. He was a child actor and a teen-aged radio scriptwriter (he made it into "Ripley's Believe It or Not" for being in 58 silent movies before he was 11 years old and for 487 radio broadcasts on 38 shows by the time he was 14); he also wrote for television, and with Allan Sherman created the television game show "I've Got a Secret" in 1952. And he was one of the writers for the "Sherlock Holmes" radio series (1948-49) that starred John Stanley and Ian Martin.
167. The new shows in the excellent "Nero Wolfe" series running on Arts & Entertainment cable have been great fun, and there was a surprise in "Die Like a Dog" (on Apr. 28): the dog is important to the solution of a murder, and it frequently is called a hound (it's really a black Labrador), and the police department's dog-handler shows up wearing a deerstalker. Sharon Doyle (who dramatized the story) credits costume designer Chris Hargedon for the allusive costume (a nice touch indeed during a centenary year).
168. The museum exhibit "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" has been on display in the United States and Canada, and it opened at the Witte Museum in San Antonio on May 25 and will run through Aug. 25. It's an interactive exhibit with lots of Victorian flavor, and a mystery to solve; the museum's at 3801 Broadway, San Antonio, TX 78209 <<http://www.witemuseum.org>>.
169. "Gripping Tale as Kissinger Plays Moriarty" was the headline on Frank Johnson's "Commons Sketch" in the Daily Telegraph (Apr. 23), at hand from Shirley Purves. MP Jeremy Corbyn "is a vigorous Left-winger," Johnson noted. And Henry Kissinger "is to Mr. Corbyn, and to the Left in general, what Dr. Moriarty was to Arthur Conan Doyle: the indispensable villain." Corbyn's concern was that Kissinger, who hasn't held government office since 1977, was visiting Britain. Johnson explained that Conan Doyle killed off Holmes and Moriarty, and brought back the detective, and that "Mr. Corbyn did not make Conan Doyle's mistake. That shows him to be the greater, certainly the more commercial, artist. Mr. Corbyn brought back his villain."

170. May 02 #3: Mary Burke reports that Claude-Joseph Vernet's painting "Vue du Port de Dieppe" (1765) is on display in a French naval exhibit "Le Grand Voyage" that has toured in Quebec and Wilmington, and will be at the Peabody Essex Museum in Salem, Mass., July 12-Oct. 14. Claude-Joseph Vernet (1714-1789) was the official painter for the French navy, and the grandfather of Sherlock Holmes' granduncle Horace Vernet.
171. John Murray, founded in 1768 and the publisher of Byron, Jane Austen, Conan Doyle, and Charles Darwin (the Financial Times noted), has been acquired by Hodder Headline, a division of the retailer W. H. Smith; the paper also reported that Hodder Headline is planning to rejuvenate Murray's fiction list (which has suffered from an inability to offer the staggering advances that successful authors expect from big publishing houses). The firm will continue as an imprint under Hodder, according to John Murray (the seventh of that name to head the company), and its archives, which include quills used by Dickens and locks of hair of Byron's lovers, will be preserved.
172. There's an electronic "Gaslight" mailing list for people interested in the gaslight era (1800-1919), and their web-site offers many e-texts from that period's authors. There's also a page of links to Sherlock Holmes parodies at <http://gaslight.mtroyal.ca/parody.htm> with e-texts for authors such as Lehmann, Ramsay, Munkittrick, Barr, Bangs, Twain, Forrest, Leblanc, Harte, O. Henry, Leacock, Barrie, and Conan Doyle.
173. Reported: David Pirie's THE PATIENT'S EYES: THE DARK BEGINNINGS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, published last year in Britain and now in an American edition (New York: St. Martin's Press, 2002; 252 pp., $22.95); a pastiche by the author of the British television mini-series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (2000) that starred Ian Richardson as Dr. Joseph Bell.
174. Marsha Pollak reports that the American Library Association will hold its annual meeting in Atlanta in June, and that the Sub-Librarians will gather on Sunday, June 16, from 4:00 to 5:00 pm, in the Greenwood Room at the Omni Hotel. Tim Johnson (curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota) will be the guest speaker, and local Sherlockians and visiting librarians are welcome to attend.
175. Reported: DEATH AT DARTMOOR, by Robin Paige (New York: Berkley Prime Crime, 2002; 336 pp., $21.95); the latest in a series of mysteries set in the Victorian era, this one with Conan Doyle and Fletcher Robinson in the cast of characters (neither one is murdered, by the other or by anyone else).
176. Gertrude H. Mahoney died on May 18. She enjoyed dolls and dollhouses, miniatures (she helped found the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts in 1971), Sherlockians (she joined The Red Circle of Washington in 1978 and in 1983 masterminded a local weekend for Sherlockian miniaturists), and her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. She had a grand sense of humor, and of curiosity, which may help explain what happened when not too many years ago she surprised a burglar in the kitchen of her son's house in Washington: he fled, and she went to the door to see which way he went, and he shot her, grazing her arm. "But it's only a flesh wound," she explained to the paramedics who were insisting that she go to the hospital, "and I've never had a chance to watch the police investigate a crime scene."
177. May 02 #4: Reported by Bill Vande Water: MAGGOTS, MURDER AND MEN: MEMORIES AND REFLECTIONS OF A FORENSIC ENTOMOLOGIST, by Zakaria Erzincioğlu: it was published in Britain in 2000, and there is now an American edition (New York: St. Martin's Press, 2002; 256 pp., $23.95). The author cites the Canon in each chapter, and devotes a couple of pages to Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle's achievements.
178. Otto Penzler's pamphlet series of pastiches and parodies has a new volume: SHERLOCK HOLMES FINDS THE LOST DUTCHMAN MINE, by Murray Shaw; the 28-page pamphlet costs $10.00, from The Mysterious Bookshop, 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840) <http://www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
179. Plan well ahead: Takeshi Shimizu has forwarded a report from the Manchester Evening News that the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh will celebrate its 500th anniversary from July 2005 to Oct. 2006, and that the festivities will include honors to famous "sons" of the college, including Dr. Joseph Bell, "who was immortalized as Sherlock Holmes by Arthur Conan Doyle."
180. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Vanishing Lady" premiered at Elaine's Famous Dinner Theater and Haunted Mansion Restaurant in Cape May, N.J., on Apr. 20. It's a murder-mystery musical, with prizes awarded to diners who guess the culprit, and it runs nightly through the summer, with some matinee dates. Additional details are available from Terrence O'Brien (513 Lafayette Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-4358) zelda@delanet.com). And you'll get a discount if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt").
181. Those who have fond memories of the Sherlockian alternate universe at Brad Keefauver's "Dangling Prussian" will appreciate the May issue of The Holmes & Watson Report, which includes "A Tale of Two Empty Houses" and a copy of "The Wisteria Lodge Journal" as his tribute to the 25th anniversary of The Occupants of the Empty House. $16.00 a year (six issues) or $22.00 outside North America; $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
182. Arthur H. Lewis was a talented writer, and a member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches, whom he had grand fun libelling in his murder mystery COPPER BEECHES (1978). And I recommend his CARNIVAL (1970), non-fiction (except, certainly for some of the stories he was told) about "the wide, weird wonderful world where carnies meet the marks, and everyone goes away happy," not because it is Sherlockian or Doylean, but because of throw-away lines such as his description of carnivals as a "world that is never really surprised at anything, where a man can say quite casually, 'What this country needs is a frozen whale,' then go out and freeze one."
183. Some interesting things come up for auction at eBay (an electronic auction web-site): this month Canadian collector-dealer Mark Hacking (Scientifica Opticae) offered an amputation set (with four Liston knives, two scalpels, a pair of forceps, and a small amputation saw, in a mahogany case) that belonged to Dr. Joseph Bell; the on-line auction lasted a week, and the winning bid was $11,700. The new owner is Fred Kittle, an ardent collector of Doyle material, who is donating his collection of Doyleana to the Newberry Library in Chicago; their exhibit on "The Remarkable Doyle Family-- Including Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled for April-June 2003.
184. May 02 #5: Anglofile reports that the four 90-minute episodes of the miniseries "Murder Rooms" (with Ian Richardson as Dr. Joseph Bell and Charles Edwards as Arthur Conan Doyle) that were broadcast by BBC-1 in Britain last year will air on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV weekly beginning on July 22. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter offering detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($15.00 a year).
185. A signed silhouette of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will be offered at auction by Early American History Auctions on June 8, with similar signed silhouettes of Lady Doyle and of their children; the silhouettes were cut by "Beatrix Sherman, the premiere 20th-century silhouette artist" when the Conan Doyle family visited Atlantic City in 1922. It's lot 484, and you can bid by mail or phone or e-mail: Box 3341, La Jolla, CA 92038 (800-473-5686) <http://www.earlyamerican.com>.
186. A reminder: the world premiere of the new play "The West End Horror" (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from the novel by Nicholas Meyer) will open at the Bay Street Theatre (Bay & Main Street, Sag Harbor, NY 11963) on June 18, and close on July 7, 2002. The box-office phone number is 631-725-9500; web-site at <http://www.baystreet.org>.
187. Stephen Jay Gould died on May 20. He was a biologist and a geologist, a fine lecturer, and a splendid writer whose many books help explain varied aspects of modern science, including evolutionary biology. His letter to the magazine Science 83 responding to an article by John Hathaway Winslow and Alfred Meyer that accused Sir Arthur Conan Doyle of perpetrating the Piltdown hoax described their article as "an evidence-free argument based

- on speculations about motive." He also enjoyed Sherlockian films: in THE FLAMINGO'S SMILE: REFLECTIONS ON NATURAL HISTORY (1985) he described the Universal series as "the unnumberable, yet wonderful, Rathbone-Bruce anachronisms that pit Holmes against Hitler and assorted enemies."
188. Further to last year's discussion in my monthly newsletter of Investitured Irregulars who have appeared in movies as actors, we can expand the list to include television soap operas: Paul Singleton played a cameo role as Dr. Brookglad on "All My Children" on ABC-TV on May 20.
189. Issue #48 of Sherlock offers editor David Stuart Davies discussion of the friendship between Holmes and Watson, Gavin Collinson's review of the BBCTV dramatization of Kingsley Amis' "Dr. Watson and the Darkwater Hall Mystery" (1974), and Rod Murphy's analysis of the humor in the Canon, and much more (including an interview with Ed McBain and a tribute to the late John Thaw. Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £23.70 (U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. It's also available from their American agent Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.

190. May 02 #6: "On June 22, 1979, twelve days after his 77th birthday, Sherlock Holmes died." "Sherlock Holmes" was the "nom" of Palmer C. Peterson, who was one of the most renowned members of the National Puzzlers' League; and he specialized in form puzzles (which require the multiple skills of anagrammatist, palindromist, and crossword puzzler, according to O. V. Michaelsen). You can see some of Peterson's best form puzzles in Michaelsen's WORDS AT PLAY: QUIPS, QUIRKS AND ODDITIES (New York: Sterling Publishing Co. 1987).
191. Mystery conventions: the ninth Mid Atlantic Mystery will be held in Philadelphia on Sept. 27-29, with Jonathan Gash and Lisa Scottoline as featured guests; the organizer is Deen Kogan (507 South Eighth Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147 <<http://midatlanticmystery.port5.com>>. Bouchercon 2002 will be in Austin on Oct. 17-20; the guests of honor are Mary Willis Walker and George Pelecanos (Box 27277, Austin, TX 78755) <<http://www.bouchercon2002.org>>. Bouchercon 2003 will be in Las Vegas, Oct. 16-19, with James Lee Burke, Ian Rankin, and Ruth Rendell as guests of honor (507 South Eighth Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147) <<http://www.bconvegas2003.org>>.
192. Laurie King's JUSTICE HALL (her sixth novel about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes) is a June Book-of-the-Month Club selection ($14.37 plus shipping).
193. Further to the report on plans for a film based on the comic-book mini-series "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen" (Mar 02 #1), Bill Barnes notes that Richard Roxburgh has reported that he will be in the film as Fantom, a character who turns out to be Moriarty. We will also be able to see him as Sherlock Holmes in the BBC's new dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Apr 02 #3); filming has been completed on that production.
194. Reported by Karen Murdock: LITERARY LIVES, edited by John Sutherland (Oxford University Press, 2001; 388 pp., £14.99); a collection of essays from supplements to the DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY, including an essay by A. Cochrane on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (first published in 1937). Karen also spotted two minor mentions of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes in HOW THE SCOTS INVENTED THE MODERN WORLD: THE TRUE STORY OF HOW WESTERN EUROPE'S POOREST NATION CREATED OUR WORLD & EVERYTHING IN IT, by Arthur Herman (New York: Crown Publishers, 2001; 288 pp., $25.95). Also: THE COLLECTION, by Peter Ackroyd (London: Chatto & Windus, 2001; 476 pp., £25.00); reviews and essays, including his review of "Young Sherlock Holmes" in The Spectator (1985).
195. Also: THE GREAT RADIO HEROES (REVISED EDITION), by Jim Harmon (Jefferson: McFarland, 2001; 256 pp., 2001); with discussion of Sherlock Holmes broadcasts in the (reprinted) chapter "For Armchair Detectives Only". And: THE DETECTIVE AS HISTORIAN: HISTORY AND ART IN HISTORICAL CRIME FICTION, edited by Ray B. Browne and Lawrence A. Kreiser, Jr. (Bowling Green: Bowling Green State University Popular Press, 2000; 313 pp., $29.95); Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle are mentioned in essays by Judy Ann Ford ("Umberto Eco: THE NAME OF THE ROSE") and by Gary Hoppenstand ("Elizabeth Peters: THE LAST CAMEL DIED AT NOON as Lost World Adventure Pastiche").

196. Jun 02 #1: Domestic postage rates increase on July 1, and so will the cost of my newsletter, to $10.00 a year (as in the past, for six or more pages a month of whatever gossip I find appropriate, most of it quite trivial, but much of it Sherlockian or Doylean). The cost is still $12.70 to Canada and $15.30 overseas, at least until those rates increase. The text (no illustrations) is available at <<http://members.cox.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>>, thanks to Willis G. Frick.
197. At hand from Philip Wilson is an article in the spring issue of Now & Then (the newsletter of the National Center for Osteopathic History at the Still National Osteopathic Museum) about "William Smith, M.D., D.O. (1862-1912)". Like Conan Doyle, Smith studied under Joseph Bell at the University of Edinburgh, and in 1938 Smith's son said that Conan Doyle fashioned the character of Dr. Watson around Smith as "a friendly gesture." The newsletter's address is: Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine, 800 West Jefferson Street, Kirksville, MO 63501.
198. Further to last year's discussion of Investitured Irregulars who have appeared in movies as actors, we can expand the list to include television soap operas: Paul Singleton played Dr. Brookglad on "All My Children" on ABC-TV on May 20.
199. THE ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE READER: FROM SHERLOCK HOLMES TO SPIRITUALISM, edited by Jeffrey Meyers and Valerie Meyers (New York: Cooper Square Press, 2002; 500 pp., $28.95), offers a wide-ranging sample of his writings, from an excerpt from A STUDY IN SCARLET (1887) to an excerpt from THE WANDERINGS OF A SPIRITUALIST (1921), including Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian short stories, and there's an excellent introduction setting the contents in context.
200. Which actor played a furious Sherlock Holmes?
201. Vitaliy Solomin died on May 28. He acted on stage and screen and television in the Soviet Union, and was an excellent Dr. Watson (with Vasiliy Livanov as Holmes) in five Russian television films broadcast in the USSR from 1979 to 1986.
202. British actor Roger Llewellyn appeared in David Stuart Davies' interesting one-man play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!" during the birthday festivities in New York in 2000, and has toured world-wide since then. And he is happy to perform anywhere: details on bookings are available from Joseph S. Ajlouny (Federal Bureau of Entertainment, 29205 Greening Boulevard, Farmington Hills, MI 48334) <<http://www.the-feds.com>>.
203. Further to the item on "The Baker Street Marketplace" (Feb 02 #5), the Sussex Group has purchased the on-line business from the Rev. Sherlock Holmes, D.D., and it is now called "The Sherlock Shop.Com at SherlockHolmes.Com". Sherlockians and societies who wish to sell material are invited to get in touch with Paul Crane at <new-item@sherlockholmes.com>. Their web-site URL is <<http://www.sherlockholmes.com>>. And they continue to offer a 10% discount on books if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt"); you enter the word in the "coupon" section.

204. Jun 02 #2: MEDICAL READERS' THEATER: A GUIDE AND SCRIPTS, edited by Todd L. Savitt (Iowa City: University of Iowa Press, 2002; 192 pp., $22.95), is an interesting anthology of dramatizations of short stories intended for use in educating health-care students who are encouraged to discuss the productions; one of the scripts is Gregory A. Watkins' adaptation of Conan Doyle's "The Doctors of Hoyland".
205. Which actor played a furious Sherlock Holmes? Basil Wrathbone. Credit to Emily Cox and Henry Rathvon, in their "Wrote Learning" crossword puzzle in the Boston Globe (May 26).

206. Herman Cohen died on June 2. He started his movie career before he was a teenager, as a gofer and then an usher at the Fox Theater in Detroit, and in Hollywood he became a producer and writer. He was assistant producer of "Bride of the Gorilla" (1951), and produced American International's earliest hits (including "I Was a Teenage Werewolf"), and he was the executive producer of John Neville's "A Study in Terror" (1965).
207. The new edition of John McAleer's REX STOUT: A MAJESTY'S LIFE (Rockville: James A. Rock & Co., 2002; 621 pp., $44.95 in cloth, $26.95 in paper) has been shipped to those who ordered before publication (Feb 02 #5); it's nice to have this excellent biography back in print, with a new introduction by the author, and an afterword by his son Andrew, and additional photographs. The publisher's address is 113 North Washington Street, Rockville, MD 20850 (800-411-2230) <<http://www.rockpublishing.com>>.
208. Also available from Rock is a paperback reprint of Maurice Leblanc's ARSENE LUPIN VERSUS HOLMLOCK SHEARS (271 pp., $16.95); first published in France in 1908 and in English in 1910, the book describes two encounters between the famous gentleman burglar and (as he was called in the original French) Herlock Sholmes. The text is a facsimile of the first English translation by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. And it's part of a series of "Yellowback Mysteries" that include Grant Allen's AN AFRICAN MILLIONAIRE: EPISODES IN THE LIFE OF THE ILLUSTRIOUS COLONEL CLAY and Arthur Morrison's THE DORRINGTON DEED BOX (also 2002 and $16.95 each).
209. Finally, there's his "Sense of Wonder Press" imprint that reprints material from the early days of science fiction and fantasy: FORREST J ACKERMANN & FRIENDS PLUS (2002, $14.95) is a collection that includes a description of his home (commissioned by Esquire but never published); the "Ackermansion" is a delight, packed with memorabilia such as the model pterodactyls that Willis H. O'Brien used in two of his more memorable films ("The Lost World" and "King Kong"). Forry was born in 1917, and he started collecting in Los Angeles in the long-ago days when movie studios just threw things away; his treasures include the bolts from the neck of Boris Karloff's Frankenstein's monster, and Bela Lugosi's "Dracula" ring.
210. Signe Hasso died on June 7. She was born in Sweden and began acting at the age of 12 at the Royal Dramatic Theatre; she made her film debut in 1933, and arrived in Hollywood in 1941. After starring in many films in the next decade, she returned to the stage on Broadway, and helped start a national repertory theater in Sweden. She also acted on television, and played Frau Reichenbach in the television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" in 1976.

211. Jun 02 #3: Fritz Sonnenschmidt, culinary dean at the Culinary Institute of America, has retired after 33 years at the CIA, where he provided great assistance to Al and Julie Rosenblatt in masterminding a series of grand gourmet Sherlockian meals. He was co-author with Julie of the delightful cookbook DINING WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES (1976), and received his Investiture ("Simpson's") in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982, the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1987, and The Queen Victoria Medal in 1991.
212. Reported: NAMES, TITLES, AND CHARACTERS BY LITERARY WRITERS--SHAKESPEARE, 19TH AND 20TH CENTURY AUTHORS, by Robert F. Fleissner (Lewiston: Edwin Mellen Press, 2001; 239 pp., $89.95); a collection of essays, including "The Onomastics of *Sherlock*", "Poe's C. Auguste Dupin and Sherlock Holmes's Initial", and "On the Pedigree of the *Holmes* Name: Apropos of the First English Detective Work". And his THE MASTER SLEUTH ON THE TRAIL OF EDWIN DROOD: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE JASPER SYNDROME: AN ANNOTATED PASTICHE, by Robert F. Fleissner (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2002; 238 pp., $31.99 in cloth, $21.99 in paper, $8.00 e-book); discounts are available at the publisher's web-site at <<http://www.xlibris.com>>.
213. "If a herd of buffaloes had passed along," said Sherlock Holmes (in "A Study in Scarlet"), "there could not be a greater mess." American readers of the tale tend to assume that the buffaloes were the kind that were hunted by Buffalo Bill, but those are mentioned in the same story, later on, and quite correctly, as "those great herds of bisons which graze upon the prairie land." In this instance Arthur Conan Doyle was a careful writer: the buffaloes alluded to earlier in the story surely were Cape buffalo; one of them is shown on a stamp issued in 2001 by South Africa.
214. The Occupants of the Empty House, clearing out the attic, offer their lapel pin, 25th-anniversary mug and book bag, and back issues of Beeman's Christmas Annual; copies of their sales-list are available from Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999) <srtin@hotmail.com>.
215. Charles Ede died on May 29. He founded the Folio Society in 1947, and produced handsome books at affordable prices for society members, who were also welcome to visit a clubroom in London to enjoy sandwiches and wine. He sold the business in 1971 to pursue his interested in antiquities, becoming a respected dealer in Roman and other material. The society published THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in 1958, with an introduction by Brian Marsh and illustrations by Paul Hogarth, and additional Sherlockian volumes under later owners.
216. The signed silhouettes of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his family offered at auction this month at Early American History Auctions (May 02 #5) brought $4,500 (plus 15% buyer's premium).
217. M. C. Black reports that plans are afoot to turn the now-disused Bow Street police station into a museum to be called "The Beat" (planning and listed building applications have been submitted to the Westminster City Council). There's a web-site at <<http://www.thebeat.org.uk>>. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson visited the Bow Street station (in "The Man with the Twisted Lip").
218. Jun 02 #4: The entry for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the new edition of the ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA (2002) is also new, revised by Philip K. Wilson (a Doylean and a medical historian). The electronically-enabled also can view the entry (and a new entry by Wilson on Sherlock Holmes that doesn't appear in the print edition) on-line at <<http://eb.com>>, if you're a subscriber or if you sign up for a free 72-hour trial subscription.
219. "The Case of the Whitechapel Vampire" (the fourth television film starring Matt Frewer and Kenneth Welsh) has been scheduled as a "movie of the week" on the Hallmark channel in October.
220. Gillette Castle reopened to the public on Memorial Day, and tickets for the tour of the castle sold out quickly. The Connecticut department of public works has spent $11.5 million restoring and renovating the castle, and it's well worth a visit if you're anywhere near Hadlyme. There's also an exhibit "Honoring William Gillette" at the East Haddam Historical Society Museum (though Oct. 13); one of the features is a continuous showing of "William Gillette: A Connecticut Yankee on the American Stage" (a 30-minute documentary produced by Peter Loffredo in 1986, with a long interview with Helen Hayes, and an impersonation of the actor by Garrett Walters. The museum's telephone number is 860-873-3944.
221. Reproductions of 19th-century railway station clocks include more than Paddington Station (Feb 02 #3); a clock for London Victoria Station (frequently mentioned in the Sherlock Holmes stories) is available (9" diameter $49.95; 15" diameter $74.95) from Alberene Royal Mail (9 Mill Alley, Box 902, Harrisville, NH 03450 (800-843-9078) <<http://www.alberene.com>>.
222. Carolyn and Joel Senter have a new sales-list of Sherlockiana that includes books, CDs, videos, artwork, and other collectibles. The Sherlockian Times is available on request from Classic Specialties (Box 16058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>.
223. Forecast from Forge for August: CASTLE ROUGE, by Carole Nelson Douglas, the next in her mystery series about Irene Adler ($25.95); Midnight Louie says it's the second part of a Jack the Ripper duology. And a paperback reprint of last year's CHAPEL NOIR ($6.99). And for December: ANOTHER SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA; a paperback reprint of IRENE'S LAST WALTZ.
224. Mystery-writer Peter Lovesey has long been interested in the Olympics. His article on "Conan Doyle and the Olympics" in the Journal of Olympic History (Dec. 2001) discusses both the famous photograph of the end of the marathon in 1908 that some have claimed shows Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

- helping Dorando Pietri at the finish line (Lovesey explains that the two men actually were Clerk of the Course Jack Andrew and Chief Medical Officer Michael Bulger), and Conan Doyle's later efforts to rally support for British participation in the Olympics.
225. The first issue of Nicholas Twit: The Schoolboy Sherlock Holmes (June 2002) has two stories by Cenarth Fox about a young fan who winds up solving mysteries, plus Sherlockian Snippets and word games. The magazine is Australian, and a quarterly with 24 pages; it costs AU$6.00 plus shipping, and you can order only through the publisher's web-site at <<http://www.twit.biz>>.
226. Jun 02 #5: "The Tale of the Giant Rat of Sumatra" was written, performed, and produced in Hollywood "that foggy September of '73" by The Firesign Theatre; it was issued as a phonograph record in 1974 (described as "a thrilling mis-adventure from 'The Cheque Book of Hemlock Stones'"), and Tim O'Connor has noted that it's now available as a CD (HWLGH1 0762) from Collectors' Choice Music (900 North Rohlwing Road, Itasca, IL 60143) (800-993-6344) <<http://collectorschoicemusic.com>> for $14.95.
227. Issue #49 of Sherlock offers its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise). Tony Earnshaw reports that the BBC has donated copies of otherwise-unavailable programs from Peter Cushing's 1968 television series ("A Study in Scarlet"/"The Sign of Four"/"The Boscombe Valley Mystery"/"The Blue Carbuncle") to the National Museum of Photography, Film & Television (Bradford, West Yorkshire, BD1 1NQ, England). Visitors are welcome to view the programs, and the archive holdings (now more than 700 titles) are listed at <<http://www.nmpft.org.uk/whatson/tvheaven.asp>> (the Cushing shows are not yet listed).
228. And Crime Scene 2002 ("Criminal Film and Fiction Exposed") will be held on July 11-14 at the National Film Theatre (Belvedere Road, South Bank, Waterloo, London SE1 8XT (020-7255-144) <<http://www.bfi.org.uk/crimescene>>; the schedule includes speeches by Gavin Collinson (on "Holmes and His Habit") and David Stuart Davies (on Holmes on radio), a performance by Roger Llewellyn in "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!", and presentation of the magazine's "Sherlock" awards for 2001 (the winners include Dr. Joseph Bell in "Murder Rooms" for best television detective, and Tony Earnshaw for his AN ACTOR AND A RARE ONE: PETER CUSHING AS SHERLOCK HOLMES).
229. Sherlock is a bimonthly, and subscriptions cost £23.70 (U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. It's also available from their American agent Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
230. Rebecca Bohner relays news from Laurie R. King, who plans to start writing the next Mary Russell book (which will take Russell and Holmes to India) in August, for publication in the spring of 2004. And she'll be participating in a discussion panel at Books by the Bay in San Francisco at noon on July 20. She'll also be at Bouchercon in Austin, Texas, on Oct. 17-20.
231. It's not quite breaking news, but it seems there's a Canonical reason not to swim in at least one of New York City's rivers. An "F.Y.I." item in the N.Y. Times (Aug. 1, 1999), spotted by Bud Livingston, responded to a query about a sighting of a group of large milky-white jellyfish in the East River, from a reader who wondered what salt-water organisms were doing in the East River. The response began, "The breast stroke, perhaps?" and went on to note that the East River actually isn't a river: it's a saltwater strait that connects Long Island Sound with New York Harbor. Dr. Dennis A. Thoney (a New York Aquarium marine biologist) explained that it's not uncommon for Aurelia aurita to float into the river in the summer, and that it's sting is not severe compared with that of the lion's mane, or Cyanea capillata, which also is found in East River waters, though in smaller numbers.

232. Jun 02 #6: This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will celebrate the centenary of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: the card will show Douglas E. West's watercolor of Holmes, Watson, and Lestrade lying in wait for the Hound. $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks payable to the Society, please, with orders sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 22 Homeheights, Clarence Parade, Southsea, Hants. PO5 3NN, England. Note: you can order now, but the cards will not be shipped until September.
233. Karen Murdock spotted THE DEVIL HIMSELF: VILLAINY IN DETECTIVE FICTION AND FILM, edited by Stacy Gillis and Philippa Gates (Westport: Greenwood Press, 2002; 232 pp., $64.95); the title of the book is taken from the Canon, and there are many references to Sherlock Holmes, as well as a chapter by Catherine Wynne on "Philanthropies and Villainies: The Conflict of the Imperial and Anti-Imperial in Conan Doyle".
234. English actor David Ian Davies has recorded "Silver Blaze" (unabridged) on a CD issued by One Voice Recordings, and he has done an excellent job with the story and with various voices. It's available for $12.00 (plus shipping) from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcomed. And the electronically-enabled can hear a six-minute sample of the reading at a web-site at <<http://www.storyteller.net/tellers/ddavies>>.
235. Patricia and Dick DiFalco make delightful teddy bears, including Sherlock Holmes (shown here) and Dr. Watson; they're cute and cuddly, and 17" high (seated), and they cost $95.00 each (plus $10.00 shipping per order). More information is available from the DiFalco Bear Company, Box 700192, Plymouth, MI 48170 <difalcobears@yahoo.com> (810-632-9631).
236. The blurb in the June issue of Inside Borders reports that "Artemis Fowl is a very unusual hero. He has the astuteness of Sherlock Holmes, the sang-froid of James Bond, and the attitude of Attila the Hun. And he's only 12 years old." The young-adult series, written by Eoin Colfer, is published by Hyperion; ARTEMIS FOWL is out in paperback ($6.99) and ARTEMIS FOWL: THE ARCTIC INCIDENT in hardcover ($16.95).
237. Tsukasa Kobayashi and Akane Higashiyama have completed their translation of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES into Japanese, for a hard-cover set published by Kawade-Shobou-Shinsha: A STUDY IN SCARLET appeared in 1997 and THE CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES this year. The set is a translation of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES, and this is the first time that all the stories have been translated into Japanese by the same Sherlockian translators (the total of their books written in or translated into Japanese is now 69). The set of nine volumes costs ¥31,600 (plus shipping), and the publisher's address is Sentagaya 2-32-2, Shibuya-ku, Tokyo 151-0051, Japan.

Jul 02 #1:

238. The Doyles were an interesting family. James and Catherine Tynan Doyle of Dublin had six children, one of them the artist John Doyle (the grandfather of Arthur Conan Doyle); another was a daughter, Anna Maria Doyle, who isn't mentioned in any of biographies of Sir Arthur. But his grand-aunt now has her own biography: 'IT COMMENCED WITH TWO...': THE STORY OF MARY ANN DOYLE, FIRST COMPANION OF CATHERINE MCAULEY, by Bonaventure Brennan (2001). Anna Maria was born in Dublin in 1801; she met Catherine McAuley in 1827, and they became nuns in 1831, Anna Maria taking the name Sister Mary Ann. She helped found the Sisters of Mercy, and served the poor in Ireland until her death in 1866. The biography, which includes information on the Doyle family, is now out-of-print, but may be reprinted (and likely will cost E30.00 postpaid); if you are interested in a copy of the second printing, write to Sister Bonaventure (2 St. Brigid's Court, Athboy, County Meath, Ireland).
239. Daniel S. Knight died on July 6. He was a lawyer and an ardent oenophile, and a loyal fan of both grand opera and Gilbert & Sullivan operettas, as well as a Sherlockian, and he presided over The Sons of the Copper Beeches of Philadelphia as their Headmastiff from 1995 to 2000.
240. Which actor played a ghostly Sherlock Holmes?

241. The Toronto Star (July 2) ran Peter Calamai's story about the new Canadian satellite SCISAT-1 that will be launched into orbit next January, carrying two instruments that will monitor chemical reactions in the atmosphere and monitor the Earth's ozone layer. The instruments are the Fourier Transform Spectrometer (FTS) and the Measurements of Aerosol Extinction in the Stratosphere and Troposphere Retrieved by Occultation (MAESTRO); he's given them the nicknames Sherlock Holmes and Watson, and notes that the nicknames have caught on with journalists, but not (yet) with the public.
242. Peter also noted that Cambridge professor Richard Chorley died on May 12. He was a noted physical geographer and geomorphologist, and his obituary in The Times (June 24) reported that after his retirement in 1995 he regaled colleagues with tales of his latest efforts to prove that Sherlock Holmes had been a member of Sidney Sussex College, of which Chorley had been Vice Master. "This improbable project once led him to send a house brick purporting to come from the College to a Holmes society in Japan."
243. Chorley's SHERLOCK HOLMES AT SIDNEY SUSSEX COLLEGE, 1871-1873: AN IMAGINATIVE RECONSTRUCTION is a carefully-researched, illustrated, and footnoted pastiche published in 1997; the 40-page pamphlet still is available (£5.41 postpaid to the U.K./£5.99 to the continent/£5.83 elsewhere) from the Sidney Sussex Society (attn: Wendy Hedley), Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge CB2 3HU, England (checks should be made payable to Sidney Sussex College, please), and credit-card orders are welcome by mail or at their web-site at <<http://www.sid.cam.ac.uk/alumni/merch/merch.html>>.
244. Gerald Champion died on July 9. He began his acting career in movies as an uncredited soldier in "The Drums" (1938) with Sabu and Raymond Massey, and had many more roles on screen and television, including Morse Hudson in the Granada version of "The Six Napoleons" in 1986.
245. Jul 02 #2: Garry James continues to report on Canonical weaponry in Guns & Ammo: his article on his test of the Webley Metropolitan Police Revolver (Aug. 2002) notes that some believe that Sherlock Holmes used one to dispatch both Tonga and the Hound of the Baskervilles. James was unable to hit a target at 25 yards, but did much better at the "more acceptable" range of seven yards.
246. They're not quite as Canonical, certainly, as the 221b Baker Street bricks that Abbey National made available as souvenirs in 1981, after they built their new headquarters in Baker Street, but bricks from Edgar Allan Poe's home are now available. According to an item in the June-July issue of The 3rd Degree (the newsletter of the Mystery Writers of America), 700 bricks were retrieved from the Poe House on West 3rd Street in Greenwich Village when New York University demolished the historic building, and they're now on sale through a partnership between the MWA and the Edgar Allan Poe Museum. $40.00 each, including shipping (checks should be payable to the Poe Foundation, please), from the Museum (attn: Steve Hicks), 1914-16 East Main Street, Richmond, VA 23223 (804-648-5523).
247. Which actor played a ghostly Sherlock Holmes? Basil Wraithbone. Credit to David Stuart Davies, who notes that Holmes often assisted Spectre Lestrade.
248. Don Werby ("Old Abrahams") died on June 15. Don and his wife Willy assembled the spectacular version of the sitting-room that delighted visitors to the S. Holmes, Esq. restaurant at the Grosvenor Towers and then on the top floor of the Holiday Inn at Union Square in San Francisco. Another version of their sitting-room can still be seen, at the Grosvenor Hotel near Disney World in Orlando. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1986.
249. Harry Houdini is honored by a new stamp issued by the U.S. Postal Service this month (one year after the 75th anniversary of his death in 1926); Houdini knew Conan Doyle, and argued with him about Spiritualism. Houdini wrote about Conan Doyle in A MAGICIAN AMONG THE SPIRITS (1924), and Conan Doyle's article on "The Riddle of Houdini" was published in The Strand Magazine in Aug. and Sept. 1927, and reprinted in THE EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN (1930).
250. CURIOUS INCIDENTS, edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec (Calgary: Mad for a Mystery, 2002; 96 pp., $8.00), offers six new pastiches (six Sherlockian and one Gillettean) and artwork by Philip Cornell. The publisher is at 3805 Marlborough Drive NE #D-308, Calgary, AB T2A 5M4, Canada; postpaid prices are $10.00 (U.S.), CA$17.00 (Canada), $12.00 (elsewhere); payment by check or money order, please.
251. "The Case of the Vanishing Author" (an entertaining 45-minute program written by Stephen Sheridan and broadcast by BBC Radio 4 on June 19) dealt with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Dorothy L. Sayers joining forces to investigate the mysterious disappearance of Agatha Christie in 1926. Derek Waring was Conan Doyle, and Roger Johnson notes that Waring also played Watson in 1988 and 1989 in "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (with Ron Moody as Holmes). Are there other actors who have played both Conan Doyle and Watson?

252. Jul 02 #3: The Sherlockian parody "The South Sea Soup Company" (1931) was the first published story written by Kenneth Millar (aka Ross Macdonald), and Bill Vande Water reports that it's reprinted in HARDBOILED MYSTERY WRITERS: RAYMOND CHANDLER, DASHIELL HAMMETT, ROSS MACDONALD: A LITERARY REFERENCE, edited by Matthew Bruccoli and Richard Layman (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2002; 324 pp., $22.00).
253. Neil Simon's delightful film "Murder by Death" (1976) is often seen on television (most recently on Turner Classic Movies cable on July 21), but it always seems to be the theatrical release rather than the slightly different version broadcast on television in 1979. That television version had a brief scene at the end with Keith McConnell as Sherlock Holmes and Richard Peel as Dr. Watson; does anyone have an off-the-air videocassette of the television version with the Holmes and Watson scene?
254. William A. S. Sarjeant died on July 8. He was a professor of geology at the University of Saskatchewan, and honored as a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada; a fantasy writer, using the pseudonym Antony Swithin for his series of novels about "The Perilous Quest of Lyonesse" (and he merged the two fields when he delivered a paper at a meeting of the Mythopoeic Society on "The Geology of Middle Earth"); an energetic book collector and a writer about detective fiction; and he was both a Sherlockian and a Doylean: Bill was co-author with Alan Bradley of the delightful spoof MS. HOLMES OF BAKER STREET: THE TRUTH ABOUT SHERLOCK HOLMES (1989), and with Dana M. Batory of fine scholarly articles on "Sussex *Iguanodon* Footprints and the Writing of *The Lost World*" (1989) and "'The Terror of Blue John Gap' - A Geological and Literary Study" (1994).
255. John Linnell and John Flansburgh of "They Might Be Giants" (the rock group that took its name from the 1971 George C. Scott film) were in Washington last month, performing songs from their new children's album "No!" (which has been #1 on the Billboard children's chart). The group has a web-site at <<http://www.tmbg.com>>.
256. Philip S. Hench (1896-1965) was a noted doctor (he won the Nobel Prize for medicine in 1950), an enthusiastic Sherlockian (he was for many years a member of The Norwegian Explorers, and led the society's campaign to place a plaque honoring Sherlock Holmes at the Reichenbach Falls), and an energetic book-collector (in 1978 his wife Mary donated his collection, including four copies of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, to the University of Minnesota). Last year Micronesia included his portrait in a sheetlet of stamps issued to honor the 100th anniversary of the Nobel Prize.
257. "Researchers have found the earliest surviving work of world famous author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," the BBC reported on July 7, "his signature carved into a school desk top." According to the BBC story (forwarded by Takeshi Shimizu), the desk is at Stonyhurst, in Lancashire, where Conan Doyle was a student from 1868 to 1875, and "was described in reports by his teachers as lazy and slovenly." M.C. Black notes that the desk was shown to The Northern Musgraves when they visited Stonyhurst in 2000. And John Baesch notes that Stonyhurst has a web-site at <<http://www.stonyhurst.ac.uk>>.

258. Jul 02 #4: Frederick C. Page ("The Arcadia Mixture") died on July 12. He was a corporate recruiter, and one of the founders of The Arcadia Mixture in Ann Arbor in 1976, serving as its Chief Tobacconist for many years; in 1979 Fred participated in the John Bennett Shaw workshop at Wayne State University in Detroit, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1990.
259. Randall Garrett's LORD DARCYS (1984) has been reprinted as a trade paperback (New York: Baen Books, 2002; 688 pp., $18.00); it's an omnibus edition with TOO MANY MAGICIANS, LORD DARCYS INVESTIGATES, and MURDER AND MAGIC. They're fine alternate-universe novels (magic works, and there's lots of detection needed) with many pleasant Sherlockian allusions in TOO MANY MAGICIANS.
260. "Monk" is a new one-hour television series, broadcast by USA cable, starring Tony Shalhoub as obsessive-compulsive detective Adrian Monk, who frequently is seen performing Sherlockian observation and deduction. In the two-hour premiere (first broadcast on July 12), his assistant Sharona Fleming (played by Bitty Schram) tells a police officer: "I love this part. He does this Zen Sherlock Holmes thing." And it's an interesting series, with plot and humor and good acting.
261. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has tributes to Frederick Dorr Steele (illustrated with original artwork owned by the collections), Jon Lellenberg's discussion of Jack Tracy's correspondence with Dame Jean Conan Doyle and others, and other reports from and about the collections. Copies are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
262. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has an interesting report on the first Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture, given by Isaac Gewirtz (curator of the Berg Collection at the New York Public Library), about the collection and its Sherlockian and Doylean holdings (and with photographs of two pages from "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), plus other news from the library; this is the first issue edited by Peter Wood, who has succeeded Chris Redmond on the editor's green settee. Copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwrig@sympatico.ca>.
263. "Sherlock Is Best Fictional Sleuth" was the headline on a Reuters report on July 17 on the results of a survey carried out by mail-order bookseller BCA <<http://booksdirect.co.uk>>. Sherlock Holmes won the votes of 27 percent of British readers; Hercule Poirot was second (16 percent) and Inspector Morse third (15 percent).
264. Stu Shiffman noted an allusion to Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle in S. M. Stirling's THE PESHAWAR LANCERS (New York: Roc/New American Library, 2002; 420 pp., $23.95); the allusion is minor, but the book is imaginative alternative history: a cluster of comets strikes the Earth in 1878, with a terrible effect on North America and western Europe, but the British Empire manages to shift its base to India, where the story is set in 2025. Stirling offers lots of derring-do, and a vivid picture of the British Raj.

265. Jul 02 #5: Christopher Roden reports that the Calabash Press has published new editions of David Stuart Davies' BENDING THE WILLOW: JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES (with a new afterword and additional photographs), and of THE BAKER STREET FILE: A GUIDE TO THE APPEARANCE AND HABITS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (the "background bible" used for the Granada series). And THE CHRONICLES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME 4, with four new pastiches by Denis O. Smith. Details are available from the publisher (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <<http://www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>>.
266. Sean Cunningham's comedy/musical "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret of Making Whoopee" will be produced during the New York International Fringe Festival with six performances (Aug. 18-25) at La Tea Theater (107 Suffolk Street); additional details are available from the Fringe box office (212-420-8877) (888-374-6436) <<http://www.fringenyc.org>>. "See the master detective try to get Jill the Ripper. Or any woman."
267. The new "fall preview" catalog from Signals Video (Box 64428, St. Paul, MN 55164 (800-530-2225 <<http://signalsvideo.com>>) has two pages of Sherlockian videocassettes, paperweights, teapots, and clocks.
268. The Algonquin Hotel has a new owner. Olympus Real Estate of Dallas and the Camberley Hotel Co. of Atlanta, who bought the hotel in 1997, have sold it to Miller Global Properties, which has selected Destination Hotels & Properties to manage the Algonquin; the hotel will celebrate its 100th anniversary in November. The new owners plan to begin work soon on enhancements to guest rooms, installation of high-speed Internet access in all of the guest and meeting rooms, and other renovations intended to meet demands of business travelers.
269. Maurice Denham died on June 24. He began his start as a professional actor in 1934 with the Hull Repertory Company, and went on to a long career as a distinguished character actor on stage, screen, radio and television. He was awarded the OBE in 1992; he played Josiah Amberley in "The Retired Colourman" (with Douglas Wilmer) for the BBC in 1965, and the Rev. Merridew in "The Last Vampyre" (with Jeremy Brett) for Granada in 1993.
270. It has been six years since The Bull Terrier Club of Boston University had an excursion to a polo match, and Scott Monty is planning another one, to Newport, R.I., on Sept. 14, for a tailgate party and a chance to watch USA vs. England. You can contact Scott at 1836 Columbia Road, South Boston, MA 02127 (617-464-4153) <wsmonty@att.net>. Polo is mentioned in the Canon, of course, and Scott reports that the full tournament schedule and directions are available at a web-site at <<http://www.newportinternationalpolo.com>>.
271. Anglofile reports that "Case of Evil" will debut on USA cable on Oct. 25. The film stars James D'Arcy (Sherlock Holmes), Roger Morlidge (Dr. Watson), Richard E. Grant (Mycroft), and Vincent D'Onofrio (Moriarty); Holmes is a young "super-smart, sexy society star with a growing reputation among the young women of London," and the story "has Moriarty trying to corner the opium market with his powerful new drug, heroin." Anglofile is a monthly newsletter offering detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($15.00 a year). And there's a web-site for the film at <http://www.castelfilm.ro/portfolio/case\_of\_evil\_gallery.asp>.

272. Jul 02 #6: "In touching upon . . . Sherlock Holmes, he said that detective stories are rather primitive as a literary production, but make a good setting for the dramatic." From a story in the [Northampton] Daily Gazette (Oct. 31, 1894) about Arthur Conan Doyle's lecture in Northampton, Mass., the previous evening (kindly forwarded by John Lockwood).
273. The celebration of the centenary of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES continues (since the book was published in 1902), and some excellent scholarship has been published in Britain. The 2001 issue of The Musgrave Papers offers 88 pages of essays by authors from both sides of the Atlantic (including the late Prudence Moran Swift); £7.50 or $12.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Northern Musgraves, please) from Paul M. Chapman (Alderley, Chapel Street, Easingwold, North Yorkshire YO16 3AF, England).
274. And Richard Lancelyn Green has an excellent two-part article in the winter 2001 and summer 2002 issues of the Sherlock Holmes Journal on how the story was written and published; he has discovered where and when Conan Doyle was when he wrote and did his research, and offers a great deal of new information. SHJ subscription costs vary depending on where you are and on whether you're adult or junior; details are available from Bob Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU England <shs1221b@aol.com>, and the society has a web-site at <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.org>>.

275. Leo McKern died on July 23. His acting career began on stage in Australia in 1944, and he moved to England in 1946, acting with the Royal Vic and the Shakespeare Memorial Theater. His first film was "Murder in the Cathedral" (1952), and is best-known today as the star of "Rumpole of the Bailey" on television; he also played a bravura Moriarty in the film "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
276. The comic-book mini-series RUSE continues; #9 appeared this month ($2.95) with Simon Archard and Emma Bishop investigating a new mystery (the series has excellent not-quite-Sherlockian atmosphere and artwork. Also issued in July: RUSE: ENTER THE DETECTIVE, a trade paperback ($15.95) reprinting issues #1-6. And Comic Shop News has reported that there will be more issues of THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN, which begins a second mini-series in August; a trade paperback is due in September with the six issues in the first mini-series.
277. Bill Barton notes that Sherlock Holmes continues to appear in role-playing games: GURPS STEAM-TECH, edited by William Stoddard, is a supplement for Steve Jackson Games' Generic Universal Role-Playing System (GURPS); it's a book that describes both historical gadgets of the Victorian era and those existing only in Victorian scientific romances (including H. G. Wells and the modern Victorian science-fiction genre known as "steampunk"), and there are descriptions and illustrations of the "Holmes I Detection Automaton" (a Sherlockian steam-age robot) and the "Mycroft IV Police Engine" (a S'ianthemed Babbage Difference Engine). It retails for $22.95 in stores (less in some on-line retail sites) and it's available directly from Steve Jackson Games (Box 18597, Austin, TX 78760) <<http://www.sjgames.com>>.
278. Aug 02 #1: THREE PORGES PARODIES AND A PASTICHE (New York: Magico Magazine, 1988; 54 pp., $25.00) is the only collection of the Sherlockian writings of the prolific writer and journalist Arthur Porges, whose "Stately Homes" parodies were launched in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Feb. 1957); the book also has a pastiche on "The Aluminium Crutch" (published for the first time), a letter from Fred Dannay (editor of EQMM), a Porges article about Arthur Conan Doyle, and an interesting introduction by Michael H. Kean. Porges is a fine writer, and the book still is available from the publisher (Box 156, New York, NY 10002) for $27.00 postpaid.
279. Ron Walotsky died on July 29. He was a science-fiction artist who work was used on hundreds of book covers, including Anne Rice's QUEEN OF THE DAMNED and Steven King's CARRIE, and he illustrated Sterling Lanier's "A Father's Tale" (a giant rat of Sumatra pastiche) in the July 1974 issue of The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction.
280. Leonard Nimoy's I AM SPOCK (New York: Hyperion, 1995; 342 pp., $24.95) is the sequel to his I AM NOT SPOCK (1975); there's much about "Star Trek" and his other work, and a mention that Nicholas Meyer (director of "Star Trek: The Wrath of Khan") was a Sherlock Holmes buff as well as an opera lover: one day, preparing to go directly from the studio to see a performance of "Carmen", Meyer was dressed in his evening attire "as Holmes himself, complete with stalking hat and Inverness cape!"
281. The third season of "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" is in re-runs on Warner Brothers channels, and the first two seasons can be seen weekday mornings on TNT cable. And Jennifer O'Dell, who plays untamed jungle-girl Veronica on the series, is Playboy's "Babe of the Month" (on p. 22) in the September issue.
282. Barbara and Christopher Roden have a new Calabash Press catalog (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <<http://www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>>. It is their seventh catalog, with new and older Sherlockian and Doylean titles as well as some special discount offers. And they've written to members of The Arthur Conan Doyle Society that one more issue of ACD will be published ink-on-paper; thereafter the society and its journal will become web-based at <<http://www.ash-tree.bc.ca/acdsoc.html>>.
283. The summer rare-book list from Priscilla Juvelis (1166 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138) <www.juvelisbooks.com> offers some fine examples of contemporary book arts, including a copy of the first American book edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET, rebound by Donald Glaister in spectacular (and appropriately decorated multi-colored morocco ($12,000).
284. "Beyond Oscar Wilde: Portraits of Late-Victorian Writers and Artists from the Mark Samuels Lasner Collection" is the title of an exhibition that will open at the University Gallery at the University of Delaware Sept. 5. The exhibition will include a previously unknown caricature of Wilde drawn by Max Beerbohm, and portraits and self-portraits of their contemporaries (but not Arthur Conan Doyle). The exhibition runs through Nov. 10, and the University is in Newark, Del. (302-831-8242) <<http://www.museums.udel.edu>>.

285. Aug 02 #2: Dinosaurs are quite popular with philatelists who have topical collections, and Liberia frequently issues such stamps, such as the 2001 miniature sheet and souvenir sheet (noted by Phillip Bergem) that celebrated Arthur Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD:
286. Aug 02 #3: It's likely that most readers have seen advertisements and reviews for the new movie "Tadpole" (starring Sigourney Weaver, John Ritter, and Bebe Neuwirth). But did you wonder whether it was Sherlockian? Possibly that it might have something to do with Percy Phelps? Bud Livingston made the connection (of course it appears from the reviews that only the title has any Canonical significance).
287. Christie's will offer the second part of Richard M. Lackritz's collection of detective fiction (material from 1920 to 1945) on Sept. 24, at 20 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020 (212-636-2010) <<http://www.christies.com>>.
288. Gideon Hill (Headmastiff of The Sons of the Copper Beeches of Philadelphia) reports that Abington Township has just completed construction of its new Copper Beech Elementary School (at 825 North Easton Road in Glenside); the grounds are landscaped with the namesake trees. Gideon also notes that one of the buildings that were demolished to make way for the new school housed the office of a private investigator who had a window sign showing a magnifying glass and a deerstalker.
289. Russ Mann notes that the Walt Disney animation "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986) has been issued on DVD (with a list price $29.99, but it's available for less at discount sites and stores).
290. Cameron & Smith (Box 637, Vero Beach, FL 32961) (800-472-9862) <<http://www.cameronsmith.com>> offer a "Sherlock Holmes" in the Halcyon Days scarecrow series of bonbonniere; it's hand-painted porcelain on an enamel base, 3.75" high, and the bottom of the figure reads "Scarecrows take many forms this one is based on the famous English fictional detective Sherlock Holmes." It's in a lined presentation case, and costs $225.00 plus shipping.
291. The excellent "Nero Wolfe" series continues to air on A&E cable, but this will be the last season of original programs: Allen Sabinson (A&E's senior vice president of programming) has been fired, and the series has been cancelled (because, according to a report, A&E has decided it can't afford to do original series. The Jack Myers Report, at <<http://jackmyers.com>>, noted on Aug. 11 that A&E prime-time year-to-date ratings declined 15% in households and 13% in adults 25-54.
292. And the furnishings of the set have been dispersed: the Nero Wolfe Set Department sold many of the props on-line this month, and the material that did not sell on-line to fans was to be sold to other set firms. Three of the items were Sherlockian, two of them paintings from Wolfe's office: the portrait of Sherlock Holmes seen on the wall above Archie Goodwin's desk in the series pilot "The Golden Spiders" but not in other programs (offered for $995.00), and the painting of the waterfall that did not look as much like the Reichenbach as it might have (sold for $550.00). The third item was

Nero Wolfe's "brown and grey plaid country coat with cape and matching hat" (actually an Inverness and deerstalker) seen in the opening to "Immune to Murder" on A&E this month (offered for $500.00).

293. Aug 02 #4: Derham Groves continues to produce imaginative and attractive booklets from his Black Jack Press (which is in Victoria rather than Ballarat); the most recent is THE REBUSES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Australian artist Vane Lindesay. The 46-page booklet is described (and quite accurately) by Derham as "a surrealist-style picture-puzzle book", and he has a few copies available for US $5.00 postpaid (in currency, please); his address is 485 Albert Street, Brunswick West, Vic. 3055, Australia.
294. The comic-book mini-series RUSE continues; #10 appeared this month ($2.95) with Simon Archard and Emma Bishop and excellent-but-not-quite-Sherlockian artwork. Also in the shops is #1 in the second volume of THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN ($3.50); it's set on Mars, with most of the dialogue is in Martian, but it's only leading up to future events on Earth, where we may again encounter one or more characters from the Canon.
295. Collectors will recall the catalogs of Sherlockiana issued by Sylvian Hamilton in the 1980s and early 1990s, first from England and then from Scotland, where she retired from the book business; she's now an author, with a series about Sir Richard Straccan, a former Crusader who does his detecting in the Middle Ages. The first book in the series was THE BONE-PEDLAR (London: Orion Books, 2000; 264 pp., £12.99), and its opening sentence does get one's attention: "In the crypt of the abbey church at Hallowdene, the monks were boiling their bishop." The next book in the series was THE PENDRAGON BANNER, followed by THE GLEEMAIKEN, and Sylvian is getting ready to start work on a fourth book. For those who may be wondering why the bishop was being boiled, "Over the bishop's deathbed, the calculating eyes of the sacristan and the almoner had accurately weighed up the advantages of a splendidly profitable set of skeletal relics, and Bishop Alain was barely cold before he was eviscerated, dismembered, and simmering in the largest pot the monastery kitchen could furnish."
296. Trevor Raymond reports from Canada that the Sherlock Holmes Pub in Guelph has closed. The new establishment, in the same premises (which will be redecorated) is to be a Frugal Macdougall's.
297. "So every summer I truly intend/My intellectual sloth to end,/And every summer for years and years/I've read Sherlock Holmes and The Three Musketeers" (from Ogden Nash's poem "Each June I Make a Promise Sober"). The U.S. Postal Service honored Nash this year, celebrating the 100th anniversary of his birth.
298. Hichimes Lagg notes in a letter in the July-August issue of The Petrel Flyer (published by The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia) an interesting obituary published in the Economist (May 18, 2002), reporting the death, on May 11, of Joseph Bonanno, the well-known (at least in some circles) American mafioso who many believe may have inspired Mario Puzo's novel THE GODFATHER. According to the obituary, Bonanno "was said to have invented the double coffin, in which the body of someone who had died naturally would conceal a murdered corpse." Lagg also notes that Bonanno was born in 1906, while Baring-Gould dates the disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax in 1902, and the story was published in 1911. One wonders, of course, whether he might have been inspired by the Sherlock Holmes story.
299. Aug 02 #5: Often the simplest Sherlockian questions can be the most interesting. Such as, "What were Sherlock Holmes' first words to Watson?" Or, "What are the titles of the sixty Sherlock Holmes stories?" Well, try answering that question, without help from a table of contents or a list of abbreviations of the titles: just write them down, from memory, on a piece of paper. And keep track of how long it takes to get to fifty, and to fifty five, and to sixty (if you do get to sixty). The late Wayne Swift did it handily: he happily recited them from memory. If you can't do it handily, it's interesting to consider which were the last stories to be added to your list, and why it was more difficult for you to remember them.
300. And how did you do with the first of the two questions? Sherlock Holmes' first words to Watson? If your answer was, "You have been in Afghanistan, I perceive," you're wrong. Most people are. You can look it up. Sherlock Holmes' first words to Watson were, "How are you?"
301. Forecast for October: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, with a new introduction by Laurie R. King; a Modern Library/Random House paperback ($7.95). MURDER IN BAKER STREET: NEW TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower; a paperback reprint from Carroll & Graf ($14.00). SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SECRET ALLIANCE, by Larry Millett; a paperback reprint of his fourth pastiche set in Minnesota, from Penguin Putnam ($6.99).
302. "The Many Cases of Sherlock Holmes" is the theme of Bill Dorn's Sherlock Holmes Calendar for 2003; it has monthly artwork by Nancy Beiman, dates for Canonical cases, founding dates for Sherlockian societies, and other dates of significance in the Sherlockian world. It costs $16.15 postpaid (or CA$29.39 to Canada or $20.75 elsewhere), and you can send your checks to William S. Dorn at 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210; there's a web-site at <<http://www.thesherlockstore.com>>.
303. It isn't too late to consider joining The Bull Terrier Club for their excursion to a polo match (USA vs. England) at Newport, R.I., on Sept. 14. And if you need an incentive, there's an entertaining cover story on "The Boys of Polo" in the Aug. 19 issue of New York magazine; "They've Got Game," is the title of the story, which notes that "With its alluring combination of beautiful horses, bruising competition, Latin charm, and A-list celebrities, polo has become the NASCAR of the Moët & Chandon set." Polo also is mentioned in the Canon, of course, and more information about the Newport event is available from Scott Monty, 1386 Columbia Road #2, Boston, MA 02127 (617-484-4153) <wsmonty@att.net>
304. Audio Book Contractors (Box 40115, Washington, DC 20016) continues to offer readings of a long list of authors, including Arthur Conan Doyle and Christopher Morley, on cassettes for rental or purchase (and after 18 years they are approaching their 1,000th recording). THE SIGN OF FOUR (with Flo Gibson as reader) is the latest addition to their Conan Doyle titles.
305. Aug 02 #6: Bert Coules reported to the Arthur Conan Doyle electronic mailing list on his recent visit to the National Portrait Gallery in London. Walking by the enquiry desk, it occurred to him to ask a question. "Excuse me." "Yes, sir?" "I was wondering if there's a portrait of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the collection." "I'm sorry, who?" "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." "That's what I thought you said. Well, no, there isn't." "Really?" "Well, there wouldn't be, would there? I mean, he wasn't a real person." She was quite convinced of this, but couldn't offer any reason for her certainty. It was just "something that everyone knows". It took quite some persuasion on my part to get her to look up poor ACD in the catalog. The Gallery has two portraits of Conan Doyle, both of them in storage, Bert notes, adding, "That's what you get for not being real."
306. British actor Roger Llewellyn continues to tour in David Stuart Davies' one-man play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!" (which was seen by many Sherlockians during the birthday festivities in New York in 2000); he'll perform the play at the Kavinoky Theatre in Buffalo, N.Y., from Jan. 9 to Feb. 9, 2003; 320 Porter Avenue, Buffalo, NY 14201, and their web-site is at <<http://www.kavinokytheatre.com>>.
307. Richard Levinson and William Link have Sherlockian credentials (as creators of the television series "Murder, She Wrote" with its pilot story "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes"), and so does Alfred Hitchcock. And William Link, current president of the Mystery Writers of America, had a delightful story to tell in the MYSTERY WRITERS ANNUAL (distributed at the MWA annual dinner in New York in May), about their three-hour luncheon conversation with him in the mid-1960s. They talked about many things, including credibility in films, and they noted his famous scene with Cary Grant

- being strafed by the crop-duster plane in "North by Northwest". Why would the heavies rent a plane, equip it with a machine gun and a pilot who could operate it when all they had to do was drive up in an anonymous car and dispense Cary with a gunshot? "That was one of my refrigerator sequences," Hitchcock replied, explaining that the night after seeing the film, the movie-goer feels like a midnight snack. So he goes to the refrigerator and builds a delectable high-rise sandwich: ham, cheese, turkey, mayo--all lovingly described by a lip-smacking Hitchcock. While devouring the sandwich it hits him that the crop-dusting scene is utterly preposterous. "But by then," Hitch said with a sly wink, "I have his money."
308. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner, in honor of the world's first forensic geologist, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America in Denver, on Wednesday, October 30, at 7:00 pm, at Dixon's Downtown Grill, at 1610 16th Street. Our tradition is to have neither scholarly papers, slide shows, nor quizzes; our agenda consists entirely of toasts (some scholarly, but many not). If you would like to join us for the festivities, please let me know.

309. Sep 02 #1: It was very nice to be able to see "The Adventures of Gerard" (1970) at the Library of Congress this month, and not just for the chance to see the film screened in a theater: I learned from a member of the audience that another Brigadier Gerard film is available on videocassette. "The Fighting Eagle" (1927) starred Rod La Rocque as Gerard, and Sally Rand in a supporting role (before her fan-dancing days), and it was directed by Donald Crisp (who was Col. Sebastian Moran in the 1929 film "The Return of Sherlock Holmes"); it is available from Grapevine Video on videocassette (NTSC format only) for $16.96 and on DVD for $19.95 (plus shipping); Box 46161, Phoenix, AZ 85063 <<http://grapevinevideo.com>>.
310. Grapevine also offers "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" on videocassette ($19.95) and DVD ($19.95) with shipping extra; it's a compilation of four silent films: "The Copper Beeches" (1912), "The Dying Detective" (1921), "The Devil's Foot" (1921), and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (1921).
311. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, EPISODE 5, read by Edward Hardwicke, is the latest audiocassette set available from CSA Telltapes; as always, Hardwicke is an excellent Watson, and the stories on the two cassettes are "A Scandal in Bohemia", "Silver Blaze", and "The Copper Beeches" (which were earlier available from Tangled Web Audio as SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF BETRAYAL). CSA Telltapes's address is: 6a Archway Mews, 241a Putney Bridge Road, London SW15 2PE, England <www.csatelltapes.demon.co.uk>; the new set costs £9.95 postpaid (discounted to £7.95 at the web-site), and CSA offers other sets of the Sherlock Holmes stories.
312. Mark Alberstat's 2003 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
313. Les Klinger, general editor of the Baker Street Irregulars' Manuscript Series, reports that the third volume, edited by Steven Doyle and planned for Jan. 2003, will feature Sherlockian artwork drawn by G. K. Chesterton for a never-published edition of the Sherlock Holmes stories, with new critical essays on Chesterton and the Canon, and reprints of several of Chesterton's essays on detective fiction. And the fourth volume, edited by William Hyder and planned for Jan. 2004, will present a facsimile of "The Six Napoleons", with a transcript and new critical essays about the story.
314. Les also reports that the fifth volume in his SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY will be THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with an introduction by David Stuart Davies, and it will be available for purchase in New York during the birthday festivities in January.
315. The first two volumes in the series, ANGELS OF DARKNESS: A DRAMA IN THREE ACTS and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (CHAPTER XI) debuted last January (Feb 02 #1), and they're still available; $35.00 each, plus shipping ($8.00 each or $9.50 for both, or $9.50 each or $12.00 for both outside North America), from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>.

316. Sep 02 #2: The film "Shadow of a Doubt" (1943), directed by Alfred Hitchcock, is included in the National Film Registry (selections are based on the films' "historic, cultural, or aesthetic importance"), and the Library of Congress recently restored the film from archival nitrate-stock sources; the new print was screened at the National Gallery of Art on Sept. 8. The film has been described as "Hitchcock's paragon of family suspense and small-town sociology: Joseph Cotton takes refuge with his sister's family while his adoring niece (Teresa Wright) assembles the puzzle of his infamous part as a 'merry widow' murderer." Hume Cronyn plays a neighbor who is devoted mystery-magazine reader, and at one point he says, "That little Frenchman beats them all. You can talk all you like about Sherlock Holmes. That little Frenchman beats them all."
317. Jeanne Jewell died on Sept. 30. She was a Sherlockian, as well as a wife, mother, and mother-in-law of Sherlockians, and one of the founders of The Bitches of the Copper Beeches of Philadelphia in the 1980s, for spouses who enjoyed convivial dining twice a year while The Sons of The Copper Beeches dined at the Orpheus Club.
318. The latest issue of Scarlet Street (#45) focuses on the "Nero Wolfe" television series (recently cancelled by A&E but continuing in repeats), with interesting interviews with the actors, and stories about how the production of the series. And there's more, about Harry Alan Towers and Christopher Lee, and the first season of the radio series "The Adventures of Ellery Queen". $42.00 a year (for six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>.
319. The new issue of Prescott's Press (published by The Three Garridebs) is a tribute to Bob Thomalen's eighteen Autumns in Baker Street, with 58 pages of photographs and reminiscences by almost 40 participants. Subscriptions cost $12.00 ($14.00 outside the U.S.) for four issues, from Warren Randall, 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
320. Peter Ashman has reported that Doyle E. Holmes, a candidate in the primary race for state representative in Alaska this year, used a Sherlockian silhouette on bumper stickers and other campaign materials; he lost to the incumbent, Bev Masek, who now will seek her fifth term in office in the general election in November. Holmes, who now has lost to Masek three times, told the Anchorage Daily News that his defeat was due to support Masek got from political groups such as the Alaska Outdoor Council and the National Rifle Association. "I think that it's just power politics," he said.

321. Sep 02 #3: Thanks to Brian Taves for the latest news on the mini-series of "The Lost World" (starring Bob Hoskins as Challenger) that was broadcast in Britain last December: Arts & Entertainment cable will air the program in two parts on Oct. 6 and 7. There's all sort of material available at A&E's web-site <<http://www.aande.com>>, including an opportunity to order the show on VHS cassettes or DVDs (if you order now, there's a $5.00 discount, and they'll ship orders on Oct. 8); cassettes cost $24.95/$19.95, and DVDs (with two hours of bonus programming) cost $39.95/$34.95).
322. The comic-book mini-series RUSE continues; #11 appeared this month ($2.95) with Simon Archard and Emma Bishop and excellent-but-not-quite-Sherlockian artwork. Also in the shops is #2 in the second volume of THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN ($3.50); members of the League are investigating the mysterious Martian cylinder that has fallen to Earth in England.
323. Bill Griffith's "Zippy the Pinhead" is a long-running comic strip which has fervent admirers among the readers of the Washington Post (and other newspapers); Mary Ellen Rich reports that Bill Griffith lives in Hadlyme, Connecticut, and often uses people and places he likes in his work. This strip (which ran on July 31) shows Gillette Castle:
324. It was in "The Norwood Builder" that Watson wrote that "I find, on looking over my notes, that this period includes the case of the papers of ex-President Murillo, and also the shocking affair of the Dutch steamship Friesland, which so nearly cost us both our lives." And Peter H. Wood noted a BBC news report (Sept. 3) that a team of English divers, attempting to salvage a cargo of tin ingots from the wreck of the Dutch ship Friesland off the coast of Galicia, had been arrested by the Spanish police. Peter Devlin, managing director of Force 9 Salvage, said that the Spanish government had awarded his company a licence to dive at the wreck, but the police had accused them of trying to steal gold and diamonds from a wreck, and of damaging Spain's heritage. The Friesland, which sank in 1877, was carrying a cargo with a current commercial value of £650,000. There were, of course, other ships with the same name (including the one that's mentioned in "The Lost World"), and "The Norwood Builder" is dated after Holmes returned from his Great Hiatus, so if Holmes and Watson were involved with the Friesland that sank in 1877, it might have had something to do with salvage.

325. Sep 02 #4: Further to the report on the postage stamp honoring Ogden Nash (Aug 02 #4), his Sherlockian connections are more than poetic. Jon L. Lellenberg, in his IRREGULAR MEMORIES OF THE 'THIRTIES, reprinted (from the July 1946 issue of The Baker Street Journal) Christopher Morley's remembrance of a fateful gathering during the summer of 1930 at a "basement speakeasy, then momentarily esteemed by the Grub Street Runners of Messrs. Doubleday Doran and Co." That was when Frank Henry, "accompanied and reinforced by his faithful assembly men" (among them Ogden Nash) suggested that Morley write a preface for THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES. And, responding to a query from Bill Rabe, Nash later wrote that he had met Holmes in THE SIGN OF FOUR at the age of eleven "and never looked back."
326. Joan Littlewood died on Sept. 20. She was an important producer, director, and author who presided over the Theater Workshop in East London, launching plays such as "Oh What a Lovely War", Shelagh Delaney's "A Taste of Honey", and Brendan Behan's "The Quare Fellow" and "The Hosteness". "Theater should be grand, vulgar, simple, pathetic," she once said, "not genteel, not poetical." In 1961 she directed a Theatre Royal production of James Goldman's play "They Might Be Giants" (with Harry H. Corbett as Justin Playfair, and Avis Bunnage as Dr. Mildred Watson).
327. William S. Dorn has edited A DAY-BY-DAY CHRONOLOGY OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES: ACCORDING TO ZEISLER AND CHRIST (Denver: Pencil Productions, 2002; 57 pp., $9.95); the dates run from the death of Lucy Ferrier's mother (May 1, 1847) to the capture of Von Bork (Aug. 2, 1914), and Bill relies on dating by Ernest B. Zeisler and Jay Finley Christ rather than William S. Baring-Gould. It's available at his web-site <<http://www.thesherlockstore.com>> or by mail (shipping is extra: $1.60 to the U.S., $2.60 to Canada, $4.60 elsewhere), and his address is 2450 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210.
328. Walter R. Brooks' delightful books about "Freddy the Pig" have amused children for more than 65 years, and they're still in print, including FREDDY THE DETECTIVE (1997), with the original Sherlockian illustrations by Kurt Wiese (New York: Overlook Press, 1997; 256 pp., $23.95). Michael Cart, in an article in Booklist (May 1), kindly forwarded by Kevin Parker, reports that Brooks, when he was reviewing books for the Outlook and Independent in the 1920s, was one of the first important observers to discover the work of Dashiell Hammett, recommending RED HARVEST "without reservation. We gave it an A plus before we'd finished the first chapter." And Alfred A. Knopf, contracted with Hammett to write an introduction to FREDDY THE DETECTIVE in 1932. But Hammett failed to deliver the introduction, despite frantic appeals from the publisher, and Freddy's fans thus lost a chance to read what Hammett might have written. The Friends of Freddy, founded in 1984, have a web-site <<http://www.freddythepig.org>>, nearly 500 members, and an irregular quarterly; $15.00 a year for membership (Box 912, Greenbelt, MD 20768).
329. Kevin also notes that FREDDY'S COUSIN WEEDLY (1940) will be reprinted soon (New York: Overlook Press, 2002; 220 pp., $23.95); the book includes a play in which all of the animals appear as their favorite characters, solving a mystery in the court of Queen Elizabeth. The story may have provided the only opportunity for Freddy to appear on stage in Sherlockian costume, in a puppet show performed in 2000 during the biennial Friends of Freddy convention (Michael Cart provided the puppetry for Freddy/Sherlock Holmes).
330. Sep 02 #5: The Holmes & Watson Report continues to offer interesting discoveries, including Stu Shiffman's mention of the Sherlockian inspiration for a Grateful Dead song: "Dire Wolf" (music by Jerry Garcia, and words by Robert Hunter). David Dodd's web-site "The Annotated Grateful Dead Lyrics" notes that the song was first performed in 1969 (and recorded in 1970 on the album "Workingman's Dead"), and he quotes from the journal of Hunter: "The song 'Dire Wolf' was inspired, at least in name, by watching the Hound of the Baskervilles on TV with Garcia. We were speculating on what the ghostly hound might turn out to be, and somehow the idea that maybe it was a Dire Wolf came up." The Holmes & Watson Report costs $16.00 a year (for six issues) or $22.00 outside North America, or $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614). And Dodd's web-site is at <<http://arts.ucsc.edu/GDead/AGDL/direwolf.html>>.
331. State lotteries continue to use Sherlockian artwork, Connecticut the most recent example, in August; thanks to Ev Herzog, who (alas) didn't win with this ticket.
332. Scott Monty has reported that The Baker Street Journal's traditional binders are again available: navy-blue vinyl with the BSI logo on the cover and spine, and with a label holder on the spine, and with a saddle mechanism using rods to hold issues in place. They're suitable for both the old and the new series, and each binder holds eight issues of the new series; they cost $10.00 each, plus $5.00 shipping for one to four binders, and $2.50 shipping for each additional one to four binders. The BSI's web-site at <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>> has an order form, or you can send checks (payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) to W. Scott Monty (1836 Columbia Road, South Boston, MA 02127).
333. Marian J. A. Jackson's series of pastiches about Abigail Patience Danforth (who happily ignores a warning from Arthur Conan Doyle that amateur detecting is no career for a young lady) has five titles: THE PUNJAT'S RUBY and THE ARABIAN PEARL (Sep 90 #5), THE CAT'S EYE (Oct 91 #3), DIAMOND HEAD (Nov 92 #6), and SUNKEN TREASURE (Jul 95 #2). And they're still in print, from iUniverse, one of the computerized companies that provide authors who can supply electronic text a way to have books published and sold through bookstores and via the World Wide Web. Jackson's books (originally published by Pinnacle and Walker), were reissued by iUniverse in 2001, and they cost $15.95 or $17.95 as trade paperbacks. The URL for iUniverse's web-site is <<http://www.iuniverse.com>>. And Jackson has her own web-site (as do many authors now) at <<http://www.marianjackson.net>>.
334. Further to the report (Apr 02 #7) on the BBC Worldwide release of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (with Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock) on cassette and DVD, the 1959 film (with Peter Cushing and Andre Morell) also is available on DVD from MGM Home Entertainment ($14.95) with additional material: a theatrical trailer (in black-and-white), a featurette with Christopher Lee (who played Sir Henry Baskerville) reminiscing about the film, and a reading by Lee of excerpts from the novel.
335. Sep 02 #6: Herbert Epstein died on Sept. 21. He bought Edgar W. Smith's home in Morristown, N.J., Dave Galerstein has reported, and retained the address 221B Baker Street for the cottage in which Edgar carried out and carried on his work for The Baker Street Irregulars. Epstein donated to the BSI a switch plate with a Sherlockian profile, and a plaque that Edgar P. Smith had installed noting that his father's cottage had been the headquarters of the BSI. "When I bought the property," Epstein once said, "I didn't know I was buying a shrine."
336. Phil Attwell reports that the watercolor of "The Great Falls of the Reichenbach" (1804) painted by Joseph Mallord William Turner (1775-1851) will be on exhibit at Agnew's Gallery in Old Bond Street in London from Oct. 8 to Nov. 1 (with five other Turners).

337. The September booklist from Peter L. Stern & Co. (55 Temple Place, Boston, MA 02111) <psbook@aol.com> has two interesting items: "Conan Doyle Speaking" (the 1930 Gramophone Co. recording) with his comments on both Sherlock Holmes and Spiritualism ($850), and Conan Doyle's bankbook (for February-October 1904) from the Capital and Counties Bank on Oxford Street, which by nice coincidence (well, perhaps it wasn't only a coincidence) was Sherlock Holmes' own bank ($2,500).
338. The twelfth volume of The Shoso-in Bulletin, published by The Men with the Twisted Konjo and edited by Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes, is an interesting anthology of articles, essays, pastiches, parodies, and artwork by contributors in ten countries on four continents, with 212 pages (and it's all in English); $12.00 plus shipping from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; creditcard orders welcome. Back issues are available, and The Shoso-in Bulletin has a web-site at <<http://www.parkcity.ne.jp/~hirayama/index.htm>>. If you are in Britain and want to order by mail, contact John Hall (20 Drury Avenue, Horsforth, Leeds LS18 4BR, England).
339. The Japanese film director and writer Hayao Miyazaki is receiving rave reviews for his new feature-length animation "Spirited Away" (now in limited release, so it may not be available in every neighborhood), and Pam Verrey has noted that Miyazaki's previous credits include work on the 1983 television series "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound" (known in Japan as "Meitantei Holmes").
340. Doug and Sandi Greene report that the fourth volume in the "Crippen & Landru Lost Classics" series (offering previously uncollected stories by great detective and mystery writers) is Stuart Palmer's HILDEGARDE WITHERS: UNCOLLECTED RIDDLES. None of the stories is Sherlockian (although one has a mention of Trichinopoly), but they're great fun as well as fine 1930s puzzle stories; Palmer was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (his entertaining essay "The I-O-U of Hildegard Withers" appeared in the Jan. 1948 issue of The Baker Street Journal). $29.00 cloth/$19.00 paper, plus shipping, from Crippen & Landru (Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505) (toll-free 877-622-6656) <<http://www.crippenlandru.com>>.
341. Oct 02 #1: The famous (perhaps infamous) Sherlock Holmes "tent joke" was voted (temporarily) the funniest joke in the world in a "Laughlab" experiment launched last September by British psychologist Richard Wiseman (Dec 01 #6), and the good news (for those who detest the oft-repeated joke) is that it only came in second in the final voting (and I'm not going to tell it again); you can see the final results at the web-site <<http://www.laughlab.co.uk>>. For all my readers who don't have access to the Internet, here's the winner: There are two hunters out in the woods, and one of them collapses; he seems not to be breathing and his eyes are glazed. So the other hunter takes out his cell phone and calls emergency services. He gasps: "My friend is dead! What can I do?" And the operator replies: "Calm down, I can help. First, let's make sure he's dead." There is a silence, then a gunshot is heard. Back on the phone, the guy says: "okay, now what?"
342. The second part of Richard M. Lackritz's detective-fiction collection (the material from 1920 to 1945) was sold at auction at Christie's in New York on Sept. 24; one item was his copy of Ellery Queen's THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, inscribed by Fred Dannay: "To Dr. Richard Lackritz/This is the only EQ book ever suppressed -- and for reasons that had nothing to do with the book!" It sold for $418.25 (including the 19.5% buyer's premium).
343. THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was indeed suppressed, after the fifth printing; Adrian Conan Doyle objected furiously to publication of Sherlock Holmes pastiches, but was unable to do anything about the book until Fred Dannay discovered, and brought to Adrian's attention, that Dannay had mistakenly included (without permission) an excerpt from the Canon in the anthology 101 YEARS' ENTERTAINMENT: THE GREAT DETECTIVE STORIES, 1841-1941; Adrian then threatened a lawsuit over the copyright infringement unless THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was withdrawn, and Ellery Queen complied. Adrian changed his mind about pastiches in the 1950s, when he wrote some of them himself.
344. Plan well ahead: "Gaslight and Fog" (an autumnal weekend of Sherlockian fun and frolic) is scheduled for Oct. 11-13, 2003, at the Nevele Grande Hotel in Ellenville, N.Y. (in the Catskills). Arrangements by The Sign of Four (aka Ron and Carol Fish, Al Gregory, and Jan Stauber), and they have a website at <<http://www.gaslightandfog.org>>; you can also reach Ron Fish at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919 (845-361-4320).
345. Judith Freeman notes that an exhibit of "Alien Stingers" opened at the N.Y. Aquarium on Sept. 27; it's devoted to jellyfish, and one of the 20 species exhibited is the Lion's Mane. *Cyanea capillata*, according to an aquarium press release, is the "giant of all the species of jellies; the belled sac of a lion's mane jelly can measure six feet or more across while its tangle of venomous tentacles may reach over 100 feet in length. The tentacles are arranged in eight groups with each group having 150 tentacles. The lion's mane ranges widely in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and although it is not believed capable of killing an organism as large as a human, its sting can cause severe discomfort." The Aquarium is at Coney Island in Brooklyn, and there's an interesting web-site at <<http://www.nyaquarium.com>>.
346. Oct 02 #2: The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Jim Hawkins' story about John Bennett Shaw's personal collection with the movie "Young Sherlock Holmes" (and his comments on what John received for that work), and other reports from and about the collections. Expansion of the catalog of the Sherlock Holmes collections continues (and as of late summer 13,995 items had been added), and the results are available on-line at <<http://www.lib.umn.edu/books/>>. The newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
347. The newsletter also reports that Sherlock's Home (in Minnetonka, Minn.) has begun a "Sherlock for Governor" campaign. Holmes held a press conference at the microbrewery to announce his plans to run for governor on the law and order platform, with "no taxation on beer" a special concern. Owner Bill Burdick is distributing window decals and campaign buttons, and has said that other gubernatorial candidates will be challenged to debate with the Great Detective.
348. Philip Knightley's THE FIRST CASUALTY: FROM THE CRIMEA TO VIETNAM: THE WAR CORRESPONDENT AS HERO, PROPAGANDIST, AND MYTH MAKER was published in 1975, and it's an excellent examination of "to what extent the war correspondent has been responsible for myths" (the epigraph for the book is the suggestion by Sen. Hiram Johnson in 1917 that "the first casualty when war come is truth"), and Conan Doyle's reporting on the Boer War and the First World War is mentioned briefly. A revised second edition (with a new subtitle "the war correspondent as hero and myth-maker from the Crimea to Kosovo) appeared in Britain in 2000, and there's now an American edition (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2002; 574 pp., $19.95).
349. Issue #50 of Sherlock offers its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise). Mark Palmer reports on Sherlock Holmes pubs and restaurants ("From Silver Blaze to Mayonnaise"), Gavin Collinson discusses the new television film "Case of Evil", Paul Chapman explores "Encounters with Evil", and the continuing "Spotlight on a Society" feature offers Michael E. Bragg's report on The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn. Sherlock is a bimonthly, and a subscription costs £23.70 (U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Also available from their American agent Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
350. Phyllis Calvert died on Oct. 8. She trained as a child dancer until an injury forced a switch to drama, and made her first appearance on stage at the age of 10 in 1925 (in Dame Ellen Terry's last play), and her first appearance in film at the age of 12, and by the 1940s was the most glamorous film star in Britain. She continued acting on stage, screen, and television, and played Agnes Garrideb in 1994 in the "Three Garridebs" segment of Granada's "The Mazarin Stone".

351. Oct 02 #3: Filming for the fourth season of "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (the series that stars Peter McCauley as Challenger) has been postponed while producers pursue final agreements on funding for 22 more programs. The third season will continue in syndicated re-runs on Warner Brothers channels, while the first two seasons can be seen weekday mornings on TNT cable. There's a web-site <<http://www.lostworldtv.net>> that offers action, background, episode information, and a newsletter.
352. "Studies in Sherlock" is being performed at the Saint Sebastian Players Theatre in Chicago through Nov. 17 (Fridays and Saturdays at 8:00 pm and Sundays at 2:00 pm); the play is a dramatization of "A Case of Identity" and "The Second Stain" by Jim Masini. The box office phone number is (773-404-7922); web-site at <<http://www.members.aol.com/stsebplyers/>>.
353. John Baesch reports that the National Portrait Gallery in London opens an exhibition on "The Cult of Byronism" on Nov. 20; according to the November issue of British Heritage, the show will examine the influence of Lord Byron (1788-1824) on Benjamin Disraeli, Oscar Wilde, W. H. Auden, and T. E. Lawrence (all four, by interesting coincidence cited by Ron De Waal in his THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES).
354. Plan ahead: the Appletree Theater in Highland Park, Ill., plans to produce a new dramatization of "The Sign of the Four" (by Dr. Shanghai Low), June 18-July 20, 2003. The box-office address is 595 Elm Place, Highland Park, IL 60035 (847-437-4335) <<http://www.appletreetheatre.com>>.
355. Zakaria Erzincinglu died on Sept. 26. He was a renowned forensic entomologist in Britain, widely known as "Dr. Zak" (both in law enforcement and to the general public). His memoirs (MAGGOTS, MURDER AND MEN), published in Britain in 2000 and in the United States this year (May 02 #4), include a discussion of the achievements of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle, and citations of the Canon in each chapter.
356. The November/December issue of Book magazine is their "Best of 2002" issue, and one of their five "best crime novels" is Laurie R. King's JUSTICE HALL, which they describe as "Sherlock Holmes and his brilliant young wife (surprised?) enter the world of British high society. In a country manor, they uncover the mechanisms that caused the execution of a well-born young soldier in World War I." One subscriber to the RUSS-L electronic mailing list has suggested that it should have read "Mary Russell and her husband." Of course it might also have read "Mary Russell and her brilliant elderly husband" . . .
357. "It seems elementary, my dear readers, why Hunter couple William and Elizabeth Holmes called their second boy Sherlock. After all, an affable doctor named Watson delivered him on January 20, 1911. 'A nurse told my parents that they just had to call me Sherlock,' the 91-year-old laughs." That's the opening of an article by Chad Watson (no relation, he carefully noted in his byline) in the Australian newspaper the Newcastle Herald (Aug. 3), recently at hand from Karen Murdock. And there's a bit more to the story: "I think his grandmother's sister was married to Conan Doyle or something like that," his former dance partner Joyce Mason said. "He told me how it was but now nobody can remember."

358. Oct 02 #4: Kenton A. Johnson ("A Remarkable Invention") died on June 13. Ken became interested in ham radio as a teenager in the 1930s, and communications was both a vocation and an avocation for him (he used the call sign W6NKE). In 1975 he founded The Sherlock Holmes Wireless Society for fellow ham operators who met by shortwave radio (in an era when the phrase "out there in the electricity" didn't mean the Internet), and edited The Sherlock Holmes Wireless Society Newsletter (later called The Log of the Canonical Hams) for people who weren't wireless. Ken received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1981.
359. A LITERARY GUIDE TO LONDON, by Ed Glinert (New York: Penguin Books, 2000; 435 pp., £12.99), is an excellent guide, with a chapter "From Bart's to Baker Street: A Walk Through Sherlock Holmes's London" and many other references, Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian, to Arthur Conan Doyle.
360. The Bootmakers of Toronto met at the Bata Shoe Museum on Sept. 28, and one of the papers, nicely appropriate for the venue, was Chris Redmond's "Foot Notes" (which includes a spectacular Sherlockian pun). The paper is available at <<http://www.sherlockian.net/societies/boots/footwear.html>>, and his web-site offers a wide and interesting range of other Sherlockian and Doylean material, and links to other web-sites.
361. Carolyn and Joel Senter have a new sales-list of Sherlockiana that includes books, CDs, videos, artwork, and other collectibles. The Sherlockian Times is available on request from Classic Specialties (Box 16058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823 <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>). There's also newsletter content, including an interesting report on the "Sherlock Holmes and all That Jazz" excursion to New Orleans last March; planning is underway on a second excursion, to a different city, and you can ask the Senters to let you know details when they're available.
362. Sherlock Holmes is now an honorary FRSC. That's Fellow of the Royal Society of Chemistry, and the award, usually reserved for Nobel Laureates and distinguished academics, is the first by the society to a fictional character (according to the society) and it was made in recognition of Holmes' pioneering use of forensic science. FRSC Dr. John Watson was photographed placing the medal around the neck of the statue of Sherlock Holmes outside the Baker Street Underground on Oct. 16, and Andrew Chancellor in a grumpy "Footnote" on the editorial page of the Daily Telegraph (Oct. 17), suggested that the reason for the award was to "attract publicity to this not tremendously well known organisation, but it was carrying whimsy too far. You can hardly take seriously an institution that hands out honours to fictional characters. What would we think if the Nobel committee decided to give its prize for economics to Mr. Micawber?" Why didn't the Society give its award on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Chancellor wondered. "Not famous enough, I suppose."
363. Kenneth Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (which premiered as "Dramatic Licence" in New Hampshire in 1983, with Patrick Horgan as William Gillette) is being performed at the Ottawa Little Theatre, through Nov. 9. It's a murder mystery set in Gillette's home in Connecticut, with Gillette trying to do the detecting. The theater is at 400 King Edward, Ottawa, ON K1N 7M7, Canada (613-233-8948) and there's a web-site at <www.o-l-t.com/oltdat.html>.

364. Oct 02 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 149th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 10, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Jim Cox will lead the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with lunch at McSorley's. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Douglas G. Greene, author of the biography JOHN DICKSON CARR: THE MAN WHO EXPLAINED MIRACLES (1995), editor of the anthology DETECTION BY GASLIGHT (1998), and proprietor (with his wife Sandi) of Crippen & Landru, publishers of a wide range of classic mysteries ($10.00); seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early (details below).
365. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the hotel provides guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend each day and pay $17.00 (details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $37.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; Sherlockian authors are likely to be on hand to sign their books.
366. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 201 West 52nd Street (between Broadway and Seventh Avenue);

- $75.00 until Dec. 15, $85.00 thereafter (checks payable to Maribeau Briggs Shrawder should be sent to Paula J. Perry, 346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10128); please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
367. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103) and 125 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
368. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be offered in the dealers' room on the second floor of the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street) from 9:30 am until 12:30 pm; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> will be glad to supply information about dealers' tables.
369. And the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold their Junior Bloodstain (a somewhat less than totally reverent gathering) in the lobby of the Hotel Algonquin at 12:30 pm; If you're planning to attend, please let Anne Cotton know (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@attbi.com>.
370. The BSI annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the usual traditional and untraditional entertainment, and the cost of the event is $45.00 (details below) until Dec. 15, or $55.00 thereafter or at the door.
371. Oct 02 #6: The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal brunch on Sunday, at 11:30 am at the Baker Street restaurant at 1152 First Avenue (at 63rd Street); it's open to everyone, and reservations are strongly advised, to Marina Stajic (425 East 51st Street #4-A, New York, NY 10022) <mstajic@aol.com>.
372. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $175.00 a night (Tuesday through Sunday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI (the special rate is the equivalent of $153.00 plus tax). Other charges (room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians; contact the Algonquin directly (there's a firm mid-December cutoff deadline) and ask for the Baker Street Irregulars rate (212-840-6800).
373. And here are the details: you can request a reservation form for the Thursday lecture, the Martha Hudson breakfast, and the Saturday reception, from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; please see that your reservations are received by Mike by Dec. 15.
374. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. Ask for the lowest available rate, don't be shy about asking for discounts (AAA, senior, corporate), and if you plan to arrive on Thursday you should confirm that weekend rates apply, and request written confirmation.
375. Chelsea International Hostel (251 West 20th St.) $25 (dormitory) or $60 single/double, but no private baths (212-647-0100); West Park Hotel (6 Columbus Circle) $85 standard or $100 superior single/double (212-445-0200); Howard Johnson Plaza (851 8th Ave.) $87.95 single/double Internet special (866-260-0402); Wellington Hotel (55th St. at 7th Ave.) $99 single/double Internet special (212-247-3900); Hotel Pennsylvania (401 7th Ave.) $100 single/double Internet special (212-756-5000). Mary Ellen also recommends <<http://www.nycvisit.com>> for specials and general information, as well as <<http://www.orbitz.com>> and <<http://travelocity.com>>.
376. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.
377. Nov 02 #1: Some late-breaking news: there's an additional event scheduled during the birthday festivities in New York: a staged reading (with Paul Singleton as Sherlock Holmes and Mary Ellen Rich as Mrs. Hudson) of Andrew Joffe's new adaptation of "The Blue Carbuncle", on Thursday, Jan. 9, at 2:00 pm, at the West Bank Cafe (Downstairs) at 407 West 42nd Street (between 9th and 10th Avenues). The play runs about 90 minutes, and there will be a short intermission; admission is free (first come, first served), and there will be a cash bar.
378. There has been a wide variety of Sherlockian television programs broadcast in Russian over the years, and it's nice indeed that many are now available here on videocassettes and DVDs, some in PAL format only, and others also in NTSC format, from RBC Computers (269 Brighton Beach Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11235) <<http://www.rbcmp3.com>>; the company also offers a range of multisystem DVD players ($124.99 and up) that allow you to view PAL DVDs on NTSC television sets (the format doesn't matter if you play a DVD on your computer. And some programs are available subtitled in English. Shipping costs extra, and credit-card orders are welcome; you'll save on shipping costs if you order at the web-site.
379. Three programs starring Vasily Livanov and Vitaly Solomin are in Russian, with English subtitles: "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson" (1979) (#30316) [with "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Speckled Band"]; "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson" (1980) (#30315) [with "The Final Problem", "The Empty House", and "Charles Augustus Milverton"]; and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1981) (#29545) are on DVD-PAL and cost $14.99 each. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" also is available with subtitles on DVD-NTSC at $21.99 (#30194).
380. Two other Livanov/Solomin programs are available without subtitles: "The Agra Treasure" (1983) [with "The Sign of Four" and "A Scandal in Bohemia"] on VHS-NTSC at $10.99 (#9458); and "The Twentieth Century Begins" (1986) [with "The Engineer's Thumb", "The Second Stain", "His Last Bow", and "The Bruce-Partington Plans"] on DVD-PAL at $15.99 (#5020), and on VHS-NTSC at $10.99 (#9459).
381. Livanov also did Sherlock Holmes' voice on a nine-minute children's animation "Sherlock Holmes and I" (1986) that is included with seven other non-Sherlockian animations on VHS-NTSC (no subtitles) at $10.99 (#29747). And there's "My Dearly Beloved Detective" (1986): a parody starring Yekaterina Vasilyeva (Miss Holmes) and Galina Shchepetnova (Miss Watson) as two detectives who run their own detective agency (to the annoyance of officials at Scotland Yard) on VHS-NTSC (no subtitles) at $10.99 (#8203).
382. There's still time to see the exhibition "Exposed: The Victorian Nude" at the Brooklyn Art Museum through Jan. 5, where you can see some 150 paintings, sculptures, works on paper, photographs, popular illustrations, and films. Organized by Tate Britain, the exhibition provides an interesting look at what was considered proper or improper, and artistic or otherwise, during the Victorian era. The museum is at 200 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, NY 11238 (718-638-5000) <<http://www.brooklynmuseum.org>>.

383. Nov 02 #2: Dave Galerstein has forwarded an item from his local newspaper The Cranbury Press (Oct. 25) about the party at Castle Senior Living to celebrate the 100th birthday of Etta (Eddie) Lehrman, who talked about growing up in her grandfather's brownstone on East 50th Street in New York, where she had interesting neighbors: Katherine Cornell, Julie Harris, Irving Berlin, and Basil Rathbone. "We always knew when Mr. Rathbone was expecting to have a lady visitor," Mrs. Lehrman explained. "He would line the stairs in front of his place with flowers."

384. The new BBC television film of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Apr 02 #3) will air on PBS-TV in January, with Richard Roxburgh as Sherlock Holmes and Ian Hart as Dr. Watson, and the latest computer technology to generate the Hound. Richard E. Grant, who was Sherlock Holmes for BBC-2 in "Encounters: The Other Side" (1992) and Mycroft Holmes in "Case of Evil" on USA cable in October, will play Stapleton.
385. And Ian Hart will be seen as Arthur Conan Doyle in "Neverland" next year. The film, based on Alan Knee's play "The Man Who Was Peter Pan" (about how J. M. Barrie was inspired to write "Peter Pan") stars Johnny Depp (Barrie), Dustin Hoffman (Charles Frohman), Kate Maberly (Wendy Darling), Kate Winslet, and Julie Christie. Miramax will be the distributor in the U.S.
386. Steve Rothman has reported that Ray Betzner is The Baker Street Journal's new editor of reports from the Sherlockian societies. Society reports can be sent to Raymond L. Betzner at 1535 South Jefferson Court, Lancaster, PA 17602 (typed and double-spaced, please); e-mail to <societynotes@aol.com>.
387. The "Sign of Three" (Jim Saunders, Scott Bond, and Ed Smith) offer a new Sherlock Holmes ring, designed by Scott Bond and available in ultrium, or white or yellow gold (10/14/18 carats) and in versions for men and women, at prices from $179 to $409; you can ask James Saunders (Box 9052, Astoria, NY 11103) <sherlockianring@aol.com> for an illustrated flier.
388. Communication (the newsletter of The Pleasant Places of Florida) is now up to its 225th issue, which is a "special fall television issue" (prepared by Wanda and Jeff Dow) with details on the fall Sherlockian schedule (similar to what TV Guide does, but for a season in which all the programs are Sherlockian); it's imaginatively done, complete with photographs (including one showing Vicki Lewis in "Suddenly Susan Cushing"). Membership, including a subscription, costs $12.00 a year ($13.00 overseas) from Carl Heifetz, 1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655; the TV issue alone costs $2.00 postpaid.
389. Rodger Garrick-Steele has found a publisher for his book with all the details of his claim (Nov 01 #3) Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was a plagiarist and a murderer (he allegedly colluded with his publishers to deny B. Fletcher Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail for THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and then in 1907, worried that his affair with Fletcher Robinson's wife Gladys would be discovered, poisoned Fletcher Robinson with laudanum): the publisher is Nanundo, in Tokyo, and the book is in Japanese: CONAN DOYLE SATSUJIN JIKEN (with the subtitle THE HOUSE OF THE BASKERVILLES), and it costs Y950.

390. Nov 02 #3: The Duke of Bedford died on Oct. 25. He was John Robert Russell, born into a family which (in his own words) "thought themselves slightly grander than God." He inherited the title in 1953 and devoted years to rescuing and restoring Woburn Abbey; he opened its rooms to the public, created the first game park at a stately home, and turned the family estate into a business that drew visitors at the rate of more than 1.5 million a year. In 1974 he turned the estate over to his son and lived abroad with his third wife, whom he married in 1960: Nicole Milinaire, now the Dowager Duchess of Bedford, but in the 1950s associate producer of the "Sherlock Holmes" television series that starred Ronald Howard. There is a chapter about the series in her memoirs, NICOLE NOBODY (1974).
391. The Baskerville Arms in Shiplake reopened under new ownership this summer, according to a flier at hand from John Baesch; it's a restaurant in Station Road, Henley-on-Thames, Oxon. RG9 3NY, England (in case you're on tour).
392. "Sherlock Holmes and the curious case of a scholar who detects the Bible in Conan Doyle's tales" was the headline on Richard Owen's report in The Times (Nov. 7) about a new book that suggests that Conan Doyle's early education by the Jesuits is reflected in the Sherlock Holmes tales. The book is SOPRANNATURALE!, WATSON: SHERLOCK HOLMES E IL CASO DIO, by Alessandro Gnocchi and Mario Palmaro (Milan: Ancora, 2002; 176 pp., E14.00); the title translates as SUPERNATURAL, WATSON!: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF GOD.
393. Worldwide Collectibles & Gifts (Box 158, Berwyn, PA 19312) (800-222-1613) <<http://www.cag.com>> offers the "Department 56" models of "Literary Classics" that include "The Hansom Cab" (DT5853-4) at $35.00, and "Sherlock Holmes: 221B Baker Street" with the house, figures of Holmes and Watson, and a book (DT5860-1) at $90.00; and "Legends of England" wall masks of Holmes (£19) and Watson (£20) at $29.00 each.
394. The museum show "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (first exhibited in England in 1995) has been on tour in the United States and Canada, and it will open at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield, Mass., on Jan. 21 and run through May 7. The museum is at 39 South Street, Pittsfield, MA 01201 (413-443-7171) <<http://www.berkshireremuseum.org>>.
395. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver on Oct. 30, to honor the world's first forensic geologist, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America (the society gave this year's public service award to author John McPhee, whose classic book BASIN AND RANGE noted that Sherlock Holmes was a geologist). The local Sherlockians were led by were led by John and Judy Stephenson, and Bill Dorn, and temporarily-local Mia Stampe. Our next meetings will be in Salt Lake City in May, and in Seattle in November.
396. John Leonard's review of USA cable's "Case of Evil" in the Oct. 28 issue of New York magazine reported that it "will remind you of every variation on Sherlock Holmes that the screen is heir to, plus every serial killer since Jack the Ripper," calling it "ridiculous but entertaining." He ended his review: "May I suggest the glorious alternative of Laurie R. King's Sherlock Holmes-meets-Mary Russell series? *The Beekeeper's Apprentice* may be more fun than anything Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote."
397. Nov 02 #4: The Honolulu Police Department has cancelled its annual "Sherlock Holmes Night" this year because of staffing constraints, according to a report in the Honolulu Advertiser (Oct. 13). The popular event, designed to educate the public about forensic science and criminal investigations, invites participants to solve a mock crime, but deputy police chief Glen Kajiyama said that "We regret that we cannot host the event his year. Right now we are concentrating on other priorities such as preparing our department and DNA lab for national accreditation." The department plans to resume the event next year.
398. Sonia Fetherston and Tyke Niver have noted "Sherlock Holmes London Tea" ("blended to a delicious and secret Victorian recipe that not even Holmes could ferret out") in the fall-winter mail-order catalog from The Scottish Lion (Box 1700, 3424 White Mountain Highway, North Conway, NH 03860 (800-355-7268) <<http://www.scottishlion.com>>; $18.00 for two 4.4-ounce tins (item F185).
399. Marina Stajic was the moderator of a Sherlock Holmes Workshop in Dearborn, Mich., on Oct. 17, as part of the annual meeting of the Society of Forensic Toxicologists, with five experts discussing "The Adventure of the Devil's Foot" (which was reprinted in the Program and Abstracts, possibly the first time a Sherlock Holmes story has been published by a scientific society).
400. The Mystery Guild continues to offer its members inexpensive book-club editions that include JUSTICE HALL, by Laurie R. King ($11.99) and MURDER IN BAKER STREET: NEW TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Martin H. Greenberg ($12.49); (Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206) <<http://www.mysteryguild.com>>. And the November issue of the Guild's newsletter offers a "member profile" of George Schenk, a Sherlockian who lives in West Linn, Ore., and has been a member of the Guild since 1950.
401. There's a new Sherlockian society in Philadelphia: Gideon Hill reports that Mycroft's League will meet for lunch at the Union League Club on the last Fridays in April and October, before the dinners of The Sons of the Copper Beeches and The Bitches of the Copper Beeches, and on other occasions,

- including an event now being planned for Saturday, Apr. 26, 2003. If you'd like to be notified of the society's activities, please contact Gideon at (215-887-8110) <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>; all Sherlockians are welcome to attend meetings of Mycroft's League.
402. Mary Burke reports that a painting by Emile Jean Horace Vernet (the granduncle of Sherlock Holmes) is on display at the Walters Art Museum in Baltimore; the painting is "Italian Brigands Surprised by Papal Troops" (in the 19th Century Gallery).
403. Fans of the country-pop group The Dixie Chicks may already know that Emily Robison named her baby, born on Nov. 11, Charles Augustus Robison. Mickey Fromkin ran an Internet search in pursuit of a possible connection to the Sherlock Holmes story and found that the baby was named after his father, Charles Robison, and the baby's parents' favorite literary character, Augustus McCrea (from Larry McMurtry's LONESOME DOVE).
404. Nov 02 #5: One (possibly last) item about the famous Sherlock Holmes "tent joke": Tad Friend's article "What's So Funny?" in The New Yorker (Nov. 11) discusses humor and jokes and Dr. Richard Wiseman's "Laughlab" experiment; Friend mentions what he calls the "old groaner about Holmes and Watson going camping," and gives only the punch line, reporting that Wiseman said "It's a terrible joke."
405. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection arranged an afternoon symposium on "Bringing *Angels of Darkness* to Light" at the Toronto Reference Library on Nov. 16, with the manuscript of the play on display, along with other interesting Doylean items from the collection; the event was well-attended, and it included a world premiere: Scott Kettles and Cliff Makinson performed two excerpts from the play, one between Elias Fortescue Smee and John Ferrier, and the other Jefferson Hope and John Watson, M.D. And there was a convivial Bootmakers pub night at the nearby Artful Dodger afterward.
406. The Toronto Reference Library, celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, provides a suitably late-Victorian home for the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in an attractive and otherwise much-more-modern building that also is bordered on one side by a Sherlock Holmes Walk; the Arthur Conan Doyle room is open to the public from 2:00 to 4:00 pm on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, and at other times by appointment, and it's well worth a visit.
407. The new BBC version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (with Richard Roxburgh as Holmes and Ian Hart as Watson) was broadcast by the CBC in Canada on Nov. 18, and was warmly reviewed by Sherlockians who posted to mailing lists. But Catherine Dawson March, in her preview in the Toronto Globe and Mail, complained that "Henry Baskerville, who's been abroad farming in Canada, is played by Matt Day, who flattens his accent into an American drawl rather than a Canadian twang." (I don't recall hearing any Canadian twangs in Toronto on Nov. 16, possibly because none of the Friends and Bootmakers have been farming.) The program will air in Britain at Christmas, and in the United States (on PBS-TV) on Jan. 19.
408. Noted by Victoria Gill: INDEXERS AND INDEXES IN FACT AND FICTION, edited by Hazel K. Bell, with a Foreword by A. S. Byatt (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2001; 160 pp., CA$22.95); the contents include an interesting essay on "Indexing in Baker Street" by Margaret D. Anderson, who concludes that "Holmes was a successful indexer. He was industrious and painstaking, as all indexers must be, and, aided by his remarkable memory, his filing system never failed him. A modern practitioner would no doubt have made a master card-index for all the encyclopaedic volumes, but Holmes did very well without."
409. The 2002 Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal is "Tilting at Windmills: Denis Conan Doyle and the Baker Street Irregulars", by Richard Lancelyn Green, who examines Denis and Adrian's battles with Ellery Queen over THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, the sudden demise of The Baker Street Journal, and the "general unhappiness" that Conan Doyle's sons caused and felt in the United States. The annual is not part of subscriptions to the BSJ; orders can be sent to The Baker Street Journal (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331) <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>; $11.00 postpaid in the U.S., or $12.00 to other countries.
410. Nov 02 #6: The latest issue of Scarlet Street (#46) is a "special swimsuit issue" (devoted to the "Creature from the Black Lagoon" genre), also offering David Stuart Davies' review of Matt Frewer's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Whitechapel Vampire". $42.00 a year (for six issues); the address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>.
411. Brian Pugh reports that Britain has issued a set of "Pillar to Post" stamps, one of which shows an ornate letter-box introduced in 1857 in London, Dublin, and Edinburgh (a plainer "economy version" was produced for use elsewhere). The ornate boxes were dark green, decorated in gold, but from 1874 to 1884 the boxes were repainted red (dark green being considered a dingy color); thus it's likely that when Sherlock Holmes arrived in Baker Street the letter-boxes he saw would have been in red livery rather than green-and-gold.
412. If you've not yet heard any of the excellent BBC Radio dramatizations with Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Watson, here's a chance to get some of the cassettes at a deep discount from Daedalus Books (Box 6000, Columbia, MD 21045) (800-395-2665) <www.salebooks.com>: THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES VOLUME 1 ("The Empty House", "The Norwood Builder", "The Dancing Men" and "The Solitary Cyclist" on two cassettes) and VOLUME 2 ("The Priory School", "Black Peter", "Charles Augustus Milverton", and "The Six Napoleons" on two cassettes) cost $4.98 each (plus shipping).
413. Richard Harris died on Oct. 25. He began his acting career in a workshop production of Brendan Behan's "The Quare Fellow" in 1956, and appeared in his film in 1962, starring in "This Sporting Life" and "Camelot" and most recently in "Gladiator" and "Harry Potter". And he played James McParlan (with Sean Connery as Jack Kehoe) in "The Molly Maguires" (1970); the non-Sherlockian film was based on the events featured in the American portion of "The Valley of Fear".
414. Issue #51 of SHERLOCK offers its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise); the contents include reviews (by Alan Wightman) of Matt Frewer's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Whitechapel Vampire" and (by Gavin Collinson) of Douglas Fairbanks' "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish" and Richard Roxburgh's "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and an article by Alan Taman on Sherlock Holmes and forensic science. SHERLOCK is published bi-monthly and subscriptions cost £23.70 (U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Also available from their American agent Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
415. THE DETECTIVE AND THE INVESTOR: UNCOVERING INVESTMENT TECHNIQUES FROM THE LEGENDARY SLEUTHS, by Robert G. Hagstrom (New York: TEXERE, 2002; 262 pp., $24.95), is written for investors, with emphasis on how the methods of C. Auguste Dupin, Sherlock Holmes, and Father Brown can be used by those who want to invest wisely and well. Hagstrom also has interviewed modern mystery writers, and he includes four pages of discussion with Laurie R. King about Holmes and Mary Russell.

416. Nov 02 #7: Evelyn Stefansson Nef is a fascinating woman; born in 1913, she had three husbands: master puppeteer Bil Baird, polar explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson, and John Nef, one of the founders of the University of Chicago's Committee on Social Thought. She now lives in Washington, in a nice Georgetown house with a garden mosaic mural designed and installed for her by Marc Chagall, and Sam Fry has noted an interesting story in her memoirs FINDING MY WAY: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF AN OPTIMIST (Washington: Francis Press, 2002; 304 pp., $26.00). While married to Baird she suffered a ruptured appendix and peritonitis, and one of her visitors during a monthlong recovery in the hospital was Stefansson, who arrived

- "bringing a copy of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by his friend Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" and then "did an amazing thing: before my eyes he tore the hardcover book apart, so I could read it a chapter at a time without having to bear the weight of the whole volume. It seemed to me an extravagant act of kindness that belonged to a lost chivalric age."
417. Janice Fisher has forwarded a report that footage from sixty years of British Pathe newsreels from 1910 to 1970 now is available at their web-site at <<http://www.britishpathe.com/index.cfm>>. You can search the archive (there are 3 hits for "Conan Doyle" and 16 hits for "Sherlock Holmes"), and you're able to preview some of the footage; the hits range from Eille Norwood making up for his role of Sherlock Holmes (1923) and "The Adventures of Sammy Sausage" (1928), to the reconstruction of the sitting-room in Baker Street (1951), to the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's excursion to Switzerland "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" (1968).
418. "They Might Be Giants" (the rock group that takes its name from George C. Scott's 1971 film) are celebrating an anniversary with a 2-CD 52-song album "Dial-a-Song: 20 Years of They Might Be Giants" that lists at $32.00 (but is discounted at $27.18 at <<http://www.rhino.com>>. The group has its own web-site at <<http://www.tmbg.com>>.
419. Ted Friedman's interesting series about Sherlockian philately for Topical Times continues with a two-page article "Sherlock Holmes Meets Dr. Watson" in the November-December issue; it's illustrated with stamps from Afghanistan, and the Cinderella local-post stamps issued by the Maiwand Jezails in 1980. The magazine costs $5.00 postpaid from the American Topical Association, Box 50820, Albuquerque, NM 87181) <atastamps@juno.com> (credit-card orders welcome).
420. South Africa's four-year series of stamps commemorating the 100th anniversary of the Anglo-Boer/South African War, including the stamp honoring Arthur Conan Doyle and Winston Churchill as war writers (May 01 #2), has been reissued in a souvenir booklet, with historical background information and illustrations; the cost of the booklet is R45.00 from Philatelic Services, Private Box X505, Pretoria, South Africa <<http://www.sapo.co.za>>.
421. Martin Breese (Breese Books, c/o Magick Enterprises, 82 Broad Street, Sheffield S2 5TG, England) <www.sherlockholmes.co.uk> continues to publish interesting pastiches by John Hall and Val Andrews and others, and now offers an occasional newsletter Sherlock Holmes News, which includes the preface from Roger Jaynes' soon-to-be-published pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES IN A DUEL WITH THE DEVIL. Copies of the newsletter are available without charge.

422. Nov 02 #8: One test of "cultural literacy" is the assumption that readers don't need explanations for allusions to literature. As with "The Dog That Never Barks" (the headline on the lead editorial in the Washington Post on Nov. 25). The editorial is about the Federal Election Commission ("the watchdog here dozes most of the day"), and there is no mention of a detective story or a detective or an author, the assumption being that readers will understand the allusion.
423. There's more news about the film "O Xango de Baker Street" (it's based on Jo Soares' pastiche, which was called A SAMBA FOR SHERLOCK when it was published in an English translation in 1997): it was screened at the Festival do Rio in Brazil on Sept. 27, 2001, and at the New Cinema Novo festival at the Leonard Nimoy New Thalia in New York on Nov. 24, 2002. Joaquim de Almeida is Sherlock Holmes, with Anthony O'Donnell as Dr. Watson and Maria de Medeiros as Sarah Bernhardt.
424. Debra Day, of St. Charles, Mo., has been creating hand-made collectibles for several years, Carolyn and Joel Senter report, and she has launched a new line of Sherlockian Mouse Christmas Tree Ornaments (they'll also stand up by themselves on your knickknack shelf); she plans to offer two ornaments each year, and this year's pair are Mrs. Hudson and Wiggins (they're about 2.5" high). The ornaments cost $32.50 (shipping extra) for the pair, from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>> (credit-card orders are welcome).
425. Reported by Tyke Niver: a deerstalker designed by Christys' of London, made of lambs wool and with a grosgrain tie, in brown check, in sizes S/M/L/XL, $59.95; from Stark & Legum, 739 Granby Street, Norfolk, VA 23510 <<http://www.MensHats.com>> (800-356-4287).
426. Reported: Stephen Gaspar's THE CANADIAN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Blackfriars, 2002, $4.95); mysteries solved by Holmes on a trip to and in Canada (this is an eBook that is available only on the Internet) <<http://blackfriarsbooks.tripod.com>>. Peter Lovesey's THE SEDGEMOOR STRANGLER AND OTHER STORIES OF CRIME (Nov 01 #5) has a British edition (London: Allison & Busby, 2002; 247 pp., £17.99); it includes a reprint of his pastiche "The Four Wise Men".
427. The comic-book mini-series RUSE continues: issue #13 arrived in the shops this month ($2.95); and so did issue #3 in the second volume of THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN ($3.50) with an appearance by Mycroft directing the efforts of members of the League against the mysterious Martian cylinders that have fallen to Earth in England.
428. Dec 02 #1: Some late-breaking late-breaking news: the venue for the staged reading of "The Blue Carbuncle" during the birthday festivities has been changed: the performance of Andrew Joffe's new adaptation (with Paul Singleton as Sherlock Holmes and Mary Ellen Rich as Mrs. Hudson) will be held on Thursday, Jan. 9, at 2:00 pm, at the Blue Heron Theatre at 123 East 24th Street (between Park and Lexington Avenues). No charge for admission; reservations to Paul Singleton (144 East 24th Street #3-B, New York, NY 10010) (212-505-3609) <doctorsyn50@hotmail.com>.
429. Geoffrey S. Stavert ("The Shingle of Southsea") died on Dec. 19. He served in the Royal Navy and retired with the rank of Commander, and was a devoted member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, serving as a member of its council from 1978 to 1979 and as its Honorary Secretary from 1986 to 1994, and he was named an Honorary Member of the Society in 1998. Geoff lived in Southsea for decades, and his carefully-researched and well-written A STUDY IN SOUTHSEA: THE UNREVEALED LIFE OF DOCTOR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1987) was a splendid examination of Conan Doyle's life and career in Southsea from 1882 to 1890, and his brief visit there in 1896. Geoff received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1994.
430. A STUDY IN SOUTHSEA is no longer in print ink-on-paper, but thanks to the wonders of computers it is still available on a CD-ROM disk that's offered by Archive Britain (409 Victory House, Portsmouth, Hants. PO1 1JP, England) <http://www.archivebritain.com/a\_study\_in\_southsea.htm>; the cost is £9.95 plus shipping. It's a fine picture of the place where Conan Doyle was both doctor and author, and of his family, friends, and associates there.
431. English actor David Ian Davies, who earlier recorded "Silver Blaze" (Jun 02 #6), has now read "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (unabridged) on four CDs from One Voice Recordings; it's a fine performance (he supplies all of the voices, and he does them well indeed). The set costs $34.50 (shipping extra) from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcome.
432. The Actor's Playhouse at the Miracle Theatre in Coral Gables will produce Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" from Jan. 15 to Feb. 9. The boxoffice address is 280 Miracle Mile, Coral Gables, FL 33134 (305-444-9293) <<http://www.actorsplayhouse.org>>.
433. The Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem will celebrate their 25th anniversary on Apr. 16-18, 2004, with a reception at the world's only fullscale replica of the Parthenon, papers, dealers, a dinner-theater production of "The Greek Interpreter", and breakfast at the Sherlock Holmes Pub. Additional details are available from Jim Hawkins (644 Vivian Drive, Nashville, TN 37211) <jimhawkins@thehawk.net>.

434. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine continues its pleasant tradition of celebrating the birthday festivities in its Feb. 2003 issue, with Steve Hockensmith's cowboy whodunit "Dear Mr. Holmes", Arthur Porges' parody "Stately Homes and the Invisible Giant", C. McArthur's poem "The Hound", and Jon L. Breen's "The Jury Box" (devoted to reviews of Sherlockian pastiches).

435. Dec 02 #2: Lewis Feuer died on Nov. 24. A Marxist as a student, and suspected of being a Communist during World War II (he was a sergeant in New Caledonia and tried to organize local workers who were building airfields for the Allies, he also was arrested in the Soviet Union in 1963. during an academic exchange trip, when he explained to Soviet workers that American workers owned cars and homes. He began his academic career as associate professor of philosophy at Vassar College in 1946, and taught at many universities until he retired as professor emeritus of sociology and government at the University of Virginia in 1988. And he combined his interests in Karl Marx and Sherlock Holmes in THE CASE OF THE REVOLUTIONIST'S DAUGHTER (1983), in which Holmes is hired by Marx to investigate the disappearance of his daughter Eleanor.
436. Crocuses are shown on a postage stamp issued by Belgium in 2002, and mentioned twice in the Canon: "But I have heard that the crocuses promise well," Holmes said imperturbably (in "The Speckled Band"). And Watson reported that there was "a bed of crocuses in full bloom" beneath the window at the Honorable Ronald Adair's house (in "The Empty House").
437. Gavin Collinson continues to offer readers of SHERLOCK interesting and insightful comment on film and television: his review of the new Richard Roxburgh version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is in issue #52, which also has comments by eight crime novelists on their favorite Sherlock Holmes stories, and the usual coverage of a wide range of crime fiction. SHERLOCK is published bi-monthly and subscriptions cost £23.70 (U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere), from Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Or you can order from their American agent Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
438. Reported by Lawrence G. Myers: reproduction posters for three of the Rathbone/Bruce films ("The Woman in Green", "Dressed to Kill", and "The Secret Weapon") available from Nina's Discount Oldies (Box 77, Narberth, PA 19072 (800-336-4627); large (17 x 26 in) $14.98 or small (11 x 17 in) $5.98, plus shipping. They also offer the three films, plus "Terror By Night", on videocassettes or DVDs for $5.95 each, plus shipping.
439. Spotted by Peter Ashman, in Patrick O'Brien's biography PABLO RUIZ PICASSO (1976): in 1909 Picasso and Fernande Olivier moved from the boarding-house Bateau-Lavoir to a flat in the Boulevard de Clichy, just by the Place Pigalle: "[F]irst came the easels and the canvases . . . then the few sticks among which they had lived all these years, consisting of one spring-mattress with no feet, one round table, one stained white-wood chest of drawers, several broken chairs; then the tin bath in which he kept his books (Sherlock Holmes, Nick Carter, Buffalo Bill, Verlaine, Rimbaud, Mallarme); three cats, the huge furniture-like bitch Frika, and one small ape."
440. Plan ahead: The Canonical Convocation and Caper will hold a revival/reunion in Door County, Wis., on Sept. 12-14, and the conclave will honor the Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society. Additional information is available from Donald B. Izban (71 East Division Street #1203, Chicago, IL 60610).
441. Dec 02 #3: The Civic Center Library of Marin County, in San Rafael, will honor Sherlock Holmes' birthday with a display of Sherlockiana loaned by members of The Scowlers and Mollie Maguires, from Jan. 2 to Jan. 25. There will also be lectures, by Kathleen Zell on Jan. 21, and by Ron White on Jan. 23; a panel of mystery authors (Michael Kurland, Cara Black, and Richard A. Lupoff) on Jan. 25 (followed by a post-panel supper party in San Rafael). Additional information is available from Carol Russell (314 Laurel Court, Cloverdale, CA 95425) <carolrussell@attbi.com>.
442. Further to the report that the Algonquin Hotel has a new owner (Jul 02 #5), Destination Hotels & Properties has created a handsome new web-site for the hotel (and its history) at <<http://www.thealgonquin.net>>.
443. Vlad Wolynetz has reported a delightful web-site for fans of older British television programs, at <<http://www.the-mausoleum-club.org.uk>>. The Mausoleum Club archives information about series such as "Detective" (which included Douglas Wilmer's "The Speckled Band" in 1964) and "Sherlock Holmes" (with Wilmer in 1965) and "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes" (with Peter Cushing in 1968), and (of particular interest) "The Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle" (1967). What's most interesting about the 1967 series is that one program survives in the BBC archives: "The Mystery of Cader Ifan" (with Charlotte Rampling as Julia Lambert); it's the BBC version "The Surgeon of Gaster Fell" (dramatized by John Hawkesworth), and the web-site has a detailed synopsis of the program, with a Radio Times photograph of Rampling. The web-site also offers Radio Times listings and photographs for many other program in the series (and in other series).
444. Another series discussed in detail at The Mausoleum Club is the BBC's "Late Night Horror", which included "The Kiss of Blood" (John Hawkesworth's dramatization of "The Case of Lady Sannox") in 1968. According to Radio Times, Sean Connery, "famous for the role of James Bond (the toughest and bravest man in the world)," came to the set to see his wife Diane Cilento perform as Lady Sannox and "was seen to blanch visibly. Diane herself enjoyed it very much, 'although,' she admits with relief, 'the script demanded that I kept my eyes shut most of the time.'" For those who are wondering just how horrible the story is, I should note that Ian McKellen was recently a guest on "Inside the Actors Studio" on Bravo cable, and was asked for hints about what was going to happen in the second "Lord of the Rings" film. He smiled and replied, "if you want to know what happens in the story, you could read the book."
445. Amanda Knight is planning a magazine that will appear three times a year, publishing Sherlockian short stories written by fans, and welcomes submissions; her address is 3/69 McIntosh Road, Narraweena, NSW 2099, Australia <mandysmowing@hotmail.com>.
446. William Henson died on Dec. 2. He was veteran animator who began his career with Walt Disney in the 1940s, where he helped create "Chip 'n Dale"; after a move to New York to work on cartoons such as "Casper the Friendly Ghost", he went to Mexico to supervise a team of 180 animators working on "The Adventures of Bullwinkle and Rocky" (which, in a story about counterfeit box-tops that threatened to flood the world's economy, featured Boris Badenov as Hemlock Soams and Natasha Fatale as Dr. Watkins).
447. Dec 02 #4: "An Ancient Link to Africa Lives On in Bay of Bengal" was the headline on Nicholas Wade's story in the N.Y. Times (Dec. 10), spotted by Jack Koelle. Researchers have analyzed DNA obtained from Andaman Islanders and determined that they are direct descendants of the first modern humans to have inhabited Asia. The Andaman Islanders are "arguably the most enigmatic people on our planet," according to a report in Current Biology by a team led by geneticist Dr. Erika Hagelberg of the University of Oslo; the physical characteristics of the Andamanese are African; their language belongs to a family that includes those of Papua New Guinea, Tasmania, and Melanesia; and their DNA establishes them as Asians whose ancestors migrated from Africa 40,000 to 50,000 years ago.
448. The first lapel pin of 2003 celebrates The Baskerville Bash (one suspects that the "BBC" represents the Baskerville Bash Committee as well as the British Broadcasting Corporation); it's available from Warren Randall, 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720, for $8.50 postpaid.
449. Stephen Rebello's preview (in the January issue of Playboy) of the new film "Shanghai Knights" notes that "Jackie Chan's manic charm and Owen Wilson's loopy, stoner rhythms played so well off each other in the action romp Western 'Shanghai Noon' that the actors have been reteamd. This time they're off to Victorian London to avenge Chan's father's death but instead get tangled in a conspiracy--involving such legends as Jack the Ripper

- and Sherlock Holmes--to kill the royal family." According to the Internet Movie Data Base, the cast includes Tom Fisher as Det. Artie Doyle (aka Arthur Conan Doyle); the film is scheduled to open in February.
450. Peter Tanner died on Dec. 10. He was a drummer and a stockbroker before he found work in the film industry, as a tea boy at a British studio. He soon became a film editor for Ealing, working on "Scott of the Antarctic" (1948) and "Kind Hearts and Coronets" (1949), and went on to a distinguished editing career in films that included "Without a Clue" (1988).
451. William Harker reports that L.O.F. Communications maintains a nice web-site devoted to old-time radio; one of the features is a series of columns written by Harry Bartell, the announcer on the Rathbone/Bruce "Sherlock Holmes" 1945-1946 radio series. <<http://www.lofcom.com/nostalgia/columns/struts>> is the URL for Bartell's "Struts and Frets"; just click on "On Auditions" to read his story about how he auditioned for the series.
452. The twelfth annual Watsonian weekend (a joint celebration by The STUD Sherlockian Society and The Watsonians) will be held on May 2-4; additional details (and a registration form) are available from Susan Diamond and Allan Devitt (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@attbi.com>.
453. Laurie R. King's web-site at <<http://www.laurierking.com>> has interesting new material: check the "Mutterings" section for her thoughts on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and her "Holmes Chronology" (in which she explains why she has Sherlock Holmes somewhat younger than some Sherlockians expect). Laurie's next two books, she reports, will be Mary Russell novels, one (due in 2004) set in India, and the other (due in 2005) set in San Francisco.
454. Dec 02 #5: Larry Millett's THE DISAPPEARANCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Viking, 2002; 340 pp., $23.95) is his fifth pastiche (and the first not set in Minnesota); Holmes has not really disappeared, but he's in serious trouble, in London and New York and Chicago, and again assisted by Shadwell Rafferty as well as Watson, and battling a vicious villain.
455. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers an amusing cartoon tribute by Michael Ffolkes to Sidney Paget's illustration of the battle at the Reichenbach, Dayna McCausland's report on the recent celebration of "Angels of Darkness" at the library, and other news from the library. Copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwig@sympatico.ca>.
456. Only a few collectors can own manuscripts of the Sherlock Holmes stories, but it's not difficult to own facsimiles, two of which were published by the Westminster Libraries and are offered in the new Rupert Books discount sales-list for £15.00 each. THE DYING DETECTIVE (1991) has an introduction by Julian Symonds and an afterword by Owen Dudley Edwards, and THE LION'S MANE (1992) has an introduction by Colin Dexter and an afterword by Richard Lancelyn Green. There are many other items of interest in the sales-list, and Rupert Books is at 58/59 Stonefield, Bar Hill, Cambridge CB3 8TE, England <sales@rupert-books.co.uk>; the sales ends on Jan. 31.
457. There's no shortage of paperback reprints of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES with introductions and afterwords by noted authors. One of them is a Modern Library edition published this year (181 pp., $7.95) has a biographical note on Conan Doyle, twelve pages of end-notes on the text by James Danly, and an introduction by Laurie R. King, who suggests that: "So great is the pleasure in the book, in fact, that the hapless commentator hesitates to pick over it, wanting only to thrust the book, whole and unanalyzed, into the reader's hand and urge, 'Enjoy! Oh, this is your tenth read? Well, have a grand time!'" She has much more to say, and says it well.
458. And there's a Signet Classic edition (250 pp., $4.95) first published in 1986 with an afterword by Frederick Busch, reissued in 2001 with an updated bibliography and a new afterword by Anne Perry, who notes that: "Many of us who write other books, other series, still love to add to the Holmes canon. We wish to draw him with our own particular slant, give him new adventures, exercise his brilliant intellect, his deductive reason, and his foibles of character. But have we the courage to make him dance and laugh and wring Watson's hand, or for that matter live alone in a derelict stone hut, but of course with bread and a clean collar--and apparently adequate means to be perfectly shaved?"
459. David Pirie's THE NIGHT CALLS (London: Century, 2002; 360 pp., £17.99), is his second novel based on his television series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes": it's an expansion of the two-hour mini-series that was broadcast in Britain and the United States in 2000: it opens with Conan Doyle as a medical student assisting Dr. Joseph Bell in his forensic investigations in Edinburgh in 1878 and ends with bizarre villainy in London in 1883, and there are some interesting additions to the story told in the television mini-series, including a surprise at the end of the novel.
460. Dec 02 #6: Barbara Roden has reported that "Murder by Decree" (1979) (with Christopher Plummer and James Mason) will be issued on Jan. 21 on DVD and videocassette by Anchor Bay Entertainment. As will "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002) (with Richard Roxburgh and Ian Hart), by Warner Home Video; the DVD will include a "making of..." featurette and interviews with cast and crew. The DVDs are in region 1 format (North America), and the videocassettes are NTSC; the films are listed at Amazon at $14.99 each for pre-orders.
461. The new version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (with Richard Roxburgh as Holmes and Ian Hart as Watson) aired in Canada on Nov. 18, and in Britain on Dec. 26, and it was favorably reviewed by most Sherlockians who have commented on it. It will air in the United States on "Masterpiece Theater" on PBS-TV on Jan. 19.
462. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collections and the Canadian Institute for Mediterranean Studies will present Clifford S. Goldfarb's lecture on "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Dorando Affair: The Evolution of an Olympic Legend" at the Library at 4:00 pm on Feb. 15. The legend involves widelypublished suggestions that it was Conan Doyle whose assistance at the finish line resulted in Dorando's disqualification as the winner of the Marathon, and Cliff will offer facts that contradict the legend.
463. Further to the report (Oct 02 #4) on the Royal Society of Chemistry granting honoring fellowship to Sherlock Holmes, Steve Mirsky, in his column in Scientific American (Jan. 2003) has suggested other possibilities, including nominations to the American Podiatric Medical Association for Achilles (for his elucidation of the vital importance of foot health care); to the International Society of Entomology for Gregor Samsa (for serendipitous study of the social life of the common cockroach), and to the Royal Agricultural Society of England for Dr. John Watson (for being the quintessential banana).
464. James Hazeldine died on Dec. 11. He began his theatrical career at the age of 15 as assistant student stage manager for the Salford Repertory Theatre, and went on to act with the Royal Shakespeare Company, and in the West End and on Broadway, and he appeared in films and on television, and he played Brunton in Granada's "The Musgrave Ritual" (1986).
465. David R. Lenat has an interesting sales-list of Sherlockiana that includes some seldom-seen ephemera from the 1960s and 1970s and 1980s; his address is 3607 Corbin Street, Raleigh, NC 27612 <lenatbks@mindspring.com>.
466. Randall Stock reports that Michael Kurland has a new Sherlockian anthology due in February: MY SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2003; 368 pp., $24.95) is edited by Kurland and contains stories written from the viewpoints of Canonical characters other than Holmes and Watson. The authors include Kurland, Dick Lupoff, Gary Lovisi, Barbara Hambly, and Michael Mallory. Kurland has a web-site at <<http://www.michaelkurland.com>>, and he notes that there will be a Japanese translation of THE GREAT GAME.

- Jan 03 #1:
1. The schedule for the birthday festivities in New York appears to have stabilized at Wednesday-to-Sunday, for those who can manage (or survive) that long a weekend. This year featured dire warnings of a blizzard that never occurred, and an unusually large number of celebrants who came down with or came home with ailments that ranged from a black eye to gastroenteritis.
  2. The first event was an ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's for dedicated enthusiasts. Thursday's schedule featured the Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox, and a rendezvous with other Morley enthusiasts at McSorley's for lunch; an excellent staged reading of "The Blue Carbuncle" (dramatized by Andrew Joffe and starring Paul Singleton as Holmes, Mary Ellen Rich as Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Breckinridge); and the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker, Douglas G. Greene, who gave an entertaining and knowledgeable lecture at the Williams Club about "female ferrets" and the books in which the early female detectives starred.
  3. The Hotel Algonquin was a nice venue for an informal Mrs. Hudson Breakfast on Friday morning, and more than 142 people were on hand for the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Andrew Joffe and Paul Singleton read some of the letters written to Gillette in 1929 by celebrities congratulating him on the occasion of his last farewell tour; this was the 50th anniversary of the luncheon, and the 150th anniversary of William Gillette's birth. And Otto Penzler's afternoon open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  4. There were 170 on hand for the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars at the Union League Club, where Sherry Rose-Bond offered a cocktail-party toast to the Woman: Janice Fisher, who responded with comments on the twoeditor home she shares with her husband Steve Rothman, and left to dine at the Algonquin with others who have been the Woman). The dinner agenda included the usual toasts and traditions, with Bill Vande Water honoring Old Irregular Haycraft and Ely Liebow leading a responsive reading of the Musgrave Ritual in Yiddish. Other highlights of the evening included Philip Shreffler and Mary Ellen Rich enacting Holmes' dealings with a thoroughly confused travel agent arranging his itinerary for the Great Hiatus, and a grand rendition by Bruce Montgomery of a new version of "Aunt Clara" ("What Became of Old Sherlock" with lyrics by Al Rosenblatt).
  5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours: Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Ed Christenson ("Antonio"), Al Gregory ("The Grimpen Postmaster"), Susan Vizoskie ("Mrs. Saunders"), Joe Coppola ("The Stranger's Room"), and Mia Stampe ("The Dynamics of an Asteroid"); and the Two-Shilling Award (presented "for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty") to Don Novorsky.
  6. The Baskerville Bash also took place Friday evening, at the Manhattan Club and with more than 80 people on hand, and with entertainment that featured a presentation by the newsdesk of CNN (that's the Canonical News Network), a "You Bet Your Life" broadcast with Jay Pearlman starring as Groucho Marx, and an investigation of "The Case of the Missing Sherlettes" (who appear to be in Tahiti en route to the Andaman Islands).

7. Jan 03 #2: On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was as usual crowded with sellers and buyers, and shortly after noon The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Watson and Wodehouse) commandeered the lobby for their now-traditional Junior Bloodstain, which featured a reading of Anne Cotton's playlet "Sherlock Holmes and the Gentleman's Gentleman".
  8. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted more than 240 people to the National Arts Club, where Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies who have been honored as the Woman over the years, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported in verse on the events of the previous year and the previous evening. Bob Schultz was applauded as the new winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year (his article "Upon the Dating of Bloodstains" in the winter issue), and the Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from a raffle of Scott Bond's portrait of the winner (Evelyn Herzog) and from enthusiastic bidders in the traditional auction.
  9. The Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to this year's auction included The Curious Collectors of Baker Street (an attractive set of Sherlockian jewelry created by Maggie Schpak), Joe Coppola (a hand-crafted wooden clock with Sherlockian decorations), Don Hobbs (copies of Ron De Waal's first two bibliographies, inscribed to Dorothy Shaw), and Enrico Solito (a limited-edition plate created for the speakers at the conference arranged by Uno Studio in Holmes in Sesto Fiorentino in 2001).
  10. On Sunday about 60 locals and visiting long-weekenders gathered at Wylie's for a brunch arranged by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; the agenda was thoroughly French, and the first of many events that will celebrate the tenth anniversary of The Sherlock Holmes Society of France.
  11. And (for those who wish to plan ahead) the next birthday dinners will be held on Friday, Jan. 16, 2004. For those who wish to plan farther ahead, The Baker Street Irregulars are arranging a weekend in the Valley of Fear on Oct. 22-24, 2004; the event is open to all Sherlockians, but hotel and bus space is limited, and reservations are essential: only double rooms are available, and you should send a $50 (per person) deposit to Michael F. Whelan (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278).
  12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $22.50 a year ($25.00 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); there's a website at <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>.
  13. And yes, as usual, there were all sort of new books published just in time for the festivities, including a new facsimile of a manuscript ("Shoscombe Old Place"), available for purchase during the weekend and afterward, and I will have lots of reviews in the next issue of this newsletter.

14. Jan 03 #3: Christmas crackers are a long-standing Christmas-dinner tradition in Britain, and now elsewhere, including the U.S., where they come with "fortunes" that often are a series of joke, in English and in French. And Gayle Harris reports that one of the jokes in her Christmas cracker last month was: "Watson: Dites-moi Holmes, a quelle ecole etesvous alle? Holmes: Elementaire, mon cher Watson, elementaire."
  15. ExxonMobil Corp. announced in December that it will end its sponsorship of "Masterpiece Theatre" at the end of 2004. Mobil (now ExxonMobil) has been the only sponsor of the series since it first aired in 1971, contributing more than $250 million to PBS programs; its recent funding of "Masterpiece Theatre" is reported to have been about $9 million a year. An ExxonMobil spokeswoman said that: "We felt that the time had come for us to consider some alternative sponsorship and outreach activities," particularly in the area of public health and the environment. PBS-TV hopes to find new sponsors, but it's not easy to do that in the present economic climate: Mobil had already stopped funding "Mystery!", and there was no sponsor for that series' dramatization of Tony Hillerman's "Skinwalkers" in November.
  16. Al Hirschfeld died on Jan. 20. He began his artistic career in 1921 as art director for Selznick Studios, creating posters for "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" and other films, and in 1926 began contributing sketches of Broadway plays to the N.Y. Herald Tribune. In 1928 he was commissioned by the N.Y. Times to draw Harry Lauder, and Hirschfeld's energetic style made him one of America's best-known artists; he received a special Tony Award in 1975, and New York City officials declared him a living landmark in 1996. His caricatures of actors as Sherlock Holmes included Fritz Weaver, Paxton Whitehead (shown here), and Frank Langella for the N.Y. Times, and Basil Rathbone in a limited-edition print.

17. The Norwegian Explorers of Minnesota have published their "Christmas Annual 2002", edited by John Bergquist; the contents include Philip G. Bergem's examination of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, with a census of known copies, Gary K. Thaden's examination of Dr. Watson's library, and much more; the 46-page pamphlet costs $6.00 (postpaid), and checks (payable to The Norwegian Explorers) should be sent to John Bergquist, 3665 Ashbury Road, Eagen, MN 55122.
18. Edward Fox was awarded an OBE (Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) in the Queen's New Year's honours list. He played Dr. Watson on television in "Dr. Watson and the Darkwater Hall Mystery" (1974) and Major Alistair Ross on television in "The Crucifer of Blood" (1991).
19. The new version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" has now aired in Canada, Britain, and the United States (Canadians missed a few bits and pieces, and the "making of" featurette). Anglofile notes that Richard Roxburgh was the second choice for the role, which was offered first to Jeremy Northam, who had to decline due to prior commitments. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter offering detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($16.00 a year).

20. Jan 03 #4: Japanese readers have some interesting new books available, all translated by Masamichi Higurashi, who also has provided introductions, afterwords, photographs, and explanatory notes. Two of the books are hard-cover editions: SHERLOCK HOLMES DAI-HYAKKA-JITEN is Jack Tracy's ENCYCLOPAEDIA SHERLOCKIANA (Tokyo: Shobo Shinsha, 2002; 476 pp., Y4,800); and SHERLOCK HOLMES: BEIKA-GAI NO SATSUJIN is MURDER IN BAKER STREET, the 2001 anthology edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower (Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 2002; 400 pp., Y1,800). And six more titles have been added to the Aoi Tori Bunko MEITANTEI HOLMES series of children's paperbacks each with one of the long stories, or four or five of the short stories, cover artwork by Kazuyo Kazumi, and illustrations by Hitoshi Wakana and "Ki" (Tokyo: Kodansha, 2000-2002; 184-352 pp., Y530-720).
21. It's fascinating to see how useful 21st-century technology can be: mp3 is a compression program: the playing time on Worldtainment's mp3 CDs runs from 8:08 to 11:13 hours, and with excellent sound quality. And it's all portable: RadioShack currently offers a "road-ready" player for CDs and mp3 CDs for $79.99 (discounted from $99.99). Or you can play them on your computer (if your computer has a CD-ROM or DVD drive, and it's difficult to purchase a computer now without a CD-ROM or DVD drive).
22. Richard Horner died on Dec. 28. He was a Broadway theater-owner and producer who won a Tony award for the revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Moon for the Misbegotten" in 1974. He was one of the producers of Paul Giovanni's play "The Crucifer of Blood" on Broadway in 1978, and one of the executive producers when the play was broadcast on television in 1991.
23. A correction to my review of David Pirie's THE NIGHT CALLS (Dec 02 #5): the book is not based on the British television series "Murder Rooms": The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes". It's the other way round, as David has explained: the books are always written first. "They are not novelizations," David notes, "if they were, I'd get someone else to do it!" And there is indeed much more in the book than in the television program (his third book about Bell and Conan Doyle is due this year).
24. Patrick Horgan began his Sherlockian career playing Captain Gregg in the musical "Baker Street" in 1964, and went on to play Sherlock Holmes in the William Gillette play, and in "The Speckled Band" and in a television commercial, and to play William Gillette (in Kenneth Ludwig's play "Dramatic License"), making him one of the very few actors to have played both Sherlock Holmes and an actor who has played Sherlock Holmes. He also has read the entire Canon for the Library of Congress recordings for the blind, and for Worldtainment, which offers all the Sherlock Holmes stories, and "The Lost World", "The Poison Belt" and "The Leather Funnel", and Horgan's own book of Sherlockian scholarship "The Detection of Sherlock Holmes" on ten CDs in mp3 format (you'll need an mp3 player or a computer with an mp3 program). Horgan has an excellent voice, and an imaginative approach to Sherlockian scholarship (and in his book cheerfully describes the Baker Street Irregulars and its scion societies as "large groups of otherwise respectable people"). And it's delightful to see how useful the latest technology can be: the mp3 CDs cost $9.95 each, and more information is available at <<http://www.worldtainment.com>>; their postal address is 1002 Quentin Road, Brooklyn, NY 11223.

25. Jan 03 #5: "Going for a Record: LP Sparks an Odd Little Bidding War" was the headline on Tim Page's story in the Washington Post (Jan. 9) about an eBay bidding war for a recording of Bach's Sonatas and Partitas for Solo Violin by Johanna Martzy; the three-LP set sold for $4,906. More interesting to Sherlockians, perhaps, was a statement by rare-record dealer Lawrence F. Holdridge that "the greatest rarities of all would be the two discs the celebrated tenor Jean de Reszke (1850-1925) made in 1905 for the Fonotopia company. 'Those would be quite literally priceless,' he said. 'De Reszke made the records, but he was dissatisfied with the results and ordered the masters smashed and never made another record. Some test copies are supposed to have survived--but who knows?' De Reszke was perhaps the leading tenor of the late 19th century--imagine Pavarotti and Domingo rolled into one--so it is not surprising that there is a great deal of interest in anything he might have recorded." It was at the conclusion of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that Holmes suggested to Watson that they go to a concert by Jean and Edouard De Reszke in "Les Huguenots".
26. Sherlock Holmes is on the cover of the January catalog from Critics' Choice Video (Box 749, Itasca, IL 60143 (800-367-7765) <<http://www.ccvideo.com>>. Well, actually, it's Guy Henry, who played the title role in the television series "Young Sherlock" (1982), which is now available (for the first time) on three DVDs or videocassettes for $42.96. The catalog also has the new Roxburgh/Hart "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on DVD and cassette ($16.96), and three Rathbone/Bruce films ("Dressed to Kill", "The Woman in Green", and "Terror by Night") on DVD ($6.99 each).
27. Philip Attwell has kindly provided more information on British digital radio that's also available on the Internet. BBC 7 airs in Great Britain on DAB digital radio and on television channels on Freeview 78, Sky, and Digital Cable, and it's available (with schedules listed) worldwide on the Internet <<http://www.bbc.co.uk/radio>>. BBC 7 announced that they would air all the "Sherlock Holmes" stories, and since Dec. 17, 2002, they have been broadcasting the Merrison/Williams adaptations on weekdays. There is also a "Crime/Thriller" slot on weekdays that is now featuring sleuths such as Cadfael and Julie Enfield.
28. And ONEWORD is broadcast in Britain on DAB digital radio and on television channels on Freeview 85 and Sky 877, and it's available (with schedules) on the Internet <<http://oneword.co.uk>>. Edith Meiser's "Sherlock Holmes and the Christmas Bridge" (with John Stanley and Alfred Shirley, from 1947) was heard in the "Vintage Classics/Cult Comedy" slot this month. Philip also recommends <<http://www.mydigiguide.com>> as a useful site for finding upcoming Sherlock Holmes broadcasts on British radio and television.
29. Len Haffenden's souvenir for this month's annual dinner of The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia is a 16-page pamphlet reprinting his speech about "Sherlock Holmes and Mensa" (presented to the Pacific Northwest MENSA Convention last October); US $8.00 postpaid. Also available are the souvenir from last year's annual dinner, "Who Was H.B.?" ($5.00); the 36-page program for the society's commemoration of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Aug. 2001 ($8.00), and a 12-page "The Priory School Tyre Directional Guide" ($5.00). Checks payable to the Hansom Press, please and Len's address is 1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada.

30. Jan 03 #6: Walter Pond ("Brunton, the Butler, of Hurlstone") died on Jan. 11. He was an attorney, a Sherlockian scholar, and a dedicated collector; Julian Wolff once described Walter's collection of Sherlockiana as "one that cannot be surpassed in private hands," and that was true for decades:

- Walter owned a page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and complete manuscripts of "The Veiled Lodger" and "The Three Gables", a splendid copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, first editions in dust jackets, and many other treasures. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1970.
31. Jean Weidner is offering her Sherlockian and Doylean books on-line at the Advanced Book Exchange <<http://www.abebooks.com/home/JEANWEIDNER/>>; those who don't have access to the Web can request a copy from Jean (9421 North 50th Drive, Glendale, AZ 85302).
  32. The Silver Blaze, conceived by Thomas L. Stix, Sr., was run for the first time at Jamaica Race Course on Long Island in 1952; it was revived by The Baker Street Irregulars at historic Saratoga Race Track in upstate New York in 2000. The next running of the race at Saratoga will be on Aug. 2, and it will be a weekend event, with a brunch on Aug. 3. If you'd like to be on the mailing list, contact Lou Lewis (Box 2990, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) <lewisgreer@aol.com>; you can expect to receive full details shortly.
  33. MC Black advises overseas visitors that the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's first-Friday-of-the-month "club nights" at the New Commonwealth Club at 18 Northumberland Avenue (between Trafalgar Square and the Embankment underground station) will be discontinued after the meeting on Feb. 7, due to declining attendance.
  34. Michael Rieders, who was one of the panelists at the workshop on "The Adventure of the Devil's Foot" arranged by Marina Stajic at the annual meeting of the Society of Forensic Toxicologists in Detroit last year (May 02 #1 and Nov 02 #4), will repeat his presentation at National Medical Services in Willow Grove (near Philadelphia) on Feb. 13 at 6:00 pm. According to Rieders, "This humorous presentation will include time for audience solutions and ends with my toxicological conclusions!" If you would like to attend the event, please contact Gideon Hill 19038 (215-887-8110) or e-mail <gideonhill@earthlink.net>.
  35. And a few commercials: a 16-page list of the Investiture Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, the Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.25 postpaid. An 81-page list of 810 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 431 active societies, is $4.70 postpaid. A run of address labels for 354 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.55 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).
  36. The list of irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <<http://members.cox.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>>.
37. Feb 03 #1: Sorry about that: I omitted one Investiture from last month's report on the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars: David Greeney ("Uncle Ned"). It nicely appropriate, too, since David lives in Auckland, and so did Mary Sutherland's uncle.
  38. It was in "The Red-Headed League" that Holmes said, "'L'homme c'est rien--l'oeuvre c'est tout,' as Gustave Flaubert wrote to George Sand." The "January Sale Catalog" from David Schulson Autographs (234 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10122 (212-629-3939 <<http://schulsonautographs.com>>) offers an autograph letter from Sand to Flaubert, signed "Your old Troubadour" and dated Feb. 28, 1870, for $1,440 (discounted from $1,850). There's also an undated letter from Conan Doyle with literary content, offered for $1,465 (discounted from $1,850); the catalog suggests that the letter refers to THE HISTORY OF SPIRITUALISM, but the reference almost certainly is to THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA: ITS CAUSE AND CONDUCT.
  39. Debbie Clark spotted a tribute to Conan Doyle in the current catalog from Levenger (420 South Congress Avenue, Delray Beach, FL 33445) (800-544-0880) <<http://www.levenger.com>>: they offer a child's bookcase and show a photograph of Sir Arthur and the quote, "It is a great thing to start life with a small number of really good books which are your very own." Others have used the quote before, and it's from THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR (1907).
  40. Janet Hutchings, editor of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, was at the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars, and was applauded for continuing the tradition established decades ago by Fred Dannay of ensuring that EQMM issue that coincides with the annual dinner has Sherlockian content; there were four such items in the Feb. 2003 issue (Dec 02 #2). And the Feb. 2003 issue of Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine had Sherlockiana: a reprint of August Derleth's Solar Pons pastiche "The Adventure of the Proper Comma".
  41. Fans of John Mortimer's delightful legal eagle Horace Rumpole will welcome news of plans afoot to create The Rumpole Society of Great Britain; members are to include "devotees of John Mortimer's writings, all branches of the legal profession, and raffish free spirits who down cheap claret." Additional information is available from the society (9 Alba Place, London W11 1LQ, England) <rumpolesociety@yahoo.com>.
  42. The comic-book series RUSE continues, with Simon Archard and Emma Bishop: a new story began in issue #15 (Jan. 2003; $2.95), and there's a report of a spin-off series ARCHARD'S AGENTS (also $2.95); and issue #4 in the second volume of THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN ($3.50) extends the account of the efforts of members of the League to combat against the Martians who have invaded England.
  43. Paulette Greene offers copies of two older items: Madeleine B. Stern's 1982 monograph THE GAME'S A HEAD: A PHRENOLOGICAL STUDY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, with illustrations by Sam Greene; and Trevor H. Hall's 1986 monograph THE LAST CASE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: IVY JOHNSON BULL OF BORLEY ($35.00 each postpaid; please pay by check or money order). Paulette's address is: 7152 Via Palomar, Boca Raton, FL 33433) <greenebooks@juno.com>.

44. Feb 03 #2: Cynthia Harvey was at the George Eastman House (in Rochester, N.Y.) on Jan. 12 for the world-premiere screening of a new 97-minute restoration of John Barrymore's "Sherlock Holmes" (1922). A second print, with the missing original intertitles, was discovered in the Eastman vaults a few years ago, and was used to create a new and better version of the film, which was based on William Gillette's play.
  45. The December 2002 issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers interesting tributes to Julian Wolff by Jon Lellenberg and John Bergquist, and reports from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  46. Bill Mauldin died on Jan. 22. He was serving as an Army sergeant during World War II, drawing cartoons for the 45th Division News and for Stars & Stripes, when he created his war-weary characters Willie and Joe, and won his first Pulitzer Prize in 1945. He went on to a career as an editorial cartoonist, winning a second Pulitzer 1959, and he used Sherlockian themes in at least three of his editorial cartoons; this one, published on July 1, 1987, showed Ed Meese and was captioned "He's got a rear-view mirror on his magnifying glass."
  47. Further to the item (Nov 02 #3) about the museum show "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" now at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield, Mass., (through May 6), Maureen Corrigan (book reviewer on National Public Radio's "Fresh Air" and associate editor of MYSTERY AND SUSPENSE WRITERS) will lecture on "The Haunting of Sherlock Holmes" at 7:00 pm on Apr. 12 (emphasizing "The Hound of the Baskervilles", which she calls a "giant boggy metaphor for the human mind"). 39 South Street, Pittsfield, MA 01201 (413-443-7171) <<http://www.berkshireremuseum.org>>.

48. Alexian Gregory <grimpen@nac.net> offers "The ABC of BSI Investitures" as a Word 97 attachment (available only by e-mail); it's an alphabetical listing of all Baker Street Investitures and their years of bestowal.
49. Tom Wheeler, who is about to publish FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON, a book that identifies more than 200 places in London associated with Sherlock Holmes, will guide a tour exploring Sherlock Holmes' London on May 19-27; he'll be happy to provide more information about the tour, and if your spouse isn't interested in spending all that time on Sherlock Holmes, he also has tickets for the Chelsea Flower Show. He's at 6875 Honey Locust Cove, Memphis, TN 38119 <londonsecrets@london.com>.
50. "Non-Canonical Holmes" is the title of the 22nd annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium, in Dayton on Mar. 14-16; the speakers will focus on stories, novels, plays, comic books, and television and radio shows not written by Conan Doyle. Additional information is available from Cathy Gill (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.

51. Feb 03 #3: The third volume in The Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series was unveiled during the birthday festivities: G. K. CHESTERTON'S SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited and with an introduction by Steven Doyle, offers a facsimile of Chesterton's illustrations for a never-published edition of the stories, scholarly articles on Chesterton by Dale Ahlquist and Pasquale Accardo, commentary on the artwork by Scott Bond, and reprints of four Sherlockian essays by Chesterton. It is delightful to see the illustrations, owned and preserved by the Lilly Library at Indiana University in Bloomington, now widely available, with interesting discussion of the artist (and writer) and his work. $35.00 plus shipping ($8.00, or $9.50 outside North America) from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>.
52. Also available is a limited-edition folio with hand-colored versions of the 19 Chesterton drawings, suitable for framing; there are 50 numbered copies of the folio, and the cost is $75.00 postpaid (see the paragraph above for the address and methods of payment).
53. Mary Ellis died on Jan. 30, at the age of 105 (including, according to her obituary in the N.Y. Times, the three years that Hollywood publicists subtracted in the 1930s). She signed a four-year contract with the Metropolitan Opera in New York at the age of 18, then acted on Broadway (starring in "Rose-Marie") and in London, and retired from the stage in 1970 but continued acting on radio and television; she appeared in Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series twice: as Lady Florence in "The Eligible Bachelor" (1993), and, in her last role, as Mary Maberly in "The Three Gables" (1994).
54. Paul Herbert reports that Paul Giovanni's play "The Crucifer of Blood" will be performed Nov. 7-23 at the Indianapolis Civic Theatre (at 1200 West 38th Street, Indianapolis, IN 46208) (317-923-4597) <www.civictheatre.org>.
55. The Mystery Writers of America have announced their nominees for the Edgar Allan Poe Awards, which will be presented at the MWA's banquet in New York on May 1. "The West End Horror" (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from Nicholas Meyer's novel, and produced last year at the Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor, N.Y.) was nominated for a "best play" Edgar. And a special Raven Award (for outstanding achievement in the mystery field outside the realm of creative writing) will be presented to Otto Penzler, owner of the Mysterious Bookshop in New York.
56. Planning for Bouchercon 2003 continues: the venue is Las Vegas, on Oct. 16-19, with James Lee Burke, Ian Rankin, and Ruth Rendell as guests of honor; Deen Kogan heads the organizing committee (507 South Eighth Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147 <<http://www.bconvegas2003.org>>).
57. "221B Coronation Street" was the subject line on David Hough's message to The Hounds of the Internet, quoting the Manchester Evening News (Feb. 7): The set for Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" no longer exists, but Granada has revamped the set for its long-running soap opera "Coronation Street" to include a pizza parlour that has the doorway to 221B Baker Street, mock glass paneling and numbers intact. "It's a superstitious thing," Granada's production chief said, "because it's a chunk of history, the doorway to Sherlock's lodgings, and we're hoping it might bring us luck."

58. Feb 03 #4: GreenPrints ("The Weeder's Digest") is an interesting and lighthearted quarterly that has published four amusing pastiches by Jeff Taylor about garden detective Sherlock Jones (and his assistant Ms. Bubbles Watson: "The Carrot Caper" (summer 1997); "The Return of Sherlock Jones" (summer 1998); "A Midwinter Mystery" (winter 1998); and "The Case of the Speckled Slug" (summer 1999). Box 1355, Fairview, NC 28730 (800-569-0602) <<http://www.greenprints.com>>; $22.97 a year.
59. Bill Hyder watched the BBC television program "Queen and Country" broadcast on PBS-TV this month, about how the relationship between Queen Elizabeth II and the British people have changed during the fifty years she has been on the throne, and reports that at the conclusion of the program the narrator described the Queen as "the one fixed point in a changing age." "Sherlock Holmes couldn't have put it better," Bill notes.
60. Murray Shaw died on Dec. 18, 2002. He was a kitchen designer and consultant, and author of the textbook PROFESSIONAL KITCHEN DESIGN; in the Sherlockian world Murray was an enthusiastic member of Moulton's Prospectors in Phoenix, and an author of pastiches for young readers, including MATCH WITS WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES, a series of eight children's books published by Carolrhoda Books from 1990 to 1993. And two other tales (ANATOMY OF TWO MURDERS and SHERLOCK HOLMES FINDS THE LOST DUTCHMAN MINE) have been published in Otto Penzler's pamphlet series of pastiches and parodies.
61. Paul Martin notes that a new bargain-books catalog from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031) <<http://www.edwardrhamilton.com>> offers SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE COMPLETE ILLUSTRATED SHORT STORIES, reprinted from The Strand Magazine ($9.95 discounted from $12.95); Larry Millett's THE DISAPPEARANCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($15.95 discounted from $23.95); Alan Barnes' SHERLOCK HOLMES ON SCREEN ($17.95 discounted from $24.95); and June Thomson's HOLMES AND WATSON ($5.95 discounted from $24.00).
62. Laurie Fraser Manifold's artwork has enhanced the Baskerville Bash in recent years, and she has created two imaginative booklets to entertain those who remember cutting out and coloring and enjoying paper dolls: MRS. MANIFOLD'S CUT OUT & FOLD 221B FURNITURE and HOLMES & WATSON AT HOME & AFIELD: PAPER FIGURES & WARDROBE TO COLOUR & CUT cost $12.00 each postpaid, and her address is Box 387, Shenorock, NY 10587.
63. E. W. McGinley's AN ILLUSTRATED MONOGRAPH ON THE USE OF FIREARMS IN THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published in 1995, is now available in a second (revised and expanded) edition, offering a knowledgeable exploration of the topic, concentrating on the weapons used by Holmes and Watson. The 50-page booklet costs $12.50 postpaid from Joseph Coppola, 103 Kenny Drive, Fayetteville, NY 13066.
64. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes" is the title of an exhibition of material from Fred Kittle's collection of Doyleana at the Newberry Library in Chicago from Apr. 9 through July 12 (60 West Walton Street, Chicago, IL 60610) <<http://www.newberry.org>>. There will be special festivities on Apr. 11 (a dinner and a private showing) and Apr. 12 (a lecture by Richard Lancelyn Green); additional information is available from Donald J. Terras (2535 Sheridan Road, Evanston, IL 60201) <d-terras@neu.edu>.

65. Feb 03 #5: Marcello Truzzi died on Feb. 9, He was a sociologist and one of the founders of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal in 1976, but then resigned because he considered it more propagandistic than scientific; in 1981 he founded and directed the Center for Scientific Anomalies Research, and he was a skeptical friend of many self-proclaimed psychics. As an author his books included textbooks on sociology and a cookbook for witches that called for ingredients such as eye of newt, an article (with Scot Morris) on "Sherlock Holmes as a Social Scientist" in Psychology Today (Dec. 1971), and a chapter about "Sherlock Holmes: Applied Social Psychologist" in THE HUMANITIES AS SOCIOLOGY: AN INTRODUCTORY READER (1973).

66. Rose Louise Hovick, invited by The Baker Street Irregulars to the cocktail party before their annual dinner in 1943, is the subject of an interesting article by Laura Jacobs in the March issue of Vanity Fair. There's no mention of the BSI, but "Taking It *All* Off" offers a fine explanation of why those at the dinner enjoyed telling family and friends that they had had a drink with Gypsy Rose Lee.
67. Arrangements for The Silver Blaze at Saratoga Race Track have now been finalized: there will be a buffet luncheon at the Rail Pavilion (with a maximum of 60 people) on Aug. 2, and a buffet brunch and program at the Prime Hotel & Conference Center on Aug. 3, all for $100 per person. The deadline for reservations is May 1; checks (payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) should be sent to Lou Lewis, 11 Raymond Avenue #24, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603.
68. The U.S. Postal Service has continued its "Chinese New Year" series, honoring the Year of the Ram, or the Goat or the Sheep (depending on which calendar you consult). Goats and sheep are mentioned in many stories, but both are can be found only in one ("The Hound of the Baskervilles").
69. Jon V. Wilmunen died on Jan. 13. He taught art in the Mountain Iron-Buhl school system in Minnesota, and in the 1960s and 1970s his amusing artwork and parodies were published by The Musgrave Ritualists Beta, The Three Students Plus, and his own society The Gamekeepers of Northern Minnesota, and in The Baker Street Journal (Sept. 1965 and Mar. 1966).
70. Further to my mention (Jan 03 #2) of a new facsimile of a manuscript, THE ADVENTURE OF SHOSCOMBE ABBEY, now owned by the Fondation Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Lausanne, has been published by the Bibliotheque cantonale et universitaire, with an introduction (in French) by Vincent Delay (president of the Societe d'etudes holmesiennes de la Suisse romande) and two essays (one in French and the other in English) by Lausanne University professor Ernest Giddey (whose CRIME ET DETECTION: ESSAI SUR LES STRUCTURES DU ROMAN POLICIER DE LANGUE ANGLAISE was published in 1990). Manuscripts are a splendid way to watch an author write, adding and subtracting and refining, and as with other facsimiles, Sherlockians will find some interesting changes in the story. The cost of the new facsimile is $25.00 (plus $12.00 shipping for one copy), and you can order from Laurent Dubois (atelier photo), Bibliotheque cantonale et universitaire, Dorigny, CH-1015 Lausanne, Switzerland <laurent.dubois@bcu.unil.ch>; credit-card orders welcome.

71. Feb 03 #6: Stacy Keach Sr. died on Feb. 13. He was a drama teacher and an actor, and father of the actor Stacy Keach and the actor-director James Keach. He began his career in films as a contract player at Universal Pictures, where he also was dialogue director for "The Scarlet Claw" (1944). He developed, produced, and directed "Tales of the Texas Rangers" on radio and television, and appeared in hundreds of films, radio and television programs, and commercials over more than 50 years.
72. There have been many weekends with Sherlock Holmes at the Victorian Villa Inn over the years, and now Professor Moriarty on hand to entertain visitors, with weekend events scheduled for Mar. 22, Apr. 26, and May 13. Additional information is available from the management (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094 (800-348-3445) <<http://www.avictorianvilla.com>>.
73. Leslie Fiedler died on Jan. 29. He was a noted, and provocative, literary critic who called himself a "literary anthropologist." He was a respected teacher as well, in the United States and Europe, and he contributed an introduction to an edition of MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES published by Schocken Books in 1976.
74. The East Lynne Theater Company will present a staged reading (with live piano accompaniment) of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" on Mar. 7 and 8 during a "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J.; the company's phone number is 609-884-5898 <<http://www.eastlynnecompany.org>>.
75. Peter O'Toole has decided to accept his honorary Oscar, and is expected to attend the ceremony in March. According to Anglofile, O'Toole had declined the award earlier because he was "still in the game and might win the lovely bugger outright," but was told by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences that the award was meant not as a coda to his career but rather as a tribute. O'Toole (who was Billy Wilder's first choice for the title role in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes") was the voice of Sherlock Holmes on four Australian animations of the long stories (1985), and played Conan Doyle in the film "FairyTale: A True Story" (1997). Anglofile is a monthly newsletter offering detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($16.00 a year).
76. Jay Hyde (proud owner of a Scottish terrier) observed the Westminster Kennel Club's best-of-breed competition on Feb. 10, and noted the winner: Ch Friendship Hill Dr. Watson, whose sire was Ch So What Moriarty. Details at <http://www.westminsterkennelclub.org/2003/scotty\_r.html>.
77. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, EPISODE 6, read by Edward Hardwicke, is the latest set of audiocassette available from CSA Telltapes, and Hardwicke is excellent as always; there are two cassettes, and the stories are "The Priory School", "The Red-Headed League", and "The Blue Carbuncle" (issue by Tangled Web Audio in 1996 as SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF AVARICE). CSA Telltapes's address is: 6a Archway Mews, 241a Putney Bridge Road, London SW15 2PE, England) <www.csatelltapes.demon.co.uk>; the new set costs £9.99 postpaid, and CSA offers other sets of the Sherlock Holmes stories.

78. Mar 03 #1: Erik Larson's THE DEVIL IN THE WHITE CITY (New York: Crown Books, 2003; 464 pp., $25.95) is an examination of the planning for the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893, and of Herman Webster Mudgett, the serial murderer who built and ran the World's Fair Hotel in which many of his victims died. Mudgett used the alias H. H. Holmes, and at least two reviewers have suggested that Mudgett renamed himself after the famous detective. But Larson doesn't say that in the book. What he does say (on page 44) about Mudgett's arrival in Chicago is: "There in July 1886, the year Sir Arthur Conan Doyle introduced his detective to the world, Mudgett registered his name as Holmes."
79. The fifth volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with a interesting introduction by David Stuart Davies, who discusses the perils and pitfalls of bringing a star out of retirement (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2002; 150 pp., $29.95); as in previous volumes, the annotations and appendices are based upon new and old Sherlockian scholarship. The book costs $33.70 postpaid (or $35.70 outside the U.S.) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46260).
80. "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951) has been released on DVD (by Twentieth Century-Fox Home Video, $19.98) with commentary by director Robert Wise and Nicholas Meyer, and a 70-minute "making of" featurette. The film is a science-fiction classic, with Michael Rennie as Klaatu and with Elmer Davis (a member of The Baker Street Irregulars as well as an early member of The Red Circle of Washington) as himself as a newscaster reporting on the alien spaceship.
81. Reported: DURKHEIM IS DEAD! SHERLOCK HOLMES IS INTRODUCED TO SOCIOLOGICAL THEORY, by Arthur Asa Berger (AltaMira Press, 2003; 200 pp., $70.00 cloth or $19.95 paper); "in this sociology textbook/mystery novel, students can join Sherlock Holmes and Watson as they discover a new area ripe for acrimony and intrigue: social theory."
82. The Sherlockians in France continue to publish intriguing material, including Le Catalogue de la Franco-Midland numero 3, which offers a guided tour (written by Yves-Charles Fercocq and Wladimir V. Bogomoletz) to the Pere Lachaise cemetery, where visitors will find many graves and monuments of people mentioned in or with connections to the Canon. It's in French and English, and nicely illustrated by Jean-Pierre Cagnat, and it's available free as an Acrobat Reader file from Thierry Saint-Joanis <mail@mycrofts.net>, or ink-on-paper for $5.00 postpaid; dollar checks payable to Elisabeth Mignon

- and euro checks payable to SSHF can be sent to Thierry (26 avenue de la Republique, 75011 Paris, France), and credit-card orders are welcome by mail or e-mail.
83. Reported: "The Mystery of the Mummy" (The Adventure Company, $19.99); a new computer game ("with his signature pipe in hand, super-sleuth Holmes takes kids to a turn-of-the-century Victorian mansion to find a missing archeologist and Egyptian mummy"). According to a review in the Washington Post on Mar. 2, the likeliest audience for the game is teenagers with time for tedious brain twisters ("Take copious notes and save often, and you might get the game done. But you might not care to make the effort.").

  84. Mar 03 #2: Stephen H. Tolins ("John Straker") died on Feb. 24, 2003. He served with distinction as a doctor in the U.S. Navy, retiring with the rank of Captain, and taught surgery at Albert Einstein College of Medicine and at New York Medical College. Steve was a member of many Sherlockian societies in New York and Connecticut, and his articles about Canonical medicine appeared in The Baker Street Journal, Prescott's Press, and Canadian Holmes; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1991.
  85. Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place B8016, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-884-2637) <<http://www.bitsandpieces.com>> offers its mystery jigsaw puzzle "The Watson Inheritance" discounted to $6.99 (from $10.99); item 04-U0140-007.
  86. Details (and a registration form) for the twelfth annual Watsonian weekend (now a joint event with The STUD Sherlockian Society) on May 2-4, are now available from Susan Diamond and Allan Devitt (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@attbi.com>. The schedule includes dinner on Friday (with a performance by Sherlockian thespian Paul Singleton); brunch on Saturday, followed by an excursion to the Newberry Library to view the exhibit of Conan Doyle material from Fred Kittle's collection, and a pizza supper; and the annual running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Track on Sunday.
  87. Karen Murdock spotted a report in This Is Local London (Feb. 19) that Mayday Hospital in Croydon is renaming its wards in honor of some of the Croydon's best-known figures. Arthur Conan Doyle will be one of the people to be honored.
  88. James G. Jewell died on Feb. 27. He was a stalwart member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches of Philadelphia, one of the editors of and contributors to their anthology MORE LEAVES FROM THE COPPER BEECHES (1976), and an energetic, persistent, and always genial sales committee for the society's publications.
  89. Ruth Berman has reported that the most recent issue of the literary magazine "The North Stone Review" (2002, n. 14) includes "Ciphers", a 16-line poem by Mary d'Angelo that alludes to "The Dancing Men"; there's much more non-Sherlockian material in the magazine, which costs $14.00 (Box 14098, Minneapolis, MN 55414).
  90. Issue #53 of SHERLOCK offers its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise); the contents include commentary (by Bert Coules) on the recent Roxburgh/Hart version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (with a report of rumors that the producers are considering a sequel that would have Holmes and Watson investigating the strange mystery of Dorian Gray, and (by Gavin Collinson) on "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes", and (by Richard Valley) on transvestism and the world of Sherlock Holmes. SHERLOCK is published bi-monthly and subscriptions cost £23.70 (U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/ $40.00 (elsewhere); their address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Or you can order from their American agent: Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.

  91. Mar 03 #3: Walter Scharf died on Feb. 24. He began his musical career in Los Angeles in 1934 as an arranger for Rudy Vallee's orchestra, and then turned to com-posing and arranging film scores; he worked on more than 200 films and television programs and received ten Academy Award nominations. And his film credits included some of the original music in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939).
  92. Collectors of the Sherlock Holmes stories in various languages can add one more to the list: American Sign Language. Three videocassettes are available, with "The Blue Carbuncle", "The Red-Headed League", and "The Speckled Band" signed by Gilbert Eastman (in costume as Sherlock Holmes) and Patrick Graybill (as Dr. Watson), with voice-over narration, and a short biography of Conan Doyle at the end of each cassette. $39.95 each or $107.95 for all three (plus shipping), and orders can be sent to Sign Media (4020 Blackburn Lane, Burtonsville, MD 20866) (800-475-4756) <<http://www.signmedia.com>>.
  93. HearthSong (Box 1050, Madison, VA 22727 (800-325-2502) <<http://www.hearthsong.com>> has a Sherlockian-themed cover on the box for a fingerprint kit in a new mail-order catalog (item 724165, $9.95); the kit includes "dusting powder, fluffy feathers for dusting, tape squares to lift prints, print identification cards, a magnifying glass, and a comprehensive 16-page instruction booklet full of interesting facts" (it's recommended for ages 8 and up. I confess that I'm not sure that forensic experts still use fluffy feathers).
  94. Christie's is offering the third part of Richard M. Lackritz's collection of detective fiction on Apr. 8, at 20 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020 (212-636-2010) <<http://www.christies.com>>, with some attractive modern material and some older literature that includes Sherlockian editions, a manuscript letter from Conan Doyle to Grant Richards, and signed photographs of William Gillette and Basil Rathbone.
  95. The March issue of The Holmes & Watson Report offers a thoughtful editorial by Brad Keefauver on what is so important about 221B Baker Street, which he describes as a "container of sorts that held within its cozy confines something bigger than the sum of its ingredients," and interesting suggestions by Jennie Paton on why Sherlockian films are or aren't successful; the periodical costs $16.00 a year (for six issues) or $22.00 outside North America, or $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
  96. It was in "The Five Orange Pips" that Watson wrote that he was "deep in one of Clark Russell's fine sea-stories," and that sea-story may have been THE DEATH SHIP, which was first published in a three-volume edition in 1888 in London and which is available again, with an introduction (and an afterword about Charles Doyle) by Hugo Koch. The first edition was not illustrated, but the new edition has appropriate artwork by Charles Doyle, Gustav Dore, and F. W. Hayes, selected by Koch from other sources; 336 pp., $41.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh at The Battered Silicon Dispatch Box, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L9N 1S0, Canada.

  97. Mar 03 #4: Further to the report (Feb 03 #2) on Thomas B. Wheeler's FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON, you don't need to go on his tour in May in order to have a copy of the book, which has 54 pp. and lists more than 200 Sherlockian sites, by adventure and by closest underground station. It costs $15.00 postpaid ($20.00 outside the U.S.); his address is 6875 Honey Locust Cove, Memphis, TN 38119 <londonsecrets@london.com>, and credit-card orders are welcome.
  98. Martin Breese has moved (Breese Books, 10 Hanover Crescent, Brighton, East Sussex BN2 9SB, England) <www.sherlockholmes.co.uk>, and offers discounts on more than a dozen pastiches written by Val Andrews, John Hall, William Seil, and others; details on that, and on his other titles, are available by mail or at his web-site.
  99. Mary Campbell ("Brenda Tregennis") died on Mar. 17. She was a librarian at the University of Toronto, and an enthusiastic member of The Bootmakers of Toronto. Mary was their archivist for many years, and won awards for the best paper presented at a meeting in 1977 and for the best paper

- published in Canadian Holmes in 1983; she also was an active member of The Bootmaker Players, often performing as Mrs. Hudson, and was honored as a Master Bootmaker in 1985. Mary also was "Mrs. Merrilow" in The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and she received her Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 2002.
100. The Sherlock Holmes Review sponsored five Sherlockian symposia from 1987 to 1997, and there will be a new one on Nov. 8-9 in Indianapolis, sponsored by Wessex Press/Gasogene Books. "From Gillette to Brett: Sherlock Holmes on Stage, Screen, & Radio" will feature Edward Hardwicke and Nicholas Meyer as special guests, and Susan Dahlinger, David Stuart Davies, Chris Gullo, Paul Herbert, and Gordon Kelley as speakers. You can contact Steven Doyle (540 West Sycamore Street, Zionsville, IN 46077 <sdoyle221@aol.com> for information on how to register for the event.
  101. William S. Dorn's latest CD-ROM is SOME SHERLOCKIAN MORPHS, and it's an intriguing demonstration of what can be done with computers: you can watch 20 Sherlockian graphics morph into other Sherlockian graphics, comparing various actors with other actors, or with Paget or Steele illustrations, Holmes undisguised with Holmes disguised, etc. His address is 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210; and the postpaid cost is $13.03 (to Colorado) or $12.95 (other U.S.) or CA$22.00 (to Canada) or $15.85 (elsewhere).
  102. There's interesting news of new DVD releases in the latest issue of Scarlet Street (#47): advertisements for "Murder by Decree" (with audio commentary by director Bob Clark and other added-value material such as DVD-ROM of the original screenplay) from Anchor Bay Entertainment; the five two-hour Granada "Sherlock Holmes" programs from MPI Home Video; and some older material from Sinister Cinema: "The Sign of Four" (1932, with Arthur Wontner), "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1936, with Bruno Guttner, in German), "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959, with Peter Cushing), and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1979, with Vasily Livanov, in Russian subtitled in English). The magazine costs $42.00 a year (for six issues); the address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>. Sinister Cinema's address Box 4369 (Dept. S), Medford, OR 97501 <<http://www.sinistercinema.com>>.
103. Mar 03 #5: Reported: Svend Petersen's A SHERLOCK HOLMES ALMANAC, which he compiled and published 1956, now is available in a second edition, revised and expanded by Carl Will William Thiel, Karen Murdock, Frank Darlington, Edwin Christenson, and George A. Vanderburgh; the 388-page book is available for $41.00 postpaid from The Battered Silicon Dispatch Box at Box 240, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
  104. Norman Davis and Linda Crane report that they will be selling much of their Sherlockian collection (including "the interesting, arcane, desirable, and just plain weird") at auction on eBay <<http://www.ebay.com>> in weekly offerings beginning on Apr. 5 and continuing for many weeks; they'll include "BSI" in the title of each item, and their seller name is "bsi_and_ash".
  105. "...that one glance told him that Cleveland in Ohio possessed the men whom he was in pursuit of," we are told (in "A Study in Scarlet"). The U.S. Postal Service has honored the 200th anniversary of Ohio's statehood.
  106. Sorry about that: the production of "The Crucifer of Blood" on Nov. 7-23 in Indianapolis (Feb 03 #3) won't be seen this year; the play actually was produced there in 1997, but the year was omitted from the flier I received last month.
  107. The new Britannia mail-order catalog has two pages of Sherlockian material, including James Sadler teapots and a mini bar set. And (due for release on Apr. 8) "Tommy & Tuppence: Partners in Crimes" on DVD; this London Weekend Television series was based on Agatha Christie's stories and starred James Warwick and Francesca Annis, and included an episode ("Finessing the King") in which Tommy and Tuppence go to a fancy-dress ball dressed as Dr. Watson and Sherlock Holmes.
  108. Sheldon Reynolds died on Jan. 25. He made his mark in television as producer and writer of the syndicated series "Foreign Intrigue" (1951-1955), and directed some of the episodes as well as the 1956 feature film that starred Robert Mitchum. His next series was "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" in 1954, starring Ronald Howard and H. Marion Crawford, and his later work included the series "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1981), with Geoffrey Whitehead and Donald Pickering. The second series was made in Poland while Reynolds was married to Andrea Reynolds, and production involved a dispute with the Polish authorities that resulted in Andrea temporarily lodged in a Polish jail; Reynolds later said that his greatest mistake was getting her out. He did change his mind, allowing that his greatest mistake was introducing Andrea to his friend Claus von Bulow; she abandoned Reynolds and energetically claimed credit for von Bulow's acquittal in his second trial for the attempted murder of his wife Sunny. Sheldon Reynolds was inventive and optimistic, and a delightful raconteur about his many years in television and film.
  109. Reported: a sidebar in the Jan.-Feb. issue of Book magazine on "the battle of the side-kicks," ranking supporting characters such as Dr. Watson, Hawk (from the Spenser novels), and Asta (Nick and Nora's dog). Hawk won first prize, and Sherlock Holmes (husband and mentor to Mary Russell in the series of novels by Laurie R. King) came in second.
110. Mar 03 #6: Phil Attwell notes that the film "Minority Report" (2002) now is available on DVD, with added-value special features that include discussion by director Steven Spielberg, who talks about the names of the three pre-cogs who are able to "see" murders before they happen: the twins Arthur and Dashiell were named after Arthur Conan Doyle and Dashiell Hammett, and Agatha after Agatha Christie.
  111. Carolyn and Joel Senter have issued a new catalog from Classic Specialties (Box 1958, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>> (877-233-3823) with a nice assortment of Sherlockian books and other material.
  112. And now for some film news, if you're willing to count rumor and gossip as news. There is a long list of past entertainment-world announcements that might be described as huffery-puffery: we never got to see "Sherlock Holmes Meets Dracula" (1986), which was persistently reported with Tony Randall as Holmes and Sid Caesar as Dracula ("Tony Randall asked me to inform you that unfortunately, he's never heard of the project," a public-relations staffer wrote to me in 1994, "although, he thought it sounded like a great idea"). Or a 1991 "Sherlock Holmes" television series starring Stephen Fry as Sherlock Holmes and Hugh Laurie as Dr. Watson. Or the 2001 film loosely based on "The Sign of Four" with Alan Rickman as Holmes, Gabriel Byrne as Watson, and Catherine Zeta-Jones as Holmes' love interest.
  113. So here's some of the more recent buzz: "221bCAUSE" is a "Sherlock Holmes thriller" about a modern-day female Sherlock Holmes, with Britney Spears in talks about playing the lead (Sarah Michelle Gellar and Jennifer Love Hewitt saw the script and declined); the [London] Sun ran an amusing photo of Britney in a deerstalker on Jan. 3, and many readers didn't notice that the paper stated it was a fake. "Baker Street Irregulars" (the story of "the kids who were the secret army of Sherlock Holmes") is to star Malcolm McDowell as Holmes and Christopher Lee as Moriarty. And "Holmes and Watson" (an action-adventure) will be set in modern-day London ("the heir to the Holmes legacy will be portrayed as a twenty-something playboy who uses his talents mainly to pick up girls--until he is unwittingly drawn back into the family detective business by a young, sexy Dr. Jane Watson").
  114. Karen Murdock (1212 Yale Avenue SE, Minneapolis, MN 55414) offers Sherlockian bumper stickers (11.5" wide, with bright green background); $2.00 each, or three for $5.00. If you're outside the U.S., please send currency.
115. Apr 03 #1: There's still time to reserve for this year's running of The Silver Blaze at historic Saratoga Race Track in upstate New York: the event is sponsored by The Baker Street Irregulars, and the agenda will include a buffet luncheon at the Rail Pavilion on Aug. 2, with honors for the winner of the race, and a buffet brunch and Sherlockian program at the Prime Hotel & Conference Center on Aug. 3, all for $100 a person. Checks for $100

- (payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) should be sent to Lou Lewis at 11 Raymond Avenue #24, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603; he'll also be happy to provide information on hotel accommodations in the area.
116. For those who missed Ian McKellen as Sherlock Holmes in the "Hot Air Balloon Mystery Theater" skit broadcast by NBC-TV on "Saturday Night Live" on Mar. 16, 2002, Ratana Ngim reports that there's an image at the web-site at <<http://img-www.theonering.net/images/170302-snlmckellen30.JPG>>.
117. Robin W. Winks died on Apr. 7. He was a professor of history at Yale University, with special interests in the environment, detective fiction, and the history of espionage. His reviews of mysteries appeared in the New Republic, the Washington Post, and the Boston Globe, and he wrote an introduction for a 1992 reprint of Howard Haycraft's THE ART OF MYSTERY FICTION. Winks edited THE HISTORIAN AS DETECTIVE: ESSAYS ON EVIDENCE (1969) and DETECTIVE FICTION: A COLLECTION OF CRITICAL ESSAYS (1980), and he wrote MODUS OPERANDI: AN EXCURSION INTO DETECTIVE FICTION (1982) and with Maureen Corrigan won an Edgar Award from the Mystery Writers of America for MYSTERY AND SUSPENSE WRITERS: THE LITERATURE OF CRIME, DETECTION AND ESPIONAGE (1998). He often paid tribute to Conan Doyle, and once suggested that "When all is said and done, crime fiction is about the same craft as any fiction: writing well."
118. A new catalog from McCranie's offers a wide range of pipe tobacco in tins, among them McClelland's "221-B Black Shag" and "221-B Arcadia", and Peterson's "Sherlock Holmes". McCranie's address is 4143 Park Road, Charlotte, NC 28209 (800-523-8554) <www.mccranies.com>.
119. The comic-book series FANTASTIC STORIES (Mar 02 #2), created by Don Marquez and published by Amryl <<http://www.amryl.com>> continues, with the first two parts (six and seven pages) of a three-part adaptation of "When the World Screamed" (Apr. 2002 and Dec. 2002); $2.95 each in comic-book shops, or you can order from Don Marquez (1313 Young Wo Circle, Folsom, CA 95630), $3.00 each plus $3.00 shipping per order (please pay by check or via PayPal). He has a web-site at <<http://www.cartune.land.com>>, and he will sign the covers on request.
120. Reported: THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME, by Mark Haddon (New York: Doubleday, 2003; 224 pp., $22.95); according to Publishers Weekly (Apr. 7), "Christopher Boone, the autistic 15-year-old narrator of this revelatory novel, relaxes by groaning and doing math problems in his head, eats red--but not yellow or brown--food and screams when he is touched.... When his neighbor's poodle is killed and Christopher is falsely accused of the crime, he decides that he will take a page from Sherlock Holmes (one of his favorite characters) and track down the killer."

121. Apr 03 #2: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner, honoring the world's first forensic geologist, on May 14, at 7:00 pm, at the Alta Club in Salt Lake City, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. The Alta Club is at 100 East South Temple; our tradition is to discourage scholarly papers, slide shows, and quizzes (and our agenda consists entirely of toasts, some scholarly, but many not). We will be following in distinguished footsteps: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was entertained at the Alta Club during his visit to Salt Lake City in 1923, when he lectured at the Mormon Tabernacle. If you would like to join us for the festivities, please let me know.
122. Ann Skene-Melvin died on Apr. 9. She was a bibliophile, and proprietor of Ann's Books and Mostly Mysteries Books, and with her husband David compiled CRIME, DETECTIVE, ESPIONAGE, MYSTERY, AND THRILLER FICTION & FILM: A COMPREHENSIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF CRITICAL WRITING THROUGH 1979 (1980). She was one of the founders of The Bookmakers of Toronto, a member of the executive committees that organized the Bookmakers conferences in 1986 and 1997, and (as "Beryl Garcia") a member of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
123. Elizabeth Dow (ten-year-old daughter of Wanda and Jeffery Dow, and a member of The Pleasant Places of Florida) is a Girl Scout, and now the proud owner of a "Science Sleuth" badge (and of course it's nice indeed to see the Girl Scouts using a Sherlockian icon); the "Explore and Discover" booklet says: "Here are some questions you can ask or investigate, just like a scientist. There isn't always a 'right' or 'only' answer--that's the challenge of sleuthing."
124. Jon Lellenberg reports that the opening of the Newberry Library exhibition in Chicago on "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Sherlock Holmes" was well-attended and interesting. There were about 120 people at the private dinner on Apr. 11 (the evening ended with a recording of Vincent Starrett reading his poem "221B"), and about 240 people on hand for a public lecture on Apr. 12 by Richard Lancelyn Green (the library's Saturday lectures generally attract fewer than 20 people). The exhibition offers an attractive display of many of the highlights from the material donated to the library by Fred Kittle, whose Doyleana covers four generations of Doyles and Conan Doyles), and will be on view until July 12; there's a well-illustrated list of what is in the exhibition at the library's web-site <<http://www.newberry.org>>.
125. And for those who might need an additional excuse to visit Chicago, Daniel Stashower will speak at the Newberry Library on May 28, on "Believers and Debunkers: Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini".
126. Karen Murdock noted the story in the Daily Express (Apr. 19): "an old golf club register may hold the clue to one of the last Sherlock Holmes mysteries," the report by Richard Palmer notes. Douglas Blunden, the historian of the Sheringham Golf Club in Norfolk, found the name of Mr. C. Moriarty in a visitors' book entry for 1901; Moriarty later became a full member of the club, and Conan Doyle became a member in 1903. Club officials now wonder if the two men met on holiday in Sheringham a decade earlier, when Conan Doyle first wrote about the evil Prof. James Moriarty.
127. Apr 03 #3: Jeffrey Schwartz ("Henry Baker") died on Apr. 7. He was vice president for international affairs for a Wall Street brokerage, and then moved to Houston to work for a Mexican bank; while he lived in the New York area he was a stalwart member of Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers and served as their quiz-master and (Irv Kamil has noted) designed team quizzes "of dazzling creativity." He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
128. Reported: MGM/UA Video will release "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) on DVD on July 15 ($19.98), with added-value features that include theatrical trailers, deleted sequences, and "Christopher Lee: Mr. Holmes, Mr. Wilder".
129. Admirers of "Aunt Clara" will recall that Bill Rabe reported in his "We Always Mention Aunt Clara" that one of the experts consulted in his research on the post-war history of the song was Art Buchwald, who was (Bill noted) "nightclub critic" for the Paris edition of the N.Y. Herald Tribune. They had met in March 1952, when Lt. Rabe was in Paris, following in the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes, and a report on Bill's activities was featured in Buchwald's column. Buchwald, who joined the paper in 1949, reported in his syndicated column this month: "A funny thing happened the other day. Actually, it was not that funny. The International Herald Tribune in Paris canceled my column after 53 years." The N.Y. Herald Tribune closed many years ago, but the International Herald Tribune has continued to publish, operated jointly by the N.Y. Times and the Washington Post; last year the N.Y. Times, in a hostile takeover, purchased the Washington Post's interest in the International Herald Tribune, and Buchwald, whose column has been published for decades in the Washington Post (and not in the N.Y. Times), is the latest casualty of the takeover. But his fans can continue to read his column in the Washington Post and other papers that carry it.
130. Boris Karloff was shown in a pane of ten stamps honoring "American Film Making" that was issued in February; the stamp is a photograph of Jack Pierce and an unidentified technician applying makeup to Karloff for "Frankenstein" (1931). Karloff also played Mr. Mycroft in "The Sting of Death"

- (which was adapted by Alvin Sapinsley from H. F. Heard's novel A TASTE FOR HONEY) on ABC-TV's "The Elgin Hour" on Feb. 22, 1955 (in an era before fans were quick to tape off-the-air, alas).
131. David Harlan would like to reactivate The Mystik Krewe of Sherlock Holmes (the Sherlockian society in New Orleans), and would be happy to hear from any locals; his address is: 833 East Lexington Avenue, Terrytown, LA 70056 <d100harlan@cs.com>.
  132. Ted Friedman's interesting series about Sherlockian philately for Topical Times continues with his two-page article on "Vernet French Connections" in the May-June issue; he offers brief histories of the Vernet and Holmes families, and it's illustrated with stamps showing paintings by Carle, Emile Jean Horace, and Claude Joseph Vernet. The magazine costs $5.00 postpaid (credit-card orders welcome) from the American Topical Association, Box 57, Arlington, TX 76004 <americantopical@msn.com>.

  133. Apr 03 #4: "The actor Charles Dance wanted to perform 'Pursued by a Bear', in which Sherlock Holmes hunts a killer in an animal suit," according to Benedict Nightingale's story in the N.Y. Times (Mar. 23) about the career of playwright Peter Nichols, whose play "A Day in the Death of Joe Egg" was recently revived in New York. "Pursued by a Bear" is one of some 40 unproduced plays he has written; they are now in British Library, which bought his archive four years ago. Thanks to Greg Darak, who noted the mention of a Sherlock Holmes play.
  134. Richard Valley reports that MPI Home Video will release the 14 Basil Rathbone/Nigel Bruce films on DVDs, beginning this fall; one film per DVD, and two DVDs per month; the Universal films will be the recently-restored versions in the UCLA archives (the 20th Century-Fox films will be cleaned up but not entirely remastered), and Valley will provide the chapter stops and liner notes (and it's possible that there will be extra features included).
  135. Two enameled-metal lapel pins (Holmes reading Porlock's message is in six colors, and the hansom cab is in five) are offered by Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044); the pins cost $12.00 each (postpaid) or $15.00 each for orders from outside the United States (payment should be made in currency or with checks drawn on U.S. banks, please).
  136. According to The Passengers' Log (summer 2003, p. 12), the Programme Preservation Society offers "The Life (in a Day) of Douglas Wilmer", a 165-minute interview in which he reminisces about his acting career (including his performances as Holmes and his recorded readings of the Canon) on a videocassette. The PPS notes that Wilmer has written about the interview that "I have decided that yours is the *definitive* one and, should anyone ever ask me again I shall simply recommend it to them." Their cassettes usually are available only to members, but readers of this newsletter are welcome to order this one if they hear from you by Aug. 1 (mention the magic word "Scuttlebutt"). The cassette is in PAL/VHS format, and costs £10.00 postpaid to the U.K. (or £13.00 elsewhere); payment by sterling check or money order, please (checks payable to the PPS), and orders can be sent to Richard Berry (36-B Elvendon Road, Bounds Green, London N13 4SH, England). Additional information about the PPS and its other cassettes can be found at their web-site at <<http://www.pps-tv.co.uk>>.
  137. James Eedle has prepared a comprehensive index for News from the Diggings, which was edited by Alan C. Olding and published by The Sherlock Holmes Society of Australia from 1980 to 2002. There's a general index, an index of references to stories, and an annotated list of contents, in Word format on a 3.5" floppy disk, available for US$25.00 postpaid (US$ checks or currency welcome) from Alan (P.O. Box 13, Stirling, SA 5152, Australia).
  138. Rebecca Bohner has a bit of news from Laurie R. King about a Mary Russell novel in the works: "THE GAME as in The Great Game, as in India's Northwest frontier, as in Kim. Yes, Kim. He's 47 now (that is, in 1924), and missing..." And Rebecca notes that that's Rudyard Kipling's Kim.

  139. Apr 03 #5: The 2002 issue of the Beeman's Christmas Annual, edited by Janet N. Bensley for The Occupants of the Empty House, is a celebration of the society's first 25 years and a tribute to Father Raymond L. "Vic" Holly. The Occupants have met each month since Jan. 1977, and their 300 meetings through the end of 2002 may well be a record for Sherlockian societies; the 40-page booklet costs $11.25 postpaid, and checks (payable to the society, please) should be sent to Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999).
  140. "What might have been" department: the spring issue of Irene Adler's Postmodern Victorian Gazette (published by Carole Nelson Douglas as part of her Midnight Louie's Scratching Post-Intelligencer) reports that Carole sent a copy of GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES to Jane Seymour for Christmas in 1990, hoping to interest the actress in playing the role. The actress called Carole to thank her, and went on to star in "Dr. Quinn: Medicine Woman" on television, and Carole went on to write more novels. The URL for Carole's website is <<http://www.catwriter.com>>.
  141. Belgium issued a stamp commemorating the centenary of the death of Felicien Rops (1833-1898), who was a member of the Groupe des Vingts [XX Group], and Belgium's leading artist, when Sherlock Holmes was pursuing the Hound of the Baskervilles" (and Watson reported that Holmes "was entirely absorbed in the pictures of the modern Belgian masters"); the design shows part of Rops' painting "La foire aux amours". The stamp was one of a set of four in a set that honored the 200th anniversary of the Museum of Fine Arts in Ghent.
  142. Dave Dobson spotted Massimo Pigliucci's "Thinking About Science" column in the May-June issue of Skeptical Inquirer" "Elementary, Dear Watson" notes that Sherlock Holmes used induction rather than deduction, and explains the difference between the two forms of reasoning.
  143. "Sherlock Holmes and the Giant Rat of Sumatra" (a 1986 two-act "Victorian musical spoof" with book by Tim Kelly and music and lyrics by Jack Sharkey) will be performed at the Drama Lab Theatre at Orange Coast Community College on May 8-11 and 15-18. The theater is at 2701 Fairview Road, Costa Mesa, CA 92626 (714-432-5880) <<http://www.occtickets.com>>.
  144. Robert F. Hanson (6000 Cortaderia Street NE #3215, Albuquerque, NM 87111) offers a second printing of John Bennett Shaw's COLLECTING SHERLOCKIANA: AN ESSAY [Apr 91 #2]. The 16-page pamphlet includes a frontispiece photograph showing the Sage of Santa Fe in his library; $6.50 postpaid ($8.50 outside the United States).
  145. Roger Johnson reports that Malcolm Williamson died on Mar. 2. He was appointed Master of the Queen's Music (the musical equivalent of poet laureate) in 1975, and he was a composer for films, including the score of "The Masks of Death" (1984). And that Lloyd Shirley died in Mar. 5. He was a leading television executive in Britain, and was executive producer of the Thames TV series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971).

  146. Apr 03 #6: Here's your chance to star in some of the Sherlock Holmes stories: Customized Classics (5 Camelot Way, Markham, ON L3P 3V9, Canada) (905-201-9504) <<http://www.customizedclassics.com>> offers A STUDY IN SCARLET AND THE SIGN OF THE FOUR, THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES ($28.95 each postpaid) with customized covers and your name in the text in place of major characters. And you get a 20% discount if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt"); please tell them your phone number when you order. Books by other authors also are available.
  147. The Sherlock Holmes stories (as well as Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian work) have been illustrated by some fine artists, including Wladyslaw Theodore Benda (1875-1948), whose mixed-media theatrical mask is owned by the National Portrait Gallery. An exhibit of "American Beauties: Drawing from the Golden Age of Illustration" at the Library of Congress last year included some of his striking art for the covers of "Hearst's International Magazine" (his illustrations for "The Sussex Vampire" appeared in that magazine in Jan. 1924).
  148. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Julie McKuras' article about the collections' recently acquired print of the film "A Black Sherlock Holmes" (1918); the film was made by the Ebony Film Corp. and

- starred Sam Robinson (in parody Sherlockian costume) as Knick Garter. The issue also has Michael Dirda's critique of W. H. Auden's discussion of mysteries, and Sherlock Holmes, in "The Guilty Vicarage"; and Jon Lellenberg's warm tribute to John Bennett Shaw's enthusiastic collecting, in Jon's reminiscence of how two century-old parodies wound up in John's collection. Dick Sveum also reports that the cataloging project funded by the Hubbs Family (and by the library and the Hench Endowment) has been completed. the newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
149. "The future of humankind is at stake and only two men can save it. Come on a journey back to the beginning of science, the beginning of civilization, the beginning of time. Where will it all end? Be prepared to see Holmes and Watson as you've never seen them before. In daring plots, in amazing escapades, in dubious disguise. In trouble." That's the promotion for the new play "Sherlock Holmes in Trouble" (written by Mark Long and Emil Wolk) that will have its world premiere at the Royal Exchange in Manchester, July 2 through Aug. 9. St. Ann's Square, Manchester N2 7DH, England (0161-833-9833) <<http://www.royalexchange.co.uk>>.
150. May 03 #1: Dennis Lien reports that a fourth (and final) edition of Allen J. Hubin's massive bibliography of crime fiction is to be published at the end of this year. Al described the first edition, which appeared in 1984 and covered 1749-1975, as a list of "all mystery, detective, suspense, police and gothic fiction in book form published in the English language," and he's an expert in the field: his had more than 26,000 books in his collection, and he founded and edited "The Armchair Detective" and won two Edgar awards from the Mystery Writers of America. His CRIME FICTION IV: A COMPREHENSIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY 1749-2000 is to have about 2,700 pages in five hard-cover volumes ($400 postpaid for pre-publication orders), from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada) <gav@bmts.com>, and there are plans for a CD-ROM edition from the Locus Press <<http://www.locusmag.com/index>>; the CD-ROM with the third edition costs $49.95 (and one can assume that the new CD-ROM won't cost much more). The bibliography will list more than 109,000 titles, indexed by authors and pseudonyms, and indexes for settings, film adaptations, and much more.
151. Dennis Rosa's 1975 play "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" is scheduled at the Dorset Theatre Festival from June 26 to July 12; Box 510, Dorset, VT 05251 (802-867-2223) <www.dorsettheatrefestival.com>.
152. The television series "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (1999), which was produced by DIC Entertainment and Scottish Television and broadcast in Britain in 1999 and in the United States in 2001, will now be seen in many other countries; according to the Hollywood Reporter (Apr. 29), the animated series is included in deals with Nickelodeon Asia, Fox Kids Italy, and Cartoon Network Japan. The series had 26 30-minute programs and featured the voices of Jason Gray Stanford as Sherlock Holmes, and John Payne as Dr. John Watson).
153. If you're planning a trip to England: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London is planning a cricket match against The P. G. Wodehouse Society on June 29, at the West Wycombe Cricket Club in Buckinghamshire. It's open to the public, and there's no charge for admission.
154. Reported: MY SHERLOCK HOLMES: UNTOLD STORIES OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE, edited by Michael Kurland (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2003; 370 pp., $24.95) -- an anthology of pastiches, written to Kurland's rule: while Holmes must appear, the viewpoint character is not Watson, but some other figure from the Canon.
155. Jim Rock reports that the Bookfinder web-site <<http://www.bookfinder.com>> that allows users to search other used-book sites has noted what the most-searched-for books in various categories were during the last half of 2002. Under "mysteries and thrillers" that top ten were WHERE THERE'S A WILL (Rex Stout), THE RUBBER BAND (Rex Stout), THE RED BOX (Rex Stout), THE LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN (Rex Stout), TEN LITTLE NIGGERS (Agatha Christie), THE DEEP (Peter Benchley), THE IPCRESS FILE (Len Deighton), THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (William S. Baring-Gould), THE BOYS FROM BRAZIL (Ira Levin), and THE SILVER PIGS (Lindsey Davis). It's intriguing that THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES is on so many people's want lists 35 years after it was published.
156. May 03 #2: Further to the report (Jul 01 #1) about the continuing battle over Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle once lived as a child), award-winning Edinburgh architect Richard Murphy has drawn up plans to renovate the house for use by the Dunedin School. Opponents of a proposal by McDonald's for a restaurant on the site of the oldest surviving house where Conan Doyle lived welcomed the news.
157. Frank Darlington died on May 9. He was an energetic member of The Sound of the Baskervilles and The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia, and a genial contributor to The Hounds of the Internet, and his risque Christmas cards issued from his Scandalous Darlington Press were a delight. Thanks to his career in the U.S. Foreign Service he happily visited many of the countries mentioned in the Canon (Afghanistan, Austria, England, France, Italy, Pakiistan, and the Sudan), and his home included a library full of Sherlockian souvenirs from his travels.
158. Further to the report (Apr 03 #3) on the MGM/UA Video release of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) on DVD, Dave Kehr noted (N.Y. Times, May 11) that the added features include 30 minutes cut from the theatrical release.
159. There's plenty of Sherlockian scholarship in languages other than English: Le Registre d'Ecrou, published by Les Evades de Dartmoor, had four annual issues, and last year was succeeded by Le Carnet d'Ecrou. Information on subscriptions are available from Francois Hoff, 19 rue du Marechal Joffre, 67000 Strasbourg, France <lecarnetdecrou@hotmail.com>.
160. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) notes that THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 8 now is available, with 68 pages of wit, scholarship, conjecture, pastiche, and artwork by members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new (one item was published earlier only in Japanese, and another is revised and expanded from a version published in 1997). The cost is $10.00/CA$15.00/£6.50/€9.00 postpaid by air; payment in currency or by PayPal to <bbarnes@ozemail.com.au> preferred, but checks (made out to R. W. Barnes) are acceptable.
161. Brian W. Pugh reports that he has published a second (expanded and corrected) edition of his A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, now with more biographical references to Conan Doyle and with the dates of his works incorporated within the chronology. It's available from Brian at 20 Clare Road, Lewes, Sussex BN7 1PN, England; £16.00 postpaid to the U.K., or £19.00/€30.00/$30.00 elsewhere; sterling checks only (euros and dollars in currency, please).
162. Further to the item (Mar 03 #4) about films available from Sinister Cinema (Box 4369, Medford, OR 97501) <<http://www.sinistercinema.com>>: they offer many more titles, including "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1936, with Bruno Guttner, in German), "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1968, with Peter Cushing), and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1979, with Vasily Livanov, in Russian subtitled in English), on DVDs ($16.95 each); and "The Sign of Four" (1932, with Arthur Wontner), "Murder at the Baskervilles" (1937, with Arthur Wontner, aka "Silver Blaze"), and "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace" (1962, with Christopher Lee), on cassettes ($12.95 each).
163. May 03 #3 Fans of the recent series (with Maury Chaykin as Nero Wolfe and Tim Hutton as Maury Chaykin) will welcome the news that "Nero Wolfe: The Complete Season One DVD set" will be available ($59.95) on June 10 at the A&E web-site <<http://store.aetv.com>>, with a poster showing Hutton Goodwin; or discounted ($31.89) at <www.deepdiscounteddvd.com>. The A&E web-site also offers Nero Wolfe floral ties and swirl ties. For those who

- came in late, many Sherlockians enjoy the speculation that Sherlock Holmes, during the Great Hiatus, rendezvoused with Irene Adler in Montenegro; after her return to New Jersey she gave birth to a child who inherited his father's expertise at deduction, and his uncle's physique.
164. Kathleen I. Morrison died on May 5. She worked for the Calgary Public Library for 42 years, and she was one of Canada's first Sherlockians (and the fourth baronet of The Canadian Baskervilles, Canada's first Sherlockian society); her article on "John H. Watson, M.D." was published in the Calgary Associate Clinic's Historical Bulletin in May 1943. Charles Honce's story about her ran on the Associated Press wire on Jan. 29, 1945, by which time she had been recruited by Clif Andrew as the corresponding secretary of the Scandalous Bohemians of Akron. Vincent Starrett was another of her correspondents, and she was quoted by Honce saying that "it has been an intriguing adventure, growing daily in color and scope."
165. Further to the item (Mar 03 #6) about recent news from Hollywood about New Line Cinema's "Holmes and Watson" action-adventure that's set in modern-day London, Josh Spector notes in the Hollywood Reporter (May 23) that New Line also has acquired Mark DiStefano's "untitled modern Sherlock Holmes spec in a mid-six-figure deal" with Chris Bender and J. C. Spink as producer. It's described as a thriller with a historical hook, and the script centers on "a rookie New York cop who discovers that he is the descendant of the legendary sleuth. While Holmes' great-great-grandson does not share his last name, he does share his unique ability and quickly rises up the ranks to detective. But when his true heritage becomes tabloid fodder, a copycat criminal emerges and re-enacts many of the crimes Holmes once solved, putting the descendant to the test."
166. May 29 was Bob Hope's 100th birthday, and there have been many celebrations of his long career as an entertainer, on stage and screen and radio and television, and on his many USO tours performing for our armed forces. And his massive joke file (he kept careful records) is now at the Library of Congress, where they were scanned and digitized (but unfortunately one cannot run a word search to see if he told any jokes about Sherlock Holmes). You can, however, see a caricature of Bob "Sherlock" Hope at his official web-site at <<http://www.bobhope.com/JokePage.html>> (thanks to Scott Monty for observing and reporting on this); you can click on the image and listen to him telling jokes. You can also keep an eye out for advertising for the film "My Favorite Brunette" (1947) showing him in Sherlockian costume (it's only in the advertising, however, and there's no S'ian costume in the film itself). He also is reported to have performed in a skit on the "Donny and Marie Show" (1977) as Inspector Wonderful, with Jay Osmond as Doctor Datsum (alas, no one has reported having recorded this on videocassette).
167. May 03 #4: "I grew up with Conan Doyle," said Dick Wolf, producer of the television series "Law & Order", according to David Zurawick in the Baltimore Sun (May 4). "That's what I read when I was growing up. Sherlock Holmes is still my favorite fictional character. I started with the Hardy Boys, and then moved on to Sherlock Holmes." Thanks to Jay Hyde for forwarding the article. There was Sherlockian dialogue in the episode "Prescription for Death" (1990), and the episode "Kiss the Girls and Make Them Die" (1990) had many echos from "The Illustrious Client".
168. "Gigantic (A Tale of Two Johns)" opened at the Cinema Village in New York on May 23. The documentary film is about the rock band "They Might Be Giants" (the two Johns are John Flansburgh and John Linnell, who founded the group that took its name from the 1970 film that starred George C. Scott as a psychotic judge who believes he's Sherlock Holmes).
169. Father Raymond L. "Vic" Holly died on May 19. He was a charter member of The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn, and the first person to attend a meeting of The Occupants of the Empty House (and in case you're wondering how he got to be the first person, he also was the only person, Michael Bragg reports: there was a huge blizzard and the meeting was postponed, and Vic, who hadn't told anyone he was coming, was the only one not told; he crawled through the blizzard and found the restaurant closed, so he got credit for attending, even though no one else did). As noted earlier (Apr 03 #5), the 2002 issue of the Beeman's Christmas Annual was a tribute to Vic; the 40-page booklet costs $11.25 postpaid; checks (payable to the society, please) should be sent to Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999).
170. Andy Peck has reported that the recently-restored 97-minute version of John Barrymore's silent film "Sherlock Holmes" (1922) will be screened with live musical accompaniment by the Film Society of Lincoln Center at their Walter Reade Theater on July 22 at 6:00 and 8:30 pm; the theater is located at 165 West 65th Street in New York. Tickets go on sale on July 16, and the boxoffice phone number is 212-496-3809 <<http://www.filmlinc.com>>.
171. David Otis Ives died on May 16. He was a reporter and editor, and in 1960 he went to work as assistant general manager of the WGBH Educational Foundation. From 1970 to 1984 he was president and chief executive officer of WGBH, and approved projects such as "Nova", "Frontline", "Masterpiece Theater", and "Mystery!", which allowed viewers here to see the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" series, and Richard Roxburgh's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (and many references to Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle in the wraparounds recorded in Boston by Vincent Price, Diana Rigg and Russell Baker).
172. I would appreciate hearing from anyone who might have a current address for Douglas Walker-Macran, who some years ago wrote to me from the Chateau de la Bastide d'Engras in Gard; he isn't there now, and the French post office doesn't have a forwarding address for him.
173. One of the more interesting Sherlockian-themed toys is VTech's "The Detectives" Search 'n Discover Book (see the next page for a reduced picture of what it looks like). It's for ages three years and up, and it costs about $10.00 at toy stores. VTech can be reached at 800-521-2010 or (in Canada) 800-267-7377 <<http://www/vtechkids.com>> or <<http://vtechcanada.com>>.

174. May 03 #6: Sherlockian allusions continue to appear in kid-vid television animations, demonstrating that producers assume that children (sometimes so young that they're not reading yet) will understand the reference. And of course many of the series are also available on videocassettes, one of them being "Hey Arnold!: Partners" (from Nickelodeon), with five 12-minute segments; the title segment of the cassette is synopsized: "First the great composing team of Spumoni and Reynolds split up. And now maybe Arnold and Gerald, too. Are all great performing duos doomed?") and there's an appropriate mention of Holmes and Watson. Thanks to Mike Kean for forwarding the cassette.
175. Gillette Castle in East Haddam, Conn., has opened for the season (Memorial Day through Columbus Day), fully restored after an $11-million restoration project funded by the state. A story in the Hartford Courant (May 22) reported that "Gillette's famous personal railroad cars, which once carried personalities such as Calvin Coolidge and Albert Einstein, are still being restored."
176. BBC Radio 4 continues to offer Conan Doyle material to listeners in Great Britain (and sometimes on its overseas broadcasts), and the material can isn't necessarily Sherlockian: BBC Radio 4's 30-minute series "The Darker Side of the Border" aired Martin Ross' dramatization of "The Captain of the Polestar" on Apr. 24, 2003. The border is the Scottish border, and the accents are thick enough to be cut by a knife. As far as I know, this is the first time this story has been dramatized; thanks to Roger Johnson for providing an off-the-air recording.
177. Issue #54 of SHERLOCK offers its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise), including the second part of Gavin Collinson's commentary on Billy Wilder's "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes", David Stuart Davies' discussion of "The Voice of Passion: How Arthur Conan Doyle's Private Life Influenced the Sherlock Holmes Stories", and Pat Ward's two-page report on "Sherlock Stateside" (a feature in each issue of the magazine). SHERLOCK is published every two months and a subscription costs £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Or you can order from their American agent: Classic

- Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; creditcard orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
178. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has ers Doug Wrigglesworth's report on the collection's acquisition (with funding assistance from the Friends) of books from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's library, Barbara Rusch's discussion of Cliff Goldfarb's research on the longstanding controversy about whether Conan Doyle helped marathon runner Dorando across the finish line at the 1908 Olympics (Conan Doyle was present for the race, but in the stands rather than on the track), and other news from the library. Copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwig@sympatico.ca>.

179. Jun 03 #1: It is rare for the BBC to broadcast a repeat of an ITV television series, but the BBC has signed to repeat the first 13 programs of Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" (with Jeremy Brett and David Burke) on BBC-2 on Saturday afternoons in the "Watching the Detectives" slot. According to Adam Sherwin (in The Times on May 30), a BBC spokesman said that the deal didn't signal a retreat from its obligations to provide original programming, and that "we are always looking for new acquisitions and this is a series we think will be very popular with daytime audiences." And Nadine Nohr, Granada International's managing director, said that "This series starring the late, great Jeremy Brett as Holmes is still hailed as the definitive on-screen depiction of the world's greatest fictional detective. The series continues to resonate as evidenced by continued sales around the world."
180. Patricia Guy has reported on a new society: The Assorted and Stradivarious of Verona (the first scion of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes). They hold their meetings (in English, since the local members prefer to read the Canon in its original language), and visitors should contact Patricia Guy (Via Fama 11, 37121 Verona, Italy) <benguy@libero.it>.
181. The first running of The Silver Blaze at Belmont Race Track was in 1956, as noted by Wayne B. Swift in the The Street Journal Christmas Annual for 2000 (an excellent history of the original race, and its many offspring), and the last running there was in 1995. And there's a fine article about the track (where the 135th Belmont Stakes was run on June 7) in the Washington Post's sports section on June 2. Look for John Scheinman's "In the Spring of Kings, Belmont is the Palace" in your local library, or at the paper's web-site <<http://www.washingtonpost.com>> (look for "In the Sport of Kings, Belmont Is the Palace" as a headline).
182. Jerry Margolin offers a rare poster for sale: it's for the first Sherlock Holmes talking picture, "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929), with Clive Brook as Holmes, with a hand-tinted photograph of Brook holding a magnifying glass and examining a gun. Jerry's asking $3,000, and you can ask him for more information: 10007 S.W. Quail Post Road, Portland, OR 97219 (503-293-7274) <sherlock@teleport.com>.
183. The Harry Ransom Center at the University of Texas has completed a two-year $14.5 million renovation, according to a story in the Daily Texas on June 2 (spotted by Ken Lanza), and the center is displaying some of "the most famous elements of its collection": manuscript and signed works by George Bernard Shaw, Charles Dickens, Albert Einstein, and Dylan Thomas, the original "Leatherface" mask from "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre", and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's golf clubs.
184. Jim Weiss' excellent recordings for younger audiences are available on CDs as well as cassettes, and his titles include SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR CHILDREN ("The Mazarin Stone", "The Speckled Band", "The Musgrave Ritual", and "The Blue Carbuncle") and MYSTERY! MYSTERY! ("The Red-Headed League" plus tales by Poe and Chesterton); cassettes are $10.95 each, and CDs are $14.95 each, and orders can be sent to Greathall Productions, Box 813, Benicia, CA 94510 (800-477-6234) <<http://www.greathall.com>>.
185. Jun 03 #2: Reported by Roger Johnson: the sixth volume of David Timson's unabridged readings of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (with "The Gloria Scott", "The Resident Patient", "The Noble Bachelor", and "The Final Problem"), available from Naxos AudioBooks on three CDs (£13.99) or three cassettes (£9.99); 3 Wells Place, Redhill, Surrey, RH1 1SL, England) <<http://www.naxos-audiobooks.com>>. Naxos also offers ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE--A LIFE, by Hesketh Pearson, read (abridged) by Tim Pigott-Smith on two CDs ($10.99) or two cassettes ($8.99). And their web-site has a link to their prices-in-dollars site for American customers.
186. Julie McKuras spotted Sherlock Snoopy, one of 16 stickers (all of them showing Snoopy in various costumes and poses) on a sheet of "Peanuts" stickers that's marketed to stationery and toy stores by Sandylion <<http://www.sandylion.com>>. The company is at 400 Cochrane Drive, Markham, ON L3R 8E3, Canada (800-387-4215) or Box 1570, Buffalo, NY 14240 (same toll-free number). Their "Peanuts" series also offers "Woodstock, Charlie Brown, and the gang."
187. Sorry about that: I suggested (May 03 #6) that BBC Radio 4 might have aired the first dramatization of "The Captain of the Polestar" (on Apr. 24). The story was dramatized for and broadcast by the CBS Radio Mystery Theater on Oct. 6, 1978. If anyone recorded this program, please let me know.
188. Russ Mann spotted the story in The Scotsman (May 26): the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, founded in 1729 with just four beds, has closed its facility at Lauriston Place. According to Tara Womersley, "Joseph Bell, who became acting surgeon at the infirmary in 1871, quickly gained attention for his terse clinical observations, and he so inspired one of his students that he was immortalized in literature. In a letter, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle credited Bell for helping him to imagine the finest creation, writing: 'It is to you that I owe Sherlock Holmes.'" The Lauriston Place infirmary opened in 1879, and of course there is an intriguing echo of the place name in the Canon. The Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh continues operations at a new hospital at Little France.
189. Julie McKuras notes a web-site <<http://www.sherlocksofcelebration.com>> for Sherlock's of Celebration, an appropriately-themed restaurant and memorabilia shop in Florida: 715 Bloom Street #130, Celebration, FL 34747.
190. The Mystery Writer's Annual (the program for the MWA's annual Edgar Allan Poe Awards Dinner) includes an "In Memoriam" section, and this year there were three people I didn't mention in this newsletter. Henry Slesar died on Apr. 2, 2002; he wrote seven mystery novels and nearly 500 short stories, and contributed to "The Alfred Hitchcock Show" and "The Edge of Night" television series (one of his stories was "The Sherlock Method" in the Feb. 1959 issue of The Gent). Alvin Sapinsley, Jr., died on June 13, 2002; he adapted H. F. Heard's "Mr. Mycroft" novel "A Taste for Honey" for television as "The Sting of Death" on the Elgin Hour series (1955), and wrote the script for the television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976). And Lloyd Biggle, Jr., died on Sept. 12, 2002; he wrote mysteries and science fiction, and novels and short stories, and two of his novels are entertaining Sherlockian pastiches, told by Edward P. Jones (one of the irregulars: THE QUALLSFORD INHERITANCE (1986) and THE GLENDOWER CONSPIRACY (1990)).
191. Jun 03 #3: Jerry Margolin offers a rare poster for sale: it advertises the first Sherlock Holmes talking picture, "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929), with Clive Brook as Holmes, with a hand-tinted photograph of Brook holding a magnifying glass and examining a gun. Jerry is asking $3,000, and he'll be glad to supply more information: 10007 S.W. Quail Post Road, Portland, OR 97219 (503-293-7274) <sherlock@teleport.com>.
192. Costa Rossakis spotted a colorful full-page advertisement for McClelland's pipe tobaccos in the summer 2003 issue of Pipes and Tobacco: their Sherlock's Black Shag and Watson's Arcadia will soon be joined by a "new 221B tobacco" that may not come in the appropriately Canonical box shown in the advertisement, but they have paid close attention to "The Cardboard Box".

193. Plan ahead: June 11-13, 2004, are the dates for the conference titled "A River Runs by It: The University of Minnesota's Elmer L. Andersen Library and Sherlock Holmes Collections, On the Banks of the Mississippi" sponsored by the Norwegian Explorers, The Arthur Conan Doyle Society, and The Sherlock Holmes Collections; you can contact Julie McKuras at 13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124 <mike9750@aol.com> to enroll on their mailing list.
194. Bill Force noted a report in the Hartford Courant (May 29) that Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be produced by the River Rep at the Ivoryton Playhouse on July 2-19. The box office is at Box 367, Ivoryton, CT 06442 (860-767-8348) <<http://www.riverrep.com>>.
195. And, further to the item (May 03 #6) about the opening of Gillette Castle, visitors should not neglect the exhibition "Honoring William Gillette" at the East Haddam Historical Society Museum on Route 82 (Town Street) (860-873-3944). The exhibits include a continuous running of Peter Loffredo's excellent 30-minute documentary "William Gillette: A Connecticut Yankee and the American Stage" (1986); Garrett Walters plays William Gillette, and the film features interviews that include one with Helen Hayes, who as a young woman acted with Gillette.
196. "Jane Austin's Mr. Darcy has emerged as the most romantic figure in English literature in a poll of women readers," according to a story by Nigel Reynolds in the Daily Telegraph (June 4), forwarded by Ken Lanza. Orange, a mobile phone company polled 1,900 women, and the runners-up, in order, were James Bond, Superman, Hercule Poirot, Inspector Morse, Heathcliff, Sherlock Holmes, Rhett Butler, Prince Charming, and Sharpe. Holmes also ranked 3rd their choice of a guest for an imaginary dinner party, behind Mr. Darcy and Hercule Poirot.
197. The film "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen" (based on the comic-book mini-series, with story by Alan Moore) will open on July 17, with Richard Roxburgh as Mycroft 'M' Holmes, making him (I think) the second actor who has played both Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes.
198. Jun 03 #4: The American Film Institute's "AFI's 100 Years . . . 100 Heroes & Villains" aired on CBS-TV on June 3, and the winners (selected from 400 nominations by an unidentified jury) were Atticus Finch in "To Kill a Mockingbird" (Gregory Peck) and Hannibal Lecter (Anthony Hopkins). The list is available at <<http://www.afi.com>>, and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson (Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce in "The Hound of the Baskervilles") were ranked #160.
199. The Queen's Birthday Honours list included a knighthood for Roger Moore, who played Sherlock Holmes in the television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976).
200. William S. Dorn offers a new (and interesting) Sherlockian item: A Sherlock Holmes bobblehead doll (7.5" high); the postpaid cost is $36.55 (to the U.S.)/$38.55 (to Canada)/ $42.55 (elsewhere). And there's a new lapel pin with artwork by Nancy Beiman, at $12.15/$13.15/$16.15). His address is 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210; and he has a web-site at <<http://www.thesherlockstore.com>>.
201. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (the interactive exhibit with much Victorian flavor, and a mystery visitors can solve), was first exhibited in England in 1995 and it has been touring the United States and Canada in since then; it is now at the Science Museum of Virginia in Richmond, Va., through Aug. 31 (804-864-1400) <<http://www.smv.org>>.
202. The June 2003 issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has John Linsenmeyer's warm tribute to the late Stephen Tolins, Dick Sveum's "100 Years Ago" discussion of P. G. Wodehouse, and reports from and about the collections. The newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
203. "Your private detective does not--or did not ten years ago when he was my colleague--want to be an erudite solver of riddles in the Sherlock Holmes manner; he wants to be a hard and shifty fellow, able to take care of himself in any situation, able to get the best of anybody he comes in contact with, whether criminal, innocent by-stander or client." Dashiell Hammett, in his Introduction to the 1934 Modern Library edition of THE MALTESE FALCON, discovered recently by Bill Harker.
204. Marcus Geisser, who works for the International Committee for the Red Cross in Thailand, reports that he has been scuba-diving at Sukorn, which is located on the west coast of Thailand, on the east side of the Andaman Sea. I'm sure there are other scuba-diving Sherlockians, and it occurs to me to wonder what their Sherlockian society might be called.
205. Jun 03 #5: Barry Day, has written five Sherlockian pastiches, and he now has edited SHERLOCK HOLMES: IN HIS OWN WORDS AND IN THE WORDS OF THOSE WHO KNEW HIM (New York: Taylor Trade Publishing, 2003; 224 pp., $24.95); it's an interesting literary biography, based on quotations from the Canon, with commentary by Day and illustrations from The Strand Magazine, and it's an excellent introduction to the Canon (and to some of its more important other characters). Day notes in his Introduction that "It surprises many people to learn that more has been written about Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson in one century than about Shakespeare in four," and he offers a welcome focus on what the Canon itself tells us.
206. Reported by Roger Johnson: SHERLOCK HOLMES UND DER FLUCH VON ADDLETON, the German edition of Mike Ashley's anthology THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES ADVENTURES (1997); Bastei Lubbe, Verlagsgruppe Lubbe GmbH & Co. KG, Bergisch Gladbach, Germany (€10.00). And MYCROFT UP AGAINST IT and MYCROFT OVER THE WATER, by Sam Bonnamy, as a downloadable e-book, or ink-on-paper (e-booksonline, 28 Bryntirion Drive, Woodlands Park Prestatyn, Denbighshire L£19 9NY, England); <<http://www.e-booksonline.net>>. And some new miniature books of Canonical stories, from R. F. Flower, 5 Foxglove Close, Ringmer, East Sussex BN8 5PB, England. Roger also forecasts SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RULE OF NINE, by Barrie Roberts, due in August from Severn House (9-15 High Street Sutton, Surrey SM1 1DF, England; £18.99). All this from Roger's excellent monthly newsletter The District Messenger, which costs $15.00 (make your checks payable to Jean Upton, please) or £6.00 (checks payable to Roger); his address is Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DF, England <rojerjohnson@yahoo.co.uk>. And yes, that's "rojer" with a "j".
207. The auction at Sotheby's in London on July 10 offers a wide range of Winston Churchill material, including several of his cigars, some half-smoked and some smoked (an unsmoked cigar with a band reading "Especiales Sir Winston Churchill" is estimated at £500-600); a photograph of Harry Houdini, inscribed to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in 1920 (£1,500-2,000); a signed presentation copy of THE NEW REVELATION (£500-700), and other Sherlockiana. 34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England <<http://www.sothebys.com>>.
208. I suggested (Jun 03 #3) that Richard Roxburgh was the second actor to play both Sherlock and Mycroft in a film (as well as Sir Henry Baskerville in another film). Ken Lanza has forwarded a story in the Sydney Morning Herald (June 14) noting that the trailer for "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen" has a "booming American voice dubbed onto the lips of Australia's Richard Roxburgh," even though Sean Connery was allowed to retain his Scottish accent). "We must conclude that the producers think American audiences won't be attracted to a movie," David Dale wrote, "if it contains too many non-American renditions of the English language."
209. Hume Cronyn died on June 15. He began his acting career on stage in Washington in 1931, in the comedy "Up Pops the Devil" (he said years later that he over-rehearsed and blew his only line), and went on to a long and awardwinning career on stage and screen and television. In Alfred Hitchcock's film "Shadow of a Doubt" (1943) he played an avid mystery-magazine reader, and said "That little Frenchman beats them all. You can talk all you like about Sherlock Holmes. That little Frenchman beats them all."

210. Jun 03 #6: Karen Murdock has noted a story in the [Cardiff] Western Mail (May 16) that reported that "the title of baron of the castle which is said to have inspired the name of the Sherlock Holmes novel THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES" has been offered for sale for £40,000. Owner Grace Pitchford said the history of 1,000-year-old Pencelli Castle, near Brecon in Wales and built by the 11th-century knight Ralph Baskerville, in-spired the name of the novel, and that "Conan Doyle was a regular visitor to the castle during the reign of Queen Victoria." According to a story in This Is Herefordshire (May 22) the barony is being sold by the Pitchford family, who acquired the Pencelli estate in the 1930s from the trustees of Henry Barry, Lord Buckland of Bwich. The story also says that "new lords or ladies of the manors may use their style on passports, driving licences and credit cards." And you can jin the Manorian Society of Great Britain. The barony is being offered by Manorial Auctioneers (104 Kennington Road, London SE11 6RE, England) <<http://www.msgb.co.uk>>.
211. But there's a major problem: according to information at Paul M. Remfry's web-site <<http://www.castlewales.com/pencelli.html>>, Pencelli Castle "was probably built in the late eleventh century" and "The fortress was seized by the king in 1322 and probably fell into decay soon afterwards. Today the ruins of the great square keep can still be made out behind the hotel which itself dates to 1584." It is possible, of course, that Conan Doyle stayed at the nearby hotel, but one should recall that just about every old house in Britain that has been owned by someone named Baskerville has been claimed as inspiring the book, despite the fact (which was widely reported, in the Sherlockian world) that the book was inspired by a story told to Conan Doyle by Fletcher Robinson, and the name was taken from Fletcher Robinson's coachman Harry Baskerville.
212. Occasionally one finds an unusual reference to Sherlock Holmes repeated in an unusual place: Colbert I. King's op-ed column (Washington Post, June 21) was headlined "Searchin' Every Which A-Way for WMD", and in it King quoted from the Coasters' "Searchin'" (1957), which included the line, "Sherlock Holmes, Sam Spade, got nothing', child, on me." You can read King's column at <<http://washingtonpost.com>>, and the complete lyrics to "Searchin'" at <<http://www.rockabilly.nl/lyrics4/s0037.htm>>. The song also is available on various CDs, of course.
213. Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Pioneer Playhouse from July 15 to July 26; the theater is at 840 Stanford Road, Danville, KY 40422 (859-236-2748), and their web-site is <<http://www.pioneerplayhouse.com>>
214. I reported earlier (May 03 #1) on the Bookfinder web-site's list of the top ten most-searched-for books in the mystery and thrillers category. One of the books was Agatha Christie's TEN LITTLE ***** (now sold retitled AND THEN THERE WERE NONE), and at least one subscriber to the electronic mailing lists to which I post the text of my newsletter encountered a problem reading the newsletter, because his e-mail manager had been set to block automatically (what is now euphemistically called) the "n-word".

Jul 03 #1:

215. Scott Monty has reported an exhibition titled "Thomas Gainsborough, 1727-1788" at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, through Sept. 24, with approximately 100 paintings and drawings. Gainsborough painted the splendid portrait of Georgina, Duchess of Devonshire, that was stolen by master-criminal Adam Worth, who was called by some "the Napoleon of crime" (and who may have served as an inspiration for Professor Moriarty). The Duchess is mentioned in the Canon (see "A Case of Identity"), and one of the Ronald Howard television shows was "The Case of the Haunted Gainsborough". More information is available at <www.mfa.org/exhibitions/gainsborough/>.
216. Spotted by Marina Stajic: DICTIONARY OF THEORIES, edited by Jennifer Bothamley (first published by Gale Research in 1993, and reprinted by Visible Ink Press in 2002); with an entry for "dynamics of an asteroid" (written by John Bowers), which says (in part): "initiated by C. F. Gauss (1777-1855), but reputed to have had its outstanding exposition in an elusive textbook by James Moriarty (c1840-1891)."
217. The August issue of Realm: The Magazine of Britain's History and Countryside has Sarah Matthews' four-page article about Conan Doyle ("A Knight for Mystery"); much of the article is illustrations, and they including a fullcolor reproduction of a portrait of Conan Doyle painted by Henry L. Gates in 1923. $6.50 ($39.00 a year for six issues), from Box 215, Landisburg, PA 17040 (800-998-0807) <www.realm-magazine.com>.
218. SHERLOCK has a new publisher: Mark Coleman (Atlas Publishing), who has purchased the magazine from Peter Harkness; David Stuart Davies will continue as editor. Issue #55 has A. L. Blake's article on "Sherlock Holmes & the Vampire Connection", Gavin Collinson's discussion of the Michael Caine/Ben Kingsley "Without a Clue", M. J. Elliott's pastiche "The Adventure of the Mocking Huntsman", and other coverage of crime fiction. SHERLOCK appears every two months, and it costs £23.70 (to the U.K.) a year (£26.00 to Europe/$40.00 elsewhere); Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hampshire BH25 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>, is their American agent; credit-card orders welcome at both addresses.
219. "Shanghai Knights" (in theaters earlier this year) has been released on DVD ($22.99) and videocassette ($17.99); the film stars Jim Fisher as Det. Artie Doyle (aka Arthur Conan Doyle), and the DVD includes out-takes and such.
220. Spotted by Ken Lanza: a story by Neal Jones in the New Haven Register (July 7) about plans by archeologists to investigate the remains of William Gillette's houseboat Aunt Polly (which sank on its moorings after a fire in December 1932). The Aunt Polly was a yacht, built for Gillette and launched around 1900, and he was sailing on the Connecticut River when he first saw the site where he eventually built his home (now Gillette Castle); he lived aboard the yacht during the five years it took to build the castle, and he then had the 100-foot yacht turned into a 144-foot houseboat. The wreck of the Aunt Polly was named an underwater archeological preserve by the Connecticut Historical Commission in May, and a team of archeologists will develop a booklet about the boat and mount a plaque near the site.
221. Jul 03 #2: Conan Doyle's THE TRAGEDY OF THE KOROSKO is a grand adventure story, set in Egypt in 1895, but it's also a surprisingly modern novel, according to Tony Robinson in his interesting introduction (and the American distributor of a new edition suggests in a press release that "some of the parallels with today's events are quite startling, including the Frenchman's refusal to go along with the proposed plan of the Americans and the English"). London: Hesperus Press, 2003; 121 pp., £6.99 (distributed here by Trafalgar Square Publishing, $12.00).
222. The East Lynne Theater Company will present its third staged reading (with live piano accompaniment) of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" on Oct. 24 and 25, during a "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J.; the company's phone number is 609-884-5898 <www.eastlynnecompany.org>.
223. If you've seen The Reduced Shakespeare Company's "The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged)", or any of its other productions, you'll need not be urged to see their new "All the Great Books (Abridged)"; it was developed at various venues last year, and debuted at the Kennedy Center in Washington on June 10, and it goes next to the Edinburgh Festival Fringe and then on tour. The show is literary, irreverent, and hilarious, and of course one of the Great Books is "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Reed Martin has the deerstalker and calabash in the photo, but Austin Tichenor has them in the current version). <www.reducedshakespeare.com>.
224. Leonard Koppett died on June 22. He was a sportswriter and author, and his career spanned nearly six decades, in New York and in California, where he was editor of the [Palo Alto] Times Tribune and contributed a general-interest column to the paper, and in the 1990s was inducted into the

- Baseball Hall of Fame. At least three of the columns discussed Sherlock Holmes, and are listed in Ron De Waal's THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES; Emory Lee notes that Koppett attended (and enjoyed) at least one meeting of The Knights of the Gnomon in the late 1980s.
225. News of John Doubleday, who sculpted statues of Sherlock Holmes in Meiringen and in London: Karen Murdock spotted an article in the Essex Chronicle (July 18) reporting that he has been commissioned to sculpt a 30-foot high statue Maldon's Saxon hero Bryhtnoth, who died in battle defending Maldon against the Vikings more than 1,000 ago. Doubleday, who was born in Maldon, said, "It will be a genuine landmark and people will see it when they come in from the sea."
226. And Don Grant, in his article on "Clubbing: In Praise of Art and Alcohol" in the Independent on Sunday (July 20), says, "I don't know whether Conan Doyle was a member of the Traveller's Club, upon which the Diogenes Club was said to have been based, but he certainly was a member of the somewhat recherche London Sketch Club, which was founded in 1898 and is still going strong today." The club's studio "had a frieze of silhouettes of all the distinguished members right up to the present day, including Conan Doyle's, and on a red velvet chaise longue in the middle of the room lounged a beautiful Spanish life model."

227. Jul 03 #3: Anglofile reports that Richard E. Grant (who has played Sherlock Holmes, Mycroft Holmes, and Stapleton on television) will provide the voice of Doctor Who in a new animated adventure to be released in November on the Internet (on BBCi) to mark the 40th anniversary of "Doctor Who". Grant said his interpretation of the Doctor will be "sort of a 'Sherlock Holmes in Space'". The new adventure is written by Paul Cornell, who included Holmes and Watson as characters in the "Doctor Who" novel HAPPY ENDINGS (Feb 98 #2). Anglofile is a monthly newsletter offering news of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($16.00 a year).
228. Syd Goldberg died on July 15. His enthusiasms ranged from World War I to early film stars to Sherlock Holmes, and he was an assiduous collector (he happily noted that he had more than 19,000 items. He bequeathed his collection to the Sherlock Holmes Society of London.
229. Spotted by Karen Murdock: "I always watched Sherlock Holmes movies. It's fascinating to deal with people who are smart at something." William Peterson (Gil Grissom in "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation"), quoted in a profile in the Glasgow Evening Times (July 1).
230. Further to the report (Jun 03 #6) that the barony of Baskerville is being offered for sale (for £40,000) by Manorial Auctioneers: before sending them a check, you should visit the web-site of British Feudal Investments; the URL is <nobletitles.com/manorialsocietyscam.htm>, and you can read a long discussion ("The frauds of the Manorial Society and who runs it") of what is described as "one of the most ruthless, vindictive, arrogant, and dangerous of all business enterprises related to titles in the world."
231. The Manorial Auctioneers catalog reports that the "Baskerville family are still connected to the area and in the 19th century were friends with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He stayed with the family on many occasions and it is from them that he took the name for his famous HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. It is possible that the castle and its setting provided an inspiration for the gloomy aspect for the bleak house in the novel, which of course was set in Devon."
232. I've corresponded with Robert Smith (managing director of Manorial Auctioneers), and asked how Sir Arthur could have been a regular visitor at a castle that has been only a ruin since the 14th century; he has replied that the elderly lady who now is selling the barony title says that Conan Doyle was a regular visitor to the area, and that he "got the idea for the Baskerville name because a branch of Baskervilles had held the castle and barony in the Middle Ages." And (later) that there is a Tudor mansion, known as Pencelli Castle, and "which dates, I understand, from the 16th century and may have foundations and other parts from an earlier period. It is not uncommon in Britain for medieval castles to be abandoned and 'modern' houses, of the same name, built on or near the castle site." And that "I cannot be certain, but Sir Arthur may have stayed at this house."
233. Forecast for August: David Pirie's THE NIGHT CALLS (Dec 02 #5 and Jan. 03 #4), in an American edition from St. Martin's Minotaur ($24.95); it's the novel on which the British television series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" was based.
234. Jul 03 #4: Further to the item (Jun 03 #5) about the auction at Sotheby's, the photograph of Harry Houdini, inscribed to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in 1920 (estimated at £1,500-2000) sold for £4,560 (including the 20% buyer's premium). the unsmoked cigar with a band reading "Especiales Sir Winston Churchill" (£500-600) and the signed presentation copy of THE NEW REVELATION (£500-700) went unsold.
235. Mike Whelan ("Wiggins" of the Baker Street Irregulars) has announced that the BSI will celebrate their 70th anniversary, and Sherlock Holmes' 150th birthday, on Jan. 16 in New York. John Berendt, author of MIDNIGHT IN THE GARDEN OF GOOD AND EVIL, and the introduction to the Modern Library's 2001 edition of THE ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, will be the Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Jan. 15, and planning continues for the BSI's "Valley of Fear" excursion on Oct. 22-24, 2004. The fourth volume in the BSI's manuscript series will be "The Six Napoleons" (edited by Bill Hyder).
236. Further to the item (Apr 01 #3) about the unveiling of the life-size statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Brian Pugh reports that a 70-minute color videocassette of the festivities, with additional footage of Windlesham and other local scenes, is available (in PAL or NTSC formats) for £20.70 or $34.00 postpaid from Brian W. Pugh, 20 Clare Road, Lewes, Sussex BN7 1PN, England; please pay by sterling check (payable to The ACD Memorial Fund) or US currency.
237. "Safe. Friendly. Suspicious. Toronto" is the motto for Bouchercon 2004 in (of course) Toronto on Oct. 7-10, 2004, with Peter Robinson (Canadian guest of honor), Jeremiah Healy (American guest of honor), Lindsey Davis (British guest of honor), and Gary Warren Niebuhr (fan guest of honor); P.O. Box 7, Thornhill, ON L3T 3N1, Canada.
238. Noted by Peter Ashman: there's a web-site <www.oldbaileyonline.org> for The Proceedings of the Old Bailey in London from 1674 to 1834, and the Proceedings from Dec. 1714 to Dec. 1759 are now on-line, for those interested in pre-Sherlockian crime.
239. Our new "Nature of America" sheetlet depicts an autumn tundra scene in the northern foothills of the Brooks Range in Alaska, and some of the animals shown on the stamps are mentioned in the Canon: ravens, squirrels, grizzly bears, caribou, and wolves. And there are swans and various lichens shown elsewhere on the sheetlet.
240. Jul 03 #5: Judith Freeman reports that the Baskerville Bash is accepting reservations for its Sherlockian birthday celebration on Jan. 16 at the Manhattan Club in New York; you can send checks (payable to Maribeau Briggs Shrawder) for $70.00 to P. J. Perry (346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10238. And that the exhibition on "Chocolate" at the American Museum of Natural History in New York closes on Aug. 7 (there are tastings at 1:00 pm each weekend in the gift shop); if you need an additional excuse to visit the exhibition, chocolate (well, cocoa) is mentioned in the Canon.
241. "The crown!" exclaimed Reginald Musgrave, when Sherlock Holmes explained that "It is nothing less than the ancient crown of the kings of England." Many Sherlockian scholars believe that it was the original Crown of St. Edward, which was worn by only two kings, James I and Charles I. This is its successor, commissioned for the coronation of Charles II in 1660 and now shown on one of a set of stamps issued by Australia this year to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the coronation of Elizabeth II (thanks to Alan Olding for forwarding a copy of the stamp). According to the Australian Post Bulletin, the Crown of St. Edward is worn only once in the lifetime of each sovereign, during the coronation; at the conclusion of the - coronation service at Westminster Abbey, when the monarch retires into St. Edward's Chapel and St. Edward's Edward is replaced by the Imperial State Crown.

242. Bob Hope died on July 27. He was an outstanding comedian, from vaudeville to his many USO tours, and he entertained hundreds of millions on stage and screen and radio and television. His many fans celebrated his 100th birthday earlier this year (May 03 #4), there's a caricature of Bob "Sherlock" Hope at his official web-site <www.bobhope.com/JokePage.html>; he appeared in Sherlockian costume in advertising for the film "My Favorite Brunette" (1947).
243. The latest issue of Scarlet Street (#48) focuses on "The Fly" (1958) and its sequels and remakes, and (of course) there's a Sherlockian connection. Isn't there a Sherlockian connection to everything? Charles Edward Pogue, who wrote the screenplay for "The Fly" (1986), also wrote the scripts for Ian Richardson's 1983 films "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four", and the play "The Ebony Ape" (1987), and Edward Woodward's "Hands of a Murderer" (1990). And he was in the cast (as Mordecai Smith) for "The Crucifer of Blood" in Los Angeles in 1990, with Charlton Heston as Holmes and Jeremy Brett as Watson. Richard Valley's interview with Pogue covers his Sherlockian work as well as "The Fly". The magazine's address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <www.scarletstreet.com>; subscriptions cost $42.00 a year (six issues).
244. President Bush awarded the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor to Charlton Heston and Jacques Barzun, and nine others, at the White House on July 23. Heston played Sherlock Holmes in "The Crucifer of Blood" on stage in Los Angeles in Dec. 1980 and Jan. 1981, and on Turner Network Television cable in Sept. 1991; Barzun has written about the Canon in THE CATALOGUE OF CRIME (1971) and in essays and introductions and in The Baker Street Journal, and he contributed a Sherlockian clerihew to Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Jan. 14, 1980).
245. Jul 03 #6: Tyke Niver reports that he and Teddie visited Gillette Castle on July 25 (of course wearing their Holmes/Gillette T-shirts) and talked with a staffer who said the Castle had been looking for someone to be Gillette on his birthday (on July 24). She was delighted to accept their offer to be Mr. and Mrs. Gillette on the weekend, and they had a fine time. The restoration of Gillette Castle, budgeted at $3 million, wound up costing $9 million; most of the pictures and artifacts are still in storage, but will be back on the walls eventually. And, Tyke notes, the Castle is again Holmes-friendly.
246. Spotted by Dick Rutter: THE WIZARD OF QUARKS: A FANTASY OF PARTICLE PHYSICS, by Robert Gilmore (New York: Copernicus Books, 2000; 202 pp., $24.00); with a chapter about "The Higgs of the Masskervilles" in which Holmes explains the mysterious properties of the Higgs boson.
247. Harold C. Schonberg died on July 26. He started his career in journalism as associate editor and record critic for the American Music Lover 1939 and joined the N.Y. Times in 1950; he was their chief music from 1960 to 1980, and in 1971 was the first music critic to win a Pulitzer Prize. As "Newgate Callendar" he reviewed mysteries and thrillers for the N.Y. Times Book Review from 1972 to 1995, and he was a devoted chess player and covered the Spassky-Fischer and Kasparov-Karpov championship matches in 1972 and 1984. An essay on Sherlock Holmes and chess was published in the Sherlock Holmes Journal (spring 1964), and his N.Y. Times music articles included "Tra-lala-lira-lira-lay" (1965) and "Sherlock--and Malocchio!" (1968).
248. I've had two responses to my query (Jun 03 #5) about naming a society for Sherlockian scuba-divers. I've had two responses: Jack Koelle has proposed "The Lion's Maniacs", and Andy Peck has suggested "And So Under". The contest (sorry, no prizes) is still open.
249. Rosemary Herbert, who earlier edited THE OXFORD COMPANION TO CRIME AND MYSTERY WRITING (1999) and made sure that Sherlock Holmes was not neglected, has now edited (and again paid attention to Sherlock Holmes in) WHODUNIT; A WHO'S WHO IN CRIME AND MYSTERY WRITING (London and New York: Oxford University Press, 2003; 256 pp., $35.00 in cloth, $18.95 in paper).
250. Not a politician in sight, nor a trained cormorant, but the Postal Service has honored five Southeastern Lighthouses, in the five coastal states from Virginia to Florida.
251. Aug 03 #1: Les Klinger reports that he has been asked to edit THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES for W. W. Norton. There will be three volumes, the first two with the short stories (fall 2004, estimated price $79.95) and a third with the long stories (fall 2005, estimated price $39.95). There will be more than 500 illustrations, including all the Pagets and all the Steeles, and others in the public domain, and contemporary photographs; Les has written a long introduction and many new notes on Victorian topics, and is keeping the substance of the Sherlockian analysis. Norton has been publishing annotated editions for many years; they have done HUCKLEBERRY FINN, THE WIZARD OF OZ, ALICE, CLASSIC FAIRY TALES, and (soon) THE CHRISTMAS CAROL and WIND IN THE WILLOWS.
252. The Sherlock Holmes Reference Series published by Gasogene Books will continue, with the remaining four volumes likely to be published one per year. The new set from Norton is intended for the general public, and they'll be told that the reference series is recommended to those who want more detail and depth. Les hopes, of course, that Sherlockians will want both sets.
253. Further to the mention (Jun 03 #3) of Richard Roxburgh playing Mycroft 'M' Holmes (in the film "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen"), the Internet Movie Data Base now lists Roxburgh as playing M; there's a reason for this, which I won't explain, by way of avoiding spoiling a surprise in the film. The IMDB also reports that Roxburgh is playing Dracula in a new film scheduled for release in 2004, which (according to our department of movie trivia) makes him (at least) the fourth actor to play both Sherlock Holmes and Dracula. Warning: I'll name the other three later in the newsletter.
254. Bruce Holmes has long pursued Sherlockian philately (and philatelic Sherlockiana), and his THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: ILLUSTRATED WITH POSTAGE STAMPS is attractive indeed. Each of the thirteen stories is represented by at least five postage stamps and covers, and the selection is imaginative. The postpaid cost of the 23-page booklet US $29.50 (color)/$15.00 (black and white), and Bruce's address is 3170 Joseph Howe Drive, Halifax, NS B3L 4G1, Canada.
255. Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place B8016, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-884-2637) <www.bitsandpieces.com> has discounted their Sherlock Holmes mystery jigsaw puzzle "The Case of the Fallen Actress" to $6.99 (from $10.95); item number 04-E0140-008 in their catalog.
256. Anthony D. Howlett ("John Hector McFarlane") died on Aug. 21. He was one of the contributors (on "Sherlock Holmes on the Screen") to the catalog for the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition in London in 1951, and one of the founders of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and for many years its president. Tony had a wonderful sense of scholarship, and humor, and all who knew him will remember him fondly. He starred in the excellent television documentary "Mr. Sherlock Holmes of London" (1971), which concludes with him sitting in a chair in the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street (as reconstructed in The Sherlock Holmes); Tony explained that "whenever I am asked, 'Sherlock Holmes, was he fact or fiction?' I always answer . . . yes." He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1994.
257. Aug 03 #2: Forecast for September: Stephen Kendrick's NIGHT WATCH (Dec 01 #5), in a trade-paperback edition from Berkley, $13.00; Sherlock Holmes and Father Brown investigate a gruesome murder committed in a church in London. John Lescroart's SON OF HOLMES (Mar 86 #2), in a trade paperback edition from New American Library, $14.00; Sherlockian only for occasional references to the parentage and inherited abilities of the protagonist: Auguste Lupa (a large man who is partial to yellow shirts, beer, and gourmet meals).
258. Department of movie trivia: three other actors who have played both Sherlock Holmes and Dracula are Jeremy Brett, Frank Langella, and Christopher Lee.

259. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Mauch Chunk Opera House in Jim Thorpe, Pa., Oct. 3-5 and 10-12, during the annual Fall Foliage celebration. The box-office is at 14 West Broadway, Jim Thorpe, PA 19228 (610-395-7176) <barwallprod@enter.net>. Mauch Chunk (which has been renamed Jim Thorpe) is in the Valley of Fear, and members of the Mollie Maguires were tried in the Courthouse there, and housed and hanged in the Carbon County Jail; many of their descendants still reside in the region.
260. Niagara Falls is shown on a new stamp from Canada honors Niagara Falls. "'From a drop of water,' said the writer, 'a logician could infer the possibility of an Atlantic or a Niagara without having seen or heard of one or the other.'" (Stud) Thanks to Wilfrid de Freitas for sending a copy of the stamp.
261. Vinnie Brosnan reports that the Museum of the City of New York has an exhibit on "Harlem: Lost and Found" (through Jan. 4) that documents the history and development of Harlem, with exhibits that include a bust of Harry Houdini, who bought a large brownstone at 278 West 113th Street in 1904. In the spring of 1922 Conan Doyle and his wife visited the house; according to the information in the exhibit, Lady Doyle said that the residence was "the most home-like home she had ever seen." The museum is located at Fifth Av address is Fifth Avenue at 103rd Street.
262. Mike Kean reports that The Diogenes Club of the Monterey Peninsula will re-turn to the SS Jeremiah O'Brien; their first meeting on board the ship was in Sept. 1998, and the second will be on Nov. 8, 2003. It will be black-tie optional, with a sit-down dinner and a program, and the ship is moored at Pier 45 in San Francisco; additional information is available from Wal-ter W. Jaffee (Box 633, Benicia, CA 94510) <captjaff@pacbell.net>.
263. Sorry about that: Shawn Neidorf's obituary for Leonard Koppett in the San Jose Mercury News said that he "was inducted into the writer's wing of the Baseball Hall of Fame in the early 1990s," and Bruce Macgowan, in the San Francisco Examiner, said that Koppett was "the only writer I know of to be enshrined in the writer's wings of both the Baseball and Basketball Halls of Fame." And so I reported Jul 03 #2). Paul Herbert notes that Koppett was not inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame (announcers and writers can't be); Koppett was a winner of the Spink Award, and he was honored by, rather than inducted into, the National Hall of Fame and Museum in Cooperstown.
264. Aug 03 #3: Cliff Goldfarb has reported another HOLMES (this one being the High-speed Online Library Management Extranet System); according to an item in Canadian Lawyer (August), Law Library Management Inc. in Toronto offers a customized library extranet (described as "a hosted website and database system that is accessible both from within a firm's local network and from outside via the Internet").
265. Further to the report (Jun 03 #1) about the Harry Ransom Humanities Center at the University of Texas, a story in the Los Angeles Times (Aug. 5), at hand from Ken Lanza, notes that a dealer's collection of Conan Doyle material, acquired by the Center 30 years ago, includes his underwear.
266. Julie McKuras has reported an invasion of statues in St. Paul (as with the elephants and donkeys in Washington, or the cows, moose, and other animals in other cities in recent years). One statue is "Detective Linus"; there's a different picture at <www.TwinCities.com> (find the article titled "Linus Blankets St. Paul" and then click on "Seeking Philanthropy My Dear Watson"). At the end of the summer the statue will be donated to the Sherlock Holmes collections at the University of Minnesota (the gift, by the F. R. Bigelow Foundation, will be in memory of the late Ronald M. Hubbs).
267. Sorry about that: the new issue of Scarlet Street (Jul 03 #5) focuses on "The Fly" (1958), as editor Richard Valley has noted. The paragraph's other references to film titles are, fortunately, correct.
268. Those who enjoyed the series of pastiches written by Bert Coules and aired by BBC Radio 4 last year will welcome the news that he'd preparing to write a new series of "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (again starring Clive Merrison as Holmes and Andrew Sachs as Watson), based on more of the unrecorded cases. Bert has suggested that the "tantalizing throwaway references" in the Canonical stories were "composed by Doyle in great glee, secure in the knowledge that he'd never have to come up with plots to fit descriptions."
269. "The Sherlock Holmes Collection" is a two-CD-ROM set from Hallmark Home Entertainment ($19.98) with the four television films that starred Matt Frewer as Holmes and Kenneth Welsh as Watson. Reviews indicate that there are no added-value features.
270. The summer 2002 issue of the Tonga Times offers news of the world of Sherlockian miniatures, with color photographs of Oksana Korolenko's miniature rooms, and miniatures of the portraits of General Charles Gordon and Henry Ward Beecher for those who need them for their recreations of the sitting room; membership (including the newsletter) costs $10.50 a year ($11.50 to Canada, $13.50 elsewhere) from Trish & Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229 <hometown.aol.com/miniingtonasociety/mini1.htm>.
271. Aug 03 #4: Lou Lewis notes that the BSI's "Silver Blaze" weekend at Saratoga Race Track was a great success. And that Antiques and the Arts Weekly reported that a drawing by Jean-Baptiste Greuze recently sold at auction in St. Louis for $92,700. Visitors to Edinburgh might wish to include the National Gallery of Scotland on their itineraries; the Gallery own four paintings by Greuze, and one of them is "A Girl with Folded Hands" (bequeathed to the museum in 1861, it is unlikely to have been the painting in Moriarty's study at the time of "The Valley of Fear"). Greuze painted many young girls in similar poses; his girl with folded hands is shown on p. 197 of the Dec. 1962 issue of The Baker Street Journal, and on p. I-478 in THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES.
272. Further to the report (Apr 03 #1) about Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME, there's nothing directly Sherlockian in Alona Wartofsky's interview with Haddon in the Washington Post (Aug. 14) (you can read it at <www.washingtonpost.com>), but there is news for fanatic collectors: there are two British editions (one for young adults) in addition to the American edition. And Warner Bros. has plans for a film which will be produced by a team that includes actor Brad Pitt; they have hired screenwriter Steve Kloves (who adapted the Harry Potter books for the movies).
273. Catherine Cooke has kindly provided a copy of Great Britain's new stamp (in an "Extreme Endeavours" set), honoring Robert Falcon Scott, whose copy of THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, brought to the Antarctic in 1910, is preserved on Cape Evans, in the Ross Sea, in the hut from which Scott set off on his ill-fated attempt to be the first to reach the South Pole. Also in the set is a stamp honoring Sir Ernest Shackleton; he wanted to be part of the expedition but was rejected by Scott and went on to be a celebrated Antarctic explorer in his own right (Shackleton's brother was one of the prime suspects in the theft of the Irish Crown Jewels, an unsolved mystery with which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was involved in a minor way).
274. "Curiosities" is a continuing one-page feature in the Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction; in the February issue Claude Lalumiere praises Arthur Byron Cover's AN EAST WIND COMING (1979) as "a decadent smorgasbord oozing sex and nihilism" and a "dense and mind-warping novel." The novel features "the consulting detective", "the good doctor", Jack the Ripper, and others; it was described here (Oct 79 #2) as even more impenetrable than Cover's THE PLATYPUS OF DOOM AND OTHER NIHILISTS (1976), a collection that included "The Clam of Catastrophe" (in which the consulting detective and the good doctor attempt to learn why some people can't accept sexism).
275. Reported by Ashgate Press: THE ALTERNATIVE SHERLOCK HOLMES: PASTICHES, PARODIES AND COPIES, edited by Peter Ridgway Watt and Joseph Green (in June, 368 pp., $79.95); "provides a new approach to the Sherlock Holmes literature, as well as discussing many works that have for years remained forgotten." And: SHERLOCK'S SISTERS: THE BRITISH FEMALE DETECTIVE, 1864-1913, by Joseph A. Kestner (in November, 254 pp., $79.95); "concentrating on detection by women, particularly those following the creation of Sherlock Holmes by Arthur Conan Doyle in 1887."

276. Aug 03 #5: The Afghanistan Perceivers of Oklahoma's newsletter is called The Dispatch, and the August issue offers six pages of amusing Sherlockian puns and shaggy-dog stories. You can request a copy from Vic Lahti (8515 East 64th Street, Tulsa, OK 74133); send him a self-addressed stamped envelope and an extra 37c stamp to help cover photocopying costs.
277. Peter Ashman spotted a Sherlock Holmes mask (M.C.7) produced by the Mamelok Press in Britain in 1999 in a set of eight Millennium Collection masks (for the parties, one assumes, at which people celebrated the arrival of the new millennium); it is still available, from PartyMasks (4717 61st Avenue Terrace West, Bradenton, FL 34210) (800-201-0780) <www.partymasks.com>. $25.00 postpaid for the set of eight masks (sorry: the Sherlock Holmes mask isn't offered separately). The life-size mask is shown here in a smaller illustration.

278. Aug 03 #6: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner, honoring the world's first forensic geologist, on Nov. 5, at 7:00 pm, at the Elephant & Castle in Seattle, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. The Elephant & Castle is at 1415 5th Avenue (in the basement of the Red Lion Hotel); our tradition discourages scholarly papers, slide shows, and quizzes (and our agenda consists entirely of toasts, some scholarly, but many not). We also will be honoring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who visited Seattle in June 1923, during his last lecture tour in the United States. If you would like to participate in the festivities, please contact David N. Haugen (3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332 <www.soundofthebaskervilles.com> or me (see below).
279. Further to the report (Jul 03 #6) on names proposed for a society for Sherlockian scuba-divers, I've received more suggestions, from Scott Monty: The Sopping Bundle, The Birlstone Manorists, the Von Borks [he was a self-contained man, as were J. Neil Gibson and Sherlock Holmes], The Bruce-Partington Submariners, A Canonical Diversion [diver-scion], the Seal's Kins, the Boscombe Pool Party, the Water-tight Compartments, and Deep Waters; Warren Randall: Soul(s) into Water (sic); Roger Burrows: The Sub-Librarians; and Jerry Kegley: Sherlockian Club Underwater Breathers Association. The competition, such as it was, is now declared closed, pending a decision by one or more of the scuba-diving Sherlockians (and there are some) to volunteer to found a society.
280. Costa Rossakis spotted an excellent article in the fall issue of Pipes and Tobacco about Bob Hess' collection of Sherlockian pipes carved by Marc Darrah; the pipes are extremely detailed, and there are lots of illustrations. $7.95, and they're at 808 Faringdon Place #200, Raleigh, NC 27609 (919-872-5040) <www.pt-magazine.com>.
281. Further to Philip Attwell's report (Jan 03 #5) Sherlock Holmes broadcasts on BBC 7 digital radio, he notes that the BBC 7 newsletter (Aug. 1) has a story about the recent celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Carleton Hobbs Bursary Awards, intended to bring new acting talent to radio. Clive Merrison, the only actor to have recorded all of the Canonical stories, and a former winner of the award, was on hand for the festivities, as were Paul Copley, Bill Nighy, Mark Perry, Andrew Sachs, Stephen Tomkinson, Nina Wadia, and Timothy West. Carleton Hobbs was an O.B.E. and an honorary member of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and died in 1978; his first Canonical role for the BBC was Watson (with Arthur Wontner as Holmes) in 1943, and Hobbs was the BBC's Holmes from the 1940s to the end of the 1960s.
282. William Woolfolk died on July 20. He wrote novels (including the 1968 best seller THE BEAUTIFUL COUPLE), television scripts (he was chief scriptwriter for "The Defenders" from 1961 to 1965), and stories for comic books (he was one of the most highly-paid writers in the 1940s). He claimed to have created Captain Marvel's exclamation "Holy Moley" (giving Captain Marvel something to say when he was particularly astonished); Captain Marvel Jr. meets Sherlock Holmes in CAPTAIN MARVEL JR. (Dec. 16, 1942), and "Captain Marvel and Mr. Tawny's Detective Case" will be found in CAPTAIN MARVEL (May 1950).

283. Sep 03 #1: The one-page "Curiosities" feature in the Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction (Aug 03 #4) continues to recommend interesting books. In the September issue Paul Di Filippo suggests: "To concoct a unique fantasy novel, mix a dash of Virginia Woolf's interior monologues, a jigger of Robert Nathan's whimsy, a soupcon of Noel Coward's witty sophistication, a handful of Kuttneresque children, and a pinch of Robert Aickman's eerie atmospherics." The book he is recommending is Christopher Morley's THUNDER ON THE LEFT (1925); Di Filippo obviously is a Morley fan; in the June 1999 issue he recommended Morley's WHERE THE BLUE BEGINS (1922) (Oct 99 #1)
284. John J. Brousch died on Aug. 27. He was an enthusiastic Sherlockian, and a member of many of the societies in and near Chicago. John's interests were much broader than Sherlock Holmes: he enjoyed art and heraldry and building ship models (and managed to work Sherlock Holmes into all those areas).
285. Bill Dorn's attractive Sherlock Holmes Calendar for 2004 is in full color, by way of celebrating Holmes' 150th birthday; most of the monthly illustrations are by Frederic Dorr Steele, with the daily entries noting Canonical events of interest. $16.95 postpaid (or $18.45 to Canada or $19.45 elsewhere); checks can be sent to William S. Dorn at 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210, and there's a web-site at <www.theshlockstore.com>.
286. Philip Bergem's 56-page pamphlet THE FAMILY AND RESIDENCES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE offers some of the results of his continuing research on the family: birth, marriage, and death dates of the Doyles and Conan Doyles, and information about residences, military service, and gravestone inscriptions. It is available from the author (3829 172nd Avenue NW, Andover, MN 55304; the postpaid cost is $22.50 ($23.00 to Canada), and it's also available (£13.00 plus shipping) from Rupert Books <www.rupert-books.co.uk>.
287. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled at the Alley Theatre in Houston, Oct. 1020-Nov. 2, 2003. The box office address is 615 Texas Avenue, Houston, TX 77002) (713-228-8421) <www.alleytheatre.org>.
288. Mary Burke reports that she will be joining an Ancient Order of Hibernians tour of Catholic and rebel sites in Northern Ireland and the Republic, Jan. 27-Feb. 4, 2004 (and notes that the Ancient Order of Freeman, and the Molly Maguires, were prominent in "The Valley of Fear"). More information about the tour is available from the travel agent Terry Flynn, and the deadline for reservations is Oct. 15 (800-678-7848) <terryflynn@aol.com>.
289. For the musically-minded completists: Many episodes of the "Fibber and Mollie" radio series are available on cassettes and CDs, and you might want to acquire a copy of the program that aired on May 13, 1941 (listed variously as "Salmon Dinner" and "Fibber and Mollie are expecting a huge fish to arrive"). Tyke Niver has reported that the series also featured the King's Men, who on that program sang "Mush, Mush" (the music and lyrics were published in THE SCOTTISH STUDENTS' SONG BOOK in 1891, and reprinted in W. T. Rabe's pamphlet WE *ALWAYS* MENTION AUNT CLARA IN 1990). Sherlockians (and others) now sing "Aunt Clara" to the music of "Mush, Mush" (rather than the original music composed by Bud and Ruth Willis in 1936).
290. Sep 03 #2: James P. Shannon died on Aug. 28. He was a Catholic priest and bishop in the archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis when he resigned over his dissent with church teaching about artificial birth control and other issues; he then became vice president at St. John's College in Santa Fe, and began a career in philanthropy that brought him back to Minneapolis, where he was a member of the Norwegian Explorers. He wrote about the Hench Collection in a booklet published in 1984, and contributed an essay about Silver Blaze to the anthology THE BAKER STREET DOZEN (1987).

291. Further to the report (Aug 03 #2) on William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" scheduled at the Mauch Chunk Opera House, in Jim Thorpe, Pa., Oct. 3-5 and 10-12, Gideon Hill is organizing a theater party for the 2:00 pm matinee on Oct. 5. If you are interested in attending, please contact Gideon (64 Bridle Road, Glenside, PA 19038) (215-280-2004) <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>.
292. Gideon also reports that Mycroft's League of Philadelphia has two events on its October schedule: the Diogenes Luncheon at noon on Oct. 24, in the Meredith Cafe at the Union League Club (there may be a limited Sherlockian program); and at noon on Oct. 25 a buffet luncheon at the historic College of Pharmacy at the University of Sciences, which will be followed by a panel discussion (by forensic toxicologist Marina Stajic and two colleagues) of "The Devil's Foot", and a tour of the college's Pharmacy Museum (which has many items of Sherlockian interest). Additional information is available from Gideon (see above).
293. Madhustree Mukerjee's THE LAND OF NAKED PEOPLE: ENCOUNTERS WITH STONE AGE ISLANDERS (Houghton Mifflin, 268 pp., $24.00) is about the Andaman Islanders. Jonathan Yardley's review in the Washington Post (Aug. 14) is lukewarm ("a book that is in more or less equal measures interesting and maddening").
294. Further to the item (Jul 03 #3) about the report from Manorial Auctioneers that Conan Doyle took the name "Baskerville" from the Baskerville family at Pencelli Castle in Brecon, Wales, Dave Galerstein notes that he disagrees, recalling that the coach driver who took Conan Doyle and Fletcher Robinson round Dartmoor was named Baskerville. More information about the coachman available from Dave, his address is 49 Stonewyck Place, Monroe Township, NJ 08831 <davebsi@erols.com>.
295. Don Pollock has discovered EL DILEMA DE LOS PROCERES: SHERLOCK HOLMES Y EL MISTERIO DEL ARGENTINO ENMASCARADO, by Jorge Fernandez (Buenos Aires: Editorial Sudamericana, 1997; 221 pp.). And Don Yates reports that Sherlock Holmes is treated with respect, and that the Baker Street scene is faithfully evoked in the novel, which is aimed for an Argentine audience: the cast of characters includes many real figures in Argentine history. The publisher's address is Humberto 1o 531, Buenos Aires, Argentina.
296. Further to the report (Nov 00 #6) Britain's endangered bitterns (it was in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that Stapleton suggested that "I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns"), a story in The Daily Telegraph (Aug. 22) was headlined "Bitterns are Booming Again After Conservation Work Saves Habitat". Conservationists counted 42 booming males this year, the highest figure since 1983.
297. Sep 03 #3: Reported: THE ORIENTAL CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ted Riccardi, from Random House (320 pp., $24.95); nine short stories featuring Holmes during the Great Hiatus, in Sumatra, Tibet, and other exotic settings. According to a Publishers Weekly forecast (Aug. 11), "Like many recent Holmes pastichers, the author transforms the original thinking machine into an Indiana Jones-like character facing century-old deathtraps and charged with recovering legendary jewels."
298. THE ALTERNATIVE SHERLOCK HOLMES: PASTICHES, PARODIES AND COPIES, by Peter Ridgway Watt and Joseph Green (Aldershot/Burlington: Ashgate Press, 2003; 359 pp., $79.95), is an interesting review of the thousands of items that were published between 1892 (C. C. Rothwell's parody "Adventures of Sherwood Hoakes") and 2001 (Donald Thomas' collection SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RUNNING NOOSE). There are sections on the unchronicled cases; period pastiches; non-period pastiches; friends, relations, and one enemy; parodies and impostors; and copies and rivals. And the authors extend their reach for major publishers to society periodicals, summarizing each item, with careful indexes and identifications of sources; the book is a fine survey, intended for the academic community, but any Sherlockian interested in the genre will find the book fascinating, if only for the many opportunities to mutter "I haven't read that one".
299. Further to Tyke Niver's report (Jul 03 #6) on Gillette Castle, now open to the public again after a $9 million restoration, he and Teddie appeared at the castle on Sept. 20 as Mr. and Mrs. Gillette during a fund-raiser to benefit restoration of Gillette's miniature railroad. The photograph appeared in the Hartford Courant (Sept. 22), accompanying an article kindly forwarded by Bill Force.
300. "The Disembodied Spirit" is an exhibition organized by the Bowdoin College Museum of Art in Brunswick, Maine, where it opened on Sept. 25 (and it continues through Dec. 7); their web-site is at <www.bowdoin.edu/artmuseum>. The theme of the exhibition is an exploration of the art and culture of the late 19th and late 20th centuries involving the depictions or suggestions of ghosts, and it will include photographs from Dame Jean Conan Doyle's estate (the photographs are on loan from the Harry Ransom Research Center at the University of Texas). The exhibition travels next to the Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art in Kansas City (Mar. 5-May 23, 2004) and the Austin Museum of Art in Austin, Tex. (Sept. 11-Nov. 28, 2004).
301. Steven S. Raab Autographs is offering an interesting autograph letter written by Conan Doyle in April 1927 in which he says that "I fear that there is little chance of my doing much more literary work," that "I was glad to withdraw Holmes before the public were too weary of him," and that he has a story "The Fabricious Deep" in mind. The price is $11,900; and the dealer is at Box 471, Ardmore, PA 19003 (800-977-8333) <www.raabautographs.com>.

302. Sep 03 #4: Communication (the newsletter of The Pleasant Places of Florida) has now reached its 234th issue: The Enquirer Star Tattler (All the News That's Fit for Ink), prepared by Wanda and Jeff Dow, with an amusing assortment of tabloid stories about the Canon. Membership includes a subscription and costs $12.00 a year ($13.00 overseas) from Carl Heifetz, 1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655; if you want only the tabloid issue, that's $2.00 postpaid.
303. "'It is an old maxim of mine,' said Holmes, 'that when you have excluded the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'" Answered Watson, 'Perhaps, you may have convinced me as to the motive, but you are yet to explain how it is done.'" That's the epigraph for the first chapter ("Secare and Eros: Sex, Love, Science, and Circumstances") in Joann Ellison Rodgers' SEX: A NATURAL HISTORY (Henry Holt, 2001), discovered recently by Christy Richards. And if you have concluded that Watson's answer doesn't sound like Watson, well, you're right: it's not found in the Canon.
304. Karen Murdock (1212 Yale Avenue SE, Minneapolis, MN 55414) offers Sherlockian stickers with a silhouette on a green background; the silhouette also appeared on her bumper sticker (May 03 #6). $2.00 postpaid for 25 stickers if you're outside the U.S., please send currency.
305. An exhibition on "The Age of Watteau, Chardin, and Fragonard: Masterpieces of French Genre Painting" will open at the National Gallery of Art in Washington on Oct. 12 (through Jan. 11), and it will display more than one hundred French eighteenth-century paintings, including "emotional family dramas" by Jean-Baptiste Greuze (one of his paintings was in Professor Moriarty's study at the time of "The Valley of Fear").
306. There's a new paperback edition of Ed McBain's THE HECKLER (New York: Pocket Books, 2003; 254 pp., $7.99), with a new afterword by the author; it's an 87th Precinct mystery novel that has both cops and crooks acknowledging use of a plot from a Sherlock Holmes story. and McBain mentions Holmes and Moriarty briefly in the afterword.
307. Robert Duvall was honored on Sept. 18 with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. "It's a privilege for me to work as a professional actor," he said. "I am very proud of that and I still got a lot in me before they start wiping away the drool." Duvall played Dr. Watson in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976).

308. Roger Llewellyn continues to tour in "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act!": on Oct. 9 he will be in Verona, participating in a Sherlockian evening at the Live Literature Association (an organization dedicated to English-language cultural exchange). The evening will also feature a wine tasting arranged by Patricia Guy (founder of The Assorted and Stradivarious of Verona), who reports that a glass of Amarone and a Recioto will set the warming tone for "a very special evening's entertainment." Tickets can be ordered from the Association <verontalivelit@hotmail.com>; details on the event are available from Patricia (Via Fama 11, 37121 Verona, Italy) <benguy@libero.it>.

309. Sep 03 #5: This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London shows a watercolor by Douglas E. West of a snowy scene in Switzerland, where Holmes and Watson, with their carpet bags, are on the run from Moriarty. The cost is $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (or £5.50 to the U.K., £7.00 elsewhere); checks (payable to the Society, please), can be sent to Judi Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington BR6 8DC, England.
310. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002) will repeat on "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV on Oct. 26, repeating on Oct. 31 (but check your local stations); it's the latest television version, produced by the BBC, starring Richard Roxburgh as Holmes, Ian Hart as Watson, and Richard E. Grant as Stapleton.
311. Derham Groves recommends (and so do I) a web-site at <www.crimefactory.net> that offers a special Sherlockian issue with interesting contributions from Sherlockians. Some of the material (and other material that's not available at the web-site) will be published in the catalogue for an exhibition on Sherlockian private presses at the University of Melbourne in April.
312. Randall Stock maintains an excellent web-site about the manuscripts of the Sherlock Holmes stories at <members.aol.com/_ht_a/shbest/ref/rfms.htm> with a checklist of facsimiles (partial and complete) for 25 stories, and links to images of three of them.
313. There's a new two-volume edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, with the apocryphal tales and two Sherlockian articles by Conan Doyle, and introductions and notes by Kyle Freeman (New York: Barnes & Noble Classics, 2003); vol. 1 (709 pp.) and vol. 2 (705 pp.) cost $7.95 each.
314. John Sherwood, who for many years impersonated Sherlock Holmes at the Victorian Villa Inn in Michigan, has moved to the east coast, and he will appear as Holmes during the "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore; the event starts with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00, and ends at 1:00). There's no charge for the festivities, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore. More information is available at <www.geocities.com/jcsherwood/BakerStreet99.htm>.
315. And John will appear as Holmes during Mystery Weekends at the Fairville Inn in Chadds Ford, Pa., on Jan. 9-11 and 16-18. Additional details are available at <www.geocities.com/jcsherwood/BakerStreet13.htm>, and you can contact the Inn at 506 Kennett Pike, Route 52, Chadds Ford, PA 19317 (877-285-7772) <info@fairvilleinn.com>.
316. Bill Vande Water reports that Stu Shiffman will be Guest of Honor at Ditto 16, a national fanzine convention in Eugene, Ore., Oct. 10-12. Stu has won a Hugo Award for fan artists for his science-fiction and fantasy work, and he's an excellent Sherlockian artist as well. More information on the convention will be found at <home.att.net/~ditto16/contents/ditto.html>.
317. "'But the romance was there,' I remonstrated. 'I could not tamper with the facts.'" was the thoroughly appropriate quotation from the Canon on the invitation to the wedding of Ev Herzog and John Baesch, which was celebrated in New York on Sept. 20. Congratulations to the happy couple . . .
318. Sep 03 #6: Further to the item (May 03 #1) on Michael Kurland's anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES; UNTOLD STORIES OF THE GREATEST DETECTIVE, he reported in an interview in the North Bay Bohemian (Sept. 18) that the book has been so well-received that his publisher has asked for a sequel: SHERLOCK HOLMES: ONLY THE MISSING YEARS, an anthology of stories set during the Great Hiatus.
319. Don Izban has announced that the third meeting of The Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society will be held in Davenport, Iowa, on July 22-25, 2004. Davenport is the birthplace of Dixieland great Bix Biederbecke; the program (with Don as chairman) will focus on his music. More information is available from Donald B. Izban, 1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068.
320. The fall 2003 issue of The Serpentine Muse offers news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, including an attractively illustrated "Dainty Bouquet of Canonical Blossoms" by Laurie Manifold and Susan Vizoskie, and reports on planning for SERPENTINE MUSINGS: AN ANTHOLOGY FROM THE JOURNAL OF THE ADVENTURESSES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (to be edited by Susan Diamond and Marilynne McKay for publication next year) and the 2004 Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal, which will offer a history of the Adventuresses (edited by Susan Rice). The Muse, published quarterly, costs $10.00 a year (checks payable to the Adventuresses, please) from Evelyn A. Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011).
321. I reported earlier (Oct 01 #2) on the deerstalkered Santa (in the "Island of Misfit Toys" series with Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer); Jim Suszynski spotted a hanging ornament showing Santa and Rudolph on a television screen discounted to $4.99 (from $10.00). It's made by ENESCO (item 104288); Elk Grove Village, IL 60007 <www.enesco.com>.
322. The autumn issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's report on the library's copy of an early Yiddish translation of "The Resident Patient" (published in Warsaw in 1906/1907), Victoria Gill's discussion of Conan Doyle's influence on Wodehouse, Karen Campbell's report on this summer's visit to Toronto by the American Library Association (and The Sub-Librarian's Scion), and news from Doug Wrigglesworth of a new biography of Conan Doyle by Georgina Doyle, the widow of Sir Arthur's nephew Brigadier John Doyle, scheduled for next year. Copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwrig@sympatico.ca>.
323. Georgina Doyle will be at the Toronto Reference Library on Oct. 25 to offer a sneak preview of her new biography, titled OUT OF THE SHADOWS: THE STORY OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S FIRST FAMILY. The public is welcome at the event, and there's no charge for admission.
324. Andrew Gulli reports that the third holiday issue of the new Strand Magazine will be published in October, with new fiction by Ray Bradbury, John Mortimer, and Ruth Rendell, as well articles, interviews, and a Sherlockian a pastiche. Subscriptions (four issues) cost $24.95 (U.S. and Canada) or $35.95 (elsewhere), and the magazine's address is Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (UK: 800-961-280) <www.strandmag.com>.
325. Sep 03 #7: Further to the report (Mar 03 #4) on Thomas B. Wheeler's FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON (a travel guide to more than 200 Canonical sites that are listed by closest underground station and by adventure). his book has now been published by iUniverse (94 pp., $12.95). You can order the book at stores, or at the publisher's web-site <www.iuniverse.com>; you can also browse the book at the web-site.
326. Donald O'Connor died on Sept. 27. Best known for his acrobatic song-and-dance number "Make 'Em Laugh" in the film "Singin' in the Rain" (1952) and for his starring role in the "Francis the Talking Mule" series of films (he abandoned the series in 1955, complaining that "When you've made six pictures and the mule still gets more fan mail than you do..."), he also was Dr. Watson in a "Save Sherlock Holmes" episode of "Fantasy Island" in 1982 (with Peter Lawford as Holmes and Mel Ferrer as Moriarty).

327. The fact that Sherlock Holmes kept his tobacco "in the toe end of a Persian slipper" is noted in the Canon (in "The Musgrave Ritual"), and the slipper is usually found in recreations of the sitting-room attached to the side of the fireplace. Holmes was not the only person who displayed Persian slippers in this fashion: Herman Melville also did: a pair of them, one on each side of the fireplace at "Arrowhead" in Pittsfield, Mass., where he lived when he wrote MOBY DICK. This photograph of the fireplace and the slippers was taken in 1897 and recently reported by Kelly H. Blau. "Arrowhead" has been preserved, and it is open to the public, and you can visit Melville's fireplace; the slippers and many other Melville artifacts are displayed in the Melville Room at the Berkshire Athen'um in Pittsfield. photograph from the Berkshire Athen'um, Pittsfield, Massachusetts,

328. Sep 03 #8: The thirteenth annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend is scheduled for Apr. 16-18, 2004, in and near Chicago; there will be a dinner on Friday, a running of The Silver Blaze on Saturday, a Fortescue Honours brunch on Sunday, and other events. If you'd like to be on their mailing list, you should contact Allan Devitt and Susan Diamond, 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
329. "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It" (1977) is now available on DVD (from Kultur, $14.95); it's a British one-hour television program broadcast by ITV in Britain (and by PBS-TV in the United States), with John Cleese (Arthur Sherlock-Holmes) and Arthur Lowe (Dr. William Watson), and it offers low humor, excellent puns, and a few surprises.
330. John Sherwood notes that "Sherlock Holmes: The True Story" (a new documentary) will air on the Discovery channel on Oct. 5. According to the synopsis: "In 1886, Arthur Conan Doyle borrows the character, physical qualities and diagnostic genius of Dr. Joseph Bell to create the famous detective."
331. "Pitldown Hoax Hunt Narrows to Two Men" was the headline on a story by Mark Henderson in The Times (Sept. 6). The Natural History Museum in London is planning to celebrate to 50th anniversary of the exposure of the hoax (in The Times on Nov. 21, 1953) by putting the fake fossils on display for the public for the first time since the exposure, and two experts will speak at the museum's Pfizer Annual Science Forum: Chris Stringer implicates Charles Dawson, and Brian Gardiner argues for Martin Hinton, and both experts agree that other suspects (including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) aren't the culprits.
332. Some years ago (Nov 92 #5) I noted that Michael T. R. B. Turnbull's EDINBURGH CHARACTERS included the colorful Edinburgh policeman James McLevy; many of his cases were published in 1861 in CURIOSITIES OF CRIME IN EDINBURGH and THE SLIDING SCALE OF LIFE, and although there is no record of a Arthur Conan Doyle having read those books, it intriguing to think of him encountering and enjoying the stories. Modern readers can now enjoy them too, in two recent collections published in Edinburgh by the Mercat Press: MCLEVY: THE EDINBURGH DETECTIVE (2001; 185 pp.) and MCLEVY RETURNS: FURTHER DISCLOSURES OF THE EDINBURGH DETECTIVE (2002; 231 pp.); £9.99 each.
333. Reported: Carole Nelson Douglas' FEMME FATALE (Forge, $25.95); the latest in Carole's series about Irene Adler and Penelope Huxleigh (and now Elizabeth Jane Cochran aka Nellie Bly), set in New York. Alan Stockwell's THE SINGULAR ADVENTURES OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES; 15 short-story pastiches, from UPSO Ltd. <www.upso.co.uk>, 245 pages, paper covers, £7.99 or $12.95. Dennis Burges' GRAVES GATE: A NOVEL OF POSSESSION (Carroll & Graf, $25.00); a mystery that features Arthur Conan Doyle in London in 1922. Michael Cox's THE OXFORD BOOK OF VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES (Oxford Univ. Press, $17.95); an anthology of 31 short stories (including "The Blue Carbuncle" and "The Lost Special") that was published in 1992 as VICTORIAN TALES OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION (Oct 92 #5). Brent Monahan's THE SCEPTERED ISLE CLUB (St. Mar-tin's Minotaur, $13.95); a murder mystery set in London in 1905, with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle involved.
334. Oct 03 #1: The thirteenth volume of The Shoso-in Bulletin, edited by Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes, and published by The Men with the Twisted Konjo, is as usual a fine anthology of articles, essays, reviews, artwork, and other material by contributors from nine countries, with 167 pages (all in English); $13.00 (plus shipping) from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>. Contributors to previous volumes can order the new volume from Mel Hughes (2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32246; $10.00 postpaid. Yuichi has announced that the next volume will be the last in the series; if you would like to contribute to the fourteenth volume, his address is: 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitakashi, Tokyo 181-0012, Japan <www.parkcity.ne.jp/~hirayama/index.htm>.
335. John Hawkesworth died on Sept. 30. First an artist (studying in Picasso's studio), he became a television scriptwriter and producer, and won a British Screenwriter's Award for his adaptations for "The Stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" on BBC-2 in 1967. He also produced "Upstairs, Downstairs" and developed "Danger UXB", "The Duchess of Duke Street", "The Flame Trees of Thika", and "By the Sword Divided", and in 1984 Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series, for which he also adapted eight stories. In 1988 he was considering a series about Conan Doyle, and was quoted as saying Conan Doyle "was the sort of chap who would play cricket in the morning, ski during the afternoon, and write a Sherlock Holmes story in the evening."
336. Further to the report (Sep 03 #5) on the new edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Barnes & Noble, 2003), vol. 2 includes two parodies by Conan Doyle (rather than two apocryphal tales). And completists should act quickly to buy copies of vol. 1; Jon Lellenberg reports that the first printing contained so many misprints that a second printing will be in the stores soon.
337. This will be the third time that the first issue of an edition of Sherlock Holmes stories has been withdrawn and replaced by a second issue. You are invited to try to identify the other two instances.
338. Mark Alberstat's 2004 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
339. The comic-book series THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN has ended its second volume with the November issue ($3.50), in which the Martians lose; the story closes with an announcement that "there now follows an intermission," so one might assume that the series will resume. RUSE also continues (with Simon Archard and Emma Bishop) in issue #22 ($2.95); there will be a Sherlockian cover on issue #25, according to Crossgen (the publisher).
340. If you missed "Sherlock Holmes: The True Story" on the Discovery channel on Oct. 5 (or later in the month), you can wait for a repeat: it's a one-hour documentary about Dr. Joseph Bell, produced by CineNova in Canada, with interviews with Owen Dudley Edwards and Ely Liebow, David Bronfman as Arthur Conan Doyle in the dramatizations, and atmospheric views of Edinburgh.
341. Oct 03 #2: Six of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian manuscripts are to be offered at auction at Christie's King Street salesroom in London on Nov. 19, from the estate of Dame Jean Conan Doyle, to benefit six charities chosen by Dame Jean. The manuscripts are "A Duet: with an Occasional Chorus" (1899), "A Glimpse of the Army" (1900), "How the Brigadier Lost an Ear" (1902), "Brigadier Gerard at Waterloo" (1903), "Ypres, September 15" (1915), and "The Maracot Deep" (1927). The charities are the RAF Benevolent Fund; the Not Forgotten Association; the RAF Association; the Elizabeth Finn Trust (formerly the Distinguished Gentlefolks Aid Association); Help the Hospices; and the Royal Star and Garter Home in Richmond. Additional information is available from Christie's at 8 King Street, St. James's, London SW1Y 6QT, England) <www.christies.com>.
342. The British Library has announced that it will hold a study day and commemoration of "Sir Hans Sloane (1660-1753) and His Library" on Nov. 24. There is no charge for attendance; for further details, please register your name and address with Teresa Harrington at the British Library (020-4712-7785)

- <teresa.harrington@bl.uk>. It was 250 years ago that his collections were acquired for the nation; an Act of Parliament established the British Museum in the same year, and that led to Nathan Garrideb's hopeful (or wishful) statement that "I shall be the Hans Sloane of my age."
343. The Royal Mail has celebrated the 250th anniversary of the British Museum with a set of six stamps, one of which shows a bust of Alexander the Great. Nathan Garrideb was referring to coins when he suggested that "Some prefer the Alexandrian school," but the bust will do. And the British Museum is mentioned in four Canonical tales.
344. Spotted by Scott Monty in the Holiday Preview catalog from Marshall Field's Direct (800-776.4444) <www.fields.com>: a Sherlock Holmes apothecary cabinet (based on an original in the Sherlock Holmes Museum in London), suitable for "your magnifying glasses, pipes, and deerstalker hats--or your growing media collection" of CDs cassettes, DVDs, and videos. $199.95 plus shipping (item 206499).
345. The first time the first issue of an edition of Sherlock Holmes stories was withdrawn was the first American edition of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1894), which included, contrary to Conan Doyle's wishes, "The Adventure of the Cardboard Box". The second time was the edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES published by Coles in Canada in 1980 immediately after the Conan Doyle copyright expired there; Coles reprinted the Doubleday edition but neglected to obtain permission from Christopher Morley's estate to use his "In Memoriam Sherlock Holmes" (which still was protected by copyright), and the Morley pages were razored out of the second issue.
346. House of Ascot continues to offer a wide variety of architectural bookends and models sculpted by Timothy Richards (Apr 02 #4). His 221b Baker Street (modeled after the Sherlock Holmes Museum) is 7.5 in. high and costs $79.95 plus shipping (it's item TRSL in their new catalog, and there's a 20% discount if you order before Nov. 15) (use order code T5PS). 365 Boston Post Road #244, Sudbury, MA 01776 (800-717-3105) <www.houseofascot.com>.
347. Oct 03 #3: Carolyn G. Heilbrun died on Oct. 10. She was famous as a feminist scholar at Columbia University (where she retired in 1992 as the Avalon Foundation Professor of the Humanities) and (as Amanda Cross) as the author of a series of successful detective novels; she concealed the identity of Amanda Cross for six years, worried she would damage her chances for tenure at Columbia. And she was one of the speakers at "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes in Minnesota" conference in Minneapolis in 1984; quite appropriately, she chose "Sherlock Holmes and Women" as her topic.
348. News about Carole Nelson Douglas' Irene Adler series: CASTLE ROUGE has been reissued as a paperback from Forge ($6.99). THE ADVENTRESS (published in 1991 as GOOD MORNING, IRENE) is due as a paperback from Forge in December $6.99). And SPIDER DANCE is the title of the next Irene Adler novel, due from Forge in Nov. 2004.
349. Denis Quilley died on Oct. 5. He began his career as an actor in 1945 with the Birmingham Repertory Theater, and went on to an award-winning series of roles in the West End. He also appeared in films and on television, and he played Dr. Leon Sterndale in Granada's "The Devil's Foot" in 1988 and Bob Carruthers in Granada's "The Solitary Cyclist" in 1993.
350. Barnes & Noble <http://www.bn.com> still offers handsome Sherlockian prints and posters (May 01 #6): you select the design you want, and it is shipped to you printed on paper or canvas. You can also see the artwork (and Sherlock Holmes is only one of the many categories available) at Barnes & Noble stores.
351. Noted by Jon Lellenberg: Frederic H. Sonnenschmidt's TASTES AND TALES OF A CHEF: STORIES AND RECIPES (Upper Saddle River: Pearson/Prentice Hall, 2004; 272 pp. $16.00); Fritz presided over all of the delightful Sherlockian dinners at the Culinary Institute of America, and is shown on the cover as a Sherlockian chef, and does not neglect Sherlock Holmes in his stories.
352. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers John Bergquist's tribute to the late Bryce Crawford, Julie McKuras's "100 Years Ago" discussion of Finley Peter Dunne's "Mr. Dooley", and reports from and about the collections. The newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
353. Roger Llewellyn continues to tour his fine one-man play "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act!", scheduled at the Jermyn Street Theatre in London on Dec. 1-6; the theater address is 16-B Jermyn Street, London SW1Y 6ST, London (020-7287-2875) <www.jermynstreettheatre.co.uk>
354. Reported: THE LOST WORLD OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, with a 57-page introduction by John R. Lavas; a collector's edition marking the 90th anniversary of the publication of the original story, the 168-page book has many new illustrations, in color and in black-and-white. John will inscribe the book on request, and his address is P.O. Box 14-421, Panmure, Auckland 6, New Zealand <dearborn@ihug.co.nz>; £34.00 (UK/Europe), US$55.00 (US/Canada), US$47.00 (Austria) (checks in sterling or US dollars, please).
355. Oct 03 #4: Sherlock Holmes' 150th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 16, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but it would be helpful to let Ev Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011) <eherzog@darbylaw.com> know if you're coming to the event.
356. Thursday's activities begin at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Jim Cox will lead the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with lunch at McSorley's. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be John Berendt, author of MIDNIGHT IN THE GARDEN OF GOOD AND EVIL and the Introduction to the Modern Library's 2001 edition of THE ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($11.00); seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early (details below).
357. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the hotel provides guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend each day and pay $17.00 (details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $37.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; Sherlockian authors are likely to be on hand to sign their books.
358. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 201 West 52nd Street (between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $70.00 (checks payable to Maribeau Briggs Shrawder can be sent to Paula J. Perry, 346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10128) (please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
359. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), 125 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.

360. For those who want an additional event on Friday, Paul Singleton is considering a gathering that will start at midnight at the Waterfront Ale House, at 540 Second Avenue (at East 30th Street); there will be plenty to drink, but the kitchen will be closed (which should not be a problem for those who have dined well earlier in the evening). But: Paul needs a rough estimate of how many people are interested; you can let him know at 144 East 24th Street #3-B, New York, NY 10010 (212-505-3609) <doctorsyn50@hotmail.com>. And Paul will be announcing final plans (and perhaps a name) for the event earlier during the birthday festivities.
361. Oct 03 #5: On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be offered in the dealers' room on the second floor of the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street) from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> will be glad to supply information about dealers' tables.
362. And the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold their Junior Bloodstain (a somewhat less than totally reverent gathering) in the lobby of the Hotel Algonquin at 12:30 pm; if you're planning to attend, please let Anne Cotton know (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
363. The BSI annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); there will be hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, a *cash bar for alcoholic beverages* and an open bar for non-alcoholic beverages, and the usual traditional and un-traditional entertainment, and the cost of the event is $45.00 (details be-low) until Dec. 15, or $55.00 thereafter or at the door.
364. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal brunch on Sunday, from 11:00 am to 1:00 pm at the Baker Street restaurant at 1152 First Avenue (at 63rd Street). It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations are strongly advised, to Marina Stajic (425 East 51st Street #4-A, New York, NY 10022) <mstajic@aol.com>.
365. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $179.00 a night (Tuesday through Sunday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI (the special rate is the equivalent of $156.00 plus tax). Other charges (room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians, and [note the different procedure] *room reservations must be made through the Baker Street Irregulars* (details below).
366. And here are the details: Mike Whelan's announcement will be ready in November, with prices and a reservation form for the Thursday lecture, the Martha Hudson breakfast, the Saturday reception, and the rooms at the Algonquin. If you're not on the BSI or Bash mailing lists, you can request a copy of his letter from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278.
367. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. Ask for the lowest available rate, don't be shy about asking for discounts (AAA, senior, corporate), and if you plan to arrive on Thursday you should confirm that weekend rates apply, and request written confirmation.
368. Oct 03 #6: Vanderbilt YMCA (224 East 47th St.) $65 bunk with shared bathroom (212-756-9600) ["it's a modern building in a nice neighborhood"]; Hotel 31 (120 East 31st St.) $95 single/double (seasonal discount) (212-685-3060); Mayfair Hotel (242 West 49th St.) $95 standard single/double (special rate) (212-586-0300); Super 8 Times Square (59 West 46th St.) $98 single/double (corporate rate) (212-719-2300); Cosmopolitan Hotel (95 West Broadway) $101 for their superior single/double (winter special) (212-566-1900); Wellington Hotel (7th Ave at 55th St.) $109 standard or $119 superior single/double (America's Special promotion) (212-247-3900); Comfort Inn Central Park (31 West 71st St.) $117 single/double (their senior/AAA rate) or $122 (corporate rate) (212-721-4770) [Mary Ellen especially likes the location in a very nice residential area and their boutiquey rooms]; West Park Hotel (6 Columbus Circle) $118 single/double (via ORBITZSAVER) (212 445 0200). <www.nycvisit.com> offers specials and general information, as do <www.orbitz.com> and <travelocity.com>.
369. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.
370. Warren Randall is again the first to announce a souvenir pin for the birthday festivities; the two-inch pin honors the Great Detectives' 150th birthday (note the spelling of his name on the handle), and it's available now: the postpaid coast is $8.75 (to the U.S.) or $10.50 (Canada) or $13.50 (elsewhere). Warren's address is 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720.
371. The Baker Street Journal's 2003 Christmas Annual "'The Strength and Activity of Youth': The Junior Sherlockian Movement", compiled by Stephen Clarkson; the annual offers a reminiscent look at what younger Sherlockians were doing in the 1960s and 1970s. It's not part of subscriptions to the BSI; orders can be sent to The Baker Street Journal (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); $11.00 postpaid (to the U.S. (by check or at the web-site), or $12.00 to other countries (credit-card orders accepted) <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
372. The Easton Press (47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06875) (800-211-1308) is still offering THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES in three volumes; first issued in 1987, it's a handsome leather-bound reprint (with color frontispieces) of the Heritage Press edition published in 1952 and 1957; $55.00 per volume postpaid (item 0135).
373. I have a new address and telephone number (see below) and am at long last becoming a suburbanite. It's a new house in Bethesda, with plenty of room for Bev and Samantha Wolov and me, and my library, and we've been having a lot of fun designing and deciding, and figuring out what will go where.
374. Nov 03 #1: For those who came in late: I've moved to Bethesda, in the suburbs of Washington, and the move has been rather more complicated than the last time I moved, in 1979: needless to say, this time there are a lot more books to be unpacked and shelved, and a lot more files and other things, and nothing is as instantaneous as one might wish. Which will explain why there are only four pages in this issue of my newsletter, rather than six or more pages as I have promised for many years, and why it's slightly late. I hope to find plenty of things to report on in extra pages next month.
375. "Case of Evil" (broadcast by USA cable on Oct. 25, 2002) is now available on DVD from Screen Media/Universal ($26.98); the film starred James D'Arcy (Sherlock Holmes), Roger Morlidge (Dr. Watson), Richard E. Grant (Mycroft), Vincent D'Onofrio (Moriarty).
376. The New York Police Department bomb squad celebrated its 100th anniversary this month, according to a report in the Washington Post (Nov. 24). "But ever cautious, the squad is not publicizing exactly where and when the party will occur." The bomb squad got its start when the city assigned officer Giuseppe Petrosino to lead the country's first municipal bomb squad; that assignment was "due to terror over extortion letters that would appear at homes and businesses in Italian neighborhoods in the early 1900s." One of the organizations he fought was the Camorra, known to

- Sherlockians as "The Red Circle" (in the manuscript of the story, at any rate, but the name was changed to the Carbonari when the story was published). He was eventually murdered in Palermo, and was a national hero in Italy (where he was known as "Il Sherlock Holmes d'Italia"), and he was the hero of "Il Piccolo Sherlock Holmes" (1909), a short Italian film made in Turin and released in the U.S. as "The Italian Sherlock Holmes" (1910).
377. Peter L. Stern's "Catalogue Thirty" has many attractive items, among them some fine Sherlockiana, including first editions of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, both signed by the author and previously owned by the Marquis of Donegall ($90,000), and "The Oscar Meunier Bust of Sherlock Holmes, executed by Edgar P. Smith in porcelain, and described (quite justifiably) as "one of the few attractive pieces of Sherlockian statuary" ($750). And there's a copy of the first edition of UNCLE BERNAC (1897) with holograph corrections by the author that were incorporated in later editions ($8,000). 55 Temple Place, Boston, MA 02111 <psbook@aol.com>.
378. John J. McAleer died on Nov. 21. He taught English literature at Boston College for decades, and wrote book reviews and a mystery novels, and fine biographies of Henry David Thoreau and Rex Stout. His REX STOUT (1977) won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America, and of course has discussion of Stout's long involvement with Sherlockian world.
379. And I'm reminded of John's revelation, many years ago, of the Sherlockian reason why Nero Wolfe lives on West 35th Street: Rex Stout remembered seeing William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes" in Kansas City in 1903, and later put Wolfe's house on West 35th Street because "Gillette's Holmes received his first acclaim" at the Garrick Theater on West 35th Street.
380. Nov 03 #2: Only two of the six Conan Doyle manuscripts offered at auction at Christie's King Street salesroom in London on Nov. 19 (Oct 03 #2) were sold. "A Duet: with an Occasional Chorus" brought £35,850 (in-cluding the 19.5% premium paid by the buyer), and "A Glimpse of the Army" went for £4,183; the other manuscripts failed to meet their reserves. The fortunate new owner of the manuscript of "A Duet" is Richard J. Sveum.
381. Forecast: THE MOON REFLECTS THE SUN, by Mitch Cullin; according to Publishers Weekly (Nov. 10), Cullin has sold his novel to Nan Talese's Doubleday imprint. The novel portrays Sherlock Holmes in retirement at 93, "struggling to come to terms with a mysterious case from his past."
382. In the Novgorod region of Russia the "best police officers will be presented with porcelain statuettes of Sherlock Holmes to sum up the results of a competition named after the great detective," the BBC reported (Nov. 10) in an item spotted by Karen Murdock. One assumes that collectors of Sherlockian statuettes will now be in hot pursuit of prize-winning Novgorod police officers in hopes that one of them might possibly be persuaded to part with one of prizes.
383. DETECTA-CROSTICS: PUZZLES OF MYSTERY, by Jeanne M. Jacobson and Jennie G. Jacobson (Carmel: Crum Creek Press, 2003; 187 pp., $18.00), is a collection of imaginative word puzzles keyed to mystery fiction, with lots of anagrams and word-play and annotations and detailed explanations of the answers.
384. Doug Greene reports that Crippen & Landru have added William L. DeAndrea's MURDER--ALL KINDS to their "Lost Classics" series. The collection of all of Bill's short stories in the mystery genre includes "The Adventure of the Christmas Tree" (reprinted from Martin H. Greenberg's HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS) and "The Adventure of the Cripple Parade" (reprinted from Marvin Kaye's RESURRECTED HOLMES). The publisher is at Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (877-622-665) <www.crippenlandru.com>; $29.00 (cloth) or $19.00 (paper).
385. Fans of Basil Rathbone might wish to acquire an inscribed and signed photograph offered in catalog 120 from David Schulson Autographs (225 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10122 <schulsonautographs.com>; it's not a Sherlockian photograph (it's dated Mar. 3, 1938), and the price is $450.
386. Someone has been having fun setting the peeps on Sherlockians. That's the five orange peeps, which arrived in mailboxes this month, from Capt. John Calhoun in Savannah (postmarked from southern California). They're "Creepy Peeps" (made by Marshmallow Peeps as a Halloween 2003 special); the company has been making those little gooey chicks for 50 years, and of course quite wisely no longer restricts its marketing to the Easter season. If you were not one of the fortunate recipients, you can see a picture of the five orange peeps at the company's web-site <www.marshmallowpeeps.com> (click on "About Peeps" and then on "Halloween").
387. Hugh Kenner died on Nov. 24. He was a renowned literary scholar and professor who wrote about Ezra Pound, T. S. Eliot, Samuel Beckett, and James Joyce; his article "From Eccles Street to Baker Street: The Odyssey of a Myth" in the Hudson Review (1949), revised and reprinted in DUBLIN'S JOYCE (1955), was the first analysis of the Sherlockian echoes in Joyce's work.
388. Nov 03 #3: The Learning Channel has over the years aired an excellent series of one-hour programs about "Great Books", but The Learning Channel has changed its name to TLC and its programming now tends to ignore anything educational; four new shows were produced for the series in 2002, but they didn't air at the traditional times. Which is a pity, since one of the four programs was devoted to "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (I believe the others were "2001: A Space Odyssey", "The Wizard of Oz", and Arabian Nights"). "The Hound of the Baskervilles" show featured actors on location in England and interviews with Dan Stashower and me and others, and it did finally air: at 2:00 am on Oct. 24, without any publicity whatsoever and in fact with another series listed in the television guides. The show may repeat, but you'll need to check their web-site at <www.tlc.com> frequently; some of the shows are airing on the Discovery HD Theater channel (that's HD for high definition). And some of the earlier shows are available on videocassette (click on Discovery Channel Store), so it's possible that "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will turn up on cassette eventually.
389. Edmund L. Hartmann died on Nov. 28. He was a prolific screenwriter who began his career working on Broadway comedies in the early 1930s, and moved to Hollywood in 1934; he wrote screenplays for comedies and dramas, and as a television writer-producer he created "My Three Sons" for Fred MacMurray. His screenplay credits included the Rathbone/Bruce films "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1943) and "The Scarlet Claw" (1944).
390. Further to the item (Sep 03 #4) on the exhibition on "The Age of Watteau, Chardin, and Fragonard: Masterpieces of French Genre Painting" at the National Gallery of Art in Washington (through Jan. 11), Mary Burke has been to the exhibition and reports that it includes ten paintings by Jean-Baptiste Greuze, one on loan from Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, and others on loan from England, Scotland, Russian, France, and the United States.
391. The Wessex Press' "From Gillette to Brett" symposium in Indianapolis this month received rave reviews from those who attended; Steve Doyle and Mark Gagen had Edward Hardwicke and Nicholas Meyer as the featured guests, and other speakers included Susan Dahlinger, David Stuart Davies, Paul Herbert, and Gordon Kelley. And (Brad Keefauver has noted) there was a film festival using actual film.
392. LOONEY TUNES: THE GOLDEN COLLECTION is a four-disk DVD set issued by Warner Home Video ($64.92); there are 56 of the studio's animated shorts, remastered and restored, plus audio commentary, featurettes, documentaries, and galleries of stills. This offers Sherlockians a chance to own a high quality copy of "Deduce, You Say" (1956) with Daffy Duck as Dorlock Holmes and Porky Pig as Dr. Watkins.
393. It's always intriguing to find mentions of Sherlock Holmes in unexpected places, such as Peter Schjeldahl's review (in the Nov. 10 issue of The New Yorker) of the exhibition "Rembrandt's Journey: Painter, Draftsman, Etcher" at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. "Rembrandt is a detective," Schjeldahl suggests. "When I look at his pictures, I feel like Dr. Watson bumbling along behind Holmes. Once exposed by the master, mysteries become as plain as day, but I know that, on my own, I would have missed the clues ten times out of ten."

394. Nov 03 #4 The Long Beach Shakespeare Company is performing Martin Pope's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Dangerous Game" (an adaptation of "The Illustrious Client") at the Black Box Theatre through Dec. 20; the theater's address is 4250 Atlantic Avenue, Long Beach, CA 90807 (562-997-1494), and their web-site URL is <www.bardintheyard.com>.
395. Colin G. Prestige ("Captain Jack Crocker") died on Nov. 12. He was a solicitor, an ardent Gilbert & Sullivan scholar, and an enthusiastic Sherlockian; he was one of the founders of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London and served as its honorary secretary, and (from 1977 to 1980) as its chairman. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1961, and the BSI's Queen Victoria Medal (awarded for "outstanding contributions to the quartering of the Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes" in 1967).
396. Further to the report (May 03 #2) about the continuing battle over Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle once lived as a child), a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (Nov. 22) reports that the city council is planning to give heritage protection to the Craigmillar Park area, which would lead to expanding an existing conservation area to include Nether Liberton, the site of the house. Councillor Fred Mackintosh has led the campaign to prevent McDonald's from demolishing the house to build a restaurant.
397. Penny Singleton died on Nov. 13. She toured in vaudeville in an act called "The Kiddie Kabaret", sang and danced with Milton Berle, acted on Broadway with Jack Benny, and began her Hollywood film career in 1930; in 1938 she starred in "Blondie" and continued in that role for 12 years 1950 in a long series of films. Watch for "Blondie in Society" (1941) on television: Dagwood Bumstead (Arthur Lake) accepts a Great Dane as payment for a loan, and Blondie says, "Dagwood, you take that Hound of the Baskervilles right back to Mr. Peters."
398. Reported: SHADOWS OVER BAKER STREET, edited by Michael Reaves and John Pelan (Del Rey/Ballantine; $23.95); according to the blurb, "Sherlock Holmes enters the macabre and nightmarish world of H. P. Lovecraft" in an anthology of stories by 20 authors. And some paperback reprints: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. DRACULA, by Loren Estleman (ibooks/Pocket Books, $6.99); THE DISAPPEARANCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Larry Millett (Penguin Books, $6.99); THE BIG FOUR, by Agatha Christie (Berkley, $5.95) (a Poirot novel from 1927, Sherlockian only for a few amusing echoes from the Canon); SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA, by Alan Vennerman (Carroll & Graf, $14.00).
399. And there's a British edition of Laurie R. King's JUSTICE HALL (HarperCollins, £18.99). And her earlier THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE, A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN, A LETTER OF MARY, and JUSTICE HALL are available in paperback reprints (Bantam Books, $6.99 each).
400. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HAPSBURG TIARA, by Alan Vanneman, from Carroll & Graf in March ($25.00); according to the blurb, "Winston Churchill calls in Holmes and Watson, charging that Archduke Josef of Austria is an imposter."
401. Dec 03 #1: Further to the item (Oct 03 #4) about Paul Singleton's plans for a midnight gathering on Friday after the various dinners: plans have changed. Anyone interested in some excellent beer is welcome to gather in the back room at St. Andrew's (120 West 44th Street, between the Avenue of the Americas and Broadway); no reservations required. St. Andrew's is Scottish-themed, and offers 20 beers on tap (mostly English or Scottish) and 110 bottled beers.
402. "This game's too good for the world's greatest detective to take on alone. Happily, she'll have some help from her husband..." That's the caption on a postcard that Bantam's sending out to publicize Laurie R. King's THE GAME (the next Mary Russell mystery). THE GAME will be in the stores in March, according to Laurie; "It is now 1924, and Russell and Holmes have been sent to the wilds of India's northwest frontier to search for a missing British spy--perhaps the most famous spy of them all, whose boyhood exploits were brought to light by Rudyard Kipling: Kim." You can see the cover artwork at her web-site <www.laurierking.com>, and that's where you'll find a GAME game starting in early January.
403. The steam launch Aurora was neither the first nor the last vessel to bear that name, and the current Aurora, a P&O superliner, seems to be a ship to avoid: an article in the Weekly Telegraph (Nov. 1), spotted by John Baesch, noted that more than 500 passengers were suffering from a highly contagious stomach virus. The ship was denied permission to dock in Athens, and when it reached Gibraltar, Spain closed its border with the colony for the first time in almost 20 years.
404. Kelly Blau spotted the murder-mystery cover on the October issue of Dollhouse Miniatures; it's not quite Sherlockian, but the accompanying article will offer ideas for Sherlockian miniaturists. And there's a deerstalker on the desk in the article "I Love a Mystery" about Joann Swanson's miniature of a private investigator's office.
405. THE COMPLETE ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: A FACSIMILE OF THE ORIGINAL STRAND MAGAZINE STORIES (New York: Gramercy Books, 2001; 326 pp., $9.99); with an anonymous two page introduction, it's a reprint of the 1975 Clarkson N. Potter edition (and it's less expensive on the discount tables at the chain bookstores).
406. Further to the item (Nov 03 #1) about the 100th anniversary of the New York Police Department's bomb squad, created by officer Giuseppe Petrosino, who was known as "Il Sherlock Holmes d'Italia" for his pursuit of the Camorra and Mafia, Jon Lellenberg recalls that Ernest Borgnine starred as Lt. Joseph Petrosino in the movie "Pay or Die" (1960).
407. Gianluca Salvatori reports that Uno Studio in Holmes is planning their annual meeting for May 21-23, 2004, in Naples, as part of a month-long series of plays and films, an exhibition of Sherlockian rarities, the unveiling of a plaque commemorating Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's visit to the isle of Gaiola (near Posillipo) (or Posilippo), and the revelation of the true identity of Augusto Barelli. You can contact Gianluca at: Casella Postale 140, 55042 Forte dei Marmi (Lucca), Italy <mycroft@versilia.toscana.it>.

408. Dec 03 #2: AND TO THINK THAT I SAW IT ON MULBAKER STREET, written by Warren Randall and illustrated by Laurie Manifold (36 pp., $10.00 postpaid from the author, at 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720-1346); an imaginative and amusing report by Wiggins, who on his irregular routine of going, seeing, and hearing everything, has fallen under the influence of Dr. Suess.
409. David Hemmings died on Dec. 3. He began his film career in a bit part in 1954 and became famous as the predatory fashion photographer in "Blow-Up" (1966); he starred in "Camelot" (1967), "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (1968), and "Barbarella" (1968), and last film was "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen" (2003). He played Walter Leybourne/Benjamin Oaks in "The Best House in London" (1969) (the film included cameo appearances by Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson), and Inspector Foxborough in "Murder by Decree" (1979).
410. Les Klinger suggests that Sherlockians who are in or near Los Angeles rather than in New York for the birthday festivities might wish to attend the UCLA Film and Television Archive screening of "The Great Limejuice Mystery, or Who Spat in Grandfather's Porridge" (1930) on Jan. 14 at 7:30 pm at the James Bridge Theater (on the university campus at 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90095) <www.cinema.ucla.edu>. The film's an eight-minute British marionette burlesque of Clive Brook's performance in the title role in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929); in Britain the title was "Herlock Sholmes in Be-a-Live Crook, or Anna Went Wrong". It will be screened during a "Discovering Anna May Wong" festival that will run Jan. 8-14. Anna May Wong did appear in a Sherlock Holmes film, but some years later, with Reginald Owen, in "A Study in Scarlet" (1933), but that film isn't included in the festival.

411. The spring 2004 issue of "The Sherlock Times" has arrived from Carolyn and Joel Senter; it's their 16-page catalog, with news and reviews, and offers of Sherlockian books, periodicals, audio, video, calendars, posters, mugs, CDs, statues, and much more. Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
412. The documentary "Gigantic (A Tale of Two Johns)" (May 03 #4) is now available on DVD (Wea Corp, $24.95) with more than four hours of extra material; the film is about the rock band "They Might Be Giants" (the two Johns are John Flansburgh and John Linnell, founders of the group that took its name from the 1970 film that featured George C. Scott as a psychotic judge who believes he's Sherlock Holmes).
413. "Shanghai Knights" (in theaters, and on DVD and videocassette earlier this year, will premier on cable on the Starz channel on Jan. 24; the film stars Jim Fisher as Det. Artie Doyle (aka Arthur Conan Doyle).
414. Jennifer O'Dell, who played Veronica in the television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (1999), is the "Babe of the Month" in Playboy (Jan. 2004), wearing almost as much as she wore in the series; she's hoping there will be a fourth season filmed in Hawaii (the first three seasons were filmed in Australia). And there's a six-disc DVD set due in January from Image Entertainment ($59.99) with the first season's shows.

415. Dec 03 #3: "The only explanation that one can advance for the great success of the Holmes stories lies not in their writing, which is bad, nor in their character delineation, which is worse, but in their plot appeal. . . . Holmes was and is a world success not because of himself but simply because he happened to be present when a shudderful hound howled on the dark moor, when a poisonous and terrifying snake crawled down a bellcord, and when a deadly Hindu dart was projected from a blow-pipe." From an essay by George Jean Nathan in the American Mercury (Jan. 1930) that's reprinted in THE WORLD OF GEORGE JEAN NATHAN: ESSAYS, REVIEWS, & COMMENTARY (New York: Applause Books, 1998); spotted and forwarded by someone to whom I apologize for not being able to recognize the handwriting on the accompanying note.
416. Karen Murdock spotted a story in the Toronto Star (Nov. 15) by Marc Atchison about his stay at the historic Hotel du Louvre in Paris. A plaque installed in the hotel lobby by the Sherlock Holmes Society, the Atchison reports, explains that according to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes preferred the Hotel du Louvre to all other Paris properties. Consultation with Thierry Saint-Joanis has revealed that the Sherlock Holmes Societe de France is responsible for the plaque, which states (and quite Canonically) that "Here the international spy Hugo Oberstein was arrested by the police at the request of Sherlock Holmes." The plaque says nothing about the hotel being Holmes' favorite. But Conan Doyle did have a favorite hotel in Paris, Thierry reports: the Hotel Regina, which is not far from the Hotel du Louvre.
417. LADY COTTINGTON'S PRESSED FAIRY BOOK, illustrated by Brian Froud and written by Terry Jones, was published in 1991 and reprinted in 1994 and 1998 (it won Froud a Hugo Award for original artwork in 1995); these fairies definitely are not the fairies photographed at Cottingley in 1917, nor are they Doylean or Sherlockian, but they're delightful, if your taste in humor runs toward the macabre (Lady Cottington sat patiently with her journal open to a blank page, waited until one or more fairies landed on the page, and then . . . swompppph! or occasionally thromp!). LADY COTTINGTON'S PRESSED FAIRY CALENDAR 2004 (New York: Harry N. Abrams, 2003; $12.95) has illustrations by Froud, plus some "rare fairy photographs and hitherto unpublished fairy notes," and 69 fairy stickers. There's a web-site <www.worldoffroud.com> with news and views of Froud's work (he lives near Dartmoor, and there's a mention of the Hound of the Baskervilles in the "about Devon" section).
418. Another calendar has a more direct Doyle connection: Richard Doyle's painting "Triumphal March of the Elf-King" is the illustration for August in THE FAERYLAND CALENDAR 2004 (Barnes & Noble, $9.95). Richard Doyle was Arthur Conan Doyle's uncle.
419. Canadian astronomer Simon Newcomb has been suggested before as a possible inspiration for Prof. Moriarty, and Jean-Louis Trudell's article on "Simon Newcomb's Journey" in Canada's National History Society's magazine The Beaver (Dec. 2003-Jan. 2004) offers an excellent summary of his life and career, and a discussion of Conan Doyle and Moriarty. Thanks to Doug Wrigglesworth for a copy of the article; the magazine costs $6.00 plus postage, and the society's address is 478-167 Lombard Avenue, Winnipeg, MB R3B 0T6, Canada (800-816-6777) <www.historysociety.ca>

420. Dec 03 #4: It has been some years since the Credit Lyonnaise (one of the few banks mentioned by name in the Canon) has been in the news (in this newsletter, at any rate). The Washington Post reported (Dec. 12) that the French government has agreed to pay about $475 million to avert criminal prosecution of the French bank by the U.S. Justice Department for the alleged secret takeover of a California insurance company that failed more than a decade ago. Much of the money (a total of $770 million) will be placed in escrow to cover damages if California regulators win an ongoing civil suit against the bank and other defendants.
421. Julie McKuras found an intriguing Christmas item manufactured by Department 56: their "Naughty or Nice Detective Agency" is a five-piece gift set that includes figures of Santas dressed as Holmes and Watson (item 56.56758, and it costs $50.00). The problem is that it was limited to 2003 production, and it has been "retired" (no more will be made) and may not be available at all stores. You can see a picture of the item at the company's web-site at <www.department56.com>, and they'll tell you local stores that carry the Department 56 products.
422. New York magazine ran a nicely illustrated article on "The Place to Be: 100 Years of New York's Hottest Scenes" (Dec. 22), and one of the photographs, taken at the Algonquin, shows Dorothy Parker, James Thurber, Robert Benchley, and other members of the Algonquin Round Table in 1938.
423. The Minnesota Bureau of Criminal Apprehension is putting the final touches on its new headquarters in Saint Paul, according to an article in the Star Tribune (Dec. 7), and there will be 19 stained-glass artworks, all shaped like magnifying lenses and representing each of the crime-solving departments of the BCA. Already in place are large stone sculptures with giant fingerprints and sections of DNA, and a fresco of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
424. Paul Herbert gets credit for reporting a Sherlockian connection for Ernie Nevers, one of four old-time football heroes honored on a sheet of stamps this year (the others were Red Grange, Bronko Nagurski, and Watler Camp). Nevers also had an acting career, and he played Bob Collins (one of the good guys) in "The Lost Special" (1932), a 12-chapter serial made by Universal and based (loosely) on Conan Doyle's story. It should be noted that Francis Ford (college professor Botter Hood in the serial), directed and played Sherlock Holmes in "A Study in Scarlet" (1914).
425. Those who can't see the stamp in the electronic edition of this newsletter can find it at <www.usps.gov>; click on "buy stamps online" and on "stamp issues" and on "early football".
426. One of the more interesting "professional" Sherlockian societies is the Sir James Saunders Society (for dermatologists); their 31st annual meeting will be held at the Mehak Restaurant in Washington (at 817 7th Street NW), from noon to 2:00 pm on Feb. 9; as usual, there will be a lunch, presentations, and toasts. You need not be a dermatologist to attend; you can send your reservation (and your check for $30.00, payable to the SJSS) to Don Hazelrigg, 15 Victoria Drive, Newburgh, IN 47630; the deadline is Feb. 2.
427. Dec 03 #5: "After you left I sent down to Stamford's for the Ordnance map of this portion of the moor," Sherlock Holmes said (in almost every edition of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Founded by Edward Stanford in 1853 (Watson wasn't aware of the correct spelling), Stanfords celebrated its 150th anniversary this year; thanks to John Baesch for news of THE MAPMAKERS: A HISTORY OF STANFORDS, by Peter Whitfield, with a foreword by Michael Palin (London: Compendium Book, 2003; 128 pp., £14.99).

428. Jon Lellenberg has reported a new Children's Golden Library edition of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" published by the Daily Mail and available from the paper for £2.60; there will be 25 titles in the hardback collection, of children's classics.
429. According to Marcel Berlins (in The Times on Dec. 6), Graham Robb "ponders a romantic edge to Sherlock Holmes' feelings for Dr. Watson" in his STRANGERS: HOMOSEXUAL LOVE IN THE 19TH CENTURY (London: Picador, 2003; 400 pp., £18.99); the capsule review was accompanied by a far larger photograph of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce.
430. Issue #57 of SHERLOCK has its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise), including Paul M. Chapman's exploration of "Sherlock Holmes in the Underworld", Gavin Collinson's discussion of Ian Richardson's films ("The Glorious Scot"), and the first part of Robert Sanderson's commentary on Sherlockian fantasy ("Planetary, My Dear Watson"). SHERLOCK appears every two months, and a subscription costs £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (con-tinent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, Eng-land <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Or you can order from the magazine's Ameri-can agent: Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>; credit-card orders are welcome at both ad-dresses, and back issues are available.
431. Ales Kolodrubec reports that the Czech Sherlock Holmes Society and the Museum of the Czech Police will celebrate Sherlock Holmes' 150th birthday with an exhibition at the Museum from Jan. 7 to Feb. 15 (and with a grand opening ceremony at 5:00 pm on Jan. 6). The Museum is at Ke Karlovu Street #1, Prague 2 (center), and additional information is available from Ales (Milesovska 1, 130 00 Praha 3, Czech Republic) <ales@sherlockholmes.cz>.
432. SHERLOCK HOLMES' PUZZLES OF DEDUCTION, by Tom Bullimore, is back in print, as one of four "match wits with" puzzle books collected in CLASSIC WHODUNITS (New York: Main Street/Sterling, 2003; 275 pp., $6.98); it's a "special value" item marketed by Barnes & Noble.
433. The "five orange peeps" (Nov 03 #2) were sent to many Sherlockians, and Les Klinger has identified the perpetrator: Kevin Reed, who heads The Sinister Ballarat Gang (left-handed Sherlockians), and who generously has credited John Farrell for conceiving the dastardly plan.
434. If you're more comfortable in Spanish than in English, Video Search of Miami (Box 16-1917, Miami, FL 33116 (888-279-97734) <www.vsom.com> has "Dr. Bell and Mr. Doyle: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (2000) in English with Spanish subtitles; $25.00 on VHS or DVD. It's the first show in the series, starring Ian Richardson (Bell) and Robin Laing (Conan Doyle).
435. Dec 03 #6: Wayne Wall ("Holy Peters") died in December. He was for many years the minister at the Metropolitan Baptist Church in West Columbia, S.C., and his Sherlockian specialty was theology; his first article on Canonical religion appeared in The Baker Street Journal in 1973, and his book GOD AND SHERLOCK HOLMES: A STUDY IN THE LIFE AND LITERATURE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE appeared in 1982. He was the founder of The Hansom Wheels and edited their newsletter The Pink 'Un, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1976.
436. Reported: Howard Engel's MR. DOYLE & DR. BELL (Nov 97 #3) has been reissued by the Overlook Press ($24.95); Conan Doyle is still a medical student in Edinburgh, in 1879, involved with Joseph Bell in solving a mystery full of echoes from the decades-later Oscar Slater case.
437. Forecast for January: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RULE OF NINE, by Barrie Roberts, from Severn House (200 pp., $26.99); published earlier this year in Britain (Jun 03 #5), it was described by Publishers Weekly (Dec. 15) as "an unmemorable effort."
438. Reported: Crippen & Landru's "Lost Classics" series includes C. Daly King's THE COMPLETE CURIOUS MR. TARRANT, which offers a collection of stories published in 1935, and additional uncollected stories, one being "The Episode of the Sinister Inventor" (a Tarrant tale written in Watsonian style, reprinted from Elery Queen's Mystery Magazine, Dec. 1946). $29.00 (cloth) or $19.00 (paper); the publisher's address is Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (877-622-665) <www.crippenlandru.com>.
439. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for drinks and dinner on Nov. 5 at the Elephant and Castle in Seattle, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. We were welcomed by members of The Sound of the Baskervilles, and enjoyed the usual (as well as some unusual) toasts, the first of which, as always, being to the world's first forensic geologist, and another being to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who visited Seattle in 1923 with his family and stayed at the New Washington Hotel (it was built in 1903, and was advertised as being the first hotel in the west to have a bath in every bedroom). It had 222 rooms, and still does, although it is now an apartment house called The Josephinum; you can follow in the footsteps of Conan Doyle in the lobby, which has been carefully preserved. The next dinners for Sherlockians and geologists will be held in Dallas in April, and in Denver in November 2004.
440. Seattle provides funds for a wide variety of municipal art, and Dave Haugen reported on the installation at the corner of 4th and Spring: a wooden panel with eye-holes that appear designed to view the construction of the new downtown library. But the top of the panel states that it's the "Peephole Theatre" and there are two quotations displayed, one from "Jane Austen" and the other "Over the great Grimpen Mire there hung a dense, white fog. . . 'It's moving towards us, Watson.'" When you look through the eye-hole near the Canonical quote, you'll see a diorama of Holmes, Watson, and fog. The artist is Edie Whitsett, who has a warning on the panel: "Art Hat Area".

Jan 04 #1:

1. Those attending this year's birthday festivities in New York enjoyed pleasant weather (unless something other than wintry cold was expected), without a sign of the predicted snow and sleet. The first event was an ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's for dedicated enthusiasts, and Thursday's featured the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox, a rendezvous with other Morley enthusiasts at McSorley's for lunch, and the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker, John Berendt, who entertained his audience at the Williams Club with witty and intriguing tales about and from his next book.
2. Friday began with an informal Mrs. Hudson Breakfast at the Hotel Algonquin, and more than 140 people attended the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where the Friends of Bogie's (Sarah Montague, Andrew Joffe, Paul Singleton, and Elyse Locurto) performed their Sherlockian version of "The Miracle of Birth". And that afternoon Otto Penzler's open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
3. There were more than 170 on hand for the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars at the Union League Club, where Julie Rosenblatt delivered the cocktail-party toast to the Woman: Martha McCormack, who acknowledged the toast with revelations about Irene Adler, and left to dine at the Algonquin with others who have been the Woman. The dinner agenda included the usual toasts and traditions, the Friends of Bogie's with an entertaining view of baby Sherlock and his family (with Thierry Saint-Joanis as Grandmere Vernet and John Baesch as young Mycroft), and Ray Betzner's toast to Old Irregular Edward J. Van Liere. The dinner concluded with Sherry Rose-Bond's reading of Bev Wolov's poem to "The Woman".
4. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours: Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Gideon Hill ("Jack Prendergast"), Doug Wrigglesworth ("The Retired Colourman"), Michael Ross ("Von Bork"), Bernard Oudin ("Our French Gold"), Francine Kitts ("Lady Hilda Trelawney Hope"), Nicholas Meyer ("A Fine Morocco Case"), and Costa Rossakis ("St. Bartholomew's Hospital"); and the Two-Shilling Award (presented "for

- extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty") to Paul Herbert. And (in the "my blushes" department) I received the Dr. John H. Watson Afghan Campaign Desk ("with grateful appreciation of the many contributions as society secretary, Sherlockian ambassador, and record keeper extraordinaire".
5. Mike also reported on the creation of The Baker Street Irregulars' Archives at the Houghton Library at Harvard University; the Archives will be administered by The Baker Street Irregulars Trust. Additional details will be forthcoming during 2004 about how Sherlockians will be able to support this important archives with BSI archival material and cash contributions.
  6. There were more than 80 people on hand for the Baskerville Bash at the Manhattan Club, enjoying Victorian (and Canonical) music hall. Audrey Epstein researched the music and songs, and provided the piano accompaniment, and there were performances by characters who included Kitty Winter (aka Elyse Locurto) singing "She Was Poor But She Was Honest" and Isadora Klein (aka Susan Dahlinger) singing Stephen Sondheim's "I Never Do Anything Twice".

---

  7. Jan 04 #2: And for those not quite ready for bed, Paul Singleton presided over a brew-hall get-together at midnight at St. Andrew's, conveniently on 44th Street not far from the Algonquin, with about 40 people present to sample the many varieties of beer available.
  8. On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was as usual crowded with sellers and buyers, and at 12:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Watson and Wodehouse) assembled for their Junior Bloodstain, which featured a reading of a Marilyn MacGregor's dramatization of Robert L. Fish's parody "The Adventure of the Odd Lotteries".
  9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted more than 220 people to the National Arts Club, where Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies who have been honored as the Woman over the years, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported in verse on the events of the previous year and the previous evening. Andy Solberg and Don Pollock shared honors as the winners of the Morley-Montgomery Award (attractive certificates and checks for $250 each) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year (their article, as by D. K. Andrews, M.D., on Sigmund Freud, in the autumn issue). And the Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from the raffle of Jean-Pierre Cagnat's original artwork showing Holmes and Watson in a Turkish bath, and from enthusiastic bidders in the traditional auction.
  10. The Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to this year's auction included Jean Upton (original artwork for a Sherlockian advertisement in Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine), Dorothy Stix (an animation cel from "Snooper and Blabber" that shows Snooper in silhouette in Sherlockian costume), Mel Ruiz (a hand-painting cigar-store sculpture of Sherlock Holmes), and Ken Lanza (a handsome reproduction of one of Jean-Baptiste Greuze's paintings of a young woman).
  11. On Sunday about 45 locals and visiting long-weekenders gathered at the Baker Street Restaurant for a brunch arranged by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes. And now for next year: for those who wish to plan ahead, the next birthday dinners will be held on Friday, Jan. 7, 2005. If you've been considering participating in the BSI weekend in the Valley of Fear on Oct. 22-24, 2004, there's no room at the inn (or perhaps in the mine), but there is a waiting list.
  12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $24.95 a year ($27.50 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSI (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); there's a website at <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>. There's much of interest at the web-site, including an opportunity to read some of the papers that have won a Morley-Montgomery Award for their authors, and to order copies of the BSI's manuscript series (including this year's THE NAPOLEON BUST BUSINESS AGAIN), some volumes in the BSI's archival-history series, and some of the BSI's Christmas Annuals.

  13. Jan 04 #3: New York is not the only place where Sherlock Holmes' birthday is celebrated: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London held its annual dinner on Jan. 10 at the House of Commons, where Simon Brett was the featured guest (speaking on the importance of Conan Doyle and Holmes to all subsequent writers of detective stories), Pam Bruxner was made an honorary member of the Society, and Richard Lancelyn Green received the first Tony Howlett Award (a maquette of John Doubleday's London statue of Holmes, donated by Tony's widow Freda).
  14. Japanese publishers continue to offer a wide variety of Sherlockiana: MURDER, MY DEAR WATSON (edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower) has been translated into Japanese by Masamichi Higurashi Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 2003; 400 pp., Y1,800); and he also has translated six stories (Devi/Bruc/RedC/Lady/Dyin/Veil) and written an introduction and explanatory notes for a new volume in the MEITANTEI HOLMES children's paperback series illustrated by Hitoshi Wakana and "Ki" (Tokyo: Kodansha, 2003; 294 pp., Y670). There's also DETECTIVE CONAN: THE PHANTOM OF BAKER STREET in two volumes (Tokyo: Shogakukan, 2002; 208 pp., Y781 each; they're graphic-novel adaptations of a film based on the manga comic-book series created by Goshō Aoyama. And GOLGO 13, by Takao Saito (Tokyo: Leed Sha, 2004; 256 pp., Y524) in his series about Duke Togo, a Japanese comics hero who is one of the best snipers in the world; in this volume he is involved in a dispute between members of the Baker Street Irregulars over the manuscript of "The Speckled Band".
  15. Sara Berger reports that Michael Breuer has built a fine HO-scale model of the SBB/Brunigbahn station in Meiringen, and you can see two views of the model at <www.erlebnisbahn.at/mbm/bruenig\_2.html>. HO-scale, for those who have never lived in the world of model railroads, is 1:87 (about seven feet to the inch).
  16. Jack French reports that there's a section on "Jane Sherlock of Meet Miss Sherlock" in his new PRIVATE EYELASHES: RADIO'S LADY DETECTIVES, due from BearManor Media in February. "Meet Miss Sherlock" was a 30-minute series about private detective Jane Sherlock that was broadcast by CBS in 1946 and 1947. $18.95 (plus shipping) from BearManor Media, Box 750, Boalsburg, PA 16827 <www.bearmanormedia.com>
  17. Joan Aiken died on Jan. 4. She wrote more than 100 books over her 50-year career, telling grand tales of mystery and adventure for adults and children, and won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for her novel NIGHT FALL (1970); in 1999 she was made a member of the Order of the British Empire for her contributions to children's literature. And she wrote the article on Arthur Conan Doyle for Richard Cavendish's MAN, MYTH & MAGIC: AN ILLUSTRATION ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE SUPERNATURAL (1970).
  18. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers news from the collections, Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" tribute to cartoonist John McCutcheon, and John Bergquist's "50 Years Ago" discussion of A. Carson ("Deak") Simpson. The newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.

  19. Jan 04 #4: 1,001 MORE FACTS SOMEBODY SCREWED UP, by Deane Jordan (Atlanta: Longstreet Press, 1997; 138 pp., $7.95), is still in print; it has corrections of three Sherlockian "facts" (one of them is "Dr. Watson, pal of Sherlock Holmes, was not shot in the leg. He was shot in the shoulder, according to 'A Study in Scarlet'. Later Doyle wrote that Watson was shot in the leg, perhaps because it is an easier affliction to depict.").

20. Colonel Sebastian Moran's Secret Gun Club's annual Mongoose Hunt will take place at the Forest Preserve in Wilmette, Ill, at approximately 9:15 am on Sunday, Feb. 29; no firearms are needed, and there will be a breakfast at 10:30 am at Hackney's Restaurant in Glenview, Ill. The Gun Club meets every four years, on Leap Day, and Don Izban has offered to lead his infamous walking tour of Graceland Cemetery after the breakfast. Reservations are required, and more information is available from Elliott Black (2511 Windsor Lane, Northbrook, IL 60062) <eblack@embainc.com>
21. Don Pollock has discovered a new source of Sherlockian miniature books: Lee Ann Borgia has created 1/12-scale editions of 14 Canonical stories, and you can them at <www.picturetrail.com> (go to member-name leeann1948). Her address is Box 1057, Pennington, NJ 08534 <lborgia993@aol.com>, and she'll be happy to send you a flier in return for a #10 SASE; the stories cost from $10.00 to $25.00, plus shipping.
22. The Christopher Morley Knothole Association's newsletter The Knothole notes two losses in the world of Morley's family and enthusiasts. Blythe Morley Brennan died in mid-2002; she was the daughter of Christopher Morley, and the author (as "Stanley Hopkins, Jr.") of two Morleyan mystery novels, MURDER BY INCHES (1943) THE PARCHMENT KEY (1944). And Helen McK. Oakley died in Jan. 2003; she was one of the founding members of the association, and one of its early presidents, and her biography THREE HOURS FOR LUNCH: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF CHRISTOPHER MORLEY (1976) has a chapter about The Baker Street Irregulars and many other mentions of Sherlock Holmes. The Association keeps Morley's memory alive on Long Island and elsewhere; membership costs $20.00 a year, and its address is c/o The Bryant Library, Paper Mill Road, Roslyn, NY 11576.
23. The East Lynne Theater Company will present a staged reading (with live piano accompaniment) of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" on Mar. 5 and 6, during a "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J.; the box-office phone number is 609-884-5898 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
24. "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen" (based on the comic-book mini-series, with story by Alan Moore) was in theaters last year, with Richard Roxburgh as M (and there's a Canonical connection), and now it's available on DVD from Twentieth Century-Fox Home Video ($27.98) with extras that include 12 scenes that weren't used in the film.
25. Dinsdale Landen died on Dec. 29. His first appearance as an actor was at school, as the rear end of a pantomime horse, and he went on to a long career on stage, screen, radio, and television. He was Dr. Watson (with Robert Powell as Holmes) in "A Study in Scarlet" on BBC Radio 4 in 1974, and Sherlock Holmes (with John Moffatt as Watson) in Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" on the BBC World Service in 1987.

26. Jan 04 #5: Further to the item (Dec 03 #1) about the GAME game at Laurie R. King's web-site <www.laurierking.com>, the first content has ended; the prizes were signed copies of the first edition and the audio recording, and the winners will be announced in February. And there will be a drawing in March (save your sales receipts for THE GAME), with different interesting prizes.
27. "The landscape is a genuine Corot," Thaddeus Sholto said (in "The Sign of the Four"), "and though a connoisseur might perhaps throw a doubt upon that Salvator Rosa, there cannot be the least question about the Bouguereau. I am partial to the modern French school." The Sterling & Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown, Mass. <www.clarkart.edu> recently acquired a set of Old Master drawings, including an attractive sheet of studies by Rosa, which will be on display through Feb. 16. The Clark Institute also has two Corots ("The Castel Sant'Angelo, Rome" and "Washerwomen in a Willow Grove") and two Bouguereaus ("Nymphs and Satyrs" and "Seated Nude"), so you have a chance to see all three artists in one museum.
28. Phil Attwell reports that the Queen's New Year's honours list included an OBE (Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) for comedian and writer Roy Hudd, who starred as Sherlock Holmes in "The Newly Discovered Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" (a six-episode series) on BBC Radio 2 in 1999.
29. Further to the item (May 02 #3) about the publishing firm John Murray having been sold to Hodder Headline, the current John Murray (there has always been a John Murray running the firm) has offered the Murray archives to the National Library of Scotland at a discount: £33.2 million (about £10 million less than the archives' assessed value). The archives contain letters and manuscripts from authors that include Lord Byron, Jane Austen, Charles Darwin, David Hume, John Betjeman, and Arthur Conan Doyle. Thanks to Gary Thaden for spotting the story in The Scotsman (Dec. 29).
30. THE ORIENTAL CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ted Riccardi, published last year at $24.95 (Sep 03 #3), is discounted to $16.95 in the latest catalog from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031). And he has a web-site at <www.edwardrhamilton.com>; a search for "sherlock" in the title turned up 23 hits.
31. And, speaking of Anna May Wong (Dec 03 #2) there's a new biography by Graham Russell Gao Hodges: ANNA MAY WONG: FROM LAUNDRYMAN'S DAUGHTER TO HOLLYWOOD LEGEND (New York: Palgrave, 2004; 284 pp., $27.95); with two pages of discussion of the film "A Study in Scarlet" (1933). Carolyn See wrote an interesting (and amusing) review of the book for the Washington Post (Jan. 2); the review should still be available at <www.washingtonpost.com>.
32. Phil Attwell has reported that BBC 7 Digital Radio aired "Sherlock Holmes with Carlton Hobbs" (a series of ten programs dramatized by Michael Hardwick) in January. The series will repeat in April with new one-minute introductions recorded by Nicholas Utechin, who will do the same for a second series later this year. The electronically-enabled can listen to BBC 7 on the Internet, and you can find more information about this from the BBC at <www.bbc.co.uk>.

33. Jan 04 #6: GRAVES GATE, by Dennis Burges (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2003; 419 pp., $25.00), is set in 1922, when Conan Doyle hires an American journalist to investigate a case that turns into a suspenseful tale of supernatural possession.
34. "Quick, Watson...!" is the interim sales-list from Carolyn and Joel Senter, and it offers a nice variety of news, books, jewelry, audio, mugs, and other Sherlockiana. Classic Specialties is at Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 (887-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
35. "Villains in the Canon" is the title of the 23rd annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium, in Dayton on Mar. 14-16; there will be presentations, vendors, a quiz, and a reader's theater event. Additional information is available from Cathy Gill (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
36. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine has continued its long tradition of honoring Sherlock Holmes' birthday: the February issue has a new parody by Arthur Porges ("Stately Homes and the Impossible Shot"), Jon L. Breen's Sherlockian book reviews, and a tribute by editor Janet Hutchings.
37. Communication (the newsletter of The Pleasant Places of Florida) continues to offer amusing and timely news; the year-end issue offered some interesting recommendations for "eleventh hour shopping" such as "Asteroids by the Dozen" (large or small, spinning clockwise or counterclockwise: the perfect gift for your physics or mathematics professor). $12.00 a year ($13.00 overseas) for membership, including a subscription, from Carl Heifetz, 1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655; if you want just the one issue, that's $2.00 postpaid.
38. There's a new society (with a new pin): Scott Monty is HeadLight of The Beacon Society ("supporting educational experiences that introduce young people to the Canon and recognizing exemplary efforts that do so"); they held their annual meeting during the birthday festivities, and the pin is offered in return for a contribution of $10.00, which you can send to Scott (1836 Columbia Road, Boston, MA 02127) <wsmonty@alum.bu.edu>.
39. THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA, by Daniel Gracely (Pitman: Grandma's Attic Press, 2001; 117 pp., $13.95); another pastiche "from the lost cases of Sherlock Holmes," notable for some Paget illustrations photo-shopped to match scenes in the story.

40. MURDER AT THE CHESSBOARD, edited by P. T. Houdunitz, published by Sterling in 2001, has been reprinted by Barnes & Noble ($8.95); it's an anthology of 43 "whodunit puzzlers" that includes ten Sherlockian puzzles by Tom Bullimore that appeared in his books in the 1990s.
41. GOOD FOR THE CAUSE: SHERLOCKIANS IN THE NEWSPAPERS, by Karen Murdock, is an interesting review of often erroneous newspaper and magazine articles about Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockian societies; the 20-page pamphlet (Occasional Paper Number 4 from The Bootmakers of Toronto) is available from the author (1212 Yale Avenue SE, Minneapolis, MN 55414) for US $7.00 postpaid.
42. Jan 04 #7: The comic-book series RUSE ended its run with issue #26 (Jan. 2004; $2.95), and there was a Sherlockian cover on issue #25 (Dec. 2003). And there's a second issue of ARCHARD'S AGENTS (Nov. 2003). According to the series publisher (CrossGen), RUSE is "Victorian mystery with a fantastic edge"; see their web-site at <www.comicsontheweb.com>.
43. One of the more interesting souvenirs published for the birthday festivities was the "Christmas Annual 2003" edited by John Bergquist for the Norwegian Explorers of Minnesota; the contents include Andrew Malec's article about the Frederic Dorr Steele illustrations for the Limited Editions Club edition of the Canon, and the story is a fascinating one: some of the artwork was recycled from non-Sherlockian stories (now identified), and that's only part of the intriguing history of Steele's work. A few copies of the 62-page pamphlet are available from John Bergquist, 3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122; $10.00 postpaid (checks payable to the society, please).
44. Another of the interesting souvenirs distributed during the birthday weekend was the first issue of Canonier's Household Number for Christmas, published by The Dark Lantern League; the 32-page collection of articles written by Horace Harker, Violet Hunter, Mrs. Hudson, and others, is available (free) from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
45. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has another installment in its continuing series of reports on other libraries' special collections: Elizabeth Chenault's discussion of the University of North Carolina's holding, which include two collections of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockiana, and the Barzun-Taylor Mystery-Detective Collection. Plus the usual news from and about the Conan Doyle collection in Toronto. Copies are available from Doug Wigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwig@sympatico.ca> <www.acdfriends.org/>.
46. Bob Keeshan died on Jan. 23. He began his on-screen television career as Clarabell the Clown on the "Howdy Doody Show" and went on to star as Captain Kangaroo on the long-running children's series that began in 1955 and continued for decades on CBS-TV. There was a report in 1980 that "Captain Kangaroo" frequently had skits involved a sleuth named Sherlock House and his cohort Dr. Whatsup; are there any recordings of the skits out there?
47. And a few commercials: a 16-page list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, the Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.25 postpaid. An 81-page list of 826 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 439 active societies, is $4.70 postpaid. A run of address labels for 359 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.55 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).
48. The list of irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <<http://members.cox.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>>.
49. Feb 04 #1: The fourth volume in The Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series is "THE NAPOLEON BUST BUSINESS AGAIN", edited and with an introduction by William Hyder, offering a facsimile and transcript of the manuscript of "The Adventure of the Six Napoleons", and discussion of the manuscript, some of the dramatizations of the story, Conan Doyle's investment in a machine designed to create multiple copies of sculptures, the Borgias and black pearls, Victorian journalism, Italians in Victorian London, all by knowledgeable Sherlockian scholars. The cost is $35.00 plus shipping ($8.00 or $9.50 outside North America) from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
50. "'The Strength and Activity of Youth': The Junior Sherlockian Movement" is the title of The Baker Street Journal's 2003 Christmas Annual, and it offers a delightful review of what the junior Sherlockians were up to and into in the 1960s and 1970s. It's edited by Steve Clarkson, who has assembled a fine roster of now-somewhat-older Sherlockians who have contributed reminiscences (and some ancient photographs) from their early days. $11.00 postpaid to the United States (by check) or $12.00 elsewhere (by check or credit card); and you can also order from the BSJ web-site (see above).
51. Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES: SOME UNPUBLISHED CASES, by Robert A. Kisch (from the Institution of Diagnostic Engineers, 7 Wier Road, Kibworth, Leicester LE8 0LQ, England) <www.diagnosticengineers.org>; £9.99 plus shipping. "Was Sherlock Holmes a diagnostic engineer?" their web-site asks.
52. The sixth volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is THE SIGN OF FOUR, with a delightful introduction by Bernard Davies, who offers an essay that is both personal and scholarly (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2004; 121 pp., $19.95); as in previous volumes, the annotations and appendices are based on Sherlockian scholarship both old and new. The book costs $22.70 postpaid (or $25.70 outside the U.S.) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46260).
53. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (the interactive exhibit with much Victorian flavor, and a mystery that visitors can solve) is now at the New Mexico Museum of Natural History & Science in Albuquerque, through May 9 (505-841-2800) <www.nmmnh-abq.mus.nm.us>.
54. Peter B. Spivak died on Dec. 8. He served as first chairman and first commissioner of the U.S. Football League and was an owner of 1983 USFL champion Michigan Panthers, and he was elected twice to the Third Judicial Circuit Court of Michigan, and he was an active and enthusiastic member of The Amateur Mendicants of Detroit.
55. Chris Redmond (523 Westfield Drive, Waterloo, ON N2T 2E1, Canada) has offered copies of his "Sherlock Holmes Reference Card" (1982); it's a convenient bookmark-size list of the stories, Christ's four-letter abbreviations, the first publication dates, and the page numbers in THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES. Also "The Mysterious Affair at Great Orme Street" (1988); it's an entertaining essay examining the affair of Mr. Fairdale Hobbs. Send Chris $1.00 in currency and let him know (either or both) what you need.
56. Feb 04 #2: THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN, VOL. II (Wildstorm/America's Best Comics, $24.95) is a collection of the six issues of the comic-book mini-series, written by Alan Moore and illustrated by Kevin O'Neill. There's no appearance by "M" (nor anything else Sherlockian), but plenty of Victorian atmosphere and Martian aliens and literary allusions.
57. Erik Larson's THE DEVIL IN THE WHITE CITY (Mar 03 #1) is one of five books nominated for an Edgar for Best Fact Crime. The winners will be announced at the Mystery Writers of America annual dinner in New York on Apr. 29.
58. Issue #58 of SHERLOCK has its usual coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise), including Alan Perry's comparison of Harry Potter and Sherlock Holmes ("Harry Potter: Wizard Detective") and the second part of Robert Sanderson's commentary on Sherlockian fantasy ("Planetary, My Dear Watson"). SHERLOCK is published bimonthly, and subscriptions cost £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. And you can order from the magazine's American agent: Classic Specialties

- (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>; credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
59. SHERLOCK also has a full page advertisement from Martin Breese, offering to sell Breese Books to potential Sherlockian publishers. Additional information is available from Martin (10 Hanover Crescent, Brighton, East Sussex BN2 9SB, England) <martin@sherlockholmes.co.uk>.
  60. MADAME BOVARY, C'EST MOI, by Andre Bernard (New York: W. W. Norton, 2003; 128 pp., $19.95), discusses "the great characters in literature and where they came from," and (of course) Sherlock Holmes is included.
  61. Christopher and Barbara Roden have added three new titles to list of Sherlockiana published by their Calabash Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>. The oldest, and perhaps most unusual, item is THE QUESTIONABLE PARENTAGE OF BASIL GRANT, by R. Bostoun Cromer, originally published in The Monthly Review (July 1905) and now reprinted as a 27-page pamphlet with an introduction by Jack Adrian. It's a wide-ranging literary parody, written by D. K. Broster and M. Croom Brown and published under a pseudonym, and Andrew Lang, Arthur Conan Doyle, Robert Louis Stevenson, and G. K. Chesterton are only a few of the authors who works are parodied. CA$10.00/US$7.50/£5.00 plus postage.
  62. Barbara Roden's 'I AM INCLINED TO THINK...': MUSINGS ON SHERLOCK HOLMES AND ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE is a collection of essays published from 1988 to 2001 in S'ian and D'ean periodicals, on topics that range from Saucy Jack to Oliver Onions to "The Captain of the Pole-Star". CA$13.00/US$10.00/£7.50.
  63. And VIOLETS & VITRIOL: ESSAYS ABOUT SHERLOCK HOLMES AND CONAN DOYLE, edited by Susan Dahlinger, is an imaginative tribute to the role of women in the Sherlockian world, from 1903, when an editor of The Bookman first used the word "Sherlockian" (describing a lady who had written a letter commenting on Carolyn Wells) to current scholarship. All the authors are women, from many nations and continents; some of the articles are reprints, but most of them are new, and all are interesting. CA$30.00/US$23.00/£15.00.
64. Feb 04 #3: Mollie Hardwick died on Dec. 13. She joined the BBC as a radio announcer in 1940 and in 1946 moved to their drama department, where she met and married Michael Hardwick. Mollie wrote mysteries, novelizations of television classics such as "Upstairs, Downstairs", THE WORLD OF UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS, and Sherlockian poems; and with her husband wrote a 30-minute radio program ("The Man Who Was Sherlock Holmes") about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for the BBC in 1963 and dramatized some of the Peter Cushing "Sherlock Holmes" shows broadcast by BBC-1 in 1968.
  65. Undershaw, the home that Conan Doyle built in Hindhead in Surrey, is now a hotel and restaurant, and the Independent's restaurant critic Richard Johnson has reported (Feb. 7) on a recent visit: the food was enjoyable and inexpensive (about £30 for two without drinks) and the atmosphere pleasant, although there's little left in the house from Sir Arthur's times. The Observer's restaurant critic Jay Raynor reviewed the restaurant earlier (Jan. 25) and recommended it, describing the house as a "huge lump of Victorian Gothic." Johnson called it an "Arts and Crafts house, built of red brick and tile." One wonders about Victorian Gothics enjoying Arts and Crafts.
  66. The U.S. Postal Service has continued its "Chinese New Year" series, honoring the Year of the Monkey, and the Canon has many mentions of monkeys; one of them is "It was the monkey, not the Professor, whom Roy attacked, just as it was the monkey who teased Roy." ("The Adventure of the Creeping Man").
  67. Further to the report (Mar 03 #6) on plans for a film starring Malcolm McDowell as Holmes and Christopher Lee as Moriarty, the planners are still at work planning: Randall Stock spotted an interview in the Toronto Star (Jan. 30) with McDowell, who was in Toronto for its international film festival. "I'm supposed to be doing Sherlock Holmes to his Moriarty. But he can't do it now, because of this 'Star Wars' thing he's doing." McDowell then imitated Lee's formal British accent: "I kahnt do it now, we'll have to do it next year. When will you be free? We want you to do it."
  68. The Modern Library has published THE LOST WORLD (2003, 227 pp., $8.95) with an introduction by Michael Crichton and notes by Julia Houston. It's taken almost ten years since Crichton's own THE LOST WORLD was published, for him to comment at length on Conan Doyle's book, and the commentary is insightful and interesting. "Conan Doyle did something far more influential than invent a character," Crichton suggests, "he invented a particular kind of fantasy story, and demonstrated a successful way to tell it."
  69. Cator Court, one of the many candidates as the inspiration of the original of Baskerville Hall, is for sale. Russ Mann spotted a notice in the [Plymouth] Western Morning News (Feb. 14), describing the house as having three reception rooms, a conservatory, a study, four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a two-bedroom cottage wing, mature gardens, landscaped grounds, two paddocks, and stabling, on 12 acres; the agents are quoting a "guide price in the region of £1.2 million. Cator Court is located in Widecombe, in Dartmoor National Park, and it was Bernard Davies who identifies it as a Baskerville Hall contender in "Radical Rethinks on Hound and Horse" (the guidebook for the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's expedition to Dartmoor in 2002).

70. Feb 04 #4: "Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini: A Spirited Friendship" is the title of Daniel Stashower's talk at the Library of Congress in Washington on Mar. 17 at 12:10 pm in the Madison Building (room LMG-45 on the ground floor); the talk will be presented by the Library of Congress' Professional Association's "What If... Science Fiction & Fantasy Forum" and copies of Dan's TELLER OF TALES and THE FLOATING LADY MURDER will be available for purchase. And of course he will be happy to sign his books.
  71. "Sherlock and Shaw: The Adventure of the Missing Vampire Diaries" is a new play by Audrey Hampton, scheduled at the Gorilla Theatre in Tampa, Mar. 4-21. According to a story in Playbill <www.playbill.com>, spotted by Pat Ward, the play is set in London in the 1880s, and producer William Terriss has been murdered outside the stage door of the Lyceum Theatre [that really happened]. "The blood has been drained out of him. . . . Henry Irving's business partner, Bram Stoker, had given Terriss a copy of his manuscript 'Vampire Diaries', and now the papers have disappeared. . . . George Bernard Shaw hires master sleuth Sherlock Holmes to track down the sanguinary killer." The theater is at 4419 North Hubert Avenue, Tampa, FL 33614 (813-879-2914) <www.gorillatheatre.com>.
  72. Arnie Matanky died on Jan. 5. He began his career in journalism in 1947 at the Chicago Sun, and in 1956 founded the Near North News, which he edited and published for more than 40 years. He was an enthusiastic member of the Sherlockian world in Chicago, and a philatelist who delighted in his collection of stamps showing people and places mentioned in the Canon, and of course made sure his newspaper reported often on Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians.
  73. Pat Ward spotted a report by Peter Filichia at <www.theatermania.com> on Feb. 16 that offers some nice background information on the musical "Baker Street" (1965), and an explanation of why there is no CD of the original cast album: Decca Broadway, which now owns the MGM catalog, can't find the original contracts, and company lawyers are worried about being sued.
  74. Welcome news for Jeremy Brett fans: Warner Home Video has issued a two-DVD set of "My Fair Lady" ($26.00) with a new high-definition transfer from the 1994 restoration; the added-value material includes the documentary "More Lovingly Than Ever: The Making of 'My Fair Lady'" narrated by Brett, and the recently discovered test sequences of Audrey Hepburn singing "Wouldn't It Be Lovingly" and "Show Me" (Marnie Nixon dubbed

- Hepburn's songs in the final version of the film). Alas, there was no similar discovery of tests with Brett doing his own singing (it was in the documentary that Brett first admitted that he was dubbed by Bill Shirley).
75. Reported: RAFFLES: THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN, by E. W. Hornung, with an introduction by Richard Lancelyn Green (London: Penguin Classics, 2003, 240 pp., £7.99); Richard's introduction includes discussion of the stories literary context, and the relationship between Raffles and Holmes.
  76. Bjarne Nielsen's Sherlock Holmes Museet Antikvariatet is open again, at a new address (Egebjergvej 206, 4500 Nykøbing Sj., Denmark), and he has sent a new catalog of Sherlockian books (his last, since he has decided to move his business to his web-site) <www.sherlockiana.net>.

---

  77. Feb 04 #5: "Thank you for the card about THE EYE OF OSIRIS. I don't want any book I can't put on my bookshelves that is not equal in appearance to the COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES you sent." From a letter from the writer (and collector) Raymond Chandler to a bookdealer in 1949, advertised ten years ago by Kenneth W. Rendell for $3,500.
  78. The winter 2004 issue of the Tonga Times offers a rare one-on-one interview with Tonga, news from the world of miniatures, and a colorful photograph of Nancy Garces' model of the reconstruction of the sitting-room at the Chateau de Lucens in Switzerland. Membership in the society includes the newsletter, and the cost is $10.50 a year (or $11.50 to Canada or $13.50 elsewhere) from Trish and Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229) <hometown.aol.com/mini\_tongasociety/mini1.htm>.
  79. Paul Robeson has been honored on the new stamp in the U.S. Postal Service's "Black Heritage" series, and yes, there's a Sherlockian connection for Paul Robeson, reported by Jim Vogelsang: in the British film "The Big Fella" (1937), Robeson (as Joe) is asked by the police to help find a missing boy, and when he explains this to a friend, his companion replies, "Mr. Joe blinkin' Sherlock, head of the lost kid department."
  80. One of the more interesting things that Sherlockian societies do is engage in a bit of propaganda, and a fine way to explain to people how much fun is to be found in the sometimes strange world of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians is to present programs at local libraries; members of Watson's Tin Box will do that on Mar. 25 (from 7:00 pm to 8:30 pm) in the Miller Branch Library in Ellicott City, Md. (characters from the Canon will appear to share some experiences with and opinions about Sherlock Holmes). The library's telephone number is 410-313-1950 (in case you need directions).
  81. Sherlock Holmes appears in "Humpty Dumpty: Did He Fall? Or Was He Pushed?" in Victor G. Ambrus' DRACULA'S BEDTIME STORYBOOK (Oxford University Press, 1982), one of two books collected as DRACULA'S OMNIBUS (1983); Ambrus has written and illustrated his own version of the saga, with great humor and delightfully grotesque artwork.
  82. "Concerning the Spiritual in Photography" is an exhibit at the Photographic Resource Center at Boston University through Mar. 14, displaying contemporary art and historical spirit photographs and ephemera from the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas (Austin), including photographs of Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini and the Boston medium Mina (Margery) Crandon). Thanks to Randall Stock for spotting a report on the exhibit; the Center is located at 832 Commonwealth Avenue in Boston (617-875-0600) <www.bu.edu/prc/spirit.html>.
  83. Gideon Hill has noted the web-site promotion for the 2004 edition of Whitaker's Almanack <www.whitakers-almanack.co.uk>: "Published annually in Britain since 1868, Whitaker's Almanack is the ultimate single-volume reference source. Such is its reputation that a copy of the 1878 edition was included in the time capsule beneath Cleopatra's Needle, and Sherlock Holmes used it when deciphering a code in *The Valley of Fear*."

  84. Feb 04 #6: Harry Bartell died on Feb. 26. He acted on stage, screen, radio, and television (he worked on 185 radio series and 77 television series), and he was the genial announcer for "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce) in the 1945-46 season. He also provided interesting commentary for the audiocassette series produced by Ken Greenwald and distributed by Simon and Schuster from 1988 to 1994, and he wrote a delightful series of columns for an old-time radio web-site <www.lofcom.com/nostalgia/columns/struts>; click on "On Auditions" to read his story about how he auditioned for the Sherlock Holmes series.
  85. Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published for 21 years by The Sound of the Baskervilles (the Sherlockian society in Seattle), and the latest issue includes warm tributes to long-time member Frank Darlington, and other material by the society's members. The 45-page booklet is available from David Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332; $5.00 postpaid ($6.00 outside the United States).
  86. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes began publishing a newsletter in 1975, and it quickly involved into the journal The Serpentine Muse, which continues to offer news about the ASH as toasts and presentations at the dinners, and papers submitted to the Muse. And now Susan Z. Diamond and Marilynne McKay have edited an anthology, SERPENTINE MUSE-INGS (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2004; 163 pp., $19.95), that offers a fine and nicely decorated look at what the ASH (and their friends) have been up to. It's available from the publisher (Box 68303, Indianapolis, IN 46268); $23.70 postpaid (to the U.S.), $25.70 (elsewhere). If you want to know more about the Adventuresses, their web-site is at <www.ash-nyc.com>.
  87. Maurice F. Neville's collection will be sold at auction at Sotheby's in New York in two parts, on Apr. 13 and Nov. 16. And it's a fine collection indeed (Neville is a book dealer as well as a collector): the highlights include the first 40 pages (in two exercise books) of the manuscript of "The Adventure of the Solitary Cyclist" (the last two pages, in a third exercise book, are owned by another collector); and the original artwork for Sidney Paget's illustration of Holmes and Moriarty grappling at the Reichenbach. The manuscript is estimated at $150,000-200,000 and the artwork at $50,000-75,000 (the two Sherlockian items will be in the second sale on Nov. 16).
  88. The catalog's not yet up at the web-site, but other items include a ninepage letter from Charles Dickens to Washington Irving, and Hemingway's THE OLD MAN AND THE SEA inscribed to Spencer Tracy. Sotheby's is at 1334 York Avenue, New York, NY 10021 <www.sothebys.com>.
  89. Michael Chabon, who won a Pulitzer Prize for his novel THE AMAZING ADVENTURES OF KAVALIER & CLAY (Apr 01 #3), was ten years old when he wrote, trying for Conan Doyle's style, a story about Sherlock Holmes meeting Captain Nemo. And now he has written an intriguing mystery story ("The Final Solution"), set on the Sussex Downs and in London in the summer of 1944, that features an aged beekeeper detective; it was published in The Paris Review (summer 2003), and it will be included in his TALES OF MYSTERY AND IMAGINATION, forthcoming from Fourth Estate.

  90. Mar 04 #1: Russ Mann spotted the story in Newsday (Mar. 6), about a foolish gunman who attempted to rob a man who was visiting his mother in the East Village; the intended victim was a federal agent who works for the Bureau of Diplomatic Security, and who pulled out his wallet with one hand and his weapon with the other hand. The robber, critically hurt but expected to survive, has three prior convictions and served time for each one; he was paroled in October after serving six and a half years for weapons possession. When he began serving his most recent sentence he told prison authorities his name was Sherlock Holmes.
  91. The Parallel Case of St. Louis will hold its second "Holmes Under the Arch" symposium on May 20-22, 2005; their first symposium took place in 1999, and it was quite successful. Their mailing list is maintained by Barbara Roscoe (7101 Mardel, St. Louis, MO 63109) <sherlock-holmes@sbcglobal.net>.
  92. Tom Dunn is the editor and publisher of The Pipe Smoker's Ephemeris, an irregular quarterly published for The Universal Coterie of Pipe Smokers, and of course the Coterie has many Sherlockian members. The latest issue (winter-spring 2004) includes a report on Dunhill's decision to resume production (in 2003) of their oversized "magnum" briars for the first time since 1939. Dunhill's press release noted that one of the earliest examples of such an oversized pipe is a shell-finish classically-shaped bent billiard that was fitted with a sterling silver band engraved for a 1921 presentation to H.

- A. Saintsbury, celebrating his 1,200th performance as Sherlock Holmes. The pipe was eventually owned by Stanley MacKenzie, and was in his collection when it was sold at auction in 1995. The current issue of the Ephemeris is the 40th, with 116 pages; Tom's address is 2037 120th Street, College Point, NY 11356.
93. "The Cottingley Fairies Dupe Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" is the cover blurb on the May issue of British Heritage, promoting Bruce Heydt's article "The Adventure of the Cottingley Fairies". $5.99; 741 Miller Drive SE #D-2, Leesburg, VA 20175 <www.britishheritage.com>.
  94. THE PARTIAL ART OF DETECTION, edited by Balaji Narasimhan (Tokyo: Shoso-in Press, 2003; 32 pp., $8.00), offers 235 quotes from the Canon, identified by story and indexed for subjects from "alternative" to "wrong"; the author is a journalist in India and an active Sherlockian, and this is his interim attempt at creating Sherlock Holmes' THE WHOLE ART OF DETECTION. Available from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (887-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
  95. It was Steve Clarkson who first reported (in The Passengers' Log, published by The Sydney Passengers) in 1998 on Sherlock Homes, a then-new residential development in southeastern Carroll County, Maryland. The development now is called Sherlock Holmes Estates, and the residents live in rather expensive (upper six figures) houses on Conan Doyle Road, Elementary Drive, Watson Court, Hudson Drive, Sherlock Holmes Street, Baskerville Drive, Mycroft Street, and Silver Blaze Drive. The development is in Sykesville, and you can find the streets easily using <www.mapquest.com>. There's also a Sherlock Homes Estates in West London <www.sherlockhomesestates.com>.

96. Mar 04 #2: The Red Circle of Washington keeps a careful watch for politicians who are familiar with the Master Detective's abilities. A story in The Hill (Feb. 11), reports that Sen. Arlen Specter (R-Penn.), a former prosecutor whose resume includes both the Warren Commission and the Water-gate investigation, has his own ideas about who sent ricin to Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist's (R-Tenn.) office last week and who mailed anthrax-laced letters to then-Majority Leader Tom Daschle in the days after the Sept. 11 attacks. "I think it was the same guy," he said. "I see him as a potential serial offender. Now he's going after Frist, so there's a pattern." But after floating his theory, Specter seemed to make light of his own gumshoe abilities. "They put Sherlock and me on the case, we'll solve it in a matter of ten days," he said.
  97. "Manga" are the graphic novels that have been popular in Japan for many years, and they're now becoming popular here in English translations. Ratana Ngin has noted THE KINDAICHI CASE FILES: THE MUMMY'S CURSE, with story by Yozaburo Kanari and art by Fumiya Sato (Los Angeles: TOKYOPOP, 2003; 252 pp., $9.99); the Sherlockian frontispiece is unrelated to the story, but a good example of the manga style. The publisher's web-site <www.tokyopop.com> offers a good look at manga series.
  98. Further to the report (Sep 03 #8) on MCLEVY: THE EDINBURGH DETECTIVE (2001) and MCLEVY RETURNS: FURTHER DISCLOSURES OF THE EDINBURGH DETECTIVE (2002), there's a companion volume: THE MCGOVAN CASEBOOK: EXPERIENCES OF A DETECTIVE IN VICTORIAN EDINBURGH, by James McGovan [a pseudonym used by William Crawford Honeyman] (Edinburgh: Mercat Press, 2003; 198 pp., £9.99); the McGovan memoirs, published from 1878 to 1884 to great acclaim, may well have been read by Conan Doyle during his years as a student in Edinburgh.
  99. Paul Winfield died on Mar. 7. He launched his acting career as a contract player at Columbia Pictures in 1966, and went on to award-winning roles on stage and in films and television, and was nominated for an Oscar for his work in "Sounder" (1972). He participated in a reading of "Sherlock Holmes and the Hands of Othello" (1987) in Los Angeles in 1999, and according to playwright Alex Simmons, Winfield "did a sterling and dignified performance as the ghost of Ira Aldridge (a real-life 'Negro tragedian' actor from the 1880s)."
  100. Fans of Michael Kurland's Moriarty pastiche THE GREAT GAME (2001) who have been waiting impatiently for the sequel THE EMPRESS OF INDIA, Michael reports that it "is being finished even now," and that his second anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HIDDEN YEARS is scheduled late this year from St. Martin's Press, with stories by Dick Lupoff, Bill Pronzini, Peter Beagle, and others. He has a web-site at <www.michaelkurland.com>.
101. Mar 04 #3: Jim Hillestad runs The Toy Soldier (1343 Paradise Falls, Cresco, PA 19326 <www.the-toy-soldier.com>); it's both a shop and a museum, and he has many dioramas and other displays (and of course Holmes and Watson are on display, and for sale). His newest diorama is "The Adventure of Repulse Bay" (60" x 30") featuring a 50" battleship "Britannia" docked in Hong Kong Harbor; "On board are Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, who have come to foil the opium dealings of Professor Moriarty--you can see him lurking in the shadows of the crowded streets." And crowded they are: there are more than 200 figures (including Holmes, Watson, and Moriarty).
  102. Mike Berdan has reported on his visit to Dinosaur State Park in Rocky Hill, Conn.: the park is devoted to displays of dinosaur footprints (no one has found anything other than footprints in the Connecticut Valley), and one of the signs states: "There is no branch of detective science so important and so neglected as the art of tracing footsteps." The quote is attributed to A. Conan Doyle 1891/Study in Scarlet.
  103. DISNEY ANIMATION: THE ILLUSION OF LIFE, by Frank Thomas and Ollie Johnston (New York: Abbeville Press, 1981), is a fascinating book (written by two of Disney's original "nine old men"); it's a coffee-table volume with 575 pages and 489 full-color plates, and although it was published too early for a discussion of "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986), it does offer some information for fans of Basil Rathbone: when "The Jungle Book" was being developed, they decided that Shere Khan should be an aristocratic, regal monarch "reminiscent of Basil Rathbone." But when the time came to record a voice, "we felt that the intellectual refinement in a voice like Rathbone's would no longer be quite right," and "found the perfect combination of traits in the voice of George Sanders."
  104. Prescott's Press, published by The Three Garridebs, offers a nice mixture of scholarship and whimsy, including Warren Randall's amusing lyrics for "The Irregular March of Michael Whelan's Band" (to be sung to the tune of "MacNamara's Band"). Subscriptions cost $14.00 for four issues ($16.00 to Canada, $18.00 elsewhere), from Warren (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
  105. Martin Booth died on Feb. 12. He was a poet and a teacher, and then a successful novelist, and a publisher and a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature. His biography THE DOCTOR, THE DETECTIVE, AND ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE was published in Britain in 1997 and in the United States in 2000, and was well received.
  106. Further to the report on Hodder Headline's acquisition of John Murray (May 02 #3), when John Murray (the seventh of that name to head the firm) said that its archives (which include quills used by Dickens and locks of hair of Byron's lovers) would be preserved, the National Library of Scotland announced on Mar. 2 that it will acquire the archives for just over £33 million, considerably less than the assessed value of £45 million; the Murray family will create a charitable trust that will use the proceeds from the sale to preserve, explore, and expand the collection, and is pleased that it "is going home" (the first John Murray was born in Edinburgh). Murray's archives include its correspondence with its authors, one of which was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

107. Mar 04 #4: More politics: Laura Kuhn has reported the remarks by Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-Ga.) on Mar. 9 about a joint resolution that would express the sense of Congress that Kids Love a Mystery [a program sponsored by the Mystery Writers of America] "promotes literacy and should be encouraged." Gingrey said: "Whether it is Sherlock Holmes or Dick Tracy or Harry Potter or my childhood favorite, the Hardy Boys mysteries, our support for reading and writing mystery books is a worthy cause."

108. I don't necessarily report on the most important news first, and for those who have been reading impatiently in search of information about the upcoming auction of Conan Doyle material at Christie's salesroom in King Street, London, on May 19, here's the story: there was a flurry of publicity in the media starting on Mar. 14, when the Sunday Times broke the news that Conan Doyle archival material that had been owned by Adrian, and then by his widow Anna, and by Anna's heirs, is being sent to auction by her heirs. Much (and perhaps all) of the material is described briefly by John Dickson Carr in the "Biographical Archives" section at the end of his biography of Conan Doyle, but the auction will not have all of the material described by Carr.
109. The archival material in the auction is interesting indeed: the name plate that he set up outside his medical practice in Southsea in 1882 (estimate £10,000-15,000); three Southsea notebooks that include his sketch for "A Study in Scarlet" (estimate £100,000-150,000); a Norwood notebook in which he wrote "Killed Holmes" (estimate £20,000-30,000); research notes and diaries; correspondence with notables such as Oscar Wilde, Theodore Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, W. G. Grace, and P. G. Wodehouse; the gold medal he had struck for his wife shortly before his death, engraved "To the best of nurses" (estimate £800-1000); and much more. Christie's estimates the total value of the material at £2 million.
110. Christie's web-site at <www.christies.com> has some information (and will have more soon, and eventually a display of the catalog); to find the press release about the auction, click on "About Christie's" and "Press Center" and search for press releases for May 2004 and click on "Read" at 19 May. The material will be on view at Christie's salesroom at Rockefeller Center in New York from Mar. 30 to Apr. 1, and at King Street in London from May 14 on until the auction on May 19 (and there will be an evening of readings on "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle--The Man Revealed" on May 18). Sorry about the short notice about the viewing in New York; I posted a message about this to The Hounds of the Internet earlier this month, and I hope that the news spread quickly and widely.
111. The text of the two stories in the Sunday Times is available at the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's web-site at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>: Click on "News Archive" and then "Conan Doyle's secret plan for troops in armour".
112. Reported: THE NIGHT ORCHID: CONAN DOYLE IN TOULOUSE, by Jean-Claude Dunyach Encino: Black Coat Press, 2004; 280 pp., $20.95); a collection of stories, translated from the French. In the title story "Arthur Conan Doyle takes Professor Challenger to the south of France, where he encounters the famous Professor Picard, Irene Adler, and an ancient horror." The publisher's address is Box 17270, Encino, CA 91416 <www.blackcoatpress.com>.
113. Mar 04 #5: David Stuart Davies reports that his new novel THE VEILED DETECTIVE will be published by Robert Hale in London on Apr. 29 (240 pp., £18.99); the dust-jacket blurb says that the book "takes a fresh, exciting and controversial look at the relationship between the great detective Sherlock Holmes, his friend and chronicler, Doctor John H. Watson, and Professor Moriarty." The book can be pre-ordered at Amazon, and it's also offered (£17.99) at the SHERLOCK web-site <www.sherlockholmes.com>.
114. Bouchercon 2004 ("Murder Among the Maples") will be held in Toronto on Oct. 7-10, organized by Al Navis <www.bouchercon2004.com>. Bouchercon 2005 will take place in Chicago on Sept. 1-4, organized by Deen Kogan and Sonya Rice <www.boucherconworld.org>. And Bouchercon 2006 ("A Prairie Plot") will be held in Madison on Sept. 28-Oct. 1, organized by Al Abramson and Mary Helen Becker <www.bouchercon.com>.
115. You can listen to two versions of Mark Haddon's novel THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME: the American version, read by Jeff Woodman, was issued by Recorded Books on CDs ($24.99) and audiocassettes ($19.99); and British version, read by Ben Tibber, was issued by Random House Audiobooks on CDs (£16.99) and audiocassettes (£12.99).
116. William S. Dorn's COOKING FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DR. WATSON: BRITISH RECIPES FOR TWO PERSONS is sufficiently up-to-date to have nutritional values for each of the 60 recipes, many of them (including ships biscuits, toad in the hole, and Sussex fritters) not found in more traditional cookbooks; it is spiral-bound to open flat, with coated pages to allow spills to be wiped off easily, and the postpaid cost is $23.80 (to the U.S.)/$24.35 (Canada)/ $24.40 (elsewhere). Bill's address is 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210 <www.thesherlockholmesstore.com>.
117. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner, in honor of the world's first forensic geologist, at 7:00 pm on Apr. 21, at La Calle Doce Restaurante in Dallas during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. Our tradition discourages scholarly papers, slide shows, and quizzes (our agenda consists entirely of toasts, some scholarly, but many not). The restaurant is at 415 West 12th Street, and locals and visitors are welcome.
118. Catching up with news from last year: Rebecca Eaton, executive producer of the long-running PBS-TV series "Masterpiece Theatre" and "Mystery!", is an honorary OBE [Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire]; the award was presented to her by the British ambassador in Washington on Dec. 10. The OBE is awarded to people who have made an important contribution to British interests, and people who are not British citizens receive honorary OBEs; Eaton was honored for "her services to Anglo-American film and television."
119. EARTH COLORS, by Sarah Andrews (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2004; 304 pp., $23.95), is the latest title in her continuing series about forensic geologist Em Hansen; Sarah travels for book events that include a dinner on Apr. 22 in Mount Joy, Pa., at Bube's Brewery (which is in a limestone cave 44 feet underground). Details on this and other events, and on her books, and on Sarah, are available at her web-site <www.sarahandrews.net>.

120. Mar 04 #6: For those who like captivating opening sentences in books, here is a fine example: "It was a dramatic setting for a human sacrifice, give my murderer credit." And it's not until you're well into the book that you discover just how Mary Russell has become a candidate for human sacrifice. In Laurie R. King's THE GAME (New York: Bantam Books, 2004; 368 pp., $23.95), she tells a story that's set in 1924, when Mycroft Holmes has sent Mary and her husband to India in search of Kimball O'Hara, betterknown to the world as Kim. "He's real, then? Kipling's boy?" Mary asked. "As real as I am," said Sherlock Holmes. The novel is an excellent continuation of the Mary Russell series, written with style and humor, and interesting characters and plenty of adventure.
121. Further to the report (Nov 02 #2) on a film based on Allan Knee's play "The Man Who Was Peter Pan" (about how J. M. Barrie was inspired to write "Peter Pan"), "J. M. Barrie's Neverland" film is scheduled for release by Miramax on Oct. 22, starring Johnny Depp as Barrie, Ian Hart as Conan Doyle, Dustin Hoffman as Charles Frohman (who also produced William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes"), Julie Christie, and Kate Winslett. Ian Hart was Watson in Richard Roxburgh's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002); Hart isn't the first actor to play both Watson and Conan Doyle, but the list is quite short.
122. Mycroft's League is planning "A Practical Symposium on Sherlock Holmes and the U.S. Constitution, with Observations on the Segregation of Her Majesty, the Queen" in Philadelphia on May 8. The "investigation into the Constitution, Sherlock Holmes, and the Anglo-American Union" will feature a morning session at the National Constitution Center on Independence Mall, lunch, a chance to tour Independence Hall, the Library Bell Pavilion, and the Betsy Ross House, and a guided tour of Christopher Morley's Colonial Philadelphia led by Frank Ferry. The deadline for reservations is Apr. 30, and more information is available from Gideon D. Hill <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>.
123. Chris Redmond spotted the story in the Toronto Star (Mar. 23) about politicians and cormorants (alas, there's no mention of a lighthouse): the province of Ontario is under fire for its plan to authorize shooting of almost 7,000 double-breasted cormorants in Presqu'ile Provincial Park. According - to Thomas Walkom's column, the birds' alleged crime is that they often kill the trees in which they nest, but their real crime is that they've made enemies in the lucrative sport fishing industry.

124. It has been some months since Stephen Rullman posted to the Hounds of the Internet about the custom-built carriages available from the Justin Carriage Works (7615 South M-66, Nashville, MI 49073) <www.buggy.com>; they offer hansoms ($6,870), broughams ($14,500), wagonettes, surreys, buckboards, and other appropriate vehicles (seatbelts optional, at additional cost).
125. I've reported from time to time (most recently May 00 #2) on Skeletons in the Closet (their profits help support the Los Angeles County Coroner's Department's Youthful Drunk Driver Visitation Program), and (of course) they now have a web-site at <www.lacstores.co.la.ca.us> where you can find Sherlock Mugs (displaying a skeleton in Sherlockian costume) and other interesting merchandise. Their postal address is 1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033); thanks to Gayle Harris for the tip.
126. Mar 04 #7: "Cops are hunting a conman who dresses like Sherlock Holmes and pretends to be a policeman," according to Mike Sullivan in the [London] Sun (Mar. 23). The article, noted by Phil Attwell, reports that a man wearing a deerstalker and pretending to be buying a fleet of cars for an operation involving Scotland Yard and MI5, stole a £20,000 Toyota from a showroom in Coulsdon, Surrey. A salesman accompanied him on a test run to the Croydon police station, where the man tricked the salesman into getting out to fetch one of the man's "colleagues", and then sped off.
127. Richard Lancelyn Green ("The Three Gables") died on Mar. 27. He was both a Doylean and a Sherlockian, an enthusiastic bibliographer and collector, an energetic editor and writer, and an excellent speaker. A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE (1983), written with John Michael Gibson, was and is an invaluable resource for collectors and scholars, and their careful research resulted in Conan Doyle's UNCOLLECTED STORIES (1982) and ESSAYS ON PHOTOGRAPHY (1982), and his LETTERS TO THE PRESS (1986), making available material that had never been reprinted and in some cases had not been known to have been written by Conan Doyle. For Sherlockians, he edited an anthology of pastiches, THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1985); a selection from mail sent to Holmes at 221B Baker Street, LETTERS TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (1985); an anthology of early reviews, letters, and articles, THE SHERLOCK HOLMES LETTERS (1986); and an anthology of associated Conan Doyle writings, THE UNCOLLECTED SHERLOCK HOLMES (1993). He also wrote articles and introductions and commentary for Sherlockian societies, and spoke to delighted audiences at Sherlockian symposiums, and he served as chairman of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London from 1996 to 1999. As a collector he was informed and relentless in pursuit of unique material; anyone who was able to visit his home in London to see his treasures was fortunate indeed. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
128. Jerry Margolin has reported a television commercial for Fisher-Price's new "Learn Through Music" set (product 89452, ages 18 months and up, $34.99); one of the four cartridges is "Elmo's ABC Scavenger Hunt" with Elmo shown in Sherlockian costume. Their web-site is <www.fisher-price.com>.
129. Siegler & Co.'s Sovietski Collection catalog (3473 Kurtz Street, San Diego, CA 92110) (800-442-0002) <www.sovietski.com> offers a deerstalker (#151699, $65.00), a magnifying glass and stand (#151631, $79.95), and "classic detective bookends" (#151630, $39.95), as well as Bobby helmets, nightsticks, and whistles.
130. "Indeed, British weather is more temperate than that of the northeastern United States. There one finds really frigid winters, with annual ghostly blizzards killing scores of people and occasioning total stoppage of activity for days at a time; and really torrid wet summers, when everyone who can afford it either flees abroad or moves to the seashore. Fall brings hurricanes; spring, floods. The weather of Boston, New York, and Washington is so bad that if the United States had been colonized from west to east instead of the reverse, the northeastern United States today would be populated as sparsely as North Dakota. The main cities would be somewhere else, and the northeastern area would be planted out in soybeans." Thanks to Karen Murdock, who spotted the passage in Paul Fussell's ABROAD: BRITISH LITERARY TRAVELING BETWEEN THE WARS (1980).

131. Mar 04 #8: Admirers of the film "The Quiet Man" (1952), and there are many who are fans of the only Irish western, may be learning for the first time (as I just have) that one of the actors in "The Quiet Man" also has played Sherlock Holmes. It's not John Wayne, nor Barry Fitzgerald, nor Victor McLaglen. And it's not Maureen O'Hara. Credit Dean Clark for his article on early Sherlock Holmes films in the March issue of The Dispatch (published by the Afghanistan Perceivers of Oklahoma) and his reminder of the supporting character Dan Tobin (the old man with a grand white beard) and the actor who played him: Francis Ford, who played Sherlock Holmes in "A Study in Scarlet" (1914).
132. "Jailhouse Rock Concert for Dartmoor Prisoners" was the headline on a story in the Daily Telegraph (Mar. 22), kindly forwarded by John Baesch. Claudia Stuart, the first woman governor of Dartmoor prison, will allow 26-year-old folk-rock musician Seth Lakeman to launch his new album "Kitty Jay" with a live concert for about 100 of the 600 inmates in the prison chapel on May 5. Lakeman, who lives in Yelverton, only five miles from the prison, said that the songs he wrote for the album "are inspired by the mysterious and haunting background of Dartmoor and deal with all kinds of extremes of human behaviour and emotion. I am sure these are things that prisoners inside Dartmoor can identify with." Dartmoor Prison has housed some of Britain's most notorious convicts, and was condemned two years ago by the Chief Inspector of Prison as "the prison that time forgot" before Stuart was appointed as to reform the prison. She is seeking more contact with the outside world for the prisoners, and approved the concert (music fans may recall the similar concert by Johnny Cash at San Quentin). I Scream Records will release the album (£11.99); it's available at <www.fishrecords.co.uk>, where you can also hear samples of some of the tracks. And Lakeman's website is at <www.sethlakeman.co.uk>.
133. Craig Wichman's Quicksilver Radio Theater has recorded "The Speckled Band" (broadcast by WBAI-FM on Oct. 31, 1999) and "The Blue Carbuncle" (Dec. 28, 2003), and they have two live events coming up: the first is "Fibber McGee Meets Sherlock Holmes" for the Episcopal Actor's Guild in New York on May 20; this will feature recreations of a "Fibber McGee and Molly" episode and a "Sherlock Holmes" episode ("The Hindu in the Wicker Basket") with assistance from Bill Nadel; the Guild is at 1 East 29th Street in New York (212-685-2927). The second event will be a performance of one of Edith Meiser's classic "Sherlock Holmes" scripts at the Friends of Old Time Radio Convention in Newark, N.J., on Oct. 21-24 <www.lofcom.com/nostalgia/fofr>.
134. Audiobuch (Lambertusstrasse 5, 79104 Freiburg, Germany) <www.audiobuch.com> offers Quicksilver's "The Speckled Band" on a CD (E14.90), and this winter will issue a CD with "The Blue Carbuncle" and "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes". They also offer tales read in German by Hubertus Gertzen: "Der Hund von Baskerville" on 3 CDs (E24.90), "Der Katechismus der Familie Musgrave" and "Der blaue Karfunkel" on single CDs (E14.90 each), and "Sherlock-Holmes-Geschichten" ("Der Mann mit der Narbe" and "Der blaue Karfunkel") on 2 cassettes (E19.90). You can hear samples of most of the recordings at the web-site.

135. Apr 04 #1: Further to the report (Mar 04 #4) on the auction and viewing of Conan Doyle material at Christie's sales-room in New York: it was delightful to be able to see some (but not all) of the things that will be at auction in London on May 19. There were three cases of Conan Doyle material in the gallery at Christie's in New York (their London staff was still at work cataloguing the material, Christie's representative explained, and the requirement for export licenses for everything that left London prevented them from bringing more material).

136. What we got to see included: Richard Doyle's portrait of his young nephew Arthur; the manuscript of Conan Doyle's first short story, written when he was six and proudly preserved by his mother; two handwritten issues of his schooldays "Feldkirchian Gazette"; log-books of his voyages on the Hope and Mayumba; his pencil portrait of Professor Challenger; his manuscript notes for "The White Company" and "Sir Nigel"; letters from Oscar Wilde, Winston Churchill, George Bernard Shaw, and H. G. Wells; and a Christmas card from William Gillette inscribed from Sherlock Holmes.
137. The material, once owned by Adrian Conan Doyle, and then by his widow Anna, has been sent to auction by her heirs Richard Doyle, Catherine Doyle, and Charles Foley. And it's grand to think that so much that's so interesting will soon be in public or private collections, and available to those who wish to enjoy learning more about Sir Arthur. By way of example, his logbook from the S.S. Hope is wonderful, with daily comments on life on board and on the ice, and his sketches of the ship and the crew and their activities.
138. He seems to have spent a lot of time falling into the ocean, what with the difficulty of moving about on ice floes, and on one day he happily recorded that he hadn't fallen in. There's also considerable humor in what he wrote (as there was in later years in his professional writing): in one report on a storm at sea he wrote (and I paraphrase) about the violent wind and seas, and straining masts and yards and shrouds, and one of the crew almost being swept overboard, and one tremendous wave carrying off a crate from the deck . . . and then he noted, "But seriously . . ."
139. If you want to see material before the sale, there will be another viewing at Christie's in London (8 King Street, St. James's); the catalog ($30.00/£20.00) can be ordered from Christie's in New York (800-395-6300) or London (20-7389-2820), and the catalog descriptions of the lots should be available at their web-site <www.christies.com>.
140. There were other nice things on display in Christie's gallery in New York, including "Important English Drama including Shakespeare from the Estate of Mary, Vicountess of Eccles" scheduled for auction on Apr. 14. One item in her collection was a copy of the third quarto edition of "Hamlet" published in 1661 and described as the "earliest obtainable copy of 'Hamlet' remaining in private hands" and estimated at $1.5 million to $2 million; the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington did not bid on the book, because the Folger already has three copies of the third quarto. If you're interested in the book, it's still available: bidding did not reach the reserve.
141. Apr 04 #2: And there is more auction news: the manuscript of "The Sussex Vampire" will be offered at auction at Christie's in New York on June 9. Noted as "unrecorded" in my census of Canonical manuscripts, it is described by Christie's as purchased from a New York antiquarian dealer by a New York collector, and given it to the lady who has sent it to auction. According to the catalog, there are 24 leaves on two different paper stocks: 11 sheets of printed ship's stationery (the versos headed "On board S.S.....") and 13 sheets of good-quality lined paper; there are scattered corrections and revisions (among them some 160 crossed-out words describing Holmes and Watson's first meeting with the Ferguson family). The manuscript, bound for the author in white buckram boards is signed and titled on the front cover, and the estimate is $150,000-200,000. The ship's stationery also is printed with the house flag of the White Star Line, and It seems likely that Conan Doyle began the story on the S.S. Adriatic, in which he returned to England in August 1923 after his "second American adventure" (the story was published in January 1924).
142. Sherlock G. Holmes died on Mar. 24. He thought his name was Gordon Holmes until he was 17 years old and needed a copy of his birth certificate in order to play baseball with the American Legion his name, and discovered that his parents had named him Sherlock Gordon Holmes (they hadn't told him because they didn't want him to be teased). And he never regretted his name, and thoroughly enjoyed using it during his long career as an investigator for the Washington state auditor's office.
143. "Hello Kitty" is quite popular with youngsters in Japan (and elsewhere), and she was available last year (and no longer) in Sherlockian costume on a tag that comes with KitKat chocolate, Naomi Tanaka reports from Osaka. According to the label, the tag could be attached to your cell phone.
144. Many years ago (Jul 91 #1) the Daily Mail reported that there were plans for a Sherlock Holmes series starring Stephen Fry and Hugh Laurie, but it was merely a rumor. Now there's a new report in the Daily Mirror (Mar. 30) that Fry and Laurie are to reunite as Holmes and Watson in a new ITV television film that will air next year; the story quoted ITV1's drama chief Nick Elliott as saying that "Stephen is absolutely passionate about Sherlock Holmes, and Hugh will make a superb Watson." The BBC picked up the story, noting that "ITV has yet to confirm the project." So here are the facts (just the facts, ma'am). from London-based Company Pictures (you might have seen their "Anna Karenina" on PBS-TV, and their "Nicholas Nickleby on Bravo): they are developing a pilot script for a possible series for ITV1, starring Fry and Laurie, possibly to shoot this fall, but: "at this stage we have no further information on the project."
145. It's out-of-print, but available in used-book shops and at web-sites such as <www.abebooks.com>: THE CASE BOOK OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, a 72-page book published by the Quality Paperback Book Club in 1994. There's an introduction and a discussion of Conan Doyle and his works (both anonymous), and reprints of Sherlockian essays by G. K. Chesterton, Dorothy L. Sayers, and A. E. Murch, and eight illustrations. Gale Research seems to have put the book together, without credit to an editor, and it's nicely done.

146. Apr 04 #3: Another interesting opening for a story: "I swallowed my fairy when I was twelve years old. It was an accident." That's from Jean-Claude Dunyach's "Watch Me While I Sleep", one of thirteen stories in THE NIGHT ORCHID: CONAN DOYLE IN TOULOUSE (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2004; 279 pp. $20.95). Dunyach's genre is science fiction and fantasy, and the Doylean story in the collection is the title story, set in 1890, when Conan Doyle and Challenger travel to France to help solve a murder mystery; Dunyach does an excellent job of capturing Challenger as he would have been in his younger days. The publisher's address is: Box 17270, Encino, CA 91416 <www.blackcoatpress.com>.
147. Scott Monty spotted Molly Melloan's illustration in the Wall Street Journal (Apr. 13), accompanying George Melloan's opinion piece on "We Already Know Why al Qaeda Succeeded".
148. Registration is now open for the third meeting of The Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society, to be held this year in Davenport, Iowa, on July 22-25. Davenport is the birthplace of Dixieland great Bix Beiderbecke, and the meeting coincides with Davenport's Bix Beiderbecke Jazz Festival. More details are available from Donald B. Izban, 1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068.
149. Peter Wood has noted a travel piece from the Apr. 8 issue of the Vancouver Georgia Straight with the headline "KGB Relics Recall the Days of Baltic Spooks" in which Peter Neville-Hadley reported from Estonia that "In Tallinn, those employed to detect and discourage dissidents had their headquarters at an appropriate address: Pagari (Baker) Street. The Soviet Sherlocks' building sits at the junction with a road that is lined with magnificent medieval structures in creams and ochres, its grey dolomite and terra cotta facade comparatively drab and ready to be overlooked like some rain-coated spy on a street-corner stakeout."
150. Peter Ustinov died on Mar. 28. He was an actor, playwright, novelist, film director, and newspaper columnist, and his acting career spanned six decades; he won Oscars as supporting actor in "Spartacus" (1960) and "Topkapi" (1964). He also participated in the BBC Home Service's centenary "Tribute to Sherlock Holmes" broadcast in 1954, reminiscing as Professor Willi Notenschlager, Holmes' old violin teacher.
151. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has a "Astronomy Picture of the Day" at its web-site, and Scott Monty notes that on Apr. 4 the picture shows "The Lost World of Lake Vida" (a lake hidden beneath 19 meters of ice and gravel in Antarctica). "In a modern version of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic book," NASA-funded scientists plan to drill into the lake and remove a sample of water for analysis. Lake Vida, buried under the ice for more than 2,500 years, is liquid only because of its high salt content, and it may contain microbes. If living organisms are found in Lake Vida, they may indicate that life might still exist under similar frozen ice-sheets on Mars or moons of Jupiter. A photo of a robot meteorological station above ice-sealed Lake Vida can be seen at NASA's web-site at <<http://apod.gsfc.nasa.gov/apod/ap040404.html>>.

152. Apr 04 #4: Alistair Cooke died on Mar. 30. He went to work for the BBC in 1934, and in 1946 started his "Letter from America", which was broadcast to more than 50 countries, with 2869 programs, the last one airing in February. He wrote a Sherlockian parody "The Case of the November Sun-Tan" and hosted the television series "Omnibus" on ABC-TV (they aired "The Fine Art of Murder" in 1956, with Dennis Hoey as Conan Doyle), and in 1971 he became the first (and only, for 22 years) host of "Masterpiece Theatre". In 1994 Jeremy Brett told Nicholas Utechin: "Alistair Cooke said to me about two years ago, 'The three most memorable men of the twentieth century so far are Winston Churchill, Adolf Hitler, and Sherlock Holmes.'"
  153. The World Wide Web offers a spectacular variety of sources for information: the N.Y. Times <www.nytimes.com> provides index access to its archives (you just click on "archive" at the top of the first screen), and you can search the 1851-1995 or the 1996-present archives. The archive for 1851-1995 displays 1,208 citations for "William Gillette" and 2,663 citations for "Conan Doyle" and 5,723 citations for "Sherlock Holmes". Of course you don't get free access to the complete articles, but you can take a list of citations to a library that has the N.Y. Times on microfilm and read without charge. Thanks to Gayle Harris for tip on these archives.
  154. The U.S. Postal Service has honored Henry Mancini, who called himself simply a composer; he won four Oscars and twenty Grammys, and his albums sold more than 30 million copies. His Sherlockian films were "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986) and "Without a Clue" (1988), and (not quite Sherlockian) "The Molly Maguires" (1970).
  155. The latest news about Charles Dickens has no connection with Conan Doyle (although Sir Arthur did once converse with Dickens, during a seance), but Andrew Blau noted a report by Alex Beam in the Boston Globe (Apr. 6) that Stanford University has been mailing facsimile editions of Dickens' novels in weekly serial form so that readers can experience the books as Dickens' readers did in the 19th century. The chapters are printed on cheap newsprint, with the original illustrations. This year's book is "A Tale of Two Cities" and the mailings are sent free to some 5,000 households as part of a community outreach program now in its second year. You can read more about this imaginative project at <www.dickens.stanford.edu>.
  156. Further to the report (Nov 03 #4) about the continuing battle over Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle once lived as a child), a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (Mar. 25), at hand from Jay Hyde, reports that the house will be restored and used as a permanent home for the Dunedin Special School, according to a development proposal that will be submitted to the local council.
  157. Ken Lanza has reported the story in the Guardian (Apr. 16): "The rich Scots brogue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle recounting how he came to create Sherlock Holmes is one of thousands of sound recordings from the British Library to be made available online to universities and further education colleges in a £1 million programme." And the Guardian's web-site has a link to a 1:56 recording of Conan Doyle with grand fidelity. Go to <www.guardian.co.uk> and search for "Conan Doyle" and scroll down to the story.

158. Apr 04 #5: Abbey National, long resident in Baker Street, and with a long history of providing a secretary to answer mail sent to Sherlock Holmes at 221b, has closed its headquarters there, and no longer answers Sherlock Holmes' mail. Bill Barnes reports that his nephew wrote to Sherlock Holmes at 221b, and received a form-letter reply from Grace Riley, director of The Sherlock Holmes Museum, enclosing one of the leather bookmarks stamped with Abbey's name that Abbey used to send with their replies to Sherlock Holmes' mail. The letter is quite similar to those sent from Abbey National, explaining that Mr. Holmes receives too many letters to reply personally, and that he has retired to a bee-farm in the English countryside, and with a final paragraph noting that his old rooms are now open to the public as The Sherlock Holmes Museum.
  159. Reported: a trade paperback edition of MY SHERLOCK HOLMES: UNTOLD STORIES OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE, edited by Michael Kurland (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2004; 370 pp., $14.95); it's an anthology of pastiches, written to Kurland's rule: while Holmes must appear, the viewpoint character is not Watson, but some other figure from the Canon (May 03 #1).
  160. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers an interesting review by Julie McKuras of the books presented to those who attended the 1944 "Trilogy Dinner" (there are multiple copies in the collections, of course) and Dick Sveum's "100 Years Ago" tribute to Andrew Lang, plus other news from and about the collections. And the spring issue of the semi-annual newsletter published by The Friends of the Library uses an appropriate quote from Christopher Morley' friend Don Marquis to introduce a report on "An Evening of Ribald Literature" with Garrison Keillor, and has stories by Tim Johnson on the arrival of "Detective Linus" at the Special Collections (Aug 03 #3) and on Tim's series of "Compleat Scholar" continuing-education classes on the four Sherlock Holmes stories. You can request copies from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, 222 21st Avenue South, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  161. SHERLOCK has been redesigned but continues to offer excellent coverage of crime fiction (Sherlockian and otherwise); issue #59 features David Stuart Davies' discussion of "Mrs. Hudson of the Movies", June Thomson's new pastiche "The Case of the Conk-Singleton Forgery", and Gavin Collinson's review of "Infinite Villainy" (Holmes' adversaries in the films). SHERLOCK is published bimonthly, and subscriptions cost £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> is their American agent; credit-card orders are welcomed at both addresses, and back issues are available.
  162. Robin Hunter died on Mar. 8. The son of actor Ian Hunter (who was Dr. Watson with Arthur Wontner in "The Sign of Four" in 1932), he spent his childhood in Hollywood, where he made the set of "Tarzan" films a favorite playground. He moved to London as a versatile juvenile, and at the age of 23 was the youngest chairman ever at the Players' Theatre, where he excelled in their pantomimes. He went on to a career on stage and screen and television, and played Major Sholto in Granada's "The Sign of the Four" (1987).
163. Apr 04 #6: "Sky's the Limit for Sculpture" is the headline on P. J. Lassek's front-page story in the Tulsa World (Mar. 9), kindly forwarded by Dean Clark. Tulsa plans to create an Oklahoma Centennial Botanical Garden at a wooded area about seven miles northwest of downtown Tulsa at a site that includes Holmes Peak, described as being the highest point in Tulsa, Osage, Creek, Washington, and Pawnee counties. There also is a plan to use the site for a 176-foot bronze sculpture of a Native American that is to be the largest free-standing bronze monument in the world (the Statue of Liberty is 152 feet high). Shan Gray, the artist who is designing the statue, announced this month that he has chosen Holmes Peak as the site; the $26-million statue will be funded privately, and Tulsa is being asked only to provide the site and infrastructure.
  164. The statue won't put Holmes Peak on the map, of course: Dick Warner, head sherpa of The Holmes Peak Preservation Society, won government approval for that some years ago, and Holmes Peak still is the only geographical feature on Earth named in honor of Sherlock Holmes. Dick will of - course revise his "Guide Book and Instructions for the Ascent of Holmes Peak" in time for the formal dedication of the statue in 2007, when Oklahoma celebrates its centennial.

165. It's not new, but completists may want to look for THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (New York: Alladin Classics/Simon & Schuster, 2000; 246 pp., $3.99); with a six-page foreword by Bruce Brooks and a four-page reading guide.
  166. MPI Home Entertainment has released remastered DVDs ($19.98 each) with Basil Rathbone's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939); the DVDs also have production notes and commentary by Richard Valley, and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" has additional commentary by David Stuart Davies.
  167. Norman M. Davis ("The Grosvenor Square Furniture Van") died on Apr. 7. He was a free-lance writer and a stalwart member of Sherlockian societies in Washington and Chicago. His first S'ian paper appeared in The Baker Street Journal in 1969, and he received investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1972. In Washington he happily impersonated Dr. Watson in the productions of The Red Circle Players, and he was proud to share with Watson what Holmes once described as a "pawky vein of humor." Norm delighted in puns and word-play, shown to great advantage in A PAWKY QUIZ (1983) and AMUSING HOLMES! (1992), and his presentations to bewildered and bemused society meetings were spectacular.
  168. Elizabeth Peters' mystery novels about Amelia Peabody Emerson often include allusions to the Sherlock Holmes stories, and fans of the series will welcome AMELIA PEABODY'S EGYPT: A COMPENDIUM, which she has edited with Kristen Whitbread (New York: William Morrow, 2003; 334 pp., $29.95). The book has a chapter on "The Best of Wonder: An Authoritative Analysis of Victorian Popular Fiction" in which Barbara Michaels includes references to the Canon. Note: Elizabeth Peters and Barbara Michaels are both Barbara Mertz, and you can find all three of them at <www.mpmbooks.com>.

169. May 04 #1: "The Devonshire Inheritance: Five Centuries of Collecting at Chatsworth" is an exhibition (through June 20) at the Bard Graduate Center for Studies in the Decorative Arts, Design, and Culture (18 West 86th Street in New York) (212-501-3000), according to a report by Sue Vizoskie in the April issue of the Foolsap Document (the newsletter of The Three Garridebs). There are more than 200 works of art from the family's private collection in the exhibition, including Joshua Reynolds' portrait of Georgiana, 5th Duchess of Devonshire; a different portrait, by Thomas Gainsborough, showing the Georgiana in the fashionable hat mentioned by Watson (in "A Case of Identity") was stolen by Adam Worth (sometimes called "the Napoleon of crime"). The Chatsworth web-site <www.chatsworth-house.co.uk> display the Gainsborough portrait; look for a link to "Devonshire Collection" (the web-site mentions Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Professor Moriarty).
  170. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Barnstormers Theatre, July 6-10. The theater's address is Box 434, Tamworth, NY 03886 (603-323-8500) <www.barnstormerstheatre.com>.
  171. The Historical Journal, published by the Cambridge University Press and devoted to coverage of "all aspects of British, European, and world history since the fifteenth century," has in its Sept. 2003 issue Michael Saler's 24-page article "'Clap If You Believe in Sherlock Holmes': Mass Culture and the Re-Enchantment of Modernity, c. 1890-c. 1940". Saler has interesting things to say about the two types of Holmes believers: the "naive believer" (who genuinely believed that Holmes and Watson were real) and the "ironic believer" (who pretended that Holmes was real, "but for whom this pretence was so earnest that the uninitiated might not recognize it as pretence"). The distinction seems to be as real today as it was then.
  172. Reported by Roger Johnson: Christopher Downes died on Nov. 21. He was the dresser (the trusted personal assistant) for some of Britain's greatest actors, and it was on his life that the film "The Dresser" (1983) was based; according to the obituary by Derek Grainger in The Independent, Robert Stephens insisted on Downes' services in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and Billy Wilder was so impressed by Downes' stylishness and verve that he wrote him into the script as a Victorian policeman. Victor Langley also died in November; he played the Prince of Wales in "Murder by Decree" (1978). And Max Harris died on Mar. 13; he was a jazz pianist, and wrote theme music for radio and television programs, including the Douglas Wilmer "Sherlock Holmes" television series (1965).
  173. All that from Roger's excellent monthly newsletter The District Messenger, which costs $15.00 a year (checks payable to Jean Upton, please) or £6.00 (checks payable to Roger Johnson); their address is Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DF, England. And you can receive his newsletter free by e-mail <rojerjohnson@yahoo.co.uk> [yes, that's "rojer" with a "j"].
  174. The comic-book series RUSE (with Simon Archard and Emma Bishop) has ended its run, but Crossgen continues to published occasional issues of ARCHARD'S AGENT; the latest issue (Apr 04) is not Sherlockian, but nicely Victorian. See <www.crossgen.com> for information on all their series.

175. May 04 #2: "In the Privacy of Their Own Holmes: An Exhibition of Private Press and Limited Edition Sherlockiana" was arranged by Derham Groves for the Baillieu Library at the University of Melbourne from Apr. 5 to May 28, and there was an interesting assortment of Sherlockiana on view. Derham also edited and published IN THE PRIVACY OF THEIR OWN HOLMES to coincide with the exhibition; the 46-page booklet offers nicely-illustrated essays by Peter E. Blau, Vincent Brosnan, Derham Groves, David G. Harris, Michael Jorgensen, Robert C. Littlewood, Jerry Margolin, and C. Paul Martin about private presses and other matters. It's available from Derham Groves (485 Albert Street, Brunswick West, Vic. 3055, Australia); US $30.00 postpaid hard-bound or $15.00 for the paperback.
  176. One of the many strengths of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is the broad scope of his research; one of the problems that result from this is the fact that many of the articles he cites have appeared in society newsletters and other publications that can be difficult if not impossible to find. The Occupants of the Empty House have offered a solution to the problem: THE OCCUPANTS WITHIN THE SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY, with an interesting introduction by Bill Cochran, reprints 24 articles that were cited in the first six volumes of the reference library; the 70-page booklet is available ($23.95 postpaid) from Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999).
  177. RUSS-L (the Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes electronic mailing list for fans of Laurie R. King's novels) has a second edition of their T-shirt (the first version was produced in 1999), and now spaghetti tanks, sweatshirts, camisoles, mouse-pads, and tote bags, available from CafePress.com, 1515 Aurora Drive, San Leandro, CA 94577 (877-809-1659) <www.cafepress.com/russl>. The web-site offers a link to the mailing list (click on the blue logo).
  178. MS. HOLMES OF BAKER STREET, by C. Alan Bradley and William A. S. Sarjeant, has been reprinted (Edmonton: University of Alberta Press, 2004; 288 pp., $34.95), with a new introduction by Barbara Roden. When their book was first published 15 years ago (Dec 89 #6), the authors' careful and well-written examination of evidence that Holmes was female, twice pregnant, and possibly once a mother, was met with outrage from critics who apparently had never heard John Bennett Shaw explain that the one thing Sherlockians should be serious about is not taking themselves seriously.
  179. There has been some discussion on the RUSS-L electronic mailing list (for fans of Laurie R. King's Mary Russell series) of Sherlock Holmes' age during the decades in which the series is set. Michele Canterbury reported to the list about her grandfather, who lived to be 93 years old. "He was very fit and healthy for a man who, to the best of my knowledge, was an alcoholic until the day he died (homemade moonshine, no less), smoked, and chewed tobacco. He did have a massive coronary at the age of 82 (while having sex with his wife); he buried two wives, and one week before he died he walked five miles from his home to the porch of a lady to propose marriage. She told him to go to hell, and he walked home, took to his bed, and died."

180. May 04 #3: Bert Coules' 45-minute series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (with Clive Merrison as Holmes and Andrew Sachs as Watson) resumed on BBC Radio 4 on May 18, with "The Abergavenny Murder" as the first of five new weekly programs. The BBC kindly makes its broadcasts available on the Internet at <www.bbc.co.uk> (just click on "radio" and on "radio 4" and on "listen again"). Four of the five shows will be issued on June 7 as a four-CD set (£15.99) and a two-audiocassette set (£10.99); you can order on-line at <www.bbcshop.com>. Four of the five programs from the first series (2002) also are available as a two-audiocassette set (£10.99). The series is nicely done, with interesting stories imaginatively told.
181. Thanks to Jerry Margolin for the report on the reality series "The Restaurant" (broadcast by NBC-TV on Mondays). In episode 203 (May 10) Mama surprises Rocco with a video of his graduation from the Culinary Institute of America eighteen years ago, and the next day Rocco visits the CIA to speak at their commencement and to see his old mentor Fritz Sonnenschmidt (it was Fritz who did so much work to make the CIA's grand gourmet Sherlockian dinners so delicious). You can see a photograph of Rocco and Fritz at the NBC web-site <www.nbc.com/The\_Restaurant>, and while the episode certainly will repeat on NBC-TV, it will also air on Bravo cable on June 23.
182. Kenneth Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (which premiered as "Dramatic Licence" in New Hampshire in 1983, with Patrick Horgan as William Gillette) is being performed at the Chattanooga Theatre Centre through June 6. It's a murder mystery set in Gillette's home in Connecticut, with Gillette trying to do the detecting. The box-office address is 4 River Street, Chattanooga, TN 37045 <www.theatrecentre.com>.
183. It's not quite the same as engaging a special, as Moriarty did (in "The Final Problem"), but you can still charter "private varnish" (the name still used for private railway cars). Scott Monty spotted an interesting article ("Ride Like a Railroad Baron") in Business Week (May 10), and the experience sounds grand indeed; the American Association of Private Railroad Car Owners has a web-site <www.aaprco.com>, and publishes a Private Car Charter Guide ($7.50 postpaid). AAPRCO is at 630-B Constitution Avenue NE, Washington, DC 20002. Oh yes: prices to charter a car start at around $3,000 a day and can easily top $5,000 or $6,000.
184. Laurie R. King's THE GAME, her latest novel starring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes (Mar 04 #6), is available from Recorded Books, read unabridged by Jenny Sterlin, on 8 audiocassettes ($34.99 purchase or $18.50 rental) or 12 CDs ($39.95/$18.50); 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-636-1304) <www.recordedbooks.com>.
185. Reported: MURDER ON THE LEVIATHAN, by Boris Akunin (New York: Random House, 2004; 240 pp., $21.95); Erast Fandorin, a young Russian detective/diplomat, travels to India in 1878 on the maiden voyage of the Leviathan, and there are murders to solve (Dennis Drabelle reviewed the book in the May 16 issue of the Washington Post and noted echoes of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in "the detective's ability to fill in a character's background by noticing what is lost on less keen-eyed observers"). And: a trade-paperback edition of Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (Apr 03 #1) (New York: Vintage Books, 2004; 240 pp., $12.00).
186. May 04 #4: There were many Sherlockians and Doyleans who happily took advantage of the opportunity to inspect the Conan Doyle material that was on view at Christie's sales-rooms in London before the auction on May 19, and there were plenty of active bidders. The catalog is spectacular, and recommended to anyone who wants to learn more about Sir Arthur's life and work; $30.00/£20.00 from Christie's in New York (800-395-6300) or London (20-7389-2820), and at their web-site <www.christies.com>.
187. Bert Coules has reported that the auction featured "a couple of hundred or so people, a rank of TV cameras, a bank of Christie's staff earnestly chattering into telephones, a plasma screen which displayed the lots (on occasion at the correct time, and various passersby who wandered in to look at (and discuss, sometimes rather loudly the entirely unrelated paintings on the walls of the auction room."
188. The sale realized $1,678,821 (or £948,545) including the buyer's premium; this was somewhat less than half of Christie's estimate for the sale, and 31 lots (out of 135) went unsold because bids was less than the reserves. The more interesting unsold material included Conan Doyle's log-books from his voyages aboard the "Hope" and the "Mayumba", his archive on the Edalji case, his letters to his sister Lottie. The highest price paid for a lot was $247,180/£139,650 for the Southsea notebooks (with the first notes for "A Study in Scarlet"). And some material went for much more than Christie had estimated: Conan Doyle's drawings and paintings, estimated at £1,000-1,500, brought £7,170 (a sure sign that two bidders really wanted the lot).
189. And there have been some reports on who bought what: Cliff Goldfarb has announced that the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library was successful in acquiring a lot titled "Canada and the Empire" (quite appropriate for the Toronto collection). The [Edinburgh] Scotsman reported that the Glasgow City Council bought the archive on the Oscar Slater case (the Mitchell Library already has the records of the Glasgow police enquiries into the case). The British Library purchased ten lots, including two issues of the handwritten magazine Conan Doyle produced while at school at Feldkirch in Austria, the manuscript of his first (and unpublished) novel ("The Narrative of John Smith"), letters to his mother and his brother Innes, and other family papers.
190. The auction attracted considerable interest from the press, both before and after the sale, and there were last-minute complaints that the British government had not acted to preserve the archive for the nation. There also was a report that there was "parliamentary agitation over the possible fate of the archive." The agitation consisted of two "Early Day Motions" filed by MP Alex Salmond (SNP) [Scottish Nationalist Party] on May 14 and 18 protesting the auction (the House of Commons web-site at <www.parliament.uk> notes that early day motions are not generally expected to be debated); and a question posed by MP Pete Wishart (SNP) on May 18 to the Speaker of the House, asking whether he had been approached by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media, and Sport about her coming to the House to make a statement about the auction. The Speaker responded: "There are certain things that hon. Members can do to raise these matters, but I have no powers to raise them. It is up to the hon. Gentleman to approach the Department and Ministers with his deep concern." And that was that.
191. May 04 #5: The British Library has announced that it "plans in the coming weeks to mount an exhibition to display the Conan Doyle manuscripts," and that it is "seeking to secure other items that went unsold at auction." The Library also is "keen to explore with other public collections the possibility of raising funds to establish a digital archive" that would reunite as much of the original archives as possible.
192. The British Library also now has received material bequeathed to it by Dame Jean Conan Doyle, including the manuscripts of "The Retired Colourman" and "The Stark Munro Letters".
193. More auction news: Christie's sale of fine printed books and manuscripts at their South Kensington sales room in London on June 8 will include a series of letters and postcards to General Enesy from Sir Arthur, Lady Doyle, and their daughter Mary, 1926-1929; in one letter, discussing a proposed Spiritualist tour to Vienna and Budapest, Sir Arthur notes: "The idea of mixing up a religious subject with Sherlock Holmes or other stories is altogether wrong. Spiritualism is far too solemn and too important."
194. Tony Randall died on May 17. He began his acting career on radio in New York in 1940 and made his stage debut in 1941, and moved to television in 1952, and to films in 1955, and was most famous as Felix Unger in the television series "The Odd Couple" from 1970 to 1975. In 1986 it was reported

- that he had been signed as Holmes in "Sherlock Holmes Meets Dracula" (playing opposite Sid Caesar as Count Dracula); rumors persisted, but in 1994 his publicist wrote: "Tony Randall asked me to inform you that unfortunately, he's never heard of the project you wrote of. Although, he thought it sounded like a great idea." But he did appear as Holmes in advertisements for Smirnoff vodka (1959) and the International Paper Co. (1979); here he is in the 1979 advertisement.
195. It's always nice to see Conan Doyle's books back in print: there is a new edition of THE REFUGEES: A TALE OF TWO CONTINENTS (Neerlandia: Inheritance Publications, 2004; 369 pp., CA$17.95/US$14.90). It's part of the publisher's Huguenot Inheritance Series, which is thoroughly appropriate: the book tells the story of the Huguenots who escaped from France after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685 and settled in the New World. The publisher's address is: Box 154, Neerlandia, AB T0G 1R0, Canada (780-674-3949) <www.telusplanet.net/public/inhpubl/webip/ip.htm>
196. Jonathan Talbot's striking etching of "Silver Blaze" was commissioned as a souvenir of the 25th running of "The Silver Blaze" (you can see it on page 56 of the March 1977 issue of The Baker Street Journal); his artistic style has changed since then, and he'll be one of the artists included in an exhibition titled "The Imaginary Voyage" at the Poughkeepsie Art Museum Galleries (214 Main Street) (845-454-0522) <www.poughkeepsieartmuseum.com>, May 22 to July 4. Talbot will be at the museum for a panel discussion on June 23, and you can see his "Large Planetary Patrin" at their web-site.

197. May 04 #6: PBS Home Video (1320 Braddock Place, Alexandria, VA 22314 (800-645-4727) <www.shoppbs.com> offers "The Many Faces of Sherlock Holmes" on VHS and DVD ($19.98); it's likely the one-hour documentary first broadcast in 1986 (although the new release is listed at 120 minutes). And "Dr. Bell and Mr. Doyle" on VHS and DVD ($19.98); it's a new title for the first "Murder Rooms" mini-series (2000) that starred Ian Richardson as Bell and Robin Laing as Conan Doyle. And various collections, on VHS and DVD, of the Universal films starring Basil Rathbone, and the Granada television series starring Jeremy Brett.
198. Al Gregory notes the March-April issue of Saudi Aramco World, with a cover story by Peter Harrigan on Bedouin trackers. "There is a classic Holmesian tale," he wrote "about the Bedouin who, after four days on the trail of a camel-mounted fugitive, came upon a settlement where his quarry had taken refuge. He demanded, 'Bring out the man with the eye ailment who rode in one night ago on a white camel with no tail that's also blind in one eye.' The tracker had taken in clues: the position of the camel's droppings relative to its rear footprints, the evidence of lopsided grazing on shrubs, and a tell-tale finger-smear on a campfire stone near which the pursued rider had applied the juice of a desert plant use to treat the eyes." You can read the full story on-line at <www.saudiaramcoworld.com>.
199. "Meitantei Conan" [Detective Conan] was first a Japanese manga comic-book series created by Gosho Aoyama, and then it was developed into a long-running animated television series, and then animated films; Shinichi Kudo is a 17-year-old master detective who is turned by villains into a child, and assumes the name Conan Edogawa and pursues evil-doers. The 30-minute series began running (in English, as "Case Closed") on the Cartoon network's "adult swim" late-night schedule on May 24, and airs Mondays through Thursdays at 12:30 am. You can read all about it (and see graphics and such) at two web-sites, at <www.adultswim.com> and <www.caseclosed.com>; the series is not directly Sherlockian, but you should expect echoes and allusions.
200. Reported: Brian Freemantle's THE HOLMES INHERITANCE (Sutton: Severn House, 2004; 346 pp., £18.99); "Sebastian Holmes, estranged son of the great detective, sails to America on the Lusitania to investigate rumors of business magnates plotting secret weapons deals with the Germans just before WWI."
201. It's not known whether Arthur Conan Doyle and Major-General Robert Baden-Powell actually met, in South Africa or elsewhere, but Baden-Powell is mentioned in Conan Doyle's history of THE GREAT BOER WAR, and Conan Doyle is mentioned in Baden-Powell's SCOUTING FOR BOYS. Baden-Powell suggested that Scouts read the Sherlock Holmes stories to learn observation and deduction, in what Christopher Hitchens has called (in the June issue of The Atlantic Monthly) "one of the very few books of the twentieth century that actually led to the formation of a worldwide movement." SCOUTING FOR BOYS: THE ORIGINAL 1908 EDITION, by Robert Baden-Powell (London: Oxford University Press, 2004; 448 pp., $26.00), has been reprinted for the first time in the Oxford World's Classics series.
202. Jun 04 #1: Further to the report about Baden-Powell (May 04 #6), there is more to the story, as noted by Jon Lellenberg: Dame Jean Conan Doyle, in her foreword to Jon's THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1987), wrote that her father "... had an open mind, admitting past misjudgements, such as telling the then Sir Robert Baden-Powell that his new Scout movement would prove too idealistic to last. He remembered this when he took me, age seven, to join the village Brownie pack ..."
203. In 1980 young Harry Hallesy, as an English Literature project, wrote to actors, authors, and politicians, asking them, "what are your all-time favorite books?" The responses were sold at auction in February in Shropshire, and the lot included a letter from former prime minister Harold Wilson, who listed Howard Springer's FAME IS THE SPUR, Dorothy L. Sayer's THE NINE TAILORS, and Arthur Conan Doyle's THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (according to an article in the Bristol Western Daily Press).
204. Paranormal researcher James Ellis has spent six decades documenting spiritualist Leslie Flint, who used an "independent direct voice" made of ectoplasm that would form in the air while Flint sat silently, recently donated thousands of hours of audiotape of Flint to the University of Manitoba, according to a story in the Winnipeg Sun (May 20); distinguished figures from the past who spoke to Flint included Archimedes, Rudolph Valentino, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Staff at the T. G. Hamilton Collection of the paranormal will spend several months indexing and transferring the audiotapes to electronic format.
205. "Novelist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle used to correct his Sherlock Holmes proofs while sitting in the cafe," according to a review (May 29) of the InterContinental Le Grand Hotel Paris at The Telegraph's web-site. The hotel was built in 1862 and recently reopened after an 18-month restoration, and it has a web-site <www.paris-le-grand.intercontinental.com>, but the web-site has no historical information on distinguished guests.
206. Watson's Tin Box (one of the more active Sherlockian societies in Maryland) have collected some of their scholarship in Irene's Cabinet, and a few copies of the 50-page pamphlet are available ($10.00 postpaid) from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886); the contents range from Steve Clarkson's "Interview with Sir Eustace Brackenstall" to Mike Berdan's "A Three-Continent Problem", and it's all nicely done.
207. Reported: RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES I [EMPT/NORW/SIXN/3STU], read by David Timson (Naxos Audiobooks, 2004) on three CDs (£13.99) or three audiocassettes (£9.99); Naxos also offers Timson's recordings of A STUDY IN SCARLET, THE SIGN OF FOUR, and THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES I-VI. Naxos is at 3 Wells Place, Redhill, Surrey RH1 3DR, England <www.naxosaudiobooks.com>.
208. Further to the report (May 04 #2) about merchandise with the RUSS-L emblem, there's a lot more available for Sherlockians: silhouettes and artwork by Paget, Elcock, and Wiles, on everything from clothing to tote bags to lunch boxes to clocks; the CafePress.com address is 1515 Aurora Drive, San Leandro, CA 94577 (877-809-1659) <www.cafepress.com/bakerstreet>.
209. Jun 04 #2: Erik Larson's THE DEVIL IN THE WHITE CITY (Mar 03 #1) won the Edgar awarded by the Mystery Writers of America for best fact crime, at their annual dinner in New York on Apr. 29; the book is Sherlockian only for Larson's description of the arrival in Chicago of Herman Webster Mudgett

- (the serial murderer who is the book's titular devil): "There in July 1886, the year Sir Arthur Conan Doyle introduced his detective to the world, Mudgett registered his name as Holmes."
210. A "Happy 200th Birthday!" to Amandine-Aurore-Lucile Dupin, who was born on July 1, 1804 (the portrait is from the July issue of Smithsonian magazine), and who used the pen-name George Sand. "'L'homme c'est rien--l'oeuvre c'est tout,' as Gustave Flaubert wrote to George Sand," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Red-Headed League").
211. Casting trivia: name some actors who have played both Sherlock Holmes and Inspector Lestrade.
212. The spring issue of The Serpentine Muse offers news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, including a splendid article by forensic toxicologist Marina Stajic on "The Aerodynamics of a Reindeer" (and if you want to know why reindeer are of special interest to the Adventuresses, and how forensic toxicology is involved, you need only subscribe to the Muse). It's published quarterly and costs $10.00 a year (checks payable to the Adventuresses, please) from Evelyn A. Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011).
213. An actor who has played both Sherlock Holmes and Inspector Lestrade is Roger Llewellyn, who is touring as Holmes in David Stuart Davies' play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act"; he was Lestrade on stage in "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (1988). There's at least one more.
214. Judith Flanders' INSIDE THE VICTORIAN HOME: A PORTRAIT OF DOMESTIC LIFE IN VICTORIAN ENGLAND (New York: Norton, 2004; 499 pp., $34.95) was reviewed by Jonathan Yardley in the Washington Post (May 2) as "a useful corrective to over-romanticizing." He noted that "her attention is focused on city life, London in particular; what she shows us is a world in which dirt, vermin, and disease were nearly inescapable, and in which the labor of maintaining even the best-managed households was endless, exhausting, and often dangerous," and it is obvious that the book will be of interest to those who wish to see what life below-stairs in Sherlock Holmes' world was like. If you want to explore the subject a bit farther, Benjamin Schwarz, in his review of INSIDE THE VICTORIAN HOME in The Atlantic Monthly (June) recommends other books, including PUBLIC LIVES, by Eleanor Gordon and Gwyneth Nair (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2004; 304 pp., $45.00), for a different view of how life was lived in those times.
215. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) notes that THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 9 now is available, with 62 pages of humor, pastiche, scholarship, conjecture, and artwork by members of The Hounds of the Internet. $12.00/CA$16.00/£6.50/E10.00/AU$12.00 postpaid by air; payment in currency or by PayPal to <bbarnes@ozemail.com.au> preferred, but checks (made out to R. W. Barnes) are acceptable.
216. Jun 04 #3: According to a review of Metro 3D's Xbox computer game DINOSAUR HUNTING: "The characters each have their own look and feel, but don't appear to have much of a backstory. The one exception is Arthur Conan Doyle. Yes, the author of the Sherlock Holmes series and THE LOST WORLD is, for some reason, in the game as a hunter. Uh, okay, cool. The primary character, Malone, also gets an assist from his dog, Algo, who finds clues and also runs around dinosaurs that are absolutely spazzing out." The review by Hilary Goldstein at <www.ign.com> on June 2; the game was released by Microsoft in Japan last year, and Metro 3D took over publishing duties for the U.S. when Microsoft decided not to release the game, which retails for $39.99 here.
217. "The West End Horror" (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from Nicholas Meyer's novel) has been scheduled at the Asolo Theatre Festival from Nov. 26 to Mar. 3 ("Holmes & Watson meet Gilbert & Sullivan, Shaw, Wilde, and more," according to an announcement). 5555 North Tamiara Trail, Sarasota, FL 34243 (800-361-8388) <www.asolo.org>
218. "Not since the days of Sherlock Holmes has there appeared a collection of detective stories as clever, exciting, and continually gripping as TRENT INTERVENES; not since the Baker Street master has there been a detective as ingenious as Trent. No human encyclopaedia, but a sensible man who is not above relying on the help of those who know more than he in certain special fields, Trent is here in a collection of twelve fast-paced mysteries that are likely to put him in a place second only to that of Conan Doyle's great character." That's the enthusiastic promotion found on a wrap-around strip of paper on top of the dust jacket of the first American edition (1938) of E. C. Bentley's book.
219. Another actor who has played both Sherlock Holmes and Inspector Lestrade is Simon Callow, who was Holmes in BBC Radio 4's "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1993) and BBC Radio 5's series "The Unopened Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" (1993); he was Lestrade on TNT cable television in "The Crucifer of Blood" (1991).
220. Anna Lee died on May 14, one week (according to TV Guide) before she was to receive a special Daytime Emmy for Lifetime Achievement; she played matriarch Lila Quartermaine on "General Hospital" on ABC-TV from 1978 to 2003. She began her acting career on stage in England, and appeared in her first film in 1932, and in her first American film in 1940; she received an MBE (Member of the Order of the British Empire) in 1982. TV Guide's tribute to her (June 6) said she was the god-daughter of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, but in fact she wasn't: Barbara Roisman Cooper (who has been working with Anna Lee on her autobiography BEFORE THE COLOURS FADE) reported four years ago that while her father was a very good friend of Sir Arthur, she wasn't his god-daughter.
221. Further to the report (May 04 #3) on BBC radio broadcasts being available on the Internet at <www.bbc.co.uk>, BBC Radio 7 is airing "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (with Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Watson) five days a week (click on "radio" and on "radio 7" and on "listen again"); the previous seven days' broadcast always are available. Thanks to Phil Attwell for his monitoring of the BBC's radio schedule.
222. Jun 04 #4: Ronald W. Reagan died on June 5. He wrote to O. Dallas Baillio (director of the public library in Mobile, Ala.) in 1977, describing his debt to public libraries and the books he read as a young boy in Dixon, Ill.: "Then came the Zane Grey phase, Horatio Alger and Sherlock Holmes, and, of course, Mark Twain with Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn."
223. There was much more to his reading in those days, and you can read the entire letter in the Feb. 1981 issue of American Libraries. And there's more to the story: on Dec. 4, 1992, the Reagans dined at The Sherlock Holmes in Northumberland Street, and were greeted by Holmes and Watson (costumed actors Stewart Quentin Holmes and John Barrett-Watson); you can read a story about that in the Sherlock Holmes Gazette (spring 1993).
224. Malice Domestic XVII will convene on Apr. 29-May 1, 2005, at the Sheraton National Hotel in Arlington, Va., with Joan Hess as Guest of Honor, Ellis Peters as Ghost of Honor, Carole Nelson Douglas as Toastmaster, and a Lifetime Achievement Award for H. R. F. Keating; you can register with Malice Domestic at Box 31137, Bethesda, MD 20824 <www.malicedomestic.org>.
225. Michael P. Hodel co-authored ENTER THE LION: A POSTHUMOUS MEMOIR OF MYCROFT HOLMES (1978) and was an active Sherlockian in Los Angeles; he also was enthusiastic about radio, and science fiction, and it's nice that we can listen to "Mike Hodel's Hour 25 (Science Fiction Radio for Southern California since 1972)" on the Internet <www.hour25online.com>. Mike was one of four people who started "Hour 25" in 1973, and when he died in 1986, Harlan Ellison took over as host and the show was renamed to honor Mike. The series continued with various hosts until 2000 which it switched to the Internet, and it's still going strong. The index of people interviewed makes it easy to pick and choose, and you might look for (and listen to) Poul Anderson, Laurie R. King, and Charles Edward Pogue, all of whom have something to say about Sherlock Holmes.
226. The next issue of SHERLOCK (edited by David Stuart Davies) won some excellent publicity in the Daily Telegraph in Richard Savill's article "The Dubious Pedigree of the Baskerville Hound" (June 1) about an article by thriller writer Phil Rickman in SHERLOCK that Conan Doyle was inspired by tales of

- Herefordshire's Black Vaughan of Kington, and his ghostly Hergest hound; medieval Baskervilles had a castle at Eardisley, near Kington. It remains to be seen whether Kington will supplant Dartmoor as a destination for future Sherlockian tourists. SHERLOCK is published bimonthly, and the cost of a subscription is £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Atlas Publishing Ltd., Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. And Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlockholmes.com> is their American agent; credit-card orders are welcomed at both addresses and back issues are available.
227. Of course there are other candidates. Last year "the title of baron of the castle which is said to have inspired the name of the Sherlock Holmes novel THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES" was offered for sale (Jun 03 #6). That was Pencelli Castle, near Brecon in Wales, built by 11th-century knight Ralph Baskerville; the owner noted that "Conan Doyle was a regular visitor to the castle during the reign of Queen Victoria." Oh well: "Here a Baskerville, there a Baskerville, everywhere . . ."

228. Jun 04 #5: Eric H. Silk ("The Blue Carbuncle") died on June 8. He was one of the founders of The Bootmakers of Toronto, and drafted the society's constitution (which Cliff Goldfarb quite correctly describes as a document that easily matches The Baker Street Irregulars' Constitution and Buy-Laws); Eric also was Commissioner of the Ontario Police for many years, and he owned the only known piece of Sherlockian pornography (a copy of the 1971 paperback THE SEXUAL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES) smuggled across an international border by a special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He received his Investiture from the BSI in 1977.
229. Randall Stock has a valuable web-site called "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" at <www.members.aol.com/_ht_a/shbest/index.htm>, where you will find much more information about material in the sale of Conan Doyle material in May, the sale of "The Sussex Vampire" this month, Conan Doyle manuscripts (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian), copies of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, and much more.
230. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has another installment in its continuing series of reports on other libraries' special collections: Rebecca Cape's discussion of the Lilly Library at Indiana University, which has a fine collection of Sherlockiana. Plus Christopher Roden's warm tribute to the late Richard Lancelyn Green, and the usual news from and about the Conan Doyle collection in Toronto. Copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth, at 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwrig@sympatico.ca> <www.acdfriends.org/>.
231. I neglected to report earlier that Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine's editor Janet Hutchings has continued EQMM's pleasant tradition of celebrating the birthday festivities: the Feb. 2004 issue offered a parody by Arthur Porges ("Stately Homes and the Impossible Shot") and Jon L. Breen's "The Jury Box" (with reviews of Sherlockian pastiches), plus an editorial "Happy Birthday" to Holmes.
232. Sonia Fetherston reports that Lord Addison Travel is advertising a guided tour ("Masters of Mystery: On the Trail of the Great Detectives") in England, Nov. 11-20, devoted to Hercule Poirot, Lord Peter Wimsey, Inspector Morse, and (of course) Sherlock Holmes; the company is at Box 307, Peterborough, NH 03458 (800-326-1070) <www.lordaddison.com>.
233. John McGowan spotted at BBC News story (June 11) about plans by the British Library to put more than a million pages from 19th-century British newspapers on-line, providing a data base that will be valuable to Sherlockian and Doylean researchers. The £2 million project will cover a century of images and text from papers no longer protected by copyright and a searchable website "is expected to be ready in 18 months' time."
234. Julia Stevenson reports that the Jeremy Brett Memorial Group is planning to petition the Lambeth City Council to establish memorial garden in his honor on Clapham Common; Brett lived in Clapham for many years and 2005 will mark the 10th anniversary of his death. There's more information at a web-site at <www.myvillage.co.uk/pages/celebs-jeremybrett.htm?domain=my%20clapham/>, and you can sign an on-line petition at <www.petitiononline.com/CCJB2005>.

235. Jun 04 #6: Jean Upton reports that she has written an introduction for a centenary reprint of THE GOLLIWOGG'S CIRCUS (1903), written by Bertha Upton and illustrated by Jean's grandfather's cousin Florence K. Upton, who created the Golliwoggs in 1895 (Jean also reports that she discovered that Florence was a friend of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, by way of their shared interest in spiritualism, and Dame Jean Conan Doyle recalled having some of the Golliwogg books when she was a child. The reprint is sold by Carlton Ware (Francis Joseph, 5 Southbrook Mews, London, SE12 8LG, England <www.carltonware.co.uk/badges_and_books.htm>; £25.00 plus shipping.
236. You can visit Gillette Castle on the web, as well as in Hadlyme, Conn.; the URL is <www.hartford.about.com/cs/daytrips/a/aagcastle.htm>. Click on the "virtual photo tour" and you'll find lots of nice photographs, one of which shows Tyke and Teddie Niver as Mr. and Mrs. Gillette.
237. Bill Barnes reports that The Sydney Passengers plan to celebrate their 20th over the weekend of June 11-13, 2005, and will be honored if visitors from abroad can attend the festivities (tentatively titled "An Excellent Voyage: Twenty Years on the Hotspur"). Additional details are available from Bill (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly NSW 2095, Australia) <bbarnes@ozemail.com.au>.
238. Ken Lanza spotted an on-line review at <www.aversion.com> of Sonic Youth's new CD "Sonic Nurse" (released by Geffen Records this month at $13.98); one of the tracks is "Kim Gordon and the Arthur Doyle Hand Cream" (according to the review it "uncovers the screaming waves of distortion and amplifier abuse of the band's glory years, though it settles on a mild-mannered sonic freakout appropriate for the band's mature position in the modern-rock pantheon.") Of course the band has a web-site, where you can hear a sample of the track <www.sonicyouth.com/nurse>. Revolver USA has scheduled a double-LP album to be released on June 28 ($13.00); 2745 16th Street, San Francisco, CA 94103 <www.midheaven.com>.
239. It's not at all clear from the lyrics (available unofficially at a fan website) that their Arthur Doyle is our Arthur Conan Doyle. The song was originally written and performed with the title ("Mariah Carey and the Arthur Doyle Hand Cream"); interviewed by the New Zealand Herald (June 20), Sonic Youth's guitarist Lee Ranaldo explained that "We had to change the name of the track for the album, we've changed Mariah Carey to Kim Gordon for legal reasons. The song came about at the time when Mariah was being dropped by her record company, Virgin, after they'd spent $80 million to sign her to the label. It's a comment on her as a pop star, but also it has a lot to do with that situation where a label signs an artist that sells 15 million copies of an album, then if the next record only sells five million copies they think the artist is a failure all of a sudden and they give them the boot. It's so ridiculous the way the labels think about this medium that is supposed to be art. It's just so crassly commercial and commodified."
240. The "Ron De Waal Collection of Sherlock Holmes" is being offered for sale for $80,000 from Sam Weller's Zion Bookstore (254 South Main Street, Salt Lake City, UT 84101 <www.samwellers.com>; according to Tony Weller, there are about 10,000 individual items, and more than 50 cartons of correspondence and other files, and a four-page flier with an overall description of the collection is available on request from the bookstore.

241. Jun 04 #7: Further to the report (Apr 04 #2) on the rumor that ITV-1 will broadcast a Sherlock Holmes film starring Stephen Fry and Hugh Laurie, BBC-1 will air its own Sherlock Holmes film, starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart, in its Christmas schedule. The BBC-1 film will be produced by Tiger Aspect from an original story by Allan Cubitt (who wrote the script for the company's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC-1 in 2002); according to the BBC's press release, Cubitt's story "reunites an estranged Holmes and his friend Doctor John Watson in a desperate bid to solve a case which threatens - to overwhelm the privilege and tranquility of Edwardian aristocratic society," and filming will begin in London in August. The ITV-1 film, with no title yet announced, is to air some time in 2005.

242. "A River Runs By It: Holmes and Doyle in Minnesota" (the conference sponsored by The Norwegian Explorers and the Arthur Conan Doyle Society in Minneapolis on June 11-13) was great fun, with presentations and performances and vending and dining and drinking, and about 125 locals and visitors enjoying the festivities. Georgina Doyle (widow of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's nephew Brigadier John Doyle) was on hand for her first time in the United States to help launch her book OUT OF THE SHADOWS, which tells the story of Conan Doyle's first wife and their children, and there were other new books available (many of which I hope to review as I find time to read them); and there were guided tours of the Sherlock Holmes Collections in the University's underground cavern (and an interesting exhibit in the Library); and I won't go into additional detail except to suggest that you should consider attending the next conference in Minneapolis, in 2007.
243. One of the nicer new books unveiled at the conference was THE HORROR OF THE HEIGHTS: A FACSIMILE OF THE AUTHOR'S HOLOGRAPH MANUSCRIPT WITH COMMENTARY; the manuscript is one of the treasures in the Special Collections, and the book offers a facsimile of the manuscript and an annotated transcription of the science-fiction story first published in 1913, with the original color and black-and-white illustrations, and commentary by John Bergquist, Michael Dirda, Philip Bergem, Thomas R. Tietze, and Julie McKuras. The book is available from the Calabash Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>; US$45.00/CA$58.00/£27.50 plus postage.
244. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers news from the collections, Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" discussion of Bradshaw's, Ray Betzner's "50 Years Ago" tribute to Edward J. Van Liere, and an explanation of how Linus came to grace the foyer of the library. The newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
245. JABBERLAND: A WHIFFLE THROUGH THE TULGEY WOOD OF "JABBERWOcky" IMITATIONS, by Hilda Bohem, edited by Dayna McCausland, was published in 2002 for the Lewis Carroll Society of Canada, offering more than 200 parodies, pastiches, burlesques, and imitations of the famous poem that have appeared since 1872. And two of them are Sherlockian, one composed by Ruth Berman and Ron Whyte (1957), and the other by Steve Tolins (1992). The book is available from Dayna McCausland (208 Main Street #321, Erin, ON N0B 1T0, Canada) for $20.00 postpaid (or $22.00 outside North America); Canadian or U.S. dollar checks welcome.

246. Jun 04 #8: The manuscript of "The Sussex Vampire" at auction at Christie's in New York on June 9 (Apr 04 #2) sold for $399,500 (including the buyer's premium), setting a new record for a Sherlockian short story. The record for a Holmes story at auction is $519,500 (for "The Sign of the Four" in 1996); the previous record for a short story was $244,500 (set by "Charles Augustus Milverton", accompanied by Frederic Dorr Steele's original artwork for his portrait of Milverton, in 1999).
247. The American Cinematheque has scheduled a "Sherlock Holmes on Film" series at the Egyptian Theatre (6712 Hollywood Boulevard in Hollywood) on July 2-4, featuring ten films starring Basil Rathbone, Peter Cushing, Nicol Williamson, Christopher Plummer, and Robert Stephens <www.egyptiantheatre.com>.
248. Philip Locke died on Apr. 19. He began his acting career in minor roles on stage at the Royal Court in London in the 1950s, and played major parts at the National Theatre and with the Royal Shakespeare Company, and went on to act in films and on television. And he was a splendid Moriarty in the RSC revival of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in London, Washington, and New York in 1974 and 1975. It was nice indeed that while he was performing at the Kennedy Center in Washington, the Washington Star-News commissioned him to review John Gardner's THE RETURN OF MORIARTY; Locke, writing as Moriarty, predicted that Gardner's "fable will do well."
249. Laurie R. King's THE GAME, her latest novel starring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes (Mar 04 #6), has a British edition from Alison & Busby £18.99).
250. The Baker Street Irregulars' weekend expedition to the Valley of Fear (Oct. 22-24) has been fully booked, but additional accommodations have been found and space is again available. There will be distinguished speakers, guided tours with expert guides, entertainment, meals, and an expedition handbook, all for $135 (per person); accommodations cost $250 (per person) for a twonight stay. The festivities are open to all, and you can contact Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278) (317-293-2212).
251. The UCLA Film and Television Archive's "12th Festival of Film Preservation" (July 22-Aug. 21 in Los Angeles) will feature two of Basil Rathbone's films on Aug. 6: "The Mark of Zorro" (1940) and "Sherlock Holmes in Washington" (1943); their web-site's as <www.cinema.ucla.edu>.
252. Forecast: June Thomson's THE SECRET NOTEBOOKS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, from Allison & Busby in June (£18.99/$25.95); more new pastiches from the unrecorded cases.
253. One of the features of the "Footprints of the Hound" conference in Toronto in Oct. 2001 was an excellent performance of Bill Nadel's one-hour adaptation of Edith Meiser's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" radio script (originally broadcast by NBC in six 30-minute episodes in 1941); a 65-minute CD is now available from the Friends of the ACD Collection, 15 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <acdfrinds@sympatico.ca> for CA$20.00/US $15.00/£8.00 plus shipping (credit-card orders welcome).

Jul 04 #1:

254. The famous (perhaps infamous) "tent joke" still turns up, sometimes in odd places, the most recent odd place being the Ramada Hotel in Belfast, where the Democratic Unionist Party held its annual conference. DUP deputy leader Peter Robinson told the joke (citing "The Hound of the Baskervilles") in his address to the conference on May 8; you can read his speech on-line at the DUP web-site <www.dup.org.uk/SearchDetails.asp?Article\_ID=617>. I've published the joke once (Dec 01 #6), from the Reader's Digest (Nov. 1998), and once is enough. Karen Murdock spotted a report about the speech in the Irish Times (May 10).
255. Will Thomas explains that his new mystery novel SOME DANGER INVOLVED (New York: Simon and Schuster/Touchstone, 2004; 304 pp., $22.95) is more an homage than a pastiche, with a lead character based on Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman" (Cyrus Barker and his apprentice Thomas Llewelyn investigate a murder in Victorian London). Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine has published four of Will's Sherlockian poems.
256. Department of Canonical allusions: "If we can establish the facts about the two cigarette-cases, the secret drawer, the telephone conversation and the stolen letter, we're right. Good Lord, that sounds like a list of titles from the old Sherlock Holmes stories. I think part of the charm of those excellent tales lies in Watson's casual but enthralling references to cases we never hear of again." Chief Inspector Roderick Alleyn, in Ngaio Marsh's DEATH IN A WHITE TIE (1938).
257. Manly Wade Wellman wrote a Sherlockian pastiche in 1941 and contributed to The Baker Street Journal from 1946 to 1953 (becoming a member of The Baker Street Irregulars in 1951), and (with his son Wade Wellman) wrote a series of science fiction stories that were collected as SHERLOCK HOLMES'S WAR OF THE WORLDS (1975). He was a fine writer in other fields (he died in 1986), and there's an excellent web-site <www.manlywadewellman.com> maintained by Daniel Ross that's devoted to Wellman's life and work.

258. Further to the item on Sonic Youth's song "Kim Gordon and the Arthur Doyle Hand Cream" (Jun 04 #6), the line in the last verse is: "Like Arthur Doyle they can't fake you." And responses to a query to a bulletin board at the group's web-site suggest that the reference is to free-jazz saxophonist Arthur Doyle, who was born in Birmingham, Ala., in 1944 and who performs in a style he calls "free jazz soul."
259. As noted earlier (Jun 04 #4), the new issue of SHERLOCK (#60) offers Phil Rickman's article about the Welsh inspiration for "The Hound of the Baskervilles", Peter Lovesey's new (non-Sherlockian) story about Sergeant Cribb. and David Stuart Davies' report on his visit to the BBC during recording of Bert Coules' new "Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes". SHERLOCK is published bimonthly, and subscriptions cost £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Atlas Publishing Ltd., Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. And Classic Specialties is the American agent (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlockholmes.com>; credit-card orders are welcomed at both addresses and back issues are available.

260. Jul 04 #2: Maurice Leblanc's ARSENE LUPIN VS. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HOLLOW NEEDLE has been published in a new translation by Jean-Marc and Randy Lofficier (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2004; 261 pp., $20.95), and the book also has Leblanc's short story "Sherlock Holmes Arrives Too Late", an interesting introduction by Kim Newman (author of ANNO DRACULA), and a new pastiche by the Lofficiers about the final encounter between the Gentleman Burglar and the Great Detective. It's nice to see Leblanc's work in print, and there's more to come from the Lofficiers. The publisher has a web-site at <www.blackcoatpress.com>, with a link to an interesting French Wold Newtown Universe, which expands (in English) on the Wold Newton Universe that Philip Jose Farmer created in the 1970s (and of course it includes Sherlock Holmes); there's also an intriguing (and illustrated) bibliography of Sherlockian pastiches in French, in books and comics, and on the radio.
261. Philip Jose Farmer also wrote a biography of Tarzan, and (of course) there is a web-site devoted to Edgar Rice Burroughs <www.erbzine.com>, where the archives include Stu Shiffman's "Adventure of the Martian Hegira: Fragments from the Barsoomian Reminiscences of Sherlock Holmes" in issue 215 of their weekly on-line fanzine.
262. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN BABYLON AND OTHER TALES OF MATHEMATICAL HISTORY, edited by Marlow Anderson, et al. (Washington: Mathematical Association of America, 2004; 400 pp., $49.95), has imaginative Sherlockian cover art, but only the artwork and title are Sherlockian. The original article appeared in the American Mathematical Monthly (May 1980) and was written by R. Creighton Buck, who started with an explanation: "Let me begin by clarifying the title 'Sherlock Holmes in Babylon.' Lest some members of the Baker Street Irregulars be misled, my topic is the archaeology of mathematics." And that was (and is) the only mention of Sherlock Holmes in the article and book.
263. Maria Sharapova, the 17-year-old winner of the tennis singles championship at Wimbledon this month, "enjoys reading books in the Sherlock Holmes and Pippi Longstocking series," according to an item noted by Takeshi Shimizu.
264. For completists (or those who haven't yet read the books): Nicholas Meyer's three Sherlockian pastiches have been issued by W. W. Norton in a uniform set of trade paperbacks: THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION ($13.00), THE WEST END HORROR ($10.95), and THE CANARY TRAINER ($10.95).
265. Gerald R. Clark died on July 11; he was a former Pinkerton agent and security guard, and he was the founder, in 1971, of The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse.
266. Joseph A. Kestner, a professor of English at the University of Tulsa, has explored the Canon in SHERLOCK'S MEN: MASCULINITY, CONAN DOYLE, AND CULTURE HISTORY (Jul 98 #1), and in THE EDWARDIAN DETECTIVE, 1901-1915 (Brookfield: Ashgate Publishing, 1999; 416 pp., $89.95) he offers a reminder that many of the Sherlock Holmes stories were written in an Edwardian (rather than a Victorian age), and discusses the cultural aspects of Edwardian attitudes in the works of Conan Doyle and many of his contemporary mystery writers.

267. Jul 04 #3: John Baesch notes that the new mail-order catalog from Antique Hardware & Home (19 Buckingham Plantation Drive, Bluffton, SC 29910 (800-422-9982) <www.antiquehardware.com> offers solid mahogany replicas of British telephone booths (in mahogany finish or painted the familiar red) for $899. "It's elementary, Watson!" they exclaim, suggesting you'll be the talk of the town with one of their booths in your game room, office, or restaurant. If you want an authentic cast-iron phone booth, the cost is $7,500. Plus shipping (they weigh about 1,500 pounds).
268. Francine Kitts reports (and recommends) a new Sherlock Holmes Leather Paperweight in a catalog from Acorn (5389 East Provident Drive, Cincinnati, OH 45246 (888-870-8047) <www.acornonline.com>; it's 4.25x3.5 in. and weighs one pound, and carries Sherlock Holmes' observation that "The little things are infinitely the most important."
269. It's easy enough to assume that everyone who uses e-mail has discovered one or more aspects of the downside of e-mail, and has become aware of the need for firewalls and filters and such; some Internet Service Providers install filters to block potentially dangerous incoming e-mail, screening messages for indications that the message might be malicious. Recently I sent someone a message that contained the phrase "at home" and the word "spam", and the recipient's ISP blocked the message, and explained why.
270. Congratulations to forensic toxicologist Marina Stajic (whose Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars is "Curare"), on her appointment by Governor George E. Pataki to the N.Y. State Commission on Forensic Science; the commission sets accreditation criteria for all the public forensic laboratories in the state. The photograph shows Marina and the governor at the BSI's annual dinner in 1999.
271. Thierry Saint-Joanis, as Mycroft's Brother Editions, published Jean-Pierre Cagnat's fine IT IS ALWAYS A JOY...TO ME TO MEET AN AMERICAN, A BRITON, A JAPANESE, A CANADIAN, A SWISS... (Feb 01 #1) (still available at E36.00), he also offers Richard L. Boyer's LE RAT GEANT DE SUMATRA (a translation of Boyer's 1976 pastiche) (E18.00), and Bernard Oudin's new SHERLOCK HOLMES ET LA SUFFRAGETTE AMOUREUSE (a collection of seven pastiches) (E18.00). Shipping costs are extra, and more information is available at his web-site at <www.sshf.com/index.php3?dir=fr/biblio&file=mycrofts_brother>; his postal address is 2 impasse de la Serre - Saint-Julien, 63320 Montaigut-le-Blanc, France.
272. Ken Lanza has reported that "Hands of a Murder" (1990) was released on DVD by Wellspring Media on July 20 ($24.98); the film starred Edward Woodward (Holmes), John Hillerman (Watson), and Anthony Andrews (Moriarty), and the script was written by Charles Edward Pogue.
273. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London is planning to make another pilgrimage to Switzerland in June 2005, in costume and in character, with a "very exciting and varied programme (interspersed with a number of serious crimes as well as some startling surprises)." More information is available from Judi Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England) and at the society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.

274. Jul 04 #4: There's yet another edition of THE SIGN OF FOUR (Peterborough: Broadview Press, 2001; 167 pp., $7.95), with scattered annotations in the text and a striking cover photograph showing "Some members of Hodson's Horse Brigade, a mixed troop of Indian and British soldiers, 1857" (Hodson's Horse was raised at Delhi in 1857 during the Sepoy rebellion, and fought at Lucknow, both cities being mentioned in the story); it is obvious from the photograph the Hodson's men were not to be trifled with.
275. Some interesting Conan Doyle material was auctioned at Sotheby's in London on July 8. There were three lots with manuscript material sent to travel writer Douglas Sladen, two related to Conan Doyle's visit to Egypt in 1895-1896 (one of them a letter in which he mentions finding his "little holmes

- stories" translated into Arabic for use by the Egyptian police) and a third with an eight-page lecture in which he discusses his early career and literary influences, and explains why he stopped writing the Sherlock Holmes stories.
276. It is easy to see how important Sherlockian content can be in valuing Conan Doyle's letters: the first (non-Sherlockian) lot (four pages) was estimated at £1,000-1,500 and brought £1,320 (including the buyer's premium), and the second Egyptian lot (three pages), estimated at £800-1,200, brought £2,160. The third lot (the lecture), estimated at £5,000-7,000, sold for £16,800.
277. And there was a miscellaneous lot that included a pen-and-ink caricature by James Frank Sullivan (1853-1936) showing Sherlock Holmes with a dressing gown and an extremely large pipe; if anyone can identify when and where the caricature was published, please let me know. The estimate on the lot was £900-1,200, and it did not sell.
278. Jo Soares' pastiche O XANGO DE BAKER STREET was published in Portuguese in Brazil in 1995 (Feb 96 #4), and in other languages, including (eventually) English in 1997 as A SAMBA FOR SHERLOCK (Dec 97 #4). The story brings Holmes and Watson to Rio de Janeiro to investigate the disappearance of a valuable Stradivarius during Sarah Bernhardt's first visit to the city; the book's a thriller and a parody, and its humor is broad, often vulgar, and sometimes quite dark. A film based on the book was released in Brazil and Portugal in 2001, played briefly at a film festival in New York in 2002, and at long last it's available on DVD (NTSC, region 4 only), in Portuguese, with English sub-titles, from Diabolik: Demented Discs from the World Over (Box 8913, Collingswood, NJ 08108) <www.diabolikdvd.com> for $24.99 plus shipping; thanks to Don Pollock for identifying a reliable source for the DVD. Region 4 is South America, and region 4 DVDs won't run on standard U.S. (region 1) DVD players. But: region 4 DVDs play easily on most (if not all) computer DVD drives.
279. Production on a new Canadian version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" began on July 4, with Anthony D. P. Mann as Holmes and Bill Morrow as Watson. The film is scheduled for release later this year on VHS and DVD, and there is a web-site <www.geocities.com/anthonydpmann> with more information, and a photograph of the company at work in Kingston City Hall (substituting for the parlor at Baskerville Hall).

280. Jul 04 #5: The BBC has released five of its 1960s television programs with Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock on three DVDs, with "The Hound of the Baskervilles", "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Boscombe Valley Mystery", and "The Sign of Four" and "The Blue Carbuncle" (£9.99 each); there's also a boxed set (£24.99). The DVDs are made for region 2 (Europe and Japan), but you ought to be able to play them on any computer DVD drive. The BBC has a web-site at <www.bbcshop.com>.
281. Scott Monty reports that The Bull-Terrier Club will visit Newport, R.I., on Sept. 4 to watch an international polo match (USA vs. England) and to toast all the polo players mentioned in the Canon; tailgating begins at 3:00, and the match at 5:00 <www.newportinternationalpolo>. You can call Scott (617-464-4153) for more information.
282. Scott also notes that the Meridian Hotel in Boston is now part of the Langham chain <www.langhamhotels.com/langham/boston>. The King of Bohemia was one of three people named in the Canon who stayed at the Langham in London.
283. The Postal Service has honored R. Buckminster Fuller as "an inventor, architect, engineer, designer, geometrician, cartographer, and philosopher," with a portrait by Boris Artzybasheff (first published on the cover of the Jan. 10, 1964, issue of Time magazine) that has Fuller's head in the pattern of a geodesic dome (perhaps the best known of his many inventions). Bucky Fuller was a protege and good friend of Christopher Morley in the 1930s, and a member of the Three Hours for Lunch Club, the Grillparzer Sittenpolitzeiverein, and The Baker Street Irregulars.
284. Jennie Paton has reported that "The Name of the Rose" (1986) was released on DVD by Warner Home Video on July 6 ($19.98); the film starred Sean Connery (William of Baskerville) and Christian Slater (Adso of Melk), and the disk has added commentary, a making-of featurette, and other features.
285. There's a new addition to the list of languages into which Sherlock Holmes stories have been translated: 'O CUNTO D' 'O CHIRCHIO RUSSO' is a translation into Neapolitan of "The Adventure of the Red Circle" (the Camorra were and still are based in Naples) by Roberto d'Ajello. Uno Studio in Holmes has published the story in a 93-page book that also contains "L'Avventura del Cerchio Rosso" (an Italian translation by Gianluca Salvatori) and the text in the original English. Copies can be ordered from Dott. Gabriele Mazzoni, C.P. 672, I-50053 Empoli (FI), Italy; $18.00 postpaid (in currency, please), or via PayPal to Gianluca <mycroft@versilia.toscana.it>.
286. A few years ago HarperCollins issued three sets of stories read by Christopher Lee: THE ADVENTURE OF THE SUSSEX VAMPIRE AND OTHER STORIES [SUSS/SHOS/ILLU/VEIL] on two cassettes (£10.99), THE ADVENTURE OF THE LION'S MANE AND OTHER STORIES [LION/3GAR/THOR/RETI] on two cassettes (£10.99), and THE CASE BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES [BLAN/CREE/MAZA/3GAB] on two cassettes (£10.99) and two CDs (£12.99); Phil Attwell reports that the sets are now discounted at £5.99 (cassettes) and £6.49 (CDs) at <www.listen2books.co.uk>. Christopher Lee has an excellent reading voice, and has been a fine Holmes on film and television (as well as playing Sir Henry Baskerville and Mycroft Holmes).

287. Jul 04 #6: Further to the mention of Philip Locke's review (as Moriarty, when he was playing Moriarty) of John Gardner's THE RETURN OF MORIARTY (Jun 04 #8), Lenny Picker had heard from Gardner that "plans are well advanced for doing the third Moriarty," and that he should be starting the book toward the end of next year.
288. Roger Johnson offers an addition to the list of actors who have played both Sherlock Holmes and Inspector Lestrade (Jun 04 #2): Donald Gee was Sherlock Holmes in Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band" at the Nottingham Playhouse in 1977, and Lestrade (with Clive Merrison as Holmes) in broadcasts in the BBC Radio 4 series from 1990 to 1993.
289. "Chinese Cartoonist Sues Nike" was the headline on a story in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer on July 16. Cartoonist Zhu Zhiqiang (known as Xiaoxiao on the Internet) has filed a lawsuit against Nike demanding 2 million yuan ($240,000) and a public apology for copying his "Little Match Man" artwork in their worldwide "Creativity in Sports" television advertising campaign. According to China Daily, Nike's lawyer Zhang Zaiping told the Beijing No. 1 Intermediate People's Court that Zhu's artwork is not protected by copyright because it lacks originality; "From murals and stone paintings in ancient times to Sherlock Holmes stories, the logo has been used repeatedly," Zhang explained. See above for a sample of Zhu's "Little Match Man".
290. NO ORDINARY TERROR, by J. Brooks Van Dyke (Dallas: Durban House, 2004; 314 pp., $15.95); Richard and Emma Watson, twin children of Dr. John H. Watson (she's also a doctor, in practice with her father) investigate an Edwardian espionage mystery set before World War I. Mycroft is involved, and so is a second-generation Inspector Gordon Lestrade. The author has a web-site at <www.jbrooksandyke.com>.
291. Stephen Clark's FIRST MAGAZINE APPEARANCES OF THE SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES offers his research into the priority of the British and American magazines that published the Canonical tales; the 24-page pamphlet is available from Steve (91 Haven Lane, Berkeley Springs, WV 25411); $5.00 postpaid.
292. Abbey National has agreed to be taken over by Spain's largest bank, Banco Santander Central Hispanico, in a deal estimated at £8.5 billion. The new offer is less than half of the £18 billion offered by Lloyds TSB in 2001, in an attempted takeover that was blocked by the British government as anticompetitive. There have been press reports that other banks, including Citigroup and Lloyds, TSB may now enter the bidding. Abbey National

- closed its headquarters in Baker Street some months ago; letters sent to Sherlock Holmes at 221b Baker Street now are being answered by the Sherlock Holmes Museum (Apr 04 #5). Thanks to John Baesch and Bob Katz for noting the latest news about Abbey.
293. News from Britain: a new dramatization (by Clive Francis) of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be directed by Richard Baron at the Nottingham Playhouse from Sept. 4 to Sept. 25, and at the Salisbury Playhouse from Sept. 30 to Oct. 23. According to the Nottingham Playhouse web-site, there will be "four actors each taking on the pivotal roles of Holmes and Watson."

294. Jul 04 #7: Georgina Doyle's OUT OF THE SHADOWS: THE UNTOLD STORY OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S FIRST FAMILY is an excellent and invaluable addition to the biographies of Conan Doyle. Georgina is the widow of Brigadier John Doyle, son of Conan Doyle's brother Innes, and her father and Georgina were close friends of Conan Doyle's daughter Mary. Other biographers have paid far more attention to Conan Doyle's second wife and family than to his first, but Georgina, using her husband's diaries, correspondence, and family photographs, offers an intriguing view of Conan Doyle's life and career, and the complicated, and sometimes antagonistic, interactions between Lady Doyle and her step-children, and then between Mary and Denis, Adrian, and Jean. There's also new and interesting information about the Doyle, Foley, and Hawkins families, and helpful family trees for all the family branches. The book is available from the Calabash Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>; US$42.00/CA$55.00/£25.00 (cloth) plus postage, or US$25.00/CA$35.00/£15.00 (paper) plus postage.
295. THE BEST AMERICAN MYSTERY STORIES 2003 (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 2003; 328 pp., $27.50 cloth, $13.00 paper), edited by Michael Connelly and Otto Penzler, contains 20 fine stories, including Daniel Stashower's "The Adventure of the Agitated Actress" (reprinted from MURDER, MY DEAR WATSON: NEW TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES).
296. The world celebrated the centenary of "Bloomsday" on June 16, and the Irish post office issued two stamps honoring James Joyce and ULYSSES (one of them with a striking portrait photograph taken by Constantine Curran in 1904). Hugh Kenner and William D. Jenkins have reported on the many allusions to the Sherlock Holmes stories in Joyce's works, and the OXFORD ENGLISH DICTIONARY notes one of them (from ULYSSES): "He had been meantime taking stock of the individual in front of him and Sherlock-holmesing him up."
297. The May issue of The Holmes & Watson Report offers editor Brad Keefauver's thoughts about how one might read the Canon if one knew it would be for the last time, and David F. Morrill's review of "The Loss of a Personal Friend" (1987), which may be a record-holder: a film that's been seen by the fewest Sherlockians. $16.00 a year (for six issues) or $22.00 outside North America, or $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
298. Plan ahead: Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (a murder mystery set at William home in Connecticut, with Gillette doing the detecting) is scheduled at the Curtain Call Theatre (210 Old Loudon Road, Latham, NY 12110) (518-877-7529) <www.curtaincalltheatre.com> in 2005, from Mar. 4 to Apr. 9; thanks to Ken Lanza for the news.
299. Ted Friedman spotted Jeremy Brett in "Macbeth" (one of a nine-play series produced in the 1980s and available on DVD). Brett played Macbeth, with Piper Laurie as Lady Macbeth and Simon MacCorkindale as Macduff; "Macbeth" (1981) was released on DVD by Image Entertainment (Ted found it in his local library, but it's available for sale at web-sites).

300. Aug 04 #1: There are many Sherlockians who remember the excitement during the Christmas season of 1967, when William S. Baring-Gould's THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES appeared in the book stores, and I'm sure there will be similar attention paid to Leslie S. Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES this coming Christmas season. W. W. Norton was sufficiently impressed by Les' continuing work on his SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE SERIES to commission a new version intended for the general public, and the new version is impressive indeed, offering the same overall format as Baring-Gould's work, with annotations and illustrations, but covering an additional 37 years of Sherlockian scholarship, and with a different arrangement: two volumes, with all of the short stories and a total of more than 1900 pages, will be published in November ($75.00), and a third volume, with the long stories, is due next year. There's a fine introduction by John le Carre, and Les' own excellent exploration of the world of Sherlock Holmes (and Conan Doyle, and the Sherlockians). Les modestly suggests that "this is not a work for the serious student of Arthur Conan Doyle," but he's seriously wrong: you may think you know it all, but you'll find that you don't, and I recommend the NEW ANNOTATED to everyone. You can read much more about the new work at Les' website <www.lesliesklinger.com>, where there's also a schedule of his appearances on tour coast-to-coast in November and December.
301. Forge/Tom Doherty Associates have begun their paperback reissues of Carole Nelson Douglas' series about Irene Adler, with new titles and uniform cover artwork by Glenn Harrington, offering Carole an opportunity for minor revisions to make the series' time-line more consistent: ANOTHER SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA (formerly IRENE'S LAST WALTZ) was published in Jan. 2003, and THE ADVENTURESS (formerly GOOD MORNING, IRENE) in Dec. 2003.
302. Ken Lanza spotted a review in Scotland on Sunday (July 25) of PABLO NERUDA: A PASSION FOR LIFE, a new biography by Adam Feinstein (London: Bloomsbury, 2004; 544 pp., £25.00) (there's an American edition from Bloomsbury USA); Neruda, who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1971 for his poetry, was born Ricardo Reyes, and at the age of 16, when he wrote his earliest poems, adopted a pseudonym, taking his surname from the violinist Wilhelmina Norman-Neruda, who is mentioned in "A Study in Scarlet".
303. Further to reports that Stephen Fry will star as Sherlock Holmes in an ITV "Sherlock Holmes" television film, and speculation that Fry is too heavy to play the part effectively, the Sun has reported (July 16) that Fry has purchased a running machine so that he can slim down for the role. But he had yet to try out the machine: "It's out of the box," he explained, "but I am going to see a doctor to see how much I can do."
304. Michael Meer has reported on his visit to the Dia:Beacon Museum in Beacon, N.Y., which has an installation by German artist Hanne Darboven that (according to the catalog) weaves together "cultural, social, and historical references with autobiographical documents." It includes displays of film stars, and the film stars include Rathbone and Bruce, captioned as Holmes and Watson (all the other films stars are captioned with their names). The museum's web-site is at <www.diabeacon.org>. And Michael notes that Beacon is not far from Poughkeepsie, home of The Hudson Valley Scientists.

305. Aug 04 #2: "Conan Doyle Comes Home to Portsmouth" was the headline on the Portsmouth City Council's press release announcing that Richard Lancelyn Green's collection has been bequeathed to Portsmouth. Richard's will stipulated that the collection should be kept together, and he wanted it offered first to Portsmouth. The books and printed material will go to the Central Library, and the artifacts to the City Museum. Richard's brother Scirard said that "It's truly fitting that Richard's life work should go to Portsmouth. Conan Doyle wrote the first two Sherlock Holmes stories there, so in some way his work is going home. Richard would have been very pleased that Portsmouth is the final resting place for his eclectic and amazing collection."
306. Ken Lanza noted a review of A MOMENT ON THE EDGE: 100 YEARS OF CRIME STORIES BY WOMEN, edited by Elizabeth George (New York: HarperCollins, 2004; 560 pp., $24.95); the stories include Gillian Linscott's "A Scandal in Winter" (reprinted from HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS).

307. The eight "historical" masks (including a Sherlock Holmes mask) (see Aug 03 #5) are still available for $19.95 plus shipping, from HearthSong (item 710564); Box 1050, Madison, VA 22727) (800-533-4397) <www.hearthsong.com>.
308. Bud Livingston has reported an advertisement for Thomas Wheeler's THE ARCANUM (New York: Bantam, 2004; 336 pp., $22.00); "1919, New York City: With body after mutilated body discovered in the Bowery, an alliance of investigators known as the Arcanum--including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle--takes matters into its own hands to thwart an unnamed evil."
309. Jane Hoffman died on July 26. She made her Broadway debut in 1940, and was a founding member of the Actors Studio; she also appeared in many films and television programs, and was the 2nd Telephone Operator in "They Might Be Giants" (1971).
310. If don't have anything in Mongolian in your collection of translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories, there are two volumes available from The Mongolia Society (322 Goodbody Hall, Indiana University, Bloomington, IN 47405 <www.indiana.edu/~mongsoc> STORIES ABOUT SHERLOCK HOLMES, BOOK 6 [FIVE/SPEC /ABBE] and BOOK 7 [DANC/CROO/SECO]; $30.00 each plus shipping (credit-card orders welcome).
311. Andrea Plunket, who was Andrea Reynolds when she (and her husband Sheldon Reynolds) controlled the Sherlock Holmes copyrights (which were eventually recovered by Dame Jean Conan Doyle) continues to claim control of the characters but has now had a third judge summarily dismiss a third lawsuit she has filed against people and companies that have ignored her demands. The most recent suit was against USA Cable over their television film "Case of Evil" (2002); the court granted summary judgement in favor of USA Cable in June, and awarded attorneys' fees to USA Cable, and ruling that it was "objectively unreasonable" for the lawsuit to have been filed invoked a "rule 11" sanction that made Andrea's attorney also liable for USA Cable's fees.

312. Aug 04 #3: Hardcover Theater will present "Sherlock Holmes: Murder at the Abbey Grange" (a new adaptation by Mark Steven Jensen) at the Minneapolis Theatre Garage on Aug. 7-14, according to Julie McKuras. The box office address is 711 West Franklin Avenue, Minneapolis, MN 55405 (612-604-4466) <www.fringefestival.org>.
313. Further to the item (Jan 04 #4) on the East Lynne Theater Company's staged readings of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" during the "Sherlock Holmes Weekends" in Cape May, N.J., the weekends also offer S'ian mysteries written by John Pekich that are solved by participants with the assistance of Sherlock Holmes (played by Jeff Craig). The next weekends are Nov. 5-7, and on Mar. 4-6 and Nov. 4-6, 2005. Additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278) <www.capemaymac.org>.
314. Eugene Roche died on July 28. He began his acting career on radio at the age of 15, and went on to character work, with a long list of credits on stage, screen, and television; and he played a policeman in "They Might Be Giants" (1971).
315. The web-site at <www.wordcount.org> offers an interesting look at what can be done with computers. "WordCount is an artistic experiment in the way we use language. It presents the 86,800 most frequently used English words, ranked in order of commonality," according to the web-site. You will find "sherlock" at 19364, just after "deformation" and just before "expertly". "holmes" is 7677, "watson" is 6308, and "moriarty" is 49311. "scuttlebutt" (alas) "is currently not in the archive."
316. Add The Occupants of the Empty House to the list of Sherlockian societies that have indexed their journals: THE CAMDEN HOUSE JOURNAL INDEX 1979-2003, edited by William R. Cochran, covers 25 years of monthly issues, indexed by author and subject. There are 63 pages, with essays about society founder Newt Williams and other editors, and it's available from Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999); $23.95 postpaid (checks payable to The Occupants of the Empty House, please).
317. Birlstone Manor is in a film (again); the first film was "The Draughtsman's Contract" (1982), and the second one is "The Four Feathers" (2002), based on A. E. W. Mason's novel and starring Heath Ledger, Wes Bentley, and Kate Hudson. The scenes at Jack Durrance's country home, where he recovers from his wounds, were shot on location at Groombridge Place (on which Sir Arthur modeled Birlstone Manor in "The Valley of Fear"). The film aired on Showtime cable in July, and on The Movie Channel in August; it's also available on DVD, and presumably will be broadcast by a network eventually.
318. If you have been one of those complaining that the U.S. Postal Service has not issued a stamp honoring Sherlock Holmes, you now have an opportunity to fill that gap: the USPS has authorized Stamps.com <www.photo.stamps.com> to create personalized postage for anyone who sends in a digitized photo. It's not cheap, since a sheet of 20 37c stamps costs $16.99 (and shipping costs $2.99 per order). And there are some restrictions: no politics, violence, obscenity, or trademark infringement, and users are required by law to own the rights to or to obtain permission to use any image to create postage.

319. Aug 04 #4: Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (2003) was a best-selling first novel, and it has drawn a great deal of attention to Asperger syndrome (according to Mel Gussow's story in the Aug. 3 issue of the N.Y. Times, a form of high-functioning autism characterized by obsessive behavior, brilliance in some areas, and social ineptitude). And Sherlock Holmes is the favorite author of Christopher Boone, the book's protagonist. Some Sherlockians (and non-Sherlockians) have discussed whether Sherlock Holmes had Asperger syndrome, and psychiatrist Oliver Sacks (who has written widely on medical subjects), queried by Gussow, said that "There is a strange constellation of characters whom we now call Asperger's people. It's reasonable to see Holmes in that direction."
320. David Raksin died on Aug. 9. He worked as a musician in Philadelphia, and in 1935 moved to Hollywood to work with Charlie Chapin on "Modern Times", and went on to write music for more than 400 films and television series. Nominated for two Academy Awards, he is best remembered for his score for "Laura" (1944); he also wrote original music for "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939).
321. There are nice Sherlockian (and Watsonian) touches in Jeffrey Deaver's "The Westphalian Ring" in the September-October issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine.
322. George Bernard Shaw once suggested that "England and America are two countries divided by a common language," and the Canon offers occasional examples of words and phrases that don't mean the same thing on different sides of the Atlantic (John Bennett Shaw's liked to cite "knocked up"). The second edition of Mike Etherington's THE VERY BEST OF BRITISH: AN AMERICAN'S GUIDE TO SPEAKING BRITISH was published in 2000; it's now available on-line at <www.effingpot.com>, and it's both educational and amusing.
323. Stephen Kempfski has noted that Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031-5000) <www.edwardrhamilton.com> offers a wide range of remaindered and discounted books, including at least a dozen paperback pastiches published by Breese Books, discounted to $3.95 from $12.95.
324. Al Gregory notes that the television series "Fawlty Towers" may be unique in that all of its stars have appeared in at least one Sherlockian production: John Cleese (Basil) in "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It" (1977), Prunella Scales (Sibyl) in Peter Cook's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978), Connie Booth (Polly) in "The Strange Case of Civilization as We Know It" (1977), Andrew Sachs (Manuel) in Clive Merrison's BBC Radio 4 series, Ballard Berkley (Major Gowen) in Peter Cushing's BBC-1 "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1968). Can anyone cite another candidate?
325. Karen Murdock noted a story in the Townsville Bulletin (July 30) about "The Paddy in Oz" held at the University of Southern Queensland, July 12-17 (the name of the stage and film-fighting workshop honors Patrick "Paddy" Crean, who was Errol Flynn's choreographer and stunt double); one of the features of the workshop was an exhibition of bartitsu, described by fighting-styles designer Tony Wolfe as "the art of defending oneself while twirling one's moustache." The article noted the connection with Conan Doyle and baritsu.

326. Aug 04 #5: "Let us accept, until proven otherwise, that bin Laden is what he seems--a worthy and dangerous foe--and agree with what Mr. Holmes told Dr. Watson, that eliminating all other options, 'Whatever remains however improbable must be the truth.'" Spotted by Sam Fry in IMPERIAL HUBRIS: WHY THE WEST IS LOSING THE WAR ON TERROR, by Anonymous (Dulles: Brassey's, 2004; 309 pp., $27.50); the author is Michael Scheuer, a veteran CIA employee whose first book was THROUGH OUR ENEMIES' EYES: OSAMA BIN LADEN, RADICAL ISLAM, AND THE FUTURE OF AMERICA (2002).
327. Edinburgh plans to ask UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) for the agency's first award of the title "world city of literature", according to reports in the Scottish press this month. The city cites writers past (Sir Walter Scott, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) and present (Alexander McCall Smith, J. K. Rowling, Ian Rankin, Irvine Welsh, and Dame Muriel Spark, and economics experts have estimated that UNESCO recognition would be worth £2.2 million in extra business to the city. The award would come from the Global Alliance for Cultural Diversity, which was launched by UNESCO in 2002 "to reinforce cultural industries in developing countries and countries in transition while improving the protection of intellectual property rights." And at the end of 2003 the Alliance reported its first results: promoting Algeria's book policy and strengthening its publishing sector, boosting the music industry in Jamaica, helping to market hand-woven items from Tibet abroad, making small Central American publishers more competitive, and creating new musical production standards in Africa. Edinburgh's backers hope that the new award (for cities that "celebrate and extend their literary culture and share it with others") might help the city be the site for future award ceremonies of the Whitbread and Booker prizes and the Nobel Prize for Literature.
328. Peter Woodthorpe died on Aug. 12. His acting career spanned four decades, and he was seen as the pathologist Max in the "Inspector Morse" television series, and as Wilson Kemp in "The Greek Interpreter" in the Peter Cushing television series broadcast by BBC-1 in 1968.
329. Patrick Anderson reviewed Denise Mina's new thriller DECEPTION in the Washington Post on Aug. 30, mentioning Sherlock Holmes in the review, but also reminded readers that "last week I questioned whether it is truly possible for someone, using only his or her tongue and teeth, to tie a cherry-stem into a knot." Readers were quick to assure him that the feat is no urban legend, and "a Sherlock Holmes fan in Nashville reports that 'a nationally recognized Sherlockian scholar' once demonstrated her cherry-stem skills at a Sherlockian convention in St. Louis." The "Sherlock Holmes fan in Nashville" is as yet unidentified, and the talented female Sherlockian scholar as well, but an investigation is underway, and there may or may not be more to report in the next issue.
330. Of course tying a knot in a cherry-stem is elementary, compared to a more difficult feat: you put a skein of thread and a packet of sewing needles in your mouth, chew thoroughly, and then slowly pull the end of the thread out of your mouth with all the needles threaded on it. That's what Harry Houdini did, and if you think Houdini didn't really thread those needles using only his tongue and teeth, then perhaps you might not believe those cherry stems get tied using only tongue and teeth.

331. Aug 04 #6: Further to the report (Jun 04 #7) on BBC-1 plans for a Sherlock Holmes film starring Rupert Everett and Ian Hart, Rupert told a columnist for The Independent (Aug. 24) that he "won't wear a deerstalker or smoke a pipe. The deerstalker is never mentioned in the books. It was invented by the actor Basil Rathbone, and now I'm taking it away and going for a mysterious and moody Holmes." The new film (now called "The Return of Sherlock Holmes") is in production; Everett and Hart filmed their first scenes on Aug. 22 at Greenwich Naval College in London.
332. Ken Lanza has noted a new "Sherlock Holmes Action Figure" in the "Action Hero" series from Archie McPhee & Co. (Box 3852, Seattle, WA 98113 (425-349-3009) <www.archiemcphree.com>; it's 5.25" tall, with removable magnifying glass and deerstalker, and it costs $8.95 postpaid (item 11360).
333. "A Thousand Italian Exclamations!!!" is the title of the next presentation by Mycroft's League, at Maggiano's Restaurant in Philadelphia on Oct. 9. There will be cocktails at 11:30 am, followed by an Italian luncheon and a program devoted to the Italian aspects of the Canon; the proceedings are expected to end at 4:00 pm. The deadline for reservations is Oct. 2, and additional information is offered by Gideon D. Hill (215-887-8110) e-mail <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>. Gideon also plans for a theater party on Sept. 19 to attend a matinee performance of Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" at the Stagecrafters in Philadelphia; contact Gideon for details.
334. And if you can't join the theater party, the play will open on Sept. 17 and close on Oct. 2; the theater is at 8130 Germantown Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19118 (215-247-8881) <www.thestagecrafters.org>. First performed as a oneact play in London in 1974, it was expanded into a two-act play produced in Los Angeles in 1984, and Frank Langella played the title role in Washington and New York in 1987; it's billed as a comic thriller, and it offers plenty of surprises as well as dark comedy.
335. And yes, this issue of my newsletter is a bit late, because I was in southwestern England at the end of August, visiting Dartmoor for the first time (kindly guided and driven by local expert Shirley Purves), visiting Sabine Baring-Gould's home at Lew Trenchard (they served a spectacular Devonshire clotted cream ice cream for dessert at lunch), and Cornwall to see Tintagel (non-Sherlockian, but for those who fondly remember the film "Excalibur", that's where Uther Pendragon, fully armored, had his way with Igraine and fathered the legendary Arthur), and Bath (where one might recall the tales Conan Doyle told of Roman legions), and Longleat, where the four-poster bed in the Chinese Bedroom was used by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree in his production of Shakespeare's "King John" in 1899, and a peignoir that's tastefully displayed at the foot of a bed once owned by Lillie Langtry (Sir Herbert, who once discussed with Conan Doyle the possibility of a dramatization of Sherlock Holmes, was the grandfather of Virginia Parsons, the mother of the present 7th Marquess of Bath).

336. Sep 04 #1: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner, to honor the world's first forensic geologist, at 7:00 pm on Nov. 10, at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. We traditionally discourage scholarly papers, quizzes, and slide shows, and our agenda consists entirely of toasts (some scholarly, but many not). The restaurant is at 1600 16th Street, and locals and visitors are welcome.
337. Something to look for, for those who admire the animations of "A Study in Scarlet", "The Sign of Four", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" produced in Australia and release by Burbank films in 1985 (with Peter O'Toole providing the voice of Sherlock Holmes): all three stories (adapted by Nigel Flynn and Richard Widdows, with artwork from the films) were collected in THE ILLUSTRATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: MMB/Multimedia Books, 1993), and the book turns up from used-book dealers.
338. "You don't read Holmes for the plots. These are not Agatha Christie, these are not brain-twisting mysteries. Unless you're 12 years old, you'll probably figure out the mystery in the first four pages." Leslie S. Klinger, author of THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, interviewed by Lenny Picker in Publishers Weekly (Sept. 6). And the magazine ran a starred review, indicating "a book of outstanding quality."
339. Roger Johnson notes Rod Baser's web-site <www.sherlockholmesinindia.com>, which offers an interesting look at his research on "Sherlock Holmes in India"; he will be returning to India this winter to finalize plans for the guided tour scheduled for October 2005.

340. "Finding Neverland" (the new and final title for the film "J. M. Barrie's Neverland") premiered at the Venice Film Festival on Sept. 8, and received excellent reviews; it's the story of how J. M. Barrie was inspired to write "Peter Pan" and it will be released in the U.S. by Miramax on Nov. 12. The film stars Johnny Depp as Barrie, Ian Hart as Conan Doyle, Dustin Hoffman as Charles Frohman, Julie Christie and Kate Winslett.
341. Meredith Henderson, who starred in "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" for three seasons Canadian television, from 1997 to 2000 1997 (Shirley was the great-grandniece of Sherlock Holmes), went on to guest star in series that included "Queer As Folk" and "The Eleventh Hour" and she has now been cast as superstar Shania Twain in a CBC biography that began shooting this month but my not air until late next year.
342. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection are continuing their annual Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lectures: Dan Posnansky is their guest speaker this year, on the topic of "collecting" (about which he has some delightful tales to tell), at 4:00 pm on October 23, at the Elizabeth Beeton Auditorium in the Metro Toronto Reference Library (no charge for admission). And as usual The Bootmakers of Toronto plan to gather for an informal supper at 6:00 pm at the Red Lion Pub not far from the library; you can rsvp for the supper to Karen Campbell (235 Bloor Street East #919, Toronto, ON M4W 3Y3, Canada) (415-924-1487) <kecapbell@sympatico.ca>.

343. Sep 04 #2: The new edition of MS. HOLMES OF BAKER STREET, by C. Alan Bradley and William A. S. Sarjeant (Edmonton: University of Alberta Press, 2004; 205 pp., $34.95) has a new introduction by Barbara Roden and a new afterword by Alan Bradley that explains the history of a book that was received in the Sherlockian world with outrage or admiration, and occasionally both, when it first appeared in 1989. The authors carefully examined the Canon, and present evidence that Holmes was female, twice pregnant, and possibly once a mother. It is a delight to see their conclusions in print again (Bill Sarjeant called the book ultimate heresy, and was as proud of it as any of his scholarly geological publications).
344. Sherlock Hound (the famous dog detective) and Dr. WhatsUp Wombat (his loyal friend) are featured in THE CASE OF THE DISAPPEARING NECKLACE, written by Karen Wallace and illustrated by Emma Damon, published by Scholastic Ltd. in Britain in 2002 (48 pp., £3.99); there were three other titles in the series (all 2002): THE CASE OF THE HOWLING ARMOUR, THE CASE OF THE GIANT GULPING BLUEBELLS, and THE CASE OF THE FIENDISH DANCING FOOTPRINTS. THE CASE OF THE DISAPPEARING NECKLACE was published by Scholastic in the U.S. this year, with THE CASE OF THE HOWLING ARMOUR to follow; they're "only available for distribution through the school market" here, so you'll need to find a cooperative teacher, or order from Britain (all four titles are listed at <www.amazon.co.uk>).
345. Dante Torrese notes that The Biblical Archaeology Review (Sept.-Oct.) has recognized "Sherlock Holmes, Paleographer" as the world's first manuscript sleuth (with a photograph of Clive Brook).
346. Douglas Warren died on Jan. 19. He was a military and then a civil engineer (when he retired in 1974 the Dudley Council named a street in Sedgely in his honor), He was also an early member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and contributed to The Sherlock Holmes Journal and other S'ian publications, and lectured about Holmes widely and often in the Midlands.
347. "Do you know the exact difference between a mystery story and a detective story?" a mystery reviewer for the N.Y. Herald Tribune once wrote. "Are you aware that such and such a tale--let's call it 'The Haunted Tooth'--even though it contains a certified sleuth hot on the trail of the missing emeralds, is not properly a detective story at all, but should be classified as a mystery, genus B, subspecies 3-x? Or don't you go in for that sort of fine distinctions? Neither do I." The reviewer was the delightful American humorist Will Cuppy, and the quote is the opening paragraph to his introduction to WORLD'S GREAT MYSTERY STORIES (1943); Cuppy also edited the anthology, and Conan Doyle is represented, not by a Sherlock Holmes story, but by "The Fiend of the Cooperage".
348. SHADOWS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Ware: Wordworth Classics, 1998) is a 378-page anthology of 19 stories written by Conan Doyle's predecessors and successors, from Edgar Allan Poe and Wilkie Collins to E. W. Hornung and Baroness Orczy, selected by David Stuart Davies, who also contributed a perceptive introduction; it's still in print, at £1.50 from <www.amazon.co.uk>.

349. Sep 04 #3: Further to the item (Aug 04 #3) about scenes filmed at Groombridge Place in "The Four Feathers" (2002), yet another film is being made featuring the house on which Conan Doyle modeled Birlstone Manor (in "The Valley of Fear"): a new dramatization of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice", scheduled for release next year, with Keira Knightley (Elizabeth Bennett), Donald Sutherland (Mr. Bennett), and Dame Judi Dench (Lady Catherine de Bourgh). Working Title's location manager said "the house has immense charm and the landscape seems to merge seamlessly with it," and the company filmed there in July and August.
350. "That's Elementary, My Dear Joe" is the motto on the Cinnamon Schoolbook Cookies available at Trader Joe's grocery stores; Connie and Betty Berdan enjoy the alphabet cookies, their father Mike reports.
351. "As a kid, I was a Holmes fan. I wanted to know what makes the puzzle work," Gary Sinise told James Brady (Parade magazine, Sept. 12). Sinise (who stars in the CBS-TV spinoff "CSI: New York") told Brady that "CSI" a powerful television franchise because of "the stylishness of the show, the writing, the cast, and the Sherlock Holmes element." But he didn't mention any plans for a "CSI: Baker Street" series.
352. Watson's Tin Box have published the second volume of Irene's Cabinet, and the 52-page pamphlet costs $10.00 (postpaid) from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886); the contents include Steve Clarkson's explanation of how to tell whether it was Fred Dannay or Manfred Lee who signed "Ellery Queen", and Beth Austin's explanation of what an entail was (and wasn't).
353. Les Klinger will moderate a panel on "The World of Sherlock Holmes" at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington on Dec. 1 (the panelists being Peter Blau, Dan Stashower, and Patrick Loughney, who is curator of the Moving Image Division at the Library of Congress); copies of Les' THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES will be available for purchase and signing after the program. More information can be found at <www.residentassociates.org>, and a schedule of his other appearances on tour promoting the book is available at <www.lesliesklinger.com>.
354. Karen Murdock spotted something for completists: Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME has been condensed and published by the Reader's Digest Association in its "selected editions" series of four-in-one volumes; the volume also has David Weich's "Conversation with Mark Haddon (an interview reprinted from Powell's Books' web-site). there's also a side-bar report that mentions that "a story about THE CURIOUS INCIDENT was recently featured on the website of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, where Baker Street loyalists meet to ponder all things Sherlockian." The narrator of Haddon's award-winning best-seller is an autistic teen-ager who enjoys the Sherlock Holmes stories, and turns detective himself.
355. Sep 04 #4: Stephen Fry continues to garner publicity for his comments on his suitability to play Sherlock Holmes. "It's very noticeable that words like 'lean' and 'cadaverous' are used in Holmes, but words like 'lard arse' are not," he told The Independent (Sept. 20). "Not once does Conan Doyle say, 'Holmes wobbled over to his chair and sat down and stuck a pipe into one of his chins." Fry and Rupert Everett, both openly gay, will be playing the same role in competing television films; "I don't know about the private life of William Gillette, the first movie Holmes," Fry told the interviewer, "and I can't believe that Basil Rathbone was camp."

356. James C. Cleary ("Howard Garrideb") died on Sept. 9. He had a long career as a photograph and as public-school and university audio-visual specialist, and was an energetic member of The Three Garridebs and of the wider Sherlockian world in the New York area; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1988.
357. "Franz Kafka singled our four writers as his 'blood relations,'" according to Dennis Drabelle (in the Washington Post Book World on Sept. 19): Dostoyevsky, Flaubert, Grillparzer, and Kleist. Franz Grillparzer (1791-1872) was a highly-regarded Austrian dramatist, relatively unknown today, except to those who know the early history of The Baker Street Irregulars: one of its predecessors was the Grillparzer SittenPolizei Verein, an informal society whose records were kept in a copy of Gustav Pollak's FRANZ GRILLPARZER AND THE AUSTRIAN DRAMA. George Fletcher's excellent essay "Before the Rise: The Grillparzer Book" will be found in Jon L. Lellenberg's IRREGULAR MEMORIES OF THE 'THIRTIES in the BSI's archival-history series.
358. I reported earlier (Aug 04 #3) that the U.S. Postal Service had authorized Stamps.com to issue personalized postage stamps; so far Don Hobbs is the only one who has used such a stamp on mail to me, with a photograph showing him and his grand-daughter Madison Claire Hamill in his Sherlockian library. According to a story in the Washington Post on Sept. 25, pranksters at the web-site The Smoking Gun ordered stamps that showed Monica Lewinsky's stained dress, convicted spies Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, and notorious war criminals, and the company set new restrictions on images. And the program was authorized only through the end of September, so it may be too late to create your own postage stamps showing Sherlock Holmes.
359. PBS Home Video has added a DVD ($24.98) of "Hands of a Murderer" (the 1990 television film starring Edward Woodward and John Hillerman) to its list of Sherlockian film and video; 1320 Braddock Place, Alexandria, VA 22314 (800-645-4727) <www.shoppbs.com>.
360. Further to the item (Aug 04 #5) on Patrick Anderson's report in the Washington Post on people who could tie knots in cherry stems using only their tongue and teeth, mentioning "a nationally recognized Sherlockian scholar" who once demonstrated her cherry-stem skills at a Sherlockian convention in St. Louis, the lady in question has been identified (which wasn't all that difficult, since she confessed). "I can't tell you the ambivalent feelings I have about being identified as tongue-talented," Julie McKuras wrote.
361. Sep 04 #5: "A Blaze of Silver" is the title of this year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 13; the event starts with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00, and ends at 1:00, and the program will feature John Sherwood and Bill Hyder's performance in a sketch in which Holmes meets the ghost of Poe in Baltimore's Westminster churchyard. There's no charge for the festivities, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
362. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Doug Elliott's report on the Bootmakers' recreation of Edith Meiser's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 2001, Doug Elliott's tribute to the late Nathan L. Bengis, and Doug Wrigglesworth's account of his adventures at the Conan Doyle auction at Christie's in May. The newsletter is available from Doug Wrigglesworth, at 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwig@sympatico.ca> <www.acdfriends.org/>.
363. Phil Attwell reports that Radio Times is offering Granada's entire "Sherlock Holmes" series as a boxed set of 23 DVDs (region 2) for £123.99; the title is "Sherlock Holmes - The Complete Collection" and the product number is 658703; Radio Times, P.O. Box 190, Peterborough PE2 6UW, England. Or go to their web-site <www.radiotimes.com> and click on "Shopping". The set is apparently not yet available on region 1 DVDs.
364. Gus Dallas died on Sept. 22. He was a journalist and a Sherlockian, active in the Sherlockian societies in New York, specializing in witty and punny one-act dramatics at society meetings. He worked for the Cleveland Plain Dealer and the N.Y. World-Telegram and Sun, and was an editor and writer at the N.Y. Daily News for more than 25 years, and an editor at Newsday from 1993 to 2003, and he wrote many stories about Sherlockian events for newspapers in Cleveland and New York.
365. The Marine Conservation Society has a "jellyfish survey" running at their web-site at <www.marinewoldlife.co.uk>; one of the society's goals is protection of the endangered leatherback turtle, which enjoys dining on jellyfish. The society is seeking detailed records of jellyfish strandings on beaches in the United Kingdom, and the web-site shows colorful photographs of various jellyfish, including *Cyanea capillata* (the lion's mane); "this jellyfish stings," the web-site notes, "DO NOT TOUCH."
366. Thaddeus Holt, a lawyer and formerly a deputy under secretary of the Army, also is a military historian, and has written THE DECEIVERS: ALLIED MILITARY DECEPTION IN THE SECOND WORLD WAR (New York: Scribner, 2004; 1168 pp., $49.95); he's a member of The Baker Street Irregulars as well, and has not neglected the Canon, citing Holmes' deductions from Watson's watch (in "The Sign of the Four").
367. Something not-quite-new: TOLERANCE VS INTOLERANCE, edited by Marjorie Nicholson, is a 28-pamphlet published in 1995 by FOREST [The Freedom Organisation for the Right to Enjoy Smoking Tobacco]; it's a collection of stories favoring smoking, and one of them is Guy N. Smith's "The Adventure of the Dark Shag" (with Sherman Hulme, Dr. Wilson, and Professor Morrissey).
368. Sep 04 #6: Alan Vanneman's second pastiche, SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HAPSBURG TIARA (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2004; 272 pp., $24.00), also is available read unabridged by Simon Vance, from Audio Editions (Box 6930, Auburn, CA 95604) (800-231-4261) <www.audioeditions.com>; $44.95 on 7 cassettes, or $64.80 on 9 CDs, or $24.95 on 1 mp3-CD. Audio Editions also offers other Sherlockian recordings, including pastiches by Laurie L. King and Larry Millett, and some of the Canon read in Spanish.
369. Jean C. Keating is an author and a doglover, and when she tours promoting her books she is sometimes joined by Sherlock Bones: her papillon Puff, dressed in Sherlockian attire designed and constructed by Donna Jacobson, a costume costumer who works for Colonial Williamsburg; Puff weighs only five pounds, and was described by Jacobson as "two fleas wide and half-a-grasshopper long" in an article in the Outer Banks Sentinel (Sept. 21), spotted by Ken Lanza. The web-site <www.astrapublishers.com> has some book reviews written by Sherlock Bones.
370. There are two new issues of SHERLOCK at hand, and welcome as always for a good mix of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian material. Issue #61 includes an interesting pastiche by Gillian Linscott, and Gavin Collinson's tribute to the film "The Pearl of Death" on its 60th anniversary; issue #62 offers Paul M. Chapman's examination of the American aspects of the Canon, and editor David Stuart Davies' perceptive discussion of film portrayals of Moriarty.
371. SHERLOCK appears six times a year and a subscription costs £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$45.00 (elsewhere); the publisher is Atlas Publishing Ltd., Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> is their American agent. Credit-card orders welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.
372. SHERLOCK also offers an Internet newsletter SHERLOCK EXTRA, without charge. Go to their web-site and register by supplying your e-mail address.
373. Some of you are aware that my old e-mail address doesn't work (my old ISP has been sold, and the new owners are struggling to update the hardware; if they succeed, I may actually gain access to the newest and, alas, not downloaded, version of my e-mail address book. So I have a new email address, and you can update your e-mail address books; if you have sent me messages that I haven't acknowledged, I've not seen them. The electronic world is a treasure, when it works. But when it doesn't . . .

374. Oct 04 #1: "Letterboxing" may seem to be a modern pastime, but it has a 150-year-old history; the goal is to find letterboxes, often in rather remote locations, following straightforward or cryptic clues, and record your visit. There's a web-site, of course, at <www.letterboxing.org>, where Letterboxing North America lists some 5,000 letterboxes in the United States, a story in the Middlefield (CT) Town Times reports (Sept. 23). But according to legend, letterboxing was born in England in 1854, when Dartmoor guide James Perrott left his calling card in a jar in a remote area near Cranmere Pool, and encouraged his clients to leave their cards in the jar. Visitors then began leaving a self-addressed postcard in the jar, hoping they would be mailed by the next visitor.
375. Mike Berdan, exploring Connecticut, has enjoyed Sherlock's 221 Restaurant, formerly Anne's Bistro but renamed by its new owner Jane Sherlock; there's no Sherlockian decor or food, but the cuisine is upscale and tasty, and the address is Old Lyme Marketplace, Halls Road, Old Lyme, CT 06371.
376. Alan Olding reports from Australia that a plaque commemorating the 75th anniversary of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's visit to Adelaide with his family in Sept. 1920, originally dedicated in 1995, was vandalized recently; it was refurbished with the help of local authorities, and rededicated last month. The plaque is outside Hungry Jack's restaurant, which occupies part of the site of Gibson's Grand Central Hotel, where Sir Arthur stayed in 1920.
377. More and more authors have their own web-sites, including John Gardner, who has written fine books about Professor Moriarty, James Bond, Boysie Oakes, and others <www.john-gardner.com>, and Marian Jackson, who has written four pastiches about Abigail Patience Danforth <www.marianjackson.net>.
378. The Baker Street Journal has a web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, and a new subscription option that includes the Christmas Annual. $24.95 (U.S.) or $27.50 (elsewhere) for only the BSJ; $34.95 (U.S.) or $38.00 (elsewhere) for the BSJ and the Christmas Annual (the Christmas Annual alone is $11.00/$12.00). The 2004 Christmas Annual is DUBIOUS AND QUESTIONABLE MEMORIES: A HISTORY OF THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Susan Rice and with contributions by other Adventuresses; "this delightful work of Rice's should clear up old mysteries and, with luck, create a few new ones." The BSJ's postal address is Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
379. Laurie R. King's next Mary Russell novel, LOCKED ROOMS, is now in the hands of her publisher, due to be published next summer; it's set in San Francisco. Her web-site <www.laurierking.com> includes Mary Russell's imaginative new interview with Laurie, and other material of interest.
380. "The Case of the Silver Earring" is a new computer game developed by Frogwares <www.frogwares.com>, distributed in Britain by Digital Justice (selling for £29.99 <www.digitaljesters.com> and (as "Secret of the Silver Ear-ring") in the U.S. by Ubisoft ($19.99) <www.ubisoft.com>. It's on a CD-ROM that runs on Windows 98/Me/2000/XP, and you play as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson; it's advertised as offering "30 interesting hours of play," with 40 different 19th-century locations and five levels of play.

381. Oct 04 #2: "Indeed, if anything could ever put one off being a Wodehouse fan, it would be the somewhat cultish element among his admirers and biographers. Such people have a tendency to allude to him as 'The Master.' They publish monographs about the exact geographical location of Blandings Castle, or the Drones Club. They hold dinners at which breadstuffs are thrown. Their English branch publishes the quarterly *Wooster Sauce*, and their American branch publishes the quarterly *Plum Lines*: two painfully unfunny titles. They materialize, in other words, Evelyn Waugh's view that Wodehouse created a delightful self-contained world of his own. The only modern comparison I can think of is to the sterner 'Irregulars' who have their shrine at 221 Baker Street." Christopher Hitchens in his long review of Robert McCrum's WODEHOUSE: A LIFE in the November issue of The Atlantic Monthly.
382. Charles J. Shields ("17 King Edward Street") died on Sept. 15. Charley was a reporter for the Philadelphia Bulletin and the Chester Times in the late 1940s, and then features editor and business editor for the Star newspapers in suburban Chicago. And he was an energetic and long-standing member of local Sherlockian societies, including The Hounds of the Baskerville (*sic*), Hugo's Companions, and The South Downers.
383. Scarlet Street publisher Richard Valley reports that he supplied the liner notes for an Alpha Video DVD with three films: Arthur Wontner's "Murder at the Baskervilles" (1937), Reginald Owen's "A Study in Scarlet" (1933), and Basil Rathbone's "Dressed to Kill" (1946). The DVD costs only $5.99 at the Scarlet Street web-site <www.scarletstreet.com>.
384. MC Black has reported that he will maintain a "Diary of Events" for Sherlockian societies, and societies devoted to other authors and detectives, in the United Kingdom and in other countries that UK residents might visit, by way of helping avoid conflicts, and helping people learn what's scheduled where and when if they're planning a trip. To have an event listed, contact him at (44-0-1920-467930) <mc.black@physics.org> and let him know your provisional or confirmed dates; he will also answer questions about schedules.
385. Wanda Dow notes that CITY ABLAZE, the latest round-robin pastiche from The Pleasant Places of Florida (three years in the writing and 12 pages) now is available for $6.00 postpaid ($7.00 outside North America) from Wanda (1737 Santa Anna Drive, Dunedin, FL 34698).
386. Great Britain's Public Lending Right Act of 1979 gave British authors a legal right to receive payment for the free lending of their books by public libraries; the current rate is 4.85 pence for each time a book is borrowed, and the maximum payment for a year is £6,000. But "classic authors" don't get paid (you need to be alive to collect); Barbara Roden has reported that an item in The Bookseller has listed the most-borrowed classic authors, and Conan Doyle ranked at #14. The top 20 are Tolkien, Heyer, Milne, Potter, Tranter, Dickens, Shakespeare, du Maurier, Austen, Hardy, Orwell, Trollope, Hemingway, Conan Doyle, Stevenson, Forster, Kipling, Forester, Buchan, and Nesbit. Some years ago (Feb 93 #2) the ranking was Hardy, Tolkien, Dickens, Milne, Austen, Lawrence, Trollope, Kipling, Orwell, and Conan Doyle. The Public Lending Right Office has a web-site at <www.plr.uk.com>.
387. Oct 04 #3: Rodney Dangerfield died on Oct. 5. He started his career as a stand-up comedian in the late 1930s, and his big break came in 1967 when he appeared on "The Ed Sullivan Show" complaining that "Nothing goes right for me." After he saw "The Godfather" in 1972, he changed his catchphrase to "I don't get no respect," and made the line famous. In the film "Back to School" (1986) he played a self-made millionaire who decided to join his son as a college student; in an early scene he told the dean of the business school, "Listen, Sherlock, while you were tucked away up here working on your ethics, I was out there busting my hump in the real world." The dean of the business school was played by Paxton Whitehead, who earlier had been Sherlock Holmes on stage in "The Crucifer of Blood" (1978).
388. The British Library is planning an exhibition of Conan Doyle material that will open on Dec. 3, displaying a selection of material bequeathed to the Library by Dame Jean Conan Doyle, and from the Library's purchases from the material sent to auction earlier this year by Anna Conan Doyle's heirs; the details of what will be on display will be announced in due course, as will the closing date of the exhibition, and the Library has announced that the archive of Conan Doyle material is available for researchers and scholars. The display will be in their headquarters entrance hall at St. Pancras, and will be open through January 30.

389. There various ways to be a tourist in Britain, from do-it-yourself to packaged coach tours with groups, and there's an alternative: companies such as British Tours <www.britishtours.com>. They offer a car driven by an expert guide, and you can choose one of their standard tours or ask for something that suits your particular interests, Sherlockian or otherwise. And their postal address is 49 Conduit Street, London W1S 2YS, England.
390. Ken Lanza reports that Janet Pascal's biography ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: BEYOND BAKER STREET, published by the Oxford University Press in 2000 at $22.00, is available for $10.00 at their web-site <www.oup.com/us.catalog>; check the "Oxford Fall Sale" and then the "$10 and under" books.
391. Fritha Goodey died on Sept. 5. Her acting career on stage, screen, radio, and television was brief but promising, and she played Caroline Addleton, the title role in "The Determined Client" with Clive Merrison in the BBC's "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."
392. Raymond C. Murray first encountered forensic geology in 1973, when he was teaching geology at Rutgers University and received a request for assistance from a federal agent; he went on to co-author the first textbook (FORENSIC GEOLOGY) in 1975, and now has written EVIDENCE FROM THE EARTH: FORENSIC GEOLOGY AND CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION (Missoula: Mountain Press, 2004, 226 pp., $20.00). It's an up-to-date review of the science, with due credit to Sherlock Holmes as the first forensic geologist. He also has a web-site at <www.forensicgeology.net>, where you'll find some Sherlockian artwork.
393. Michael Chabon's "The Final Solution" (set on the Sussex Downs and in London in the summer of 1944, and featuring an aged beekeeper detective) was in The Paris Review (summer 2003); THE FINAL SOLUTION: A STORY OF DETECTION is due in November (New York: Fourth Estate, 2004; 144 pp., $16.96) and as an audio CD read unabridged by Michael York (HarperAudio, $22.95).
394. Oct 04 #4: Lenny Picker reports that HOUDINI: THE MAN FROM BEYOND is due in December from Image Comics; a graphic novel by Brian Haberlin, Jeff Phillips, and Gilbert Monsanto, with Houdini returning from the dead to team with Conan Doyle to prevent the murder of Houdini's wife Bess. And THE GHOSTS OF BAKER STREET: NEW TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is scheduled by Carroll & Graf in February, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower; an anthology of stories in which Holmes and Watson battle the supernatural.
395. Lenny also has noted that THE BEST AMERICAN MYSTERY STORIES 2004, edited by Nelson DeMille and Otto Penzler (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 2004; 448 pp., $27.50 cloth and $14.00 paper), includes Richard Lupoff's Holmes/Dupin pastiche "The Incident of the Impecunious Chevalier"; an unabridged CD also is available at $30.00.
396. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers much discussion of (and photographs from) the conference held in Minneapolis in June, and other news about the collections; it's available from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
397. Betty Pierce did on Sept. 4. She was for many years an untiring member of and publicist for The Mexborough Lodgers of El Paso, and an editor of their newsletter The Register of the Mexborough Private Hotel; she loved to travel, and to collect stereoscopic photographs, the older the better, and her letters about her tourist activities were always delightful.
398. Mattias Boström has translated the Canon into Swedish, and EN STUDIE I ROTT has just been published by Lind & Co.; the remaining volumes will follow at two volumes per year. Mattias also has edited SHERLOCK HOLMES 150 AR: EN JUBILEUMSBOK FRÅN THE BASKERVILLE HALL CLUB OF SWEDEN, a handsome 185-page anthology of Swedish scholarship (with translations of contributions from Roger Johnson and Stephen Fry). The books are available from Mattias (Domherrevägen 12, S-178 39 Ekerö, Sweden) for $40.00/£20.00/€30.00 each (post-paid); currency only, please, and you can let him know by e-mail that you are sending an order <mattias.bostrom@telia.com>.
399. Further to the report on Jean-Marc and Randy Lofficier's Black Coat Press (Jul 04 #2), they have now published LORD RUTHVEN THE VAMPIRE and THE RETURN OF LORD RUTHVEN, with John William Polidori's original story (1819), dramatizations (including a sequel by Alexandre Dumas), and new stories by translator Frank J. Morlock (one of Morlock's stories, in the first volume, pits Ruthven against Dracula, Sherlock Holmes, and Father Brown); each volume costs $20.95, and there's a web-site at <www.blackcoatpress.com>.
400. Updating the earlier forecast (May 03 #5): Locus Press (Box 13305, Oakland, CA 94661) <www.locusmag.com/index/catalog.html> offers a CD-ROM edition of Allen J. Hubin's CRIME FICTION IV: A COMPREHENSIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY 1749-2000 ($49.95); an ink-on-paper version is available in five volumes ($400) from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada). Locus also offers a CD-ROM of the third edition of Walter Albert's DETECTIVE AND MYSTERY FICTION: AN INTERNATIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SECONDARY SOURCES ($29.95).

401. Oct 04 #5: The Seattle Monorail Project hasn't made public the details on design and costs that contractors have proposed for a new 14-mile transportation line, and opponents launched a "Monorail Recall" campaign and filed a lawsuit in King County Superior Court. The Seattle Times reported (Oct. 14) that opponents wore "Sherlock Holmes garb outside monorail headquarters, snooping for the 'secret' bid."
402. Richard Carleton Hacker has celebrated 20 years of writing about pipes with "The Adventures of the Singular Pipes of Sherlock Holmes", a handsome fullcolor six-page monograph available from Rick at Box 634, Beverly Hills, CA 90213; $6.50 postpaid ($10.00 foreign).
403. Barnes & Noble has three volumes from the Canon available in a "Collector's Library" series ($4.95 each): THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES & THE VALLEY OF FEAR, each with an afterword by David Stuart Davies, possibly the start of a set that eventually will include the entire Canon. The first two volumes are available in Britain published by the Collector's Library (£5.99 each).
404. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" is being performed by Theatre Calgary through Nov. 7; the theater is at (220 9th Avenue SE, Calgary, AB T2G 5C4, Canada) (403-294-7447) <www.theatrecalgary.com>.
405. Next year's annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend is scheduled for Apr. 29-May 1, in and near Chicago; there will be a dinner (with Henry Zecher speaking on William Gillette), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. If you would like to be on their mailing list, you should contact Allan Devitt and Susan Diamond, 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
406. Karen Murdock recommends Peter Harrigan's article on "Reading the Sands" in Saudi Aramco World (Mar.-Apr. 2004) for a description of what truly expert trackers can do (and there's a passing allusion to Holmes). You can read it at <www.saudiaramcoworld.com>, and an ink-on-paper copy of the issue may still be available (Box 2106, Houston, TX 77252).
407. David Pirie's third Conan Doyle pastiche is THE DARK WATER (London: Random House/Century, 2004; 372 pp., £17.99); "Imprisoned in a dank cottage deep in the English countryside, Arthur Doyle lies half-unconscious and at the mercy of his nemesis--Cream." The first two novels in his "Murder Rooms" series, THE PATIENT'S EYES and THE NIGHT CALLS have been reissued as paper-backs by Random House/Arrow at £6.99 each.
408. The fall issue of the Tonga Times (published by the Mini-Tonga Scion Society) has lots of news about the world of Sherlockian miniatures, including color photographs of the spectacular "221B Dollhouse" created by Ardie and Murray Strauser, which is now available for purchase; if you're interested, you can contact Murray at 301 South 4th Street, Sunbury, PA 17801 (570-286-7699). Trish and Jay Pearlman <minitongasociety@aol.com> will be happy to e-mail photographs of the house on request. Membership in the society includes the newsletter, and the cost is $10.50 a year (or

409. Oct 04 #6: The Baker Street Irregulars' excursion into the Valley of Fear on Oct. 22-24 was a delightful event that featured fine weather, colorful fall scenery; comfortable accommodations at the New American Hotel in Mauch Chunk (now the Inn at Jim Thorpe); an excellent agenda arranged by Julia C. Rosenblatt that offered scholarship and entertainment by Sherlockians, discussion of local history by experts on the Molly Maguires, and guided bus tours of the area; bus extrication by Priscilla Ridgway; and an excellent excursion book, edited by Steven T. Doyle, that includes five pages of Conan Doyle's manuscript notes for the story, reproduced in facsimile and published for the first time. MURDERLAND, with 168 pages of Sherlockian scholarship, will be available for $19.95 at the BSI table in the dealers' room at the Hotel Algonquin during the birthday festivities.
410. Paul S. Clarkson, Jr. ("Morse Hudson") died on Oct. 19. Steve followed his father's footsteps into the Sherlockian world (his father was a founder of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore), and he was generous with his expertise and time and support, especially for younger Sherlockians; Julian Wolff asked Steve to help answer the queries sent by neophytes, and he was pleased to be of service, founding the Board School Beacons, and more recently editing The Baker Street Journal's 2003 Christmas Annual ("The Strength and Activity of Youth': The Junior Sherlockian Movement"). His other contributions to the cause included Sherlockian sculpture, scholarship, and THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPENDIUM. Steve was awarded his Investiture by The Baker Street Irregulars in 1970.
411. Ted Nye's THE ADVENTURE OF THE TEDDY BEAR'S RIBBON AND OTHER TALES, illustrated by Bruce Mahalski (Dunedin: Halvon Press, 2000), is a 168-page paperback collection of pastiches, still available from the publisher (51 Irvine Road, Dunedin, New Zealand); US$17.00 or £6.00 postpaid.
412. "A Study in Scarlet: Sherlock Holmes Revisited and Updated" is the title of a program by Lawrence A. Pesley at Arcadia University on Nov. 30. "Using the character of Sherlock Holmes and one of his famous cases ... the presentation shows the relationship of biology, chemistry, and mathematics in crime solving. Some audience participation is required." Arcadia University is in Glenside, Pa.; there's no charge for attendance, and additional information is available from the Office of Graduate and Professional Studies (215-572-2877) <mcnulty@arcadia.edu>.
413. Karen Traviss, author of a new video-game spin-off novel STAR WARS: REPUBLIC COMMANDO: HARD CONTACT, has noted in an interview at <www.starwars.com> that she was raised in Portsmouth, which she has described as the "'Bermuda Triangle of fiction,' thanks to the iconic authors H.G. Wells, Nevil Shute, and Conan Doyle who once lived there as well."
414. Further to the report (Feb 04 #6) on the sale of Maurice F. Neville's collection at Sotheby's <www.sothebys.com>, the sale's second part (on Nov. 16) will include the first 40 pages (in two exercise books) of the manuscript of "The Adventure of the Solitary Cyclist" (estimated at $200,000-300,000) (the last two pages, in a third exercise book, are owned by another collector); the original artwork for Sidney Paget's illustration showing Holmes and Moriarty grappling at the Reichenbach ($60,000-80,000); and a page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" ($18,000-25,000).

415. Oct 04 #7: Sherlock Holmes' 151st birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 7, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but it would be helpful to let Ev Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you're coming to the event.
416. On Thursday, The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be noted author and artist Gahan Wilson, who drew four pages of delightful cartoons for the Dec. 1959 issue of Playboy, and who has not neglected Sherlock Holmes since then ($11.00); seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early (details below).
417. On Friday, the William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $42.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; Sherlockian authors are likely to be on hand to sign their books.
418. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 201 West 52nd Street (between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $70.00 (checks payable to Maribeau Briggs should be sent to Maribeau (183 Stokes Road, Medford Lakes, NJ 08055); please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
419. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), 125 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
420. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be offered in the dealers' room on the second floor of the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street) from 9:30 am until 12:30 pm; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> will be glad to supply information about dealers' tables. And the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold their Junior Bloodstain (a somewhat less than totally reverent gathering) in the lobby of the Hotel Algonquin at 12:30 pm; if you are planning to attend, please let Anne Cotton know (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
421. Also on Saturday, the BSI annual reception, which is open to all Sherlockians and friends, will be held from 2:30 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); there will be hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, a cash bar, and the usual traditional and untraditional entertainment, and the event will cost $45.00 (details below), or $55.00 after Dec. 1 or at the door. And on Sunday, The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold their usual informal brunch, open to all; details on where and when are not yet available, but I hope to report more in the next issue.
422. Oct 04 #8: The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $165.00 a night (Tuesday through Saturday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI. Breakfast is not included in the price this year. Other charges (telephone calls, meals, room service, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer's available to all Sherlockians, and room reservations must be made directly to the Algonquin (mention The Baker Street Irregulars) at 212-840-6800 on or before Dec. 14.
423. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement with the prices and a reservation form for the Thursday lecture and the Saturday reception, you can request a copy from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278.
424. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy fee, and 14% in state and city tax. Ask for the lowest available rate, don't be shy about asking for discounts (AAA, senior, corporate), and if you plan to arrive on Thursday you should confirm that weekend rates apply, and request written confirmation.

425. Vanderbilt YMCA (224 East 47th St.) $79 bunk bed or $105 double bed (with shared bathroom (212-756-9600) ["it's a modern building in a nice neighborhood"]; Best Western President Hotel (234 West 48th St.) $85 double bed $94 queen (212-246-8800); Cosmopolitan Hotel (95 West Broadway) $109 single $130 double (212-566-1900); Ramada Plaza (481 8th Ave. at 34th St.) $112 promotional rate (212-971-1010); Howard Johnson (851 8th Ave. at 46th St.) $115 (212-581-4100); Comfort Inn Central Park West (31 West 71st St.) $130 double bed or $140 queen (212-721-4770); Wyndham Hotel (42 West 58th St.) $135 single $152 double AAA promotional rate (212-753-3500). Specials and general information are available at <www.nycvisit.com>, and discounts can be found at <www.skyauction.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, and <www.orbitz.com> .
426. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.

427. Nov 04 #1: An update to last month's forecast of events during the birthday festivities: Jim Cox reports that the annual Christopher Morley Walk will begin at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street) on Thursday, Jan. 6, at 9:00 am; the walk will end with lunch at McSorley's.
428. And on Sunday, Jan. 9, there will be a bus tour to Gillette Castle for a maximum of 50 participants. Mike Whelan notes that many years ago Julian Wolff organized a trip to Gillette Castle during the birthday festivities, and this year being the 100th anniversary of Julian's birth, the BSI will reprise the event, which will include the bus trip from the Hotel Algonquin at 8:00 am, a private tour of the renovated castle, brunch at a restaurant on the Connecticut River, and return to the Algonquin at about 5:30 pm; the cost is $60.00 a person (which includes transportation, tour, and brunch). If you're interested, please call Mary Ann Bradley (317-293-2212) to make sure there's still room available before sending any money.
429. There will also be a brunch in New York on Sunday, but the time and location are not yet settled; if you're interested in attending, please contact Judith Freeman <judith.freeman@worldnet.att.net> (280 Ninth Avenue #1-C, New York, NY 10001)
430. "Once upon a time, but not so long ago, in a tropical island midway between Asia and Australia, there lived a race of little people, whose adults stood just three and a half feet high," Nicholas Wade reported in the N.Y. Times on Oct. 28. "Despite their stature, they were mighty hunters. They made stone tools, with which they speared giant rats, clubbed sleeping dragons, and hunted the packs of pygmy elephants that roamed their lost world." The island is Flores, and the new human species is *Homo floresiensis*, discovered last year and the subject of two articles in Nature magazine (Oct. 28). They lived on Flores until as recently as 18,000 years ago. Peter Brown, associate professor at the University of New England in Australia and one of the authors of the articles in Nature, reports that there are still very large rats on Flores, and that "Pleistocene rats were bigger than a North American raccoon." Flores is about a thousand miles from Sumatra, so it's obvious that giant rats had good travel agents.
431. Karen Murdock reports that George Vanderburgh now has his catalog on-line at <www.batteredbox.com>; he offers more than 200 print-on-demand titles, Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian.
432. Barlieb Wallace Productions and the Crowded Kitchen Players produced William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" last year, and they're now getting ready to do "Sherlock Holmes and the Christmas Goose" (adapted from "A Study in Scarlet", "The Speckled Band", and "The Blue Carbuncle") at Stage 9 in Allentown, Pa., on Dec. 3-5, 10-12, and 17-19; information and tickets available at (610-395-7176) <barwalprod@enter.net>.
433. John A. Lanzalotti is a sculptor and a doctor, and a Sherlockian who does not neglect Sherlock Holmes at his web-site <www.williamsburgsculpture.com>; click on "Sherlock Holmes and Sculpture" to see John's research on Devine's bust of Napoleon, and the busts of Holmes by Meunier and Tavernier.

434. Nov 04 #2: This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London honors Richard Lancelyn Green: he selected the colorful cover of the Jan. 1902 issue of the American edition of The Strand Magazine for his Christmas card for 1998, and the Society is using the same artwork this year. The cost is $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K. or £6.00 to Europe or £7.00 elsewhere); checks (payable to the Society) can be sent to Judi Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington BR6 8DC, England.
435. Thomas Dandrew reports that a "Complete Sherlock Holmes Box Set" is available at <www.bbcshop.com> with the entire Canon as broadcast by BBC Radio 4 with Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Watson; 48 hours on 64 CDs, with a book written by Bert Coules (who dramatized many of the programs in the series), offering "a look behind the scenes at the highs and lows that came with the undertaking of such an enormous project." £145.00 plus shipping, and the BBC Shop's postal address is P.O. Box 308, Sittingbourne, Kent ME9 8LW, England.
436. Times change: it's not uncommon, when one goes to the theater, to see warnings that there will be strobe lights, or gunfire. The University of Wisconsin (Stevens Point) produced Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" in October, with warnings that "Gunshots will be fired during the performance" and that "A pipe will be smoked during the performance."
437. Michael Dirda's weekly page in the Washington Post's Book World was devoted to "Ghost Stories" on Oct. 31, and he had nice things to say about Barbara and Christopher Roden's Ash-Tree Press (their Calabash Press likely is better known to Sherlockians and Doyleans); the story likely still can be read on-line at <www.washingtonpost.com>.
438. The OXFORD DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY was published in September, and John Baesch has forwarded a report in the Daily Telegraph (Sept. 23). The 60 volumes contain 60,305 pages, 62.5 million words, and 50,113 articles, and the set cost only £6,500 if you ordered by Nov. 30 (you'll need 12 feet of shelf space, and the set weighs 282 pounds). The Telegraph noted that the dictionary includes "biographies" of people who never existed or whose identities are unknown, including King Lear, Robin Hood, Sweeney Todd, Jack the Ripper, and John Bull. But: "Not included is Sherlock Holmes because 'everybody knows he's a fictional character.'"
439. The OXFORD DNB does, it should be noted, have interesting entries for Sir Arthur Ignatius Conan Doyle (by Owen Dudley Edwards) and for Dame Jean Lena Annette Conan Doyle (by Jane Potter); thanks to Philip K. Wilson for checking the edition on-line. The web-site at <www.oxforddnb.com> offers information, free tours, and subscriptions ($295 a year for individuals).
440. David Shulman died on Oct. 30. His obituary in the N.Y. Times called him "a self-described Sherlock Holmes of Americanisms who dug through obscure, often crumbling publications" to identify the first published use of words and phrases such as "The Great White Way," "Big Apple," "hoochie-coochie," "jazz," and "hot dog" for the OXFORD ENGLISH DICTIONARY. He was a founder of the American Cryptogram Association, and wrote two articles for The Baker Street Journal: "Sherlock Holmes Cryptanalyst" (Apr. 1948) and "The Origin of the Dancing Men" (Mar. 1973).

441. Nov 04 #3: "Kitty Winter for State Attorney: She'll Throw More Than a Book at Your Common Criminal" and "Helen Stoner for Prosecutor: She Knows a Snake When She Sees One" are only two of the political slogans included in a special issue of Communication (the newsletter of The Pleasant Places of Florida) that arrived the day after the election; editors Wanda and Jeff Dow also offer amusing political Canonical commentary in the sixpage issue.

- $12.00 a year ($13.00 overseas) including a subscription, from Carl Heifetz, 1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655; if you want just the one issue, that's $2.00 postpaid.
442. Old-time radio continues to be popular, not only on the air but also on the stage: the Corbin Theatre Company performed "The Musgrave Ritual" and "The Tolling Bell" on three evenings at the Corbin Theatre in Liberty, Mo., last month. They have a web-site at <www.corbintheatre.org>.
443. The winter issue of The Sherlockian Times has arrived from Classic Specialties; it's billed as a catalog/journal/newsletter, and it combines things nicely, offering news, books, ornaments, and much more (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>. There's also a new "Quick Watson" supplement that includes Sherlock Holmes' passport (for $125.00); they're hand-made rather than off-the-shelf, tied to Basil Rathbone's films, with his photograph and appropriate visa stamps, and imaginatively done.
444. Elmer L. Anderson died on Nov. 15. A former governor of Minnesota, he also was a businessman, community leader, a bookman, and a philanthropist, and he helped make possible the new University of Minnesota Library, named in his honor, that houses their Sherlock Holmes Collections.
445. "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror" (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from Nicholas Meyer's novel) has opened at the Asolo Theatre Festival, where it will run through Mar. 3. The box office is at 5555 North Tamiami Trail, Sarasota, FL 34243 (941-351-8000) (800-361-8388) <www.asolo.org>.
446. Reported by Ralph Hall: Dark Horse Comics <www.darkhorse.com> will publish THE IRREGULARS on Jan. 12; the 128-page graphic novel ($12.95) has Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars in pursuit of a murderous madman who is stalking the streets of Whitechapel.
447. It has been almost 25 years since Edmund Aubrey brought Sherlock Holmes out of retirement in SHERLOCK HOLMES IN DALLAS to solve the murder of President Kennedy; now Sherlock Holmes comes out of retirement again in Kenneth Frawley's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE MISSING AMERICAN CULTURE (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2004; 221 pp., $31.99 cloth, $21.99 paper). Bill Clinton is president, and Holmes and Watson travel to New York, Chicago, Las Vegas, and Los Angeles in pursuit of an evil mastermind who is well on his way to turning American culture into mind-numbing lowest-common-denominator trash.
448. Mark Alberstat's 2005 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
449. Nov 04 #4: "Who Shot Sherlock Holmes?" is the title of an upcoming episode of the series "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" (on CBS-TV) according to a report spotted by Ken Lanza on a fan-site <talk.csifiles.com>. It's not really Holmes who gets shot, but "Joe Bell, a man who has trouble distinguishing the difference between fact and fiction. Bell is the leading member of a literary society whose members dress up in period costume and role-play Sherlock Holmes mysteries with each other." The site warns that this is rumor based on early script drafts, but the episode is billed as #511. Episode #509 ("Mea Culpa") is scheduled for Nov. 25, so "Who Shot Sherlock Holmes" may air in December or January, depending on pre-emptions and repeats during the holidays.
450. A new French film of "Arsene Lupin" (with Romain Duris as Lupin, and Kristin Scott Thomas as Josephine, comtesse de Cagliostro) was screened in September during the Toronto Film Festival; it doesn't seem to be Sherlockian, but the web-site <www.club-internet.fr/arsenelupin/> is interesting.
451. Further to the report (Oct 04 #6) on the sale of Maurice F. Neville's collection at Sotheby's <www.sothebys.com>, the sale's second part (on Nov. 16) yielded nice prices for Sherlockiana: $8,400 (including the buyer's premium) for the signed first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES; $78,000 for a page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"; $220,800 for the original artwork for Sidney Paget's illustration showing Holmes and Moriarty grappling at the Reichenbach; and $344,000 for the first 40 pages (in two exercise books) of the manuscript of "The Solitary Cyclist". John Genova, who was at the sale, reports that the Paget artwork sold to someone who bid by phone, and that underbidder for the artwork was present, and won the manuscript of "The Solitary Cyclist".
452. Further to the report (Jul 04 #6) on Abbey National's agreement to be taken over by Spain's largest bank, Banco Santander Central Hispanico (BSCH), an overwhelming majority of Abbey shareholders approved the takeover in October. BSCH plans to trim Abbey's staff by some 3,000 employees, but apparently has no plans to dispose of the statue of Sherlock Holmes at the entrance to the Baker Street underground station.
453. SAYERS ON HOLMES: ESSAYS AND FICTION ON SHERLOCK HOLMES was published three years ago (Jun 01 #5), and it's still available ($8.00) at <www.amazon.com> and elsewhere, and I'm happy to recommend it once more: Dorothy L. Sayers was one of the earliest and best of the people who played the grand game of Sherlockian scholarship, and the booklet reprints all her essays on Sherlock Holmes and offers (for the first time in print) the script she wrote for Lord Peter Wimsey's comments during the centenary birthday tribute to Holmes broadcast by BBC radio on Jan. 8, 1954.
454. Further to the item about Edinburgh's hopes to be the first "world city of literature" (Aug 04 #5), the city formally submitted a bid to UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) on Oct. 13, expecting to wait several months for a decision, and UNESCO awarded the distinction only a few hours later. Edinburgh cited Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the list of its important writers, of course, and Patricia Ferguson, the Scottish culture minister, said from Paris that the award "confirms Scotlands' position as a country of literary excellence."
455. Nov 04 #5: Bruce Holmes, continuing his pursuit of Sherlockian philately (and philatelic Sherlockiana), offers Vincent Starrett's sonnet 221B: ILLUSTRATED WITH POSTAL RELATED ITEMS; the cost of the 18-page booklet is US$29.50 (color)/$15.00 (black and white), and his address is 3170 Joseph Howe Drive, Halifax, NS B3L 4G1, Canada.
456. "I have been sitting, for the past week, like a parrot on a perch," Conan Doyle wrote to George H. Doran on Jan. 23, 1930, "while your sculptor operated on me." The sculptor was Jo Davidson, and there's a photograph of the bust in Davidson's BETWEEN SITTINGS (1950). The two-page letter, which also discusses Harry Houdini and ON THE EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN, is available for $2,500 from David Schulson (225 West 34th Street #1908, New York, NY 10122 (212-629-3939) <www.schulsonautographs.com>
457. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (the interactive exhibit with Victorian flavor, and a mystery that visitors can solve) is now at the Discovery Center in Springfield, Mo., through Jan. 2 (417-862-9910); they have a web-site at <www.discoverycenter.org>.
458. "Finding Neverland" (Sep 04 #1) is well worth seeing, and not just for Ian Hart as Arthur Conan Doyle in a couple of scenes (as noted by a few reviewers, Barrie's friend is not identified as Conan Doyle until the final credits); Johnny Depp is excellent as Barrie, and the film is romantic and emotional, and while the script plays fast and loose with some of the history, that's only to be expected in any film.
459. Planning is underway for the fourth meeting of The Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society, to be held the last weekend in July in Davenport, Iowa (the birthplace of Dixieland great Bix Beiderbecke); details are available from Donald B. Izban, 1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068.
460. Reports to the "Mary Russell" electronic mailing list from Bouchercon (held in Toronto this month) offer some teasers about Laurie R. King's next Mary Russell novel (LOCKED ROOMS), set in San Francisco, where Mary meets Dashiell Hammett when he was working for Pinkerton in 1924; there's mention of a case in Japan (where Laurie would love to visit to do research).

461. Charles Press' LOOKING OVER SIR ARTHUR'S SHOULDER: HOW CONAN DOYLE TURNED THE TRICK (Battered Silicon Dispatch Box, 2004, 132 pp.) is a collection of essays analyzing the techniques and appeal of the Sherlock Holmes stories; copies of the book, inscribed on request, are available from the author at 987 Lantern Hill Drive, East Lansing, MI 48823 ($15.00 postpaid).
462. Further to earlier reports on plans for competing Sherlock Holmes films to be broadcast by BBC-1 (starring Rupert Everett) and ITV (starring Stephen Fry), there's a third broadcast in the works: "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle". According to a story in the [Glasgow] Sunday Herald (Nov. 28), David Pirie, author of the "Murder Rooms" novels and television series about Dr. Joseph Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle, has written a script suggesting that some aspects of Sherlock Holmes were based on Arthur Conan Doyle's alcoholic father. "Joseph Bell gave us half of Sherlock Holmes," producer Richard Downes said, "but there's a lot more." The television film will star Douglas Henshall (Conan Doyle) and Brian Cox (Bell).

463. Nov 04 #6: I'm catching up with obituaries of actors and authors who had Sherlockian connections, and I'm happy to acknowledge my debt to Roger Johnson for much of this news. His excellent monthly newsletter, published for The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, is the District Messenger, and it costs $15.00 a year (checks payable to Jean Upton, please) or £6.00 (payable to Roger); it is also available via e-mail without charge, and his address is Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DF, England <rojerjohnson@yahoo.co.uk>. The current issue also is available on-line at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>, the The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's web-site, which offers lots of other news and interesting links.
464. Hugh Manning died on Aug. 18. He began his acting career on stage in the 1940s, and went on to films and radio and television; he was in John Gielgud's "The Dying Detective" (1954) and in Carlton Hobb's "The Stockbroker's Clerk" and "The Cardboard Box" (1960) on BBC radio. Charles Eaton died on Aug. 22. A child star on stage and in silent films, he made the transition to sound, and starred with Helen Twelvetrees in "The Ghost Talks" (1929), and was shown in publicity photographs with deerstalker and calabash pipe, looking very much like Sherlock Holmes, but in the film he was merely an amateur detective who had learned to be a sleuth from a mail-order detective course.
465. Hildy Parks died on Oct. 7. She was a producer, writer, and actress, and a long-time partner with her husband Alexander H. Cohen; she wrote the first 20 Tony Awards and many other television specials that he produced, and was his production associate for the musical "Baker Street" in 1964. Jacques Derrida died on Oct. 9. He was the inventor of the philosophy known as deconstructionism, arguing that "there is nothing outside the text," and that the meaning of a collection of words is not fixed. His Sherlockian connection is Mark Tansey's painting "Derrida Queries De Man" (which owes a great deal to Sidney Paget's illustration of Holmes and Moriarty at the Reichenbach) (Jun 93 #5).
466. Christopher Reeve died on Oct. 10. He became a member of Actors Equity at the age of 15, and still a relatively unknown actor when he starred in "Superman: The Movie" in 1978, and later films in the series. He had leading roles on stage as well, and after a 1995 accident left him paralyzed he became an outspoken advocate for research on spinal injuries. In 1985 he narrated "Dinosaur!" (a one-hour video for Family Home Entertainment), and noted that "in 1922 Sherlock Holmes' author promoted a hoax" when he showed scenes from "The Lost World" to magicians in New York.
467. Sheila Keith died on Oct. 14. She began her acting career on television in 1964, and went on to supporting and starring roles in films as well; best-known for the Grand Guignol film "Frightmare" (1974), she also played Miss Stoper in Douglas Wilmer's BBC-1 broadcast of "The Copper Beeches" (1965). Robert Lang died on Nov. 6. He made his professional debut with the Bristol Old Vic in 1956 and had a long career on stage, screen, radio, and television; he played Blessington in BBC Radio 4's Merrison/Williams broadcast of "The Resident Patient" (1992).

468. Dec 04 #1: Late-breaking news: CBS-TV plans to help celebrate Sherlock Holmes' birthday by airing "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation: Who Shot Sherlock Holmes" on Jan. 6. As noted earlier (Nov 04 #4) Joe Bell, a man who has trouble distinguishing the difference between fact and fiction. Bell is the leading member of a literary society whose members dress up in period costume and role-play Sherlock Holmes mysteries with each other.
469. A hitherto unrecorded copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual turned up at auction at Sotheby's in New York this month (estimated at $45,000-65,000), and it sold for $153,600 (including the buyer's premium); it was described as complete, in unrestored original wrappers, in a half red morocco slipcase, and it went to auction from the library of the late Mrs. J. Insley Blair, who was well known as an active collector of American furniture (there was an interesting article about the Blairs in the Jan. 2000 issue of Magazine Antiques, available at <www.findarticles.com>). According to Sotheby's it was the first complete and unrestored copy to appear at auction since 1990, when a copy once owned by Vincent Starrett sold at Sotheby's for $57,200. And it is possible that it's the same copy that was offered in a Scribner's catalog in 1934, bound in half red morocco, for $45.
470. The sale also included a good copy of the Feb. 1890 issue of Lippincott's Magazine (with "The Sign of the Four"), estimated at $3,000-5,000 and sold for $63,000; and other nice first editions of the Sherlock Holmes stories. The highlight of the sale was a rare contemporary printing of the Declaration of Independence, estimated at $250,000-350,000 and sold for $456,000.
471. "There used to be a lunchtime radio programme called Workers' Playtime and I still remember one sketch from it in which a character complained that he was tired because he had been sitting on his shooting stick all day. The straight man said that shouldn't have tired him. The comedian said it did if you had the stick the wrong way up," Owen Kelly recalled in the [Dublin] Irish Times (Oct. 23). "I thought that hilarious because at the time the master in school was reading us a Sherlock Holmes serial in which shooting stocks figured largely," he continued. "They were used by villains because real heroes would never have used a gun disguised as a walking stick." So: which Sherlock Holmes serial might that have been?
472. The Parallel Case of St. Louis will hold its second "Holmes Under the Arch" conference on May 20-22, 2005; information on the schedule and registration is available from Joseph J. Eckrich (914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026) (636-861-1454) <jeckrich@sbcglobalnet>.
473. Carolyn and Joel Senter, who have presided over Classic Specialties for 17 years, offering a wide variety of Sherlockian merchandise in their mail-order catalogs and at their web-site (last month I noted their reproductions of Sherlock Holmes' passport), are thinking about retirement, and selling Classic Specialties, which has a data base with some 7,200 people in North America and about 800 overseas. Anyone interested in acquiring a business with an excellent track record and reputation is welcome to discuss things with the Senters (Box 1958, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-133-3823); the website is at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
474. Dec 04 #2: It has been noted that Dr. Gregory House, played by Hugh Laurie on the highly-regarded television series "House" (broadcast by Fox on Tuesdays) resembles Sherlock Holmes. That's no accident, according to an interview with series creator David Shore in the Winston-Salem Journal (Dec. 10). "Part of the inspiration for the House character was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional 19th-century detective Sherlock Holmes, who was highly observant and frequently more interested in solving cases than in social niceties. When Shore and actor Hugh Laurie first met, they discussed the similarities between House and Holmes."
475. Jennie Paton reports that she has another new address (Box 221, Randsburg, CA 93554-0221); she hasn't moved far, but at long last she has found a post office that will give her Box 221.
476. Reports to the "Mary Russell" electronic mailing list from Bouchercon (held in Toronto in October) offer some teasers about Laurie R. King's next Mary Russell novel: LOCKED ROOMS, set in San Francisco, where Mary meets Dashiell Hammett, who was working for Pinkerton in 1924; there's mention of

- a case in Japan (where Laurie would love to visit to do research). And while you're waiting for the book to be published in June, you can see the cover at <www.amazon.com>.
477. Gayle Harris has reported some new DVDs at Walmart, priced at $1.00 each: two volumes of "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" each with three shows from the Ronald Howard television series, from Digiview Productions; the quality's quite reasonable, and purists will note that there's new music presumably substituted to establish new copyright protection).
478. Mystery Scene continues to publish interesting articles about and reviews of the mystery genre; the fall 2004 issue has a long and well-illustrated article by Jerome Coopersmith on his 1964 musical "Baker Street". The magazine costs $7.95 ($32.00 for a five-issue annual subscription); 331 West 57th Street #148, New York, NY 10019 <www.mysteryscenemag.com>.
479. Mary Hoehling died on Dec. 7. She started writing biographies and popular histories because her "children were coming home from school complaining of the dullness of history," and one of her biographies was THE REAL SHERLOCK HOLMES: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1965).
480. The winter issue of The Serpentine Muse offers news from and about The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and a poetic report by Dorothy Belle Pollack on her discovery of a mention of Sherlock Holmes in Marcel Proust's A LA RECHERCHE DU TEMPS PERDU; it's in ALBERTINE DISPARUE (1925), in case you want to find it on your own. The Serpentine Muse costs $10.00 a year (four issues); $10.00 a year (checks payable to the Adventuresses, please) from Evelyn A. Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011).
481. Scott Monty has suggested "a little gem" for the newsletter:: if you want to make the birthday festivities truly spectacular for someone, the Hotel Algonquin is offering a $10,000 martini, and the hotel has been getting a lot of publicity (but so far no buyers). The Algonquin's martini arrives at your table with a loose diamond at the bottom (you'll need to give them 72 hours' notice, and meet with a jeweler to select a diamond).

482. Dec 04 #3: Sherlock Holmes has been on display at the Smithsonian Institution for many years, in the exhibit "Exploring the Planets" in the National Air and Space Museum, and it should be noted that he's now also on display in the exhibit "Within These Walls" in the National Museum of American History: look for the booklet prepared by the National Association of Realtors (they sponsored the exhibit), and the nice Sherlockian artwork in the booklet.
483. "Medical Errors in Fiction" is the title on an item in the Journal of the American Medical Association (Dec. 3, 1904) that commented on an error in "The Golden Pince-Nez" in Collier's Weekly, where the lenses in the pincenez are convex (they're concave, correctly, in the Strand). The item in JAMA in 1904 seems to have been overlooked by bibliographers and scholars.
484. The Lamp-Post is an occasional electronic newsletter published by the Baker Street Journal: go to <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/pages/564309/index.htm> to see the current issue, which offers the editorial and the leading article in the winter 2004 issue of the BSJ, and other news about the BSJ and The Baker Street Irregulars.
485. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has settled on June 15-23, 2005, for its next Swiss Pilgrimage; if you think you might be interested in joining their festivities, you should contact Bob Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England) <shsl221b@aol.com>.
486. Andrew Gulli has now edited and published 13 issues of his new Strand Magazine; I mentioned the magazine last year (Sep 03 #6). And he's offering a Sherlock Holmes 2005 Calendar in full color ($16.95) and other Sherlockiana in four-page flier (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) and at his web-site <www.strandmag.com>.
487. Diana Schatell died on Dec. 15. She was the widow of Norman Schatell, and with Norm a founder of Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers of New Jersey (in which her thoroughly apt Investiture was "A Certain Gracious Lady").
488. Reported: MRS. HUDSON AND THE CASE OF THE SPIRITS' CURSE, by Martin Davies (New York: Berkley, 2004; 320 pp., $13.00); Mrs. Hudson takes an interest in one of Holmes' cases, and with Flottie, the orphan girl in her care, is determined to solve the mystery.
489. The exhibition of Conan Doyle material at the British Library (Oct 04 #3) continues through Jan. 30, and there's another event of interest scheduled for Jan. 17, when their "West End Poetry" series will offer T. S. Eliot's "Four Quartets" read by Edward Fox and Dame Eileen Atkins. On Feb. 14 the poetry will be Oscar Wilde's "The Ballade of Reading Gao!" read by Brian Cox. One hears of Sherlock everywhere, as some say: T. S. Eliot used Conan Doyle's word "grimpen" in "East Coker" in "Four Quartets", Edward Fox was Watson on television in "Dr. Watson and the Darkwater Hall Mystery" (1974), Eileen Atkins attended the memorial service for Jeremy Brett at St. Martin-in-the-Fields in Nov. 1995, Oscar Wilde dined and corresponded with Conan Doyle, and Brian Cox is to play Joseph Bell on television in "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" in 1995 (and his son Alan played Watson on screen in "Young Sherlock Holmes" in 1985).
490. Dec 04 #4: Ted Friedman has noted a brief item in the N.Y. Post (Dec. 12) about a pair of paintings by Claude-Joseph Vernet (the great-great-granduncle of Sherlock Holmes); they were bought from Vernet by the famous Clive of India in 1773, and last year Clive's family sent the paintings to auction and they were bought for £2.4 million by American billionaire David Koch, who then fought and lost a battle with the British government, which classified the paintings as part of Britain's cultural heritage and refused to allow them to be exported to the U.S. And there has been an amicable resolution that involved Koch agreeing to donate the paintings to the National Gallery in London, and the National Gallery agreeing to lend the paintings to Koch until he dies, when the paintings will be returned to the National Gallery. The National Gallery will display the paintings until next summer, and then they'll be turned over to Koch.
491. Reported: THE CASE OF THE 2ND SEANCE: A JOHN DARNELL MYSTERY, by Sam McCarver (New York: Signet, 2000; 216 pp., $5.99); it's set in 1916, and Lloyd George's teenage daughter is kidnapped during a seance at 10 Downing Street attended by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who asks paranormal investigator John Darnell to help solve the mystery.
492. Issue #63 of SHERLOCK has two interesting interviews by editor David Stuart Davies: one with Allan Cubitt, who wrote the scripts for BBC-1's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (with Roxburgh and Hart) and the new "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" (with Everett and Hart); and the other with Clive Francis, whose dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for a cast of four men was performed this year in England. And much more, as usual, Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian. SHERLOCK is published six times a year and subscriptions cost £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$45.00 (elsewhere) from Atlas Publishing Ltd., Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Classic Specialties is their American agent (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlockholmes.com>; credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
493. Reported: Carole Nelson Douglas' SPIDER DANCE (New York: Forge Books, 2004; 464 pp., $24.95); the 8th mystery novel in her Irene Adler series. According to Kirkus Reviews, the book is "a paean to women's audacity, pugnacity, and street smarts, told with frisky good humor and nicely integrated historical asides."
494. The 14th (and last) volume of The Shoso-in Bulletin, edited by Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes and published by The Men with the Twisted Konjo, offers its traditional mix of articles, essays, and artwork by contributors from nine countries, with 200 pages (all in English); of particular interest is Yuichi's long review of KONAN DOIRU SATSUJIN-JIKEN, the Japanese translation of Rodger Garrick-Steele's book (not available in English) about his belief that B. Fletcher Robinson was murdered by his wife and Conan Doyle (Yuichi's conclusion is that the book "is full of mistakes, errors, inaccuracies, and ill will," and "it is hard to call it a non-fiction work, and it is even a poor work of fiction." Yuichi will have copies of the Bulletin for sale in New York during the birthday festivities, or you can order from him: $12.00 postpaid, with US dollar checks (payable to Mel Hughes) to be sent to Yuichi (2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181-0012, Japan).

495. Dec 04 #5: The Pioneer Drama Service continues to offer scripts for Sherlockian plays, including Craig Sodaro's "Hound of the Clackervilles" ($5.25); Granny, the local witch, announces the curse of the hound of the Clackervilles, and Holmes and Watson are kept hopping to solve the mystery. And there's Robert W. LaVohn's "Murder at the Banquet" ($4.50); it's set at an awards banquet for the world's greatest detectives, and as Foster Holmes, Sherlock's descendant, steps up to speak, Jenny Watson arrives to protest *her* ancestor's role as Sherlock's side-kick. "The lights go out, and when they return the banquet's host is dead and the prize money is missing." Pioneer's address is Box 4267, Englewood, CO 80155 (800-333-7262) <www.pioneerdrama.com>.
496. The November issue of The Holmes & Watson Report offers Bill Cochran's interesting commentary on the classics in John Bennett Shaw's recommendations for a basic Sherlockian library, and Stu Shiffman's report on Lloyd Alexander's THE GAWGON AND THE BOY, a children's book published in 2001 and still in print, with some nice Sherlockian echoes. $16.00 a year (six issues) or $22.00 outside North America, or $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
497. Warren Randall celebrated the recent excursion into the Valley of Fear (Oct 04 #6) with a lapel pin, and extra copies of this official souvenir are available for $10.00 postpaid (in North America) or $12.00 (elsewhere); checks (payable to Warren) can be sent to him at 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720. Warren reports that he considered distributing pieces of coal, but concluded that would be more appropriate for December, and for naughty boys and girls, rather than for October and the well-behaved expeditionary force. I would also recommend the film "The Molly Maguires" (1970), available on DVD and VHS; it has fine performances by Sean Connery, Richard Harris, Samantha Eggar, Frank Finlay, and others, and many of the scenes were filmed on location in Mauch Chunk/Jim Thorpe.
498. VICTORIAN DETECTIVE FICTION AND THE NATURE OF EVIDENCE: THE SCIENTIFIC INVESTIGATIONS OF POE, DICKENS, AND DOYLE, by Lawrence Frank (Houndmills and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003; 249 pp., $69.96), is an academic examination of the relationships between detective fiction and 19th-century scientific texts; three of the seven chapters are devoted to Conan Doyle.
499. Masamichi Higurashi continues to translate Sherlockiana for Jaanese readers: Ken Greenwald's THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1989) has been published by Hara Shobo, and Ted Riccardi's THE ORIENTAL CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2003) by Kobunsha; Mitch also has added two new volumes to the MEITANTEI HOLMES children's paperback series illustrated by Hitoshi Wakana and "Ki" and published by Kodansha.
500. Thomas Mann has worked for many years as a reference librarian, and like so many librarians also is a collector, and has written about his collection in HORROR AND MYSTERY PHOTOPLAY EDITIONS AND MAGAZINE FICTIONIZATIONS: THE CATALOG OF A COLLECTION (Jefferson: McFarland, 2004; 184 pp., $35.00). Tom reports that there are a dozen entries for Sherlock Holmes (including magazine fictionizations of Rathbone films) and four for "The Lost World" (and he knows of a fifth that he discovered after the book went to press).
501. Dec 04 #6: ROBERT RIPLEY'S BELIEVE IT OR NOT! ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE BIZARRE (New York: Black Dog & Leventhal, 2002; 318 pp., $17.95) is (of course) full of things that are "amazing, strange, inexplicable, weird, and all true!" And the chapter on literature has a portrait of Sherlock Holmes and an explanation that "the fictional detective each year is sent hundreds of letters to his nonexistent address at 221B Baker Street." I'm not sure whether that's amazing, strange, inexplicable, or weird.
502. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (the interactive exhibit with Victorian flavor, and a mystery that visitors can solve) currently at the Discovery Center in Springfield, Mo. (Nov 04 #5) will be next at the Lakeview Museum in Peoria, Ill., from Apr. 16 to Aug. 14 (309-686-7000); their web-site is at <www.lakeview-museum.org>.
503. "Great Books: The Hound of the Baskervilles" was broadcast on TLC (formerly The Learning Channel) last year (Nov 03 #3), and the series was then abandoned by TLC. But the series hasn't vanished completely: the program aired on the Discovery Civilisation channel in Britain on Dec. 28, as I learned on Dec. 29 (and confirmed with a Google search on the name of the program). And some of the programs air on Discovery HD Theater and The Science Channel; you can check the listings at <www.discovery.com>. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is worth watching, and not merely because two Sherlockians in Washington were interviewed on tape for the show.
504. I'll do my best to write this item so that it will get through e-mail filters: "The game's a footsie" is one of the phrases used by the producers to describe "The Secret of H*r!t Hill" (2001), which also is described as "a wild and wicked tale of deception, sensual awakenings, and dangerous liaisons" involving Sherlock Holmes and his trusted companion Dr. Emma Watson. The 87-minute film is available at <www.adamandeve.com> (800-293-4654) for $19.95 on DVD or VHS; another web-site <www.searchextreme.com> offers fullcolor stills from the film. Asterisk #1 is an "a" and asterisk #2 an "o". And thanks to Joe Coppola for the report.
505. Further to the report (Jul 04 #6) on cartoonist Zhu Ziquiang's suit against Nike over their copying his "Little Match Man" artwork in their worldwide "Creativity in Sports" television advertising campaign, a court in Beijing has ruled in favor of Zhu, who had asked for 2 million yuan ($240,000) and a public apology. The court ordered Nike to pay 300,000 yuan and issue a public apology. Nike plans to appeal; the company's lawyer argued earlier that Zhu's artwork lacks originality: "From murals and stone paintings in ancient times to Sherlock Holmes stories, the logo has been used repeatedly." Thanks to Bill Vande Water for spotting the AP dispatch.
506. The Feb. 2005 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, is its annual tribute to Sherlock Holmes: there's nice cover art by Susan Smith, and Bill Vande Water's discussion of the photograph of Christopher Morley and Fred Dannay inset on the cover, and an amusing pastiche by Steve Hockensmith ("Gustav Amlingmeyer, Holmes on the Range").

Jan 05 #1:

1. We once again enjoyed pleasant weather during the birthday festivities in New York (although some people heading east encountered a few problems when it snowed in the west). There was an ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's for dedicated enthusiasts, and the Christopher Morley Walk (led by Jim Cox) for more than a dozen Morley enthusiasts on Thursday morning (followed by lunch at McSorley's). The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was Gahan Wilson, who told entertaining tales from his career as artist and writer, and about Hugh Hefner and Playboy, and he happily signed Sherlockian souvenirs from as far back as 1959 (when Playboy published four pages of his artistic version of "some littleknown misadventures of the great detective."

2. More than 140 people were on hand for the William Gillette Luncheon on Friday at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Paul Singleton and Elyse Locurto offered their version of an American (Sherlockian) in Paris. And in the afternoon Otto Penzler's open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
3. More than 170 Irregulars and guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Union League Club, where Peter Crupe delivered the cocktail-party toast to *the* Woman: Debbie Hall (who then went on to dine at the Algonquin with other ladies who have been *the* Woman). The agenda of the dinner included the usual toasts and traditions; revelations by Nicholas Meyer, David Stuart Davies, and Steven Doyle; a warm welcome to honored guest Inga Swenson (who played Irene Adler in the musical "Baker Street" and was serenaded by Henry Boote with "Finding Words for Spring"); and a tribute to Old Irregular Julian Wolff on the occasion of his centenary.
4. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours: Irregular Shillings and Investitures to John Bergquist ("The King of Scandinavia"), Barbara Roden ("Beryl Stapleton"), Neil Gaiman ("The Devil's Foot"), Gianluca Salvatori ("The Dacre Hotel"), Peter Calamai ("The *Leeds Mercury*"), and Art Renkwitz ("The Bar of Gold"). And Two-Shilling Awards ("for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty") were presented to Steve Rothman, Julie Rosenblatt, and Les Klinger.
5. Mike also reported on the creation of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust has in its first year received more than $12,000 from 50 generous donors (the Trust will use the funds to support the BSI's archives at the Houghton Library at Harvard University).
6. There were 90 people at the Baskerville Bash at the Manhattan Club, enjoying an evening of 1930s radio broadcasting by station WBBC, a station that was struggling to achieve financial stability and hoping to achieve a significant ratings boost special guest Basil Rathbone, who was to perform in "The Hound of the Baskervilles". Unfortunately, Rathbone never made it to the station, but station staff came up with substitute programming that included a courtroom drama "Hudson vs. Holmes" (with the plaintiff attempting to evict the defendant,) a version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from Beryl Stapleton's perspective, and the last-minute arrival of William Gillette (impersonated by Chuck Kovacic).

7. Jan 05 #2: On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was (as always) crowded with sellers and buyers, and at 12:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) convened a Junior Bloodstain, which featured a reading of Anne Cotton's dramatization "Sherlock Holmes and the Unsettling Smile" (there also was a "smile" contest won by Scott Monty, whose smile was described by one observer as unsettling and "truly ghastly").
8. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted more than 200 people to the National Arts Club, where Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies who have been honored as the Woman over the years, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported in verse on the events of the previous year and the previous evening. Costa Rossakis was the new winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year: his article on "Thaddeus Sholto: (Mis)-Diagnosed". And the Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from the raffle of Joseph Coppola's hand-crafted faux-Victorian tea caddy bath, and from enthusiastic bidders in the traditional auction.
9. The Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to the auction were Joseph and Elaine Coppola and the Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse (a solid-cherry reproduction of a Victorian writing desk), Vincent Brosnan (a limited-edition print of one of Edward Bawden's lino-cut illustrations for the Folio Society's 1987 edition of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), and Jerry and Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street (a set of handsome Canonical medals created by Maggie Schpak).
10. On Sunday about 40 locals and visiting long-weekenders gathered at the Old Castle Pub & Restaurant for a brunch arranged by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and a bus-load of Sherlockians journeyed to Hadlyme for a private visit to Gillette Castle, where they were entertained by Susan Dahlinger (who talked about the castle and its owner), and made welcome by William Gillette (impersonated by Harold E. Niver). The Castle is open to the public from Memorial Day to Columbus Day, and well worth visiting; there's a web-site at <www.dep.state.ct.us/stateparks/parks/gillettecastle.html>.
11. And the next birthday dinners in New York dinners will be held on Friday, Jan. 13, 2006.
12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $24.95 a year ($27.50 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); there's a new option for 2005, offering a subscription to the BSJ and the Christmas Annual for $34.95 (or $38.50 foreign). You can also subscribe at the BSJ website at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, where there's additional interesting material, including issues of The Lamp-Post (the BSJ's occasional newsletter), some of the papers that have won Morley-Montgomery Awards for their authors, and news of various BSI publications.

13. Jan 05 #3: Michael Reaves and John Pelan, the editors of SHADOWS OVER BAKER STREET (New York: Del Rey/Ballantine Books, 2003; 446 pp., $23.95), have assembled an anthology in which "Sherlock Holmes enters the dark, nightmare world of H. P. Lovecraft." And so he does, pursuing the NECRONOMICON and battling the Great Old Ones and various monsters; by far the best of the stories is by Neil Gaiman, and it has some fascinating surprises, none of which will be revealed here.
14. Les Moskowitz has reported that Gerard Van der Leun's THE QUOTABLE SHERLOCK HOLMES, published by the Mysterious Press (Oct 00 #3) and now out of print, is available to the electronically enabled as a 217-page .pdf file at the web-site <www.americandigest.org/mt-archives/004817.php>.
15. MISSIVES FROM THE MIRE is a splendid demonstration of what can be done with modern technology: it's a CD-ROM with the "collected newsletters and other scribblings" over the 55-year history of Hugo's Companions of Chicago; Donald J. Terras assembled a nearly complete run of their meeting notices and newsletters, and prepared an annotated index, and the disk includes an up-to-date version of Adobe Acrobat, all for $27.50 postpaid (checks payable to Hugo's Companions, please) from Bill Sawisch (418 Gallahad Road, Bolingbrook, IL 60440).
16. The Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh will celebrate its 500th anniversary this year, and there will be a series of exhibitions in Surgeon's Hall, including one on "Conan Doyle and the Real Sherlock Holmes" that will explore his connections with the college and his relationship with Dr. Joseph Bell. The college was an active bidder at Christie's last year, buying three lots, one of which included a poem that Conan Doyle wrote about the college.
17. Ed. Lange's play "Sherlock's Secret Life" premiered at the N.Y. State Theatre Institute in 1997, and his new play "Sherlock's Legacy" is scheduled to open at the Schacht Fine Arts Center at Russell Sage College in Troy, N.Y., from Apr. 23 through May 7 (518-274-3256) <www.nysti.org>. "Sherlock's Secret Life" at the Workshop Theatre in Calgary, on Feb. 4-12 (403-253-2002) <www.workshoptheatre.org>, and at the Red Barn Theatre in Key West, Mar. 15 to Apr. 16 (866-870-9911) <www.redbarntheatre.com>. Lange's web-site is at <home.nycap.rr.com/bifurcated/sherlock.html> with information about both of the plays, and about the audiocassette of "Sherlock's Secret Life".

18. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2004" (devoted to "the architectural Holmes") features Derham Groves' long article ("Welcome to the Hotel Irregular") on what his architecture students came up with when challenged to design a hotel for the Baker Street Irregulars. His students are imaginative indeed, and copies of the 62-page booklet are available from its editor, John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122); checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
19. Reported: Lora Roberts' THE AFFAIR OF THE INCOGNITO TENANT: A MYSTERY WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES (Palo Alto: Perseverance Press/John Daniel & Co., 2004; 264 pp., $13.95); Charlotte Dodson, housekeeper at an estate in Sussex, discovers that her tenant, a Mr. Sigerson, is of significant assistance in solving a mystery. Lora Roberts has a web-site at <www.nmomysteries.com>.

20. Jan 05 #4: Britain's Royal Society will celebrate its 350th anniversary in 2010, and a story in The Guardian (Jan. 1) notes that the celebration is to include an exhibition of important items from the Society's archives, "ranging from a telescope built by Isaac Newton to a letter in defence of spiritualism by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Conan Doyle asked astronomer James Jeans to pay attention to spiritualism, saying that "Personally, I have studied this matter since 1887. I have experimented with more mediums than, probably, any living man."
21. Richard Valley reports that the current issue of Scarlet Street (#52) includes interviews with Patricia Morison (who appeared with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce in "Dressed to Kill") and with Peggy Webber (who acted with Rathbone and Bruce in the Sherlock Holmes radio series); $7.95 ($10.95 outside the U.S.) from Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <www.scarletstreet.com>.
22. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" aired on BBC-1 on Dec. 26, and in Canada on the CBC on Dec. 29, to mixed reviews from Sherlockians who have commented on it. The closing credits noted it is a co-production of the BBC and WGBH; WGBH plans to air the program on "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV this fall. And Rupert Everett isn't the only Sherlock Holmes in the film: Guy Henry (Mr. Bilney) played Holmes in "Young Sherlock: The Mystery of the Manor House" (1982). Dayna McCausland has noted that this was a case in which the game truly was a foot.
23. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers a report on Les Klinger's visit to the library, Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" discussion of the Parker Brothers "Sherlock Holmes" game, and Jon Lellenberg's warm "50 Years Ago" tribute to Bliss Austin; you can request a copy from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
24. "Who Shot Sherlock?" (the final title of the episode of "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" that aired on CBS-TV on Jan. 6) was an interesting show, and worth looking for as a repeat if you haven't seen it; the CSI team tries to determine how the man who played Sherlock Holmes in a Sherlock Holmes club was killed, and you may be surprised at some of the plot twists. Of course the broadcast was nicely timed for Sherlock Holmes' birthday, and I'm sure that many Sherlockians at the birthday festivities in New York are thankful that they had VCRs set to record at home.
25. If you'd like to see Buster Keaton's "Sherlock, Jr." (1924) in a theater, the American Film Institute has scheduled a Keaton/Chaplin double feature at the AFI Silver in Silver Spring, Md., at 5:30 pm on Feb. 9. The Charlie Chaplin film is "The Circus" (1928), and there will be music accompanying both films (301-495-6721) <www.afi.com/silver>.
26. Bruce Holmes continues his pursuit of Sherlockian philately (and philatelic Sherlockiana), and his THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: ILLUSTRATED WITH POSTAGE STAMPS offers the twelve stories represented by postage stamps and covers, and the selection is as usual appropriate and imaginative. The 23-page booklet costs US $29.50 (color)/$15.00 (black and white) postpaid, and Bruce's address is 3170 Joseph Howe Drive, Halifax, NS B3L 4G1, Canada.

27. Jan 05 #5: Reported by Don Dillstone: WHODUNIT CRIME PUZZLES, by Hy Conrad and Tatjana Mai Wyss (New York: Sterling Publishing, 2002; 96 pp., $6.95); Sherman Oliver Holmes is the great-great-grandson of Sherlock Holmes, and poses 29 mystery puzzles for readers to solve (one of them being a sequel to "The Blue Carbuncle"). Some of the Sherman Oliver Holmes puzzles (but not the sequel to "The Blue Carbuncle") have been reprinted in MENSA WHODUNITS, by Bill Wise, Hy Conrad, and Bob Peterson (New York: Sterling Publishing, 2004; 286 pp., $4.98).
28. Kelly Freas died on Jan. 2. He was an artist and an illustrator, and began his career painting buxom women on bombers during World War II. His first professional work was a cover for the Nov. 1950 issue of Weird Tales, and he went on to win 11 prestigious Hugo Awards from the World Science Fiction Society. He also worked for Mad magazine from 1957 to 1962, painting many portraits of Alfred E. "What Me Worry?" Neuman. Freas also illustrated the fine Sherlockian story "The Return", by H. Beam Piper and John J. McGuire, in the Jan. 1954 issue of Astounding Science Fiction.
29. Plan ahead: the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, the Bootmakers of Toronto, the Toronto Public Library, and the Arthur Conan Doyle Society will sponsor "ACD at Thirty-Five" (celebrating the 35th anniversary of the collection) in Toronto on Oct. 20-22, 2006; if you'd like to be on the mailing list, write to ACD@35 (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada) <acd35@sympatico.ca>
30. Al Gregory <grimpen@nac.net> offers (e-mail only) his 2005 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
31. The BBC Radio 7 30-minute series "Cult" broadcast five new Sherlock Holmes stories on Jan. 17-21, read by Andrew Sachs and Hannah Gordon; you can listen to the programs and read the scripts (along with an interview with Bert Coules) at <www.bbc.co.uk/cult/sherlock/>. Two of the program were written by authors who have Sherlockian credentials: Paul Cornell, whose Doctor Who novel HAPPY ENDINGS included Holmes and Watson as characters (Feb 98 #5); and Kim Newman, whose ANNO DRACULA had many echoes from the Canon (Dec 92 #3). Newman, by the way, has a web-site at <www.johnnyalucard.com>.
32. Bernard Oudin's SHERLOCK HOLMES ET LA SUFFRAGETTE AMOUREUSE (2004; 144 pp., E18.00) is a collection of seven new pastiches, and it's only one of many interesting books available in French from Thierry Saint-Joanis' Editions Mycroft's Brother (2 impasse de la Serre - Saint Julien, 63320 Montaigut-le-Blanc, France) <www.mycrofts.net>.
33. "Watson's Tin Box Sponsors Essay Contest for Pupils" was the headline on a story in the Baltimore Sun (Jan. 4) about the society's campaign to explain to seventh-grade students why Sherlock Holmes is so interesting. Members of the society will present programs at local libraries, and they will distribute a booklet they've prepared about "The Speckled Band" (the subject of the essay content), and then select the winners, who will be announced in April; the contest is co-sponsored by Barnes & Noble. If you'd like to see the booklet, go to <www.hclibrary.org/partners/holmescontest.cfm>.

34. Jan 05 #6: Les Klinger reports that Universal plans to release the first season of "Murder, She Wrote" on DVD (three discs) on Mar. 29 ($49.98); the set includes the 1984 two-hour pilot "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes", in which Brian Keith starred in the pilot as Capt. Caleb McCallum, who attends a costume party dressed as Holmes, and may or may not have been the intended victim of a murderer. Jessica Fletcher (played by Angela Lansbury) solves the mystery, needless to say.
35. Al Rosenblatt has kindly forwarded Michael Peel's review in the Times Literary Supplement (Sept. 3, 2004) of Samantha Weinberg's POINTING FROM THE GRAVE, Cyril Wecht's MORTAL EVIDENCE, and N. E. Genge's THE FORENSIC CASEBOOK; "The three books have little in common stylistically," Peel

- reports, "but all cite Sherlock Holmes' famous dictum that once the impossible has been ruled out, whatever remains - however improbably - must be true."
36. Guy Davenport died on Jan. 4. He won a MacArthur Foundation "genius grant" for his essays and short fiction, and he was a distinguished teacher and artist, illustrating Hugh Kenner's THE COUNTERFEITERS (1968). The National Review obituary (Jan. 31) for Kenner noted, "Sherlock Holmes and Karl Marx in the same picture? Why not?"
  37. Trevor S. Raymond reports that "Rawhide 2" (a phonograph record released by Folkways Records in 1957) with a dramatization of "The Case of the Speckled Band" by the Canadian humorist Max Ferguson is available from the Smithsonian Institution (they have purchased Folkways) on one CD ($17.99) or cassette ($9.95). Catalog number 03872 (888-365-5939) <www.folkways.si.edu>. And that's only one of the interesting items in the winter issue of Canadian Holmes, which is published by The Bootmakers of Toronto and available by subscription (US$20.00) or included in membership (US$25.00); the business manager is D. Thorpe, 5 Brownlee Avenue, Toronto, ON M9P 2R5, Canada.
  38. Further to earlier reports (Sep 04 #4) on plans for an ITV television series starring Stephen Fry and Hugh Laurie as Holmes and Watson, Jim Ballinger reports that Fry announced at the annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London this month that he has realized that he doesn't resemble Holmes ("there's no description in the Canon of Holmes looking like 'a bin liner full of yoghurt'"), and that the project has been scrapped.
  39. A new edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET, with the original text from Beeton's Christmas Annual and more than 600 striking illustrations by Danish artist Nis Jessen, will be published this spring by Hakon Holm (Borgmester Nielsens Vej 24, DK-3700 Roenne, Bornholm, Denmark <www.mr-holmes.com>. There will be three versions: standard (E60.00), deluxe (E70.00), and signed and numbered in a slip-case (E78.00), and two posters will be available; there is more information (and lots of artwork) at the publisher's web-site, and you can see more of Jessen's work at <home2.inet.tele.dk/frjessen>.

  40. Jan 05 #7: David Grann's article about Richard Lancelyn Green in The New Yorker's Dec. 13 issue ("A Reporter at Large: Mysterious Circumstances") generated renewed press speculation in Britain about Richard's death, and an excellent letter of comment from Glen Miranker in the Jan. 17 issue of the magazine. That issue also has an article by Margaret Talbot ("The Auteur of Anime") about Hayao Miyazaki, the highly-acclaimed director of Japanese animation; Sherlockians have seen his work in some of the episodes in the 1983 series "Meitantei Holmes" (available here as "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound").
  41. The film "Finding Neverland" (Nov 04 #5) received seven nominations for an Oscar: best picture, best actor in a leading role (Johnny Depp), art direction, costume design, film editing, writing (adapted screenplay), and music (score).
  42. The Confederates of Wisteria Lodge and The Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem are planning an informal "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" on Apr. 16 at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn.; additional information is available from Kent Ross (6875 Fielder Court, Rex, GA 30273) <kenthross@aol.com>.
  43. The steam launch Aurora's successor, the P&O superliner Aurora, continues to afflict its passengers: some months ago (Dec 03 #1) more than 500 passengers suffered from a highly contagious virus, and now a 103-night "Grand Voyage" to 40 ports in 23 countries has been cancelled. According to a report in the Daily Telegraph (Jan. 21), kindly forwarded by John Baesch, the passengers spent the first 11 days of their cruise in and near Southampton while the line struggled to repair the ship's propulsion system. The cost to the company will be £22 million, but David Dingle, managing director of P&O Cruises, said there is no need to rename the ship (at its naming ceremony, conducted by the Princess Royal, the champagne bottle didn't smash, traditionally a bad omen).
  44. JAPAN AND SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited and translated by Yuichi Hirayama, Masamichi Higurashi, and Hirotaka Ueda (New York: The Baker Street Irregulars, 2004; 190 pp., $39.95), is the first volume in the BSI's International Series, which is intended to make available in English some of the fine Sherlockian scholarship published in other languages. And the Japanese have a long history of enthusiasm for Sherlock Holmes: the first translation of a Sherlock Holmes story was published in 1894, a Japanese journalist interviewed Conan Doyle in 1910 (the interview is in the book), the first Sherlockian society in Japan was founded in 1948, and since then members of the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club and other societies have continued to enjoy the world of Sherlock Holmes; the best of their essays, poems, and artwork will be found in JAPAN AND SHERLOCK HOLMES. $43.90 postpaid ($44.90 outside the U.S.) from The Baker Street Journal, 1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127.
  45. Les Klinger has been getting a lot of publicity for THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, in reviews and interviews, in print and on radio, and in various languages (thanks to the Voice of America, which broadcast an interview with Les and Dan Stashower and me last month; you can listen to us at their web-site at <www.voanews.com/english/AmericanLife/2004-12-24-voa33.cfm>.

  46. Jan 05 #8: The January 2005 issue of Geotimes is their "forensic geology" theme issue, with Raymond C. Murray's feature article on "Collecting Crime Evidence from Earth", Sarah Andrews' report on "A Visit to the FBI Lab", and articles by Megan Sever on "Murder and Mud in the Shenandoah" and David Abbott on "Investigating Mining Frauds". Published by the American Geological Institute, 4220 King Street, Alexandria, VA 22302 ($3.95); Murray's article and Megan Sever's story on "Becoming a Forensic Geologist" are available at the magazine's web-site <www.geotimes.org>. "Forensic geology," Murray notes, "began with the writings of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
  47. A BLUE CARBUNCLE is the latest in the "monograph series" of The Occupants of the Empty House: Janet Bensley has edited an interesting collection of papers about the gem, and the story, and the 32-page pamphlet costs $12.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Occupants of the Empty House, please) from Stan Tinsley (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999).
  48. Gasogene Press has three new titles available, one of them the seventh volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY: THE VALLEY OF FEAR, with a fine introduction by Julia Carlson Rosenblatt, whose insights on the story and its setting are as helpful to the reader as they were to those who participated in last year's excursion into the Valley; the annotations and appendices are as usual based on old and new Sherlockian scholarship (2005; 143 pp., $19.95); $22.70 postpaid ($23.70 outside the U.S.) from the publisher.
  49. SERPENTINE MUSE-INGS, VOLUME TWO, edited by Susan Z. Diamond and Marilynne McKay, is the second anthology of scholarship, speculation, and toasts from archives of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes and their journal The Serpentine Muse (2005; 229 pp., $22.95); $25.70 postpaid ($26.70 outside the U.S.) from the publisher.
  50. A DISTINCT TOUCH, WATSON: BEING THE FINAL ANNALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by David L. Hammer, offers 13 new stories in his series of Sherlockian pastiches (the series now runs to four volumes, and his readers will grumble a bit at that "final" in the subtitle, but David reports that he had decided that it is time, in appropriately lawyerly language, to cease and desist (2003; 131 pp., $13.95); $16.70 postpaid ($17.70 outside the U.S.) from the publisher: Gasogene Press, Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268.
  51. Beeton's Christmas Annual has been published for 22 years by The Sound of the Baskervilles (the Sherlockian society in Seattle), and the latest issue offers "essays, puzzles, commentary, artwork and more" by its members; the 40-page booklet is available from David Haugen, 3605 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332; $10.00 postpaid.

52. Andy Fusco has kindly supplied copies for everyone of his seasonal souvenir for the birthday festivities: a pocket calendar for 1898, which also works for 2005. And this is a collectible, since it's the first printing, which Andy deemed unsuitable for distribution in New York, where people received copies of the second printing.
53. Feb 05 #1: I neglected the annual commercials last month: the 16-page list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, the Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.25 postpaid. The 81-page list of 831 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 427 active societies, is $4.70 post-paid. A run of address labels for 349 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.55 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).
54. The list of Irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and all of the lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <<http://members.cox.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>>.
55. Charles J. Blinderman's THE PILTDOWN INQUEST (1986) was an excellent examination of the Piltown hoax and the various suspects (there's a chapter on Conan Doyle), and Blinderman and David Joyce have an excellent web-site devoted to "The Piltown Plot" at <www.clarku.edu/~piltown>. Blinderman's book also is available (a very nice aspect of the Internet as a resource) at <www.clarku.edu/~piltown/The\_Piltown\_Inquest/chapters/chapter1.html>; if you want to go directly to the chapter on Conan Doyle, which is a pastiche (Apr 87 #2) just substitute "11" for "1".
56. Rosemary Clark died on Jan. 6. She was the widow of Edward F. Clark (they met at the Pentagon, Jon Lellenberg notes, where they were Ultra handlers in 1944), and she was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *the* woman in 1976.
57. Sorry about that: my review omitted the price, so here's a revised repeat: The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2004" (devoted to "the architectural Holmes") features Derham Groves' long article ("Welcome to the Hotel Irregular") on what his architecture students came up with when challenged to design a hotel for the Baker Street Irregulars. His students are imaginative indeed, and copies of the 62-page pamphlet are available from editor John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122); $10.00 postpaid (with checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
58. Details are now available for the annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend On Apr. 29-May 1 in and near Chicago; there will be a dinner (with Henry Zecher speaking on William Gillette), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. Contact Susan Diamond, 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
59. "We could put up a very fair team in the field, and were runners-up for the County Cup the last season that I played," Conan Doyle wrote, remembering his playing association football in Portsmouth, adding that "I was always too slow, however, to be a really good back, though I was a long and safe kick." Kevin Smith's SHERLOCK HOLMES WAS A POMPEY KEEPER: THE EXTRAORDINARY STORY OF THE ORIGINAL POMPEY AFC AND THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS DETECTIVE (Tiverton: Halsgrove, 2004; 152 pp., £19.95) is a detailed history of the team on which Conan Doyle played, first listed as A. C. Smith and then by his own name, and the team's success continued after Conan Doyle departed.
60. Feb 05 #2: Philip Johnson died on Jan. 25. He was a renowned architect, and with his partner John Burgee designed four buildings in San Francisco, the most controversial of which was the Nieman Marcus department store on Union Square. According to John King's tribute in the San Francisco Chronicle on Jan. 27 (forwarded by Scott Monty), Piero Patri, a local architect who worked with Johnson, recalled a planning commission hearing where speaker after speaker denounced the project. "Emotions ran high--except at the end of the front row of the audience, where Johnson sat reading a paperback Sherlock Holmes novel."
61. It has been more than 15 years since Mysteriously Yours (a mystery dinnertheater company in Toronto) performed their first Sherlock Holmes play, and their new play "CSI: Baker Street" opened last month, and will run at least through July. The theater's address is 2026 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4S 1Z9, Canada (416-486-7469) (800-668-3323) <www.mysteriouslyyours.com>.
62. "Elementary School, My Dear Watson" was the headline on a Reuters dispatch from Moscow: Russia's police force has adopted Moscow school 1862 for children aged 6 to 17 and created a "detectives' section" as part of a campaign to clean up its reputation for incompetence and corruption. "Future Sherlock Holmes's will be able to learn the basics of the detective's trade," First Deputy Interior Minister Alexander Chekalin said (quoted by the Itar-Tass news agency on Jan. 28).
63. Filming on "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" is now underway in Glasgow; the film (Nov 04 #5) was written by David Pirie, who suggests that some aspects of Holmes were based on Conan Doyle's alcoholic father. Douglas Henshall stars as Conan Doyle, and Brian Cox as Dr. Joseph Bell.
64. No one reported the story in the N.Y. Times when it ran on Sept. 7, but it was reprinted in the San Diego Union-Tribune on Sept. 15, and noted in The Passengers' Log (Oct. 8), and although New York to San Diego to Sydney to Washington is quite a trek, it all started in Belize, eight miles east of the border with Guatemala, where a party of mycologists was searching for fungi on a ridge called Doyle's Delight, named for its resemblance to the prehistoric setting of "The Lost World". And they found some, of course, including a brilliant yellow-capped mushroom that may be new to science and might wind up named *Hygrocybe doyles delightiorium*.
65. Karen Murdock spotted a story at <www.restaurantbiz.com> about a chain of Sherlockian pubs and grills, all in Texas, in Addison, Arlington, Houston, and San Antonio, with future sites in Austin and Fort Worth; there's a website at <www.hospitalityusa.com/locations.htm>.
66. Kinky Friedman announced this month that he will run for governor of Texas in 2006, calling himself Texas' first independent candidate since Sam Houston in 1859. Friedman often has Sherlockian allusions in his mystery novels, but said he wouldn't be writing any mysteries from the governor's mansion. According to a story in the Kerrville Daily Times (Feb. 4), Friedman explained that "The Kinkster gets killed off in my newest book, TEN LITTLE NEW YORKERS, sort of like Sherlock Holmes at Reichenbach Falls." Friedman has a web-site at <www.kinkyfriedman.com>.

67. Feb 05 #3: U.S. Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan received an honorary degree from the University of Edinburgh this month, and in his acceptance speech he paid tribute to Sherlock Holmes: "As an economic detective of sorts," Greenspan said, "I find kinship in the words written by this university's world-renowned alumnus, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, whose Sherlock Holmes--while speaking of the art of detection--unknowingly unlocked the well-kept secrets of monetary policy-making. 'We balance probabilities,' he said, 'and choose the most likely. It is the scientific use of the imagination.' He sounds like a stock portfolio manager of one of Edinburgh's premium investment houses. What is true for detectives and financial risk managers is true for monetary policy-makers, and is, I am certain, also true for the young minds taking shape here on these grounds."
68. Bank of England governor Mervyn King also received an honorary degree from the University of Edinburgh. And Simon Pia reported in The Scotsman (Feb. 8) that King explained that "my predecessor said there were three kinds of economists: (1) Those who can count. (2) Those who can't."
69. Further to my review of SHADOWS OVER BAKER STREET (Jan 05 #3), Chris Roden notes that Neil Gaiman won a Hugo Award (best short story) for his contribution to the anthology ("A Study in Emerald") at the World Science Fiction Convention in Boston last year. And it was well-deserved.

70. Francis A. Young died on Jan. 17. He was described by more than one friend as a walking encyclopedia, and one of his earliest published works was his article "On the Identification of Cardinal Tosca" in the June 1964 issue of The Baker Street Journal BJS (June 1964). Frank's books include ART OF THE FOOTNOTE: THE INTELLIGENT STUDENT'S GUIDE TO THE ART AND SCIENCE OF ANNOTATING TEXTS (1996) and PASSING THE KEYS: MODERN CARDINALS, CONCLAVES, AND THE ELECTION OF THE NEXT POPE (1999), and we are in his debt for the CD-ROM "The Works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" issued by Insight Engineering (1997).
71. The first issue of The Master's Trestleboard, the electronic newsletter edited by Ron Fish for The Master's Masons, is available at their web-site at <www.themastersmasons.homestead.com>.
72. The 24th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held in Dayton on Mar. 11-13, at the Holiday Inn Fairborn; additional details are available from Cathy Gill (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
73. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: The Real Sherlock Holmes" is a 57-minute documentary issued in 2004 by Delta Entertainment Corp. on DVD ($6.99 at Amazon), with interesting footage of Conan Doyle locations from Edinburgh to Windlesham, and (as a "special feature") the 29-minute Nigel Bruce/Tom Conway radio broadcast of "The Devil's Foot" (1947).
74. Gayle T. Harris reports a new and interesting archive for researchers: the [Edinburgh] Scotsman offers on-line access to its articles published from 1817 to 1920. Searches are free at <www.archives.scotsman.com>, and there are 646 hits for "conan doyle" and 204 hits for "sherlock holmes", but you need to pay for access to the articles: £7.95 for one day, £12.95 for two days, or £19.95 for one week.

75. Feb 05 #4: Further to the report (Dec 04 #4) on a Japanese translation of Rodger Garrick-Steele's THE HOUSE OF THE BASKERVILLES, Cliff Goldfarb has noted that the book is available in English, published by the print-on-demand company 1st Books; $24.00 (paperback) or $6.95 (electronic). The company's address is AuthorHouse, 1663 Liberty Drive #200, Bloomington, IN 47403 (888-519-5121) <www.authorhouse.com>.
76. Garrick-Steele received considerable publicity in 2000, when he accused Sir Arthur Conan Doyle of murdering Bertram Fletcher Robinson (with the assistance of Fletcher Robinson's wife Gladys) to avoid exposure as having plagiarized THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES from a book written by Fletcher Robinson, and far less publicity in 2001 when he accused Conan Doyle of murdering Charles Dawson, who knew Conan Doyle to be the perpetrator of the Piltdown hoax. According to a story in Torquay Herald Express (Nov. 2, 2001), Garrick-Steele challenged Sherlockians: "If this is true, they are covering for a serial murderer; if they don't know this then they are fools indeed."
77. There's nothing about Dawson in THE HOUSE OF THE BASKERVILLES, which offers details on Garrick-Steele's life and career, and lengthy (and undocumented) quotes from members of Fletcher Robinson's family, and their servants and friends, and an end-note on Garrick-Steele's plans to publish Fletcher Robinson's AN ADVENTURE ON DARTMOOR, the manuscript upon which Conan Doyle allegedly based THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.
78. Rodger isn't the only Garrick-Steele around, according to Yahoo. "Katelin Ashford was a bit hotheaded, but hardly wicked enough to be exiled from her beloved London to the wilds of the Caribbean just to avoid a scandal! But her trip across the Atlantic turned out to be fraught with peril and passion when a storm buffeted her ship, and cast her onto the deck and into the arms of an infamous privateer. Yet virile Garrick Steele was no stranger; he was the very man who'd ruined her reputation back home!" From the blurb for Kathleen Drymon's PIRATE MOON (1993).
79. Basil Hoskins died on Jan. 17. His career as a character actor lasted for almost 50 years, in both classics and comedy, and he played Mr. Henderson in Granada's "Wisteria Lodge" (1988).
80. It's unlikely that there's anything Sherlockian about the new film "Inside Deep Throat" (it's a documentary about the 1972 porno film "Deep Throat"), but there's a connection: Harry Reems, who starred in the film (and is now a real-estate salesman in Utah), went on to make "Sherlock Holmes" (1975), which for many years was the only porno Sherlock Holmes film available on videocassette.
81. The Mystery Writers of America have announced their nominations for Edgar awards, including Les Klinger (best critical-biographical) for THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, and Gary Lovisi (best short story) for "The Adventure of the Missing Detective" (in SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HIDDEN YEARS). The winners will be announced at the MWA awards dinner on Apr. 28. THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES has also been nominated for an Agatha award (best non-fiction) from Malice Domestic, and Jack French's PRIVATE EYELASHES: RADIO'S LADY DETECTIVES has been nominated in the same category; the winners will be announced at Malice's awards banquet on Apr. 30.
82. Feb 05 #5: Bruce Cassiday died on Jan. 12. "He was a writer with as many talents as pseudonyms," according to Jack Adrian's obituary in The Independent (Feb. 11), and one of those talents was his wide knowledge of literature: Cassiday edited ROOTS OF DETECTION: THE ART OF DEDUCTION BEFORE SHERLOCK HOLMES (1983), and collaborated with Waltraud Woeller on THE LITERATURE OF CRIME AND DETECTION: AN ILLUSTRATION HISTORY FROM ANTIQUITY TO THE PRESENT (1988).
83. Teddy Hayes' "The Baskerville Beast: The Musical" will have its world premiere at the Questors Theatre on Mar. 22-26 (12 Mattock Lane, Ealing W5 5BQ, England) (0208-237-1111) <www.thebaskervillebeast.co.uk>. And there's some nice artwork at the web-site.
84. Bob Levinson is the author of ASK A DEAD MAN, and has his own web-site at <www.robertslevinson.com>, and he recently contributed to a thread on the Dorothy-L electronic mailing list about typos that manage to pass undetected from ms. to printed page, noted that "My new work A STUDY IN SCARLETT O'HARA (in which Watson wonders why Holmes has done nothing about the holes in his socks, and Holmes reveals, 'I don't give a darn') will contain 60 intentional errors of fact. Readers will be invited to find these 55 errors of fact before Holmes does. Prizes will be awarded, although I'm not yet sure what they'll be. I'll think about it tomorrow."
85. Ken Lanza spotted a Sherlock Holmes in Nortonville, Ky.: an on-line newspaper <www.the-messenger.com> noted on Feb. 9 that "February is a good month for birthdays in Nortonville . . . Dwight Holmes, son of City Councilman Sherlock Holmes and Doris Holmes, has a birthday Feb. 11." The councilman, when he ran for election in 1998, was billed as Andrew "Sherlock" Holmes."
86. For the completists: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in a Treasury of Illustrated Classics edition adapted by Kathy Wilmore and illustrated by Ned Butterfield (New York: Modern Publishing, 2000; 189 pp., $1.99 on some discount tables, or $2.99 at their web-site <www.modernpublishing.com>); five stories simplified for young readers.
87. Further to the item on the National Library of Scotland's plans to acquire the John Murray archives (Mar 04 #3), the Library won a £17.7 million grant from the national lottery and has purchased the archives for £31.2 million. The archives include the company's correspondence with its authors, one of whom was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
88. "Sherlock Holmes and the Sea Grove Covenant" is this year's mystery, to be solved during Sherlock Holmes Weekends in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 4-6 and Nov. 4-6. The weekends also feature staged readings of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" by the East Lynne Theater Company, and additional details are available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278) <www.capemaymac.org>.

89. The famous/infamous "tent joke" was unveiled to The Hounds of the Internet in July 1998, and seems to have appeared in print first in the Reader's Digest (Nov. 1998), and it was published here somewhat later (Dec 01 #6), and it came in second in voting for the world's funniest joke (Oct 02 #1); it's still being told, for example in John Lescroart's THE SECOND CHAIR (2004).
90. Feb 05 #6: The magician Ricky Jay is interested in all sorts of trickery, as you can see at his web-site <www.rickyjay.com>, where you'll find his weekly "Jay's Journal" as broadcast by KCRW-FM (Los Angeles). On Apr. 17, 2003, Jay talked about "the American Sherlock Holmes" (Clifton R. Wooldridge, who described himself with that title in a series of booklets published early in the 20th century).
91. Otto Plaschkes died on Feb. 14. He began his film career as assistant director on "Exodus" (1960), and went on to produce "Georgy Girl" (1966) and many other films, including the Ian Richardson television films "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" (1983).
92. Reported: Catherine Wynne's THE COLONIAL CONAN DOYLE: BRITISH IMPERIALISM, IRISH NATIONALISM AND THE GOTHIC (Westport: Greenwood Press, 2003; 224 pp., $75.00); an academic examination of the many Irish aspects, allusions, and echoes in Conan Doyle's writings.
93. Sherlock Holmes died on Feb. 15, Bill Barnes reports. That's the Sherlock Holmes who lived in Newcastle, Australia. Ten years ago (Aug 94 #7) he attended the national meeting of the Sherlockian societies in Australia, and Michael J. Farrell reported that Mr. Holmes was born in Holmesville, with a Dr. Watson presiding over the birth (and it was the suggestion of the nurse that the child be called Sherlock).
94. Ken Lanza spotted a report in the Desert-Mountain Times about the opening of the Sherlock Holmes Outpost restaurant and club in Alpine, Texas. Visitors can enjoy Mrs. Hudson's Dining Room and Dr. Watson's Pub, and will be invited to become members of Dr. Watson's Club.
95. Michael Ross (Baskerville Bucher, Postfach 42 06 70, 50900 Koln, Germany) <www.baskerville.de> reports that German publishers continue to offer Sherlockian books: Stefan Winges, author of DER VIERTE KONIG (2004) has a new pastiche TOD AUF DEM RHEIN (Emons Verlag, 2004) visit Egypt and Cologne and are involved with the parents of Indiana Jones, and Friedrich Gerhard Kimmek's SHERLOCK HOLMES UND DIE WAHRE GESCHICHTE VOM GESPENKELTEN BAND (vmd, 2004) tells the "true story" of "The Speckled Band"; both books (and many others) are available from Michael. And Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (performed by Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke in 1988) has been translated into German, and performed in Idar-Oberstein in January.
96. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" aired on BBC-1 on Dec. 26, and in Canada on the CBC on Dec. 29 (Jan 05 #4), and it is scheduled on PBS-TV this fall. It will be released on DVD (region 2) on Mar. 21 (£10.99 at <www.bbcshop.co.uk>, according to publicity at hand from Ben Wood.
97. In 1959 postcards from Edgar W. Smith advertised "The Oscar Meunier Bust of Sherlock Holmes" reproduced (without the bullet hole) in matte porcelain by the noted sculptor E. Pichard (actually Edgar's son, Edgar Pichard Smith). Only 25 numbered replicas were made, according to the postal card. In the Mar. 1962 issue of The Baker Street Journal there was an offer from Edgar P. Smith of a "new casting" with 25 numbered replicas. I would appreciate hearing from those who have copies of the bust accompanied by documentation as to whether they are from 1959 or 1962.

98. Feb 05 #7: An exhibition on "Tutankhamen and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" is on tour, with more than twice as many artifacts from his tomb than were in the exhibition in the 1970s; it has been on display in Bonn and is now in Basel, and it will open in Los Angeles on June 16 and will then move to Fort Lauderdale and Chicago. Newspaper stories about the exhibition note that tales about mummies that come to life were popular in the 19th century, and often cite Bram Stoker's JEWEL OF SEVEN STARS (1903), but Conan Doyle was earlier, with "The Ring of Thoth" (Jan. 1890) and "Lot No. 249" (Sept. 1892).
99. Guillermo Cabrera Infante died on Feb. 21. He was a Cuban novelist, essayist, supporter of Fidel Castro's revolution, and for the last forty years critic of Castro's government. His HOLY SMOKE (1985) is a fascinating, expert, and humorous discussion of the history of cigars (and cigarettes and pipes) with occasional references to the Canon.
100. Ronald Reagan has been honored by the U.S. Postal Service. He wrote to O. Dallas Baillio (director of the public library in Mobile, Ala.) in 1977, describing his debt to public libraries and the books he read as a young boy in Dixon, Ill.: "Then came the Zane Grey phase, Horatio Alger and Sherlock Holmes, and, of course, Mark Twain with Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn." And in 1992 the Reagans dined at The Sherlock Holmes in Northumberland Street and were greeted by Holmes and Watson (costumed actors Stewart Quentin Holmes and John Barrett-Watson); you can read about that in the Sherlock Holmes Gazette (spring 1993).
101. Jack L. Chalker died on Feb. 18. He was 13 years old when he attended his first science-fiction meeting, and a year later won a Hugo Award nomination for his literary magazine Mirage; he went on to write more than 60 sciencefiction and fantasy novels, and founded his own publishing company the Mirage Press. And he reported on Scrooge McDuck's Sherlockian connections in AN INFORMAL BIOGRAPHY OF SCROOGE MCDUCK, published by Mirage Press in 1974.
102. I noted (Jul 02 #2) that Derek Waring has played both Conan Doyle and Watson; can you name two other actors who have played both roles?
103. W. W. Norton has announced a second printing of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, due in bookstores in late spring, with corrections of errors in the first printing; the first print run was 30,000 copies, and the second print run will be 20,000 copies. And this fall (on Sept. 1) the retail price for the two volumes will increase to $90.00.
104. I've mentioned the Friends of Freddy before, and Walter R. Brooks' delightful series of books about Freddy the Pig, and FREDDY THE DETECTIVE (Sep 02 #4); Sandra Fenichel Asher adapted that novel as "Freddy, the King of Detectives" for the Open Eye Theatre in Margaretville, N.Y., last summer, and her web-site <www.usaplays4kids.drury.edu/playwrghs/asher> has a photo of Freddy in the play. There's lots of information about the society at their web-site <www.freddythepig.org>, and the winter 2005 issue of the Bean Home Newsletter has Jack Bromiley's "Comparing Freddy the Detective with Sherlock Holmes" (illustrated by the author); $15.00 for a two-year membership/subscription (Box 912, Greenbelt, MD 20768).
105. Feb 05 #8: Issue #64 of SHERLOCK offers Barbara Roisman Cooper's fine interview with Inga Swenson (with amusing stories about the musical "Baker Street"); Roger Johnson's discussion of the influence of Robert Louis Stevenson on Conan Doyle and other mystery writers; and as usual much more, Sherlockian and non-S'ian. SHERLOCK is published six times a year, and costs £23.70 (to the U.K.)/£26.00 (continent)/$45.00 (elsewhere) from Atlas Publishing, Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Classic Specialties is their American agent <www.sherlock-holmes.com> (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823); credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
106. The two other actors who have played both Conan Doyle and Watson are Edward Hardwick (Conan Doyle in the film "Photographing Fairies" and Watson in the Granada series) and Ian Hart (Conan Doyle in "Finding Neverland" and Watson in two recent BBC-1 television films).
107. The film "Finding Neverland" (2004), with Ian Hart as Conan Doyle (and with Johnny Depp as James M. Barrie) will be released on VHS and DVD ($29.99) in March ($29.99). The film received seven nominations for an Oscar, and won one: best achievement in music written for motion pictures, original score.

108. Natsume Soseki has been described as Japan's most revered author (from 1984 to 2004 his portrait was on Japan's 1000-yen note); he lived in London from 1900 to 1902, and THE TOWER OF LONDON (London: Peter Owen, 2005; 240 pp., £14.95) collects English translations of his essays about his visit, along with Yamada Futaro's "The Yellow Lodger" ["Kiuro Geshukunin"], a pastiche first published in Hoseki magazine (Dec. 1953) and reprinted in many anthologies. This is the first translation of "The Yellow Lodger", which is a pastiche in which Soseki meets Sherlock Holmes. Soseki did not enjoy his stay in London, and with good reason; translator Damian Flanagan also has contributed an excellent introduction to the book, and explanatory notes on the essays and the pastiche.
109. Google is testing a new "print" feature that allows you to read books. Go to <www.google.com> and search for "books about donan coyle" [and yes, you need to spell the names incorrectly] and you'll find an academic discussion of interest to those who wonder about "playing the game."
110. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has learned that copies of the winter issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal mailed to overseas subscribers seem to have gone missing; the Society hopes that the missing issues will turn up in up in March, and would greatly appreciate subscribers sending the wrappers to Catherine Cooke, Flat 15, Copperfield Court, 146 Worpole Road, Wimbledon, London SW20 8QA, England.
111. Ken Lanza spotted the report in the Washington Times (Feb. 19) about "podcasting" (a term derived from Apple's iPod); you can do your own radio show over the Internet. At <www.pinkgeek.net/weblog3> you can listen to Tim Aldrich read "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes".
112. Mar 05 #1: I mentioned MURDERLAND: A COMPANION VOLUME TO THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS' EXPEDITION TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR earlier (Oct 04 #6); it was available in the dealers' room at the Hotel Algonquin in January. Edited by Steven T. Doyle, it's much more than an excursion book, offering 168 pages of Sherlockian scholarship, with five pages of Conan Doyle's notes for the story, reproduced in facsimile and published for the first time. $19.95 ($23.90 postpaid to the U.S., $24.90 elsewhere); checks (payable to the BSI) can be sent to The Baker Street Journal, Box 465 Hanover, PA 17331, or you can order with credit cards at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
113. Reported: Sid Fleischman's THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA, OR PIRATES GALORE (New York: Greenwillow, 2005; 208 pp., $16.89); for young readers, set in 1846, and the giant rat is a pirate-ship figurehead ("villains spring forth, and amazements abound").
114. Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" is scheduled for production at the Drury Lane Theatre in Oakbrook Terrace from July 29 to Oct. 2; 100 Drury Lane, Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181 <www.drurylaneoakbrook.com>.
115. Peter Crupe spotted THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Sterling Publishing Co., 2005; 151 pp., $4.95) in a new series of "Classic Starts" at Barnes & Noble; it has six stories "retold from the Arthur Conan Doyle original" by Chris Sasaki, and illustrations by Lucy Corvino.
116. Conan Doyle's tour of the United States in 1894 included a visit to Vermont to see Rudyard Kipling. "I had brought up my golf-clubs and gave him lessons in a field," Conan Doyle recalled in his autobiography, "while the New England rustics watched us from afar, wondering what on earth we were at, for golf was unknown in America at that time." Actually, golf was known in America at that time; there was a crude three-hole course in use in Yonkers in 1888. And there's a bit more about Rudyard Kipling and golf: a story by E. Michael Johnson in Golf World (Feb. 18), at hand from Andrew Blau, notes that Kipling "invented what many believe to be the first colored golf ball when he slapped a coat of red paint on a white ball in order to make it easier to find while playing golf in the snow."
117. Darlene Cypser, who had two articles published in The Baker Street Journal in 1985 and 1988, now has a small distribution company and offers help to authors who don't have access to Amazon and other wider markets. Bifrost Distribution, Box 753, Littleton, CO 80160 <www.bifrostdistribution.com>.
118. Luke Steven Fullenkamp has completed the trilogy he started with SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ADVENTURE OF THE THREE DRAGONS (Sep 00 #1). SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GHOST OF THE FLYING DUTCHMAN (2001, 244 pp., $13.50 paperback/$4.95 electronic) begins with Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Johnathan Watson menaced by a carriage driven by a headless coachman immune to gunfire, and foiling a villainous and murderous plot; SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SEARCH FOR EXCALIBUR (2004, 280 pp., $14.50/paperback/$4.95 electronic) involves them with Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show while the plot continues, as villainous and murderous as ever. Both books are available from Authorhouse, 1663 Liberty Drive #200, Bloomington, IN 47403 (888-519-5212) <www.authorhouse.com>.
119. Mar 05 #2: "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes Theatre" is new from Blackstone Audio, offering performances of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes", Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band", and Yuri Rosovsky's one-act comedy "Ghastly Murder in Famed Detective's Flat" (Martin Jarvis and Kristoffer Tabori star as Holmes and Watson, and there's a full cast, and they all do fine work). $34.95 on 4 audiocassettes ($10.95 rental); $45.00 on 5 CDs ($13.95 rental); $29.95 on 1 mp3-CD; Box 969, Ashland, OR 97520 (800-729-2665) <www.blackstoneaudio.com>. Jarvis was Reginald Musgrave on BBC Radio 4 in 1978 and recorded "The Valley of Fear" for Listen for Pleasure in 1992, and Tabori was Sir Henry Baskerville in Granada's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1988).
120. Further to the item (Feb 05 #8) about missing copies of The Sherlock Holmes Journal, they've now arrived, and have much of interest, including extracts from the Sherlockian papers of Sir Paul Gore-Booth. SHJ subscription costs vary depending on where you are and on whether you're adult or junior; details are available from Bob Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU England, and at the society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org>.
121. Jim Vogelsang spotted an attractive gift bag (suitable for baby showers, of course) with a matching tag, from Leap Year Publishing in Methuen, Mass.; the photograph is by Tom Arma, and you can see it in full color (click on "occupations") at <www.tomarma.com>.
122. The Sound of the Baskervilles will celebrate their 25th anniversary the afternoon of Apr. 2, with tea and other refreshments, and commemorative pins and paperweights; additional details are available from David Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332; the society web-site's at <www.soundofthebaskervilles.com>.
123. Further to the report (Apr 04 #6) on plans for a 176-foot bronze sculpture of a Native American on Holmes Peak in Oklahoma, Dick Warner has forwarded a story in the Tulsa World (Feb. 16) that reports that organizers had hoped to break ground last month, but still need to raise more money and do more design work; their goal for the $30 million project is to finish the statue in time for the state's centennial in 2007.
124. The March issue of The Believer ($8.00) has a six-page interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle by Eric Spitznagel, who was assisted by Arthur Pacheco, a psychic and trance medium from Hawaii. Conan Doyle discusses the afterlife, Bram Stoker and Anne Rice, and Edgar Allan Poe (and the cover has a portrait of Conan Doyle by Charles Burns). There's also a four-panel cartoon ("Sherlock Holmes Versus Jungle Boy, Part 47") from Michael Kupperman. 826 Valencia Street, San Francisco, CA 94110 <www.believermag.com>.
125. Dark Horse Books' THE IRREGULARS...IN THE SERVICE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is a 128-page graphic novel written by Steven-Elliot Altman and Michael Reaves, and illustrated by Bong Dazo; Altman and Reaves had stories in SHADOWS OVER BAKER STREET (2003), and THE IRREGULARS also owes a great deal to the world of H. P. Lovecraft. $12.95, and if you can't find it in a store, their address is 10956 SE Main Street, Milwaukie, OR 97222 <www.darkhorse.com>.

126. Mar 05 #3: Some of the 1968 BBC television versions of the Canon starring Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock are available on region 2 DVDs: "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Boscombe Valley Mystery", "The Sign of Four" and "The Blue Carbuncle", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles"; £9.99 each at <www.bbcshop.com>. A boxed set with all three DVDs also is available at <www.amazon.co.uk> for £24.99.
127. The How Now! theater troupe will present "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" at the Historic General Dodge House in Council Bluffs on Apr. 8 and 9 (605 Third Street, Council Bluffs, IA 51503) (712-322-2406); the troupe will be in costume, with music and sound effects, reading Clarinda Karpov's dramatizations of "The Red-Headed League" and "The Man with the Twisted Lip".
128. It's not the Duke of Balmoral's Iris, but an iris was one of four stamps in a "Spring Flowers" set issued this year by the U.S. Postal Service.
129. Further to my earlier review (Jul 02 #1) of Bonaventure Brennan's 'IT COMMENCED WITH TWO...': THE STORY OF MARY ANN DOYLE, FIRST COMPANION OF CATHERINE MCAULEY, the book now has a second printing. It's a biography of Anna Maria Doyle, sister of Arthur Conan Doyle's grandfather John Doyle; born in Dublin in 1801, Anna met Catherine McAuley in 1827, became a nun in 1831, and helped found the Sisters of Mercy. The book includes information about the Doyle family and it can be bought (€30.00 postpaid) from Sister Bonaventure (2 St. Brigid's Court, Athboy, County Meath, Ireland); please pay by bank draft in euros.
130. Further to the earlier item (Jun 02 #4) about Nicholas Twit: The Schoolboy Sherlock Holmes, there now are five books in the series <www.twit.biz>. and author Cenarth Fox is presenting his talk on "Meet Sherlock Holmes" in venues in Australia, and his play "The Real Sherlock Holmes" also is on tour there <www.foxplays.com>.
131. When in Dubai: you can stay at the new Arabian Court Hotel, and choose from its restaurants: the traditionally-themed Bastakiya, Muglal cuisine at the Mumtaz Mahal, the Ahland Lounge, and the hotel's classic English pub: the Sherlock Holmes.
132. Ken Lanza spotted the web-site for Wayne M. Rooney, Consulting Detective at <www.consultingdetective.com>; there are Sherlockian images and quotations, and his e-mail address is <sholmes@pixi.com>.
133. Samuel French (45 West 25th Street, New York, 10010) <www.samuelfrench.com> offer 18 Sherlockian scripts, from William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (in the version used for the revival by the Royal Shakespeare Company) and Leslie Bricusse's "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" to comedies and dramas (some only marginally S'ian) by Tim Kelly.
134. For readers who like detectives named "Sherlock": Catherine Coulter has a long-running series about FBI special agents Dillon Savich (first seen in THE COVE in 1996) and Lacey Sherlock (in THE MAZE in 1997); they married, and the tenth book in their series (POINTBLANK) is due in September. And of course there's a web-site at <www.catherinecoulter.com>.

135. Mar 05 #4: Scotland should exploit Sherlock Holmes as a national cultural icon, according to the chairman of Scotland's cultural commission, quoted in the Edinburgh Scotsman (Mar. 19). "I think we should retake Sherlock Holmes," James Boyle said. "You look at the worldwide web and you will find that all the web businesses based round Sherlock Holmes are in London, they're in Illinois, they are in Switzerland. Sherlock Holmes is a product of Scottish mind, born in Scotland, trained in Scotland. Why don't we own him? It's perfectly reasonable that you should have large businesses built round Sherlock Holmes in London, but if people want a whole range of things from academic thought to cheap souvenirs, we may as well do that. What's to stop us selling tapes of Jeremy Brett back to the Americans?"
136. Belgium's definitive postage stamps show birds, and two recent issues show a Mediterranean gull and a partridge. "One great grey bird, a gull or curlew, soared aloft in the blue heaven" (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson dined on a cold partridge (in "The Veiled Lodger").
137. John Sherwood has been impersonating Sherlock Holmes for many years, assisted by a handy-dandy (and easily concealed) portable guide to the Canon that he's now happy to share with those who might wish to benefit from his careful research: THE POCKET SHERLOCK, which was created in 1987, now is available in a 2005 edition that offers 70 pages of case summaries and data. The booklet costs $12.00 postpaid (and will be autographed on request) from Mystery Visits (120 Quimby Road, West Grove, PA 19390) <www.mysteryvisits.com>.
138. Leona Rostenberg died on Mar. 17. She was a bibliophile and book dealer, and with her partner Madeleine B. Stern in 1942 identified Louisa May Alcott as the author, under a pseudonym, of a series of (at the time) racy stories, and the story of their partnership was told in their memoirs, OLD BOOKS, RARE FRIENDS: TWO LITERARY SLEUTHS AND THEIR SHARED PASSION (1997) and BOOKENDS: TWO WOMEN, ONE ENDURING FRIENDSHIP (2001). She wrote a series of articles on "Bibliately: A History of Books on Postage Stamps" for The American Philatelist in 1977, and included Sherlock Holmes, and she was in the audience when Madeleine B. Stern gave The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Lecture in 2001.
139. Turns out there's a tenuous Sherlockian connection for Russell Crowe: the music played at the end of Rupert Everett's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" (broadcast in December in the UK and in Canada). According to the Nottingham Evening Post (Mar. 5), it was "La Musica Notturna delle Strade di Madrid" (No. 6 Op. 30) by Italian composer Luigi Boccherini (1743-1805); the music also was used in the film "Master and Commander".
140. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner to honor the world's first forensic geologist, at 7:00 pm on June 22, at The Joyce on 4th in Calgary during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. We traditionally discourage scholarly papers, quizzes, and slide shows, and our agenda consists entirely of toasts (some scholarly, but many not). The restaurant is at 506 24th Avenue SW, and locals and visitors are welcome.

141. Mar 05 #5: The Constitution of The Baker Street Irregulars (drafted by Elmer Davis in 1934) states in Article IV that "The duties of the Commissionaire shall be to telephone down for ice, White Rock, and whatever else may be required and avail available." White Rock still exists, and of course there's a web-site <www.whiterockbeverages.com>, with a link to the White Rock Collectors Association <www.whiterocking.com>, which in the history of the company there's an item about White Rock's "ambassador without portfolio": "By 1895 America's favorite sparking table water and mixer went international, and in 1901 was featured at the coronation banquet of England's King Edward VII. A British newspaper later commented that the King always used White Rock to dilute his wine."
142. Ken Lanza has reported a Sherlockian image at the web-site <www.quackwatch.com> (proposed as "your guide to quackery, health fraud, and intelligent decisions").
143. Scott Tate reports a new Sherlockian society: The John Turner Society, for people who have, or know someone who has, or are interested in diabetes. More information about the society is available from Scott at 925 La Due Avenue, Alamosa, CO 81101 <boscombevalley@gmail.com>.
144. This year's Canonical Convocation and Caper will take place in Door County, Wis., on Sept. 23-25; there's a web-site at <www.cccdoorcounty.com>, or you can request additional information from Jane Richardson, 3427 East Exchange Street, Crete, IL 60417. Mary Erickson notes that Don Izban, who presided over the event for many years, has found four people to do all the work he did to make the event a success, and one assumes that Don will be there to see how they do.

145. Sumal Surendranath reports that there's a Sherlock Holmes Society of India on the Internet, founded in May 2001 as a meeting place for Indian fans of Sherlock Holmes <in.groups.yahoo.com/group/SherlockHolmesSocietyofIndia>.
146. THE PRIVATE EYE WRITERS OF AMERICAN PRESENTS MYSTERY STREET: THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY PWA ANTHOLOGY (New York: Signet, 2001; 341 pp., $6.50) was edited by Robert Randisi and includes Warren Murphy's "Highly Irregular on Baker Street", which stars his series P.I. Devlin Tracy, investigating a murder at the present-day 221B Baker Street.
147. Further to the report (Dec 04 #2) on Laurie R. King's LOCKED ROOMS (the new Mary Russell mystery, due for release in June), the new paperback edition of THE GAME (New York: Bantam Books, 2005; 442 pp. $6.99) offers a 12-page preview from LOCKED ROOMS. Teaser excerpts are becoming more and more common now, to the delight of completists.
148. Ev Herzog spotted a Barnes & Noble reprint of Heather Hacking's HISTORICAL CATS: GREAT CATS WHO HAVE SHAPED HISTORY (London: Hodder & Stoughton, 2003; 80 pp., £9.99); the cats include King Tutankhamin 'n' Kahmout (who invented the catflap), Richard the Furred, and Purrlock Holmes, all with amusing illustrations by the author. The Barnes & Noble reprint was issued in 2004 ($3.98) and may be found at their stores (if you're lucky) (the reprint was a one-shot, apparently, and the title can't be ordered or reordered).

149. Mar 05 #6: It's worth recalling, occasionally, that the world of Sherlock Holmes wasn't only the Victorian world portrayed so carefully in the Canon; a fine way to see a different aspect of his world is a visit to the National Gallery of Art in Washington to view the exhibition "Toulouse-Lautrec and Montmartre" (which will be on display through June 12, and then at the Art Institute of Chicago from July 16 to Oct. 10). There are 250 works of art in the show, offering a splendid look at a Parisian milieu that was of interest to many visitors to the city during the last two decades of the 19th century; in "The Golden Pince-Nez" there's a mention of the case of Huret in 1894, and it is difficult to imagine that Sherlock Holmes went to Paris without spending time in Montmartre. Much of the artwork in the show is by Toulouse-Lautrec, but there also are works by Van Gogh, Manet, Degas, Picasso, and many others. "The Englishman at the Moulin Rouge" (painted by Toulouse-Lautrec in 1892) might well be a portrait of Dr. Watson (according to the catalog of the show, the model for the man was in fact a young English painter named William Warrener). The Montmartre district is specifically mentioned in the Canon (in a believably violent context) in "The Illustrious Client" (dated by most Canonical chronologists in 1902). The catalog also is of interest, with informative essays on "Toulouse-Lautrec and Montmartre: Depicting Decadence in Fin-de-Siecle Paris", "The Social Menagerie of Toulouse-Lautrec's Montmartre", and "Toulouse-Lautrec and the Culture of Celebrity", and a wealth of lavish illustrations.
150. Reported: CREATIVE HEALERS: A COLLECTION OF ESSAYS, REVIEWS, AND POEMS FROM THE PHAROS 1938-1998, edited by Edward Day Harris, Jr. (Menlo Park: Alpha Omega Alpha, 2004; 532 pp., $50.00 leather, $40.00 cloth); the contents include C. Frederick Kittle's "There's More to Doyle Than Holmes!" reprinted from the winter 1997 issue of The Pharos (the journal of the honor medical society). Fred Kittle's fine collection, exhibited at the Newberry Library in Chicago in 2003, includes four generations of Doyles and Conan Doyles. The address for Alpha Omega Alpha is 525 Middlefield Road #130, Menlo Park, CA 94025 <www.alphaomegaalpha.org>.
151. Mycroft's League is organizing the 2nd Quadragennial Running of the Philadelphia Silver Blaze, at Delaware Park on May 7 (you'll also be able to see the Kentucky Derby via simulcast from Churchill Downs); there will lunch in the Main Clubhouse and as always a chance to conduct Sherlockian handicapping. Details available from Gideon D. Hill <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>. The previous running of the Silver Blaze in the Delaware Valley was at Garden State Park in 1966, in case anyone's counting.

152. Apr 05 #1: Laurie R. King's A GRAVE TALENT (1993) won best-first-novel awards from the Mystery Writers of America and the British Crime Writers' Association, and there now are four books in her series about San Francisco Police Department homicide inspector Kate Martinelli; Laurie reports that she is about halfway through her next Martinelli novel, due next year, and that a good portion of it concerns a newly discovered Sherlock Holmes manuscript; Martinelli is (of course) scornful of the item as well as the interest among Sherlockians.
153. Laurie also has reported in her web-log that in June she will begin work on the last Mary Russell novel, in which she and her husband return to England just in time to meet a ship from Africa that is carrying a nasty contagion, sent there from the German colonies as a prelude to the upcoming conflict, that drives its victims insane with terror. Laurie notes that "Russell and Holmes die in each others arms, I'm afraid," and that the working title of the book is THE BEEKEEPER'S APPREHENSION. That was in her blog for April 1 (headed "Black Armbands"), in case you're wondering about credibility. Her web-log is at <www.laurierking.blogspot.com>.
154. Ken Lanza spotted a story about "Putting a Face Value on Celebrity Cheques" in the Financial Times (Mar. 28) with a mention of the British Cheque Collectors' Society (now the British Banking History Society) and an article on "Cheques and Sherlock Holmes"; the article is available at their web-site <www.banking-history.co.uk> with pictures of cheques from some of the banks mentioned in the Canon.
155. Reported: Peter Abraham's DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE: AN ECHO FALLS MYSTERY (New York: Laura Geringer/HarperCollins, 2005); 384 pp., $15.99); Ingrid Levin-Hill, eighth-grade Sherlock Holmes fan and amateur actress, inadvertently becomes a witness in the murder case of Cracked-up Katie, the weird lady in the rundown house on the wrong side of town. There's also a CD recorded by Mandy Siegfried ($27.95).
156. "Do you know," said Lord Minto [Governor General of Canada in 1902], "ever since I received your invitation I have been thinking of Holmes, and unconsciously I have been trying processes of deduction. For instance, I have scanned Major Maude's shoes to see if I could determine if he had been to the stables; I have even looked closely at my daughter's nails to see if she had practiced on the piano that morning. In fact, I have neglected my duties in an endeavor to learn if I have any of the talent of deduction which Sir Conan Doyle attributes to his detective. Lady Minto was convinced this morning that I was crazy when I told her the butler was learning to shave with his left hand, as his left cheek was scratched. Really, this Holmes is a fascinating man, and I am afraid that now I have seen your performance I will be a source of deep anxiety to my family and friends." Ah, they knew how to get publicity in those long-ago days, when Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon were on tour in William Gillette's play and during a oneweek run in Montreal learned that the Governor General was in town and invited him and his family and staff to see the play. They came backstage at the end of the second act, and there was an "In and Out of the Theatre" report in the N.Y. Times (Nov 30, 1902), recently spotted by Gayle Harris.
157. Apr 05 #2: The Haslemere Initiative will be welcoming visitors and locals to a literary weekend featuring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on May 6-8. The weekend will include a welcome gala dinner at the Lythe Hill Hotel and Spa on May 6, and a lecture by Philip Weller at the Haslemere Museum on May 7, followed by a lunch at Undershaw, and there will be time to tour the countryside around Hindhead. Additional information is available at <www.haslemere.com> (click on "Haslemere's Literary Weekend").
158. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a new sheet in its "Nature of America" series, this year showing a Northeast Deciduous Forest whose inhabitants include many animals mentioned in the Canon. The weasel, shown for the first time in the history of this newsletter, is mentioned in two of the stories ("The Sign of the Four" and "The Crooked Man").
159. Ken Lanza has noted a fashion report at <www.iafrica.com> praising the trench coat, "born in the mud-soaked trenches of World War I which gave it its name," and reporting that it was boosted by Hollywood stars Humphrey Bogart, Robert Mitchum, Marlene Dietrich, and Greta Garbo, and by

- politicians that included prime minister Winston Churchill and president Ronald Reagan. "Even writers like Rudyard Kipling and Arthur Conan Doyle helped to popularize the coat." Does anyone recall Conan Doyle photographed wearing a trench coat?
160. At age twelve, Mitch Cullin was given access to the largest Sherlock Holmes collection in North America, according to publicity for A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (New York: Nan A. Talese/Doubleday, 2005; 253 pp., $23.95); needless to say, the collection belonged to John Bennett Shaw, and three years later, in 1984, a photograph of the two enthusiasts appeared in USA Today. A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND is a fascinating book, set in 1947 and showing an ageing and sometimes forgetful Holmes, who visited Japan after the war and has returned to bee-keeping in Sussex; a pastiche is part of the book, which is written with style and imagination, and I wish that John had lived to enjoy a book that was born in his library twenty years ago. There's also a recording (unabridged) by Simon Jones (who has played Holmes on stage in 1998 and 2001) on audiocassettes and CDs from HighBridge ($29.95), and Cullin has an interesting web-site at <www.mitchcullin.com>.
161. Barbara C. Schaaf died on Mar. 29. She was an author and a journalist, and a life-long liberal Democrat, and a member of The South Downers and The Baker Street Pages, and helped publicize local Sherlockian activities in the Chicago-area press.
162. Antony Richards reports that Baker Street Studios Limited has purchased all of the murder-mystery publications of Breese Books. The company includes The Irregular Special Players and The Irregulars Special Press, and there's a web-site at <www.baker-street-studios.com> that also hosts the Inspector Morse Society; their postal address is Endeavour House, 170 Woodland Road, Sawston, Cambridge CB2 4DX, England. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GIANT'S HAND AND OTHER STORIES, by Matthew Booth (2004; 138 pp., £5.00/£7.50/$9.50), has Holmes solving murders from three of the unrecorded cases, in Cornwall (the Addleton tragedy), Kent (Colonel Warburton's madness), and Wiltshire (the dreadful business of the Abernety family).
163. Apr 05 #3: Bouchercon is a long-established world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, and named in honor of Anthony Boucher (a multi-talented author and a member of The Baker Street Irregulars); there were about 1,200 people (fans and authors) at Bouchercon 35 last year in Toronto and the conventions always are enjoyable. Bouchercon 36 will be in Chicago on Sept. 1-4, 2005 <www.boucherconworld.org>; Bouchercon 37 will in Madison on Sept. 28-Oct. 1, 2006 <www.bouchercon.com>; Bouchercon 38 will be in Anchorage on Sept. 27-30, 2007 <www.bouchercon2007.com>; there are rumors of Orlando and Brighton competing for 2008.
164. Chalmers Roberts died on Apr. 8. He was a journalist, and an old-fashioned generalist, and he was the Washington Post's chief diplomatic correspondent from 1953 until he retired in 1971; the biggest story of his career was the Pentagon Papers, and his threat to resign in protest if his report did not appear in the paper strengthened its resolve to publish (and he was one of the defendants named in the government's unsuccessful lawsuit against the paper). It was at a news conference with President Eisenhower in 1954 that Roberts asked the president whether military reasons were his only reasons against preventative war, and Eisenhower said: "Well, let me make it this way: if you remember, I believe it was Conan Doyle's WHITE COMPANY, there was a monk that left the church; he said there were seven reasons, and the first one was he was thrown out; they decided there was no use to recite the other six. It seems to me that when, by definition, a term is just ridiculous in itself, there is no use in going any further."
165. Tom Dunn, proprietor of The Pipe Smoker's Ephemeris, spotted the Sherlockian artwork (including a pipe, of course) on a computerized USPS first-class electronic delivery-confirmation label generated by Endicia Internet Postage.
166. George MacDonald Fraser's FLASHMAN ON THE MARCH has been published in Britain (London: HarperCollins, 2005; 336 pp., £17.99), to the great delight of Flashman's fans, and it's due in the U.S. from Knopf in November; the novel involves Flashman in the Abyssinian War of 1868, so Canonical allusions are unlikely. FLASHMAN AND THE TIGER (Oct 99 #4) dealt with Colonel Sebastian Moran, with whom Flashman had three encounters (including one in an empty house in Baker Street in 1894).
167. THE GREATEST STORIES NEVER TOLD, by Rick Beyer (New York: HarperResource/HarperCollins, 2003; 214 pp., $17.95), is subtitled "100 Tales from History to Astonish, Bewilder & Stupefy" and is based the History Channel's "Timelab 2000" series, and offers two pages on "the curious case of the doctor who gave birth to a superstar" (the doctor being Joseph Bell, and the superstar being Sherlock Holmes); it's certain not a story never told, but it might astonish, bewilder, and stupefy someone.
168. "The legal status of private detectives is unclear under China's murky judicial system," according to an article in USA Today (Apr. 14); they were banned in 1993 (partly because private companies were recruiting away too many police officers), but many stayed in business, and a Chinese newspaper reported last year that an estimated 20,000 private detectives were operating in China. One company is called FMS Commercial Consultation; the FMS stands for "fu er mo si" (Chinese for Sherlock Holmes).
169. Apr 05 #4: It has been many years since I abandoned my Erector set, and I have no idea whether some enthusiast has ever constructed anything Sherlockian with one, but Steve Rothman reports in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal than Don Redmond, who has for many years created the annual indexes for the BSI, is an avid practitioner of the art of Meccano, and you can see some of his handiwork, and a photograph of Don, at <www.kzwp.com/windmills/>. The new issue of the BSI also offers much about Julian Wolff, including a delightful memoir by his niece Lila.
170. The Smithsonian Institution highlights some of its more interesting paleontological art (including inhabitants of the Lost World) at its new web-page at <www.nmnh.si.edu/paleo/paleoart>.
171. Ken Lanza spotted a new Internet resource at <www.nndb.com>; it's an "intelligence aggregator that tracks the activities of people we have determined to be noteworthy, both living and dead," and it currently offers profiles of more than 12,000 people, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gillette, Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Jeremy Brett, and David Burke.
172. Warren Randall has created a new lapel pin honoring the symposium "Holmes Under the Arch II: The Site of the Four" (in St. Louis in May), and The Parallel Case of St. Louis. You don't need attend the symposium to buy the pin, which costs $7.50 postpaid from Warren (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
173. Robert H. Dinegar ("Henry Ward Beecher") died on Apr. 21. He was a chemist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory, an adjunct professor at the University of New Mexico, and an Episcopal priest, involved in the scientific investigation of the Shroud of Turin. He also was a faithful member of the Brothers Three of Moriarty and in 1972 composed the Sherlock Holmes Litany which was for many years recited at their meetings, and wrote about "Sherlock Holmes: Scientist and Chemist" in the Sherlock Holmes Journal in 1988. Bob received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
174. Reported: WHAT ROUGH BEAST, by H. R. Knight (New York: Dorchester/Leisure Books, 2005; 374 pp., $6.99); Conan Doyle and Houdini in 1903, involved in a battle against demonic possession.
175. Roberta Davies discovered <www.audiobooksforfree.com>, a web-site that has the Canon and other books and stories by Conan Doyle, and material by many other authors; you can listen to everything free (low fidelity) or pay for it (higher fidelity).
176. Paul Martin spotted the report that the Algonquin Hotel now is a member of the Historic Hotels of America. The program, created by the National Trust for Historic Preservation includes hotels that are at least 50 years old, listed in or eligible for the National Register of Historic Places, or recognized locally as having historical significance. More information about the program and the hotel as available at <www.historichotels.com>, where an entry on the Algonquin mentions the famous Round Table and Dorothy Parker's Vicious Circle, but not the Baker Street Irregulars, who have made the Algonquin their unofficial headquarters in January for many years.

177. Apr 05 #5: I've mentioned the Invisible Library previously (Aug 01 #3) and am glad to recommend it again; it was created by Brian Quinette in 1999 and is a collection of books found only in other books ("imaginary books, pseudobiblia, artificions, fabled tomes, libris phantastica, and all manner of books unwritten, unread, unpublished, and unfound." The URL is <www.invisiblelibrary.com>, and you will find books by Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, Challenger, and Jonathan Swift Somers III (the collection doesn't include short stories, so Somers' Sherlockian parodies aren't listed); the list is incomplete, and you're invited to tell the librarian about missing titles).
178. One of the nice things about the Internet is the opportunity to listen to radio broadcasts: National Public Radio's web-site <www.npr.org> allows you to search for "Sherlock Holmes" and hear interviews with Mark Haddon, Les Klinger, David Grann, Michael Chabon, and Mitch Cullin.
179. Brian Freemantle's THE HOLMES FACTOR (Sutton: Severn House, 2005; 313 pp., £18.99/$28.95) is the second novel in his series about Sherlock Holmes' son Sebastian, who has been sent to Russia just before the start of World War I to assess the political situation; he meets Churchill and Asquith, and Kerensky and Stalin and Rasputin, and is involved in lots of intrigue. Sherlock and Mycroft and Watson are also on hand, but in supporting roles.
180. Magda Jozsa's SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE WILD FRONTIER (Charleston: BookSurge, 2005; 303 pp., $14.99); takes Holmes and Watson through the Wild West and into encounters with desperados, Indians, and renegades. The publisher's web-site is at <www.booksurge.com>.
181. Sir John Mills died on Apr. 23. He began his acting career as a song-and-dance man in the 1920s and went on to act for decades on stage, screen, and television. He was appointed a CBE (Companion of the Order of the British Empire) in 1960, won an Oscar (best actor in a supporting role) for "Ryan's Daughter" (1970); and was knighted in 1976. And he starred as Dr. Watson (with Peter Cushing as Holmes) in the television film "The Masks of Death" (1974).
182. I reported earlier on the exhibition "Toulouse-Lautrec and Montmartre" at the National Gallery of Art in Washington (Mar 05 #6), and there's now an excellent article about the exhibition in the May issue of Smithsonian magazine with a passing mention of the assassination in 1894 of French president Sadi Carnot. Some Sherlockian scholars who believe that the culprit was Huret, the Boulevard assassin, whose tracking and arrest won for Sherlock Holmes an autograph letter of thanks from the French President and the Order of the Legion of Honour (see "The Golden-Pince Nez").
183. Caleb Carr's THE ITALIAN SECRETARY: A FURTHER ADVENTURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2005; 263 pp., $23.95) is a new pastiche by the author of THE ALIENIST and THE ANGEL OF DARKNESS; it brings Holmes and Watson to Edinburgh to assist Mycroft in defending Her Majesty against a plot that involves Holyrood and David Rizzio (who was Queen Mary's secretary and met his death at Holyrood. There's an afterword by Jon Lellenberg, who has hopes of some day reading a pastiche in which Sherlock Holmes meets Laszlo Kreizler.

184. Apr 05 #6: The Portland Press Herald reported (Apr. 24) on the discovery of 425 autographs, notes, and letters collected in the 1890s by Harry E. Burbank of Augusta, Maine, who wrote to celebrities asking for autographs. The collection was found in a shirt-box hidden away in a closet in an old house and will be sold on May 5 by auctioneer James B. Julia of Fairfield; it includes signatures of six presidents, several Civil War generals, Frederick Douglass, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Thomas Edison, and Arthur Conan Doyle. The auction house <www.juliaauctions.com> estimates the lot at $5,000-10,000.
185. Plan well ahead: "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (adapted by Steven Dietz from William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes") has been scheduled by the Arizona Theatre Company in Tucson, Mar. 4 through 25, and in Phoenix, Mar. 30 through Apr. 5, 2006; the show's a co-production with the Pasadena Playhouse, so it's likely to be seen there later in the year. According to the company's artistic director David Ira Goldstein, Dietz "cut and re-shaped and added characters from other Holmes stories."
186. Great Britain issued a set of six stamps last year, commemorating the 150th anniversary of the beginning of the Crimean War, showing photographs from a book of "Crimean Heroes" by photographers Joseph Cundall and Robert Hewitt, who set up a temporary studio at Aldershot in 1856. There are mentions of the Crimean War in five of the Sherlock Holmes stories, including "The Gloria Scott" (Mortimer, the gardener, was an army pensioner, "an old Crimean man of excellent character").
187. Forecast for July: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE KING'S GOVERNESS, by Barrie Roberts, from Severn House <www.severnhouse.com>; the latest in his series (Jun 03 #5), now involving Russian intrigue in London in 1897.
188. News from the computer world: according to a report by Sam Varghese in the Melbourne Age (Apr. 1), the Open Source Development League announced that it has decided to recruit socialite Paris Hilton to gain more exposure for its campaign for free and open source software. People need to be aware of the breadth and scope of what they have to offer, League CEO Jeremy Bleats noted, and Miss Hilton "can expose things like nobody else can." He also cautioned journalists not to "confuse our League with the Red-Headed League about which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wove a tale involving Sherlock Holmes. I have to say this because our Exposure Executive is, at the moment, a redhead."

189. May 05 #1: Last year the U.S. Postal Service authorized Stamps.com to sell personalized postage (Aug 04 #3), and more than 2.75 million stamps were sold in a two-month test run. Don Hobbs had a stamp that showed him with his granddaughter in his Sherlockian library (Sep 04 #4), but I've not heard about any stamps showing Sherlock Holmes. A second year-long test run began on May 30, and a sheet of twenty 37c stamps costs $16.99 (plus shipping).
190. Forge/Tom Doherty Associates are continuing their reissues of Carole Nelson Douglas' series about Irene Adler in paperback, with uniform cover artwork by Glenn Harrington and minor revisions and a reader's guide; the third reissue is the first volume in the series, GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES (2005).
191. Tony van Bridge died on Dec. 20, 2004. He had a long career as an actor in Britain and then in Canada, where he spent 18 years with the Stratford Festival and 30 years with the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake; it was at the Shaw Festival in 1998 and 1999 that played Corporal Gregory Brewster in Conan Doyle's play "Waterloo". In an obituary in Canadian Holmes, Trevor S. Raymond recalls a luncheon in 1998 when van Bridge happily signed memorabilia for Doyleans and Sherlockians; it was suggested that he had signed enough things, and he cheerily replied, "Nonsense! This is what an actor *dreams* of."
192. Kate Karlson reports that PBS-TV is running promos for "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" (with Rupert Everett and Ian Hart), due to air on "Mystery!" this fall.
193. This year's World Fantasy Convention will be held in Madison, Wis., on Nov. 3-6, and April and Walden Derleth will be there to accept the convention's "special recognition" award to Arkham House, founded by their father August Derleth; Arkham House published its first book in 1939, and it was his Mycroft & Moran imprint that issued collections of Derleth's Solar Pons stories. One of Arkham recent books is ARKHAM'S MASTERS OF HORROR

- (2000), edited by Peter A. Ruber, with 21 featured writers that include Vincent Starrett. You can register at WFC-Madison, Box 531, Cambridge, WI 53523, or at their web-site <www.worldfantasy.org>.
194. Further to the item (Apr 05 #6) on "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (adapted by Steven Dietz from William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes") scheduled in Tucson and Pasadena next year, the play also will be performed at the Quadrocci Powerhouse Theater in Milwaukee from Apr. 12 through May 14, 2006.
195. <www.spokennetwork.com> offers 61 Sherlockian and Doylean recordings in mp3 and WMA formats that you can download over the Internet at prices ranging from $2.98 to $10.00 (and you can listen to free samples of each of the recordings). There are three fine full-cast recordings of Canonical stories by the One Act Players (with Scot Crisp as Holmes and Glenn Carlson as Watson); and excellent readings by David Ian Davies of 53 Canonical tales, one pastiche written by Matthew Elliott, three by David Stuart Davies, and one non-Sherlockian story by Conan Doyle ("The Leather Funnel"). David Ian Davies does an excellent job with voices and accents.

196. May 05 #2: The winter 2004 issue of The Baum Bugle includes many tributes to the late Fred M. Meyer, who promoted the cause of "Oz" for almost 60 years. According to Michael Patrick Hearn reminiscences, Anthony Boucher, editor of The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction, which had just published Martin Gardner's two-part article on L. Frank Baum, challenged Jack Snow (then serving as "Royal Historian of Oz") in the April 1955 issue of F&SF to create an Oz society "based on the famous Sherlock Holmes fan club, the Baker Street Irregulars. Boucher suggested the organization be called the Oz Irregulars. Snow had been discussing just such an organization with Gardner, William Baring-Gould of Life magazine, and Fred Dannay, half of the 'Ellery Queen' writing team." It is interesting to see how many Sherlockians were involved in the creation of what became the International Wizard of Oz Club.
197. Mel Gussow died on Apr. 29. He worked for Newsweek, and moved to the N.Y. Times in 1969 as critic and cultural reporter, writing more than 4,000 reviews and articles for the paper over 35 years; his first Sherlockian review was of the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in 1974, and in recent years he wrote perceptive obituary tributes to some great Sherlockian actors.
198. The Sons of the Copper Beeches and Mycroft's League made nice arrangements for a Sherlockian weekend in Philadelphia this month, including a running of The Silver Blaze at Delaware Park, which offers an interesting look at the future of horse racing: Delaware Park has a two-story casino with 2,500 slot machines, and proceeds from the slots are used to increase the size of the purses for the races; simulcast betting also is offered for three other tracks, and Delaware Park is open year-round, regardless of whether there's racing on-site. Sherlockian handicappers were happy to find two attractively-named horses in the first and second races: Briony and Good Morning Irene (unfortunately they finished 7th and 9th). The Silver Blaze was the 5th race, with Monetary Monarch on hand and finishing 7th, well behind the winner B. Murray, who might have been favored by Sherlockians who recalled "Murray, the faithful orderly," or who observed that the horse had a silver blaze.
199. Further to the report (Apr 04 #4) about the continuing trials and tribulations of Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle lived as a child), a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (Apr. 27) reports that plans to convert the derelict house into a school and build doctors' offices in the garden have run into a funding crisis: the National Health Service may not provide the £2.8 million needed for the project.
200. Reported: Jonathan Coe's 9TH & 13TH (London: Penguin, 2005; 64 pp., £1.50); a collection of fiction and non-fiction, including an essay (published in The Guardian on Apr. 30) about his life-long obsession with Billy Wilder's film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes".
201. There will be another Sherlock Holmes Festival in Tryon, N.C. on Nov. 11-13 (317 North Trade Street, Tryon, NC 28782) (800-440-7848), and David Milner reports that The Survivors of the *Gloria Scott* plan to hold their regular monthly meeting on Nov. 14 in Greenville, S.C. (only 30 minutes by car from Tryon); David is at Box 515, Taylors, SC 29687 <dmycroft@bellsouth.net>.

202. May 05 #3: Malice Domestic XVII was enjoyable as always, with Carole Nelson Douglas as toastmaster (she was interviewed by Irene Adler and Midnight Louie) and H.R.F. Keating receiving a lifetime achievement award. There was a panel on Sherlock Holmes on Sunday, nicely moderated by Maureen Collins, who started off asking why so many people have written pastiches, with Keating, Dan Stashower, Les Klinger, Roberta Rogow, and me (I got to explain that I was the only person on the panel who hadn't written a Sherlock Holmes pastiche).
203. Malice Domestic XVIII will be held Apr. 21-23, 2006, at the Crystal Gateway Marriott in Arlington, Va., featuring Katherine Hall Page as Guest of Honor, Craig Rice as Ghost of Honor, Kate Grille as Toastmaster, Douglas G. Greene as Poirot Award Nominee, and a Lifetime Achievement Award for Robert Barnard; you can register with Malice Domestic at Box 31137, Bethesda, MD 20824 <www.malicedomestic.org>.
204. Kay Walsh died on Apr. 16. She began her acting career as a chorus girl, and appeared in her first film in 1934; she met David Lean in 1936 and they married in 1940, and she acted in more than 50 films, including "Great Expectations" (1946) and "Oliver Twist" (1948). She played Cathy Eddowes in "A Study in Terror" (1965) and Mrs. Hudson in the episode "A Motive for Murder" in the Geoffrey Whitehead television series (1981).
205. Reported: a new edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Hoboken: Melville House, 2004; 160 pp., $9.00); in their "Art of the Novella" series.
206. Legend Films <www.legendfilms.net> specializes in colorizing old black-and-white films, and the company has added the Rathbone/Bruce "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1943) and "Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green" (1945) to its list of DVDs ($9.98 each). "Terror by Night" and "Dressed to Kill" (both 1946) are scheduled for September. These same four films were colorized in the 1980s and issued on cassettes and then syndicated on television, in the days when colorization technology was in its infancy.
207. Our new set of postage stamps honoring American Scientists includes mathematician John von Neumann, whose article (written with Oskar Morgenstern) on "Some Elementary Games" in their THEORY OF GAMES AND ECONOMIC BEHAVIOR (1944) analyzed Holmes flight from Moriarty (in "The Final Problem").
208. Last month Ted Bergman donated his collection of Swedish Sherlockiana (420 books and about 600 newspaper and magazine articles) to the Svenska Deckarbiblioteket (Swedish Library of Crime and Detective Fiction) in Eskilstuna (about 100 kilometers west of Stockholm); he wants to keep his collection intact and available for academic research.
209. "My esthetic appreciation of the Sherlock Holmes mysteries stems from their reflection, both in theme and in plot structure, of the idea of rationality," Minnesota high school senior Christian Tarsney wrote in his essay on "Truth or beauty" in the Kids Philosophy Slam. He won first prize in the national contest this month, and you can read his essay at their web-site at <www.philosophyslam.org/c\_tarsney.html>.
210. May 05 #4: Sylvian Hamilton died on Feb. 28. Collectors will recall the catalogs of Sherlockiana she issued in the 1980s and the early 1990s, from England and then from Scotland, where she retired from the book business and became an author, with three books about a former Crusader who turns detective in the Middle Ages. Sylvian had a gift for interesting opening sentences: "In the crypt of the Abbey Church at Hallowdene the monks were boiling their bishop" (THE BONE PEDDLAR), "There was only one witness, and he was already dead, but that didn't matter, he could still give evidence" (THE PENDRAGON BANNER) and "Countess Judith kept her husband's head in a box" (THE GLEE-MAIDEN).

211. Don Hobbs has discovered another translation of Sherlock Holmes stories in another language: Interlingua. It's an artificial language that has been used for decades, and there was an Interlingua-English dictionary published in 1951. CINQUE AVENTURAS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES, published in 1997 (140 pp., E10.00) has five stories ("Un scandalo in Bohemia", "La liga a capillos rubie", "La banda maculate", "Le fascie jalne", and "La figuras dansante"); it's available from Servicio de Libros U.M.I. (Casa Postale 4035, NL-9701 EA, Groningen, Netherlands) <www.interlingua.com/libros/brogod/htm>. And the non-Sherlockian story "La horror altissime" is available without charge as an e-book at <www.interlingua.nu/elibros/Horror.pdf>. The foreword to the dictionary states that there were five earlier international language systems: Esperanto, Ido, Esperanto II, Occidental, and Latino sine Flexione (there are two Esperanto translations known, but nothing reported for the other four).
212. I sometimes explain to e-mail correspondents that there are two rules: if someone tells you to forward something to everyone, don't; and if you can't be bothered checking for hoaxes, don't forward messages to me. The Urban Legends Reference Pages at <www.snopes.com> is an excellent place to check for hoaxes, and (thanks to Michael E. Bragg) the site discusses two stories about Conan Doyle. One is that "magician and escape artist Harry Houdini died from appendicitis brought about by his being punched in the stomach by a college student" (they conclude that the story, told by Conan Doyle and others, is false: "although some of the basic facts of this description are correct, the assumption of cause and effect is not"). And the second story is that "a medical school instructor lectures the class on the importance of taste as a diagnostic tool and demonstrates his point by conducting a diabetes test which involves dipping his finger into a flask of urine and licking it" (they report that "the origination of this story has often been attributed to Dr. Joseph Bell, the Edinburgh University instructor on whom Sir Arthur Conan Doyle modeled the character Sherlock Holmes," with credit to Harold Emery Jones, who wrote an article on "The Original of Sherlock Holmes" in the Jan. 9, 1904, issue of Collier's).
213. An exhibition on "The Quintessential Ellery Queen: Celebrating the Centennial of Frederic Dannay and Manfred B. Lee" will be on view through June 30 at the Butler Library at Columbia University in New York. Dannay, Lee, and Queen were all born in 1905, and Janet Maslin reported in the N.Y. Times on May 6 on a symposium at the Library, with speakers such as Lawrence Block, Francis M. Nevins, and Otto Penzler. Frederic Dannay was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (as "The Dying Detective"), and Ellery Queen's THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1944) was a landmark Sherlockian book.
214. May 05 #5: Jim Suszynski has spotted Sherlock Holmes on the cover of (and inside as a minor character) the comic book THE SIMPSONS FUTURAMA CROSSOVER CRISIS II (Bongo Comics Group, 2005, $2.99): "If you are just joining us, a vortex has opened up next to the New New York Public Library a few hours ago. Apparently bringing every literary character ever written about...to life!"
215. Peter Bramley died on Apr. 12. He was the first art director of National Lampoon, an editor of humor magazines, and creator of underground comics. He also was an illustrator, and his Sherlockian artwork can be seen in Michaela Muntean's THE DETECTIVE'S WORD PUZZLE BOOK (1981).
216. Bob Thomalen has confirmed that "Springtime in Baker Street" will be held in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Apr. 22-23, 2006. Those who attended "Autumn in Baker Street" in years past know how much fun the events have been. More information will be available anon from Bob and Terry.
217. Roger Johnson launched The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's newsletter The District Messenger, on Dec. 1, 1982, and this month reached the 252nd issue, reporting (as always) the latest Sherlockian news from the U.K. and elsewhere; the first 100 issues (through July 23, 1990) are now available on a CD-ROM in non-searchable PDF format for £6.00 ($15.00) postpaid, from Roger at 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford, Essex CM2 6DE, England.
218. Roger has reported that in view of the tsunami disaster Rod Baser has postponed his plans (Sep 04 #1) for a guided tour to India and the Andaman Islands in October; his web-site at <www.sherlockholmesinindia.com> offers an interesting look at his research on "Sherlock Holmes in India".
219. Edgar B. Smith ("Dr. Moore Agar") died on May 12. Ben was a distinguished dermatologist, and for many years a member of The Sir James Saunders Society; he was co-author with Herman Beerman of an article on their Sherlockian specialty in the International Journal of Dermatology in 1977, and he served as president of the American Academy of Dermatology. He also was a founder of The Strollers on the Strand in Galveston and The Gila Lizards of the Arid and Repulsive Desert in Albuquerque, and received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1981.
220. Stephen Leacock's parody "Maddened by Mystery; or, The Defective Detective" was first published in his NONSENSE NOVELS (1911); it was included in Ellery Queen's THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1944), and there's a new edition of NONSENSE NOVELS (New York: New York Review Books Classics, 2004; 160 pp., $16.95) with an introduction by Daniel Handler (author of the Lemony Snicket series).
221. Further to the report (Jan 05 #3) on the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh celebrating its 500th anniversary in 2005, the Scottish National Portrait Gallery will include a rare picture of Joseph Bell in an exhibition on "The Healing Touch" from June 9 until Nov. 27. The exhibition will feature hundreds of portraits and photographs covering the history of medicine in Scotland, according to a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (May 17), and the portrait of "Arthur Conan Doyle's inspiration for Sherlock Holmes is likely to be among the most popular images."
222. May 05 #6: Jim Weiss has moved to Virginia, and he continues to offer his excellent recordings for younger audiences on CDs ($14.95) and cassettes ($10.95); his titles include SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR CHILDREN ("The Mazarin Stone", "The Speckled Band", "The Musgrave Ritual", and "The Blue Carbuncle") and MYSTERY! MYSTERY! (with "The Red-Headed League" and tales by Poe and Chesterton); Greathall Productions, Box 5061, Charlottesville, VA 22905 (800-477-6234) <www.greathall.com>.
223. Frank Gorshin died on May 17. He was a character actor and a nightclub performer as an impersonator when he was given the role of the Riddler in 1966 in the ABC-TV "Batman" series, and he went on to star in Las Vegas and on stage and screen. In the film "Record City" (1977) he played Chameleon, a criminal who concealed his activities behind various disguises, including a Sherlockian detective.
224. <www.pulpgen.com/pulp/downloads/index.html> is the URL for the Online Pulps site, at which Larry Estep and John Locke offer almost 300 pulp-magazine stories, including Vincent Starrett's "The Mid-Watch Tragedy" from Short Stories June 10, 1925 (a Jimmie Lavender story) and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "An Intimate Study of Sherlock Holmes" from Detective Story Magazine, Jan. 15, 1918 (reprinted from The Strand Magazine, Dec. 1917).
225. Further to the earlier report (Feb 05 #7) on plans for a second printing of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, with corrections of errors in the first printing (which would make it a second edition), it's easy to identify: the string of numerals from one to zero on the title-page verso runs from two to zero. Les has noted that with more than 2,000 footnotes and almost 1,900 pages, errors were inevitable, and he continues to welcome word of errors not yet reported. Those who would prefer not to buy the revised second printing (which is now available) can find a list of errata at Les' web-site <www.annotatedsherlockholmes.com>, and you can check the website from time to time to see additions to the list.
226. It is possible, of course, that there will be a third printing with additional corrections in November, when the third volume (with the four long in the set) is published. And there's more news: THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES has been nominated for an Anthony (for best non-fiction) at Bouchercon; the winners will be announced at the convention in September.
227. Sherlock Holmes had occasion to search Mary Russell's hand-bag, and "turned it upside-down on the bed: money purse, handkerchief, note-book, pen-knife, pistol, and investigative tool-kit--all the usual paraphernalia and nothing out of the ordinary." That's one of the delightful sentences in

Laurie R. King's LOCKED ROOMS (New York: Bantam Books, 2005; 400 pp., $24.00); it is the new title in the Mary Russell series, set in San Francisco in 1924 after their visit to India in THE GAME. Russell intends a last look at her family home, but she and Holmes (with the assistance of Dashiell Hammett) become involved in a series of mysteries concerning her parents; good characterization, interesting plotting, and a nice sense of time and place.

228. Jun 05 #1: Autograph dealer Gary Zimet of Moments in Time is offering the 34-page manuscript of "The Greek Interpreter" for sale (on behalf of owner David Karpeles), for $565,000. Zimet's web-site is at <www.momentsintime.com>, and his telephone number is 845-497-7373.
229. Phil Attwell has noted an offer from The Book People (Parc Menai, Bangor, LL57 4FB, United Kingdom <www.thebookpeople.com> of "The Sherlock Holmes Collection": ten Penguin paperback (the nine volumes of the Canon plus THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES edited by Richard Lancelyn Green) for £9.99 (deeply discounted from the £57.90 list price of the set).
230. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE KING'S GOVERNESS, by Barrie Roberts (Sutton: Severn House, 2005, 186 pp., £18.99) (New York: Severn House; $28.95), is the 8th in his series of novel-length pastiches; it's set in London during the Diamond Jubilee in 1897 and involves Diana Fordeland (who bears a striking resemblance to Anna Leonowens) and a battle against evil Tsarist agents. The publisher's web-site is at <www.severnhouse.com>.
231. Helen E. Heinrich died on June 19. She was an assistant professor at Adelphi University when she reported on her "Reise nach Reichenbach" in The Baker Street Journal in 1987; she presided over The Long Island Cave Dwellers and was an active member of Sherlockian societies in the New York area, and "Lady Hilda Trelawney Hope" in The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
232. The latest issue of Sherlockiana (published three times a year by the Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark) has an article about The Sherlock Holmes Pub in Aarhus, and other Sherlockian news from Denmark; the pub's web-site is at <www.sherlock-holmes.dk>.
233. "They go in not because they need any certain volume but because they feel that there may be some book that needs them." That's a quote from Christopher Morley at the web-site for the Third Annual Kerrytown Bookfest, to be held on Sept. 11 at the Ann Arbor [Mich.] Farmer's Market. This year the BookFest will focus on mystery writers, and there will be a Sherlock Holmes Look Alike Contest judged by Sherlockian author Loren D. Estleman. There's a web-site at <www.kerrytownbookfast.org>. Thanks to Tom Biblewski for the report.
234. The Sherlock Holmes Festival scheduled in Tryon, N.C. on Nov. 11-13 (May 05 #3) now has a web-site at <www.sherlockholmesfestival.com>, or you can contact them at 317 North Trade Street, Tryon, NC 28782 (800-440-7848). David Milner reports that the festival will feature Henry Zecher and his new biography of William Gillette.
235. DEADHOUSE: LIFE IN A CORONER'S OFFICE, by John Temple (Jackson: University Press of Mississippi, 2005; 177 pp., $28.00), offers an interesting look at forensic pathology in Pittsburgh's Allegheny County Coroner's Office in the summer of 2000, and at the pathologists and interns who worked there, and he does not neglect Sherlock Holmes' contributions to the science; the book is not for the squeamish, but it's an excellent account of the real science on which the "CSI" television shows are based.
236. Jun 05 #2: What has 4 brains, 24 eyes, and stingers that can kill you in a minute flat? Not the lion's mane, but rather the box jellyfish (according to Paul Raffaele's article in the June issue of Smithsonian magazine). "On a pain scale of 1 to 10, it rated between 15 and 20," was how Australian zoologist Jamie Seymour described his encounter with one of the less venomous species; they're under careful study in northern Australia, and it's possible they can be found in others areas of the world.
237. Ken Lanza spotted the TVNow offer of a "Mystery DVD Set of 50 Movies" on 12 double-sided DVDs for $28.00 plus shipping; the movies include eight Sherlockian films (1933-1946), and the address is TVNow, Box 2247, Greensboro, NC 27402 (800-577-3492) <www.tv-now.com>.
238. Charles McGrath commented on "a vast and ever-growing trove of serious and semiserious Holmes scholarship," in a long story about "What Makes Him the Supersleuth?" in the N.Y. Times (May 20). "Much of this last is inspired by an obsessive pursuit known as 'the game,'" he noted, "in which dedicated and slightly batty fans insist on pretending that Holmes and Watson were real people."
239. "That painting was by Jean Baptiste Greuze," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Valley of Fear"). Greuze's "Head of a Woman, in Profile and Turned to the Right" (in red chalk, circa 1777) is included in an exhibition "From Callot to Greuze: French Drawings from the Weimar" (from the Goethe National Museum in Weimar) at the Frick Collection through Aug. 7. The Frick is at 4 East 70th Street in New York <www.frick.org>, and there are three paintings by Greuze in its permanent collection.
240. Thos. Kent Miller's THE GREAT DETECTIVE AT THE CRUCIBLE OF LIFE (Holicong: Wildside Press, 2005; 235 pp., $35.00 cloth, $15.95 paper) is an Allan Quatermain pastiche, involving a young Sherlock Holmes, Richard Burton, Danny Dravot, and Peachy Carnehan (among others); it's a prequel to his SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD (Oct 91 #3).
241. Herbert Warren Wind died on May 30. He was the dean of American golf writers and began writing for The New Yorker in 1941; he moved to Sports Illustrated in 1954 and returned to The New Yorker in 1962. "Silver Blaze" was included in the three volumes of GREAT STORIES FROM THE WORLD OF SPORT that he edited with Peter Schwed in 1958.
242. "Dan Scott--the evil epicenter of the WB's 'One Tree Hill'--tells his son, Lucas, that Professor Moriarty is his favorite 'Sherlock Holmes' character. Lucas reminds Dan that Moriarty was the villain. Dan says that depends on your interpretation." That's according to Mike Battaglini in the N.Y. Post (May 24), in a review kindly forwarded by John Baesch. If anyone knows the episode with this exchange, please let me know.
243. HOLMES, by Omaha Perez (from O-P-P, June 2005, $3.50), is the first of four issues in a new comic-book mini-series; "a vicious skewering of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic literary creations, this Sherlock Holmes has more in common with Iggy Pop than Basil Rathbone" (according to the author). His address is Box 2013, Redondo Beach, CA 90278 <www.o-p-p.ws>.

244. Jun 05 #3: Tony Harries, who was Sherlock Holmes' secretary for two years at Abbey House in the 1990s, and then toured the U.S., has sent his regards to those he met. He's now a teacher in a boarding school where he "talks to students about Sherlock Holmes (even when they don't want to listen)," and still enjoys travel; his two-year-old daughter is named Callie, "after the lovely town of Calistoga" in California. Tony has written four (non-Sherlockian) children's books, one of which (ZEEGPAW) is available for $10.00 as an eBook at <www.ebookad.com>.
245. Leon Askin died on June 3. He worked as a cabaret artist in Vienna in the 1930s, fled Nazi persecution, and acted in many American films and on television; he was best known as Gen. Albert Burkhalter on "Hogan's Heroes" in the 1960s, and he played the chauffeur Charles in "Sherlock Holmes und das Halsband des Todes" (1962).
246. Victoria Gill has retired from the Toronto Reference Library, where she has served as curator of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collections since 1991, offering a kind welcome to Sherlockians and Doyleans. Until her replacement is announced, Bob Coghill (who is a reference librarian as well as a member of The Bootmakers of Toronto and The Baker Street Irregulars), in addition to his other duties, will be in charge of maintaining and building the collection; his e-mail address is <bcoghill@torontopubliclibrary.ca>.

247. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Victoria's article about her last scheduled tour of the collection, a nice photograph of Victoria and Bob, and Peter Calamai's discussion of American slang as found in Conan Doyle's stories and notebooks. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth, at 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca> <www.acdfriends.org/>.
248. "Three key facts define Cru: its wine list is world-class; its chef, Shea Gallante, is among the most gifted in the city; and its location, on the ground floor of a handsome apartment building a few blocks north of Washington Square, is notorious for the speed with which fine restaurants wither and die there, like exotic plants in unsuitable soil, a phenomenon that Cru seems uncomfortably aware of." That's the opening of a (favorable) review of the restaurant in The New Yorker (May 30), and for those who have not yet guessed the address of that apartment building, it's 24 Fifth Avenue, where (in the ballroom) The Baker Street Irregulars held their annual dinners from 1987 to 1998, and Saturday cocktail parties from 1987 to 1995. The ballroom also is where Andrew Jay Peck and Karen Gurian were married, and the Baker Street Kinematograph met, in Andy's apartment upstairs. I'm not aware of any plans for a historical marker, but there may be one someday noting the building's Sherlockian connections.
249. From David Horspool's review of Umberto Eco's THE MYSTERIOUS FAME OF QUEEN LOANA (in The Sunday Times, June 5): "The novel's opening pages are a giddy display of the disconcerting effects of a lifetime of reading crowding in on an otherwise blank consciousness. Within a short space, Eco invokes the works of T. S. Eliot, Edgar Allan Poe, Conan Doyle, Georges Simenon, and Agatha Christie; the literary torrent continues with Hermann Hesse and Herman Melville, Oliver Sacks and Robert Louis Stevenson."

250. Jun 05 #4: Mike Berdan reports that his children are enjoying the "Which Way USA?" puzzle books and maps offered by Highlights for Children (Box 18201, Columbus, OH 43218) (800-962-3661) <www.highlights.com>; subscribers pay $7.40 (postpaid) per state, and the puzzle-book characters include a hound named Baskerville who "sniffs out important clues and can help you find hidden objects."
251. Bob Thomalen reports that the Doubletree Hotel in Tarrytown is now accepting reservations for "Springtime in Baker Street" on Apr. 22-23, 2006, and he notes that you can save money by teaming up with someone and sharing a room; there's no registration fee for the conference, and you can reserve rooms with a credit card, and at least 20% of the rooms have already been booked. There will be eight vendor's tables (at no charge to the vendors), and it's first-come first-served for vendor registration. More information is available from Bob at (845-225-2445) <the3garridebs@suscom.net>.
252. Michael Billington died on June 6. He started working as an actor at the Windmill Theatre in London, and went on to a wide variety of parts on stage and television; he was tested often for James Bond but never was cast, and he played Lever in "Magnum, P.I.: Holmes Is Where the Heart Is" (1984). Ed Bishop died on June 8. His professional acting career began in 1961 and he worked on television, stage, screen, and radio. He played Joseph Stangerson in the Cushing/Stock version of "A Study in Scarlet" for BBC radio in 1968, Marvin in "The Baker Street Boys" for BBC television in 1968, Enoch J. Drebber in the Merrison/Williams BBC Radio 4 broadcast of Bert Coules' adaptation of "A Study in Scarlet" (1989) and Von Bork's agent in "His Last Bow" (1994).
253. Ron Fish and Ben and Sue Vizoskie have launched a Sherlockian calendar at <www.sherlockiancalendar.homestead.com> where societies can list meetings and events, and where people can find out what's happening where and when. If you would like to have something listed, Ron is at <ronf404@aol.com>.
254. Chris Martin is "married to a movie star and is a fan of Woody Allen movies (as well as Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories), but has no plans to embark on a film career of his own." From Dan DeLuca's interview in the Philadelphia Inquirer (on June 5) with the front man for the band Coldplay; the famous movie star is Gwyneth Paltrow.
255. "Belly dancers and Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts will be on hand Wednesday to kick off the Tigard Public Library's Adult Reading Program," according to an item in the Portland Oregonian (May 26). The belly dancers got things moving and shaking with performances and refreshments, and then members of The Noble and Most Singular Order of the Blue Carbuncle presented speakers on a variety of topics related to Sherlock Holmes and the Victorian Era.
256. Nash Entertainment has hired Julie Golden to write the screenplay for a movie "inspired by the many letters sent from all over the world to Sherlock Holmes' London address, 221B Baker St., asking the great detective for help in solving real-life crimes," according to a report in Variety (June 21). The film "will center on a man living at that address who decides to take on a case from one of the letters. In becoming a detective his whole life is turned upside down."

257. Jun 05 #5: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists gathered for drinks and dinner at The Joyce on 4th in Calgary on June 22, at the end of the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, and were welcomed by Jeff Campbell and Charles and Kris Prepolec representing the locals (The Singular Society of the Baker Street Dozen). We will dine next at the Alta Club (100 East South Temple) in Salt Lake City on Oct. 19 during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. Our tradition is to discourage scholarly papers, quizzes, and slide shows, with the agenda consisting entirely of toasts (some scholarly, but many not). Fans of Sarah Andrews' mystery series will be happy to know that her geologistdetective Em Hansen will be going next to the Antarctic, since that's where Sarah will be traveling in November, funded by the National Science Foundation's Antarctic Artists and Writers Program.
258. Trude Marlen died on June 9. She began her film career in 1933 and acted in her last film in 2001, and she was Maria Iretzkaja in "Die Graue Dame" (1937). Ron Randell died on June 11. He began his acting career on Australian radio in the 1930s, moved to the stage in 1937, to films in 1946, and then to television, and in 1975 he was the second actor to play James Larrabee in the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in New York. Jonathan Adams died on June 13. He acted on stage and then in films and television beginning in 1965, and he played Jonas Oldacre in the Granada version of "The Norwood Builder" (1985).
259. The Iowa Summer Rep's festival of plays written by Ken Ludwig will include his "Postmortem" (a mystery featuring William Gillette and set at his home in Connecticut), through July 24 at Iowa University's Theatre Building in Iowa City (800-533-4692) <www.iowa.edu/~theatre/production/summerrep.htm>.
260. "The Baker Street Irregulars have a claim to fame," their web-site reports, "they are the biggest band in Preston." That's Preston in Lancashire, and there are nine people in the pop band (there were only four when the band had its first gig at The Golden Cross on Feb. 5, 2003), and their web-site is at <www.thebakerstreetirregulars.com>. Four of their songs can be heard at <www.hxcmp3.com>. Thanks to Ken Lanza for spotting news of the band.
261. The American Film Institute's "100 Years" series reached "100 Movie Quotes" this year, with a jury of 1,500 film artists, critics, and historians selecting from a list of 400 nominations. "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn" (from "Gone with the Wind") was #1, and "Elementary, my dear Watson" (from "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes") was #65; "Gentlemen, you can't fight in here! This is the War Room!" (from "Dr. Strangelove") was #64, and "Get your stinking paws off me, you damned dirty ape" (from "Planet of the Apes") was #66. You can read all about it at <www.afi.com>.

262. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has a report by Julie McKuras on the recent gift of Sherlockiana from Dale L. Walker, John Bergquist's "50 Years Ago" discussion of Vincent Starrett and a 1955 visit to Chicago by Raymond Chandler, and an update on the collections from curator Tim Johnson; you can request a copy of the newsletter from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
263. Jun 05 #6: Dean Clark reported Ken Waight's "Lying in Ponds" comments on "Challenging the Pundits" at <www.lyinginponds.com>, on evaluating the accuracy (not the partisanship) of pundits; Waight suggests that bloggers could submit challenges, to which others (and the pundits) could respond. As an illustration he chose William Safire's mention in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 24, 2002) of "the failure of a dog named Silver Blaze to bark" in a Sherlock Holmes story, accompanied by Waight's (invented) defense and Safire's correction (Feb. 7, 2002) after he heard from "no fewer than 753 irate Holmes fans."
264. Forecast: ARTHUR & GEORGE, by Julian Barnes, due from Jonathan Cape in July (352 pp., £17.99); it's a novel based on Conan Doyle's investigation of the George Edalji case. Barnes' web-site is at <www.julianbarnes.com>.
265. Further to the earlier report (Feb 05 #7) on plans for a second printing of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, with corrections of errors in the first printing (which would make it a second edition), it's easy to identify: the string of numerals from one to zero on the title-page verso runs from two to zero. Les has noted that with more than 2,000 footnotes and almost 1,900 pages, errors were inevitable, and he continues to welcome word of errors not yet reported. Those who would prefer not to buy the revised second printing (which is now available) can find a list of errata at Les' web-site <www.annotatedsherlockholmes.com>, and you can check the website from time to time to see additions to the list.
266. The Sound of the Baskervilles have celebrated their 25th anniversary with a lapel pin ($10.00 postpaid to non-members) and a paperweight ($25.00 postpaid to non-members); from David Haugen (3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332)
267. Forecast: THE MAN FROM BEYOND, by Gabriel Brownstein (due from W. W. Norton in September; 320 pp., $23.95); a novel based on the conflict between Conan Doyle and Houdini over the medium Margery. The author will be reading and signing at the Three Lives Bookstore (154 West 10th Street, New York) on Sept. 29; the Odyssey Bookshop (9 College Street, South Hadley) on Oct. 5; and at the Community Bookstore (143 Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn) on Oct. 6.
268. The British Library publishes a monthly newsletter "What's On", which notes that The Great Omar III ("The Most Remarkable Specimen of Binding Ever Produced") will be on display beginning July 18. There's a great (non-Sherlockian) story involved, and it begins with a magnificent jewelled binding of the Rubiyat of Omar Khayyam made by Sangorski & Sutcliffe that was lost with the Titanic in 1912. Sutcliffe's nephew, Stanley Bray, having decided to recreate the firm's masterpiece, worked in his spare time from 1932 to 1939, using the original design, and more than 1000 gems, 5000 colored inlays, and more than 50 square feet of gold leaf; this copy was destroyed by bombing in 1941. After he retired, Bray spent 4000 hours binding, tooling and reattaching the salvaged jewels; his widow died last year, bequeathing The Great Omar III to the British Library.

269. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London had a fine time on its "Making a Beeline to Switzerland" excursion on June 15-23, and if you have access to the Internet you can see for yourself what it was like at the web-site of The Sherlock Holmes Society of France at <www.sshf.com/index.php3>: there's an English version for those who don't read French, and a link to a sequence of photographs, which in turn has a link to a report by Swiss Radio International, which provides a link to a 4-minute video "Sherlock fans fall for Switzerland". And John Bergquist has reported many more photographs posted at <www.photopress.ch/global/Search.do?what=Sherlock+Holmes&x=10&y=15>.
270. "People with bigger brains are smarter than their smaller brained counterparts," according to a study by Virginia Commonwealth University researcher Michael A. McDaniel, who reported that in the brain-volume literature there are two general categories of brain-volume measures. The first consists of measures of the external size of the head, such as the circumference of the head, and the second consists of measures of brain volume with an MRI scan. "Shades of the Alpha Inn," noted Wendell Cochran, who spotted the press release at <www.vcu.edu/uns/Releases/2005/june/061705.html>. McDaniel's paper, published in the magazine Intelligence (2005, v. 33, p. 339-346) does not cite "The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle".
271. Warren Randall spotted a report on "Sherlock for Homes", and annual service event organized by the Creighton University chapter of Alpha Phi Omega; on Apr. 23, students spent part of the day collecting non-perishable food and other items from Omaha residents for donation to local charities.
272. The California Artists Radio Theatre, at <www.calartistsradiotheatre.org>, was founded more than 50 years ago by Peggy Webber, who adapted, produced, and directed the company's productions of Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" and Conan Doyle's story "Selecting a Ghost". Webber worked on the "Sherlock Holmes" radio series in the 1940s and has had a long career on stage, screen, radio, and television; CART's shows were performed in the Cinegrill of the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, and they're delightful, and available on 2 cassettes or CDs from Oasis Audio (289 South Main Place, Carol Stream, IL 60188) (800-323-2500) <www.oasisaudio.com> for $17.99 (plus shipping). David Warner (Sherlock Holmes), William Windom (Dr. John Watson), and Samantha Eggar (Alice Faulkner) star in "Sherlock Holmes", and Ian Whitcomb (Mr. D'Odd) in "Selecting a Ghost".
273. Paul Brundage reminds me that people with access to the Internet might benefit from using Google Alerts: go to <www.google.com> and click on "more" and then on "alerts" to tell Google to let you know when web-sites mention specific words or phrases.
274. CURIOS INCIDENTS 2 (Calgary: Mad for a Mystery, 2003; 150 pp., $15.00) is edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec, and an excellent successor to their CURIOS INCIDENTS (Jul 02 #2), with seven new Sherlockian stories and artwork by Philip Cornell. The publisher is at 10 Sanderling Close NW, Calgary, AB T3K 2Z7, Canada, and postpaid prices are $20.00 (to the U.S.)/CA$27.00 (Canada)/$25.00 (elsewhere); please pay by check or money order. Charles also has fine web-site at <www.bakerstreetdozen.com>.
275. Jul 05 #2: Evan Hunter died on July 6. THE BLACKBOARD JUNGLE (1954) was his first novel, and in 1956, writing as Ed McBain, he launched his long "87th Precinct" series, essentially inventing the American police procedural; he won the Mystery Writers of America's Grand Master Award for lifetime achievement in 1986, and in 1998 became the first American to receive the Diamond Dagger Award from the Crime Writers Association of Great Britain. McBain's "87th Precinct" novel THE HECKLER (1960) has both cops and crooks acknowledging use of a plot from a Sherlock Holmes story, and he wrote an introduction for Balantine's paperback edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (1975).
276. Rodger Garrick-Steele (Feb 05 #4) is in the news again: an article in the [Plymouth] Western Morning News (May 11) reports that Garrick-Steele has applied to the Church of England for permission to carry out a partial "endoscopic" exhumation of Fletcher Robinson's body, which would coincide with the 100th anniversary of his death in 1907 and might provide evidence that he died of typhoid (as his death certificate states) or of poison (at the hands of Conan Doyle, according to Garrick-Steele's long-standing claims). Garrick-Steele is working with criminologist Paul Spiring, who says that he has "irrefutable" proof that Conan Doyle was a plagiarist. But (according to the Glasgow Herald on July 27) the parochial church council at St. Andrew's

- Church in Ipplepen has objected: the Rev. Ian Eglin, rector of Ipplepen, said that "people think this is being driven by money because a TV company wants to make a film about it and people want to write books, and they don't think that that is sufficient reason to support this."
277. THE GRAVEN IMAGES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is Bill Dorn's colorful calendar for 2006, with daily entries noting Canonical events of interest, and monthly illustrations in full color of Sherlockian sculptures, walking sticks, and the like. $16.95 postpaid (or $17.95 to Canada or $20.95 elsewhere), and checks can be sent to William S. Dorn at 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210; his web-site's at <www.thesherlockstore.com>.
278. Ken Lanza reports that "The West End Horror" (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from Nicholas Meyer's novel) has been scheduled at the Albany Civic Theater, Sept. 9-25 ("Holmes & Watson meet Gilbert & Sullivan", Shaw, Wilde, and more," according to an announcement). Box 6172, Albany, NY 12206 (518-462-1297) <www.albanycivictheater.org>.
279. James Lipton's AN EXALTATION OF LARKS: THE ULTIMATE EDITION (New York: Viking, 1993; 336 pp., $16.00) is still in print, and worth mentioning again: first published in 1968, revised in 1977 and 1991, the book explores "the venereal game" (which is not quite what you may think it is). Lipton notes in his introduction that Conan Doyle once played the game, and quotes at length from SIR NIGEL, in which young Nigel demonstrates his knowledge of collective nouns, such as a cete of badgers, a skulk of foxes, etc.
280. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) notes that THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 10 now is available, offering 82 pages of humor, pastiche, research, scholarship, poetry, conjecture, and artwork by members of The Hounds of the Internet. $14.00/CA$17.00/£8.00/€12.00/AU$13.50 postpaid by air; payment in currency or by PayPal to <bbarnes@ozemail.com.au> preferred, but checks (made out to R. W. Barnes) are acceptable.
281. Jul 05 #3: Byron Press died on July 9. He was an author, and a publisher who specialized in graphic novels and science fiction. Preiss' most Sherlockian title was the graphic novel (illustrated by Ralph Reese) SON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE WOMAN IN RED (1977); and Philip Jose Farmer's THE GRAND ADVENTURE (Berkley, 1984) and Michael Hardwick's THE REVENGE OF THE HOUND (Villard, 1987) were published under the Byron Preiss imprint.
282. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" stars Rupert Everett as Sherlock Holmes and Ian Hart as Dr. Watson; it aired in Britain on Dec. 26 and in Canada on Dec. 27 last year, and at long last it has been scheduled by PBS-TV on "Masterpiece Theatre" on Oct. 23.
283. Australians saw the program on July 24, and Jane Fraser had an item in the [Sydney] Australian (July 21) on Sydney jazz musician Dick Hughes, an "old mate" of Rupert Everett. Hughes' father Richard Hughes founded a Sherlockian society in Japan in the 1950s, and in 1956 was sent by Ian Fleming to Moscow, where Hughes interviewed British spies Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess. Everett has portrayed Burgess in a documentary, Fleming in a James Bond special, and now Sherlock Holmes. And Dick Hughes' daughter Christa sang at Everett's birthday party in Paris.
284. Andrew Malec reports that the City of Portsmouth has established a web-site at <www.portsmouthand.co.uk/history/213.htm> that's devoted to Richard Lancelyn Green's Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, which he bequeathed to Portsmouth (Aug 04 #2). The first issue of a quarterly newsletter is available at the web-site; Portsmouth hopes to host an introductory exhibition next year and a more substantial display in 2007, and will welcome funding and other support for the collection. If you don't have access to the Internet you can ask to be on their mailing list; the contact is Mark Wright, ECCS 1st Floor, Civic Offices, Guildhall Square, Portsmouth PO1 2AD, England.
285. "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" aired on BBC-2 on July 27, to mixed reviews. The 90-minute program was David Pirie's version of Conan Doyle's life and career, dramatic but often quite fictional (Pirie is the author of the "Murder Rooms" series), and the show featured Douglas Henshall (Arthur Conan Doyle) and Brian Cox (Dr. Joseph Bell). The ratings offer an interesting look at what people watch in Britain: according to Digital Spy, the early figures for the show were 2.63 million viewers (12.6% of the people watching television at the time). The most popular program that night was "Coronation Street", with 9.54 million viewers (47.1%). The Nielsen Ratings in the U.S. have "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" as the top-rated show on July 28, with 8.9 million viewers (15%). Do the numbers: the potential viewing audience for "CSI" was about 59 million, and for "Coronation Street" about 20 million; the British are more likely to be watching television than the Americans (the United Kingdom has about 60 million people, and the U.S. about 295 million people).
286. Peter Ashman has noted an interesting web-site at <www.waybackmachine.org>, where a search for "sherlock holmes" leads to a song called "Changing Sherlock Holmes" recorded by Sockeye, described as "a one of legendary retarded punk band, bad sound, bad songs and bad humor." Sockeye's leader singer is Eric Stacener, who seems to have written the song, whose lyrics are pretty much unintelligible (if anyone can transcribe them, please report on it).

287. Jul 05 #4: The blue carbuncle was a star sapphire, but there have always been a few who suggest that it was a blue diamond, possibly the 44-carat Hope Diamond, or the 67-carat French Blue, or the 115-carat Tavernier Blue; researchers at the Smithsonian Institution have used historical models and sketches, and computers, to make zirconia replicas of all three diamonds, and have determined that the Hope fits exactly within the French Blue, and that no stone larger than the Hope could have been cut from the French Blue or the Tavernier Blue, "a clear indication" of the lineage of the Hope Diamond.
288. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library have published their Occasional Paper Number 1: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE IN CANADA, by Doug Wrigglesworth; the 18-page pamphlet offers an interesting review of Conan Doyle's travels in Canada, with a description of the relevant material in the Collection; it's available for $7.00 postpaid (to the U.S. or CA$7.00 (to Canada) from Doug at 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada (checks to Friends of the ACD Collection, please). For other destinations, contact Doug at <doug.wrig@sympatico.com>.
289. Gavin Lambert died on July 17. He was a novelist, biographer, and screenwriter, and the author of THE DANGEROUS EDGE (1975), a collection of excellent essays on writers who included Conan Doyle.
290. There's still time for admirers of the Algonquin Hotel to see "The Talk of the Town" in the Oak Room through Aug. 22; the show is an off-Broadway musical about the legendary Algonquin Round Table and there more information at <www.algonquinhotel.com/cabaret-times-square-hotels.asp>.
291. Discount DVDs offer an inexpensive way to watch old Sherlockian films: Jim Suszynski spotted Retromedia Entertainment's $4.99 DVD of Christopher Lee's "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace" (the dubbed-into-English version of the 1962 German film "Sherlock Holmes und das Halsband des Todes").
292. Marcus Geisser, now on holiday in Switzerland (where he participated in the Swiss tour of the Sherlock Holmes Society London), continues to be one of the most far-flung Sherlockians, thanks to his work for the International Committee of the Red Cross: he has worked in the Congo, and in Burma, and is now on his way to Sudan, where he will be working in Darfur. On Aug. 9, following in Sherlock Holmes' footsteps, he will pay a "short but interesting visit" to Khartoum.
293. Trivia buffs can add Jan Leighton to the list of actors who have portrayed both Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, and the name is not familiar, it's because he has been Holmes and Watson in television commercials. He's had a long career: he acted on Broadway (with Lucille Ball) in "Wildcat" in 1960, and in films, and he narrated two stories in THE GREAT ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES for Pendulum Press in 1974. His web-site

<www.janleighton.com> has a note that he has been in the Guinness Book of World Records for having performed professionally 3,372 historical notables, and photographs of him as some of those notables (including Holmes and Watson); you can click on many of the photographs to see video clips of him in action. The Inverness cape he used as Holmes will be offered on eBay early in August; that web-site is <www.ebay.com>.

294. Jul 05 #5: Owners of the first two volumes of Leslie S. Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, will not need to be persuaded to buy the third volume, which offers the four long stories, more than 900 pages, nearly 400 illustrations (often showing the same scene drawn by different artists), and almost 1,000 annotations; there's a slip-case, and the dust jacket spine completes the silhouette of Holmes on the first two volumes. It will be published by Norton in November ($49.95), and you can pre-order at a significant discount at Amazon and Barnes & Noble. I said last year that Les modestly suggests that "this is not a work for the serious student of Arthur Conan Doyle," but he's seriously wrong: you may think you know it all, but you'll find that you don't, and I recommend Les' NEW ANNOTATED to everyone, especially Sherlockians who don't yet have it, or who want something to give to people who need to know what Sherlockians do, and how much fun there can be doing it. <www.annotatedsherlockholmes.com> offers a lot of information about the set, including a list of errata.
295. The York Regional Police in Canada held a contest to name the newest addition to the K9 unit, and there were more than 500 entries. The photograph show handler Const. Mark Russell, contest winner Jessica McKenzie (a grand 6 student at Roseland Public School), and (in the middle) Sherlock.
296. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine is continuing a year-long tribute to Ellery Queen, and the September/October issues includes Donald A. Yates' "Remembering Fred Dannay" (with a amusing story about Don's visit, as a 16-year-old, with Fred at his home) and Jon L. Breen's "The Misadventures of Ellery Queen" (a discussion of the many, and various, imitation Ellery Queen stories); there are two such imitations in the issue, by Edward D. Hoch, and Josh Pachter and Jon L. Breen. Jon makes a point to distinguish between parodies and pastiches, and suggests that there are also parody-pastiches (a term used by Ellery Queen) when editing the magazine), and indirect pastiches (also described as tributes or homages). Sherlockians tend to use the term "pastiche" for almost everything, from Vincent Starrett's pastiches to Robert L. Fish's parodies to August Derleth's indirect pastiches, but there certainly are differences, and they can be interesting when one considers what to call novels written by Laurie R. King, Carole Nelson Douglas, and M. J. Trow.
297. The new edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET, with the original text from Beeton's Christmas Annual and more than 600 striking illustrations by Danish artist Nis Jessen (Jan 05 #7) has arrived, and it's spectacular. The publisher is Hakon Holm (Borgmester Nielsens Vej 24, DK-3700 Roenne, Bornholm, Denmark <www.mr-holmes.com>, and there are three versions: standard (€60.00), deluxe (€70.00), and signed and numbered in a slip-case (€78.00), and there are two posters available; there is more information (and lots of artwork) at the publisher's web-site, and you can see more of Jessen's fine work at <home2.inet.tele.dk/fnjessen>.

298. Jul 05 #6: Issue #65 of SHERLOCK has Roger Forsdyke's "Under the Gaslight: The Great Turf Fraud" (a fascinating article that isn't about "Silver Blaze"), Leonard Rose's discussion of Teddy Hayes' new musical "The Baskerville Beast", David Stuart Davies' report on "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking", and as usual much more, Sherlockian and otherwise.
299. #65 was David Stuart Davies' last issue as editor; the publisher decided to change directions at the magazine, hoping to attract more advertising, and the new magazine, edited by the new co-publisher Teddy Hayes, will focus on crime has a cover story on Steve McQueen, and the Sherlockian content consists of a pastiche by John S. Geddes and a sometimes inaccurate article by Richard Milner on the death of Richard Lancelyn Green. And the magazine's new slogan: "subscribe and become part of Big Sheryl's mob."
300. SHERLOCK is published six times a year and a subscriptions costs £25.00 (or $45.00) a year anywhere in the world; Atlas Publishing Ltd., Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England; the e-mail address is <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Their American agent is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> (877-233-3823); credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and there are back issues available.
301. Forecast: THE FORGOTTEN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by H. Paul Jeffers (New York: Carroll & Graf, Nov. 2005); 13 stories based on Anthony Boucher's scripts for "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes".
302. Margaret Walsh died on July 7. She worked in the advertising department of The New Yorker for many years, and discovered the Sherlockian world thanks to Tom Stix, whom she met in a bookstore; Maggie was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as "The Woman" in 1992, and she was an enthusiastic member of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes ("The Third Cab"). She asked her friends to hold a party in her memory at Kennedy's in New York (as "an Irish wake without the body").
303. Laurie R. King will hold a random drawing on Aug. 10 for copies of Recorded Books version of four of her novels (including LOCKED ROOMS and THE GAME); if you would like to be entered in the drawing, send an e-mail message to webmaven@laurierking.com.
304. The BBC celebrated "Sherlock Holmes Week" the first week in July, reporting that readers of Crime Time Magazine voted Arthur Conan Doyle the best crime writer of all time, and reissuing CDs of the short stories from the BBC Radio 4 programs starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams, and Clive Merrison and Andrew Sachs in four of the pastiches written by Bert Coules; the 15 sets of CDs are £17.99 each (the long stories cost £12.99 each). BBC's web-site is at <www.bbcshop.com> and their postal address is P.O. Box 308, Sittingbourne, Kent ME9 8LW, England. Their "The Complete Sherlock Holmes Box Set" with all 60 Canonical stories still is available, and a bargain at £129.99.

305. Aug 05 #1: There has been a brief flurry of publicity in the British press (and on the Web) about a new film called "Death Defying Acts" to be shot on location in Edinburgh. The £10 million film, from a script by Brian Ward and Tony Grisoni, will star Guy Pearce as Houdini and Rachel Weisz as his mistress, and Conan Doyle will be portrayed in the film. His mistress? According to the film company's publicity, "During Harry Houdini's tour of Britain in 1926, the magician enters into a passionate love affair with a Scottish woman."
306. The Sherlock Holmes Festival in Tryon, N.C., on Nov. 11-13 (Jun 05 #3) has expanded its web-site at <www.sherlockholmesfestival.com> to include a page on William Gillette and Henry Zecher's slide-show presentation (it's listed under "events"). Henry reports that Marilou Trask-Curtin will also be at the festival; she has written a book about Gillette and delivers the manuscript to her publisher in September.
307. Anyone who has seen Robert Sabuda's books knows how wonderful they are, and if you have never seen one you should visit a bookstore and look at one (or more). He creates incredible pop-up books, and his latest (with co-author Matthew Reinhart) is ENCYCLOPEDIA PREHISTORICA: DINOSAURS (Cambridge: Candlewick Press, 2005; $26.95). Recommended for everyone who enjoys THE LOST WORLD, and for anyone who wants to be bemused and amazed.
308. The Drury Lane Theatre in Oakbrook Terrace, Ill., is offering a dinner theater production of Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" through Oct. 2. The theater is at 100 Drury Lane, Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181 (630-530-0111) <www.drurylaneoakbrook.com>.
309. Film historian Max Alvarez lectured at the Smithsonian this month on "The Essentials: Hollywood's 10 Must-See Movies", but his lecture wasn't quite a match for the title; he spoke instead on the 10 essential Hollywood filmmakers: Buster Keaton, Ernst Lubitsch, Frank Capra, Preston Sturges, Billy

- Wilder, John Ford, Orson Welles, John Huston, Martin Scorsese, and Anthony Mann. And his choice for the essential film made by Keaton was "Sherlock Jr. (1924).
310. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter published by The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has a report by Joe Eckrich on the "Holmes Under the Arch II" conference in St. Louis, Jon Lellenberg's "100 Years Ago" tribute to E. W. Hornung's "Raffles", Gideon Hill's "50 Years Ago" discussion of Wilton M. Krogman, and an update on the collections from curator Tim Johnson; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum, 111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
311. Peter McIntyre has reported that the East Lynne Theater Company is performing William Gillette's "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes" through Sept. 3, as part of an evening of four one-act plays, and they are planning to present Edith Meiser's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Copper Beeches" in the style of a 1930s radio broadcast on Nov. 4-5 and Mar. 3-4. The office address is 121 Fourth Avenue, West Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5898) <eastlynnetheater.org>.
312. Aug 05 #2: Peggy Perdue is the new curator of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library, succeeding Victoria Gill, who retired earlier this year (Jun 05 #3). Doug Wrigglesworth reports that Peggy's background includes special collections, Asian studies, and working with young people; and she says that "classic English literature has been a passion of mine for many years, including anything from late 18th century to the Edwardian age and beyond a bit for the golden age of detective fiction." Her e-mail address is <pperdue@torontopubliclibrary.ca>.
313. "Artful Sherlock Takes the Cake at Culinary Olympics" was the headline on an article in the Hartford Courant (Oct. 28) about Carol Murdock, whose Sherlockian cake won a gold medal at the International Culinary Olympics in Erfurt. The photograph doesn't do it justice, and you can see the cake in full color at <www.classiccakescm.com>, which is the web-site for her business Classic Cakes in Connecticut. The theme of her cake was the study at 221B Baker Street.
314. The cake looks spectacular as well as delicious, and there are additional photographs of other cakes at her web-site. But (alas) not the cake that she baked and decorated for William Gillette's birthday at a party at his home in Gillette Castle State Park last month; that was a tiered cake with much about Gillette as Holmes, and some decorations from the castle.
315. Joe Coppola found an interesting Sherlockian game at the eBaum's World "Media for the Masses web-site at <www.ebaumsworld.com/sherlock.html>.
316. John Sherwood reports that Sherlock Holmes returns to the Victorian Villa Inn in Union City, Mich., for a mystery weekend on Sept. 16-18; John knows whereof he speaks, because John *is* Sherlock Holmes for the weekend; there is a web-site at <www.geocities.com/jcsherwood//BakerStreet22.htm>.
317. Carl Miller's new play "Sherlock Holmes: The Athenaeum Ghoul" will have 11 performances at the Theatre Royal in Bury St. Edmunds, from Sept. 8 to 17; their address is Westgate Street, Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk IP33 1QR, England <www.theatreroyal.org>. The play then goes on tour to 15 cities, and there is a detailed schedule at their web-site.
318. And Peter Tong's new play "Mrs. H. of Baker Street" will be performed during the Manchester Comedy Festival, from Oct. 24 to 29, at the Salford Theatre in Salford; a comedy about Mrs. Hudson, who uses her detective skills to help a woman find a missing husband. The theater is in Westerham Avenue, Salford, Lancashire M5 4LT, England (0161-925-0111).

319. Aug 05 #3: Reported by Jay Hyde: THE PRAYER OF THE NIGHT SHEPHERD, by Phil Rickman (London: Macmillan, 2004; 356 pp., $24.95) (London: Pan Macmillan, 2005; 628 pp., $8.99); the sixth in a mystery series that features the Reverend Merrily Watkins (Deliverance Consultant to the Diocese of Hereford); it's fiction, but involves Rickman's belief that THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES was inspired in Herefordshire rather than Devon. Rickman had an article in SHERLOCK #60 (Jun 04 #5) suggesting that Conan Doyle used the legend of Black Vaughan of Kington, and his ghostly Hergest hound.
320. Gahan Wilson, who was the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker during this year's birthday festivities (Jan 05 #1) provided the cover artwork for the souvenir program for the Mystery Writers of America's annual awards dinner on Apr. 28, and the MWA is now offering 58 signed and numbered prints for $200 each, with proceeds going to the MWA's Author Sponsorship Fund. They may still be available (but you may need to be or know a member of the MWA in order to buy one); 17 East 47th Street, New York, NY 10017 (212-888-8171) <mwa@mysterywriters.org>.
321. Laura Klotz reports that the new DVD "The Muppet Show: Season One (Special Edition)" has a Sherlockian segment in the third episode (Joel Grey was the guest star) that didn't air in the U.S.; the segment has Rowlf as Holmes, Baskerville as Watson, and Gorgon Heap as the butler. The region 1 DVD was issued by Buena Vista Home Video ($39.99).
322. Dennis Lynds died on Aug. 19. Writing as Michael Collins, he launched his series of "Dan Fortune" detective novels in 1967, and won an Edgar and many other awards. His pastiche "Cross of Gold" appeared in Michael Kurland's anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HIDDEN YEARS (2004).
323. The "Legend of the Hound Project" opened at Lord's Tearooms in Princetown on Aug. 13. According to a story in the Plymouth Western Morning News, the new visitor center features a room styled similar to Holmes' study at 221b and a life-size model of the Hound. Project organizer Sylvia Agnew has secured the first Hackney carriage licence to be issued to a horse and carriage in the West Devon; the carriage will take visitors along three routes through Dartmoor, and there will be costumes available if visitors want to dress in Victorian clothing while the carriage tours Baskerville territory.
324. Ev Herzog has reported that there was a stalwart contingent of Sherlockians at the 13th International Convention of the Wodehouse Society this month. "Hooray for Hollywood" at UCLA was hosted by the chapters in San Francisco ("Blandings Castle") and Los Angeles ("The Perfecto-Zizzbaum Motion Picture Corporation") and celebrated Wodehouse's stints in Tinseltown. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner held a Senior Bloodstain on Aug. 12, featuring a dramatic reading of Anne Cotton's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Unsettling Smile" (with a smiling Brian Taves as Mulliner).
325. Aug 05 #4: The summer issue of The Petrel Flyer (the newsletter from The Stormy Petrels of B.C.) is a Vincent Starrett Special, including Karen Murdock's report on newly discovered information about "The Cold, Lonely Death of Margaret Denniston Starrett" (his mother, who is buried in Vancouver), and other pieces about Starrett; $8.00 postpaid from the society (1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada).
326. Kelly Blau reports that the schedule for this year's New York City International Dollhouse Miniature Show includes workshops by Julii Grob on Sept. 1 and 2 devoted to "Sherlock Holmes' Study"; you can see her spectacular miniature at <www.bishopshow.com/nyc05wsten.htm>.
327. William R. Hanson, MD, who wrote a well-illustrated article in the American Philatelist (Oct 00 #3) about many of the postage stamps that have honored Sherlock Holmes, has also designed more than 3,000 stamps for some two dozen countries, and an attractive Sherlockian first day cover for the "garden bouquet" of roses stamp issued by the U.S. Postal Service in 2004; the cover (signed on the front or back) costs $10.00 postpaid (in the U.S.), and signed copies of the magazine with his article cost $5.95 postpaid. Checks (payable to Mary T. Hanson) should be sent to William R. Hanson at 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.

328. He also wonders if he was the first to describe Holmes as "the greatest man who never lived" (he was art director for the Turks & Caicos Islands when they issued a set of stamps honoring Holmes and Conan Doyle) (Jul 84 #3). Vincent Starrett honored "two men of note, who never lived and so can never die" (in his sonnet "221B"), and Smithsonian magazine referred to Holmes as "the greatest detective who never lived" in the table of contents in their Dec. 1986 issue (which had Fred Strebeigh's article on Sherlockians). Can anyone cite Hanson's phrase used earlier than 1984?
329. Aug 05 #5: It's always nice when some of Conan Doyle's best work is back in print: Barnes & Noble now has a "Library of Essential Reading", and it includes three titles of interest: THE LOST WORLD, with an introduction by Allen Grove (New York: Barnes & Noble, 2004; 215 pp., $5.95); THE COMPLETE BRIGADIER GERARD, with an introduction by Clifford S. Goldfarb (2005; 384 pp., $9.95); and THE WHITE COMPANY AND SIR NIGEL, with an introduction by Doug Elliott (2005; 792 pp., $19.95). Cliff and Doug are members of The Baker Street Irregulars and The Bootmakers of Toronto.
330. It's intriguing to see authors beginning to write fiction about Arthur Conan Doyle: Gabriel Brownstein's THE MAN FROM BEYOND (New York: W. W. Norton, 2005; 298 pp., $23.95) deals with Houdini and the medium Margery and Conan Doyle, and the author warns that "This is a fantasy. Nothing in it should be taken as fact. Names, places, events, actions, dialogue, headlines, and other details out of history have been distorted here for the purposes of fiction." And so they are, from the very start, where the names of Conan Doyle's children are given as Timothy and Joanna. Doyleans will find more than a few distortions, and so will those familiar with Houdini's career, but it's well-written and exciting, with interesting additional characters and some real danger for Houdini. In some ways the book is like Frederick Forsyth's THE DAY OF THE JACKAL: just as readers knew that De Gaulle wasn't assassinated, we know that Houdini survives the dire straits he's in, but it's fun to see it all work.
331. It isn't all that often that one gets a chance to talk about the fatal battle of Maiwand with a descendant of someone who was there: Chris Heath, of Vancouver, is the great-grandson of Capt. Percy Charles Heath, who was shot and killed in the battle on July 27, 1880. His body was never recovered, but his family in Britain has a hoof from the horse on which he was shot (each horse had a serial number, and collecting the hoof was the British Army's system of inventory control).
332. "The Boast of Heraldry--The Pomp of Power: Titled People in the Adventures" is the title of this year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" (sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies) at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 12; the festivities commence with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00, and ends at 1:00. There's no charge, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
333. This year's The New Yorker Festival, from Sept. 23 to 25, features a paired appearance by Michael Chabon (author of THE FINAL SOLUTION: A NOVEL OF DETECTION) and Stephen King on Sept. 23, and they'll sign books on Sept. 24. Details available at <www.newyorker.com>.
334. "Slick Sleuths" was a silent black-and-white seven-minute "Mutt and Jeff" animation written by Bud Fisher and drawn by Fisher and Edgar Horace, and released in 1926, with Mutt and Jeff in Sherlockian costume; in the 1930s it was colorized by hand and released again with a musical score. The colorized version is included in a "Cartoon Craze" DVD (vol. 22) from Digiview Productions (2004), spotted by Jennie Paton in the $1.00 bin at Wal-Mart. And for Basil Rathbone's fans, Jennie also discovered a $1.00 DVD of "The Magic Sword" (1962), in which Rathbone plays the evil sorcerer Lodac.

335. Aug 05 #6: Collectors of translations and foreign editions might wish to pursue LE CHIEN DE BASKERVILLE (Beyrouth: Samir Editeur, 2005); the story has been translated into Parisian French, and is the first French translation I've seen published in Lebanon (THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES lists an Arabic translation published in Beirut in 1911). The book's not yet listed at their web-site <www.samirediteur.com>, but they have e-mail at <samir@samirediteur.com> and the cost is $3.00 plus shipping.
336. The Hedgerow Theatre will perform "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (likely Tim Kelly's dramatization) from Sept. 23 to Oct. 30; the theater is at 64 Rose Valley Road, Media, PA 19063 (610-565-4211) <www.hedgerowtheatre.org>. Mycroft's League of Philadelphia has planned a theater party for the matinee on Oct. 2, followed by dinner; details are available from Gideon Hill (215-280-2004) <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>.
337. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a stamp honoring the 50th anniversary of the Presidential Libraries Act of 1955. Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman were members of The Baker Street Irregulars, and the Roosevelt Library & Museum in Hyde Park, N.Y. has his Sherlockian correspondence and his illuminated membership certificate in the BSI. But the Truman Library & Museum in Independence no longer has its copy of the BSI special edition of THE BLUE CARBUNCLE, inscribed to Truman by Edgar W. Smith, thanks to a curator who decided some years ago that the fiction owned by Truman wasn't important to the library and disposed of it (it's now owned by a fortunate collector).
338. The Bimetallic Question of Montreal celebrated their 25th anniversary with MUSINGS FROM AN OVERTURNED BEEHIVE, a 55-page anthology of reminiscence and articles by members; there are 60 copies, cloth-bound, each copy numbered and named for one of the 60 Canonical stories, and the cost is $39.00 postpaid (checks payable to the society, please,) from Wilfrid M. de Freitas, 369 Kitchener Avenue, Westmount, Montreal QC H3Z 2G1, Canada. You can ask him if your favorite story is still available, or provide a list of three choices (514-935-9581) <wilfrid@defreitasbooks.com>.
339. Julia Huggins has marked the 10th anniversary of Jeremy Brett's death with an on-line petition intended to encourage Granada to produce a documentary about the Brett series, using deleted footage and out-takes. The petition can be signed at <www.petitiononline.com/gtiitv/petition.html>.
340. Further to the report (Nov 04 #4) that Abbey National's shareholders agreed to a takeover bid from Spain's largest bank, Banco Santander Central Hispanico (BSCH), Jay Hyde spotted a Dow Jones news-wire report (Aug. 22) that a syndicate led by Dutch financial-services company ING Groep NV has bought Abbey National's property portfolio for $2.12 billion. The statue of Sherlock Holmes at the entrance to the Baker Street underground station is not affected: Roger Johnson notes that the statue belongs to the City of Westminster (ownership was formally handed over to the Deputy Lord Mayor during the Statue Festival in 1999).
341. Sep 05 #1: Chief Justice William Rehnquist died on Sept. 3. Nominated as an associate justice of the Supreme Court by President Nixon in 1971, he was confirmed in 1972, and nominated as Chief Justice by President Reagan and confirmed in 1986. And he mentioned Sherlock Holmes at least twice in his opinions: in 1980 (Harrison v. PPG Industries) he wrote in his dissenting opinion: "I think that what we know of the matter makes Congress' additions to 307 (b)(1) in the Clean Air Act Technical and Conforming Amendments of 1997 no less curious than was the incident in the Silver Blaze of the dog that did nothing in the nighttime." In 1984 (Bose Corp. v. Consumers Union) he said (again dissenting): "There is more than one irony in this 'Case of the Wandering Instruments,' which subject matter makes it sound more like a candidate for inclusion in the 'Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' than in a casebook on constitutional law."
342. John Bergquist reports that there are more photographs about the London society's Swiss tour at <www.uk.myswitzerland.com/en/news.cfm?mo=v&id=42610>. And Bob Ellis notes that The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's redesigned web-site at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> has a detailed report on "A Beelne to Switzerland and more than 500 photographs.
343. Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Cardboard Box") that he had paid fifty-five shillings for his Stradivarius, and that it was worth at least five hundred guineas. Catherine Cooke reports that the "Viotti ex-Bruce" Stradivarius has been acquired by the Royal Academy of Music; the estate of the violin's last owner gave the violin, valued at £3.5 million, to the British tax authority to wipe out a £1.4 million tax bill, and the Academy has raised £1 million

- to purchase the violin. Made about 1710 during Stradivari's "Golden Period", it was owned by Catherine the Great of Russia, who gave it to the musical prodigy Giovanni Battista Viotti, whose concerts in Paris and London in the 1780s and 1790s are credited with establishing Stradivari's reputation.
344. Those who remember the old student standbys Monarch Notes (with two volumes about the Sherlock Holmes stories) and Cliff Notes may be interested in the on-line SparkNotes at <www.sparknotes.com>. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is included, with discussion, analysis, quotations, study questions, and a message board.
345. The Confederates of Wisteria Lodge (Atlanta), The Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem, and The Genius Loci (Birmingham) will hold their Second Annual Joint Gathering at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 8-9, 2006; information about the event is available from Kent Ross at 6875 Fielder Road, Rex, GA 30273) <kenthross@aol.com>.
346. Dick Rutter reports that his translation of Gerhardt Totschinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES UND DAS GEHEIMNIS DER SACHERTORTE (Apr 90 #2) has been published (as SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MYSTERY OF THE SACHERTORTE) by George Vanderburgh's Battered Silicon Dispatch Box; the story involves the theft of the recipe for the famous Austrian pastry, and international politics just before the start of World War I. The publisher is at Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; 192 pp., $37.00 postpaid.
347. Sep 05 #2: Alan Truscott died on Sept. 4. Born in London, he learned to play bridge in an air-raid shelter during the blitz and went on to a long career in the bridge world, serving as bridge editor of the N.Y. Times since 1964. He edited and foot-noted Reginald Johnson's THEY CAME TO BAKER STREET (Aug 94 #8), and often used and referred to Sherlock Holmes in his bridge column in the N.Y. Times.
348. There are now (at least) 25 titles in Marjorie Weinman Sharmat's "Nate the Great" series that features Nate in Sherlockian costume. NATE THE GREAT: SAN FRANCISCO DETECTIVE, written with Mitchell Sharman and illustrated by Martha Weston in the style of Marc Simont (New York: Random House/Yeareling, 2005; 30 pp., $4.50), is a fine souvenir for visitors to the Bay Area.
349. The Mayfield Dinner Theatre is performing David Belke's play "The Reluctant Resurrection of Sherlock Holmes" through Oct. 30 (16615 109th Avenue, Edmonton, AB T5P 4K8, Canada) (800-661-9804) <www.mayfielddinnertheatre.com>.
350. Tim Evers' one-man play "The Demons of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Bayou Theatre at the University of Houston Clear Lake, Nov. 10-26. The box-office address is: Bayou Building (room 2604), 2700 Bay Area Boulevard, Houston, TX 77058 (281-263-2580).
351. The summer issue of the Tonga Times (published by the Mini-Tonga Scion Society) offers news about the world of Sherlockian miniatures, including the miniatures created by Lawrence G. Myers (with lots of color photographs; s). The newsletter ($10.50 for three issues/$11.50 to Canada/$13.50 elsewhere) is published by Trish and Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229) <www.hometown.aol.com/mini-tongasociety/mini1.htm>.
352. I asked (Aug 05 #4) for a reference earlier for a description of Sherlock Holmes as "the greatest man who never lived" earlier than 1984; Bob Mangler recalled that Orson Welles said something similar, and Fred Levin found it on a recording of the Mercury Theatre broadcast of William Gillette's play (1938): "a gentleman who never lived and will never die." What's interesting is that this is earlier than Vincent Starrett's sonnet "221B" (1942).
353. Stephen William Theaker has written PROFESSOR CHALLENGER IN SPACE (Birmingham: Silver Age Books, 2000; 160 pp., £5.99) and QUIET, THE TIN CAN BRAINS ARE HUNTING! (2001; 160 pp., £5.99); Mrs. Challenger is featured in the second book, with a brief appearance by the professor, and you can read both on-line at <www.silveragebooks.com> reprinted in Theaker's Quarterly Fiction (spring, summer, and autumn 2004). The stories are more fantasy than science-fiction.
354. Frank Thomas, who played boyfriend Ted Nickerson in "Nancy Drew, Detective" (1938) and the title role in the 1950s in "Tom Corbett, Space Cadet", went on to write about Sherlock Holmes and bridge, and a series of Sherlockian pastiches, and he will be the guest of honor at a joint dinner meeting of The Blustering Gales from the South-West and The James Phillimore Society on Oct. 15. Additional information about the meeting can be obtained from Paula Salo (4455 Pacific Coast High-way #D-102, Torrance, CA 90505) (310-378-7947) <home.earthlink.net/~bgsw>. He's also to be honored as a special guest at the 64th World Science Convention in Anaheim on Aug. 23-27, 2006.

355. Sep 05 #3: Tyke Niver often wears an Inverness when he appears at Gillette Castle as William Gillette, and has found a company that makes excellent Inverness cloaks (in winter and summer weights, which Tyke finds helpful when he is at the Castle in the summer); prices range from $280 to $460 depending on your size. Texas Body Hangings is at Box 547, Mount Enterprise, TX 75681 (800-642-8075) <www.bodyhangings.com>.
356. Nis Jessen reports that there now are three web-sites about his handsomely illustrated edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (Jul 05 #5); you can find them at <home2.inet.tele.dk/fnjessen/scarlet.htm>, <home2.inet.tele.dk/fnjessen>, and <www.mr-holmes.com>.
357. S. M. Stirling included a minor allusion to Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle in THE PESHAWAR LANCERS (Jul 02 #4), and Christy Allen has reported a nice discovery in Stirling's new alternate-history trilogy. The first volume was DIES THE FIRE (2004), and the second is THE PROTECTOR'S WAR (New York: Roc/New American Library, 2005; 496 pp., $24.95), in which the reader will find Sam Aylward, John Hordle, Nigel Loring, and Alleyne Loring (names familiar to anyone who has read THE WHITE COMPANY). The third volume, presumably due next year, will be A MEETING IN CORVALLIS. You can read sample chapters from the first two volumes at <www.smstirling.com>.
358. Pattie Tierney has designed a collection of attractive mystery game-piece necklaces with Sherlockian themes; $20.00 each plus shipping. You can request an illustrated flier (Pattie Tierney, 229 Hereford Avenue, St. Louis, MO 603135) <ptierney@umsl.edu>.
359. Gayle Lange Puhl returns to the pages of Scuttlebutt after almost 20 years, with her IF WATSON WROTE FOR TV: SHERLOCK HOLMES CALENDAR 2006, a convenient (8.5x11" opened) wall calendar with her own artwork showing how Holmes and Watson might fit into recent and current television series. Available from Gayle (501 South Madison Street #12, Evansville, WI 53536) for $12.83 postpaid.
360. John Berendt, The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker during the birthday festivities in 2004, talked about his next book, and about Sherlock Holmes (you can read some of his stories in the summer 2004 issue of The Baker Street Journal), and that next book, about Venice, is THE CITY OF FALLING ANGELS (New York: Penguin, 2005; 414 pp., $25.95).
361. Laura Kuhn reported an excellent article about Queen Mary's Dolls' House in Royal Insight for Sept. 2005, available at <www.royal.gov.uk>, the official web-site of the British Monarchy; the article includes a photograph of the library, which includes books commissioned from more than 170 authors, one of which was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who is represented by the bound manuscript of "How Watson Learned the Trick".
362. Christopher Morley is still remembered: Gideon Hill found Morley quoted in the Sept. 16 issue of the America's Health Insurance Plans electronic newsletter: "There is only one success--to be able to spend your life in your own way." It's credited to the Wikipedia <www.wikipedia.org>, which has a concise entry on Morley, with various links, one to The Baker Street Irregulars. The Morley quote is from WHERE THE BLUE BEGINS (1922).
363. Sep 05 #4: Robert Wise died on Sept. 14. He began his long film career in the 1930s, and was film editor for Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane" (1941). Best known as director of "West Side Story" (1961) and "The Sound of Music" (1963) (and he won Oscars for both films), he also directed "The Day the

- Earth Stood Still" (1951), the only known film featuring a member of The Baker Street Irregulars playing himself (Elmer Davis, as a newscaster reporting on the alien spaceship). The DVD of the film (Mar 03 #1) includes commentary by Wise and by Nicholas Meyer.
364. Jay Hyde spotted the report that the Algonquin Hotel has been sold (again); HEI Hospitality bought the 174-room hotel for about $74 million, and HEI's Merritt Hospitality will manage the hotel; the Algonquin has long been the unofficial headquarters for the birthday festivities in January.
365. "Pride & Prejudice" had its world premiere at the Toronto Film Festival on Sept. 11 and won rave reviews in Variety, the Guardian, and the Observer. Filmed in Britain last year (Sep 04 #3), its main location was Groombridge Place (the inspiration for Birlstone Manor in "The Valley of Fear"). The film opened in Britain on Sept. 16, and is scheduled to open in the U.S. on Nov. 18.
366. Jack French has reported that the One Act Players will present a reading of their dramatization of "A Scandal in Bohemia" in the Florence Gould Theatre at the Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco on Oct. 16 at 2:00 pm (415-519-1728) <www.oneact.org/candy>; "The Cable Car Murder" (script from the 1949 Candy Matson series) and "Vengeance in Vegas" (by Hal Glatzer) are on the bill as well.
367. BOXING'S BEST SHORT STORIES, edited by Paul D. Staudohar (Chicago: Chicago Review Press, 1999; 330 pp., $24.00) (or paperback, 2001, $16.95); contents include "The Croxley Master".
368. The John. D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation selects 25 people every year to receive $500,000 "genius grants" payable over five years, and one of this year's winners is Terry Belanger, member of The Baker Street Irregulars (he received his investiture as "Cartwright" in 1968) and a professor at the University of Virginia and founder of the Rare Book School (a nonprofit institute dedicated to the history and safekeeping of rare prints, books, and manuscripts). He founded the School at Columbia University in 1968 and moved it to Virginia in 1992; more than 4,000 students have studied preservation of what he calls "the bedrock for the humanities."
369. Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties) have launched The Sherlockian E-Times with news, offers of new Sherlockiana, and links to their web-site, which offers much more Sherlockiana; you can request an e-mail subscription at <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>.
370. Napoleon may have owned six identical plaster busts of himself, but they're not on display through Jan. 2 in the exhibition "Napoleon: An Intimate portrait" in the National Geographic Museum's Explorer's Hall in Washington. The exhibition does have more than 250 objects and artifacts that belonged to Napoleon and his imperial court, including his signature hats and other clothing, and portraits of him by leading artists of his time.
371. Sep 05 #5: Prescott's Press, published by The Three Garridebs, continues to offer a nice mix of scholarship and whimsy; issue #36 (June) has Ted Friedman's discussion of the Andaman Islands and the stamp issued by India showing the prison at Fort Blair, and issue #37 (Sept.) has Robert Q. Carver's investigation of Cole Porter and Sherlock Holmes. $14.00 for four issues ($18 outside the U.S.), from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
372. This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has a photograph of Holmes (Philip Porter) and Watson (Charler Miller) with two St. Bernards, in the shadow of the Matterhorn, taken during the society's trip to Switzerland this year. $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£6.50 to the U.K. and Europe or £7.00 elsewhere); checks (payable to the Society) can be sent to Judi Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington BR6 8DC, England.
373. The Society has also published SHERLOCK HOLMES IN SWITZERLAND, with 24 articles by 19 authors, with subjects that range from Conan Doyle's visit to the country to Holmes route to Switzerland, and hitherto unpublished photographs from many of the Society's pilgrimages. $38.00 postpaid to the U.S. (£15.00 to the U.K. or £16.00 elsewhere); payment as above.
374. Irene's Cabinet is an annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (38 pp.) offers Andrew Solberg's report on "Les Relations Holmesiennes Franco-Américaines", Paul Churchill's eulogy for Steve Clarkson, and much more; $10.00 postpaid from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).
375. Julian Barnes' ARTHUR & GEORGE (London: Jonathan Cape/Random House, 2005; 360 pp., £17.99) is short-listed for the prestigious Man Booker Prize, and deserves the high ranking (the six finalists each received £2,500, and the winner, to be announced at the Guildhall in London on Oct. 10, will get an additional £50,000); it's a novel, offering a joint biography of Arthur Conan Doyle and George Edalji from their childhoods onward, and it is wellwritten and imaginative, firmly grounded on the facts of the case of George Edalji, but also thoroughly inventive when it comes to thoughts and conversations. And it's a handsome book, with an attractive decorated-cloth cover that one seldom sees on commercial books today. The American edition is due from Alfred A. Knopf in January ($24.95).
376. Constance Moore died on Sept. 16. She began her long film career in 1937, and was best known for playing Buster Crabbe's girlfriend Wilma Deering in the "Buck Rogers" serials that began in 1939. She also was Sheila Stuart in "Charlie McCarthy, Detective" (1939); Charlie and Mortimer Snerd are in Sherlockian costume in the film, but Constance Moore isn't.
377. "Cut out the poetry, Watson," said Holmes severely to Watson. Sherlockians have long ignored that command: Edgar W. Smith and others wrote tales-inverse for the BSJ, Vincent Starrett composed delightful sonnets, and Isaac Asimov was renowned for his limericks. William S. Dorn's THE LIMERICKS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Denver: Pencil Productions, 2005, 53 pp.) offers his own limericks, one each for Holmes and Watson, for the Canonical tales, and for two apocryphal stories. $11.45 postpaid to the US ($12.45 to Canada, and $15.45 elsewhere) from Bill (2045 S. Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210-3734).
378. Sep 05 #6: Gus Mager's "Hawkshaw the Detective" comic strip was published in American newspapers from 1913 well into the 1940s, and Hawkshaw was an amusing "homage" to Sherlock Holmes. Alan Lance Andersen has reprinted seven of the Sunday strips from 1916 in black-and-white in HAWKSHAW THE DETECTIVE (Morrisville: Lulu, 2005; 46 pp., $10.49). Andersen has also edited an "author's expanded edition" of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's play "The Speckled Band" that's intended for dinner theaters. The revisions in are in large part based on the story, and give the script more conformity with the short story so many people have read; THE SPECKLED BAND: A SHERLOCK HOLMES DRAMA (Morrisville: Lulu, 2005; 112 pp., $13.10). Lulu is a web-based print-on-demand publisher at <www.lulu.com>, and Andersen offers discounts to bookstores <2004@interdrama.com>.
379. Elmore Hames' THE HOLMES AND WATSON MYSTERIOUS EVENTS AND OBJECTS CONSORTIUM: THE CASE OF THE WITCH'S TALISMAN (Morrisville: Lulu, 2004; 186 pp., $8.95) is a pleasant young-adults novel about young friends who like to be Holmes and Watson. "Oh, damn, is the game afoot *again*?" Watson exclaims in "The Case of the Mysterious Missive", in a new version of the tent joke as a short piece collected in MESSAGE IN A FORTUNE COOKIE: SHORT STORIES & POEMS, by Steve Pulley (Morrisville: Lulu, 2004; 181 pp., $9.95, or $1.79 to download).
380. PROFESSOR CHALLENGER: 5 FANTASTIC TALES, is a collection with a short introduction by Ron Hanna (Morrisville: Lulu, 2004; 428 pp., $19.99, or $6.80 to download). THE EXTRAORDINARY AFFAIR OF THE SECOND GREAT HIATUS, by P. Whitney Hughes (Morrisville: Lulu, 2005; 106 pp., $17.79), is a sciencefiction pastiche involving Holmes, Watson, Challenger, and Malone, with a few echoes from "Star Trek".
381. Marcel d'Agneau's THE CURSE OF THE NIBELUNG was published in Britain almost 25 years ago (Oct 81 #2), and now there's an American edition (Morrisville: Lulu, 2005; 290 pp., $12.95), written by Sam North; it's a pastiche/ parody (or perhaps a parody/pastiche) set in England and on the - Continent in 1939, with Holmes and Watson sent on a mission by Winston Churchill, and you can read about d'Agneau and North at <www.hackwriters.com/d-agneau.htm>.

382. And Will Thomas notes that Lulu has published THE BARTITSU COMPENDIUM, VOL. 1: HISTORY AND THE CANONICAL SYLLABUS, edited by Tony Wolf (2005, 270 pp., $25.00); bartitsu was invented by E. W. Barton-Wright, and is believed by many Sherlockian scholars to be the baritsu that Sherlock Holmes mentions in "The Empty House" (Will reports that the new book has several mentions of Holmes).
383. Forecast for October: THE SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES WITH DVD: a Chamberlain Bros. edition in the Signet Classics series (568 pp., $14.95); the essential works" (22 stories), two Rathbone/Bruce movies on a DVD, an introduction by Anne Perry, and an analysis by Susannah Gora of the author, book, and film. THE FORGOTTEN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by H. Paul Jeffers (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2005; 272 pp., $14.95); short stories based on the radio plays written by Anthony Boucher and Denis Green in the 1940s.
384. Oct 05 #1: David Grann has written a long article in The New Yorker (Sept. 19) about "The Lost City of Z" and his attempt to find traces of British explorer P. H. Fawcett, who spent years trying to uncover a lost civilization hidden in the Matto Grosso in Brazil. On his last expedition, in 1925, Fawcett vanished, never to be heard from again, and there now is a long list of explorers who have tried but failed to find the lost city that Fawcett believed was there. Grann mentions Conan Doyle, who met Fawcett in 1910, and you can read more about them in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin (1996): they quote from Fawcett's memoirs EXPLORATION FAWCETT (eventually published in 1953). Fawcett was in London to lecture about his exploration of the Ricardo Franco Hills, and wrote: "They stood like a lost world, forested to their tops . . . So thought Conan Doyle when later in London I spoke of these hills and showed photographs of them! He mentioned an idea for a novel on Central South America and asked for information, which I told him I should be glad to supply. The fruit of it was his 'Lost World'.
385. Sorry about that: <uk.myswitzerland.com/en/news.cfm?mo=v&id=42610> is the correct URL for photographs from the Swiss tour by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, reported by John Bergquist (Sep 05 #1).
386. Roger Brierley died on Sept. 23. He was a passionate supporter of Manchester United, and a chartered accountant before becoming an actor, in British television and films in the 1960s; he was credited as Roger Brierly when he played Mr. Holmes in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985).
387. The New Yorker has published a long list of Sherlockiana and Doyleana: beginning with discussion of Conan Doyle in "The Talk of the Town" (Feb. 21, 1925), and including material by James Thurber, Robert Benchley, Alexander Woollcott, Frederick Dorr Steele, Kenneth Fearing, Ogden Nash, S. J. Perelman, Mollie Panter-Downes, Hendrik Hertzberg, and many others. Thanks to modern technology, you can buy "The Complete New Yorker" (all 4,109 issues through Feb. 14, 2005) on eight DVDs for $100, in book stores or at their web-site <www.thenewyorkerstore.com>; it will be a god-send to libraries, and to people who would like to have 80 years of excellent writing.
388. The official web-site for London is at <www.visitlondon.com>, and you can search for "Sherlock Holmes" or "Conan Doyle" or anything else of interest if you're visiting London.
389. Les Klinger will be on tour in November and December promoting THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE NOVELS, with visits planned to almost a dozen cities in the U.S. and Canada; <www.annotatedsherlockholmes.com> offers a list of the dates and venues, and much more about the book and its author. And of course his appearances on the tour will offer an opportunity to get inscriptions, and to hear his stories about the Canon and his annotations.
390. There's a paperback edition of THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, issued by the Quality Paperback Book Club and available to its members; same size as the hard-cover edition but in decorated paper covers, and with the text in one color only; advance reading copies are similar, but their front covers state "not for sale" and the spines do not have the silhouettes (there are other differences, but they're not needed to identify the editions).
391. Oct 05 #2: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for drinks and dinner at the Alta Club in Salt Lake City on Oct. 19, at the end of the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America, and were welcomed by Mike Homer, Heidi Mason, and other locals. We will meet next in Houston on Apr. 12, and in Philadelphia on Oct. 25. Sarah Andrews' latest book about forensic geologist Em Hansen is DEAD DRY (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2005; 320 pp., $24.95), and Simon Winchester's new A CRACK IN THE EDGE OF THE WORLD: AMERICA AND THE GREAT CALIFORNIA EARTHQUAKE OF 1906 (New York: HarperCollins, 2005; 480 pp., $27.95) may be of interest to those who enjoyed Laurie R. King's LOCKED ROOMS (May 05 #6).
392. Photographs of ghosts, spirit seances, levitation, auras, and ectoplasm can be seen in the exhibition "The Perfect Medium: Photography and the Occult" at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York <www.metmuseum.org> through Dec. 31; the exhibition includes photographs of the Cottingley Fairies that were so persuasive to Conan Doyle.
393. Spotted by Andrew Blau: THE TUTOR, by Peter Abrahams (New York: Ballantine Books, 2002); suspense, featuring girl-in-peril precocious 11-year-old Ruby Gardner, who is passionate about Sherlock Holmes (published as a paperback in 2003).
394. Forecast for February: HOLMES ON THE RANGE, by Steve Hockensmith, author of the pastiche "Gustav Amlingmeyer, Holmes on the Range" (set in Montana in 1893), from St. Martin's Minotaur (320 pp., $22.95). EMPRESS OF INDIA: A PROFESSOR MORIARTY NOVEL, by Michael Kurland, also from St. Martin's Minotaur (320 pp., $24.95).
395. John McCabe ("Those Chaldean Roots . . . of the Great Celtic Speech") died on Sept. 27, 2005. He was an actor, a Shakespeare scholar, and a professor who chaired the Department of Drama and Theatre Arts at Lake Superior State University in Sault St. Marie, and his greatest enthusiasm was for Laurel and Hardy: he met both of them in England in 1953, wrote an authorized biography of the comedians in 1961, and founded The Sons of the Desert in 1965 (in which he was the "exhausted ruler"). He was co-founder (with Bill Rabe) of the Unicorn Hunters, and received his investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1966.
396. "Bank Robber's No Sherlock" was the headline, and "But Police Say Disguise Resembles the Fictional Detective Holmes" was the subhead on an item in the Charlotte Observer (Oct. 20), spotted by Jay Hyde. Two banks in Charlotte were robbed by a man wearing a tweed jacket, a wig, and a glued-on mustache and beard, and police detective Jim Snider told the paper: "he looks like Sherlock Holmes," and added that "if he keeps on going, we'll catch up with him."
397. Jay also notes an item in the San Francisco Examiner (Oct. 18) about Rachel Weisz, the female lead in the film "The Constant Gardener", who said that when she was a girl, she dreamed of becoming a real-life Sherlock Holmes. "At school," she explained, "I wanted to be a detective or a spy." But she didn't mention any plans for the film "Death Defying Acts" (Aug 05 #1), in which she has been reported cast as Harry Houdini's mistress (the film also has Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as a character).
398. Oct 05 #3: An interesting example of how useful the Internet can be is the new "Google Print" web-site at <www.print.google.com>. Google has partnered with several major libraries to scan entire texts of books, and the data base can be searched for names (Conan Doyle), phrases (Elementary, my dear Watson), or words (Scuttlebutt); you can view the entire text of books in the public domain, and selected pages from books protected by

- copyright, and you can use links to purchase books or find libraries that hold them. Lawsuits have been filed by some publishers claiming copyright infringement, but Google hopes that most publishers will welcome an opportunity for more sales.
399. Robert Bisio ("Shinwell Johnson") died on Sept. 5, 2005. He was a teacher, an enthusiastic singer in barbershop quartets, one of the early members of The Knights of the Gnomon in Redwood City, and a member of The Scowrsers and the Molly Maguires. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1966.
400. Forecast for November: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE BIOGRAPHY, by Nick Rennison (London: Atlantic Books, 2005; 240 pp., £14.99); "a meticulous recreation of the secret life and curious times of the great detective."
401. The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Mar. 31-Apr. 2; there will be a dinner (with Les Klinger as featured speaker), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. Contact Susan Diamond, 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 <szdiamond@comcast.net>, for more information.
402. "I found myself in Florence," Sherlock Holmes told Dr. Watson (in "The Empty"), and the city is well worth a visit by Sherlockians. There's a roomful of paintings by Salvator Rosa (mentioned in "The Sign of the Four") in the Pitti Palace, and an excellent bronze bust of Holmes in the city hall in Sesto Fiorentino (Mar 02 #6), where (according to careful research by Enrico Solito) Holmes actually arrived. Doyleans also can see something of interest in Florence:
403. "I have seen old John Hawkwood, the same who has led half the company into Italy, stand laughing in his beard as he heard it," cried an English archer when a gleeman sang "The Song of the Bow" in THE WHITE COMPANY. There was a real Sir John Hawkwood (1320-1394), who fought in the Hundred Years War and in 1360 led a band of mercenaries to Italy, where they fought for various Italian states and factions. He died in Florence, and Paolo Uccello's memorial fresco to Sir John can be seen in the Duomo. His band of mercenaries was called the White Company, and he is credited by many as an inspiration for Conan Doyle's Sir Nigel Loring.
404. And there's a relatively new book about Hawkwood, by Frances Stonor Saunders: HAWKWOOD: DIABOLICAL ENGLISHMAN (London: Faber and Faber, 2004; 256 pp., £17.00) (paperback, 2005; 384 pp., £8.99). There also is an American edition: THE DEVIL'S BROKER: SEEKING GOLD, GOD AND GLORY IN FOURTEENTH CENTURY ITALY (New York: HarperCollins/Fourth Estate, 2005; 352 pp., $25.95). And if that's not enough, next year there will be JOHN HAWKWOOD: AN ENGLISH MERCENARY IN FOURTEENTH-CENTURY ITALY, by William Caferro (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press, 2006; 512 pp., $35.00).
405. Oct 05 #4: Further to the item (Apr 05 #6) on "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (adapted by Steven Dietz from Gillette's play) the schedule has been expanded: at the Tucson Temple of Music and Art in Tucson (Mar. 4-25), at the Phoenix Herberger Center in Phoenix (Mar. 30-Apr. 5); at the Quadracci Powerhouse Theatre in Milwaukee (Apr. 14-May 14); and at the Pasadena Play-house in Pasadena (May 5-June 11).
406. Congratulations to a new member of The Baker Street Irregulars: Donald J. Terras ("The Politician, the Lighthouse, and the Trained Cormorant"), who received his Investiture from Mike Whelan this month in Chicago, on the evening Don also was elevated to the post of Master of the Hounds, following in the footsteps of Vincent Starrett and Bob Mangler.
407. Ronald Pearsall died on Sept. 27. He was a prolific writer, beginning at the age of 14 with a thriller, and in 1969 he achieved considerable renown with THE WORM IN THE BUD: THE WORLD OF VICTORIAN SEXUALITY. He went on to write other books about the Victorian world, including CONAN DOYLE: A BIOGRAPHICAL SOLUTION (1977) and SHERLOCK HOLMES INVESTIGATES THE MURDER IN EUSTON SQ. (1989), the latter about an actual crime, ending with a pastiche chapter in which Holmes wraps up the investigation.
408. Mark Alberstat's 2006 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
409. Reported by Doug Elliott: "King of the Lost World" (now in post-production) is scheduled for home-video release on Dec. 13. Starring Bruce Boxleitner (Challenger), Rhett Giles (Roxton), Jeff Denton (Malone), and Sarah Lieving (Summerlee), the 90-minute film is about four plane-crash survivors who "encounter danger in a world that time forgot" and is billed as "the epic story that inspired 'King Kong' and 'Jurassic Park'." There's cover art at the web-site <www.theasylum.cc> showing a giant ape, which was added "just for fun," according to the director, and to acknowledge Peter Jackson's new film of "King Kong".
410. Further to the item about the exhibition at the National Geographic Museum (Sep 05 #4), Mary Burke reports that there are seven busts of Napoleon (but not identical) and five items by Carle Vernet (great grand-uncle of Sherlock Holmes).
411. Philip Gold (760 East Carlisle Road, Westlake Village, CA 91361 (818-889-2640) <philipgold_221books@yahoo.com> offers four Christmas cards with artwork by Lynne Yencho showing scenes from "The Speckled Band" and "The Blue Carbuncle" for $2.50 postpaid; a flier showing the artwork is available on request from Philip.
412. Sherlock Holmes' 152nd birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 13, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but it will be helpful to let Ev Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you're coming to the event.
413. Oct 05 #5: On Thursday, The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues), and the speaker is Leroy Lad Panek, who won an Edgar in 1988 for INTRODUCTION TO THE DETECTIVE STORY (which has a chapter on Conan Doyle). He'll talk on "Sherlock Holmes and the Emergence of the American Detective Story" ($11.00); seating will be limited, and you are advised to reserve early (details below).
414. On Friday, the William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $43.00 (please request an announcement from Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014).
415. Otto Penzler has moved the Mysterious Bookshop to Tribeca (that's the Triangle Below Canal); the address is 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street), and that's where he'll hold his traditional open house on Friday, from 11:00 to 5:00. Otto explains that the new shop has twice the space, and that it took only nine moving vans to move 28 years of books and files and stuff from the old shop. There's a parking lot at the corner of Warren and West Broadway, for those brave enough to drive in New York, and the subway station nearest the Algonquin is Times Square (42nd Street between Seventh Avenue and Broadway); you take the 1, 2, or 3 train to the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If (or possibly when) you get lost, or are using a different train, you can call the bookshop at 212-587-1011.

416. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 201 West 52nd Street (between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $70.00 (checks payable to Maribeau Briggs) should be sent to Maribeau (183 Stokes Road, Medford Lakes, NJ 08055); please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). There will be more information at their web-site <www.baskervillebash.com>. Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
417. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), 125 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
418. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be offered in the dealers' room on the second floor of the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street) from 9:30 am until 12:30 pm; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> will be glad to supply information about dealers' tables. And the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent event) on the second floor of the Algonquin at 12:30 pm; if you are planning to attend these festivities, please tell Anne Cotton (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
419. Oct 05 #6: Also on Saturday, the BSI annual reception, which is open to all Sherlockians and friends, will be held from 2:00 to 5:00, at 24 Fifth Avenue (between 9th and 10th Streets) [note the different location and time]; there will be passed hors d'oeuvres and an open bar, and traditional and untraditional entertainment. The cost is $68.00 (details below), or $78.00 after Dec. 1 or at the door.
420. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub at 160 West 54th Street (between 7th and 6th Avenues) (and yes, 6th Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas). It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations will be important; the contact is Judith Freeman (280 Ninth Avenue #1-C, New York, NY 10001 <judith-freeman@worldnet.att.net>).
421. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $165.00 a night (Tuesday through Saturday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI. Breakfast is not included in the price this year. Other charges (telephone calls, meals, room service, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer's available to all Sherlockians, and room reservations must be made directly to the Algonquin (mention The Baker Street Irregulars) at 212-840-6800 on or before Dec. 5.
422. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement with the prices and a reservation form for the Thursday lecture and the Saturday reception, you can request a copy from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278.
423. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras that include 14% in state and city taxes. Ask for the lowest available rate, don't be shy about asking for discounts (AAA, senior, corporate, weekend specials); if you plan to arrive on Thursday you should confirm that weekend rates apply, and request written confirmation.
424. Madison Hotel (62 Madison Ave. at 27th St.) from $90 (800-923-4766); Chelsea Savoy (204 West 23rd St.) from $99 (866-929-9353); Radio City Apartments (142 West 49th Street) from $109 (877-921-9321); Comfort Inn Central Park (31 West 71st St.) from $110 (800-424-6423). Don't neglect web-sites such as <www.nycvisit.com>, <www.nychotels.com>, and <www.travelocity.com>.
425. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
426. Nov 05 #1: An important warning: Dec. 5 is the deadline for reservations at the Algonquin Hotel for the birthday festivities; the Baker Street Irregulars rate is $165.00 (standard room) and $265.00 (suite), and their telephone number is (212-840-6800).
427. There's another event scheduled during the birthday festivities, on Saturday, Jan. 14, when The Curious Collectors of Baker Street/Baker Street West will hold a "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner (open to everyone) at 6:00 pm at Kennedy's Restaurant (327 West 57th Street); $35.00 per person (including tax and tip, and with a cash bar). You can send your checks to Jerry Kegley (9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343); please include an e-mail address and your primary Sherlockian society affiliation. More information is available at 818-894-1501 <colwinky@aol.com>.
428. And a revision to the item (Oct 05 #4) about The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street): everyone is welcome, attendees will pay their own checks, and it is necessary to tell Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 (212-989-1768) <srice@virtuoso.com> if you're coming to the event; the change is due to Ev Herzog and her husband John being away at a wedding that day.
429. Cyril A. Keller ("The Colossal Schemes of Baron Maupertuis") died on Sept. 9, 2005. He was a teacher, a banker, an excellent magician, and an early member (and Gasogene) of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore. He wrote his thesis at Loyola on "Sherlock Holmes and the Art of Detection", and it was Cy who suggested to Edgar W. Smith that a British shilling should be adopted as "the insignia and talisman" of Irregulars; he received his own Irregular Shilling in 1951.
430. Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties) continue to publish their Sherlockian E-Times with news, and offers of new Sherlockiana, and links to their web-site, which has much more Sherlockiana; you can request an e-mail subscription at <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>.
431. Further to the report (May 05 #2) about the plan to preserve Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle lived as a child), a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (Oct. 24) reports that developers are on the brink of securing all the cash they need to start work on transforming the house into classrooms and a school, with a "literary garden" in keeping with the property's literary connections.
432. Julian Barnes' ARTHUR & GEORGE (Sep 05 #5) was a hot favorite, but the Man Booker Prize (worth £50,000) was won by John Banville's THE SEA, which has soared, as expected, in the sales ranking at www.amazon.co.uk.
433. Reported: "Count Duckula: The Complete First Season" on DVD (three discs, from Capital Entertainment, $39.98); a British 30-minute animated series, with David Jason as the voice of Count Duckula, that aired in Britain on Thames Television in 1987, and the U.S. on Nickelodeon in 1988. The series included "All in a Fog" (in which Count Duckula, in an attempt to be a detective, travels to London and encounters Hawkeye Soames and Dr. Potson).

434. Nov 05 #2: The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has a report by Tim Johnson on the Collection's acquisition of 12 letters written by Conan Doyle to Grant Richards (commenting on Theodore Dreiser) and others, Dick Sveum's "100 Years Ago" discussion of Arthur Upston, Julie McKuras' "50 Years Ago" report on Gladys Mitchell's WATSON'S CHOICE, and

- more; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
435. Hamilton Camp died on Oct. 2. He was a musician and an actor, and was the voice of Prof. Moriarty in the dubbed-into-English version of the 1984 Japanese animated series "Meitantei Holmes" [aka "Sherlock Hound"].
436. The New Playhouse will perform a reading of Lee Shackleford's play "Holmes & Watson" (1989) at The Temple: A Paul Mitchell Partner School (22-24 West Church Street) in Frederick, Md., at 3:00 pm on Dec. 4; there's no charge for admission, their telephone number is 301-668-8019, and their web-site is at <www.newplayhouse.org>.
437. Bronner's Christmas Wonderland (25 Christmas Lane, Box 176, Frankenmuth, MI 48734) (800-361-6736) offered a 6" Sherlock Holmes ornament some years ago, and now Ev Herzog has spotted a new "International Snowmen" series of 4" ornaments with one of them, representing England, in Sherlockian costume (item #1105291 ($14.99)). Their website is at <www.bronners.com>.
438. Reported: The BEST AMERICAN CRIME WRITING series, edited by Otto Penzler and Thomas H. Cook, was begun in 2002; the 2005 volume (New York: HarperCollins/Ecco, 2005; 384 pp., $14.95), guest-edited by James Ellroy, includes David Grann's "A Reporter at Large: Mysterious Circumstances" (about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green reprinted from The New Yorker).
439. Jane Austen's Mr. Darcy has again been voted the greatest hero in literature, as he was two years ago (Jun 03 #3). The Scotsman has reported (Oct. 13) that 4,000 readers voted in a new poll at <www.books.co.uk>, and Harry Potter ranked second; Frodo was in 10th place, and Sherlock Holmes in 16th place. In a different poll, Helen Fielding's Bridget Jones was voted the greatest literary heroine.
440. Reported: THE SHORT LIFE AND LONG TIMES OF MRS. BEETON, by Kathryn Hughes (London: Fourth Estate, 2005; 525 pp., £20.00); Isabella Beeton created the famous "Book of Household Management" (which gave Maude Crosse considerable concern in A DUET: WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS), and according to a review in The Times Literary Supplement (Nov. 4), anyone doubting the continuing resonance of her name should reflect on the fact that in 1995, the food company Ginster's paid Beeton's modern publishers, Ward, Lock, £1 million to use the "Mrs. Beeton" name in perpetuity on its pasties and other meat products. She died in 1865, well before her husband began publishing Beeton's Christmas Annual, in which "A Study in Scarlet" appeared in 1887.

441. Nov 05 #3: The first program (combining of "A Study in Scarlet" with "The Speckled Band") from the Russian "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson" series (1979-1985) aired recently on a cable channel in the Washington area with subtitled in English; the series stars Vasily Livanov and Vitaly Solomin, and it's worth viewing (especially with subtitles). Charles Prepolec reports that all five programs are available subtitled in English in a set of DVDs (recorded in PAL format) for $69.99, from ALLDVD.CA (Box 57521, 1498 Royal York Road, Etobicoke, ON M9P 3B0, Canada (416-614-7857); their web-site is at <www.alldvd.ca/productDisplay.do?itemId=4282>.
442. Reported by Lenny Picker: HORROR: ANOTHER 100 BEST BOOKS, edited by Stephen Jones and Kim Newman (New York: Carroll & Graf, 272 pp., $16.95); includes an essay by Tony Richards on "The Hound of the Baskervilles".
443. Ursula Howells died on Oct. 15. She began her acting career in repertory theater in 1940, and made her first film in 1946, and she also appeared in many roles on radio and television. She played Joan in "The Case of the Cunningham Heritage" in the Sheldon Reynolds "Sherlock Holmes" series in (1954).
444. Warren Randall reports that he will be offering a new society pin during the birthday festivities in January, for The Baker Street Arabs, organized by Paul C. Smedegaard while stationed in Iraq. The pin was designed by Paul Churchill, and it costs $9.00 postpaid ($11.00 outside North America) from Warren (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
445. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will dine at the House of Commons on Jan. 7 to celebrate Sherlock Holmes' birthday, and there will be a "morning after" gathering at Imperial College on Jan. 8. For those who wish to plan farther ahead, their London Weekend Festival ("Another Capital Idea, Watson") will be held on Apr. 6-9; arrangements are not yet final, and details will be available before too long. R. J. Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England) is their membership secretary; their web-site is at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.
446. Douglas G. Green offers a new book that will interest Sherlockians: THE ADVENTURE OF THE MURDERED MOTHS AND OTHER RADIO MYSTERIES, by Ellery Queen; it's a collection of 14 scripts from the old "Ellery Queen" radio series, and one of them is "Mr. Short and Mr. Long" (it was broadcast in 1943 and is described as "the case that Sherlock Holmes failed to solve"). It was revised by Frederic Dannay and published in THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1944) as "The Disappearance of Mr. James Phillimore". Available from Crippen & Landru (Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505) <www.crippenlandru.com> for $45.00 (in cloth, with an additional mini-play in a separate chapbook) or $20.00 (softcover); shipping extra.
447. Spotted by Andy Fusco: all 39 episodes of the 1954 Ronald Howard "Sherlock Holmes" series on 5 DVDs ($19.99), from DVDMegaPacks.com (2445 Nevada Avenue North, Golden Valley, MN 55427 (888-577-0666) <www.dvdmegapacks.com>. Scott Bond reports that the set is marketed by Mill Creek Entertainment and includes the older introduction by Christopher Lee filmed in the sittingroom at the Sherlock Holmes Pub.
448. Nov 05 #4: Pascal Calabrese died on Oct. 13. He made news in the 1960s, when after being convicted of armed robbery in Buffalo, he testified against major Mafia figures and became the first Mafia informant to be given a new identity by the federal government. He lived for a time in Spokane, Wash., where he owned and ran the Sherlock Holmes Case & Precinct House, which closed in 1981 after the revelation that the chief of the intelligence unit of the Spokane Police Department had invested $50,000 as a secret partner (according to his obituary in the Buffalo News, Oct. 21).
449. The latest news from New Orleans is that the local Sherlockians (Le Cercle de Sherlock Holmes) met on Nov. 8 at the Polo Bar in the Windsor Court Hotel, only a couple of blocks from the French Quarter. Jens Byskov Jensen notes that "its ownership by the Orient-Express company suits our love for classic mystery perfectly."
450. The Library of Congress continues to record interesting talking books for its National Library Service, the latest being Jack French's PRIVATE EYELASHES: RADIO'S LADY DETECTIVES (Jan 04 #3).
451. Reported: THE SILLY SIDE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Philip Ardagh (London: Faber and Faber, 2005; 64 pp., £7.99), subtitled "A Brand New Adventure Using a Bunch of Old Pictures"; the old pictures are Sidney Paget's illustrations from the Strand Magazine, and the publisher's warning is: "Be prepared for some very silly sleuthing indeed".
452. Robert Duvall, who starred as Dr. Watson in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), was one of those selected for this year's award of the National Medal of Arts. President Bush presented the awards at a ceremony in the Oval Office on Nov. 10, followed by a formal dinner that evening in the White House's State Dining Room.
453. "Figures resting in an extensive landscape" is the title of an oil painting (32x53") by Sidney Paget that was auctioned at Christie's in London on Nov. 9; it sold for £3,000 including the buyer's premium. The original artwork for Paget's illustration of Holmes and Moriarty grappling at the Reichenbach was sold at Sotheby's on Nov. 16, 2004, for $220,000 (including the buyer's premium).

454. John Fowles died on Nov. 5. He was a highly-regarded novelist, best known for his novels THE COLLECTOR (1963), THE MAGUS (1966), and THE FRENCH LIEUTENANT'S WOMAN (1969); he also wrote a perceptive and appreciative foreword and afterword for "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in the 1974 Jonathan Cape edition.
455. The Hollister Free Lance reported (Sept. 24) that Hollister (Calif.) is not far from the John Steinbeck House in Salinas and Eugene O'Neill's Tao House in Danville. O'Neill owned 8,000 books, and one day his wife Carlotta complained to O'Neill that she felt as if they lived in a library; most of the books soon went into storage, but a representative few are exhibited in the house: "One shelf near his bed exhibits complete sets of detective stories, including Sherlock Holmes and Dashiell Hammett's novels."
456. Nov 05 #5: The autumn dinner of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes (for members and female guests) was held on Nov. 4 at La Prima Donna in New York, where Ev Herzog announced six new members: Gloria Wachs ("A Bijou Villa"), Susan Cohen ("The Women of Many Nations and Three Separate Continents"), Anita Janda ("Modesty Among the Virtues"), Margaret J. Fleesak ("Lomax the Sublibrarian"), Sabina H. Hollis ("The Science of Deduction and Analysis"), and Rebecca Robare ("Sophy Kratides").
457. Alfred Shaughnessy died on Nov. 2. He began his film career in Britain as a director in 1952, and also worked as a screenwriter, producer, and script editor; he adapted "The Crooked Man" for the Granada series in 1984.
458. William R. Hanson, MD, has created another Sherlockian first day cover, for the 3c silver coffee pot coil stamps issued by the U.S. Postal Service in September; the cachet shows Holmes using a well-polished coffee pot to observe Watson in "The Hound of the Baskervilles". The cover (signed on the front or back) costs $10.00 postpaid (in the U.S.); checks (payable to Mary T. Hanson) can be sent to William R. Hanson at 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
459. For completist comic-strip fans: the "Paige of the Baskervilles" strip from Bill Amend's "Foxtrot" that ran in various newspapers on Nov. 13, 1993, was reprinted in his TAKE US TO YOUR MALL (Andrews and McMeel, 1995).
460. The American edition of George MacDonald Fraser's FLASHMAN ON THE MARCH has been published (New York: Knopf, 2005; 335 pp., $24.00); as noted earlier (Apr 05 #3), the novel is about Flashman's exploits during the Abyssinian War of 1868, so Canonical allusions are unlikely. FLASHMAN AND THE TIGER (Oct 99 #4) involved Colonel Sebastian Moran, with whom Flashman had three encounters (including one in an empty house in Baker Street in 1894).
461. Nov 05 #6: "Kate Martinelli has seen her share of weird things as a San Francisco cop, but never anything quite like this: an ornate Victorian sitting room straight out of Sherlock Holmes story--complete with violin, tobacco-filled Persian slipper, and gun shots in the wallpaper that spell out the name of the late queen. Philip Gilbert was a true Holmes fanatic, from his antiquated decor to his vintage wardrobe. And no mere fan of fiction's greatest detective, but a leading expert with a collection of priceless memorabilia--a collection some would die for. And perhaps someone did: in his collection is a century-old manuscript purportedly written by Holmes himself--that eerily echoes details of Gilbert's own murder."
462. That's the publisher's blurb for Laurie R. King's THE ART OF DETECTION, due from Bantam in June, reported in the November issue of Laurie's newsletter. Her blog at <www.laurierking.blogspot.com> includes a link to the newsletter, and a report on her recent joint appearance with Michael Chabon. For those unfamiliar with Laurie's work other than her Mary Russell series, the new book is in her series about Kate Martinelli, a modern-day San Francisco homicide inspector; the first novel in the Martinelli series, A GRAVE TALENT (1994), won Laurie an Edgar for best first novel.
463. It is interesting to compare Nick Rennison's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE UNAUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY (London: Atlantic Books, 2005; 280 pp., £14.99) with William S. Baring-Gould's long-out-of-print biography SHERLOCK HOLMES (1962); they share very little, except the same cover photograph of William Gillette and the same approach to their subject. Rennison does not attempt to create a detailed chronology for all of Holmes' cases, and he dismisses some of the more fantastic Sherlockian scholarship as nonsensical; he also places Conan Doyle firmly in Holmes' world, which may be useful at a time when the general reader might be expected to know more about Conan Doyle than was true more than 40 years ago. Baring-Gould's biography was credible (many of us have encountered people who read it and confessed that they had not known that Sherlock Holmes was a real person), and it is quite likely that Rennison will have the same success. The "unauthorized" in the title is a fine touch, not because there's anything scandalous in the book but rather because it will tend to enforce its credibility with readers who may expect an authorized biography to be boring. Sherlock Holmes, of course, is never boring.
464. George Ault reports (and doesn't recommend) a shop called Mystery Pizza in Hobart, Ind., with menu items named in honor of various characters in mysteries. The Sherlock Holmes pizza has sausage, pepperoni, ham, mushrooms, green peppers, onion, and black olives; the Dr. Watson has classic Italian beef on a toasted homemade bun served with its own juice and pepperoncini on the side.
465. Further to the item (Oct 05 #2) on the exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York on "The Perfect Medium: Photography and the Occult" (through Dec. 31), Susan Dahlinger reports that in addition to photographs of the Cottingley Fairies, there also is a photograph of Denis Conan Doyle taken about two weeks after his father's death by William Hope; the spirit of Sir Arthur appears above Denis' head and over his left shoulder. And in another photograph showing a stream of ectoplasm issuing from the nose of a medium, a benevolently smiling Conan Doyle appears in the ectoplasm.

466. Nov 05 #7: The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers Dayna McCausland's article about Lady Jean Conan Doyle's journal from her trip to North America in 1914, a report on Chris Redmond's Fifth Annual Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture, and greetings from the new curator Peggy Purdue. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>.
467. The new mail-order catalog from the BBC America Shop (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043 (800-898-4921) <www.bbcamericashop.com> has DVD sets from the Granada series, "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" on DVD, and two exclusive offers: an attractive Sherlock Holmes ornament with the Paget illustration showing Holmes and Watson in the railway carriage ($29.98), and a set of four 20-ounce Sherlock Holmes Pub Glasses ($29.98). The web-site also has a Sherlock Holmes Mini Bar set ($19.98).
468. Another Sherlockian cover, honoring this month's William Gillette Festival in Tryon, N.C., is available from Bob Reynolds (Box 311, Lynn, NC 28750); Morris, Tryon's mascot, is a horse sculpture, 12 feet high, and (during the Festival) wearing a deerstalker and smoking a Sherlockian pipe; the cover costs $5.00 plus a SASE (or IRCs for foreign orders).
469. Don Hobbs has located what appears to be the only Sherlockian book translated into Maltese: SHERLOCK HOLMES U L-QAMPIENA TA' NOFS IL-LEJL [SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MIDNIGHT BELL]; it's a pastiche by David James that was published in English in 2000. The translation has 168 pp. and costs 3.75 Maltese lira (about $11.03) plus shipping ($10.00 to the U.S.); it's available from the Malta Online Bookshop (20 Triq ix-Xahda, M' Scala, ZBR10, Malta) <www.maltaonlinebookshop.com/cgi-bin/maltabooks/00273.html>.

470. Nov 05 #8: THE DOGS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by William S. Dorn, with illustrations by Ian Malcolm Earlson (Denver: Pencil Productions, 2005; 100 pp. $16.95 postpaid to the U.S./$17.95 to Canada/$20.95 elsewhere), is an amusing collection of essays written (well, dictated) by 20 of the dogs who appear in the Canon, with their own (and quite often rather different) versions of what happened in the stories.
471. Reported: THE CHINA MYSTIQUE: PEARL S. BUCK, ANNA MAY WONG, MAYLING SOONG, AND THE TRANSFORMATION OF AMERICAN ORIENTALISM, by Karen J. Leong (Berkeley: Univ. of California Press, 2005; 304 pp., $55.00 cloth, $21.95 paper); an academic to three famous Chinese women (Anna May Wong's film career included her appearance in "A Study in Scarlet" (1933). If you've forgotten who Mayling Soong was, she was better known as Madame Chiang Kai-shek.
472. Spotted by Andrew Blau: a Dressed Beagle by American Kennel Club and Steiff (item 843824, $60.00) from FAO Schwarz at <www.fao.com>; "this beagle celebrates his proper English background in a tartan plaid overcoat and hat (14" long).
473. BBC-4 is planning an "Arthur Conan Doyle Season" at Christmas (Dec. 24-28), with documentaries that include "Arthur Conan Doyle for the Defence" (about the Edalji and Slater cases), "The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes" ("about the strange but oddly compelling world of Holmes aficionados") "Time Shift: A Study in Sherlock" ("a trawl through various screen and television incarnations"), a repeat of "The Mysterious Affair of Sherlock Holmes and the Visionary Doctor" (1999), and older films and television shows, including Peter Cushing's "The Sign of Four" (1968).
474. Andrew Gulli continues to edit and publish his new Strand Magazine, and he offers his Sherlock Holmes 2006 Calendar, in full color with illustrations from the original and new Strands and other sources; Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com>.
475. "Pride & Prejudice" (Sep 05 #4) opened in the U.S. this month, and reviews have been enthusiastic, but only one of them seen so far has mentioned the location shooting at Groombridge Place (the inspiration for Birlstone Manor in "The Valley of Fear").
476. A diamond necklace/tiara owned by Dame Jean Conan Doyle will be at auction at Bonhams in London on Dec. 8, estimated at £10,000 to 15,000; late 19th century (circa 1890), set throughout with old brilliant and single-cut diamonds. Their web-site is at <www.bonhams.com>.
477. I reported earlier (Apr 04 #4) about Stanford University's Community Reading Project, which made Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" available by mail and on the Web in serial facsimile; they've done two other novels, and they are now getting ready to publish a collection of Sherlock Holmes stories as they appeared in The Strand Magazine. There is no charge for the mailings (although you are asked to donate to the project, and you can subscribe at <www.sherlockholmes.stanford.edu>.

478. Dec 05 #1: Add another event to the birthday festivities: The Beacon Society will hold its annual meeting on Friday at 3:00 pm on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel, Scott Monty reports, "to bestow the third Beacon Award on a deserving nominee, review our progress in 2005, and discuss opportunities and plans for 2006."
479. Further to my review (Dec 04 #5) of Tom Mann's HORROR AND MYSTERY PHOTOPLAY EDITIONS AND MAGAZINE FICTIONIZATIONS: THE CATALOG OF A COLLECTION (Jefferson: McFarland, 2004; 184 pp., $35.00), Tom repeats an anecdote told by radio historian Jim Harmon about Richard Gordon, who played Sherlock Holmes on the radio in the 1930s: "Fellow radio actor and coincidentally writer of some Holmes pastiche novels Frank Thomas recalls Gordon as something of a John Barrymore type. Once walking down a street at an hour far too early in the day for an actor, Gordon urgently asked Thomas, 'What is that woman's name coming this way? Thomas looked. 'I don't believe I know her. Why?' Gordon shuddered. 'I believe she was my third wife and I need to know how to address her if she speaks.'"
480. LE RAT GEANT DE SUMATRA is a French translation of Richard L. Boyer's 1976 pastiche (Paris: Editions Mycroft's Brother, 2003; 179 pp., E20.00); John Bennett Shaw enjoyed the pastiche (in English). The publisher is Thierry Saint-Joanis, at 2, impasse de la Serre, Saint-Julien, 632320 Montaigutle-Blanc, France <www.mycrofts.net>, and he has a wide variety of Sherlockiana available in French.
481. The flier for "ACD at Thirty-Five" (celebrating the 35th anniversary of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library) is now available, and there's an interesting schedule and a fine list of speakers; the event will be held on Oct. 19-22 next year. If you're not already on their mailing list, you can write to ACD@35 (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada) <acd35@sympatico.ca>.
482. According to the [London] Express, Rupert Everett (who starred in "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking") has rejected repeated overtures from the BBC to play Holmes again in a series of specials, because he would rather star in more up-to-date dramas. "I constantly suggest new things to the BBC," he said, "and they go, 'No, but do you want to do Holmes again?'"
483. The Oxford Bookworms Library offers a long list of stories adapted for language students, including SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE DUKE'S SON ["The Priory School") and SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SPORT OF KINGS (Silver Blaze); Oxford University Press, 64 pp., $5.67 or £3.20.
484. One way to see which authors are important to collectors is to compare the prices: a copy of Lippincott's Monthly Magazine (July 1890) containing the first appearance of Oscar Wilde's "The Picture of Dorian Gray" was offered at auction (in a lot with a copy of Conan Doyle's THE PARASITE) at Christie's in London on Nov. 30, estimated at £400-600, and it didn't sell; copies of that issue of the magazine are available at www.bookfinder.com with prices ranging from $1,800 to $2,600. Prices for copies of the Feb. 1890 issue (with "The Sign of the Four", range from $8,500 to $12,500.
485. Dec 05 #2: Christy Allen discovered <www.art.com>, where they offer reproductions of two illustrations of fairies by Richard Doyle, artwork by N. C. Wyeth from THE WHITE COMPANY, posters from Rathbone/Bruce movies, and an Andre Renoux print that shows The Sherlock Holmes in London. Barnes & Noble also offer a fine assortment of reproductions of attractive Sherlockian artwork; go to <www.bn.com> and search prints & posters.
486. Bob Thomalen reports that "Springtime in Baker Street" (Jun 05 #4), planned for Apr. 22-23 in 2006, has been moved to the Doubletree Hotel in Norwalk, Conn. More information is available from Bob (82 Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512 (845-225-2445) <the3garridebs@suscom.net>.
487. L. M. Goode, who supplied the information about the Paget oil painting (Nov 05 #4), has a web-site at <www.sidneypaget.com> with details on a new chapbook edition of "A Scandal in Bohemia" with the Paget illustrations in full color, and with a "trifling monograph" on Paget, and a portrait of Paget by Phil Cornell. $18.98 postpaid; for those who lack Internet and PayPal access, checks payable to the Goode Press can be sent to Box 442, Greendale, WI 53129.
488. The Off-Broadway Theatre in Salt Lake City ("Utah's Longest Running Improv Comedy Troupe") will perform Cody K. Carlson's new play "The Adventures of Sheer-Luck Homes & Snotson" from Feb. 10 to Mar. 18. Their web-site is at <www.theobt.com>. "It plays much more like Edmund Blackadder and Baldrick than Holmes and Watson," the playwright notes. "Nevertheless it is a parody of the Victorian sleuth, albeit with monsters, robots, and evil Frenchmen."
489. Howard B. Gottlieb died on Dec. 1. He spent more than forty years as an archivist at Boston University, gathering personal papers of more than 2,000 Americans and Europeans, including Isaac Asimov, Alistair Cooke, Robert L. Fish, Michael Harrison, Angela Lansbury, and Basil Rathbone. Many stories are told about his efforts to build the archives: a fine example is about CBS anchorman Dan Rather, who donated his papers in 1960 and had his secretary clear off his desk every Friday afternoon and send what she had gathered to Gottlieb.
490. Reported: Caleb Carr's pastiche THE ITALIAN SECRETARY (Apr 05 #5), read unabridged by Simon Prebble on 5 CDs (Simon and Schuster, $43.50).

491. There's more news about Liberton Bank House, where Conan Doyle lived as a child (Nov 05 #1): the Cockburn Conservation Trust and the Dunedin School have secured a £100,000 grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund; the Edinburgh Evening News reported (Dec. 6) that the rest of the funding to preserve the house is largely in place.
492. Noted by Ev Herzog: Sherlock (The Game Where Memory and Deduction Are "Elementary"), with a hound in S'ian costume on the box (item 8002), in a catalog from Chinaberry, 2780 Via Orange Way, Spring Valley, CA 91978 (800-776-2242) <www.chinaberry.com>; $9.95. And a Peterson Pipe and Zippo Lighter Gift Set, with a Janus-faced silhouette of Sherlock Holmes on the lighter (item 5736-030) in a catalog from Professional Cutlery Direct, 242 Branford Road, North Branford, CT 06471 (800-859-6994) <www.cutlery.com>; $99.95.
493. Dec 05 #3: Stan Berenstain died on Nov. 26. With his wife Jan he created the Berenstain Bears in 1962, launching a series of children's books that became one of the most successful in children's literature; the series, with about 250 books, has sold more than 260 million copies and the Berenstain Bears have appeared in stage musicals, television series, videocassettes, and toys. THE BEAR DETECTIVES: THE CASE OF THE MISSING PUMPKIN was published in 1975, with Detective Brother and Detective Sister appearing in Sherlockian costume; they've been seen in many later books, and in a set of figurines issued in 1985.
494. It seems quite worthwhile to check the $1.00 bin at Wal-Mart: Jennie Paton discovered a "Cartoon Craze" DVD with Mutt and Jeff in "Slick Sleuths" from Digiview Productions (Aug 05 #5), and now she has found "Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of the Four" (also from Digiview) with the 1985 animation starring Peter O'Toole as Sherlock Holmes.
495. Stephen Kempski has reported that the set of 5 DVDs with all 39 episodes of the 1954 Ronald Howard "Sherlock Holmes" television series (Nov 05 #3) is available for $14.99 from Heartland America (8085 Century Boulevard, Chanhassen, MN 55317 (800-229-2901) <www.heartlandamerica.com>. Also "The Best of Sherlock Holmes", a set of 25 CDs with 50 Rathbone/Bruce radio programs ($19.99).
496. Clive James has written about Sherlock Holmes before; the Dec. 16 issue of the Times Literary Supplement has his report on his "literary education in sludge fiction" (kindly forwarded by Ken Lanza), in which James comments on Holmes' "appeal to generations of adolescent boys who couldn't keep their rooms tidy and whose laundry was done by their mothers - a point reinforced by the large number of adult males who even today make a cult of the Baker Street bohemian. Invariably the Sherlockologists are permanent adolescents retaining all the train-spotting tendencies of youth."
497. "Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years" is a 14-minute video travelogue about where Holmes went during the Great Hiatus, created by Jane Hindsley (18559 Carpenter Street, Homewood, IL 60430 <jane@hindseytranscriptions.com>; it is available on DVD for $10.00 postpaid (in the U.S., plus shipping elsewhere), and payment by credit card is welcome. It's a nice demonstration of what can be done with modern technology.
498. Don Dillstone spotted a story in the Los Angeles Times (Dec. 14) about a murder investigation, quoting police sgt. Rick Longshore: "You threw away the impossible, you dust off the implausible, and what you've got left is what you've got."
499. Jerry Neal Williamson ("The Illustrious Client") died on Dec. 8. He was a teen-ager when he founded The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis in 1947, and he went on to edit three Case-Books for the Clients, and, still a teenager, he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1950. He was an insurance company special agent, and a writer, with more than 30 horror and science-fiction novels to his credit; in one of his horror novels, THE TULPA (1981), his characters names echoed the names of Sherlockians, and one of his murder victims was Mike Whelan. Jerry was the senior surviving Investitured member of the BSI.

500. Dec 05 #4: The first issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the newsletter of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust) reports on The Baker Street Irregulars Archives, with Glen Miranker's excellent article on the Edgar W. Smith material he has donated to the Archives (and he quotes from Smith's correspondence with Vincent Starrett and Edith Meiser). You can request a copy of the newsletter from Julie McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124) <mike9750@aol.com>.
501. The 25th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held in Dayton on Mar. 10-12; Cathy Gill (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net> maintains the mailing list.
502. THE FORGOTTEN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by H. Paul Jeffers (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2005; 236 pp., $14.95), is his third Sherlockian book (the others being THE ADVENTURE OF THE STALWART COMPANIONS and MURDER MOST IRREGULAR); this book offers 13 short stories adapted from radio scripts that were written by Anthony Boucher and Denis Green for the Rathbone/Bruce radio series in 1945 and 1946.
503. Robert Sheckley died on Dec. 9. He sold his first story in 1951 and played a major role in the development of modern science fiction; he edited an anthology AFTER THE FALL (1980) that included William F. Nolan's Sherlockian story "Sungrab".
504. Reported: Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE MISSING MARQUESS, from Penguin/Philomel in February (224 pp., $10.99); "an Enola Holmes mystery" (Enola is the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock) for children aged 4-8. The author has won Edgars from the Mystery Writers of America in 1995 (best young adult) and in 1996 (best juvenile).
505. Pasquale Accardo's POETRY COULD BE VERSH: A CATENA OF CANONICAL LIMERICKS was published for the birthday celebrations in 2004; it will please those who enjoy limericks (and perhaps annoy those who don't), and the 71-page booklet costs $10.00 (plus shipping) from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada) <www.batteredbox.com>.
506. The Feb. 2006 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, offers editor Janet Hutchings' annual tribute to Sherlock Holmes: there's nice cover art by Frederick Dorr Steele, Jon L. Breen's round-up of Sherlockian book reviews, and an amusing pastiche by Steve Hockensmith ("Wolves in Winter").
507. "Mary also said she likes Sherlock Holmes, Jeopardy, has a 'lovely family' and reads the newspaper to keep up with current events." That's Mary Johnson in Lapper, Mich., interviewed by the Lapeer County Press when she celebrated her 101st birthday.
508. John Sherwood spotted a news story about an exhibition of vaudeville material that includes a letterhead proclaiming the talents of Sherlock Holmes, "Premiere of Dogs", who "Thinks--Talks--and Acts." "Vaudeville Nation" opened at the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts in New York on Nov. 15, and will run through Apr. 1. There's much more information about the exhibition at <www.nypl.org/press/vaudeville.cfm>.
509. Dec 05 #5: The British press has reported the collapse of the world-famous gun-maker Webley & Scott, noting that their pistols were used to kill President Lincoln and Grigori Rasputin, that General Custer had a pair of them at the Battle of the Little Big Horn, and that they were used by Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. The company has made only airguns since 1979. According the FBI's report on their examination of Booth's pistol, it was a Deringer. And in case you're wondering about Holmes and Watson, there is no mention of a Webley in the Canon.
510. Jess Nevins' THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF FANTASTIC VICTORIANA, with an introduction by Michael Moorcock (Austin: MonkeyBrain Books, 2005; 1200 pp., $50.00), is an interesting exploration of the fantastic literature of the 19th century, and Conan Doyle is of course included, with entries for Irene Adler, Edward Bellingham, Jack Brocket, Micah Clarke, Brigadier Gerard, Sherlock Holmes, Sir Nigel Loring, Professor Moriarty, and Duncan Warner. And

- planned for 2006: Kim Newman's THE MAN FROM THE DIOGENES CLUB, set in the 1970s, much later than his Sherlockian pastiche ANNO DRACULA (Dec 92 #3).
511. Francine Kitts spotted a "Green Quote Tote Bag" at Barnes & Noble ($14.95), with "25 quotations from timeless novels" printed on it. And of course one of the quotations is from the Canon: "Exactly, my dear Watson." The stores also have a (free) plastic bag with the same quotes.
512. Anna Quindlen's IMAGINED LONDON: A TOUR OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST FICTIONAL CITY (Washington: National Geographic Society, 2004; 192 pp., $20.00) is a delightful book; "I have been to London too many times to count in the pages of books," she explains, "to Dickensian London rich with narrow alleyways and jocular street scoundrels, to the London of Conan Doyle and Margery Allingham with its salt-of-the-earth police officers and troubled aristocrats." Baker Street is only one of many places she visits, and anyone who has enjoyed London will enjoy this book.
513. And did you expect Barnes & Noble to quote Holmes as saying, "Elementary, my dear Watson"? He doesn't, of course, in any of the 60 Canonical tales. He does say "Exactly, my dear Watson" in three tales (one of them a novel): "The Missing Three-Quarter", "Wisteria Lodge", and "The Valley of Fear".
514. Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES has its first translation (so far only the first volume of a five-volume set): AS AVENTURAS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES (Rio de Janeiro: Jorge Zahar Editor, 2006; 494 pp., R$89.50). Published in Brazil, it has been translated into Portuguese; the publisher has a web-site at <www.zahar.com.br>, and there's been no word on how long it will take to get the remaining four volumes out. Les reports that the Spanish rights have been sold, but that translation's still in the works.
515. The "Arthur Conan Doyle Season" broadcast on BBC-4 over Christmas (Nov 05 #8), and two new documentaries, "Conan Doyle for the Defence" (dealing with the George Edalji and Oscar Slater cases) and "The Man Who Loved Sherlock Holmes" (about Richard Lancelyn Green) were by far the most interesting of the programs; the second show included footage from the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's recent excursion to Switzerland, and many interviews with Richard's family and friends. There has been no word of plans for broadcast in other countries, or release on cassettes and DVDs.
516. Dec 05 #6: The fall issue of the Tonga Times (published by the Mini-Tonga Scion Society) has news about the world of Sherlockian miniatures, including grand color photographs of Alice Baudet's version of 221 Baker Street, and a miniature version of the Agra treasure map. The newsletter ($10.50 for three issues/$11.50 to Canada/$13.50 elsewhere) is published by Trish and Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229) <www.hometown.aol.com/mini-tongasociety/mini1.htm>.
517. The East Lynne Theater Company performed a radio-theater adaptation of "The Copper Beeches" (adapted by Gayle Stahlhuth) in Cape May, N.J. on Nov. 4-5, and there will be another production on Mar. 3-4. There's more information at their web-site <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
518. The Weekly Standard likes to have a literary cover every once in a while, usually showing an author, and their "holiday reading" issue has Sherlockian artwork (Dec. 12), which you can see in full color at their web-site <www.weeklystandard.com> (click on "recent issues"); there's nothing Sherlockian inside the magazine. The artist is Mark Summers, whose earlier Sherlockian work can be seen in the N.Y. Times Book Review (Jan. 4, 1987) and the Atlantic Monthly (Mar. 1987); you've also seen his work displayed prominently at Barnes & Noble. And his originals are available for purchase (the original for the cover is in the $3,000-5,000 range); Richard Solomon is his agent, and has a web-site at <www.richardsolomon.com>.
519. The animations of the four long stories, with Peter O'Toole's providing the voice of Sherlock Holmes, were released (and broadcast) in the 1980s, and they are now available as "The Animated Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" on a DVD (for $7.95 plus shipping) from Wild Time Comics (703 Washington Street, South Attleboro, MA 02703) <wildtimecomics@aol.com>.
520. Phil Attwell notes that the winter 2005 catalog from Razamataz offers many Sherlock Holmes DVDs. and a 2-DVD set of "6 Classic 30s Thrillers" (£9.99) that includes Arthur Wontner's "Silver Blaze" (1937) and Raymond Massey's "The Speckled Band" (1931); it may be the first DVD of Massey's film. The company's address is Parkside, Avenue 2, Station Lane, Witney, Oxon. OX28 4YF, England <www.erazamataz.co.uk>.
521. Further to the report (Nov 05 #6) on Laurie R. King's THE ART OF DETECTION (her next Kate Martinelli novel), there's more information about the novel (and its Sherlockian content) at Laurie's web-site <www.laurierking.com>, and (to whet readers' appetites) the first chapter of the novel. The website has a link to her blog.
522. In an interview in the N.Y. Times (Dec. 18), Deborah Solomon asked Julian Barnes (author of ARTHUR & GEORGE): "Is Conan Doyle a sentimental favorite of yours?" Barnes replied: "Not at all. He just happened to come attached to the story. I would have been happier if the story had come attached to Rudyard Kipling, who is a much greater writer."
523. Dec 05 #7: Further to the item (Jul 05 #2) about Paul Spiring's proposal to exhume Fletcher Robinson's body in order to conduct an autopsy, a story in the Plymouth Western Morning News (Dec. 20) reports that Spiring believes that Fletcher Robinson died of entirely natural causes, and that "we're on the verge of drawing some conclusions which categorically refute the allegations that Conan Doyle stole the plot of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' from Fletcher Robinson." And he said that it appears that Conan Doyle never met Fletcher Robinson's wife Gladys; so "if we accept that there was no adulterous relationship or conflict about authorship then there is no motive and the theory of murder must be dismissed."
524. The Mount Horeb Mustard Museum is located in Mount Horeb, Wis., and (yes) it's devoted to Barry Levinson's collection of mustards (people do collect strange things). And they are sponsoring a Mustard Mystery Contest; they have posted the first chapter at their web-site <www.mustardweb.com>, and contestants are asked to write a second chapter, and there seems to be no requirement that the murderer be "Colonel Mustard, in the lavatory with a plunger." Nor that the mystery be Sherlockian. Thanks to Gayle Harris for reporting the existence of the museum and the contest.
525. Those who read the electronic text-only version of my newsletter had some trouble doing that in recent weeks, because Comcast's e-mail system seems to have been altered in a way that prevents me from inserting text into a message or into an attachment. I'm testing various work-arounds, and may be successful in getting the November issue to Sherlocktron and the mailing lists late, and the December issue on time.
526. Those who receive the ink-on-paper version (with occasional illustrations) likely are aware that our domestic postage rate will increase to 39c (from 37c) on Jan. 8; the circulation department will impose a modest increase on subscriptions and renewals at the end of January. International rates will increase also, but the postal service has not announced how much or when.
527. It has been a few months more than ten years, since I've published an explanation of just what the Spermaceti Press is, and since a reader of the ink-on-paper version has asked, here (again) is the reasoning that led to my choosing the name: Many years ago, when I wanted a whimsical name for the imaginary press from which my seasonal souvenirs were published (following in long Sherlockian tradition of devising interesting names for this sort of thing), it occurred to me that someone whose Investiture in the BSI was "Black Peter" and who lived (at that time) just down the road from Arrowhead, where Herman Melville wrote MOBY DICK, ought to be able to find a name that had something to do with whaling. Of course one wouldn't expect to find printing presses on whaling ships, but some research revealed that there used to be a spermaceti press, which was used for the final processing of whale oil into spermaceti, from which the finest candles were made. And there is just one surviving spermaceti press, preserved at the Nantucket Whaling Museum in Massachusetts, in the original building where in the 19th century millions of candles were made and exported all over the world. Now you know . . .

- Jan 06 #1:
1. Travelers from afar found clear skies and pleasant temperatures when they arrived in New York for the birthday festivities (but winter had returned by the time people left on Sunday). The ASH Wednesday supper was held at O'Casey's, the Christopher Morley Walk was led by Jim Cox on Thursday morning (with lunch at McSorley's, where Chuck Kovacic presented the restaurant with a color portrait of Morley). This year's Baker Street Irregulars Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was Leroy Lad Panek, who talked about the impact of Sherlock Holmes on Early American Detective Fiction.
  2. The William Gillette Luncheon attracted a sizeable crowd on Friday at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Curtis Armstrong introduced Denis, Adrian, and Dame Jean Conan Doyle (impersonated by Paul Singleton, Andrew Joffe, and Sarah Montague); Charles Foley (grandson of Sir Arthur's sister) congratulated them, but only after saying that "my lawyer will be contacting you." Chuck Kovacic presented Moran's with a color portrait of William Gillette. And the traditional open house at Otto Penzler's relocated Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse.
  3. The Beacon Society held its annual meeting in the Algonquin lobby on Friday afternoon; the group's mission is to encourage and recognize programs that introduce young people to Holmes, and the winners of this year's award were Lynn Beaulieu and Kim Bartolo, teachers in upstate New York, who were honored for their long-standing work introducing fifth-graders to the Canon.
  4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Union League Club, where Peter Blau delivered the cocktail-party toast to *the* Woman: Norma Hyder (who went on to dine at the Club with other ladies who have been honored in past years). The agenda of the annual dinner included the usual toasts and traditions;ypresentations by David Musto and Terry Belanger and Lloyd Rose; Tyke and Teddie Niver in a music-hall performance; and a tribute to an era of old Irregulars (the 1950s) by Art Levine (Art and two other Irregulars at the dinner received their Shillings in the 1950s).
  5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, and Irregular Shillings and Investitures were presented to Richard Olken ("Bob Carruthers"), Regina Stinson ("A Little Ribston Pippin"), Curtis Armstrong ("An Actor and a Rare One"), Paul Churchill ("Corot"), Jerry Kegley ("Nathan Garrideb"), Trevor Raymond ("Horace Harker"), and Jennie Paton ("Laura Lyons").
  6. The Baskerville Bash, held at the Manhattan Club, featured the "Sherl-Oscar Awards" presented by the Academy of Sherlockian Arts and Sciences; categories for the awards were "Least Fearsome Hound of the Baskervilles", "Most Shameless Display of Overacting in a Sher-lockian Film", "Best Portrayal of Holmes and Watson in an Alternative Lifestyle", "Best Drug-Induced Hallucination in a Sherlockian Movie", "Best Tribute to Arthur Conan Doyle's Obsession with the Spirit World", "Worst Disguise Featured in a Sherlockian Film", and "Best Choreography in a Sherlockian Film". And miniature Oscars were awarded to those at the table that won the evening's quiz.
7. Jan 06 #2: On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was (as usual) crowded with sellers and buyers, and at 12:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) gathered for their Junior Bloodstain, which featured a discussion of pig-stealing (methodology, not morality), and a reading of Marilyn MacGregor's dramatization of Robert L. Fish's "The Return of Schlock Homes".
  8. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted a goodly crowd to 24 Fifth Avenue, where Mary Ann Bradley introduced the ladies who have been honored as *the* Woman over the years, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported in verse on the events of the previous year and the previous evening. The new winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year was Catherine Cooke, for her article on "Mrs. Hudson: A Legend in Her Own Lodging House". And the John H. Watson Fund benefited from the raffle prize, kindly donated by Jerry and Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street: Maggie Schpak's replica of the snuffbox of old gold, with a great amethyst in the center of the lid, presented to Sherlock Holmes by the King of Bohemia, and from energetic bidding in the traditional auction.
  9. The Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to the auction were Joanne Zahorsky-Reeves (a custom-made Inverness cloak with a matching teddy bear); Ron White and The Scowrers and Molly Maguires and The Persian Slipper Club (Ron's framed color photograph of Willy Werby's reproduction of the sitting-room formerly on view in San Francisco), and Paul Smedegaard (a complete set of the six medals issued for the excursions of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London).
  10. And on Sunday a convivial group of visiting long-weekenders were on hand at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant for a brunch arranged by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
  11. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $24.95 a year ($27.50 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); and there's an option offering a subscription to the BSJ and to the Christmas Annual for $34.95 (or $38.50 foreign). You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, where there's additional interesting material, such as issues of The Lamp-Post (the BSJ's occasional newsletter), some of the papers that have won Morley-Montgomery Awards for their authors, and news of various BSI publications.
  12. The Baker Street Irregulars are planning a sequel to the excursion into the Valley of Fear (Oct 04 #6); the next one (open to all) will be to Salt Lake City, Aug. 29 through Sept. 1, 2008; Salt Lake City was an important venue for part of the first published Sherlock Holmes story, of course, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle visited in 1923 (there's still much to see now that he saw then). Additional details are not yet available, but the contact for the mailing list is Gideon Hill (215-887-8110) <onbridle@verizon.net>.

13. Jan 06 #3: Francine Kitts spotted something worth watching for when there is a repeat of the episode "Hunting" (Nov. 22, 2005) of the TV series "House" (on the Fox network): Dr. Gregory House, played by Hugh Laurie, is seen leaving his home, which has the address 221B. According to TV Guide (Dec. 26), series creator David Shore explained that when they built the set, he said "Let's put Sherlock Holmes' address on it." Shore has often acknowledged that he modeled House after Holmes.
  14. Allen Mackler ("Sarasate") died on Dec. 29. His enthusiasms included cats, classical music, pigs, fine cuisine (he reported often in Baker Street Miscellanea on the grand gourmet Sherlockian dinners at the Culinary Institute of America), and the thoroughly Sherlockian room in his home, and he was an energetic member of Sherlockian societies in Chicago, Washington, and Minneapolis. He became a member of the Baker Street Irregulars in 1990.

15. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" discussion of the poet Harry Graham, a "50 Years Ago" report on The Five Orange Pips and their first anthology of Canonical scholarship, and news from and about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
16. "Smoking Ban Will Leave Theatre World Fuming" was the headline on a story by Mark Fisher in Scotland on Sunday (Jan. 8) about the ban on smoking that will come into force on Mar. 26, when "actors in film, television, and theatre will be forbidden, like the rest of us, from smoking in enclosed public spaces." Other countries allow the use of herbal cigarettes by actors.
17. Pattie Tierney has added to her collection of Sherlockian jewelry (Sep 05 #3): the new items are four domino necklaces with photo transfers of portraits of Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, and Jeremy Brett; $25.00 each plus shipping, and you can request an illustrated flier from Pattie (229 Hereford Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63135 <ptierney@umsl.edu>).
18. For the "I hear of Sherlock everywhere" department: Peter Ashman reports that in Truman Capote's IN COLD BLOOD (1965), the elderly mail messenger of Holcomb, Kansas, recalls: "Time was wasn't anybody here wasn't my kin. Them days, we called this place Sherlock." And yes, there was a Sherlock, Kansas; according to the Finney county library, the Santa Fe railroad changed the name of its station from Sherlock to Holcomb in 1907. The Sherlockians in Kansas might consider erecting a commemorative plaque there some day.
19. "Quick, Dogson," cried Whippet, "the game is afoot!" That's Sherlock Whippet and Dr. Dogson, in John Semper Jr.'s THE SINGULAR AFFAIR OF THE MISSING BALL: A SHERLOCK WHIPPET MYSTERY (Toluca Lake: Barker Street Press, 2005; 70 pp., $24.95); it's an imaginatively illustrated parody, "for children of all ages," and <www.sherlockwhippet.com> offers a sample of the artwork and a link for purchasers. The book also can be ordered through bookstores, or from the publisher (10153.5 Riverside Drive, Toluca Lake, CA 91802); checks or money orders, please. Semper has a long list of credits as a television writer and producer, from "Smurfs (1981) to "Jay Jay the Jet Plane" (2005), and he reports that a sequel, BAST OF THE HOUNDEVILLES, is due soon.

20. Jan 06 #4: Admirers of Bert Coules' BBC Radio 4 series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (starring Clive Merrison and Andrew Sachs in programs based on the unrecorded cases) will welcome the news that the BBC has commissioned Bert to write a third five-program series, to be recorded later this year (the first two series aired in 2002 and 2004).
21. Tina Rhea has noted the 101st annual quiz from King William's College, in The Guardian (Dec. 23) and (one hopes) still available at the paper's website <www.guardian.co.uk/g2/story/0,3604,1673168,00.html>. It's a delightful example of something typically British that one seldom sees here, and Section 17 will be of particular interest to Sherlockians.
22. Phil Attwell notes that the "Complete Sherlock Holmes Box Set" (Nov 04 #2) with the entire Canon broadcast by BBC Radio 4, starring Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Watson (48 hours on 64 CDs), together with a book written by Bert Coules (who dramatized many of the programs), has been discounted to £115 at the BBC Shop (P.O. Box 308, Sittingbourne, Kent ME9 8LW, England) <www.bbcshop.com>.
23. Gordon Lee died on Oct. 16. Credited as Eugene Lee, he starred as Spanky McFarland's chubby little brother Porky in more than 40 "Our Gang" films in the 1930s; two of the films were "Rushin' Ballet" in 1937 (in which he wore a deerstalker) and "Hide and Shriek" in 1938 (in which the kids played detective) Lee told friends that when a growth spurt made him thinner, he was replaced (his replacement was Robert Blake).
24. Julian Barnes' ARTHUR & GEORGE (Sep 05 #5) now has an American edition (New York: Knopf, 2006, 390 pp., $24.95), and his book has been widely and well reviewed. He is on tour in the United States, through Feb. 13 (at least), and you can check his schedule at <www.julianbarnes.com/appearances.html>. And Laura Kuhn reports that ARTHUR & GEORGE is one of the two "main selections" from the Book-of-the-Month Club for February.
25. Forecast: THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by E. J. Wagner, from John Wiley & Sons in March (256 pp., $24.95); "from Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the real forensics behind the great detective's greatest cases."
26. Andy Peck notes a Mystery Guild "editor's choice" edition of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (the first two volumes) in paper covers ($39.95); it's likely the same edition offered earlier by the Quality Paperback Book Club (Oct 05 #2). The Mystery Guild also offers Steve Hockensmith's HOLMES ON THE RANGE and Laurie R. King's LOCKED ROOMS.
27. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers Doug Wrigglesworth's discussion of Conan Doyle's poem "On the Athabaska Trail" (the collection has acquired his notebook with an early draft of the poem), a reminiscence by Peter Wood, a report on the collection by curator Peggy Perdue, and other news. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>. The next Cameron Hollyer Lecturer will be Glen Miranker, who will speak at the library on Apr. 1, with a meeting of The Bootmakers of Toronto following.

28. Jan 06 #5: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, valued at £80,000, came in second in a recent poll of the most valuable works of fiction in the 20th century, according to an article in the January issue of Book and Magazine Collector that ranks first editions in very good condition. James Joyce's ULYSSES led the list (£100,000), and T. E. Lawrence's SEVEN PILLARS OF WISDOM was third (£60,000); only first editions in dust jackets were included in the survey, and a list of the top 100 books was published in The Guardian (Jan. 19). A copy of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in dust jacket was auctioned at £72,000 (plus 15% buyer's premium) in July 1998, and a copy in splendid condition but without dust jacket sold for £5,000 (plus the premium) in December 1998.
29. Cyril Wecht, whose book MORTAL EVIDENCE quoted the Canon (Jan 05 #6), has been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges he misused his public office for private gain; the 84-count indictment includes charges that the Allegheny County Coroner traded unclaimed bodies stored by the coroner's office to Carlow University in Pittsburgh in exchange for use of a laboratory there for his private practice.
30. Gideon Hill has spotted a polyester Sherlock Holmes apron (item T24426) offered ($18.50) by Linefeed (Gatterburggasse 15, A-1190 Vienna, Austria) <www.linefeed.net>.
31. Many of us have fond memories of the musical "Baker Street" (1964), which starred Fritz Weaver, Inga Swenson, and Martin Gabel; the original-cast LP has long been out of print, but Decca has issued a new CD ($14.98).
32. Laura Kuhn spotted a press release announcing plans for "CBS's Secret Saturday Morning Slumber Party" (three hours of FCC-compliant children's programming) scheduled for this fall; one of the older series to run in the period will be the animated "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (Aug 99 #4).
33. Guy Deel died on Dec. 13. Best-known for his cover art for western novels, he had more than 250 covers to his credit, as well as a 130-foot mural at the Gene Autry Museum of Western Heritage in Los Angeles. He also painted covers for the eight-volume set of Sherlock Holmes paperbacks

- published by Berkley in 1977, and the Berkley paperback editions of John Gardner's "Moriarty" novels, and he illustrated the Reader's Digest edition of GREAT CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1966).
34. If you enjoyed Neil Gaiman's story "A Study in Emerald" in SHADOWS OVER BAKER STREET (Jan 05 #3), it's available as a signed print ($40.00) and as a poster ($10.00) at his official on-line store at <www.neilgaiman.net>. Or you can wait for the new version of the web-site to launch in February with the story in PDF format that can be downloaded free. Neil was in New York for the birthday festivities, and to make some recordings for Harper Audio, and "A Study in Emerald" will be issued on a CD later this year.

  35. Jan 06 #6: How many members of The Baker Street Irregulars have had songs named for them? Just one (known so far, at least): "The H.C. Potter's Ball" (recorded in 1946 by Johnnie Mercer with Freddie Slack and his Orchestra) released last year by Mosaic Records in a 3-CD set "Mosaic Select: Freddie Slack" (MS-018; $39.00). Jon Lellenberg heard it played on WAMU-FM's "Hot Jazz Saturday Night" on Jan. 21; host Rob Bamberger talked about Potter's career as a movie director. Potter was "The Final Problem" in the BSI (1971), and he is the only member of the BSI to have a star on Hollywood Boulevard.
  36. Details are now available for the next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend in and near Chicago on Mar. 31-Apr. 2; there will be a dinner (with Les Klinger as featured speaker), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. You can ask Susan Diamond, 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 <szdiamond@comcast.net> for a registration form.
  37. The Mystery Writers of America have announced their nominations for Edgar awards, including Les Klinger (best critical-biographical) for THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE NOVELS; The winners will be announced at the MWA awards dinner in New York on Apr. 27.
  38. History Magazine offers a "Private Investigation" section; their December/January issue has Phill Jones' four-page article on the "Pinkerton Detective Agency" (with a sidebar on "Sherlock Holmes and the Pinkertons"), and the February/March issue his one-page article on "William J. Burns". Back issues can be ordered at their web-site <www.history-magazine.com> (US$5.55 or CA$6.65); and you subscribe for a year for US$24.00/CA$28.00.
  39. Al Gregory <grimpen@nac.net> offers (e-mail only) his 2006 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
  40. Domestic postage rates went up in January, and so has the cost of my newsletter, to $10.25 a year (as in the past, for six or more pages a month of whatever gossip I find appropriate, most of it quite trivial, but much of it Sherlockian or Doylean). The new cost to Canada is $13.15, and overseas it's $15.65. Thanks to Willis G. Frick, the text (without illustrations) is available at <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>.
  41. And a few commercials: a 16-page list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, *the* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.30 postpaid. An 82-page list of 841 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 435 active societies, is $4.85 postpaid. A run of address labels for 357 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.65 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please). The list of BSIs and others also is available from me by e-mail (at no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>.

  42. Feb 06 #1: Bob Verrey died on Jan. 31. He was an energetic member of The Red Circle of Washington and an enthusiastic performer with The Red Circle Players in various roles in the serial "Upstairs, Downstairs, All Around the Holmes" in the 1970s; he also played Sherlock Holmes in "The Certain and Answerable Story of Irene Adler" for the Adventuress of Sherlock Holmes in New York in 1979, and Billy in "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes" at Bouchercon in 1980.
  43. Sorry about that: The Baker Street Journal has increased the price of subscriptions, now $25.95 a year ($28.50 outside the U.S.), or $35.95/$39.50 for the four issues plus the Christmas Annual; credit-card payment can be made only via PayPal at the BSI web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
  44. Skeletons in the Closet still offer their Sherlock Mugs and other interesting merchandise (their profits help to support the Los Angeles County Coroner's Department's Youthful Drunk Driver Visitation Program); their address is 1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033 <www.lacoroner.com>.
  45. This isn't really a trivia question, because I don't know the answer: many people believe that the folks who made the Reginald Owen film "A Study in Scarlet" stole the plot device from Agatha Christie's book, but in fact it was the other way round (the film was released in 1932, while the book was published in 1939). And the question is: was the plot device original when the film was made, and if not, who came earlier, and when and where?
  46. Yes, I've not described the plot device, and I'm not going to, because I'm sure there are people out there who don't know what it is, and I'm not going to spoil the fun. The book was published at TEN LITTLE N****RS, then as TEN LITTLE INDIANS, and now as AND THEN THERE WERE NONE.
  47. Dave Morrill spotted the report that after 145 years Western Union has gone out of the telegram business; effective Jan. 27 they discontinued all Telegram and Commercial Messaging services. Of course they discontinued singing telegrams many years ago, and then stopped having their agents hand-deliver telegrams. According to one article, there were 20 million messages sent in 1929, and 20,000 in 2005. The headline on the story in the Washington Post was "WE REGRET TO INFORM YOU THAT THE TELEGRAM HAS DIED STOP IT IS SURVIVED BY EMAIL CELL PHONE AND THE INTERNET STOP".
  48. And yes, it's quite true that it was the post office that handled telegrams in the U.K. in Sherlockian times, but Holmes did send a telegram to Cleveland in "A Study in Scarlet"; it's likely that Western Union was involved at the American end, and in the reply. The company hasn't gone out of business; according to news reports their revenue last year from money transfers rose 14 percent to $3.8 billion.
  49. The Company of Animals (Ruxbury Farm, St. Ann's Hill Road, Chertsey, Surrey KT16 9NL, England <www.companyofanimals.co.uk> advertises a wide variety of products, including (in the "not all dogs are angels!" department), their Baskerville muzzle, available in 14 sizes and "suitable for most breeds." Thanks to Phil Attwell for reporting on his discovery.

  50. Feb 06 #2: Further to the item about Western Union going out of the telegram business, Sam Roberts' story in the N.Y. Times (Feb. 12) quotes from Linda Rosenkrantz's TELEGRAM! (2003) with a sampler of "famous, infamous, and apocryphal dispatches"; one of them is "Both Mark Twain and Arthur Conan Doyle supposedly sent similar telegrams to a dozen prominent men, all of whom packed up and left town immediately. FLEE AT ONCE-- ALL IS DISCOVERED." The story's widely told, about both authors, but it's always unsourced, and it's not to be found on the CD "The Works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle"; can anyone provide a source for the quote?
  51. The Royal Mail honored the 50th anniversary of the Independent Television Authority last year with a set of postage stamps featuring six "Classic ITV" series; "The Avengers" included "The Curious Case of the Countless Clues" (1968) with Peter Jones as Sir Arthur Doyle, and "The South Bank Show" had "The Underground of the Imagination" (1987) with a segment showing Bernard Davies leading members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London on a "Bruce-Partington Plans" tour.
  52. <www.sherlockiancalendar.homestead.com>, maintained by Ron Fish and Ben and Sue Vizoskie, is an excellent list of upcoming Sherlockian events at; if you would like to have something listed, Ron is at <ronf404@aol.com>.

53. Scott Tate spotted a report about A STUDY IN SCANDAL, by Robyn DeHart (New York: Avon Books, 2006; 368 pp., $5.99); it's a romance novel, and the Publishers Weekly review noted: "Enthralled by the fictional Sherlock Holmes, Victorian aristocrat Lady Amelia Watersfield has recruited three reluctant friends to form the Ladies' Amateur Sleuth Society." The author has a website at www.robyndehart.com, and according to the Romantic Times Book Club magazine (Mar.), there are to be four books in the series; the second one, tentatively title DELICIOUSLY WICKED, is due in October.
54. Gary Lovisi's "The Adventure of the Missing Detective" (in SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HIDDEN YEARS), nominated for an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America last year, is reprinted in THE ADVENTURE OF THE MISSING DETECTIVE: AND 25 OF THE YEAR'S FINEST CRIME AND MYSTERY STORIES!, edited by Ed Gorman and Martin H. Greenberg (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2005; 336 pp., $15.95)
55. John Woodnutt died on Jan. 3. He began his acting career on stage in 1942 and went on to become a prolific character actor on British screen, radio, and television; he played a station master in "The Bruce-Partington Plans" and a pawnbroker in "The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax" on television in the 1965 Douglas Wilmer series, Mr. Merryweather in the Granada version of "The Red-Headed League" (1985), and Arthur Frankland in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC Radio 4 in 1998.
56. Megan Kean spotted an announcement that New Line Television will bring "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" back into syndication this fall; there were 52 episodes in the series, which ran from 1999 to 2002 and used Conan Doyle's title but not much else from the book. Jennifer O'Dell, the skimpily-dressed local girl was Babe of the Month in Playboy (Sept. 2002).
57. Feb 06 #3: "Return of the Black Bullet Elementary to Holmes Clan" was the headline on a story in a New Zealand newspaper (Feb. 4), noted by Karen Murdock. A man named Sherlock Holmes (also known as Shock) built and raced the midget speedway car at the Waiwhakaiho Speedway in 1955, and two Taranaki men found the car in Australia and have brought it home. Mr. Holmes died in 1996. survived by his wife Margaret, his daughters Judy and Pauline, and a son Sherlock (who lives in Australia).
58. David L. Hammer describes A TALENT FOR MURDER as his first book, written in 1958 and published (almost posthumously) in 2000; it's a mystery, dedicated to citizens of Dunleith (a "pleasant little Iowa river town" that resembles Dubuque in many ways), where three murders are committed, and solved (by a young lawyer who might think resembles the author), and there's an admirer of the Sherlock Holmes tales involved in the story. 120 pp., $15.00 (plus shipping) from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada) <www.batteredbox.com>.
59. Among the nice things about looking through single issues of The Strand Magazine are the occasional surprises: in the Aug. 1943 issue they had "Away from It All" photographs of four "men of fame caught in moments of wartime relaxation," one of them with the caption "Leslie Howard, actor and film producer, takes to clarinet-playing, accompanied by his son." His son was Ronald Howard, who was Sherlock Holmes in the 1954 television series. Thanks to Ted Schulz for tracking down the issue.
60. If you want to see what people are buying, you can consult the list of "top sellers" at <www.amazon.com> and the best-seller lists in the N.Y. Times and the Los Angeles Times and other newspaper, but if you want to know what people are reading, you can check the "top 100 books and authors" at Project Gutenberg <www.gutenberg.org>, where they list the top 100 eBooks and authors downloaded yesterday, last 7 days, and last 30 days. Conan Doyle ranks second (behind Mark Twain and ahead of William Shakespeare in all of the three author lists.
61. The Silver Blaze, conceived by Thomas L. Stix, Sr., was run for the first time at Jamaica Race Course on Long Island in 1952; it was revived by The Baker Street Irregulars at historic Saratoga Race Track in upstate New York in 2000, and the next running of the race at Saratoga will be on July 29. It will be a weekend event, with lunch at the track on July 29, and brunch and a program on July 30, all for $115 and with a maximum of 60 people; you can send your checks (made payable to The Baker Street Irregulars, please) to (and obtain more information from) Lou Lewis (2 Lookerman Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) <llewis@lewisgreer.com>, and you can visit the web-site for the race at <www.silverblazeny.homestead.com>. And there's a special rate available for rooms at the Johnstown Holiday Inn.
62. Feb 06 #4: John Baesch spotted the letter to the Daily Telegraph (Jan. 29) written by Robert Epps, former chief police officer at the Bow Street Police Office (as it was originally called), lamenting "the neglect and contempt of this Government and the Mayor of London, who appear to be about to sell off the old Bow Street Police Station." Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson visited the Bow Street station at least once (in "The Man with the Twisted Lip").
63. Yuichi Hirayama maintains an interesting "blog" about "Sherlockiana in Japan" (with content in English) at <ameblo.jp/shinjapan>, and it's helpful to know that you can buy Japanese books on-line at <www.amazon.jp> (there's an "in English" link at the upper right of the opening screen).
64. Karen Murdock reported a library-catalog record for BLEAK HOUSES: MARITAL VIOLENCE IN VICTORIAN FICTION, by Lisa Surrridge, (Athens: Ohio University Press, 2005; 272 pp., $55.00 cloth, $24.95 paper); the author surveys fact and fiction (from Dickens through Conan Doyle), with a final chapter "Are Women Protected? Sherlock Holmes and the Violent Home" that offers interesting commentary on marital violence recorded in the Canon.
65. There are those who believe that Arthur Conan Doyle hated Sherlock Holmes, or merely disliked him, and it is interesting to remember what Sir Arthur wrote in The Strand Magazine (Mar. 1927), recalling his decision to end the stories at the conclusion of THE MEMOIRS: "I did the deed, but, fortunately, no coroner had pronounced upon the remains, and so, after a long interval, it was not difficult for me to respond to the flattering demand and to explain my rash act away. I have never regretted it, for I have not in actual practice found that these lighter sketches have prevented me from exploring and finding my limitations in such varied branches of literature as history, poetry, historical novels, psychic research, and the drama. Had Holmes never existed I could not have done more, though he may perhaps have stood a little in the way of the recognition of my more serious literary work." And he repeated those sentiments in his Preface to THE CASE BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.
66. Frederick Busch died on Feb. 23. He was a highly-regarded novelist, and a professor at Colgate University, and he wrote an introduction for THE SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES (New American Library, 1985) and an article on Sherlock Holmes' centenary for the Chicago Tribune (1987).
67. Greg Darak has noted an article by Francois Thomas on "Les 'dix grandes interpretations' selon Orson Welles (1938)" in the French film magazine Positif (Oct. 2005); according to a clipping found in a scrapbook in the N.Y. Library for the Performing Arts, Welles was one of many people asked by an unknown newspaper in 1938 to list ten great performances. Welles' list included William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes"; later that year he performed on stage in Gillette's "Too Much Johnson" and then on radio in Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes". The others on Welles' list were Mrs. Patrick Campbell in "The Matriarch", Edith Evans in "The Way of the World", Sir Cedric Hardwicke in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street", Spencer Tracy in the film "Now I'll Tell", Whitford Kane in "Juno and the Paycock", Emil Jannings in the film "The Last Laugh", Fedor Chaliapin in "Boris Goudenov", Charles Chaplin in all his films, and Kirsten Flagstad in "Tristan and Isolde".
68. Feb 06 #5: "Russian Actor Livanov to Receive Order of British Empire for Acting Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on a <www.mosnews.com> story on Feb. 23, quoting a Radio Liberty report that Tony Brenton, British ambassador to Russia, had said that the Queen had made that a decision. <news.rin.ru> had more detail: the award is a CBE (Companion of the Order of the British Empire), and Brenton made the announcement during a

- reception at his residence, and Livanov said he was grateful for the honor; he also expressed regret that his friend Vitaliy Solomin, who had played Watson in the series, had died, saying that "I think we would have shared this high award with him." Honours are generally announced in January and June, and by the prime minister rather than an ambassador, and awards are seldom made to a foreigner, but it's not unprecedented.
69. Don Knotts died on Feb. 24. He began his entertainment career before World War II as a ventriloquist, and after the war appeared on stage, screen, and television, winning five Emmys as Deputy Barney Fife on "The Andy Griffith Show". In the film "The Private Eyes" (1981) he starred as Inspector Winship, wearing Sherlockian costume throughout the film.
  70. Phil Attwell notes that "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: The Real Sherlock Holmes" is available on DVD from Razamataz (Parkside, Avenue 2, Station Lane, Witney, Oxon. OX28 4YF, England) <www.erazamataz.co.uk> for £5.95 plus shipping; it's a 57-minute documentary produced, directed, and narrated by Liam Dale in 2004, with (as a "special feature") the radio broadcast of "The Adventure of the Devil's Foot" (1947) starring Nigel Bruce and Tom Conway.
  71. Amy Spencer, in her article on "12 Ways to Remake Your Boring Old Self" (in New York magazine, Feb. 27) suggests as #12 "Disappear Completely"; it may or may not be a coincidence, but she includes information from two sources in Manhattan: Sherlock Investigations <www.sherlockinvestigations.com> and the Holmes Detective Bureau <www.holmesdetective.com>.
  72. Reported: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, edited (and annotated) by Francis O'Gorman (Peterborough: Broadview Press, 2006; 300 pp., CA$11.95/US$9.95/£5.99); O'Gorman's introduction "places the text in the context of numerous literary and cultural debates, about aristocracy, primitivism, biology and criminology, the supernatural, Empire, and spiritualism."
  73. "Sherlock Holmes just might be the man to give the Mary Winspear Centre a jumpstart," according to a report in the Victoria Times Colonist (Feb. 16) on how better use might be made of a community center in Sidney in British Columbia. A report with 42 recommendations begins with a suggestion that the center host a series of festivals, with an annual Sherlock Holmes-inspired gathering leading the list. "There are hundreds of Sherlock Holmes clubs around to world, and Japan has a huge number of them," said Michael Wicks, the report's author, "We certainly believe that there's huge mileage in that."
  74. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection are continuing their annual Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lectures: Glen Miranker is their guest speaker this year, on the topic of "When Is a Book Not a Book?"; the lecture will be at 3:00 pm on April 1, at the Elizabeth Beeton Auditorium in the Toronto Reference Library (no charge for admission).

75. Feb 06 #6: Further to the item (Dec 05 #7) on Paul Spiring having concluded that Fletcher Robinson died of natural causes, rather than murder by Conan Doyle, Plymouth's Western Morning News reported (Feb. 20) is still determined to prove his claim of murder. Garrick-Steele and Spiring "went their separate ways," and Garrick-Steele now says that Fletcher Robinson's death certificate is a forgery. The Diocese of Exeter has still not decided to permit an exhumation (which Spiring still hopes to perform). The next day the paper reported that BBC South West had broadcast an "Inside Out" segment about Garrick-Steele on Feb. 20.
  76. William R. Hanson, MD, has created more Sherlockian first day covers, one for "The Blue Carbuncle" (with the 37c Holiday Cookies stamp and his original artwork in the cachet); $10.00 postpaid. The other was for the Sherlock Holmes/William Gillette festival in Tryon, N.C. (with the festival's pictorial cancel); $4.50 postpaid, or $4.00 if ordered with the Christmas cover. Checks or money orders can be sent to Dr. Hanson at 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
  77. "I very much didn't want it to be one of those books for Holmesheads," Juian Barnes said about his novel ARTHUR & GEORGE in an interview published in the Madison Capital Times (Feb. 3), adding that "I didn't want there to be obscure planted references to a detail in 'The Case of the Upturned Saucer,' where they would be able to tug on their deerstalkers and say, 'Ah, yes.'"
  78. If you're unhappy about the increase in U.S. postage to 39c, consider that in April the basic letter rate in Britain will increase to 32p (that's almost 56c); postage in most other countries costs even more. The Internet is a blessing, of course, to those who can use e-mail instead of the postal service.
  79. Ernest Dudley died on Feb. 1. He was an actor, a writer, and a journalist, and in 1930 he married Eille Norwood's step-daughter Jane Grahame; according to Jack Adrian (who wrote Dudley's obituary in The Independent), this gave rise to an oft-used conversational gambit: "You don't know it, my dear chap, but you're looking at Sherlock Holmes' stepson-in-law!" He adapted "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (the 1923 play that starred Norwood) for a new production in 1953, and again for a tour in 1997.

80. Mar 06 #1: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held in New York on Jan. 12, 2007, and I expect to have the detailed forecast of weekend events in the end-of-October issue of my newsletter. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will have their annual dinner in London on Jan. 20.
  81. Further to the report on the Penguin Classics edition of THE LOST WORLD AND OTHER THRILLING TALES (Jul 04 #1) with an introduction and notes by Philip Gooden and three additional stories ("The Poison Belt", "The Terror of Blue John Gap", and "The Horror of the Heights"), there was a separate Penguin edition of THE LOST WORLD issued as a tie-in to the mini-series (with Bob Hoskins as Challenger) broadcast by BBC-1 in 2001 and by A&E cable in 2002. The separate edition has only "The Lost World" and Gooden's notes on that story, and a ferocious *Tyrannosaurus rex* on the cover.
  82. "It is difficult to be moderate about the charm of these brief portraits," Michael Dirda wrote at the beginning of his review (in the Washington Post Book World on Feb. 5) of Javier Marias' WRITTEN LIVES (New York: New Directions, 2006; 192 pp., $22.95); one of those portraits is a seven-page essay on "Arthur Conan Doyle and Women", and it's nicely done indeed. The book was originally published in Spanish as VIDAS ESCRITAS in 2000.
  83. The March issue of Golf Digest has a well-illustrated article on "How Golf Saved Sherlock Holmes" (by Charles McGrath), which notes that there are only passing allusions to the sport in the Sherlock Holmes stories, and deals in considerable detail with what golf meant to Arthur Conan Doyle, and whom he played with, and where and when.
  84. Ev Herzog spotted the Gemstone comic book "Mickey Mouse and Friends" (#261, February, $2.95) with a Sherlockian cover and with a story "Mickey Mouse in Surefoot Jones" (with Jones' smarter assistant Dr. Watsup).
  85. "Rich Seam of Technology Behind the Start of Another Australian Gold Rush" was the headline on a story in the Daily Telegraph (Feb. 6), noted by John Baesh. The gold new rush is in the "Golden Triangle" bounded by the towns of Ballarat and Bendigo. "Mining in the past was a disorganized treasure hunt. Computer modelling means we can be much more accurate about where we think the gold is," explained Joel Forwood, a geologist with Ballarat Goldfields, which poured its first ingot in December; the company hopes to extract 200,000 ounces of gold a year, worth about £60 million. No mention of a modern Black Jack of Ballarat in the article.
  86. John also spotted an editorial in the Daily Telegraph (Feb. 2) that reminds us of just what one of the Moriarty brothers did for a living, in the days when each railway station was looked after by its own dedicated stationmaster. "Stationmasters have been replaced by managers, each responsible for several of the smaller stations," the editorial lamented, leading to an increase in vandalism. "Instead of boasting about the millions that they are spending on CCTV and maintenance, the train operating companies should put an individual member of staff in charge of each station. They should equip him or her with a broom, a pot of paint, and a hanging basket or two. Pride and a spirit of competition will do the rest."

87. Mar 06 #2: From Tom Deveson's review (in the Sunday Times on Feb. 26) of Jeffrey Archer's FALSE IMPRESSIONS: "Allow one honest sentence to emerge from all this feeble, formulaic footling. Give your elderly aristocrat the chance to say on page 352 that 'we have been giving honours to pop stars, footballers, and vulgar millionaires.' Cherish this tiny seed of self-knowledge, Lord Archer." Deveson obviously didn't like Archer's new the book, and complains (when it comes to plot): "Take an idea from an 1893 Sherlock Holmes story and wrap it in pages of stuff about real and fake Van Goghs."
88. Pattie Tierney now has a web-site at <www.ptierneydesigns.etsy.com> showing her Sherlockian "wearable art" (including her new "Great Detectives" mystery necklace" that can be customized). The electronically-handicapped can request a copy of her illustrated flier (229 Hereford Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63135).
89. Further to the item (Nov 05 #8) on the diamond necklace/tiara owned by Dame Jean Conan Doyle, scheduled to be auctioned at Bonhams in London on Dec. 8 and described as "late 19th century (circa 1890), set throughout with old brilliant and single-cut diamonds," the hammer price was £13,000 (add 20% for the buyer's premium); Lady Doyle's will bequeathed her diamond tiara to her daughter, and of course it's likely that the tiara was a gift from her husband. Is there a photograph somewhere of Lady Doyle wearing the tiara?
90. One of the interesting aspects of the Internet is how international it is. <www.romanzieri.com> offers Italian readers links to stories by Conan Doyle (and many other authors) at Project Gutenberg and other web-sites, and to articles in newspapers and magazines in Italy and other countries.
91. Douglas Johnston, who maintains the web-log "A Million Monkeys Typing: Random Musings from a Primate Mind" at <www.douglasjohnston.net> has launched a new Sherlockian blog "A Study in Sherlock" at <www.astudyinsherlock.net>. The Internet and the World Wide Web offer far more Sherlockian content than anyone has time to read, and the amount of content increases by the minute, but if you want to explore an interesting Sherlock blog, this one's a good place to start.
92. Scott Monty notes that Ch. Rocky Top's Sundance Kid (affectionately known as Rufus) won best in show at the Westminster Kennel Club dog show in February. Add there's a Sherlockian connection: Rufus is a bull terrier, and <news.nationalgeographic.com/news/2006/02/0215\_060215/westminster.html> has a nice photograph of him. Scott also notes that there's another Canonical connection for Rufus (not the red-bearded Duke of Holderness or all those people in "The Red Headed League"); answer below, for those who can't figure out the answer.
93. The Sherlock Holmes pub at the Gulf Hotel in Bahrain (May 92 #1) now has a web-site at <www.gulfhotehbahrain.com/gulfhotel\_sherlock\_holmes.asp>, Scott Monty reports. The "events" section at the web-site explains that "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson lived at 221b Baker Street between 1881-1904. Now he and his partner currently resides at the Gulf Hotel where they hold office and offering their clients live sports coverage, live entertainment, and the best fish and chips in town."

94. Mar 06 #3: It's still possible to dine at the Langham Hotel in London, just as Arthur Conan Doyle and Oscar Wilde did on Aug. 30, 1889, when they were commissioned to write stories for Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, although it costs a lot more now (£36.00 for a three-course dinner) than it did then. The Langham opened in 1865 as Europe's first Grand Hotel, and it eventually was turned into offices for the BBC, and then back into a luxury hotel (Dec 90 #7) that is now the flagship for the Langham Hotel Group; you will find other Langhams in Auckland, Boston, Hong Kong, and Melbourne, and there's a web-site at <www.langhamhotels.com>. Ewan McDonald began his review of the Auckland Langham's restaurant in the New Zealand Herald (Mar. 8) with the story of that long-ago dinner in London. And in case you don't know the story, Conan Doyle wrote "The Sign of the Four" for Lippincott's, and Wilde "The Picture of Dorian Gray" (there are some Sherlockian scholars who believe that you can see some of Oscar Wilde in the mannerisms of Thaddeus Sholto in "The Sign of the Four").
95. Further to the item (Oct 05 #4) about Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure", the script is not yet available, but Dietz has a website <www.dramatists.us/stevendietz/works.htm> with information about this and his other plays.
96. Don Hobbs put together a "Great Whimsical Sherlockian Tour of Oklahoma and Texas" last year, and it was thoroughly Sherlockian and decidedly whimsical; <members.aol.com/baritsu/diogenes/index.html> (click on "Activities" and then on "2005 Whimsical Tour") has Jim Webb's delightful description of the tour at the web-site of The Diogenes Club of Dallas. There are a few railroad spikes collected at Sherlock, Texas, available as souvenirs (with a small brass plaque commemorating the tour); $15.00 postpaid from Don at 2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028.
97. "Sherlockian Resources on the Internet: A Survey" is the title of a useful web-site maintained by John Bergquist at <www.tc.umn.edu/~bergq003/holmes>, with discussion of many of the better Sherlockian links; its goal being "to help one pick out a few choice strands to follow along the World Wide Web."
98. Further to the forecast (Feb 06 #5) of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES WITH "THE ADVENTURE OF THE SPECKLED BAND", edited by Francis O'Gorman (Peterborough: Broadview Press, 2006; 300 pp., CA$12.95/US$9.95/£4.99), the book has a long and informative introduction, the stories (with many annotations), nine appendices with excerpts from relevant authors such as Francis Galton, Jack London, Edgar Allan Poe, and Arthur Conan Doyle, and a good list of selected further reading. It's all useful and entertaining for both teachers and students.
99. About the second Canonical connection for Rufus: it was the Red King (William Rufus) who granted the estate of Birlstone to Hugo de Capus.
100. Google has added Mars to its web-site at <mars.google.com>, which serves as a reminder that they already show the Moon, at <moon.google.com>, where you can see Sherlock Crater (named during the Apollo 17 mission by geologist-astronaut Jack Schmitt in honor of Sherlock Holmes). Unfortunately, they don't identify which crater is Sherlock Crater. For that, try Mia Stampe's "The Universal Sherlock Holmes" at <www.gfy.ku.dk/~ams/sh.universal.html>.

101. Mar 06 #4: Further to the item (Feb 06 #5) about Vasilij Livanov, the official word is that he received an honorary MBE (honorary because he's not a British subject). Formally, he's a Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire; next step up is Officer (OBE), then Companion (CBE), and Knight or Dame (KBE or DBE). Dame Jean Conan Doyle was awarded an OBE in 1948, and a DBE in 1963. OBEs have been awarded in the past to Leslie Bricusse, Peter Cushing, and Penelope Keith (names that may be familiar to Sherlockians and Doyleans); CBEs have been given to Simon Callow, Michael Holroyd, Alan Howard, Deborah Kerr, Christopher Lee, Dudley Moore, and Ian Richardson; Michael Caine, Nigel Hawthorne, and John Mills received CBEs, and later knighthoods. Sherlock Holmes refused a knighthood, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle accepted one.
102. Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties) have published a new issue of their Sherlockian E-Times with news, and offers of new Sherlockiana, and links to their web-site, which has much more Sherlockiana; you can request an e-mail subscription at <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>.
103. James Taylor & Son note that "Conan Doyle practiced in rooms just a couple of hundred yards away from our shop," and that their "Sherlock Holmes collection" is "true to the styles of the great detective." They are shoemakers ("quality shoemakers since 1857"); the shop is at 4 Paddington Street

- (London W1U 5QE, England), with a web-site at <www.taylormadeshoes.co.uk>, where you will find the Watson Walker, the Sherlock Shoe, the Gloria Scott, the Baskerville Boot, the Lestrade, and the Hudson Hopper. You "could order something of the same quality as Sherlock Holmes would have worn," the company suggests. "It might cost a few guineas more, but you will detect the quality."
104. Phil Attwell reports that the first two seasons of the Granada series (with Jeremy Brett and David Burke) are available on zone-2 DVDs with dialogue in French. You can see and hear excerpts at <www.series-tv.fr>; the sets cost £54.00 each per season, but they're discounted at <www.amazon.fr>. Roger Johnson has reviewed the first set in The District Messenger: you can watch the shows in French or in English (with or without French subtitles), and there's added-value material provided by The Jeremy Brett Society of France and La Societe Sherlock Holmes de France.
105. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for drinks and dinner in Houston, to honor the world's first forensic geologist, at 7:00 pm on April 12, at Artista (800 Bagby Street at Rusk), during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. We traditionally discourage scholarly papers, quizzes, and slide shows, and our agenda consists entirely of toasts (some scholarly, but many not). Visitors and locals are welcome, as always, to attend the festivities.
106. Maureen Collins reports that the National Library of Medicine is screening a series of films having to do with forensic investigation, in conjunction with an exhibition "Visible Proofs: Forensic Views of the Body". The exhibition will be open through Feb. 16, 2008, and there's an informative website at <www.nlm.nih.gov/visibleproofs>; the Library is at 8600 Rockville Pike, Bethesda, MD 20894. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) was the first film (screened on Mar. 16) in the weekly series.
107. Mar 06 #5: There aren't many authors who can maintain two successful series of mysteries (along with some stand-alone novels): Laurie R. King is one of them, and she has won many fans (and awards) for her series about Mary Russell and her series about Kate Martinelli. Martinelli is a contemporary lesbian San Francisco homicide inspector, and it can be interesting to imagine a Russell fan innocently picking up a Martinelli novel (and, needless to say, vice versa). THE ART OF DETECTION (New York: Bantam Books, 2006; 358 pp., $24.00) is the latest Martinelli mystery, and it's an intriguing cross-over: a compulsive collector who has turned his home into a Sherlockian museum is murdered, perhaps by a fellow-member of his S'ian society who covets a manuscript that, if it's authentic, is a first-person account of a case Sherlock Holmes solved in San Francisco in 1924 (when he was there with Mary Russell, as recorded in LOCKED ROOMS). The manuscript is part of THE ART OF DETECTION, so there are two murders in the novel, one solved by Holmes and the other by Martinelli.
108. Michael Chabon's THE FINAL SOLUTION (set on the Sussex Downs and in London in the summer of 1944, and featuring an aged beekeeper detective) won the 2005 National Jewish Book Award in Fiction. Runners-up in the competition were Philip Roth's THE PLOT AGAINST AMERICA and Cynthia Ozick's HEIR TO THE GLIMMERING WORLD.
109. The U.S. Postal Service has released a set of five "Crops of the Americas" stamps, in booklets and coils, showing squashes, corn, chili peppers, sunflowers, and beans. The famous Blue Carbuncle was described as a "brilliantly scintillating blue stone, rather smaller than a bean in size."
110. Further to the earlier item (Mar 05 #3) about Nicholas Twit: The Schoolboy Sherlock Holmes, the fifth (and last) book in the series was published last year (the books are "for mystery readers from 8 to 80"), and author Cenarth Fox has reported that his play "The Real Sherlock Holmes" is in its third year on tour in Australia. There's a web-site at <www.twit.biz> (copies of all the books are still available) and a preview copy of the script can be downloaded free at <www.foxplays.com>; Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> offers a CD recording of the play ($12.95).
111. It has been some years since there has been any Sherlockian cross-over into the science fiction magazines; Philip K. Jones reports "The Scarlet Band", by Harry Turtledove, in Analog Science Fiction and Fact (May 2006). It's set in the late 19th century and involves Athelstan Homes, Dr. John Walton, and Captain La Strada.
112. Further to the item (Dec 05 #2) about "Springtime in Baker Street" (on Apr. 22-23 in Norwalk, Conn.), Bob Thomalen now has a detailed schedule; some of the events include talks by Gideon Hill on "The Lithium Link: Gout, Mania, and Sherlock Holmes", Charles Meyer on "The Magical Sherlock Holmes", Jim Cleary on "Sounds of Baker Street", Mike Berdan on "Connecticut's Canonical Connections", and Philip Shreffler on "Watson's Weird Tales: Horror in the Canon", plus a dinner performance by the Sherlettes and the Friends of Bogies on Baker Street. Additional details are available from Bob at 82 Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512 (845-225-2445) <the3garridebs@suscom.net>.
113. Mar 06 #6: "My old friend Charlie Peace was a violin virtuoso," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Illustrious Client"). Holmes was 25 years old when Peace was executed on Feb. 25, 1879; the executioner was hangman William Marwood, and a letter from Marwood confirming that Peace had been executed was sold at auction at Bonhams in Leeds on Feb. 28 for £520 (plus premium and tax).
114. The Edinburgh Evening News has reported (Mar. 14) that "A decade-long campaign for the village where Arthur Conan Doyle grew up to be given special conservation status has failed due to a glut of home extensions." Planning chiefs have refused to give Nether Liberton special conservation status because they say that residents' work on their homes has damaged the area's character. The decision does not affect restoration of Liberton Bank House (where Conan Doyle lived for four years during the 1860s); that work (Dec 05 #2) is about to begin.
115. Don Izban reports that SBIOS (Sherlockians by Invitation Only) will be have their next meeting on Oct. 8 at the Ridgemoor Country Club in Chicago, featuring a gourmet dinner, open bar, prizes, and David Hammer's dissertation on why Sherlock Holmes birthday ought to be celebrated on the tenth day of the tenth month. And earlier that day Don will conduct a tour of Graceland Cemetery, where Vincent Starrett and others (both famous and infamous) are buried. Don's events sell out early, and he's accepting reservations now (the all-in cost is $77.50) at 1812 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068).
116. There's no record in the Canon of Sherlock Holmes ever visiting the Sandwich Islands (that's the name that Captain Cook gave to what are now known as the Hawaiian Islands), and the Andaman Islanders of Honolulu are at the moment dormant, but there are (of course) traces of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle on Oahu, where you can visit the site of the house where Robert Louis Stevenson lived for a while on his way to Samoa (where he corresponded with Conan Doyle about Sherlock Holmes), and on Hawai'i (known as the Big Island), where Mark Twain stayed at Volcano House and was amazed by the eruptions in the Kilauea Caldera (he wrote a Sherlockian parody). And Christopher Morley visited Honolulu in 1933 to lecture at the University of Hawaii; he gave three lectures, which you can read in his book SHAKESPEARE AND HAWAII (1933).
117. There is a Canonical connection as well, since sandwiches are mentioned in four of the Sherlock Holmes stories; the sandwich was named after John Montagu, 4th Earl of Sandwich, and he was First Lord of the Admiralty in 1778, when Cook arrived in the islands and named them in honor of the Earl.
118. All of which by way of explaining why this issue of my newsletter may be a bit late, and why there's no news from the last part of March, when I was in Hawaii (having decided it was embarrassing for a geologist never to have seen a working volcano); Hawaii is delightful, with far more to offer than just Waikiki. I also had a chance to see Pam Verrey, who sends regards to all her friends. My apologies to those who have sent material about which I won't report until the next issue.

119. Apr 06 #1: Three Conan Doyle manuscripts owned by his daughter Dame Jean Conan Doyle went to auction at Bonhams in London on Mar. 28, for the benefit of charities she supported during her life; the mss. were "Brigadier Gerard at Waterloo" (est. £15,000-20,000), "How Brigadier Gerard Lost His Ear" (£8,000-12,000), and "Ypres: September 1915" (£800-1200), and descriptions and photographs may still be available at <www.bonhams.com>. The "Ypres" ms. sold for £900 (add 20% for the buyer's premium), and the two Gerard stories went unsold.
120. Sorry about that: <www.tc.umn.edu/~bergq003/holmes> is the correct URL for John Bergquist's useful web-site "Sherlockian Resources on the Internet: A Survey" (Mar 06 #3).
121. "Professor Moriarty's is for sale," according to the Saratogian (Mar. 20). The Saratoga Springs (N.Y.) restaurant opened in 1984, and owner Dale Easter is ready to retire, and entertaining offers. The restaurant claims to be the only one with a library (actually a stuffed magazine rack, but there are a lot of Sherlock Holmes book around), the paper reported.
122. "Celebrity Digs Fetch £700,000" is the headline on a story in the Sheffield Star (Mar. 29) about a pair of Sheffield townhouses, one of which was said to have a connection with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who "wrote about 6 Ashgate Road, possibly while living there, in his story The Sheffield Banker." And which story was that?
123. Apple has long included a "Sherlock" file-finding utility in the Macintosh operating system (Aug 98 #5), and of course the utility now does a lot more than that. And Laura Kuhn has reported that Mozilla (a free software/open-source software) project now offers a "Mycroft" collection of search plug-ins for browsers such as Mozilla and Firefox. You can read more about it at <www.mycroft.mozdev.org>, and see artwork showing Mozilla (their version of Godzilla) with a Sherlockian cap and pipe.
124. Further to the item (Dec 05 #4) on The Baker Street Irregulars Trust (which supports the BSI Archives at the Houghton Library at Harvard University), the Trust now has a web-site at <www.bsitrust.org> with information about the Trust and the Archives, and photographs of letters written to Edgar W. Smith by Vincent Starrett and Christopher Morley.
125. Videotaper alert: Jerry Margolin reports an interesting line of dialogue in "King of the Underworld" (1939) which starred Humphrey Bogart as an on-the-lam gangster, and James Stephenson as a writer who is kidnapped and ordered to write the gangster's biography. Bogart (Joe Gurney) suggests a title, and Stephenson (Bill Stevens) replies, "I have a better title to use. How about 'Joe Gurney, the Napoleon of Crime'?"
126. Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties) have published a new issue of their Sherlockian E-Times, with a report on a bottle of Gloria Scott black currant wine received from David Milner (unfortunately, it's not for sale); you can visit their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.com>, and you can request an e-mail subscription to the newsletter at <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>.
127. Apr 06 #2: It was Ken Kenza who reported the "Sherlock Holmes Action Figure" (Aug 04 #6), available from Archie McPhee & Co. (Box 3852, Seattle, WA 98113 (425-349-3009) <www.archiemcphree.com>; they offer other action figures with Sherlockian and Doylean connections, including Houdini, Poe, Shakespeare, Wagner, and Wilde. And the "Marie Antoinette Action Figure" may not be Canonical, but it's amusing.
128. And which story was The Sheffield Banker? "The Adventure of the Sheffield Banker" was an alternate title for "The Case of the Man Who Was Wanted", at one time believed to have been written by Conan Doyle, but in fact written by Arthur Whitaker.
129. Further to the item (Oct 05 #4) on "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (adapted by Steven Dietz from Gillette's play), there are two additional productions scheduled: at the Actors Theatre in Louisville from Jan. 30 to Feb. 24, 2007 (316 West Main Street, Louisville, KY 40202 (502-584-1205) <www.actorstheatre.org>; and at the Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park from Apr. 26 to May 25, 2007 (962 Mount Adams Circle, Cincinnati, OH 45202 (513-421-3888) <www.cincyplay.com>.
130. An exhibition on "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell: The Real Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled at the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh from July 1 to Oct. 29, according to the Sunday Times (Apr. 16), and one of the items on view will be the letter written to Bell in May 1892 in which Conan Doyle said: "It is certainly to you that I owe Sherlock Holmes and though in the stories I have the advantage of being able to place him in all sorts of dramatic positions I do not think that his analytical work is in the least an exaggeration of some effects which I have seen you produce in the out-patient ward." The letter was held in a private collection by Bell's family and recently acquired by the RSCE.
131. Conan Doyle also was dissatisfied with some of the reviews, and wrote: "I know the public, or the upper public, are much more intelligent than the newspaper editors who are in the position of a man who has to swallow an orange and then an anchovy and then ice and then a rump steak and yet is expected to have a sensitive and discriminating palate. It is disheartening however when you take pains over a work which is essentially one of character drawing and find it pretty generally taken to be a mere book of adventure."
132. Dorothy Stix has kindly donated to the BSI Archives copies of photographs she has taken at many Sherlockian events over the years. The photographs include a few people who have not been identified, and the Archives would welcome any and all assistance in solving these mysteries; Scott Monty has made the photographs available at his blog at the Baker Street Journal website at <www.bakerstreetjournal.blogspot.com>.
133. Laurie R. King will be on tour in June in California, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arizona and Washington promoting her new Kate Martinelli novel THE ART OF DETECTION (Mar 06 #5); it's a Sherlockian cross-over, and the list of her appearances is on-line at <www.laurierking.com/events.php>. Her Mary Russell novel LOCKED ROOMS (May 05 #6) was published in a paperback edition in March (Bantam, $6.99).

134. Apr 06 #3: Sherlock Holmes has solved the case of the missing Arctic Ozone, Peter Calamai reported in the Toronto Star (Mar. 19). The Fourier Transform Spectrometer, nicknamed Sherlock Holmes (Jul 02 #1), is part of the Atmospheric Chemistry Experiment orbiting the Earth on Canada's science satellite SciSat. As it turns out, the problem of the missing Arctic ozone was that it didn't appear to be missing when it should have been, during the Arctic winter of 2005; the SciSat's instruments showed that vast amounts of Arctic ozone had indeed been destroyed, but had been replaced by ozone in masses of air blown in from outside the depletion zone.
135. Reported: CONAN DOYLE AND THE PARSON'S SON: THE GEORGE EDALJI CASE, by Gordon Weaver (Cambridge: Pegasus/Vanguard Press, 2006; 380 pp., £9.99); an account of the case based on contemporary documents. You can read more at <www.theplebeian.net>.
136. The U.S. Postal Service has finally issued a 24c stamp (that's the new cost for additional ounces, and it shows a butterfly: a common buckeye (*Junonia coenia*); butterflies are mentioned in four of the stories, including "The Three Gables" (Douglas Maberley was not "a society butterfly").
137. Christiane Maybach died on Apr. 12. She began her acting career on screen in Germany in 1951 and appeared on stage and on television until 1995; she played Polly Nichols in "A Study in Terror" (1965).
138. I've mentioned the colorful Edinburgh policeman James McLevy before (Sep 03 #8); many of his cases were published in 1861 (in CURIOSITIES OF CRIME IN EDINBURGH and THE SLIDING SCALE OF LIFE), and it's intriguing to think that Conan Doyle read and enjoyed the stories. David Ashton encountered McLevy while researching a television play that was broadcast by BBC-2 in its "Encounters" series in 1992 (with Frank Finlay as Conan Doyle and Richard E. Grant as Holmes). Ashton has written four McLevy series for BBC Radio 4, and his first McLevy novel (SHADOW OF THE SERPENT) will be published this year by Polygon (£8.99). The radio series, with Brian Cox as McLevy (Cox played Joseph Bell in BBC-2's "The Strange Case of

- Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" (2005). Recent programs in the radio series are available on-line at <www.bbc.co.uk/radio4/arts/afternoon\_play.shtml>.
139. "I have a trade of my own," Sherlock Holmes said (in "A Study in Scarlet"). suppose I am the only one in the world, I'm a consulting detective, if you can understand what that is. Here in London we have lots of government detectives and lots of private ones. When these fellows are at fault, they come to me, and I manage to put them on the right scent." There were detectives before Holmes, of course, and the list extends back through Zadig to Daniel and includes one recently discovered by Joe Rainone in the pages of Saturday Night, a story paper published in Philadelphia in 1884. "Old Marvel" first appeared in the issue for Feb. 23, 1884, and Rainone suggests that it's possible that Conan Doyle read the story paper and that "Old Marvel" was an inspiration for Sherlock Holmes. Rainone's "The Amazing Adventure of Old Marvel; or A Baffling Mystery" is in the fall/winter 2006 issue (#12-13) of Blood 'n' Thunder ($12.00), published by Ed Hulse (2467 Route 10 East, Mountain Club, Building 15, Apt. 4B, Morris Plains, NJ 07950); the web-site is at <www.geocities.com/poppub/>.

140. Apr 06 #4: There was nothing strictly Sherlockian at Malice Domestic this year, but the schedule included panels moderated by Dan Stashower ("Writing the Historical Mystery") and by yours truly ("Stalking Your Prey: How to Choose Your Victim"), and of course any panel with a Sherlockian on board involves some discussion of the Canon. The voting for the Agatha for best children/young adult fiction ended in a tie, and the winners were Carl Hiasen's FLUSH and Peter Abrahams' DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE, which has an eighth-grade Sherlock Holmes fan and amateur actress as the heroine (Apr 05 #1). And Douglas G. Greene won the Poirot Award for contributions to the genre as publisher (with his wife Sandi) of short-story collections from Crippen & Landru. Malice Domestic XIX will be held on May 4-6, 2007, at the Crystal City Marriott in Arlington, Va., featuring Rochelle Krich as guest of honor, Elaine Vietz as toastmaster, a lifetime achievement award for Carolyn Hart, and Georgette Heyer as ghost of honor; you can register at Box 8007, Gaithersburg, MD 20898 <www.malicedomestic.org>.
141. The New Play House presented a reading of Lee Shackleford's play "Holmes & Watson" (1989) in Frederick, Md., last year (Nov 05 #2), and now they have scheduled a full production at the Cultural Arts Center in Frederick, June 15-25, 2006. The box office is at Box 601, Frederick, MD 21705 (301-668-8019) <www.frederickartscouncil.org>.
142. Felix Morley, winner of the Pulitzer Prize in 1936 for his editorial writing for the Washington Post, is one of two Investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars to have won a Pulitzer; Karen Murdock reports that one of his editorials is included in PULITZER PRIZE EDITORIALS: AMERICA'S BEST WRITING 1917-2003, edited by Wm. David Sloan and Laird B. Anderson (2003). The other Investitured Irregular who has won a Pulitzer is Michael Dirda, for criticism in 1993 (for his book reviews in The Washington Post).
143. Stephen Vincent Benet won the Pulitzer twice, for poetry in 1929 (for JOHN BROWN'S BODY) and 1944 (for WESTERN STAR), and William Rose Benet won for poetry in 1942 (for THE DUST WHICH IS GOD). Both were friends of Christopher Morley, and mentioned often in Jon Lellenberg's IRREGULAR MEMORIES OF THE 'THIRTIES as involved in Sherlockian affairs before the era of Irregular Investitures.
144. Further to the item about the new butterfly stamp, William R. Hanson, MD, chose a different mention for the cachet artwork on a first day cover that showing Beryl Stapleton in the room that held her husband's collection. $10.00 postpaid (in a signed and numbered edition of 100) from Dr. Hanson at 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 10801.
145. "Case Closed" is the English-language version of "Meitantei Conan" [Detective Conan], a Japanese animation about Shinichi Kudo, a 17-year-old master detective who is turned by villains into a child and assumes the name Conan Edogawa and pursues evil-doers. The 30-minute series aired in English on the Cartoon network (May 04 #6), and it's available here now on a series of DVDs from FUNimation Productions <www.funimation.com>.
146. Apr 06 #5: David Pirie has updated his web-site at <www.murder-rooms.com>, and he reports that on July 27 the BBC and MPI will release a two-DVD set ($39.98) with the four 90-minute programs in the "Murder Rooms" series that aired on BBC-1 in 2001 and on PBS-TV in 2002 (with Ian Richardson as Joseph Bell and Charles Edwards as Arthur Conan Doyle). And Pegasus has succeeded St. Martin's Press as his American book publisher: THE DARK WATER (the third in the series) is scheduled for October, and there will be reprints of THE PATIENT'S EYES and THE DARK CALLS; Pirie has begun work on a fourth title THE DEAD TIME.
147. Scott Monty spotted a list of the 50 best film adaptations of all time, as selected by a panel of experts organized by The Guardian; the list, which includes "The Hound of the Baskervilles", will be voted on by the public in May. The panel didn't identify a particular adaptation of the story.
148. That's a photograph of Eleonora Suhoviy, who arrived in Britain from the Ukraine 11 years ago and taught herself English mainly by reading the Sherlock Holmes stories, according to a story in the Daily Telegraph (Apr. 19), kindly forwarded by Jay Hyde. Now 24 and an Oxford graduate, Eleonora made the news by winning an appeal against deportation; her mother's temporary permission to remain in Britain ran out in 1999, and the Home Office has spent six years trying to deport them. The Home Office has been turned down by a tribunal, and Eleonora said she was "very relieved" and that her ambition is to join the Royal Navy.
149. "Sherlock Holmes and the Speckled Band" is a one-man play performed by Neill Hartley; he appears next at the Township of Washington Public Library in Bergen, N.J., on May 6 (201-664-4586). He also will perform the show at the University of the Arts in Philadelphia on Sept. 14-17, and at the Atlantic Highlands Historical Society on Sept. 20; his two other one-man shows are "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and "The Spirit of Lindburgh", and you can see photographs and a full schedule at his web-site at <www.neillhartley.com>. Thanks to Ted Friedman for news of the show.
150. Phil Attwell reports that the Granada television series is being released on DVDs in France: the first three seasons are available at <www.amazon.fr> and there are more to come (they're zone 2 DVD sets), and you get to hear Holmes and everyone else speaking French.
151. Thomas A. Dunn died on Dec. 12. He worked in life insurance and human resources, and an enthusiastic hiker and mountain climber, but his real love was pipes, and he was best known as the founder and president of The Universal Coterie of Pipe Smokers and as the editor and publisher of The Pipe Smoker's Ephemeris, launched in the spring of 1965 as an informal typed and mimeographed newsletter, sent free to anyone who requested it. The Ephemeris was devoted to pipes, smoking, and tobacco, and packed with news from members of the Coterie, many of them Sherlockians who made sure there was S'ian content in each issue. Circulation eventually reached 3,000 copies, and the pages of the Ephemeris are a splendid monument to Tom.
152. Apr 06 #6: Bill Griffith's "Zippy the Pinhead", a long-running comic strip with fervent admirers among readers of the Washington Post (and other newspapers), occasionally shows Gillette Castle; Mary Ellen Rich has reported that Bill Griffith, who lives in Hadlyme, Connecticut, often uses people and places he likes in his work. The strip for July 31, 2002, shows the Castle (Sep 02 #3), and so does the strip for Apr. 1, 2006. The strips (as well as those for June 25, 2000, and Oct. 18, 2002) can be seen at the strip's web-site <www.zippythepinhead.com>, where you can also buy original artwork ($350.00), signed prints ($155.00 colored/$55.00 black and white), and annuals ($19.95).

153. Further to the item (Mar 06 #5) about the new set of five "Crops of the Americas" stamps, one of them showing beans (which seemed appropriate for the Blue Carbuncle, described as "rather smaller than a bean in size"), Scott Monty has noted another connection between the stamp and the story: the gem allegedly turned up in the goose's crop.
154. It has been a while since I wondered about Investitured members of the Baker Street Irregulars who have appeared in movies as actors (Apr 01 #1), and at that time there were three: Elmer Davis, Bill Ward, and John E. Pforr. You can add Curtis Armstrong to the list; he received his Investiture last January, and has appeared on screen and television, most recently, as Jerry Margolin notes, in the film "Akeelah and the Bee", which opened on Apr. 28.
155. People sometimes ask, "How many *other* Sherlock Holmes stories are there?" It's always been hard to quantify, but computers do make things easier: an answer can be found in Philip K. Jones' data-base "Beyond the Gaslight: The Non-Canonical Tales", a 2.6-MB Microsoft Excel file that can be downloaded at <www.candenhouse.ignisart.com/pastiche/index.html>: Philip has identified 5,520 different pastiches, parodies, and related fiction, and expects to increase the total to at least 6,000 with help from people who can add to the data-base. He includes scripts and storyboards for stage, screen, radio, and television, but not recordings, and his "Holmesian Universe" extends to "any fiction that acknowledges the existence of Holmes as a real person, important to the tale being told."
156. May 06 #1: Further to the mention (Apr 06 #3) of the new paperback edition of Laurie R. King's Mary Russell novel LOCKED ROOMS (Bantam, $6.99), this is an item for completists, since it contains at the end of the book an excerpt from THE ART OF DETECTION; it's now common for a paperback edition to have this sort of promotion for the next hardback edition. Laurie's next book will be a stand-alone (TOUCHSTONE), due this year, and the novel after that will be a new Mary Russell.
157. Rebecca J. Bohner (listmom for RUSS-L) reported a delightfully imaginative pastiche at <www.livejournal.com/users/prof\_pangaea/115264.html>. If you don't have access to the Internet, go to a neighbor or local library; the pastiche is highly recommended.
158. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for drinks and dinner at Artista in Houston on Apr. 12, at the end of the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, and we were welcomed by local members of the John Openshaw Society. We will dine next at McGillin's Old Ale House in Philadelphia on Oct. 25 during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America; our tradition is to discourage scholarly papers, quizzes, and slide shows, with the agenda consisting entirely of toasts (some scholarly, but many not). The local societies will be announcing the event to their mailing lists, and others who might want to attend can let me know.
159. Jay Pearlman reports that <www.pufichek.com/sherlock/nsgsherlock.htm> offers photographs of Nancy Garces-Saroli's miniature of the sitting room at 221B, as well as the full-scale sitting room at the Sherlock Holmes Museum in Lucens, after which the miniature is modeled.
160. The fifth season of "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" has been issued as a set of seven DVDs ($89.99), and the first part of the season is available in Britain as a set of three DVDs (£39.99); each set has the episode "Who Shot Sherlock?" (2005) and special features that include commentary by writers Rich Catalani and David Rambo, who reveal that they named the Holmes-fanatic victim Dennis Kingsley in honor of Conan Doyle's sons.
161. Noted by Mark Stratton: Dick Riley and Pam McAllister's THE BEDSIDE, BATHTUB, AND ARMCHAIR COMPANION TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (1999) has been reprinted by Barnes & Noble as THE BEDSIDE COMPANION TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (2005, $7.98).
162. Henry Zecher has spoken at many events about William Gillette, and his as-yet-unpublished biography THE MASQUE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE EXTRAORDINARY LIFE OF WILLIAM GILLETTE, and you can see excerpts from that and his other work at his web-site at <www.henryzecher.com>.
163. Further to the item (Jan 06 #3) on a ban on smoking by actors in film, television, and theaters, government ministers have announced that they plan to exempt live performances and film and television recordings where smoking is "integral to the plot or storyline" when the ban on smoking in public spaces comes into effect next summer. Actors had complained that it would be difficult to stage plays if "characters such as Sherlock Holmes or Winston Churchill had to stop smoking," the Evening Standard reported.
164. May 06 #2: Further to the item (Apr 06 #6) about the Investitured members of the Baker Street Irregulars: who have appeared in movies as actors, the list now is a bit longer (thanks to Jon Lellenberg most of the additions): Curtis Armstrong, Elmer Davis, Al Gregory, John E. Pforr, Donald Pollock, H. C. Potter, Bill Ward, and (possibly) Julian Wolff. Elmer Davis played himself in "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951), Hank Potter played himself in the documentary "On Stage!" (1949); Al Gregory was an extra in "Diamonds" (1975), and Don Pollock an extra in "Dawn of the Dead" (1978). Julian Wolff is reported to have made a little money, when he was in medical school, as an extra in movies being filmed in New York.
165. That's Sherlock Holmes, a beagle-border collie-cross, and his owner Blair Anderson; according to a story on the Christchurch Press (May 5), Holmes' barking alerted Anderson to a robbery in progress at the Wainoni Dairy, and the police were quick to respond. And the burglar has been sentenced to 18 months in prison, "a result police say was largely due to Holmes' dogged detection."
166. Frank Thomas died on May 11. He began acting on Broadway in 1932 (and in 1993 appeared in a dramatization of the Christopher Morley novel THUNDER ON THE LEFT) and he acted in his first Hollywood film in 1934; in 1950 Frank won the title role in the television series "Tom Corbett, Space Cadet" (beating out Jack Lemmon and other actors), and when the series ended he became a radio and television writer, bridge instructor, and author. His Sherlockian bridge columns were published in Popular Bridge (and were collected in two books), his pastiche of August Derleth's "Solar Pons" pastiches appeared in Luther Norris' Pontine Dossier), and a series of Sherlockian novels. He was buried, at his request, in his Tom Corbett costume.
167. Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties) have published the May issue of their Sherlockian E-Times, with (as usual) offers of interesting Sherlockiana; the newsletter's URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times11.htm>. You can also visit their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.com>, and request an e-mail subscription. And they have a report from David Stuart Davies that he has returned as editor of SHERLOCK, and that after one general-interest issue without him (Jul 05 #6), the next (and much more Sherlockian) issue (#67) will be published in June.
168. Further to the items about "The Adventure of the Sheffield Banker" (Apr 06 1 and 2), it would appear that Richard Lancelyn Green or someone at Penguin chose that title for "The Case of the Man Who Was Wanted" for the reprint in THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1985); some of the other stories in the collection were retitled so that all were "The Adventure of..." One can assume that the realtors did not carefully read Richard's introduction, which notes the original title, nor for that matter the story, which while it does mention Ashgate Road, has nothing about 6 Ashgate Road.
169. May 06 #3: Reported: THE RISE OF THE DETECTIVE IN EARLY NINETEENTH CENTURY POPULAR FICTION, written by Heather Worthington (New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2005; 216 pp., $65.00); advertised as an academic study of early models that culminate in the figure of Sherlock Holmes and the establishment of the crime genre.

170. Jim Vogelsang spotted "Veggie Tales: Sheerluck Holmes and the Golden Ruler" on DVD from Big Idea ($9.95); it's a 20-minute kid-vid (there's another adventure on the DVD, as well as Sheerluckian special feature), and their web-site <www.bigidea.com> offers coloring pages, computer and buddy icons that show Larry the Cucumber as Holmes (Bob the Tomato plays Watson).
171. HOLMES ON THE RANGE, by Steve Hockensmith (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2006; 294 pp., $22.95), is an excellent Sherlockian mystery, set in Montana in 1893 and featuring two cowboys: Old Red Amlingmeyer (a devoted admirer of the Sherlock Holmes stories) and his literate brother Big Red (who reads the stories for him); it's an interesting and amusing example of what can be done with the Canon other than trying to write a new Sherlock Holmes story. The Amlingmeyers have appeared in short stories in birthday-festivities issues of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Feb. 2003, 2005, and 2006), and a second novel (with ON THE WRONG TRACK as a working title) is due next year. The author has a web-site at <www.stevhockensmith.com>, where you can read the first of the stories published in EQMM, and more about Hockensmith and his work.
172. Marvin Lachman's THE HEIRS OF ANTHONY BOUCHER: A HISTORY OF MYSTERY FANDOM (Scottsdale: Poisoned Pen Press, 2005; 199 pp., $16.95) describes the results of a chain reaction, from Boucher's mystery reviews in the N.Y. Times to the founding of The Armchair Detective to the creation of Bouchercon after his death; Lachman calls this "the fan revolution," and he does a fine job of explaining what it was and is now. The book is up-to-date through 2004, with sections on "Sherlockian Fandom" and on "Mystery Fandom in Cyberspace", and the index includes the names of many Sherlockians and Sherlockian societies.
173. Bouchercon is a long-established world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, and named in honor of Anthony Boucher; Bouchercon 38 will be in Anchorage on Sept. 27-30, 2007 <www.bouchercon2007.com>, and Bouchercon 39 in Baltimore on Oct. 9-11, 2008 <www.bouchercon2008.blogspot.com>.
174. The Morgan Library & Museum in New York reopened on Apr. 29, after an extensive expansion and renovation project, with an inaugural exhibition of "Masterworks from the Morgan" that includes an illustrated manuscript letter from Richard Doyle to his father John Doyle. Richard, a noted artist, was the brother of Sir Arthur's father Charles Doyle, and the Morgan owns 79 letters written by Richard and his brothers: 51 by Richard, 25 by Henry, and 3 by Charles, who once owned all the letters. You can see the letter at the Morgan's web-site at <www.themorgan.org>, and the exhibition is at 225 Madison Avenue (at 36th Street, New York, NY 10016 (212-685-3484)).
175. May 06 #4: Further to the item (Apr 06 #4) about Felix Morley, Karen Murdock has found the Felix Morley Journalism Competition, which awards $5,000 in prizes annually for "the best published newspaper or magazine articles inspired by liberty." It's administered by the Institute for Humane Studies at George Mason University (3300 North Fairfax Drive #440, Arlington, VA 22201) <www.theihs.org>.
176. This year's Canonical Convocation and Caper will take place in Door County, Wis., on Sept. 15-17; there's a web-site at <www.cccdoorcounty.com>, or you can request additional information from Jane Richardson, 3427 East Exchange Street, Crete, IL 60417.
177. "Sherlock Holmes and the Saline Solution" is a new comedy presented by the Sound & Fury Fakespearean Players at the Cafe-Club Fais Do-Do dinner theater in Los Angeles through June 17. The club is at 5257 West Adams Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90016 (323-954-8080), and you can purchase tickets at the Sound & Fury web-site at <sherlock.soundandfury.org>.
178. Plan ahead: the next Norwegian Explorers conference will be held in Minneapolis on July 6-8, 2007, and the theme will be "Victorian Secrets and Edwardian Enigmas"; the contact is Julie McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124 <mike9750@aol.com>).
179. "Japanese to Honour Briton Who Saved Them From Cholera" is the headline on a story in the Daily Telegraph (May 8) that begins, "If William Kinninmond Burton is remembered at all in Britain, it is as a childhood friend of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Conan Doyle lived for a time with the Burton family, and his book THE FIRM OF GIRDLESTONE is dedicated to "my old friend" William K. Burton. Burton became an engineer, and arrived in Japan in 1887 and over 12 years supervised the establishment of fresh-water and sewage systems in most of the major cities in Japan. He died in 1899, and Japanese admirers are planning to erect a monument to him in Edinburgh to commemorate the 150th anniversary of his birth.
180. Reported: MURDER IS NO MITZVAH: SHORT MYSTERIES ABOUT JEWISH OCCASIONS, edited by Abigail Browning (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2004; 304 pp., $23.95); an anthology of 12 stories, one of them Conan Doyle's "The Jew's Breastplate".
181. The winter 2006 issue of Mystery Scene has a Sherlockian cover (Rupert Everett), articles on "The Eternal Detective" (by Steve Hockensmith) and on "Sherlock Holmes on TV" (by Ron Miller), and lots of interesting non-Sherlockian content. The magazine costs $7.50 in stores or $10.00 by mail, or $32.00 for a five-issue annual subscription; 331 West 57th Street #148, New York, NY 10019, and the web-site's at <www.mysteryscenemag.com>.
182. Mike Barraclough has reported a new resource for research on British radio and television: the experimental prototype BBC Programme Catalogue available at <open.bbc.co.uk/catalogue/infax>. There are details of 947,368 BBC radio and television programs, dating back 75 years; it doesn't offer anything to listen to or watch, and it isn't complete, but it's fascinating to explore, searching for titles and subjects and contributors (that includes actors, directors, producers, and scriptwriters).
183. May 06 #5: Michael S. Greenbaum (Janus Books) has a new saleslist at his web-site at <www.janusbooks.com/unusual\_SH.html>; it's an "interesting, unusual, and scarce Sherlockiana," with one item qualifying for all three adjectives: Rosemary Herbert's A SECOND ADVENTURE OF THE SPECKLED BAND, OR ANOTHER CASE OF IDENTITY (her personal account of the first woman to infiltrate successfully an all-male scion-society meeting in the guise of a man). Sorry: it's no longer available, but you can read more about it at the web-site.
184. "Private Eye Popeye" was a 7-minute animation produced by Famous Studios in 1954, with Popeye in Sherlockian costume, and it's one of eight shorts on a "Popeye the Sailor Man Volume Four" discovered by Jennie Paton, and it's in the $1.00 bin at stores such as Best Buy.
185. Jennie also spotted a Dollar Tree audiobook-on-CD of "The Boscombe Valley Mystery", well read (by someone unidentified but with a good accent); the price (of course) is $1.00).
186. Reported: Andrea Barham's THE PEDANT'S REVOLT: WHY MOST THINGS YOU THINK ARE RIGHT ARE WRONG (London: Michael O'Mara Books, 2005; 160 pp., £9.99) (New York: Delacorte Press, 2006; 160 pp., $15.00); the author exposes "a great many of the common myths and fallacies that have become entrenched in everyday thought," and among the myths exposed is that Sherlock Holmes says "Elementary, my dear Watson" in the stories, as well as that the deerstalker is mentioned.
187. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" discussion of the June 1906 issue of The Strand Magazine (which was Sherlockian as well as Doylean), Randy Cox's "50 Years Ago" reminiscences about his first appearance in a national publication (his article about "Mycroft Holmes, Private Detective" in the Baker Street Journal), and news from and about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>. The Sherlock Holmes Collections web-site at <special.lib.umn.edu/rare/holmes.html> is well worth visiting, especially for its links to Tim Johnson's on-going "Supplement to the Universal Sherlock Holmes".

188. Christopher Morley and Franz Grillparzer appeared in the January issue of Oprah magazine, not for their connection at the time of the founding of The Baker Street Irregulars, but for quotes on the monthly calendar (reported by Francine Kitts): "There are no precedents: You are the first You that ever was." (Morley) and "I notice well that one stray step from the habitual path leads irresistibly into a new direction."
189. "Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle and the Case of Congenital Syphilis", by Arthur M. Silverstein and Christine Ruggers (Perspectives in Biology, spring 2006), is an examination of "The Third Generation" based on what late nineteenth-century doctors believed about congenital and hereditary syphilis, rather than more modern beliefs on how the disease is passed from generation to generation; it's an interesting demonstration of why it's better to think late nineteenth-century when reading a story written then.

190. May 06 #6: Further to the item (Jan 06 #5) about the new Decca original-cast CD of the musical "Baker Street" (1964), the accompanying booklet has an interesting article on "The Case of the Singing Detective" by Laurence Maslon, and the CD has some nice bonus tracks: "A Married Man" by Richard Burton with Richard Hayman & His Orchestra, and "Baker Street Mystery" by Kai Winding & His Orchestra. "Baker Street Mystery" was in the show (as "A Veritable Work of Art") in the Boston tryout, but never made it to Toronto or New York.
191. Ales Kolodrubec notes that "Icons: A Portrait of England" offers people an opportunity to nominate and vote for aspects of British culture. Sherlock Holmes has already been nominated; people who want to vote for (or against) him, or see other icons, can visit the web-site at <www.icons.org.uk>.
192. Brian Pugh reports that the Portsmouth Museum will hold an exhibition from June 10 to Sept. 24, displaying about 150 items from the more than 16,000 that were bequeathed to Portsmouth by Richard Lancelyn Green; a permanent exhibition should be open next year. The first two issues of the City of Portsmouth's quarterly newsletter about the bequest, with information on on-going cataloguing and some attractive material shown in photographs can be seen at their web-site at <www.portsmouthand.co.uk/history/213.htm>; to enroll on their mailing list, write to Mark Wright (ECCS 1st Floor, Civic Offices, Guildhall Square, Portsmouth PO1 2AD, England).
193. Sale 5076 ("The Fine Art of Smoking") at Christie's on May 23 with material from the private collection of Alfred Dunhill (1872-1959) included an interesting carved-portrait meerschaum pipe in a silver-mounted leather case engraved "H. A. Saintsbury on His 500th Performance of Sherlock Holmes Dec. 21st 1903"; the pipe sold for £960 (including the buyer's premium). Their web-site is at <www.christies.com>, and the pipe is illustrated in Philip Weller's THE LIFE AND TIMES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1992, p. 15). The pipe was previously owned by Stanley Mackenzie, and was sold at auction at Sotheby's on July 24, 1995, along with a curved shell briar pipe also once owned by Saintsbury; the two pipes were sold as one lot for £2,990 (also including the buyer's premium).
194. There are still a few spaces open for the next running of The Silver Blaze at Saragota Race Track in upstate New York (Feb 06 #3), with lunch at the track and the race on July 29 and brunch and a program on July 30; more information is available from Lou Lewis (2 Lookerman Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) <llewis@lewisgreer.com> and at <www.silverblazeny.homestead.com>.
195. The BBC America Shop (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043 (800-898-4921) continues to offer interesting new Sherlockian items, including a Sherlock Holmes Marble Coaster Set ($49.98) and a Sherlock Holmes Mug Set ($34.98); their web-site is at <www.bbcamericashop.com>.
196. SOME DANGER INVOLVED (Jul 04 #1) was the first of Will Thomas' mystery novels featuring Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and with excellent Victorian atmosphere; the series continued with TO KINGDOM COME (2005), and now there's THE LIMEHOUSE TEXT (New York: Simon and Schuster/Touchstone, 2006; 352 pp., $24.00), reported to be as good as the earlier volumes in the series.

197. May 05 #7: "On the one hand, we have a conspiracy that lasts 2,000 years and threatens the very foundations of Christianity, and on the other hand a network of rich dilettantes who resemble a theological branch of the Baker Street Irregulars," suggests Roger Ebert in his review of the film "The Da Vinci Code" in the Chicago Sun-Times (May 17), reported by Jon Lellenberg. One hears of the BSI everywhere . . .
198. Empire Publishing Services (Box 1344, Studio City, CA 91614) (818-784-8918) <empirepubsvc@att.net> offers a catalog of "novels, plays, television and film scripts, and factual books on Holmes and Conan Doyle" (including many books published by Jack Tracy's Gaslight Publications and by Ian Henry); a sales-list is available on request.
199. The film archives of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London were auctioned by Christie's in London in a sale of "Cameras, Magic Lanterns, and Photographs" on May 15. There were two lots of 35mm and 16mm films, sold for a total of £552 (including the buyer's premium).
200. Google (the Internet search engine) often celebrates holiday and events with appropriate logos on its opening page, and they celebrated Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's birthday on May 22. They've been amusing their users with one-day-only logos since 1999, and you can visit their on-line museum at <www.google.com/holidaylogos.html>. Earlier this year they honored Spanish painter Joan Miro's birthday on Apr. 20 with a log in Miro's style, and removed it when they received a complaint from the painter's family that the logo was an infringement of the Miro copyright.
201. Sherlockians are well aware that "A Study in Scarlet" was first published in Beeton's Christmas Annual; the periodical was named for Isabella Beeton, but it was her husband Samuel who published it, capitalizing on the fame of his late wife Isabella, who was renowned for her BOOK OF HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT, first published in 1861. Conan Doyle titled a chapter in his A DUET: WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS (1898) "Concerning Mrs. Beeton", and involves his newly-married couple involved in an amusing discussion of the book. Lytton Strachey planned to write a biography of Mrs. Beeton, but didn't, and there is a new biography: THE SHORT LIFE AND LONG TIMES OF MRS. BEETON: THE FIRST DOMESTIC GODDESS, by Kathryn Hughes (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2006; 480 pp., $29.95); there was an enthusiastic review in the N.Y. Times on May 17 (spotted by Francine Kitts).
202. THE BEST OF 'THE SHERLOCK HOLMES JOURNAL' (VOLUME ONE) has been published, edited by Nicholas Utechin from the first eight volumes of the SHJ, with a foreword by the late Anthony Howlett (his last piece of Sherlockian writing before his death). There are 25 "special" copies, numbered and signed by Freda Howlett, Nicholas Utechin, and Philip Porter (£40.00 postpaid to the UK, £41.00/€60.00 to Europe, $45.00/$90.00 elsewhere), and a regular edition (£25.00 or £26.00/€40.00 or £30.00/$60.00); checks made payable to the The Sherlock Holmes Society of London can be sent to Judi Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England <shsl221b@aol.com>).
203. May 06 #8: One of the many interesting aspects the Internet is the growing number of opportunities for those who wish to share their personal information to do that. There are blogs, and Facebook, and MySpace, and (reported by Jon Lellenberg) LibraryThing <www.librarything.com>: "an online service to help people catalog their books easily." You can enter 200 books free, or as many as you want for $10.00 (a year) or $25.00 (lifetime), and you can make your information available to others (or not).
204. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($18.95 hardcover, $11.95 paperback) and THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($16.95/$9.95) are among the titles in the Book series <www.bedbooks.net>. A Bed Book, according to the company publicity, is a book printed sideways, so that it can be read lying on one's side in bed.
205. Sherlock Holmes said that he had paid 55 shillings for his Stradivarius violin, and it would be worth more now. A Stradivarius (called "The Hammer" from its first recorded owner, the 19th century Swedish collector Christian Hammer) was sold at Christie's in New York on May 16, and set a record for

- the most valuable musical instrument: $3,544,000 (including the buyer's premium); the previous record-holder was the "Lady Tennant" Stradivarius that sold at Christie's for $2,032,000 in April 2005.
206. The County Seat Theater Company will perform Bill Majeski's play "The Very Great Grandson of Sherlock Holmes" (1976) at the Old Country Church Theater in Atkinson, Minn. on July 27-30; 2185 County Road 61, Atkinson, MN 55718 (218-591-0049).
207. "Best of Friends: R. Buckminster Fuller and Isamu Noguchi" is the title of an exhibition through Oct. 15 at the Noguchi Museum at 9-01 33rd Road (at Vernon Boulevard, Long Island City, NY 10016) <www.noguchi.org>; they met in 1929 and were friends and collaborators for more than 50 years. Bucky Fuller also was a protege and good friend of Christopher Morley, as well as a member of the Three Hours for Lunch Club, the Grillparzer Sittenpolizeiverein, and the Baker Street Irregulars.
208. "The calabash pipe is made from a gourd," Gary B. Schrier notes in THE HISTORY OF THE CALABASH PIPE, but there's a lot more to be said about the calabash; the author does exactly that, and does it well, in his 222-page privately printed (and well-illustrated) discussion of the pipe. The book is much more than a mere history of the calabash: there is discussion of the Boer War, manufacturers, collections and collectors (including Robert Storm Petersen, the noted Danish Sherlockian), and Sherlock Holmes in a chapter that includes a reprint of Robert S. Ennis' "The Great Calabash Question" from The Baker Street Journal. Schrier notes that the iconic Sherlockian calabash is non-Canonical, and quotes a report that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle owned one, which was shown to Robert Kagan by Anna Conan Doyle. There's a web-site at <www.calabashpipe.com>, and the book is available at a discount ($60.00 plus shipping) until Sept. 30 to readers of this newsletter (just say the magic word "Scuttlebutt"). The History of the Calabash Pipe, 14229 Bethel-Burley Road SE, Port Orchard, WA 98367 <gbs@wavecable.com>.

209. Jun 06 #1: "My favorite authors included Conan Doyle, Dickens, Will James on cowboys, Joseph A. Altsheler on Indians, and Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars on reptiles. I read a lot of Conrad; I loved all that sea stuff, all the gloom. I've read everything." Roger Angell (in New York magazine, May 29) on what he read as a youth; his contributions to The New Yorker over many decades have included occasional allusions to the Canon.
210. Julian Barnes' ARTHUR & GEORGE (Jan 06 #4) has a new British trade paperback edition (London: Jonathan Cape, 2006; 368 pp., £10.99). The author's web-site is at <www.julianbarnes.com>.
211. Tom Dunn, editor and publisher of The Pipe Smoker's Ephemeris, died last year (Apr 06 #5) and requested that there be no obituaries, but there are some heart-felt tributes to Tom, by Ben Rapaport and others, in the spring issue of Pipes and Tobaccos; $9.95 plus shipping from SpecComm International, 5808 Faringdon Place #200, Raleigh, NC 27609 <www.pt-magazine.com>.
212. Wikipedia at <www.wikipedia.net> is an interesting Internet encyclopedia, with some surprises in its entries. If you search for "a treatise on the binomial theorem" and then click on the link to "a review of a later journal version of the paper", you'll find an imaginative review written by Ian Parberry, now a professor at the University of North Texas, and published in SIGACT News in 1994.
213. The Camden House web-site at <www.camdenhouse.ignisart.com> is one of the more interesting Sherlockian web-sites; Rachel Wilcox reports that there's a new "Agony Column" for those who have Sherlockian want-lists, or S'iana for sale or trade.
214. Christopher Morley and Franz Grillparzer appeared in the January issue of Oprah magazine, not for their connection at the time of the founding of The Baker Street Irregulars, but for quotes on the monthly calendar (reported by Francine Kitts): "There are no precedents: You are the first You that ever was." (Morley) and "I notice well that one stray step from the habitual path leads irresistibly into a new direction."
215. Arthur Porges died on May 12. He was a mathematics teacher before becoming a professional author, and his first published story appeared in 1950; best known for his science fiction and fantasy, he wrote in many other genres, and his series about Stately Homes began in EQMM in EQMM (Feb. 1957).
216. Reported: MURDER IS NO MITZVAH: SHORT MYSTERIES ABOUT JEWISH OCCASIONS, edited by Abigail Browning (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2004; 304 pp., $23.95); an anthology of 12 stories, one of them Conan Doyle's "The Jew's Breastplate".
217. Sherlockian fans of Wallace & Gromit will want to pursue WALLACE & GROMIT: THE WHIPPET VANISHES, by Simon Furman and Ian Rimmer (London: Titan Books, 2004; 48 pp., £8.99 hardcover, £5.99 paperback) ($12.95/$8.95); the graphic novel features the popular claymation characters, with Wallace and Gromit appearing in Sherlockian costume (discovered by Ev Herzog).
218. Jun 06 #2: E. J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR: THE REAL FORENSICS BEHIND THE GREAT DETECTIVE'S GREATEST CASES (Hoboken: John Wiley, 2006; 244 pp., $24.95) is a fine demonstration of how the Canon can be used to make a technical subject interesting, and it will be just as interesting to Sherlockians: Wagner tells stories of how science was and is used to solve crimes, and she uses the stories to show how forensics have expanded in scope since Sherlock Holmes' time. Her web-site's at <www.forensic.to/webhome/ejwagner>.
219. Caleb Carr's THE ITALIAN SECRETARY: A FURTHER ADVENTURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Apr 05 #5) is out in paperback (New York: St. Martin's Paperbacks, 2006; 352 pp., $7.99); it brings Holmes and Watson to Edinburgh to help Mycroft defend Her Majesty against a plot that involves Holyrood and David Rizzio (who was Queen Mary's secretary and met his death at Holyrood).
220. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2005" offers Andrew Malec's report on "An Interesting William Gillette Letter", Pasquale Accardo's discussion of "The Crooked Man", and other scholarship; copies of the 50-page booklet are available from its editor, John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122) for $10.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
221. Robert W. Douty ("The Priory School") died on May 30. He was a teacher and then a pastor and chaplain, ordained in 1990. His middle name was Watson, and Bob was an early member of The Hudson Valley Scientists and The Three Garridebs, and in 1980 co-authored (with Bruce Kennedy) a pamphlet on their explorations IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF BIRDY EDWARDS. He was awarded his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1980.
222. At hand from Will Thomas: a copy of Tony Wolf's article on "Bartitsu: The 'New Art of Self-Defence'" in Classical Fighting Arts #9 (2006); bartitsu. invented by E. W. Barton-Wright, is believed by many Sherlockian scholars to be the baritsu that Sherlock Holmes mentions in "The Empty House" (the conclusion of the article will appear in issue #10). $5.95 plus shipping from Dragon Associates (Box 6039, Thousand Oaks, CA 91359) (800-717-6288) <www.dragon-tsunami.org>.
223. Reported: FACES OF THE LIVING DEAD: THE BELIEF IN SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHY, by Martyn Jolly (London: British Library Publishing Division, 2006; 160 pp., £20.00) (West New York: Mark Batty, 2006; 160 pp., $39.95); "examines the evolution and photographic technique of spirit photography," with discussion of Conan Doyle's involvement.
224. Laura Kuhn reports that Stuart M. Kaminsky's Sherlockian pastiche "The Man from Capetown" (which was first published in Martin Greenberg's collection MURDER IN BAKER STREET in 2001) can now be read free at Kaminsky's web-site <www.stuartkaminsky.com/man\_from\_capetown.html>.

225. Jens Byskov Jensen, founder of Le Cercle de Sherlock Holmes in New Orleans, published some of his Sherlockian scholarship for the birthday party that was held by Hugo's Companions in Chicago on May 27; a few copies of the 24-page pamphlet THREE STUDIES are available ($8.95 postpaid) from William E. Sawisch (149 Rockford Avenue, Forest Park, IL 60130).
226. Jun 06 #3: Further to the item (Oct 05 #4) on "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (adapted by Steven Dietz from Gillette's play), another production is scheduled next year, by the Kansas City Repertory Theatre, at the Spencer Theatre in the Performing Arts Center in Kansas City, Feb 23 through Mar. 18 (the theater's address is 4949 Cherry Street, Kansas City, MO 64110 (816-235-2700) <www.missourirepitorytheatre.org>.
227. Congratulations to Peter Calamai, national science reporter for the Toronto Star, who has won a Canadian Science Writers' Association's 2005 Science in Society award ($1,000) for his ten-part series on Albert Einstein's legacy. The series is available on-line at <www.thestar.com>: scroll down to "Feature Sections" and click on "Ideas", scroll down to the picture of Albert Einstein, and click on "The miracle worker"; his stories (beginning Oct. 2) are in the links under "Einstein's Miracle Year".
228. The Long Beach Playhouse is performing Ken Ludwig's "Postmortem" (a mystery featuring William Gillette and set at his home in Connecticut) through July 15 (562-494-1014) <www.lbph.com>. The play also is being performed by the Old Lyric Repertory Company at the Caine Lyric Theatre in Logan, Utah, from July 6 through Aug. 8 (435-752-1500) <www1.usu.edu/lyric>.
229. The Baker Street Dispatch, now in its 16th year, is an interesting six-page newsletter edited by Thomas and Janet Biblewski ($10.50 a year for six issues; Box 5503, Toledo, OH 43613); the May issue includes a humorous report from Sam Stinson on the perils of being a collector.
230. Emerson G. Wulling died on May 29. He taught English for 40 years, but his real calling was printing: he began at the age of 13, with rubber type on a toy press he received from his parents as a Christmas present in 1915, and he was still printing two years ago at the age of 100; his Sumac Press was famous for its interesting books, pamphlets, and ephemera, including many items published for The Norwegian Explorers.
231. Something new for Sherlockians visiting Edinburgh: the Scottish Storytelling Centre has opened on the Royal Mile, with a storytelling wall that celebrates famous stories, among them Tom O'Shanter, Greyfriars Bobby, Sherlock Holmes, Inspector Rebus, Maisie from Morningside, and The Gruffalo.
232. Simon Callow's ORSON WELLES: THE ROAD TO XANADU (Apr 96 #1) was the first installment of a three-volume biography, now followed by ORSON WELLES: HELLO AMERICANS (London: Jonathan Cape, 2006; 528 pp. £25.00); Welles is known best to many Sherlockians as the answer to a trivia-quiz question (name an actor who played both Sherlock Holmes and Prof. Moriarty), and Callow is an excellent writer (and actor and director). The new volume covers the years 1941 to 1947.
233. Barry Day's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE APOCALYPSE MURDERS (Sep 01 #1) is now available as an audiobook, well read by David Ian Davies, who does a fine job with voices and accents; Holmes (and Watson and Mycroft and Irene) are involved in a battle against a serial killer who intends to destroy London. The recording is offered at <www.audible.com> as a download to your computer ($16.07); the recording was produced by One Voice Recordings, who offer other S'ian recordings by Davies on CDs at <www.onevoicerecordings.com>.
234. Jun 06 #4: <www.amazon.com> offers a new feature to users: if the picture of the cover of a book shows "search inside" above it, you can click on the cover and get added-value features such as "Statistically Improbable Phrases" and "Capitalized Phrases" that allow you to pursue phrases into other books; you can find for example, how and where "Conan Doyle" is mentioned in Jeffrey C. Kinkley's CHINESE JUSTICE, THE FICTION: LAW AND LITERATURE IN MODERN CHINA.
235. Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties) have published the June issue of their Sherlockian E-Times, with their usual offers of interesting Sherlockiana, including a new set of Sherlockian salt and pepper shakers, and the official Col. Sebastian Moran's Gun Club fanny pack. The newsletter's URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e_times12.htm>, and you can request an email subscription at their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
236. Jesse W. Thornton died on June 5. He acted at the Weston Playhouse in Vermont, and in 1990 played Billy (with Christopher Lloyd as Holmes) in their production of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes".
237. Provenance can be important: a copy of the first edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, inscribed by the author, was auctioned at Christie's in London on June 6 (with an estimate of £3,000-5,000); it sold for £45,600. The reason for the high bidding? Inscribed on the title page "with Arthur's love, Nov 8th/92," the book was a gift to the vendor from a godchild of Conan Doyle.
238. In other auction news, there was an interesting item at eBay this month: a lined notebook, bound in plum-colored polished leather, with a brass lock and key and gilt edges, inscribed on the first page "Kingsley Conan Doyle, with much love from his Dorothy" and dated June 4th, 1911; the notebook was never used (Kingsley, born in 1892, was Conan Doyle oldest son). The bidding opened at £25 and closed at £609.
239. Phil Attwell reports that the BBC has discounted its DVDs with five of the 1968 programs starring Peter Cushing as Holmes: "A Study in Scarlet & The Boscombe Valley Mystery" (£8.99), "The Sign of the Four & The Blue Carbuncle" (£6.99), and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (£8.99); a boxed set is discounted to £13.99 <www.bbcshop.com>. Roger Johnson reports that the BBC plans to issue a larger boxed set with the three Cushing DVDs, Richard Roxburgh's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002), Rupert Everett's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" (2004), and "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" (2005) with Douglas Henshall (Conan Doyle) and Brian Cox (Joseph Bell); all for £39.99.
240. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company have collaborated on a recording of "The Yellow Face" and "The Three Students" (among the more neglected of the stories); they're dramatized by M. J. Elliott, with Jim Crozier as Holmes and Dave Hawkes as Watson. The 30-minute recordings are excellent, and it's interesting to hear Canonical characters with new voices. Available from the Society (Mole End, Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England); £5.00 postpaid to the U.K., £6.00/E9.00 to Europe, £9.00/$12.00 elsewhere (sterling checks payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks payable to Jean Upton; euros in currency, please).

241. Jun 06 #5: The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Barbara Rusch's report on a Conan Doyle notebook recently acquired by the collection, an amusing Jabez Wilson pastiche by Marilyn Penner, and other news. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>.
242. Paul Martin reports a "super summer sale" at Signals (Box 2599, Hudson, OH 44236) (800-669-9696) <www.signals.com>, with the three volumes of THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES discounted to $69.96; add shipping and it's still cheaper than Amazon's price.
243. Further to the item (Mar 06 #4) about Vasilij Livanov receiving an honorary MBE, the ITAR-TASS New Agency reported from Moscow on June 15 that Anthony Brenton, British Ambassador to Russia, presented the award to Livanov at a gala party at the embassy; Brenton said that Livanov received the award for producing an image of English tolerance and intellectualism in the Russian cinematic art." 500 guests were invited to the birthday party, and treated to "national British meals and drinks."

244. Reported: A TREASURY OF DECEPTION: LIARS, MISLEADERS, HOODWINKERS, AND THE EXTRAORDINARY TRUE STORIES OF HISTORY'S GREATEST HOAXES, FAKES, AND FRAUDS, by Michael Farquhar (New York: Penguin Putnam, 2005; 320 pp., $14.00); includes a discussion of Conan Doyle and the Cottingley fairies.
245. A new catalog at hand from Audio Editions (Box 6930, Auburn, CA 95604 (800-231-4261) <www.audioeditions.com> serves as a reminder that many books now are published on CDs as well as ink-on-paper. Among them: Laurie R. King's LOCKED ROOMS, read by Jenny Sterlin, and THE ART OF DETECTION, read by Alyssa Bresnahan and Robert Ian MacKenzie (both from Recorded Books, $39.99), as well as three sets of THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, each with 12 of the Rathbone/Bruce radio shows that were packaged by Simon & Schuster some years ago (Solution Economy, $29.95).
246. Add one more to the list of members of the Baker Street Irregulars who have appeared in movies: Jean Upton, who did voice-overs and dubbing in "Martha, Meet Frank, Daniel and Lawrence" (1998), released in the U.S. as "The Very Thought of You" (1999).
247. Ken Lanza spotted the web-site for A Victorian Village Inn (Box 112, Clinton, CT 06413) (860-895-9588) <www.avictorianvillage.com>; there are "cottage villas" available by the week (or longer), with different themes, and one of them is a three-story Sherlock Holmes Cottage ($750-1500 per week).
248. Michael Gilbert died on Feb. 8. He was a lawyer as well as a prolific mystery writer, and a founding member of the Crime Writers Association; he was named a grandmaster by the Mystery Writers of America in 1988 and received the CWA's Diamond Dagger for lifetime achievement in 1994. He combined his interests in an article on "Sherlock Holmes and the Wombles" in the British magazine Author (summer 1977), discussing copyright and characters in literature; the article was reprinted in Baker Street Miscellanea (June 1979) with comments by Saul Cohen and Francis M. Nevins, Jr.

249. Jun 06 #6: Alan Rettig has reported that Turner Classic Movies cable will feature Dick Cavett as their "guest programmer" on July 24; his four favorite films, all to be broadcast that evening, are "The Third Man", "A Strange Affair", "To Be or Not to Be", "Sherlock Holmes and the Woman in Green"; Cavett says that he saw "The Woman in Green" while in high school, and it was his first Sherlock Holmes movie and the one during which, figuratively speaking, "I fell in love with Basil Rathbone."
250. SHERLOCK has returned, as SHERLOCK MAGAZINE, with David Stuart Davies again as editor, and many of the traditional contributors on hand for issue #67, which offers Paul M. Chapman's interesting article on "The Heart of Holmes" (Love, Sex and the Great Detective), M. J. Elliott's examination of "A Tardis on Baker Street" (about Doctor Who and Sherlock Holmes), a "preposterous conclusion" about "Sherlock Holmes & The Da Vinci Code", and much more. SHERLOCK is published six times a year and subscriptions cost £23.70 a year (U.K.) £30.00 (other Europe) £46.00/$70.00 (rest of the world); Atlas Publishing, Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Their American agent is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> (877-233-3823); credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and there are back issues available.
251. Forge/Tom Doherty Associates are continuing their reissues of Carole Nelson Douglas' series about Irene Adler in paperback, with uniform cover artwork by Glenn Harrington and minor revisions and a reader's guide. The fourth reissue is A SOUL OF STEEL, due in December ($7.99); it's the third volume in the original series (published as IRENE AT LARGE). Carole's web-site is at <www.carolenelsondouglas.com>.
252. The June 26 issue of The New Yorker has eight amusing Sherlockian "spots" drawn by Benoit Jacques, who had a different (single) Sherlockian spot in The New Yorker on Aug. 7, 2000 (reprinted on Nov. 2, 2002).
253. Eric Quayle died in Nov. 2001. He was an energetic collector and a prolific author of books about books; his THE COLLECTOR'S BOOK OF DETECTIVE FICTION (1972) is packed with splendid color photographs of first editions in the genre, including splendid copies of the "Adventures" and the "Memoirs". Many of the books in his collection were sold at auction by Bonhams in London on Mar. 14 and Apr. 11.
254. Mitch Cullin's A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (Apr 05 #2) now has a trade paperback edition (New York: Knopf Publishing Group, 2006; 272 pp., $13.95).
255. ELEMENTARY, MY DEAR GROUCHO, by Ron Goulart (New York: Thomas Dunne Books, 1999; $23.95); features Groucho Marx as a detective. In a Hollywood movie studio where Valley of Fear is being filmed in the '30's, the body of the director has been found murdered. The actor portraying Holmes in the film vies with Groucho to see which one can find the murderer first. The dust-jacket features a superb caricature of Groucho as Holmes (this is the third book by this author featuring Groucho as a detective).

Jul 06 #1:

256. A Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Colloquium will be held at the Newberry Library in Chicago on Oct. 7 (9:30 am to noon) to highlight the C. Fred Kittle Collection of Doyleana at the Library; the speakers will be Dan Posnansky, Paul Martin, and Glen Miranker. The colloquium is open to the public, and the Newberry is at 60 West Walton Street in Chicago.
257. Further to the item (Apr 06 #5) on the "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" two-DVD set ($39.98): it's been released, with the four 90-minute programs broadcast on BBC-2 in 2001 and on PBS-TV in 2002 (with Ian Richardson as Joseph Bell and Charles Edwards as Arthur Conan Doyle).
258. "The Complete Sherlock Holmes Collection" has been released by MPI on five DVDs ($129.98), with the 14 Rathbone/Holmes movies, and interesting added features: an interview with Robert Gitt (UCLA Film and TV Archive), audio commentaries (including a new discussion of "Dressed to Kill" by Patricia Morrison), footage of Conan Doyle, theatrical trailers, production notes, and photo galleries.
259. Ken Lanza discovered an interesting web-site at <www.dailyscript.com>; the Daily Script is a collection of movie scripts and screenplays intended "to serve as resource for writers and actors and those who simply enjoy reading movie scripts." One of them is a script for "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and you can find other scripts in which Sherlock Holmes is mentioned.
260. The Barnes & Noble reprint (1992) of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (with the introduction by Christopher Morley) is now available in an edition suitable for gifts: in "genuine bonded leather with ribbon marker," with gilt edges ($19.98).
261. Reported: HIDE-AND-SEEK WITH ANGELS: A LIFE OF J. M. BARRIE, by Lisa Chaney (New York: St. Martin's, 2006; 432 pp., $27.95); a new biography of the author of the parodies "The Late Sherlock Holmes" and "The Adventure of the Two Collaborators". And THE MOST FAMOUS MAN IN AMERICA: THE BIOGRAPHY OF HENRY WARD BEECHER, by Debby Applegate (New York: Doubleday, 2006; 527 pp. $27.95); a new biography of the man whose unframed portrait stood upon the top of Watson's books.
262. MISSIVES FROM THE MIRE (Jan 04 #3) is still available for $27.50 postpaid from Bill Sawisch (418 Gallahad Road, Bolingbrook, IL 60440) ($27.50 postpaid) (checks payable to Hugo's Companions, please); it's a CD-ROM with the "collected newsletters and other scribblings" covering the 55-year history of Hugo's Companions of Chicago.
263. The "Sherlock Holmes Festival" held in Tryon, N.C., last year (Aug 05 #1) included performances of Ike Wilson's 45-minute adaptations of "The Second Stain" and "The Six Napoleons" by the Blue Ridge Radio Players. They are nicely done, and recordings (and five other Sherlockian dramatizations by Hendrik Booraem) are available on cassettes and CDs ($7.00 each postpaid) (sorry: no credit-card orders) from the National Audio Theater (Box 1197, Tryon, NC 28782) <www.nationalaudiotheater.org>.

264. Jul 06 #2: Lyle Stuart died on June 24. He was a journalist (who feuded with Walter Winchell and sued him and won) and a publisher who was best known for the literary hoax NAKED CAME THE STRANGER (1969) and for THE ANARCHIST COOKBOOK (1971), and a book distributor whose titles included Chris Steinbrunner's classic THE FILMS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, Terrance Dicks' DOCTOR WHO AND THE TALONS OF WENG-CHIANG, and Peter Haining's THE TELEVISION SHERLOCK HOLMES.
265. "Our country cottage" is what Conan Doyle once called Bignell Wood (in OUR AFRICAN WINTER); he purchased the house in 1926, and it's now for sale (for £1,450,000). It's far grander than a mere cottage: the main house has two stories and 5,568 square feet, with eight reception rooms, eight bedrooms, and three bathrooms; a detached garage has two stories and 676 square feet; and there are five acres of grounds and private-gate access to the New Forest. You can see photographs, a floor plan, and a downloadable brochure at <www.savills.co.uk>: search "so43" in the "area" block, and scroll down to the description of the house.
266. "Holmes Found Watson, Thanks to a Lakhnavi" was the headline on a story in the Hindustan Times (on May 22) about Conan Doyle's close friend Dr. Mohammed Ebrahim Sufi of Lucknow having suggested that Sherlock Holmes should have a friend and assistant (Conan Doyle relished the idea and instantly created the character of Dr. Watson). It's not known where Joyjit Ghosh, author of the story, got the information: perhaps from Wikipedia, the Internet encyclopedia, where the entry for Conan Doyle was "vandalized" on Dec. 26, 2005, by someone who inserted a paragraph about Sufi (and a photograph); both were removed on Jan. 3, 2006 (previous versions of entries are preserved at the web-site, whence comes the photograph). There's another possible (though less likely) source for the information about Sufi: an article "About the author" in the Sherlock Holmes stories offered on a CD from the Coradella Collegiate Bookshelf <www.collegebookshelf.net>. According to the company, the article is based on [now corrected] information from Wikipedia; one might suspect that the Indian writer relied directly on Wikipedia. Wikipedia exists in other languages, and there are links from <www.wikipedia.com>; the Finnish version of the entry at <fi.wikipedia.com> has not yet been corrected. There are 299 books (including six of the nine volumes of the Canon, each with the "About the author" article) on the CD, which costs $29.95 from Oberon/The Write Direction, 6346 Rygate Drive, Reynoldsburg, OH 43068) (866-397-2424).
267. "Just look up the trains in Bradshaw," said Sherlock Holmes (in "The Copper Beeches"). George Bradshaw published the first official railway timetable in 1838, and Bradshaw's Guide became indispensable for those who traveled by train. But now the publisher has announced the end of Bradshaw's, according to a story in the Daily Telegraph (July 18), spotted by Catherine Cooke; the Guide's demise is blamed on the Internet, which makes information available without requiring a 2,500-page book that costs £12.00 (and that has sales of only 12,000 copies).
268. Jul 06 #3: Nice news for those who already own the "Crowborough Edition" of Conan Doyle's works, published in 1930 in 24 volumes, with his signature in the first volume: listings at <www.abebooks.com> show an asking price of $15,000 for in dust jackets (lower prices for sets without the jackets, of course). The Kelmscott Bookshop (32 West 25th Street, Baltimore, MD 21218) (410-235-6810) <www.kelmscottbooks.com> is asking $14,000 for a set with only one volume lacking a dust jacket.
269. Watson's House of Ales in Houston is a new addition to a Texas chain that includes nine Sherlock's Pubs and six 221B Baker Street Pub and Grills (two of them in Oklahoma and Colorado); details at <www.watsonshouseofales.com>.
270. Ken Lanza noted a report on an exhibition "In My Life: The Artwork of John Lennon" in Alexandria, Va., in June, arranged with the assistance of Legacy Fine Art and Productions (300 Clematis Street #117), West Palm Beach, FL 33401) (561-651-1156) (888-278-1969); their web-site is at <www.johnlennonartwork.com> <lennonartwork@aol.com>. The company is selling limited-edition prints (300 copies) of "Sherlock Lennon" (copyright Yoko Ono) ($2,350 framed). Lennon's self-portrait in Sherlockian costume, first appeared on p. 33 of his A SPANIARD IN THE WORKS (1965), at the end of a Shamrock Wolmbs parody "The Singularge Experience of Miss Anne Duffield"
271. Noted by Jim Vogelsang: "How to produce a TV show: Have a miserable child-hood. Stay in your room and read comic books and Sherlock Holmes. Don't worry about making friends. Don't worry about sports. Just keep reading." As recommended by Andy Breckman, creator of the television series "Monk", in MONK: THE OFFICIAL EPISODE GUIDE, by Terry J. Erdmann and Paula M. Block (New York: St. Martin's Griffin, 2006; 224 pp., $19.95); the book has many other references to Sherlock Holmes.
272. Michael Wharton died on Jan. 23. He was a journalist and a humorist, and was credited in his obituary in the Daily Telegraph for having created the strongest fictional character ever to appear in a newspaper column: Peter Simple, who was in the paper for 49 years. In 1973 he noted that President Tito of Yugoslavia had praised Sherlock Holmes, and Simple suggested that there should be books "in which Marx and his teachings were merged with the life and philosophy of Sherlock Holmes, with Fred Engels as his side, perhaps, as a fox-hunting dialectical Dr. Watson, whose utter inability to understand was getting at would provide light relief."
273. The manuscript of "The Illustrious Client" was owned by Sir Arthur, by his wife, and by their daughter, and was bequeathed by Dame Jean Conan Doyle to the National Library of Scotland in Edinburgh and delivered to the Library on June 30. Cate Newton, director of development at the Library, said that the story is particularly relevant because "in the course of helping Holmes to solve the case, Dr. Watson himself uses a library to get the information he needs." The manuscript will be displayed in the exhibition "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell: The Real Sherlock Holmes" at the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh through Oct. 29 (Apr 06 #2).
274. Jul 06 #4: Conan Doyle "often visited the centuries-old Hill House in Habbisburgh and in 1903 wrote 'The Adventure of the Dancing Men' while staying there," according to a story in the Eastern Daily Press (July 17) about a blue plaque that now commemorates the literary significance of the Hill House Hotel. It seems to have been Gavin Brend who first reported that Conan Doyle stayed at the hotel, at the time owned by a man named Cubitt, and was inspired by the stick-figure alphabet in the landlord's son's autograph book to create the dancing men. But there appears to be no evidence for more than one visit, in May 1903. The report about the installation of the plaque also notes that "Hill House's heritage, along with the rest of the picturesque village, is threatened by coastal erosion and the pub may have only 25 years left if no action is taken."
275. THE SECRET ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Paul E. Heusinger (Centennial: Lifevest, 2006; 147 pp., $14.95), is a collection of ten stories memorized by Watson and rescued by telepathic clairvoyance; the stories involve Jack the Ripper, Tarzan, the Irish Uprising, and other cases not set to paper by Watson; Authors to Believe In (4901 East Dry Creek Road #160, Centennial, CO 80122) (877-843-1007) <www.authorstobelievein.com>.
276. Further to the report (Feb 04 #3) on a newspaper restaurant critic's review of the restaurant at the Undershaw hotel, the most recent use of the house in Hindhead in Surrey, where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, the hotel closed, and the company that owns the house left it vacant and unprotected, and recently proposed turning the property into thirteen apartments. There were protests (local and international), and newspaper publicity (including an article by Julian Barnes in the Guardian on July 8), and the application has been withdrawn. The Victorian Society and The Sherlock Holmes Society of London have asked English Heritage to upgrade the property to Grade I-listed status (from the current Grade II status); the - upgrade would place Undershaw in the top three percent of Britain's buildings. And the Guardian has published (July 17) a letter supporting that campaign from Doyleans and Sherlockians in the U.K. and the U.S.; you can search for Conan Doyle at the paper's web-site at <www.guardian.co.uk>.

277. William R. Hanson, MD, has created another new Sherlockian first day cover, for "The Gloria Scott" (with the 39c Sugar Ray Robinson stamp and a cachet showing Holmes as college-days boxer and the explosion of the brig; $10.00 postpaid. And a postcard postmarked with the Steamboat Rock, Iowa, pictorial cancel showing a frog in Sherlockian costume (perhaps related to a production of a Sherlockian play at a local dinner theater); $4.50 postpaid or $4.00 if ordered with the boxing cover. Checks or money orders can be sent to Dr. Hanson at 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
278. Jul 06 #5: "My name is Joe Sherlock. But almost everybody calls me Sherlock. Never Joe." And with good reason: JOE SHERLOCK: KID DETECTIVE is featured in Dave Keane's THE HAUNTED TOOLSHED and THE NEIGHBORHOOD STINK (New York: HarperCollins, 2006; 120 and 105 pp., $15.99 cloth, $3.99 paper); the stories are for kids aged 7-10, and they're written and illustrated with style and humor, and Joe (of course) is an avid fan of Sherlock Holmes. The next title due in the series is THE MISSING MONKEYEYE DIAMOND.
279. Across the Pond Tours offer independent guided tours in the United Kingdom, including one called "The Game Is Afoot" (which starts at $2,945 for seven days); mention code SHM06 for a $250 discount. They're based in Los Angeles (310-373-2720) (866-485-8728) <www.acrossthepondtours.com>.
280. "Clue into Reading" is the slogan for the Summer Reading Club 2006 in Maryland and the District of Columbia, advertised on buses and fliers and online (the cat seems to be named Sneaks); the website's at <www.web.aacpl.lib.md.us>
281. Entertainment Weekly published a list of the 50 "greatest sidekicks" in its July 17 issue: first place went to Ed McMahon, with Robin ranking second, followed Robin, George Costanza, Chewbacca, Ethel Mertz, and Dr. Watson (who was ranked ahead of Samwise Gamgee, Ed Norton, Tattoo, and Dwight Schrute; the complete list can be seen at their web-site at <www.ew.com> (search for "50 greatest sidekicks").
282. "Leaf of orange and red, spiced with tobacco from the Brazils" is the description of Peterson's "Sherlock Holmes" pipe tobacco (50g for $7.95) in a new catalog from McCranie's (4143 Park Road, Charlotte, NC 28209) (800-523-8554) <www.mccranies.com>. They also offer McClelland's "221-B Black Shag" "221-B Honeydew", and "221-B Arcadia".
283. Andrew Sachs, who played Dr. Watson in the BBC Radio 4 series of pastiches scripted by Bert Coules in 2002 and 2004, has now played a rather different Watson: Adso of Melk, in a two-hour dramatization of Umberto Eco's "The Name of the Rose" broadcast by BBC Radio 4 this month. Sachs also played the King of Bohemia in "A Scandal in Bohemia" on BBC Radio 4 in 1990, and (a fine example of the scope that radio offers actors) the Spanish waiter Manuel in the television series "Fawlty Towers" (1979).
284. A question about the date of Nigel Bruce's birth date revealed as-yet-unresolved confusion about whether he was born on Feb. 4 or Feb. 14. A photograph showing three generations of the Bruce family: Sir William Cunningham Bruce, 9th Baronet of Stenhouse (1825-1906); Sir William Waller Bruce, 10th Baronet (1856-1912); Sir Michael William Selby Bruce, 11th Baronet (1894-1957); and (sitting on the 10th Baronet's knee), Sir Michael's younger brother William Nigel Ernle Bruce (1895-1953). The photograph can be found at <www.ukonline.co.uk/members/tom.paterson/BruceStenhouse.htm>, and there is more information about the family at <www.brucefamily.com>.
285. Jul 06 #6: "Save the date," Lou Lewis has suggested, the date being Oct. 13, when the Dutchess County Bar Association will honor Judge Albert M. Rosenblatt by hosting his retirement dinner at Marist College in Poughkeepsie. Al has been a Dutchess county district attorney and judge, N.Y. state Supreme Court justice, chief administrative judge, and associate justice of the Court of Appeals, and (perhaps more important in the "Sherlockian world) one of those responsible for the many and fondly-remembered gourmet Sherlockian dinners at the Culinary Institute of America in Poughkeepsie. His friends are welcome to attend the retirement dinner, and more information is available from Lou Lewis (2 Lookerman Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) <llewis@lewisgreer.com> or the Association's executive director Janna Wheatly (845-473-2488).
286. Reported: Linda Simon's DARK LIGHT: ELECTRICITY AND ANXIETY FROM THE TELEGRAPH TO THE X-RAY (New York: Harcourt, 2004; 357 pp., $25.00 cloth, $14.00 paper); a social history of the introduction of electric power in 19th-century America, with discussion of fact and fiction (including Conan Doyle's stories "Crabbe's Practice" and "The Los Amigos Fiasco").
287. It's difficult to find anything Sherlockian in Alaska, other than Peter Ashman, but Peter has sent an advertisement for Motznik Information Services (831 Briarwood Street #100, Anchorage, AK 99518). with a nicely Sherlockian bear. The company website is a <www.motznik.com>, but there's no bear there.
288. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes" is a set of three DVDs issued by the St. Clair Entertainment Group, and spotted at Walgreens ($9.98); also available at <www.amazon.com> at the price. The set has four Basil Rathbone films, three Arthur Wontner films, Raymond Massey's "The Speckled Band", Reginald Owen's "A Study in Scarlet", and Christopher Lee's "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace", plus (as bonus features) biographies and Conan Doyle and Holmes, and a radio broadcast of "The Bruce-Partington Plans".
289. Scott and Alison Ibbitson breed and sell bull terriers at Baker Street Bull Terriers; Alison reports that Scott's first bull terrier was named "Watson" (and it was registered with the American Kennel Club as "Action's Sherlock Holmes"). They're at 121 Pennapacker Road, Trappe, PA 19426, and the website is at <www.bakerstreetbullterriers.com>.
290. Further to the item (Sep 05 #4) about the One Act Players, in 2002 they recorded three stories ("The Speckled Band", "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Final Adventure"), and the production in San Francisco was the first live performance of any of the dramatizations. You can listen to the shows free at <www.artistlaunch.com> or pay for downloads at <www.spokennetwork.com>. A CD also is available.
291. Aug 06 #1: The Baker Street Irregulars' running of The Silver Blaze was held at Saratoga on July 29, with about 40 Sherlockians on hand. It costs $1,000 to have a race named, so the executive committee decided that the third race would be unofficially ours, and many of us bet on Hesanoldsalt, by way of honoring Black Peter and because the horse's colors were red and black, and were of course dismayed when he turned out to be the long shot in race. We were less dismayed when he won, handily, and at nice odds.
292. William R. Hanson, MD, celebrated The Silver Blaze with an artistic cacheted postcard with a postmark approved by the Postal Service for the event. Checks or money orders can be sent to Dr. Hanson (78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801). The postmark was approved too late for publicity at the race. and was unfortunately available for only 30 days.
293. Sorry about that: I had an incorrect postal address (Jul 06 #1). MISSIVES FROM THE MIRE (Jan 04 #3) is still available for $27.50 postpaid from Bill Sawisch (149 Rockford Avenue, Forest Park, IL 60130), for $27.50 postpaid. (checks payable to Hugo's Companions, please); it's a CD-ROM with the "collected newsletters and other scribblings" covering the 55-year history of Hugo's Companions of Chicago.
294. The third volume of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (with the four long stories) has been nominated for an Anthony (for best critical/nonfiction) at Bouchercon 2006 in Madison, Wis. The winners will be announced at the convention dinner on Sept. 30. The third volume of the

- NEW ANNOTATED has also been nominated in the mystery/suspense/thriller category for a Quill Book Award; the Quills are a Reed Business Information/NBC consumers-choice awards program for books, and you can vote on-line (through Sept. 30) at <www.msnbc.msn.com/id/13594096>.
295. Brian Mills died on June 3. He was a director, mainly for Granada, and had worked on their series "Coronation Street" over almost 40 years, beginning in 1968; he also directed Granada's "Silver Blaze" (1988) and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1988). And Patrick Allen died on July 28. He began his career as a narrator for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., acted in films in Hollywood, and went on to work on stage, screen, radio, and television in England; he was an excellent Colonel Sebastian Moran in Granada's "The Empty House" (1985).
296. There's a new sequel to Jane Hindsley's video travelogue "Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years" (Dec 05 #3): "The Devil's Foot" is a 15-minute narrated photographic tour of Cornwall, including a retelling of the Canonical tale. The DVDs cost $10.00 each (plus $2.00 shipping per order), and credit-card orders are welcome; you can order from Jane (18559 Carpenter Street, Homewood, IL 60430 <jane@hindsleytranscriptions.com>).
297. Aug 06 #2: Doug Wrigglesworth has reported THE WIPERS TIMES: THE COMPLETE SERIES OF THE FAMOUS WARTIME TRENCH NEWSPAPER (London: Little Books, 2006; 400 pp., £20.00); the newspaper (which eventually became The B.E.F. Times) was published by British soldiers at the front during World War I, and it contained three parodies featuring Herlock Shomes. And Brian Pugh notes that the 24th Division List of Staff Officers 28 September 1915 (on p. 375) includes Lt.-Col. J.F.I.H. Doyle (Arthur Conan Doyle's brother Innes); his full name was John Francis Innes Hay Doyle.
298. Our new "Super Heroes" set includes postage stamps honoring Batman and Superman, whose comic books have contained Canonical allusions over the years. And Wonder Woman, who actually appears in the Canon (well, someone is described as a wonder woman). I'm not aware of any connections for the other super heroes in the set: Green Lantern, Plastic Man, Hawkman, Green Arrow, Supergirl, The Flash, and Aquaman.
299. Fans of August Derleth and Solar Pons will welcome The Solar Pons Gazette, edited by Bob Byrne and available at his website <www.solarpons.com>; the first issue has 28 pages of new material and reprints and colorful art-work by Frank Utpatel and others. It is an excellent successor to Luther Norris' Praed Street Dossier.
300. Le Cercle de Sherlock Holmes and the English-Speaking Union of New Orleans have scheduled "Autumn in New Orleans" on Oct. 22, featuring a brunch and Baker Street Journal editor Steve Rothman as the guest speaker; more information is available from Jens Byskov Jensen (1045 Acadian Drive, Madisonville, LA 70447) <221b@byskovjensen.com>.
301. "Sherlock Holmes and the Final Problem" is a new play written by Justin Webb, presented by the Cotton Grass Theatre Company on tour beginning Sept. 8, 2006, at the Village Hall in Cannock Wood. Their address is 2 Overdale, The Hills, Bradwell, Hope Valley, Derbyshire S33 9GZ, England; their web-site's at <www.cottongrass.mirai.co.uk>.
302. Dick Miller found a web-site for the Baskerville Hall Hotel in Hay-on-Wye (in Wales). According to their history of the hotel, it was built in 1839 by Thomas Mynors Baskerville, and Conan Doyle was a family friend who often stayed there, and learned of the local legend of the hounds of the Baskervilles; at the request of his friends he set the book in Devon "to ward off tourists." The hotel's offers include "stags, hens, and party time" weekends with exotic dancers (female or male) <www.baskervillehall.co.uk>.
303. Sherlockians Around the World at <www.frappr.com/sherlockians> is an interactive "visual/virtual community" created by Scott Monty. using Google map technology to show the locations of (and information about) Sherlockians, societies, and sites of interest. And since it's interactive, you can add, edit, or comment on entries; visit <www.bakerstreetjournal.blogspot.com> to read Scott's blog (for Aug. 7) to learn more about this new and interesting resource.
-
304. Aug 06 #3: Nash Entertainment has been mentioned before: they bought the film, stage, television rights to Rodger Garrick-Steele's story about how Conan Doyle murdered Fletcher Robinson (Oct 00 #4), and last year they hired Julie Golden to write a screenplay for a movie "inspired by the many letters sent from all over the world to Sherlock Holmes" asking him to help solve crimes (Jun 05 #5). The project's called "Sherlock' Secretary", and Mark Dindal has been signed as director (he directed the animated Disney film "Chicken Little").
305. Nash's three-year contract expired, and Garrick-Steele's story is now with Thunderball Films, who are planning to start filming a "reality documentary" in Jan. 2007. Their web-sites at <www.thunderballfilms.com>.
306. Who knew? Charles Baskerville Jr. was born in 1896 and died in 1994, and his name was observed by Ev Herzog on a brochure accompanying an exhibition (now closed) of "Colorful Tales in Black & White" at the Museum of American Illustration at the Society of Illustrators in New York. "It's a nice little two-room museum," Ev notes, "and you can generally always tell what the artist was painting, which is rare enough in these troubled times." You'll find some of his artwork at various web-sites (run a Google search for his name). And no, he's not the son of Sir Charles.
307. The District of Columbia is well on its way to becoming smoke-free inside all buildings: the ban takes effect at the end of the year, and affects all establishments, including private clubs, which if they want to have "cigar nights" as in the past will need to have them on the roof. Of course tobacconists will still be able to their wares to people who want to smoke at home or in the open air. And there's still at least one Sherlockian tobacconist, in California: BakerStreet Downtown in Napa. It's owned by Brenda Roberts, who has been in business for twenty years, and (of course) has a web-site at <www.bakerstreettime.com>.
308. "'Another glass, Watson!' said Mr. Sherlock Holmes as he extended the bottle of Imperial Tokay." Imperial Tokay is available again, according to an article in the Daily Telegraph (July 15), kindly forwarded by Ev Herzog and John Baesch. It's called Royal Tokaji, and it's expensive, but well worth the price, according to wine expert Jonathan Ray.
309. Ev and John also noted spotted an article in the same issue that reported that the mining landscape of Cornwall and West Devon has been recognized by UNESCO as a World Heritage Site (joining Stonehenge, the Taj Mahal, and the Great Wall of China). The area supplied much of the western world's copper and tin for more than 4,000 years, according to the article, and it was the world's greatest producer of the metals in the 18th and 19th centuries. It was in "an old tin mine on an island in the heart of the Mire" that Stapleton kept the Hound of the Baskervilles.
310. London must be the most written-about city in the world, according to Paul Theroux, quoted by Richard Tames in the introduction to his AMERICAN WALKS IN LONDON (New York: Interlink Books, 1997; 160 pp., $14.95), also spotted by Ev and John. It's an interesting guidebook and still in print, offering "ten step-by-step itineraries for North American visitors," that are nicely done; there are helpful maps, and mentions of Holmes and Conan Doyle.

311. Aug 06 #4: It's always nice to discover interesting Sherlockian books made available at web-sites, and one of them is CRIME SCENE SKETCHES: REPRODUCED IN FAC-SIMILE FROM THE PEN AND INK DRAWINGS IN THE NOTE BOOK OF A PRIVATE ENQUIRY AGENT, edited by Thomas F. Hanratty and Daniel P. King and published in 1976 with an introduction by John Bennett Shaw. Hanratty, a forensic investigator, analyzed crime scenes in 17 Sherlock Holmes stories; you can read the book at <www.redbirdstudio.com.CrimeScenes>. Thanks to Russ Mann for the tip.

312. There's an addition to the list of Arctic and Antarctic explorers who have Sherlockian and Doylean connections: Sir Ernest Shackleton and Robert Falcon Scott (Aug 03 #4) are now joined by Robert Peary. According to an article in the Portland Press Herald (Aug. 20), Peary's home on Eagle Island (in Casco Bay) has been preserved, and his books are still on the shelves, one of the books being HIS LAST BOW.
313. Further to earlier reports on interesting things to be found at Wikipedia, Pat Ward has found Muppet Wiki at <muppet.wikia.com/wiki/Main_Page>; it is a collaborative effort to create an encyclopedia for everything related to Jim Henson and The Muppets, and you can search for character names such as Sherlock (Holmes and Hemlock), Watson, and Baskerville.
314. "L.A.con IV" was the title of this year's World Science Convention, held in Anaheim this month, and there was a session devoted to "Sherlock Holmes and Science Fiction" on Aug. 25, with Fiona Avery as the moderator and John R. Douglas, Jody Lynn Nye, Jon L. Breen, and Barbara Hambly as panelists. According to the program, "We all know the great detective. He's somehow come to fascinate science fiction authors.... What captivates us so about Sherlock Holmes?" Wally Conger gets credit for the discovery.
315. Bob Thaves died on Aug. 1. He created the comic strip "Frank and Ernest", which was syndicated in 1972 and now distributed to more than 1,300 newspapers. This strip, published on Apr. 12, 1998, it's a fine display of the puns with which he filled the strip.
316. Aug 06 #5: Dennis Hoey is well-known to Sherlockians as Inspector Lestrade in the Rathbone/Bruce films, but there was far more to his long career; you can read about his life, and his S'ian and non-S'ian work, in Michael A. Hoey's excellent article "Dennis Hoey: A Son's Remembrance" in the summer 2006 issue of Films of the Golden Age. The newsstand price is $4.95; $6.00 postpaid (301 East 3rd Street, Muscatine, IA 52761 (800-383-3198) <www.filmsofthegoldenage.com>. The article is available on-line at the web-site (but you'll miss the many photographs and stills).
317. This year's Sherlock Holmes Festival in Tryon, N.C., on Nov. 3-6 will include theatrical performances, meals, memorabilia, presentations, displays, and a contest. More information is available from the Festival (Box 333, Tryon, NC 28782) (800-440-7848) <www.sherlockholmesfestival.com>.
318. The Secretary of State for Education and Skills has announced that his department will review the literature curriculum for 11- to 14-year-olds in Britain, and may remove some modern authors from its prescribed list. According to a report in The Guardian (Aug. 9), department head Alan Johnson said that Conan Doyle is one of the writers who are "a crucial part of our national heritage," and he would remain on the list of authors that students can choose to read. The review will begin in February and is not expecting to be implemented until September 2008.
319. Paul Giovanni's play "The Crucifer of Blood" (1978) will be produced at the Cider Mill Playhouse in Endicott, N.Y. [near Binghamton], from Jan. 25 to Feb. 18, 2007; the box office is at 2 South Nanticoke Avenue, Endicott, NY 13760 (607-748-7363) <www.cidermillplayhouse.com>.
320. Oxford judge Charles Harris denied an attempt by the City Council to evict Phillip Pledge because he had grown and stored cannabis valued at £3,400 in his council flat. According to a story in the Oxford Times (Aug. 3), the judge said in court that "If you are Sherlock Holmes and you go back to Baker Street and inject yourself with cocaine, as he did, he cannot be called a nuisance. So quietly smoking cannabis at home, not that it is to be encouraged, I'm not at all sure it constitutes a nuisance. If you are simply growing it, it's no more offensive to neighbours than tomato plants."
321. Ken Lanza found <www.urbandictionary.com>, described as "a veritable cornucopia of streetwise lingo, posted and defined by its readers," with definitions for terms that range from "sherlock" to "sherlocking" and with a definition for "sherlock holmes" that's both imaginative and pornographic.
322. Ken also spotted an article in the Daily Telegraph (July 27) that provides a Sherlockian connection for "Dog the Bounty Hunter" (which has been airing since 2004 on A&E cable): "Dog" Chapman would like to come to England, both to pass on some of his expertise and to acknowledge one of his crime-fighting heroes. "I have a Sherlock Holmes gig. I love to sit there and think about what Sherlock Holmes would have done."
323. Julian Barnes' ARTHUR & GEORGE (Sep 05 #5) has a British paperback edition from Vintage (£7.99). Alex Clark, in his review in the Observer (Aug. 27), noted that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle "'brought detectivism up to date' in the shape of his coolly analytical protagonist, Sherlock Holmes."
324. Aug 06 #6: Jim French's Imagination Theatre has been airing "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" for many years (Jun 98 #4), and it's now available on more than 130 stations, on XM Satellite Radio's "Sonic Theater", and on the Internet at <www.jimfrenchproductions.com>, where you can download the programs ($7.00) or purchase CDs ($10.95). The latest Sherlock Holmes issue is #11, with John Patrick Lowrie as Holmes and Lawrence Albert as Watson, in M. J. Elliott's "The Moriarty Resurrection" and Jim French's "The Strange Death of Lady Sylvia Eichhorn". Their new series "The Classic Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (two issues now available) offers M. J. Elliott's dramatizations of Canonical stories, and other series available include "Raffles the Gentleman Thief" and "Harry Nile" (you can listen to samples at their web-site). The company's is at 16215 S.E. Roanoke Place, Bellevue, WA 98006. And Jerry Kegley gets credit for the latest news of their work.
325. Tom Huntington spotted a new reprint of H. R. F. Keating's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MAN AND HIS WORLD (1979) (Secaucus: Castle Books, 2006; 160 pp., $9.99 ($7.98 at Barnes & Noble). It was (and is) an excellent book, from a fine writer; highly recommended.
326. The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis have joined the Indianapolis-Marion County Public Library in sponsoring a "Sherlock Holmes Month" with film screenings, lectures, and story discussions at county libraries. It's an excellent example of society outreach and keeping the memory green, and you can request more information from Pat Ward (5119 Turtle Creek Court #5, Indianapolis, IN 46227) <wardicus2002@yahoo.com>.
327. The August issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) with offers of interesting Sherlockiana; the newsletter URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e_times14.htm>, and you can request an e-mail subscription at their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
328. Further to the report (May 06 #6) on "Icons: A Portrait of England", Sherlock Holmes has been voted onto the list (which now numbers 53): the website is at <www.icons.org.uk>, and each icon has links to additional information.
329. Robert Sanderson has a fine article about Imagination Theater's Sherlockian work in the latest issue of Sherlock Magazine (#68), which also offers Neil McGaw's first glimpse of Richard Lancelyn Green's collection in Portsmouth, David Stuart Davies' interview with author Nick Rennison (SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE UNAUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY), and as usual much more. The magazine is a bimonthly; £23.70 a year (U.K.) £35.00 (other Europe) £46.00/$70.00 (rest of the world) from Atlas Publishing, Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH24 6QJ, England <www.sherlockholmes.com>. Classic Specialties is the American agent (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (877-233-3823) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and there are back issues available. David and Kathryn White have moved, so there's a new editorial address: 31 Matthew Lane, Meltham, W. Yorks. HD9 5JS, England.
330. Sep 06 #1: The New American Theater will perform Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" in Rockford, Ill., from Oct. 17 to Nov. 12; 118 North Main Street, Rockford, IL 61101 (815-964-6282) <www.newamericantheater.com>. It's part of a "Mysteries of Rockford" celebration that also includes a presentation of "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" at the Discovery Center Museum at from Oct. 1 to Jan. 3 <www.discoverycentermuseum.org>. And you'll find more about the celebration at <www.mysteriesofrockford.com>.
331. Readers who enjoyed Philip Ardagh's THE SILLY SIDE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Nov 05 #4) may also enjoy his THE NOT-SO-VERY-NICE GOINGS-ON AT VICTORIA LODGE (London: Faber and Faber, 2004; 64 pp., £7.99); it's similar but non-Sherlockian.

332. Further to the report on The Island at Newquay in Cornwall (Sep 01 #3), the house, which stands on a 70-foot-high slab of rock accessible via its own suspension footbridge from the adjacent cliff-top, is again available, offered for £750,000. According to a story in the Independent (Sept. 2), "Locals insist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle visited his friend Sir Oliver Lodge, the man who invented the spark plug, there, when his son was in residence." It was priced at £500,000 when the 4th Viscount Long purchased it in 2001; the "unique island property" (called Towan Island), is being offered by Savills (73 Lemon Street, Truro, Cornwall TR1 2PN, England) <www.savills.co.uk>.
333. Gideon Haigh's amusing compilation THE UNCYCLOPEDIA (New York: MJF Books, 2004; 159 pp., $14.95) is subtitled "Everything you never knew you wanted to know," and there's an entry for "221B Baker Street" with a description of the famous house and its contents.
334. E. S. Turner died on July 6. Described as the "doyen of freelance journalists" in his obituary in the Guardian (July 18), he started his career in 1926 and had his first article published in the Dundee Courier in 1927. He contributed to Punch for more than 50 years; they published his "Variations on a Winter's Tale" (commenting in the styles of various authors, including Conan Doyle, on the high price of electricity).
335. Go to <www.flickr.com/photos/kaptainkobold/sets/72057594063134397/show> to see a slide show of Alan Saunders' imaginative Sherlockian scenes created with Lego bricks (which now offer far more than mere bricks); take a look at <www.lego.com> to see just how much more the company has to offer. Alan reports that Lego doesn't actually do Holmes and Watson, but you can make things work: Holmes' cape is Obi Wan Kenobi's cloak. Thanks to Vic Lahti for noting Kaptain Kobold's work.
336. "Exhumation application, B. Fletcher Robinson, believed murdered. Comments to Exeter Diocesan, Pynes Hill, Exeter EX2 5WR, by September 15," according to a notice (and that's the entire notice) in local papers this month; the Diocesan registrar said the Diocesan Consistory Court would make the decision, but the process could take months. According to the story in the Exeter Express & Echo (Sept. 9) "author Rodger Garrick-Steele has for years claimed Mr. Fletcher Robinson was poisoned in 1907 by the creator of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
337. Sep 06 #2: This year's annual Kennedy Center Honors will be presented on Dec. 3, recognizing the life-long artistic achievements of five performers, including Steven Spielberg, executive producer of "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985), and director of "Jurassic Park" (1993) and "The Lost World: Jurassic Park" (1997); and Andrew Lloyd Webber, the composer of the musical "Cats" and the song "Macavity" (1981). In 1990 Spielberg and Webber were reported as collaborating on a full-length animated film of "Cats" but the project was later described as being "permanently on hold" because "there were too many ego battles."
338. A poker is mentioned in the Canon, but there's no evidence that anyone indulged in the game that's more popular than ever now, in casinos and on the Internet. According to a press release spotted by Ken Lanza, "the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes was considered a master at using logic and keen observation to solve cases. The same holds true for Poker Sherlock, a high-tech tool that uses its own revolutionary form of reasoning to identify the characteristics of on-line poker players." You can read all about it at <www.pokersherlock.com>.
339. Peter L. Stern's summer 2006 catalog offered Conan Doyle's pencil drawing of Professor Challenger (with an illustration) for $7,500 (he purchased it at the auction at Christie's in 2004, and has been sold). And the 143-page manuscript of "The Maracot Deep" (still available) for $100,000 (formerly owned by Dame Jean, it went unsold at the auction at Christie's in 2003).
340. Masamichi Higurashi continues to translate good Sherlockian books for Japanese readers, the most recent of them being BAKER-GAI NO YUREI [GHOSTS IN BAKER STREET] Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 2006; 400 pp., 1,900), with an afterword "For Japanese Readers" by Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower.
341. Barbara Ulan Van Buskirk died on Aug. 30. Barbara was an imaginative artist and an enthusiastic member of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes (as "Violet Smith"). She designed the ASH membership pin in 1975 and wrote for the ASH newsletters, and her S'ian artwork appeared in Dilys Winn's MURDERESS INK (1979).
342. British Heritage (Nov. 2006) has Jennifer Dorn's report on "Streetlights of London: Marylebone and the Sherlock Holmes Museum", with an interesting review of the attractions of the neighborhood.
343. "Dangermouse, the world's greatest detective, and his faithful assistant, Penfold, the world's most obvious coward, operate from a letterbox on Baker Street, helping their boss, Colonel K, solve crises that range from exploding custard that is taking over the world to a weather machine run amok." He was created by Brian Cosgrove and Mark Hall in 1981, and was the star of a ten-minute animated cartoon series that aired in Great Britain, and later on Nickelodeon cable in the United States. He also appeared in a series of children's books and videocassettes, and was one of five children's television characters on a set of stamps issued in Britain in 1996 (Sep 96 #7), and (of course) he has a web-site at <www.dangermouse.org>. Thanks to Andrew Clark for information on the web-site.

344. Sep 06 #3: The New Play House will produce Lee Shackleford's play "Holmes & Watson" (1989) at the Cultural Arts Center in Frederick (MD) on Oct. 5-15. The box office address is Box 601, Frederick, MD 21705 (301-668-8019) <www.newplayhouse.org>; Lee will be on hand for the performances on Oct. 7, and there will be a "talk back" session with a Sherlockian panel after the matinee on Oct. 14. And there's a MySpace site for the play, at <www.myspace.com/holmes_and_watson>. It's an imaginative play, enjoyed by Sherlockians who attended a performance during the birthday festivities in New York in 1990. Lee has worked on the "Star Trek: The Next Generation" television series, and wrote the treatment and first draft for "Ship in a Bottle" (the episode in which Moriarty escapes from the holodeck computer).
345. Ronald Mansbridge ("A Case of Identity") died on Sept. 1 at the age of 100. Born and educated in Britain, he moved to New York in 1928 and in 1930 he was recruited by S. C. Roberts as head of the New York office of the Cambridge University Press, which he ran until he retired in 1970. He was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars, and he attended annual meetings in the 1930s and 1940s, and received his Investiture in 1998. There is much more about this interesting man, and the early days of the BSI, to be found in Jon Lellenberg's archival histories and the 1998 Christmas Annual of the Baker Street Journal, and in an article by Mike Berdan in the summer 2006 issue of the BSI.
346. Reported: Laurie R. King's cross-over Martinelli/Russell mystery THE ART OF DETECTION (Nov 05 #6) in a British edition (Bristol: Poisoned Pen Press UK, 2006; 396 pp., £15.95); they've also published a new trade paperback of THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE (350 pp., £9.95). Nick Rennison's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE UNAUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY (Nov 05 #6) has an American edition (New York: Atlantic Monthly Press, 2006; 304 pp., $24.00). SHERLOCK HOLMES' GUIDE TO LIFE, edited by Vince Emery (San Francisco: Vince Emery Productions, 2006; 112 pp., $12.95); a collection of Sherlockian quotations. SHERLOCK HOLMES QUOTATION PUZZLES, VOL. 1, by James E. Irwin (Victoria: Trafford Publishing, 2004; 84 pp., $13.00); a collection of puzzles based on the Canon.
347. Forecast for October: RED CARPETS AND OTHER BANANA SKINS, by Rupert Everett (London: Little, Brown, 2006; 416 pp., £18.99); his memoirs, which may or may not include discussion of his television film "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking". An American edition is due from Warner Books in January ($25.99).

348. Further to the report on the new set of "Super Heroes" stamps (Aug 06 #2), Al Gregory has noted that Green Lantern can be found in the Canon, if you are willing to stretch a bit): "Yes, that green lamp at the side" (Inspector Jones, describing the police-boat in "The Sign of the Four").
349. Raymond Massey played Sherlock Holmes in "The Speckled Band" (1931), his daughter Anna married Jeremy Brett and acted with him in "Rebecca" (1979), and her brother Daniel played Trelawney Hope in Peter Cushing's "The Second Stain" on BBC-1 (1961) and J. Neil Gibson in Brett's "Thor Bridge" (1991). now Anna has written her memoirs, TELLING SOME TALES (London: Hutchinson, 2006; 259 pp., £17.99), with many stories about her family and her career. It is interesting to note that one of her personal quotes is "Actors marrying each other is not a good idea."
350. Sep 06 #4: Reported: THE AFTERLIFE OF LESLIE STRINGFELLOW: A NINETEENTH-CENTURY SOUTHERN FAMILY'S EXPERIENCES WITH SPIRITUALISM (Fayetteville: Univ. of Arkansas Press, 2006; 140 pp., $14.95). Leslie Stringfellow died in 1886 at the age of 19, and wrote many letters to his spiritualist parents, who showed the letters to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. LESLIE'S LETTERS TO HIS MOTHER was published in 1926, with two letters from Sir Arthur; the new book reprints the letters, with an added history of the family and the spiritualist movement.
351. John Conte died on Sept. 4. He began his acting career as a radio announcer in the 1930s, and went on to work in television and on stage and screen; he is credited as the announcer for the Rathbone/Bruce radio series "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939-1940).
352. "A Phony Fairy Tale" is the title of Phill Jones' article about Conan Doyle and the Cottingley fairies in History Magazine (Aug.-Sept.), forwarded by John Baesch. It may be an old story to Sherlockians and Doyleans, but it continues to reach new readers. $5.50 (Box 194, Niagara Falls, NY 14304) (877-731-4478) <www.history-magazine.com>.
353. British Heritage (Nov. 2006) has Jennifer Dorn's report on "Streetlights of London: Marylebone and the Sherlock Holmes Museum", with an interesting review of the attractions of the neighborhood.
354. Bob Lauderdale has reported some new CDs with Sherlock Holmes stories read by James Alexander at a Dollar Tree store: "A Case of Identity", "The Red-Headed League", "The Blue Carbuncle", and "A Scandal in Bohemia" (they cost $1.00 each, of course). They're produced by Post Productions and distributed by Greenbrier International; they're also available (but for more than $1.00) at <www.amazon.com>.
355. Further to the item about Eleonora Suhoviy (Apr 06 #5), the Oxford graduate has won her battle to stay in Britain; she arrived in England at the age of 13 and taught herself English by reading the Sherlock Holmes stories, which she already know by heart in Russian translation.
356. Ian Rankin has written 19 novels featuring modern-day Scots detective John Rebus, who also has appeared in two ITV television series that starred John Hannah and Ken Stott; now BBC-4 is planning a new version of Rebus, renamed Jim Buchan and played by Alec Newman. Filming on "The Acid Test" has begun in Edinburgh, and the program is scheduled to air at Christmas. According to a report in Scotland on Sunday (Sept. 3), "Buchan will cross paths with Sherlock Holmes writer Arthur Conan Doyle," played by Richard Wilson.
357. Ken Lanza noted an announcement for "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Awakened", a new computer game produced by Frogware and to be released by Focus Home Interactive on Jan. 1. "Join Sherlock Holmes in the most risky adventure of his career: an original confrontation between the universe of Sherlock Holmes and the myth of Cthulhu, for a fight between the rational and the supernatural." It's a 3D game, and you can play either Holmes or Watson, and interact with "more than 60 characters in 5 disturbing universes." Frogware also produced the games "The Mystery of the Mummy" (Mar 03 #2) and "The Silver Earring" (Oct 04 #2).
358. Sep 06 #5: This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London offers a full-color facsimile of the cover of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 (it has been argued that the figure seen rising to light the gas lamp is the first sighting of the Great Detective); $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£6.00 to the U.K., £6.50 to Europe, and £7.00 elsewhere); checks (payable to the Society) can be sent to Judi Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DC, England.
359. Ken Lanza spotted a new Linda Ronstadt/Ann Savoy album called "Adieu False Heart" (Vanguard CD SKU-79808, $16.98) with Richard Thompson's song "King of Bohemia" Alas, the song isn't Sherlockian; you can read the lyrics at <www.lyrics.rare-lyrics.com/R/Richard-Thompson/King-Of-Bohemia.html>.
360. Robert S. Schultz ("The Gloria Scott") died on Sept. 7. Bob was an executive with the Econometric Institute of New York when he attended his first Baker Street Irregulars annual dinner in 1947, and his first Baker Street Journal article ("The Ballistics of the Empty House") was published in the Oct. 1947 issue. His next article appeared in the Sept. 1997 issue, and he later noted that he had wandered in a "Sherlockian limbo" until he retired to Vermont and rediscovered the BSI. Bob returned to the annual dinners, and received his Investiture in 2002; his article "Upon the Dating of Blood Stains" in the winter 2002 issue of the BSI won him the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article published that year, and it is unlikely indeed that anyone will surpass his record of imaginative scholarship in the BSI over 55 years.
361. It has been quite a while since I mentioned Pipeworks & Wilke (Jan 88 #2); they closed their shop in New York years ago, but they're still in business by mail order, and they still offer their Blend 515 ("exotic tobaccos aged in rare Jamaica rum: smooth, mild, with a delightful aroma"). It was Basil Rathbone's favorite, when he used to walk down to the shop from his apartment on Central Park South, accompanied by his Irish wolfhound, to buy the tobacco. They also supplied Blend 515 to Christopher Lloyd when he played Holmes in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" at the Weston Playhouse in 1990. Blend 515 costs about $37.00 a pound (the shop also offers 4-oz and 8-oz packets); according to shop owner Carole Burns, only a couple of people smoke it now, so it's not listed at their web-site <www.vtpipes.com>, but she'll be happy to have new customers (1 Park Avenue, Montpelier, VT 05602) (800-832-8309).
362. Another forecast for October: Daniel Stashower's THE BEAUTIFUL CIGAR GIRL: MARY ROGERS, EDGAR ALLAN POE, AND THE INVENTION OF MURDER (New York: Dutton, 2006; 336 pp., $25.95); about the events that led to Poe's "The Mystery of Marie Roget" (Dan promises that there are mentions of Holmes and Conan Doyle in the book). You can read the prologue and see some illustrations at his web-site at <www.stashower.com>.
363. "Rule, Britannia! Britannia, Rule the Waves! Sherlock Holmes and the Royal Navy" is the theme for this year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" (sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies) at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 11; the festivities begin with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00, and end at 1:00. There's no charge, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
364. Sep 06 #6: Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS: THE FALL OF THE AMAZING ZALINDAS, by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin (New York: Orchard Books, 2006; $16.99, 272 pp.); the irregulars, assisted by Holmes, with illustrations by Greg Ruth (who has worked on comic books such as The Matrix as well as children's books), in the first of a series.
365. Oliver Mundy reports a Latin translation of "Silver Blaze" [as "Fulmen Argenteum"] at <ephemeris.alcuinus.net/holmesica.php>, with the Paget illustrations. And that "Facies Lutea" [that's "The Yellow Face"] will be the next story in the series; translator Stanislaus Tekieli hopes to do all of the Canon eventually.
366. Al Gregory has visited, and enjoyed, the preliminary exhibition of material from Richard Lancelyn Green's collection at the Portsmouth Museum; work is underway on a larger exhibition next year, and the Museum's planning to begin making the collection accessible to the public (in stages) next

- autumn. The museum's web-site is at <www.portsmouthmuseums.co.uk> (with the handsome poster), <www.conandoylecollection.co.uk> is the URL for the collection's own web-site (with the third and latest issue of their newsletter), earlier issues can be found at <www.portsmouthand.co.uk/history/213.htm>. To enroll on their mailing list, write to Mark Wright (ECCS 1st Floor, Civic Offices, Guildhall Square, Portsmouth PO1 2AD, England).
367. The Dept. of Performing Arts will present William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" at the Burke Theater at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette on Oct. 19-28 (104 University Circle, Lafayette, LA 70504) (337-482-6357). It will be directed by John Patrick Bray, whose dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" was performed as a reading in New York last year.
368. The second season of the latest "Doctor Who" television series (with David Tennant as the Doctor) launched on the Sci Fi channel on Sept. 29, and the episode "Tooth and Claw" will air on Oct. 6; the Doctor travels back to the Scottish highlands in 1879 to defend Queen Victoria (Pauline Collins) from a werewolf, and at one point the Doctor mentions a noted Scottish surgeon in Edinburgh.
369. Further to the item on the new "Super Heroes" set of postage stamps, Bill Mason has noted a Canonical connection for Hawkman, who used the "when you have eliminated the impossible" quote in Detective Comics #500 (Mar. 1981). There is also a remote connection for The Flash: in Flash #35 (Feb. 1990, Elongated Man also uses an "eliminate the impossible" quote and appears on the cover in Sherlockian costume.
370. "The Unexpected Return of Sherlock Holmes" is a comedy by Jack L. Herman, set three years after Holmes' death at the Reichenbach Falls; Conan Doyle is asked to solve a mystery and brings along the ghost of Sherlock Holmes. At the Sierra Stage (144 Sierra Bonita Avenue, West Hollywood) through Oct. 14 (323-836-6339) <www.sherlockgoeshollywood.com>. It also seems (as noted by Charles Prepolec) to be a revision of David Belke's play "The Reluctant Resurrection of Sherlock Holmes" (1992).

371. Oct 06 #1: Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE MISSING MARQUESS (New York: Sleuth/Philomel, 2006; 216 pp., $10.99) (Dec 05 #4) is the first of a series (for children aged 4-8) about Enola Holmes, the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock (both of whom appear in the story). It's also available from Recorded Books, read by Katherine Keligren, on 4 cassettes ($39.75) or CDs ($49.75), and you can rent the story for $12.50; 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-636-1304) <www.recordedbooks.com>.
372. Further to the report on Charles Baskerville Jr. (Aug 06 #3), Jon Lellenberg notes that some of Baskerville's fine World War II art can be seen at the Pentagon; his portrait of Lt. Gen. Carl Spaatz (whose connection with "Aunt Clara" is noted by Bill Rabe in his WE ALWAYS MENTION AUNT CLARA) on display at <www.afapo.hg.af.mil> (it's catalog number 1950.063).
373. The Noble Bachelors of St. Louis celebrated their 15th anniversary on Jan. 28, 1984, and the festivities were recorded; now Chuck Lavazzi has (thanks to the wonders of modern technology) been able to make audio of some of the events available at his blog at <jefferson\_hope.blip.tv>. Chuck also can supply audio of the entire meeting, which included a staged reading of "The Speckled Band", on two CDs ($10.00 postpaid); 2619 South 11th Street, St. Louis, MO 63118.
374. The 26th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held in Dayton on Mar. 9-11, 2007; Cathy Gill (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net> maintains the mailing list.
375. Further to the item about Jack L. Herman's "The Unexpected Return of Shereock Holmes" (Sep 06 #6), the play was indeed a revision of David Belke's "The Reluctant Resurrection of Sherlock Holmes" (1992); more to the point, it was a plagiarism: the records of the Playwrights' Guild of Canada show that Herman bought a copy of Belke's script in May 1999 (and by nice coincidence Herman states a 1999 copyright date on his script). The producers in California closed the show after two performances, but might produce it again with proper credit to the real author.
376. Reported: Peter Costello's CONAN DOYLE, DETECTIVE: TRUE CRIMES INVESTIGATED BY THE CREATOR OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2006; 256 pp., $15.95); an updated and revised edition of his THE REAL WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRUE CRIMES INVESTIGATED BY ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Oct 91 #1).
377. Also: FAKERS, FORGERS & PHONEYS: FAMOUS SCAMS AND SCAMPS, by Magnus Magnusson (Edinburgh: Mainstream, 2006; 416 pp., £17.99); Magnusson is the quizmaster on the television series "Masterminds" and his book contains 16 case studies, one of them of the Cottingley fairies.
378. "Enthralled by the fictional Sherlock Holmes, Victorian aristocrat Lady Amelia Watersfield has recruited three reluctant friends to form the Ladies' Amateur Sleuth Society." A STUDY IN SCANDAL is a romance novel written by Robyn DeHart (New York: Avon Books, 2006; 368 pp., $5.99), reported by Paul Herbert; the next title in the series is DELICIOUSLY WICKED (New York: Avon Books, 2006; 304 pp., $5.99), and there may well be more to come.
379. Oct 06 #2: "Conan Doyle is a classic example of a novelist of genius who had Asperger's syndrome," according to Michael Fitzgerald; he has a chapter on Conan Doyle in THE GENESIS OF ARTISTIC CREATIVITY: ASPERGER'S SYNDROME AND THE ARTS (London: Jessica Kingsley Publishers, 2005; 256 pp., £13.95/$19.95). Fitzgerald also found the syndrome in Sherlock Holmes and Prof. Moriarty, and other authors: Jonathan Swift, Hans Christian Andersen, Herman Melville, Lewis Carroll, George Orwell, and Bruce Chatwin, and there are philosophers, painters, and musicians discussed as well. The protagonist of Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (Aug 04 #4) showed the syndrome, a form of high-functioning autism.
380. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) is a special 35th anniversary issue, with color illustrations and eight pages of reminiscences from people who have used and contributed to the collection. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>.
381. A new lapel pin honors this year's Sherlock Holmes Festival in Tryon, N.C., the first weekend in November; based on a poster for William Gillette's play, and the cost is $8.00 postpaid from the Sherlock Holmes Festival (Box 333, Tryon, NC 28782) <www.sherlockholmesfestival.com>. The 2005 lapel pin and T-shirt also are still available.
382. Six of Laurie R. King's novels about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes have now been translated into Japanese; you can see the cover art-work at <homepage3.nifty.com/beekeeper> (that's Naomi Tanaka's web-site).
383. Further to the item (Jul 06 #4) on the campaign to protect Undershaw (where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907), Ev Herzog notes that the Aug.-Sept. issue of the e-mail newsletter of the Victorian Society in America reports that "a Holmes fan and Victorian here in the U.S." wishes to purchase the house in order to save it and its history; the newsletter includes a nice color photo of Undershaw <www.victoriansociety.orgnewsletteraugsep06.htm>.
384. Sorry about that: I omitted the prices for Dr. Hanson's cacheted postcards with a postmark for The Silver Blaze at Saratoga (Aug 06 #1): $4.50 postpaid (and $4.00 for additional cards) to the U.S. and Canada; you can contact Dr. Hanson at <drhanson@localnet.com> for prices to other countries.

385. San Francisco's Acorn Books, founded in 1980, was one of the few remaining immense used-book stores in major cities; it closed its doors on Sept. 30 with prices marked down 70% and with thousands of Sherlockian items still available: multiple copies of THE SEXUAL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE PAINFUL PREDICAMENT OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, copies of The Pontine Dossier and other society material, and much much more. Their staff said they had bought the stock of a local dealer who specialized in Sherlock Holmes (most likely the late Bill Berner, who died in 1997); it would appear they only recently got round to moving the material into the store. They were planning to sell their remaining stock to local dealers, and promised to tell whoever buys the Sherlockiana that I'll give them some publicity.

386. Oct 06 #3: "Dear Mr. Dead Sherlock Holmes, I feel stupid writing you this letter because I know you're six feet under. It's my teacher's idea." As Tanya Martin of Dallas wrote to Sherlock Holmes in 1993, in one of a folder of letters available for inspection at the Sherlock Holmes Museum in London, noted by Andrew Mueller in an article in The Guardian (Oct. 7), spotted by Laura Kuhn. Mueller also reports that the ground floor of the museum has "a souvenir shop, stuffed to the gunwales with deerstalker hats, curvy pipes, and fat, braying Americans."
387. "On the S.S. America, Adrian Conan Doyle, son of Sir Arthur, finds writing comes easy in his spacious and comfortable stateroom," was the caption on a photograph in an advertisement in The New Yorker (Apr. 11, 1953) for the United States Lines. Propped up on the desk is the catalog for "The Sherlock Holmes Exhibition" at the Plaza Galleries; Adrian seems to have been returning to England. Credit John Baesch for discovering the advertisement.
388. Neil Gaiman's FRAGILE THINGS: SHORT FICTIONS AND WONDERS (New York: William Morrow, 2006, 400 pp., $26.95) includes his "A Study in Emerald" (reprinted from the anthology SHADOWS OVER BAKER STREET) (Jan 05 #3) with an introduction in which Gaiman explains how and why he decided to write the pieces in the collection; the book's also available (read by the author) on CD from HarperAudio ($34.95), and you can listen to Gaiman read from the introduction at his web-site at <www.neilgaiman.com>.
389. E. J. Wagner has reported that Trillium Productions has optioned the television rights for her book THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR: THE REAL FORENSICS BEHIND THE GREAT DETECTIVE'S GREATEST CASES (Jun 06 #2) for a documentary based on her book. Her website is at <www.forensic.to/webhome/ejwagner>.
390. The first Dick Tracy comic strip appeared 75 years ago, and anniversary has been celebrated at <www.americanprofile.com>, where Beverly Keel noted that Chester Gould modelled Tracy after Gould's childhood hero, Sherlock Holmes. Hugo's Companions gave Gould a "Baker Street Tankard Award" at their annual dinner in 1977; the awards honored someone "who thirsts after justice for justice's sake." Thanks to Debbie Clark for reporting the story.
391. Don Hobbs reports that "Facies Lutea" [that's a Latin translation of "The Yellow Face"] is now available at <ephemeris.alcuinus.net/holmesiaca.php>. Scroll to the end to find a link to "Fulmen Argenteum" (translator Stanislaus Tekieli intends to do more stories).
392. Production has begun on the new film "Death Defying Acts" (Aug 05 #1); the scenes due to be shot in Scotland were films on sound stage in London (too many tourists on the street in Edinburgh), but exteriors are being filmed in Edinburgh this month. The film stars Guy Pearce as Houdini and Catherine Zeta-Jones (rather than Rachel Weisz) as Mary McGregor, a local psychic who responds to Houdini's reward for anyone who can contact his mother; no word yet on who might portray Conan Doyle in the film.

393. Oct 06 #4: Sherlock Holmes mentioned (in "The Noble Bachelor") a possible "quartering of the Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes," and "Quartering in the Fifties" is the title of The Baker Street Journal's 2006 Christmas Annual, which has been edited by Nicholas Utechin and focuses on the correspondence between Colin Prestige and four American Sherlockians: Nathan L. Bengis, Jay Finley Christ, James Montgomery, and Edgar W. Smith, offering a look at what the Sherlockian world was like half a century ago. If you aren't already scheduled to receive a copy as part of your subscription to the BSJ, the Annual costs $11.00 postpaid (or $12.00 foreign); Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331 <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>. Scott Monty has revised the BSJ web-site (there's now a link to "gift certificates" in case you want to hint to family or friends), and he continues to offer interesting news and other material at his "Baker Street Blog".
394. Further to the report about the computer game "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Awakened" (Sep 06 #4), there's now a web-site with screenshots and such, at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com>.
395. The Baker Street Journal is always of interest, and the autumn 2006 issue is particularly so, for its article by Harold Billings about "The Materia Medica of Sherlock Holmes". In 1971, employed by the University of Texas, he found in Los Angeles a copy of Alfred Baring Garrod's ESSENTIALS OF MATERIA MEDICA AND THERAPEUTICS (1877) that was owned and annotated by Arthur Conan Doyle during his medical studies, and Billings' article offers a fascinating look at the book and annotations, and investigates the medical aspects of the Canon. The BSJ costs $26.50 a year (or $29.00 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); you can also subscribe to the BSJ and the Christmas Annual ($36.50/$40.00), and you can use PayPal at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>
396. Further to the forecast of Rupert Everett's memoirs RED CARPETS AND OTHER BANANA SKINS (Sep 06 #3), Catherine Cooke reports that there are a lot of anecdotes and conversations, but nothing about his television film "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" (2004).
397. Andrew Joffe has rewritten his dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" (with a new two-scene prologue), and it will be performed on Dec. 10 at 6:00 pm at the Jewelbox Theater (312 West 36th Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues) in New York; the theater is on the 4th floor, admission is free, there will be a feedback session after the performance, Paul Singleton will be playing Holmes, and more information is available at <www.singletonactor.com>.
398. Sherlockians in New York for the birthday festivities had an opportunity to see Lee Shackleford's play "Holmes & Watson" (Jan 90 #3), and it was performed again this month at the Cultural Arts Center in Frederick, Md. (Sep 06 #3). The play offers an interesting look at the relationship between Holmes and Watson after Holmes' return to London from the Great Hiatus, and some surprises. Copies of the script are available ($9.00 postpaid to the U.S.); you can send checks or money orders to Lee Shackleford, Box 55704, Birmingham, AL 35255. If you're outside the U.S. you can ask him for information about costs; Lee's e-mail address is <lee@gulliver.cc>, and his web-site is at <www.gulliver.cc>.
399. Oct 06 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 153rd birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 12, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:30 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 <susan221bee@gmail.com> know if you're comto the event.
400. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcx@yahoo.com>.

401. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Laurie R. King, Edgar-award-winning author of the Mary Russell and Kate Martinelli series; her latest novel is the cross-over THE ART OF DETECTION. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating will be limited, and you are advised to reserve early (details below).
402. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house on Friday, from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
403. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $43.00 for salmon or chicken ($48.00 for roast beef). Contact Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@att.net> for a formal announcement.
404. The Beacon Society will hold its annual meeting at 3:15 pm in the lobby of the Algonquin to make the Fourth Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. More information on the award is available at <www.beaconsociety.org>.
405. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919). Please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). There is more information at their website <www.baskervillebash.homestead.com>. Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala.
406. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), 110 copies (for the Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
407. Oct 06 #6: On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in the dealers' room on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel at 59 West 44th Street, from 9:30 am until 12:30 pm; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> will be glad to supply information about dealers' tables. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent event) on the second floor of the Algonquin at 12:30 pm; if you plan to attend the festivities, please tell Anne Cotton (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
408. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and friends, will be held from 1:30 to 4:30 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, soft drinks, and juice). $65.00 (details below) or $75.00 after Dec. 8 or at the door.
409. Baker Street West 1 and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will present a very irregular "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner at 6:00 pm at Kennedy's Irish Pub & Restaurant (327 West 57th Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues); $35.00 per person (including tax and tip, and with a cash bar). You can reserve by sending your checks (payable to the CCOBS) to Jerry and Chrys Kegley (9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343); more information is available from them at 818-894-1501, and his e-mail address is <bsw1@socal.rr.com>.
410. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 54th Street (between 7th and 6th Avenues) (and yes, 6th Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas). It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations will be important; please reserve with Judith Freeman (280 Ninth Avenue #1-C, New York, NY 10001 <judith-freeman@worldnet.att.net>.
411. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement with the prices and a reservation form for the Thursday lecture and the Saturday reception, you can request a copy from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278.
412. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Algonquin for single or double rooms at $175.00 (or $275.00 for a suite), Tuesday through Sunday; this is the total cost, since there is no tax on reservations arranged by the BSI. The offer's available to all Sherlockians, and room reservations must be made directly to the Algonquin (mention The Baker Street Irregulars) at 212-840-6800 on or before Dec. 8.
413. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to provide advice about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at websites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, and <www.expedia.com>; wise shoppers then check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and don't forget non-optional extras that include 14% in state and city taxes).
414. Oct 06 #7: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
415. And that's the end of the forecast of the birthday festivities in January. Now back to our regular program: Bill Vande Water reports SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE BASIL RATHBONE ERA: 2007 CALENDAR (Windsor: Tide-Mark Press, 2006; 26 pp., $13.95); a wall calendar created by Patricia Guy and Vinnie Brosnan.
416. An interesting assortment of books by Conan Doyle, many of them inscribed or signed, was scheduled at auction at Sotheby's in London on Nov. 1; details and prices will be available at <www.christies.com> (search for "4074 doyle"); they were owned by Rene de Chocho, who according to the catalog was the director of the Estate of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle from 1956 to 1967; one of the books was a copy of John Dickson Carr's biography of Sir Arthur, inscribed in 1952 by the author and by Adrian (who described de Chocho as an obstetrical physician and friend).
417. Maureen Green Van der Flaes ("Kitty Winter") died on Oct. 17. She was an enthusiastic and long-time member of The Bootmakers of Toronto (and she received their Master Bootmaker Award in 1985); Maureen was an Adventuress of Sherlock Holmes ("Mary Sutherland"), honored by the Baker Street Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1988, and received her Investiture from the BSI in 1992.
418. Laurie R. King's THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE was dramatized by Shaun Prendergast and broadcast by BBC Radio 4 in four weekly episodes (Nov 00 #2). Farah Hussin has reported that <www.gaudynight.multiply.com/music/item/7> offers downloads of all four episodes. And THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE was chosen as this year's "Spokane Is Reading" project; there was an interesting interview with Laurie in the Oct. 11 issue of the Spokane Spokesman-Review <www.makeashorterlink.com/?Q51914BFD>.
419. YouTube is a video-sharing web-site that was founded in 2005 and now shows more than 100 million video clips each day; this month it was purchased by Google for $1.65 billion. YouTube's three young founder could afford the start-up costs: their previous start-up company was PayPal, which was sold to eBay in 2002 for $1.5 billion. You can visit <www.youtube.com> and run a search for "sherlock holmes" [in quotes]; in mid-October there were 134 hits, and there surely will be more now. A search for "Conan Doyle" produced 7 hits, one of them non-Sherlockian: a fan video combining the Cheetah Girls' song "I Won't Say (I'm in Love)" (from Disney's 1997 film "Hercules") with video of Marguerite and Roxton from the 1999 television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World".

420. Nov 06 #1: Add an event to the birthday festivities: Paul Singleton reports that his article in the spring 2006 issue of The Baker Street Journal on the rediscovery of the Hotel Duane's Grille Room (where the first gathering of The Baker Street Irregulars was held on Jan. 6, 1934), has spurred interest in a commemorative meeting, on Friday, Jan. 12, at 5:00 pm: the Grille Room is now Morgans Bar (237 Madison Avenue, between 37th and 38th Streets), conveniently just one block from the Union League Club. Morgans Bar is a lot fancier than the Grille Room (Paul notes that a manhattan costs $16.00, but wine and beer is available); enter the door at the far left of the building and proceed downstairs. An electronic tour of the bar is available at its web-site at <www.morganshotel.com/morgans\_hotel\_morgans\_bar.asp>. If you are planning to attend, please let Paul know at <psingleton@pershing.com>.
421. And some corrections: Susan Rice's e-mail address (for the William Gillette Luncheon is <susan221bee@gmail.com>, and the Junior Bloodstain of the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (Oct 06 #6) will begin at noon on Saturday on the second floor of the Algonquin.
422. <www.abebooks.com/docs/RareBooks/Avid-Collector/Sep06/pick-month.shtml> is the URL for their pick of the month, the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES; click on "Clues on Collecting Sherlock Holmes Books" to read an essay by book-dealer Phillip Gold. Thanks to Andy Fusco for the report.
423. Further to the report on Frogware's computer game "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Awakened" (Sep 06 #4), the game is scheduled for release in the United Kingdom in January and in North America in March, according to a press release at <www.adventuregamers.com/newsitem.php?id=1325> noted by Ken Lanza. The press release has links to the official web-site, a new trailer, and a playable German demo.
424. Don Hobbs reports that "Proxenetæ functionarius" [that's the Latin translation of "The Stockbroker's Clerk"] has now been added to the web-site at <ephemeris.alcuinus.net/holmesiac.php>. Scroll to the end to find links to other stories translated by Stanislaus Tekieli.
425. Val Andrews died on Oct. 12. He was introduced to magic when he was five years old, and he went on to perform for decades as a professional ventriloquist and magician. He also wrote articles about magic, and biographies of magicians, and in 1980 he began writing a long series of Sherlock Holmes pastiches that often involved Holmes with magic and magicians and were published by Magico Magazine, Ian Henry, and Breese Books.
426. Further to the mention of Debby Applegate's THE MOST FAMOUS MAN IN AMERICA: THE BIOGRAPHY OF HENRY WARD BEECHER (Jul 06 #1), there's an interesting review at <www.amherst.edu/magazine/issues/06summerfall/amh\_creates>.
427. The latest catalog from Acorn (Box 1670, West Chester, OH 45071) (888-870-8047) <www.acornonline.com> offers a Sherlock Holmes Watch ($39.00) and a Sherlock Holmes Pen and Holder ($24.00); they suggest that the holder "resembles the briarwood pipe made famous by actor William Gillette," but it doesn't match anything in photographs of Gillette in the r"le.

428. Nov 06 #2: Mosaic Records has issued an excellent jazz CD "Rich In London: Buddy Rich Recorded Live at Ronnie Scott's" (MCD-1009); the recording was made in December 1971, and the tracks include two Sherlockian arrangements by John La Barbera: "Dancing Men" and "Watson's Walk" ("Watson's Walk" was not included in a 2-LP set issued by RCA in 1972). La Barbera is a Sherlock Holmes fan (and says so in album notes written for the CD): he has also written "The Chase on the Moor", "The Tiger of San Pedro", "The Sign of Four", and "The Man on the Tor". The CD costs $15.00 (35 Melrose Place, Stamford CT 06902) <www.mosaicrecords.com>; you can listen to an excerpt from "Dancing Men" at the web-site.
429. George Schenk reports that the October-November issue of In Britain has a seven-page illustrated article (by Nick Jenkins) on "Mysterious Moorland", with color photographs and a map of Dartmoor.
430. Bob Brusic visited the Yale Center for British Art in New Haven, Conn., and its exhibition "Art and Music in Britain" (through Dec. 31), which includes Thomas Rowlandson's watercolor "Old Vauxhall Gardens" (1784). One of the figures in the painting is Georgiana, 5th Duchess of Devonshire, who gave her name to the style of hat worn by Mary Sutherland (in "A Case of Identity"), and whose portrait by Gainsborough was stolen by Adam Worth (who was described as the Napoleon of crime long before that title was given to the evil Prof. Moriarty. Visit <www.artandmusic.yale.edu/A/A1\_04.html> to see Rowlandson's watercolor.
431. Mitch Higurashi has reported an audio CD of "A Study in Scarlet" in Japanese. You can see the flier at <www.tokyoconsurai.co.jp/chirashi.jpg>, and more information at <www.cinfo.jp/holmes>. The recording is a dramatization (rather than a reading), scheduled for release in October at Y2940.
432. The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Apr. 27-29; there will be a dinner, a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours Brunch. You can ask Susan Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net> for a registration form.
433. Three of David Stuart Davies' stories about Johnny Hawke (a one-eyed private eye working in London during World War II) have appeared in SHERLOCK, and now there's a Johnny Hawke novel, FORESTS OF THE NIGHT, due in January (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2006; 244 pp., $23.95).
434. The fall 2006 issue of Storytelling: A Critical Journal of Popular Narrative has John G. Cawelti's article "Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Perpetual Detective"; he opens by suggesting that "Even Sherlock Holmes, that confirmed bachelor and misogynist, would have been stunned by the enormity and variety of his progeny," and discusses the stories that he classifies as imitations, pastiches, and recreations. 1319 18th Street NW, Washington, DC 20036; $27.00. And the fall 2006 issue of Clues: A Journal of Detection (a theme issue devoted to Victorian detective fiction) offers Jim Barloon's article "The Case for Identity: Sherlock Holmes and the Singular Find"; he suggests that Holmes' popularity results from his focus on individuality at a time when human beings tended to be measure in the aggregate rather than as individuals. Same address; $32.00.
435. Nov 06 #3: "The Andaman Basin, falling in the trend of occurrence of hydrocarbons in the Myanmar-Andaman-Sumatra belt, has the potential to host sizeable hydrocarbon reserves," according to an article in the August issue of The Leading Edge (published by the Society of Exploration Geophysicists), at hand from Dean Clark; the Andaman Islands lie within the Andaman Basin, of course.
436. Gordon E. Kelley died on Oct. 23. Gordon was an enthusiastic researcher in the field of Sherlockian sound and screen, a member of The Listeners of the Modern Mazarin Gramophone, and the author of SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS CONSULTING DETECTIVE: BROADCAST AND MOVIE LOG (1991) and SHERLOCK HOLMES: SCREEN AND SOUND GUIDE (1994).
437. Filming has begun in Dublin for a new two-part television drama "The Baker Street Irregulars", starring Jonathan Pryce (Sherlock Holmes) and Bill Paterson (Dr. Watson). Written by Richard Kurti and Bev Doyle, and produced by RDF Media and Element Films, the series "pits Holmes and the Irregulars against one of Holmes' greatest enemies" (according to a press release).

438. The New London Day reported on Oct. 26 that UConn-Avery Point students of maritime archeology are at work on the remains of William Gillette's steam yacht, the Aunt Polly, one of only two shipwrecks in Connecticut designated as an archeological preserve. The yacht was Gillette's home while his castle was being built, and it burned and sank in 1932; there were rumors that Gillette burned the yacht himself for the insurance money, but he defended himself in a newspaper, saying there was no insurance. "I did not think of it in time," he wrote in a letter to the editor.
439. Actress Emma Thompson, on her childhood reading (in New York magazine, Nov. 13): "I'm a narrative junkie. I was obsessive about Arthur Conan Doyle and Ian Fleming and Alistair MacLean. Of course those are very hero-driven, and that's what's been a big part of my life and my questions about life."
440. Audio Editions offers a wide range of books on cassettes and CDs, including Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian stories, read by people such David Timson, Ben Kingsley, Ralph Cosham, Carlos Zambrano (in Spanish); and dramatizations from BBC Radio 4; and pastiches and parodies (Box 6930, Auburn, CA 95604 (800-231-4261) <www.audioeditions.com>
441. "Famous Novel 'The Lost World' May Not Have Been Fiction" was the headline on a press release for "The Real Lost World"; the two-hour documentary will air on the Animal Planet channel on Dec. 10 and 17 and on Discovery HD Theater on Dec. 14, and it "takes a modern team in the footsteps of 19th-century explorers" to Mount Roraima. The program starts in Los Llanos in Venezuela, 400 miles from Roraima, and the trek offers a look at local wildlife found on the way; there's reenactment footage of the first expedition to Roraima (in 1884), occasional comment by Richard Milner (the historian of science at the American Museum of Natural History in New York who some years ago suggested that Conan Doyle perpetrated the Piltdown Hoax) (Mar 97 #7), scenes from Wallace Beery's "The Lost World" (1925) and Bob Hoskins' BBC-1 "The Lost World" (2001), and a look at what the modern team found on Roraima. There's a trailer, and more information, available at a web-site at <www.thereallostworld.com>.

442. Nov 06 #4: Joel Rickett reported in the Guardian (Nov. 11) that Headline (an imprint of HodderHeadline, who also now own John Murray) is planning to issue the nine Sherlock Holmes books "with suitably foggy covers" just before Christmas. Stephen Fry has endorsed the project, saying that Conan Doyle "is unique in simultaneously bringing down the curtain on an era and raising one on another," adding that "Personally, I would walk a mile in tight boots to read his letters to the milkman."
443. Jim Suszynski noted the November issue of Previews ($4.50) with a colorful cover showing Sherlockian artwork from THE HELMET OF FATE: DETECTIVE CHIMP #1, due on sale on Jan. 17 ($2.99); it will be a five-part series, and you can see the front-cover artwork at <previews.diamondcomics.com>.
444. The new issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) offers interesting Sherlockiana and a report on the latest annual Sherlock Holmes/William Gillette Festival in Tryon, N.C.; the newsletter URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times16.htm>, and you can request an e-mail subscription at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
445. HONORING THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS is Bill Dorn's colorful calendar for 2007, with daily entries noting Canonical events of interest, and monthly illustrations in full color of "distinguished members of the BSI." $18.45 postpaid (or $20.45 to Canada or $22.95 elsewhere), and checks can be sent to William S. Dorn at 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210; his website's at <www.thesherlockstore.com>.
446. Forecast for March: ON THE WRONG TRACK, by Steve Hockensmith, from St. Martin's Minotaur (304 pp., $23.95); there's more information, on the new book and on his earlier HOLMES ON THE RANGE, and on the author, at his web-site at <www.stevéhockensmith.com>.
447. Marian Grudeff died on Nov. 4. She was a pianist, composer, and teacher; she launched her musical career at the age of 11, playing Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasy" with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and went on to collaborate with Raymond Jessel on the music and lyrics for the musical "Baker Street" (1964).
448. THE CASE OF EMILY V, by Keith Oatley, originally published in Britain (Nov 93 #5), now has an American edition (New York: Pleasure Boat Studio, 2006; 384 pp., $18.00); it's an interesting psychological pastiche: the journal of a young woman who may or may not have murdered the man who seduced her, the lecture-notes of Dr. Sigmund Freud (whose patient she is), and the account of Dr. Watson (after Sherlock Holmes has been retained by the British government to investigate the death of the man who may or may not have been murdered). The principal focus of the book is on Emily, but the development of the plot offers provides an out-of-the-ordinary view of a consistent Holmes and Watson.
449. The new film "For Your Consideration" (screened at the Toronto Film Festival on Sept. 10 and released in the U.S. on Nov. 17) has a scene with Fred Willard (as "Hollywood Now" co-anchor Chuck Porter) in Sherlockian costume. Click on the gallery at <wip.warnerbros.com/foryourconsideration> or on the studio stills at <www.imdb.com>. Thanks to Stu Shiffman for the news.
450. Nov 06 #5: Cricket is both Doylean and Sherlockian, and there's Christopher Morley's "A Footnote on Philadelphia Cricket" reprinted in CHRISTOPHER MORLEY'S PHILADELPHIA (May 90 #4), and Simon Worral's informative article "Cricket, Anyone?" in Smithsonian magazine (October); Worral doesn't mention Conan Doyle or Holmes, but he does quote Groucho Marx, who is reported to have watched a match at Lord's for an hour, and said: "This is great. When does it start?"
451. "Harrier Angel" (a "rock remedy for the re generation") is a three-act rock musical with book, music and lyrics by Cassandra von Braun, first performed in 1995 and now available on a CD with the song "Sherlock Jones" (complete with Sherlockian allusions). The lyrics are in the album notes, and (with a sample from the song) at <www.nine3.com/HA-index.html>. You can buy the CD ($15.00) from CD Baby (5925 NE 80th Avenue, Portland, OR 97218 (800-289-6923) <www.cd.baby.com/cd/cvb>.
452. Ken Lanza spotted <www.myspace.com/bakerstirregulars>, which offers information about The Baker Street Irregulars, and a chance to hear their song "Reichenbach Falls" (they describe themselves as "Seattle (East-side) based Jam oriented, Funk, Rock and Chamber Pop").
453. Some years ago the Land Press published a limited edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with all the Sidney Paget illustrations from The Strand Magazine, a hitherto unpublished full-page portrait of Holmes by Paget, and four different custom-leather bindings (Feb 89 #2). Priscilla Juvelis (11 Goose Fair, Kennebunkport, ME 04046 is offering a copy for $2,500, and you can see a detailed description at her web-site at <www.juvelisbooks.com>.
454. Jack Palance died on Nov. 10. He began his acting career on stage in 1947, and appeared in his first film in 1950; he was twice nominated for an Oscar for his performances in "Sudden Fear" (1952) and "Shane" (1953), and he won the award for "City Slickers" (1992). And there's a Sherlockian connection (recalled by Dave Morrill): the film "Dracula Walks the Night" (reported as planned by Hammer in 1972) was to have featured James Donald (Holmes), Michael Ripper (Watson), Peter Cushing (Von Helsing), Christopher Lee (Dracula), and Palance (Dracula's servant Macata). Alas: the report was based on a hoax press release, perpetrated by Dick Klemensen.
455. Bonhams offered five interesting lots of Vincent Starrett material at auction on Oct. 17: a copy of THE UNIQUE HAMLET sold for $1,200 (plus premium and tax), and the other four lots went unsold. You can see all of the lots at <www.bonhams.com>: sale 14243, lots 3371 through 3375.
456. "Light-houses, my boy!" Holmes said (in "The Naval Treaty"). "Beacons of the future! Capsules with hundreds of bright little seeds in each, out of which will spring the wiser, better England of the future." Holmes was describing the board schools built in response to the 1870 Education Act, and English Heritage says there are still 8,000 Victorian board schools standing, most of them threatened with demolition as the government moves to replace them with modern buildings, according to an article in the Guardian (Nov. 14) spotted by Tina Rhea. Many were built to similar designs, which means they're not distinctive enough to be protected, but preservationists believe that refurbishing the board schools is cheaper than replacing them.

457. Nov 06 #6: Peter Costello's CONAN DOYLE, DETECTIVE: TRUE CRIMES INVESTIGATED BY THE CREATOR OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Peter Costello (London: Constable & Robinson, 2006; 320 pp., £7.99) (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2006; 256 pp., $15.95), is an updated and revised edition of THE REAL WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRUE CRIMES INVESTIGATED BY ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Oct 91 #1), and an interesting tour through Conan Doyle's "private calendar of crime" (Costello's phrase for the many cases Conan Doyle was interested in or investigated himself).
458. Peter Barkworth died on Oct. 21. He began his acting career on stage while still a schoolboy, and went on to perform on film and television; he played Martin Hewitt in two episodes of Thames Television's "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971), and Colonel Ross in Granada's "Silver Blaze" (1988).
459. Lots of Sherlockiana in the new catalog from the BBC America Shop (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043) (800-898-4921) <www.bbcamericashop.com>, including four new items: a Sherlock Holmes Umbrella ($54.98) with a silhouette of Holmes (and a suitably stormy quotation from "The Five Orange Pips"), a Sherlock Holmes Stamp and Coin Collection ($79.98) with the five British stamps from the Royal Mail in 1993 and two Victorian shillings under glass in a wooden frame, a Sherlock Holmes Ornament ($29.98) showing Holmes and Watson in a snowy scene (from "The Resident Patient"), a Sherlock Holmes Marble Coaster Set ($49.98) with Paget illustrations on four coasters hand-cut from Botticino marble imported from Verona.
460. Reported: WATSON'S SAMPLER: THE LOST CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by William Watson (Portsmouth: Stagecoach Press, 2006; 246 pp., $21.99); a collection of new pastiches (also available in paperback format and as an electronic download) <www.lulu.com>. You can also order by mail from the author (35 Hope Avenue, Portsmouth, RI 02871) (401-683-1729); he can tell you what the shipping costs will be.
461. Mary Burke reports that a "Cartoon America" exhibition in the Great Hall of the Thomas Jefferson Building at the Library of Congress (through Jan. 27) includes a Dick Tracy comic and the explanation that Chester Gould "modeled his chisel-chinned cop after Sherlock Holmes and cashed in on the popularity of detective stories." Visit <www.loc.gov/today/pr/2006/06-165.html> for more information on the exhibition.
462. Reported: RIPPER SUSPECT: THE SECRET LIVES OF MONTAGUE DRUITT (Stroud: Sutton, 2006; 224 pp., £18.99); the author has "uncovered a web of intriguing connections linking the eldest son of the heir to the throne, the Cambridge Apostles, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Virginia Woolf, and the cricketing legend Prince Kumar Ranjitsinhji."
463. Walter R. Brooks' "Freddy the Pig" has appeared in Sherlockian costume in illustrations by Kurt Wiese in FREDDY THE DETECTIVE (1932), as noted earlier (Sep 02 #1), and on the cover, title page, and two interior illustrations in FREDDY AND THE MEN FROM MARS, first published in 1954; it's still in print (New York: Overlook Press, 2002; 246 pp., $23.95). The Friends of Freddy were founded in 1984, and have a web-site at <www.freddythepig.org> and an irregular quarterly; membership costs $25.00 for two years (Box 912, Greenbelt, MD 20768).

464. Nov 06 #7: The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Tim Johnson's discussion of his S'ian contributions to the university's summer continuing-education "curiosity camp", Julie McKuras' article about Emory Lee and his donation of his collection to the university, and other news from and about the collections; you can request a copies of the newsletter from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
465. Sergei Petrov, the head of Moscow City Hall's Monuments Committee, has announced the committee's decision that there should be a statue of Sherlock Holmes in Moscow, according to a report from Deutsche Presse-Agentur (Nov. 17); Petrov noted the continuing popularity of the Russian television series that starred Vasilii Livanov, who earlier this year was awarded an MBE (Mar 06 #4). The statue is to be installed near the British Embassy under the auspices of the non-profit foundation Cultural Dialogue/One World.
466. But: a different report, from Komsomolskaya Pravda (Nov. 18), showed a photograph of the statue of Holmes and Watson, and it's possible that the photo (in full color) is still available at <www.kp.ru/daily/23809/60014>; the statue was sculpted by Andrei Orlov, and has already been cast in bronze. Thanks to Marina Stajic for translating the report.
467. Stockton's Pub, described as the place "where Arthur Conan Doyle wrote one of his Sherlock Holmes mysteries," may vanish into the ocean within fifty years, according to a Bloomberg report (Nov. 16) from Happisburgh in Norfolk. The cliffs are eroding, and the government's new Shoreline Management Plan for North Norfolk says that there is "no economic case to be made" for spending more money on defending the coast. Stockton's Pub once was the Hill House Hotel, where Conan Doyle was inspired to write "The Dancing Men".
468. John Gilbert died in November. He was actor on stage and radio, and for a time a bookseller (he called his shop Old Actor's Used Books). He played Sherlock Holmes in a Seattle production of Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" in 1983, and was a fine Sherlock Holmes from 1998 to 2000 in the new Sherlock Holmes shows in Jim French's syndicated radio series "Imagination Theatre".
469. VAMPIRE LOVES, by Joann Sfar (New York: First Second Books, 2006; 192 pp., $16.95) is a graphic-novel collection of humorous stories about a vampire named Ferdinand. Jeff Swindoll at <www.monstersandcritics.com> reported on Nov. 17 that one of the stories has an appearance by Professor Bell ("who taught Arthur Conan Doyle and was the basis of Sherlock Holmes"); according to Sfar's entry at <www.wikipedia.com>, he says there is Ashkenazi humor in his "Professeur Bell" (loosely based on Joseph Bell).

470. Nov 06 #8: Readers with long memories may recall the bank robbers who tunneled into a Lloyds Bank on Baker Street in 1971 and got away with £1.5 million; some of them were caught and convicted in 1973, and of course newspaper and magazine stories noted similarities to "The Red-Headed League". There were reports in 2001 and 2002 of plans for a movie, and we may see one eventually: Ken Lanza noted a report that "Baker Street" is in pre-production, with Roger Donaldson as director, screenplay by Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais, and Jason Stratham as the star; filming is expected to start in the UK next year. Publicity for the film explains that "this is a story that has remained untold for over 35 years due to a government gagging order," and that no arrests were ever made (which will be news to the robbers who were convicted in 1973).
471. John Hallam died on Nov. 14. He began his acting career on stage, and went on to a long career in films and on television, with appearances in series that ranged from "Doctor Who" to "EastEnders" and included playing Gorgiano in Granada's "The Adventure of the Red Circle" (1994).
472. Dana Martin Batory's A BAKER STREET DOZEN+: ESSAY EXCURSIONS INTO THE SHERLOCKIAN MYTHOS (Brooklyn: Gryphon Books, 2006; 100 pp., $16.00) collects 13 articles previously published in Megavore, The Sherlock Holmes Journal, The Baker Street Journal, and Baker Street Miscellanea, plus "Lost Echoes from the Grimpen Mire" (in which he discusses echoes from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" found in "The Lost World"); the publisher is at Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228 <www.gryphonbooks.com>.
473. Further to the report about Liberton Bank House, where Conan Doyle lived as a child (Dec 05 #2), the Edinburgh Evening News reports (Nov. 3) that fundraising has been completed and that work has started on moving the Dunedin School into the house; plans call for a literary garden commemorating the site's links to Conan Doyle.

474. For Jeremy Brett fans: Lenny Picker has noted that the 1966 BBC television mini-series "The Three Musketeers" (starring Brett as D'Artagnon and Brian Blessed as Porthos) broadcast in ten 25-minute black-and-white episodes is now available on DVD ($24.98).
475. <www.ancestry.com> is an interesting resource for those who want to trace their ancestors; the immigration collection now offers more than 100 million names from the records of more than 100 American port cities. Search was free through the end of November (now you need to join); there are no Garridebs on the list.
476. Greg Darak reports that the new DVD of the film "It's Always Fair Weather" (1955) issued by Warner Home Video ($19.98) has added features that include an out-take musical number "Love Is Nothing But a Racket" that was cut from the film. Gene Kelly and Cyd Charisse are in a room in a television studio where there are a lot of different costumes; they sing the song and go into a dance, putting on different hats and coats, and Kelly is seen, for about five seconds, with a large deerstalker and a pipe.

477. Dec 06 #1: There may still space available Laurie R. King' Distinguished Speaker Lecture on "Meeting Sherlock Holmes" during the birthday festivities, at the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues), at 6:15 pm on Thursday, Jan. 11. $11.00 each, and since it's so close to the weekend, you should call Mike Whelan (417-293-2212) to reserve tickets.
478. THE YALE BOOK OF QUOTATIONS, edited by Fred R. Shapiro (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2006; 1067 pp., $50.00), is an important (and delightful) reference work; it's more up to date than BARTLETT'S FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS, and has far more emphasis on American sources than THE OXFORD DICTIONARY OF QUOTATIONS. There are sections on advertising slogans, film lines, and radio and television catchphrases, 39 quotations for Arthur Conan Doyle (all Sherlockian), a source for "Quick, Watson, the needle," and some pleasant surprises for people who only think they know the sources for many familiar quotations. And as with all good reference works, it's great fun to browse through its pages.
479. CREATURE COZIES, edited by Jill M. Morgan (New York: Berkley Prime Crime, 2005; 311 pp., $23.95 cloth, $6.99 paper) (the cloth-bound edition is discounted to $5.98 at Barnes & Noble), is an anthology of all-new mysteries involving pets, with a dog in Sherlockian costume in the jacket illustration by Lisa Desimini, and a search dog named Sherlock in Jan Burke's story "Lost and Found".
480. A "reflection for the day" appears at <www.reflectionfortheweek.com> and in the Boston Globe, and on Oct. 30 they chose "I never remember being tired by work, but idleness exhausts me completely." (from Conan Doyle) Try your hand at remembering what that's from. Spoiler alert: answer below.
481. Clive Perry died on Nov. 11. He was a famous director in British theater, beginning in 1960 at the Derby Playhouse, and in 1995 turned to teaching, as a professor of drama and theater in Edinburgh. He was artistic director at the Birmingham Repertory Theatre in 1976 for a production of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" with Alan Rickman as Holmes and David Suchet as Moriarty.
482. Stanford University's Community Reading Project has published Dickens and Conan Doyle by mail and on the Internet in serial facsimile, and their second series of Sherlock Holmes stories will run weekly from Jan. 26 to Apr. 13. There's a $20.00 fee for delivery by mail (to the U.S. only), and web access is free of charge everywhere <sherlockholmes.stanford.edu>; click on "sherlock holmes adventures" and then on "choose an issue".
483. Don Hobbs reports that "Gloria Scott" has been added to the Latin-translation web-site at <ephemeris.alcuius.net/holmesica.php>; scroll to the end to find links to other stories translated by Stanislaus Tekieli.
484. BARTITSU: THE MARTIAL ART OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Kirk Lawson (Morrisville: Lulu, 2006; $20.00); an 88-minute DVD of Lawson's recent seminar on Bartitsu, invented by E. W. Barton-Wright in 1899 and believed by many Sherlockian scholars to be the baritsu mentioned by Sherlock Holmes (in "The Empty House"). The publisher's web-site is <www.lulu.com/content/511029>.

485. Dec 06 #2: One of the nicer aspects of the Internet is that so many things are free, including podcasts at <www.switchpod.com>; they have four of the 1946 Rathbone/Bruce radio shows now, and soon will offer "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (click on "Podcast Books Now Available!" to see the books that are up and running now). Patrick Horgan reads Plato's "The Republic", Dickens' "A Christmas Carol", and Wells' "The War of the Worlds", and it will be grand indeed if he's their reader for the Canon.
486. The Sherlockian echoes in Hugh Laurie's television series "House" have received considerable notice, and they're quite deliberate (Dec 04 #2). Al Gregory notes that a web-site at <www.housemd-guide.com/holmesian.php> has B. E. Warne's detailed comparison of House and Holmes.
487. Sherlock Holmes said, "I never remember being tired by work, but idleness exhausts me completely," in "The Sign of the Four".
488. Pattie Tierney has expanded her offers of attractive "wearable art" (some Sherlockian, and some not); <www.ptierneydesigns.etsy.com> is the URL for her web-site, an illustrated flier is available on request (229 Hereford Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63135).
489. The success of last April's "Springtime in Baker Street" has inspired Bob Thomale to return to fall scheduling: "Autumn in Baker Street" is scheduled for Sept. 1-2, 2007, at the Doubletree Hotel in Norwalk, Conn. There is a web-site at <www.autumninbakerstreet.org>, or you can sign up for his mailing list (82 Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512).
490. Andrew Gulli's "Strand Magazine" 2007 Sherlock Holmes Calendar ($16.95) has photographs, illustrations by Paget and Fawcett, and four-color artwork by Debbie Hinks. You can order from the Strand Magazine, Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 <www.strandmag.com>.
491. "The calculation is a simple one," Holmes told Watson (in "Silver Blaze"), and much ink has been spilled over just how Holmes calculated the speed of the train. John Baesch spotted some correspondence in the Daily Telegraph, including a letter from Captain Nigel Calder (Oct. 28), who wrote: "If you divide 900 by the number of seconds it takes to pass between the quarter-mile markers, the result is the train's speed in statute miles per hour." Well, yes, Holmes did explain that he had noted the telegraph posts, but it is tempting to consider that he really used the quarter-mile markers, and mentioned the telegraph posts only to confuse and amaze Watson.
492. Further to the mention of <www.ancestry.com> (Nov 06 #8), the 1851 and 1861 Scottish censuses have been added to the records at <www.ancestry.co.uk>; the Glasgow Daily Record noted (Nov. 30) that Alexander Graham Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle are among the people recorded in the censuses.
493. "Auditioning a Ghost" is Jeannette Jaquish's one-act dramatization of Conan Doyle's amusing story "Selecting a Ghost" (1883); it was first performed in 2000, and has had other productions since then, and there's an excerpt from the script at her web-site at <www.angelfire.com/scifi/auditioningaghost>. And you can request a copy of the complete script by e-mail at the web-site (or send $10.00 to her at 1423 Louisedale Drive, Fort Wayne, IN 46808).

494. Dec 06 #3: DR. JOSEPH BELL: THE ORIGINAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Robert Hume (Broadstairs: Stone Publishing House, 2005; 88 pp., £4.99), is an excellent biography of Joseph Bell, written for young readers; the story covers the essentials of Bell's life and career, which included much more than his association with Conan Doyle, and does it well. The publisher's address is 17 Stone House, North Foreland Road, Broadstairs, Kent CT10 3NT, England, and the book also is available from <www.troubador.co.uk>.
495. DANCING IN THE MOONLIGHT, by David Stuart Davies (London: MDF The BiPolar Organisation; 122 pp., £14.99), is a "celebration of Jeremy Brett" based on Davies' many meetings with Brett and conversations with his friends.

496. RAGS TO RICHES: THE CASE OF THE HIRE SHOP FIEND, by Richard Roberts (London: MDF The Bipolar Organization; 40 pp., £7.99); an amusing and nicely-illustrated book for children (the first of a series). There's an interesting web-site at <www.ragsriches.co.uk>.
497. Both books were launched at the Marylebone Library, which has a nice website at <www.westminster.gov.uk/libraries/marylebone.cfm>; click on "read about the events here" for details, and photographs (including one showing Edward Hardwick and David Stuart Davies). The Library also has a fine website at <www.westminster.gov.uk/libraries/special/sherlock/cfm> devoted to their Sherlock Holmes Collection, with a link to their on-line exhibit on Arthur Conan Doyle.
498. The second issue (Dec. 2006) of The Solar Pons Gazette, edited by Bob Byrne and available at his web-site <www.solarpons.com>, offers interesting material old and new, including a look at the complete painting by Les Edwards that was cropped for the cover of Basil Copper's SOLAR PONTS: THE FINAL CASES (2005). The first issue's also available at the web-site.
499. Val Andrews, who died in October (Nov 06 #1), was an accomplished author of pastiches and an imaginative plotter: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MAN WHO LOST HIMSELF (London: Breese Books, 1997; 112 pp., $12.95) is (according to the back cover) an account of what happens when "a distinctly unfortunate inventor discovers that he doesn't exist." This and many other books by Val Andrews are available at <www.amazon.com> and <www.amazon.co.uk>.
500. John Pforr reports that Alberene Royal Mail (9 Mill Alley, Box 902, Harrisville, NH 03450) (800-843-9078) <<http://www.alberene.com>> offers Sherlock Holmes pub towels ($5.95), pub signs ($16.95), chalkboards ($39.95), pubin-a-box kits ($34.95 and $44.90), and clocks ($69.96), as well as clocks from some of the railway stations mentioned in the Canon ($69.95).
501. Reported: THE HIGHLY EFFECTIVE DETECTIVE, by Robert Yancey (New York: St. Martin's, 2006; 288 pp., $23.95); quirky private detective Teddy Ruzak is a former security guard who "grew up hooked on Sherlock Holmes and Encyclopedia Brown, a guy who got ejected from the police academy after failing the marksmanship tests." Stephen Kendrick's dual pastiche NIGHT WATCH (Dec 01 #5) has been reissued as a mass-market paperback (New York: Berkley, 2006; 272 pp., $6.99); Sherlock Holmes and Father Brown. MURDER MOST MERRY, edited by Abigail Browning (New York: Gramercy, 2002; 384 pp., $10.99; an anthology of 32 Christmas stories, including "The Blue Carbuncle".
502. Dec 06 #4: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DOCTOR WATSON: ABOUT TYPE, by Bruce Harris, has a punning and appropriate title ("About Type"); Harris offers an interesting discussion of Type A and Type B personalities, and how and why he assigns behavioral types to Holmes and Watson. 105 pp., $16.00 (plus shipping) from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada) <www.batteredbox.com>.
503. Further to the report (Nov 06 #6) on WATSON'S SAMPLER: THE LOST CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Portsmouth: Stagecoach Press, 2006; 246 pp., $21.95): the author is William F. Watson, Jr., and there are four pastiches, two of them with Holmes solving macabre mysteries set in Newport, R.I. Available from <www.lulu.com>, also in paperback format and as an electronic download, and from the author (35 Hope Avenue, Portsmouth, RI 02871) (401-683-1729), who can tell you what the shipping costs will be.
504. Sherlock Holmes battles Dracula in Stephen Seitz's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE PLAGUE OF DRACULA (Shaftsbury: Mountainside Press, 2006; 208 pp., $16.95); the book offers an interesting approach, with Holmes appropriately skeptical about the supernatural. <www.mountainsidepress.com> is the URL for the publisher's web-site.
505. DUBIOUS AND QUESTIONABLE MEMORIES: A HISTORY OF THE ADVENTURESSES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was the title of The Baker Street Journal's 2004 Christmas Annual, devoted to the history of a society that was for many years XX-rated (with regard to chromosomes), and in 1991 granted full membership (and Investitures) to four men; I modestly refrain from identifying the only one of the four still surviving. Now the Adventuresses have decided that it is time to invite men to make ASHes of themselves by applying for membership; of course there are requirements to be met, and more information is available in the winter issue of The Serpentine Muse, and at the ASH web-site at <www.ash-nyc.com>.
506. Lesley Johnson has reported a new British film in the works: "Where There's a Will", planned by Deepwater Films, with script by David Godfrey and involving the Hereafter Literary Council, upon which sit "such greats as Homer, Dickens, Mary Shelley, Emily Bronte, Robbie Burns, Mark Twain, and Conan Doyle." Among the actors "attached" to the film so far are Simon Callow (Shakespeare) and Michael Kitchen (Dickens); there's more information about the film at <www.deepwaterfilms.co.uk/wherewill/htm>.
507. The new issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) with news from the Sherlockians by Invitation Only Society, and offers of Sherlockian merchandise; the newsletter's URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times17.htm>, and you can request an e-mail subscription at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
508. The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis celebrated their 60th anniversary on Dec. 6, and issued two cacheted covers to celebrate the event, one with a photograph of those who attended the first meeting, and the other showing Howard Elcock's illustrations of the newsvendor in their story, and each of them with a stamps.com stamp displaying the society's coat of arms. $6.00 each postpaid from The Illustrious Clients (9 Calumet Court, Zionsville, IN 46077); if you order just one, make sure you indicate which one.
509. Dec 06 #5: The Feb. 2007 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, offers editor Janet Hutchings' annual tribute to Sherlock Holmes: a cover photograph of Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes, Jon L. Breen's reviews of S'ian books, and Steve Hockensmith's new (and amusing) Amlingmeyer pastiche.
510. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE LOST CASES, by Alvin F. Rymsha (Charleston: BookSurge, 2006; 176 pp., $15.99); a collection of pastiches, most of them taken from the unrecorded cases. You can read the book (and others by Rymsha) without charge at <alvinsbooks.googlepages.com>.
511. Catherine Cooke reports that Westminster Libraries are working with artist Ian Rees on a display that will open soon at the Marylebone Library. There will be several interactive models showing scenes from the Sherlock Holmes stories, and in the meantime you can see a short (and intriguing) video at <www.westminster.gov.uk/libraries/special/sherlock.cfm>. It's an .avi file that won't run with all media players, but it works with RealPlayer.
512. Mark Alberstat's 2007 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
513. Writer and commentator William Safire was awarded a Presidential Medal of Freedom this month; he has mentioned Sherlock Holmes often in his columns in the N.Y. Times and in his books. It was in SAFIRE'S POLITICAL DICTIONARY (1978) that he credited a Sherlock Holmes story as the inspiration for phrase "smoking gun" that became so popular during the Watergate era.
514. Neil Simon was this year's recipient of the Kennedy Center Mark Twain Prize for American Humor, awarded Oct. 15 (the program was broadcast on Nov. 20); Simon's many credits include the screenplay for the film "Murder by Death" (1976), which is notable for the appearance of Keith McConnell as Sherlock Holmes and Richard Peel as Dr. Watson at the end of the film. If you don't remember that, there's a reason: the scene was cut from the theatrical release (although Ron Haydock has reported that the longer version with the final scene was screened in theaters in Washington and

- Oregon). The longer version was used for the first television broadcast of the film (1979), but commercial videocassette and DVD releases use the theatrical version (I've not heard that anyone has an off-the-air recording of the 1979 broadcast).
515. Cecil Adams' column "The Straight Dope" is widely available in print, and of course on the Internet, and he has mentioned Sherlock Holmes from time to time; Henry Hanna spotted an interesting report on "Did Sherlock Holmes Really Exist?" written in 2003 by C. K. Dexter Haven for the Straight Dope Science Advisory Board, at <www.straightdope.com/mailbag/msherlock.html>.
516. Joseph Barbera died on Dec. 17. He was a pioneer in the field of animation and he collaborated for more than 50 years with William Hanna; they created film and television classics that included "Tom and Jerry", "The Jetsons", "The Flintstones", "Yogi Bear", and "Scooby-Doo". Hanna-Barbera shows often had Sherlockian allusions, including "The Hound of the Scoobyvilles at Baskerville Hall" (1984) and "Scooby-Doo Mysteries: Sherlock Doo" (1985).
517. Dec 06 #6: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is a popular play in Britain. A new dramatization by Simon Williams (Lord Robert St. Simon in Granada's "The Eligible Bachelor" in 1993) opened at the Brockley Jack Theatre in London on Dec. 6 (running through Jan. 6, 2007); a new dramatization by David Ives is scheduled at the West Yorkshire Playhouse in Leeds, Jan. 19-Feb. 10 and at the Playhouse in Oxford, Mar. 13-17, 2007; and Clive Francis' dramatization (2004) is scheduled at the Theatre Royal in Birmingham, Apr. 23-28, 2007.
518. Lawrence M. Small, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, wrote in the June issue of Smithsonian magazine about plans for the new National Museum of African American History and Culture, and about a traveling exhibition called "Let Your Motto Be Resistance: African American Portraiture". His report was accompanied by a photograph of Henry Highland Garnet, who was born a slave and became United States Minister to Liberia, where in 1881 he met Arthur Conan Doyle, then a surgeon on the steamer Mayumba. The title of the exhibition is taken from Garnet's writings: "Let your motto be resistance" appears in Aug. 1843 in "An Address to the Slaves of the United States of America".
519. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle suffered from a form of schizophrenia, according to a story in the Sunday Times of London (Dec. 17) about Andrew Norman's ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE BEYOND SHERLOCK HOLMES, due in February from Tempus Publishing. Norman, "a GP turned writer," believes that Conan Doyle's father had symptoms consistent with a form of schizophrenia, and that Conan Doyle "displayed psychotic symptoms inherited from his father."
520. Jon Lellenberg has reported <www.schemingmind.com>, a web-site for people who play correspondence chess; moderator Austin Lockwood acknowledges that he took the name for the web-site from "The Retired Colourman".
521. The Night Kitchen Radio Theater broadcasts drama on XM Satellite Radio on the first Sunday of every month, and the shows are recorded in the Family Theater at the Kennedy Center in Washington. One of this year's programs was a new Sherlock Holmes case ("The Golden Tooth"), and it was grand indeed to have a chance to watch a radio show. You can purchase the show on a CD ($14.95 postpaid); checks or money orders to The Night Kitchen Radio Theater, Box 294, Cathedral Station, New York, NY 10025. The company has a web-site at <www.nightkitchenradio.com>.
522. Pipes and Tobaccos magazines has Sherlockian content from time to time; the winter 2007 issue has Marc Munroe Dion's pastiche "A Study in Smoke"; cover price is $9.95 (SpecComm International, 5808 Faringdon Place #200, Raleigh, NC 27609 <www.pt-magazine.com>).
523. L. Frank James' AN OPENED GRAVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES INVESTIGATES HIS ULTIMATE CASE (Roseville: Salt Works, 2006; 230 pp., $14.95) has Watson accompanying Holmes, via a time machine, to the year 29 AD, and then (pursued by an Arch Druid) from Londinium to Jerusalem so that Holmes can investigate the truth of the Biblical history of Jesus Christ. He is successful, and fortunately the time machine works both ways.
524. Dec 06 #7: Bob Newhart "may also be the only person inspired to write and create humor by the writings of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a man not previously associated with punch lines or hearty guffaws," according to Arthur Spiegelman in a Reuters dispatch (Dec. 13). "Crime and comedy are kind of similar," Newhart said. "You kind of hide the guy who did it until the very end and you throw out a lot of false leads." Thanks to Ken Lanza for spotting the report.
525. Ev Herzog has spotted 50 MYSTERY CLASSICS, a five-DVD set produced by Emson with more than 62 hours of films ($19.95) available at <www.thpsales.com> and elsewhere; there are three Wontners, one Owen, and four Rathbones.
526. Many Sherlockians have seen Peter Cook as Holmes and Dudley Moore as Watson in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978), but that was not the first time they played those roles: there was the skit "Sherlock Holmes Investigates" in the British television series "Goodbye Again" broadcast on ITV in 1968. The script for the skit is included in GOODBYE AGAIN: THE DEFINITIVE PETER COOK AND DUDLEY MOORE, edited by William Cook (London: Century, 2004; 388 pp., £17.99), and the script for "One Leg Too Few" (about a one-legged man auditioning to play Tarzan), which Cook wrote and first performed in 1960 (it was included in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and they performed it in London in 1989, the last time they appeared onstage together. The book has much more about Cook and Moore, and their talented comedy.
527. The Unemployed Philosophers Guild has a wide range of interesting merchandise, including a Sherlock Holmes "Little Thinker" soft plush doll ($16.95), a Sherlock Holmes card that can be customized with sticker quotes ($3.95), and (due back in stock on Feb. 15) a Sherlock Holmes finger puppet (or refrigerator magnet) ($5.95). Their address is 68 Jay Street #508, Brooklyn, NY 11201 (800-255-8371) <www.philosophersguild.com>.
528. There's a new and expanded edition of THE SINGULAR ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Alan Stockwell, now with 17 pastiches, and some interesting plots and occasional surprises (Burgess Hill: Exposure Publishing, 2006; 256 pp., $12.95/£7.95). There's an excerpt from one of the pastiches at his website at <www.mrsherlockholmes.co.uk>.
529. The 108th issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal (winter 2006) has arrived, with Nicholas Utechin's farewell editorial: after 30 years in the editor's chair he's handing his over to Roger Johnson. There's much more of interest in the issue, including a detailed report on the Sixth Annual Cricket Match between the Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the P. G. Wodehouse Society last June. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London welcomes new members: associate members receive only The Sherlock Holmes Journal, and full members also receive notices of meetings. Prices, vary depending on where you are and on whether you're an adult or a junior, and details are available from R. J. Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU England) and at the society's web-site at <www.sherlock-holmes.org/uk>.
530. Dec 06 #8: I've received by first Sherlockian spam: Candy's Export Company is seeking representatives, and they claim to be located at 14146 Lower Main Street, Sherlock, County Cavan, U.K. Alas, County Cavan is in Ireland rather than the U.K., and the name of the town actually is Shercock. The company is a well-known scammer: <www.jobscams.blogspot.com> is a fine web-site for checking this sort of thing, but of course people who respond to such scams are unlikely to check them out first.
531. Jon Lellenberg discovered an Irish rugby player named Conan Doyle on the Garryowen team (Conan is his given name rather than part of a compound family name). The photograph shows him being tackled in a match at Dubarry Park this year. As you can see in the second photograph, he looks much better when he's not being tackled.

532. John Ball reported in The Baker Street Journal (Mar. 1971) about his 1970 visit to Dharamsala, where he met the Dalai Lama (then as now in exile in India) and welcomed a "brilliant young teacher" named Jamyang Norbu into the ranks of the Irregulars. Norbu's pastiche THE MANDALA OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURES OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE IN INDIA AND TIBET (New Delhi: HarperCollins, 1999) is set in 1892 and told by Holmes' guide Hurree Chunder Mookerjee (whom Kipling mentioned in KIM); the book was then published in other countries, and it's still in print in a trade paperback edition (2003).
533. Ken Lanza spotted <www.sherlockinvestigations.com>, which is the web-site for Sherlock Investigations Inc. Click on the "blogs" link to go to Sherlock's Case Files, where you will find miscellaneous postings by company president Skipp Porteous.
534. It has been a while since I mentioned <www.cafepress.com>: they now offer 179 Sherlockian designs (some more Sherlockian than others) on a wide variety of merchandise (including mugs and T-shirts with a caricature of David Hammer).
535. THE RAVEN LEAGUE: SHERLOCK HOLMES IS MISSING! (New York: Penguin/Razorbill, 2006; 188 pp., $10.99) is the first in a new series written by Alex Simmons and Bill McCay: Archie Wiggins, formerly a member of the Baker Street Irregulars, enlists three friends to form the Raven League, and their first case involves rescuing Sherlock Holmes from kidnappers and helping him foil a dire plot planned by a mysterious villain. The series is for teen readers (ages 8 up), and it's well-written, with plenty of excitement and atmosphere. The second title in the series will be THE RAVEN LEAGUE: BUFFALO BILL WANTED!, due in January. Simmons and McCay are experienced writers in various genres; Simmons is the author of the two-act play "Sherlock Holmes and the Hands of Othello" that was first performed at the Westbeth Theatre Center in New York in 1987.

- Jan 07 #1:
1. There seems to be little doubt about global warming, at least with regard to the birthday festivities in New York, where the weather was occasionally rainy but never cold. The now-traditional ASH Wednesday supper was held at O'Casey's, and the Christopher Morley Walk was led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (with lunch at McSorley's).
  2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was Laurie R. King, who offered new and interesting Sherlockian scholarship, and announced that Mary Russell will return to Sussex in her next book, which "will have something to do with bees." Laurie also reported that Mary is not pregnant. Laurie's lecture will appear The Baker Street Journal this year (see below for information on how to subscribe).
  3. The William Gillette Luncheon attracted a sizeable crowd on Friday at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Paul Singleton, Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague, Elyse Locurto, and Curtis Armstrong presented dramatic views of how the telephone was viewed and used at 221B Baker Street. And the traditional open house at Otto Penzler's Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  4. Paul Singleton arranged for an early-evening gathering at the Hotel Duane's Grille Room (where the first gathering of The Baker Street Irregulars was held on Jan. 6, 1934); the premises are now known as Morgans Bar, and there is talk ("not by me," Paul notes) of making this an annual ritual.
  5. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Union League Club, and Julie Rosenblatt delivered the cocktail-party toast to the Woman: Candace Lewis (who went on to dinner at the Club with other ladies who have been honored in past years). The dinner featured the usual toasts and traditions, Paxton Whitehead's reminiscences about the play "The Crucifer of Blood", Dan Posnansky's report on a letter that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote about America and Americans, a spirited competition called "Pericolo" (aka "Sherlockian Jeopardy"), and much more.
  6. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, and Irregular Shillings and Investitures were awarded to Warren Randall ("Harold Stackhurst"), Dayna McCausland ("Lady Clara St. Simon"), Mike Homer ("Enoch J. Drebbler"), Mike Berdan ("Henri Murger"), Maggie Schpak ("The Soup Plate Medal"), Mattias Bostrom ("The Swedish Pathological Society"), and Elaine McCafferty ("Eliza Barrymore"). Mike Whelan also presented the BSI's Editor's Medal to Peter Blau, Steve Doyle, Mitch Higurashi, and Bill Hyder, in recognition of their services as editors of books published by the BSI in the manuscript and international series.
  7. The Gaslight Gala, held at the Manhattan Club, celebrated "The Villains in the Canon" with performances by the Sherlettes (songs such as "Hello Selden", "Don't Mess with Mr. Milverton", and "Get Me to the Court on Time"), toasts, dramatics (Joanne Zahorsky-Reeves and Robert Reeves in "Feeling Skittish: Holmes & Moriarty's First Date"), a game ("Sherlockian Squares"), songs, raffles (a hand-painted tote bag donated by Laurie Frasier Manifold and a hand-painted sweatshirt donated by Cynthia Wein), and an auction.
8. Jan 06 #2: On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was (as usual) crowded with sellers and buyers, and at 12:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) gathered for a Junior Bloodstain, which featured a dramatic reading of Anne Cotton's "Sherlock Holmes and the Horrible Hound" (with Anne starring as the Hound).
  9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party was held at a new location: the New York City Bar Association, conveniently in the same block at the Algonquin Hotel. There was a spacious room for wining and dining and conversation, and a comfortable auditorium for the entertainment. Mary Ann Bradley introduced the ladies who have been honored as the Woman, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported poetically on the events of the previous year and the previous evening. Harold Billings won the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year, for his article on "The Materia Medica of Sherlock Holmes". The John H. Watson Fund's raffle prize, kindly donated by Jerry and Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street, was a collection Sherlockian jewelry hand-crafted by Maggie Schpak, and the Fund benefitted from energetic bidding in the traditional auction.
  10. The Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to the auction were Bill Dorn (his Sherlockian calendar for 2007, signed by all who were featured in it), Laurie King (naming rights for one of the good or bad characters in the next Mary Russell novel), and the Denizens of the Bar of Gold (a Street Dozen of artistic pillows created by Alice Zalik).
  11. A Saturday evening event was the "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner at Kennedy's, where S'ians from six nations joined Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street for additional festivities. And on Sunday morning a convivial group of visiting long-weekenders gathered at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant for a brunch arranged by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
  12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $26.50 a year ($29.00 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); and there's an option offering a subscription to the BSJ and to the Christmas Annual for $36.50 (or $40.00 foreign). You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, where there's additional interesting material such as some of the papers written by past winners the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSJ, and information about the BSI's publications.

13. And if you would like to see two slide shows of photographs taken at some of the events during the birthday festivities, Scott Monty has kindly provided two slide shows at <www.bakerstreetjournal.blogspot.com>; there's a link in his entry for January 23.

14. Jan 07 #3: "Holland is a creation of such exquisite period evil that Dickens and Conan Doyle would have gladly fought naked on the frozen Thames for the chance to create her." According to Michael Holden, in the Guardian (Dec. 23), about a character in the television dramatization of Philip Pullman's new novel "The Ruby in the Smoke" that aired on BBC-1 on Dec. 27. One can only hope that the program is broadcast by "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV: Holden also wrote that "If you can only watch one bloodcurdling Victorian costume drama this Christmas--this should be it."
15. There were familiar names on the Queen's New Year's honours list: Michael Holroyd received a knighthood for services to literature; Peter Greenaway, Penelope Keith, and John Wood were appointed CBE (Companion of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire); and Hugh Laurie was appointed an OBE (Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire).
16. Holroyd wrote about the battle between Adrian Conan Doyle and Hesketh Pearson about Pearson's biography of Sir Arthur; Peter Greenaway wrote and dirthe film "The Draughtsman's Contract" (1982), filmed at Groombridge Place, which was the inspiration for Birlstone Manor; Penelope Keith was the receptionist at the massage parlor in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978); John Wood played Sherlock Holmes in the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of Gillette's play; and Hugh Laurie read "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC Radio 2 in 2002 (and as Dr. Gregory House in the Fox television series lives in a house numbered 221B).
17. Helen Wesson died on Sept. 7, 2006. She was an energetic amateur journalist and (with her husband Sheldon) a fine printer, and her enthusiasms included miniatures and Sherlock Holmes: Helen presided over two Sherlockian societies: The Trained Cormorants of Gifu (she had visited the trained cormorants while she lived in Japan) and the H.W., and she exhibited her Sherlockian miniature rooms (the sitting-room and some of his London hideaways) at the Red Circle's miniature meeting in 1983.
18. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company have issued a new CD, with dramatizations of "The Mazarin Stone" and "The Veiled Lodger" (dramatized by M. J. Elliott); as with their first CD (Jun 06 #4), the actors and scripts are excellent. Available from the Society (Mole End, Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England); £5.00 postpaid to the U.K., £6.00/E9.00 to Europe, £9.00/$12.00 elsewhere (sterling checks should be payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks to Jean Upton; euros in currency, please).
19. Further to an earlier item (Sep 00 #4) about the copy of Conan Doyle's THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, brought to the Antarctic in 1910 by Capt. Robert Falcon Scott (it's still there, preserved in the small hut from which he launched his ill-fated attempt to reach the South Pole), Saul Cohen wrote in Baker Street Miscellanea (winter 1982) about a volume of Sherlock Holmes stories brought to the Antarctic by Xavier Mertz on the Australasian-Antarctic expedition led by Douglas Mawson in 1911-1913; Mertz did not survive, but Mawson did, and found Mertz's book, which has now been discovered in Mawson's Hut at Cape Denison. According to a report in the Dec. 22 issue of the Melbourne Age, conservationists working on preserving the hut have found the book: a copy of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.

20. Jan 07 #4: Much has been written about (and by) Felix Dennis, the British entrepreneur, publisher (he owns Maxim), poet, and (the Sunday Times "rich list" estimates) the 65th richest individual in the UK. He has a web-site at <www.felixdennis.com>, and a Garden of Heroes on his 730-acre estate in Warwickshire. It's a sort of bronze Madame Tussaud's, according to an article in the Guardian (Nov. 3, 2002) with one-and-a-quarter lifesize statues of people he admires, including Galileo, Muhammad Ali, Dorothy Parker, Icarus, Charles Darwin, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
21. SPONGEBOB DETECTIVE PANTS: THE CASE OF THE MISSING SPATULA, written by David Lewman, and illustrated by Harry Moore (New York: Scholastic, 2006; 12 pp., $5.99), has SpongeBob and Patrick investigating a mystery.
22. Further to the report on <www.switchpod.com>, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" has been added to their list of Sherlockian items available for listening on-line. Patrick Horgan reads the stories, and reads them will. They also have some of the old Rathbone/Bruce radio broadcasts.
23. Arthur Hill died on Oct. 22, 2006. He worked for the Canadian Broadcasting Co. in radio theater while still in school, and acted on stage, screen, radio and television in England and the United States, winning awards for his appearance as George in the original Broadway production of Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" in 1962. He played Preston Giles on television in 1984 in "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes" (the pilot for the series "Murder She Wrote").
24. "Sherlock Holmes investigates a wailing, soul-sucking ghost that turns out to be a banshee," according to a press release spotted by Ken Lanza. "Will Holmes be clever enough to find out the beast's secrets and stop its terrifying reign?" Stay tuned: "Sherlock Holmes and the Banshee" is one of the new films greenlit for development for the SCI FI Channel, which is launching a new slot called "SCI-FI Saturday: The Most Dangerous Night of Television".
25. Peepolykus [pronounced people-like-us] is a British theater company that is touring with John Nicholson and Steven Canny's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"; their schedule is available at <www.peepolykus.com>. Three actors perform all of the roles "with style, grace, and a number of false beards," and the company asks their audiences to "refrain from bringing meat products into the auditorium."
26. Spotted by Jim Suszynski: "That's the trouble with detective work. . . . Too many clues are worse than none at all." The quote's from FREDDY PLAYS FOOTBALL, accompanied by Kurt Wiese's illustration of Freddy in Sherlockian costume, in THE WIT & WISDOM OF FREDDY AND HIS FRIENDS, by Walter R. Brooks (Woodstock: Overlook Press, 2000; 253 pp., $23.95); with a new introduction by Michael Cart discounted to $4.98 at Daedalus Books and presumably elsewhere. The Friends of Freddy are at Box 912, Greenbelt, MD 20768, and they have a web-site at <[www.freddythepig.org>.
27. Jan 07 #5: Those who wonder where Lauriston Gardens really was have difficulty finding a suitable location in London, but it is easier discovering a source for the name: in Edinburgh. Lauriston Place was just round the corner from one of the houses in which Conan Doyle lived when he studied under Dr. Joseph Bell at the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. An article in the Edinburgh Evening News (Jan. 20) notes that the Infirmary moved to a new site in Lauriston Place in 1879, and to a new hospital in Little France in 2002; Lauriston Place is being redeveloped as part of planning for a new district in Edinburgh, and preservationists are objecting to a proposal to replace the Red Home, where the Infirmary's nurses once lived, with an Lshaped restaurant and civic square.
28. Dorothy Stix spotted Sherlockian artwork in the game DIAMOND DETECTIVE (the trophy for getting to Inspector level is a badge with a portrait of Sherlock Holmes); it's one of the games available at <www.gamehouse.com>, and you can download and play it free for 60 minutes.
29. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for Edgars (to be awarded at their gala banquet on Apr. 26 in New York). The nominees include Steve Hockensmith's HOLMES ON THE RANGE (best first novel by an American author), Daniel Stashower's THE BEAUTIFUL CIGAR GIRL: MARY ROGERS, EDGAR ALLAN POE AND THE INVENTION OF MURDER (best fact crime), E. J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR (best critical/biographical), Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE MISSING MARQUESS: AN ENOLA HOLMES MYSTERY (best juvenile), and Steven Dietz's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE FINAL ADVENTURE (best play). Stephen King, whose pastiche "The - Doctor's Case" was published in the anthology THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1987), will receive the MWA's Grand Master award. Their website at <www.mysterywriters.org/pages/awards/nominees07.htm> lists the nominees in all the categories.

30. Jay Pearlman reports that The Mini-Tonga Scion Society is alive and well: the up-dated web-site at <www.hometown.aol.com/mini-tongasociety/mini1.htm> offers news of the world of miniatures, and colorful photographs of Sherlockian miniatures.
  31. <www.sulgravemanor.org.uk/history/manor\_through\_ages.htm> links to a website about Sulgrave Manor, home of George Washington's ancestors; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was a member of the British Peace Centenary Committee that helped raise the money needed to buy the house in 1914 as part of the celebration of the centenary of the Treaty of Ghent, which was the peace treaty that ended the War of 1812. Thanks to Gayle Harris for reporting the site.
  32. Robert Anton Wilson died on Jan. 11. He was renowned as the author of the "Illuminatus" trilogy; MASKS OF THE ILLUMINATI (1981) featured Joyce, Einstein, Crowley, the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and many (marginal) allusions to Sherlock Holmes and the Canon.
  33. I've mentioned MySpace before, and Mary Russell has her own profile there, at <www.myspace.com/maryrussell>. Her capsule biography states that she's 99 years old, because that's the limit at MySpace (she's actually 107 years old); Laurie R. King has complained at her own blog about MySpace's ageist policies <www.laurierking.blogspot.com>.

34. Jan 07 #6: Art Buchwald died on Jan. 17. He was a newspaper humor columnist for more than half a century. After the end World War II he went to the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, where he was managing editor of the campus humor magazine (and wrote a parody featuring Hamhock Bones), and moved to Paris to write an entertainment column for the European edition of the N.Y. Herald Tribune. In March 1952 he interviewed Bill Rabe, then an Army officer in Europe, about the Old Soldiers of Baker Street (and in a later column published a letter in which Adrian Conan Doyle complained that his father had been neglected in Bill's interview); Sherlock Holmes was mentioned often in Buchwald's columns over many years, and he assisted Bill in the research that resulted in Bill's WE ALWAYS MENTION AUNT CLARA (1990).
  35. Al Gregory <grimpen@nac.net> offers (e-mail only) his 2007 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
  36. SCANDINAVIA AND SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited and translated by Bjarne Nielsen (New York: The Baker Street Irregulars, 2006; 230 pp., $39.95), is the second volume in BSI's International Series, which is intended to make available in English some of the fine Sherlockian scholarship published in other languages. The book offers contributions from Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, covering a wide range of topics, including the history of the S'ian societies in Scandinavia, with fine artwork by Henry Lauritzen, Robert Storm-Petersen, and more recent artists. $43.90 postpaid to the U.S. ($44.90 elsewhere) from The Baker Street Journal, 2 Dettling Road, Maynard, MA 01754. You can also order on-line at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
  37. Roy Pilot, Gianluca Salvatori, and Enrico Solito are the editors of MANDATE FOR MURDER (New York: The Baker Street Irregulars, 2006; 177 pp., $35.00), is the fifth volume in the BSI's Manuscript Series; there's a facsimile of the original manuscript, with a transcription and notes, accompanied by excellent scholarship on Italy, Italians, and artists by Philip Weller, John Genova, the editors, and others. $38.95 postpaid to the U.S. ($39.95 elsewhere); addresses as for SCANDINAVIA AND SHERLOCK HOLMES (above).
  38. The last volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is THE CASE-BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2007; 264 pp., $26.95), with a thoughtful introduction by Chris Redmond. The annotations and appendices are as always based on old and new Sherlockian scholarship, and the nine volumes in the complete series are a splendid resource for those who want more information than is available in THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES and older annotated editions. $30.90 postpaid ($32.90 outside the U.S.) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268).
  39. Reported: Roger Jaynes, author of SHERLOCK HOLMES IN A DUEL WITH THE DEVIL (Nov 02 #1), has a second pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CHILFORD RIPPER (London: Breese Books, 2006; 150 pp.); Val Andrews' new pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GHOST OF BAKER STREET also is available from Breese Books (156 pp.). Each book costs £7.50 postpaid (to the UK)/€12.50 (Euroland)/$18.50 (elsewhere), and their address is Endeavour House, 170 Woodland Road, Sawston, Cambridge CB2 4DX, England <www.baker-street-studios.com>.
40. Jan 07 #7: Alan H. Foster ("A Commission from the Sultan of Turkey") died on Oct. 18, 2006. He had a long career in corporate financial planning and risk management, and then was a professor of finance, ethics, and corporate strategy at the University of Michigan. He was a member of The Speckled Band of Boston and The Amateur Mendicants of Detroit; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1965, and he won the BSI's Morley-Montgomery Award for the best paper published in the Baker Journal in 1966.
  41. Philip Weller writes that a more complete map of La Gaiola (featured in his article in MANDATE FOR MURDER (The Baker Street Irregulars' manuscript-series volume for "The Red Circle") (Jan 07 #6) is available on request as an e-mail attachment; his address is <221b@acd-221b.info>.
  42. The new issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) with news from the Sherlockians by Invitation Only Society, and offers of Sherlockian merchandise; the newsletter's URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times07-1.htm>, and you can request an e-mail subscription at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
  43. Jim Cox prepared a "Christopher Morley Souvenir Portfolio" for the Christopher Morley Walk during the birthday festivities, with photocopies (some in color) of a "selection of curiosities" drawn from his collection. $12.50 postpaid from James D. Cox (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116).
  44. Reported in the Guardian (Jan. 9): Bottom and Titania, the Ancient Mariner and the Albatross, and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, are the famous couples from literature featured on a multi-media "Literacy Collection" CD-ROM for Windows offered to schools by 2Simple Software (Enterprise House, 2 The Crest, Hendon, London NW4 2HN, England) <www.2simple.com>.
  45. Jon Lellenberg reports an excellent account of the battle of Maiwand at the web-site <www.britishbattles.com/second-afghan-war/maiwand.htm>; Dr. Watson is mentioned near the end, under "regimental anecdotes and traditions".
  46. <www.oddcast.com/home/demos/tts/frame1=talk> is a fascinating demonstration of modern technology: type and click and listen (in different languages and voices). You can type quotes from the Canon, of course. Or anything else you want to hear.
  47. And a few commercials: a 17-page list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, the Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.30 postpaid. An 82-page list of 851 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 430 active societies, is $4.85 postpaid. A run of address labels for 357 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.65 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please). The list of BSIs and others also is available from me by e-mail (at no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>.

48. Feb 07 #1: The Sherlockian birthday festivities lasted much longer than the long weekend in New York: the annual dinner of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London took place at the House of Commons on Jan. 20. Mike Whelan awarded Jonathan McCafferty membership in The Baker Street Irregulars (as "Barrymore").

49. Harvard's Houghton Library will host a symposium and mount a major exhibition honoring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in 2009, marking the 150th anniversary of his birth. The symposium will be held May 7-9, and the exhibition will run from May 4 to Aug. 15, featuring material from the Houghton's collections, the Baker Street Irregulars archives, and private collections. More information on the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Sesquicentennial Celebration will be available at <hcl.harvard.edu/libraries/houghton/doyle\_symposium.html>.
50. "The Uncanny Appearance of Sherlock Holmes" (a new musical written by Brad Krunholz for the North American Cultural Laboratory) will be performed at the NAEL Theatre in Highland Lake, N.Y., on Mar. 2 and 3 (the world premiere on Mar. 2 is a fund-raiser) (845-557-0694) and Mar. 9 and 10 at Humber College in Toronto (416-564-6622) <www.nacl.org/sherlock.htm>.
51. John Baesch spotted an article in The Times (Jan. 27) about an auction, at Bonhams in London on Mar. 6, of more than 350 outfits tailored by Angels, the leading costumier for films shot in Britain. The items offered in the auction include a black Victorian-style cape/coat worn by Jeremy Brett in the "Sherlock Holmes" series (estimated at £2,000-2,500), a dressing gown worn by Brett in the series (£1,000-1,200), and a khaki linen shirt worn by Christopher Lee in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (£100-140).
52. Michael Dirda reviewed A. N. Wilson's new BETJEMAN: A LIFE in the Washington Post's Book World (Jan. 28), and has reported (although not in his review) that the Betjemann patented tantalus (which has been described as a device designed to prevent the servants from tipping of pilfering) was invented by the poet's grandfather George Betjemann.
53. One is reminded of the old story about the man who drew lines on the label of the whiskey bottle he kept in his hotel room, so that he would know that no one else was drinking from it. One day he returned to his room to find a note by the bottle: "Please do not draw lines on the label. It is a shame to have to dilute good whiskey."
54. Nostalgia Ventures has added a collection of 20 programs from the 1948-1949 Mutual Broadcasting System's "Sherlock Holmes" series to its collection of Old Time Radio Shows. The ten-disk boxed set stars John Stanley as Holmes and Ian Martin and Wendell Holmes as Watson in recordings restored from the original disks in the University of Minnesota's Edith Meiser Collection and hitherto unavailable, and retails for $29.98. It's available in stores, or from the company (888-589-8885); the quality of the recordings is splendid, and it's delightful to listen to the programs. And it's nice to hear that Nostalgia Ventures plans to issue more programs from the season. There's more information about the series at <www.nostalgiatown.com>; click on "enter here" and search for "sherlock" and click on the cover and on "facts" to read commentary by Bill Nadel and Anthony Tollin.

55. Feb 07 #2: The February issue of Smithsonian magazine has an interesting article about artist Joseph Cornell's box construction "A Swan Lake for Tamara Toumanova: Homage to the Romantic Ballet" on display at the Smithsonian American Art Museum. Cornell met Toumanova in 1940, and used feathers from her costume when he created the box in 1946. Toumanova, who died in 1996 (Jun 96 #2), portrayed the ballerina Petrova in the film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970).
56. Mark Alberstat reports that the Spence Munros are celebrating their 25th anniversary, and are commemorating the event with a lapel pin. US$3.25 postpaid to North America; $4.65 elsewhere. His address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada; markalberstat@ns.sympatico.ca is his PayPal account.
57. Further to the item (Jul 06 #4) on the campaign to upgrade the protection of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, the Department for Culture, Media, and Sport has decided against the proposal. The rejection letter said that "the building lacks the level of special architectural interest which would justify a Grade 1 listing," and that "the integrity of the original design has been compromised," according to the BBC. The Victorian Society, which led the campaign, noted that the department also said that "the writer does not occupy a significant enough position in the nation's consciousness," and "cannot be said to be an author of the standing of...Charles Dickens or Jane Austen." The Victorian Society has appealed, and anyone who wants to object to the decision against the upgrade to Grade 1 listing should write to Tessa Jowell (Secretary of State for Culture, Media, and Sport); her address is: Cockspur Street, London SW1Y 5DH, 5DH, England <tessa.jowell@culture.gsi.gov.uk>.
58. An editorial in The Guardian (Feb. 8) quoted T. S. Eliot (a "recognized expert on national culture long before the Department of Culture was thought of") as having written: "perhaps the greatest of the Sherlock Holmes mysteries is this: that when we talk of him we invariably fall into the fancy of his existence." "If Undershaw cannot be saved on Doyle's account, the paper suggested, "then it should be on Holmes's; whom he alone could have created." Tessa Jowell responded (Feb. 13), writing that it is "an unremarkable late-19th-century domestic house with a later extension and with many of the original internal features long gone," and that the building most closely associated with Holmes is 221B Baker Street, adding that she "would be only too pleased to consider listing that building" should a request be made.
59. Roger Johnson spotted "The Valley of Fear" in Bucks County, which is a far classier part of Pennsylvania than the Vermissa Valley. There's a web-site at <www.valleyoffear.com>.
60. Richard D. Lesh ("The Fatal Battle of Maiwand") died on Feb. 1. Dick was a professor of fine arts at Wayne State Teachers College in Nebraska, and the founder and sparking-plug of The Maiwand Jezails, and he led the society's long campaign to erect a monument to Dr. Watson on the battlefield. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1965, and their Two-Shilling Award in 1990.
61. Feb 07 #3: "How much do I owe for 'borrowing' this book for 42 years and 8 months?" Stephen N. Sampogna wrote to his high school library in Richmond, Va., on Dec. 18. The book was a copy of the Doubleday edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (1960) that Sampogna had neglected to return to the library when he graduated in 1966. The fines totalled $152.70, according to the librarian, who also noted that Sampogna probably had paid for the lost book in order to graduate, and waived the fines. The book is now displayed in the library, next to his letter and his 1966 yearbook photograph, and a giant sign the reads "It's never too late."
62. THE ANTHONY BOUCHER CHRONICLES: REVIEWS AND COMMENTARY 1942-1947, edited by Francis M. Nevins (Shreveport: Ramble House, 2005; 470 pp., $24.00), is an annotated bibliography of Boucher's reviews and commentary published in the San Francisco Chronicle; he was the author of THE CASE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS (1940), one of the founders of The Scowlers and Mollie Maguires, and a member of the BSI. Nevins has contributed a long and insightful introduction, and a detailed index of the authors Boucher wrote about. There is Sherlockian content, of course, and much more. The publisher is at 443 Gladstone Boulevard, Shreveport, LA 71104 <www.ramblehouse.com>.
63. Ramble House also plans to publish two pastiche collections: THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Richard A. Lupoff, and THE SECRET ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Gary Lovisi; $30.00 hardback, $18.00 paperback, and $25.00 hand-made).
64. Calvin H. Plimpton died on Feb. 3. He served as president of Amherst College from 1960 to 1971, and then as president of the American University of Beirut; he also was a member (as "Mr. Mortimer") of The Five Orange Pips, and his paper on his Canonical namesake was published in The Baker Street Journal in Sept. 1977.
65. Susan Jewell spotted a "charm school" advertisement for Tiffany & Co. in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 24); they say it's a buggy, but it's obviously a hansom cab viewed straight on. Diamonds, emeralds, and sapphires, set in platinum, $1,150 (item 21671738) (800-526-0649) <www.tiffany.com>.

66. It occurs to me that there are more and more URLs in this newsletter, and that more and more of my readers have computers and access to the Internet, where some interesting things can be seen. Such as the first movie of a Pope, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ai8DEWmZF34&eurl=>, kindly reported by Ann Lewis. The Pope was Gioacchino Pecci, Pope Leo XIII (1878-1903); it was at his express desire Sherlock Holmes investigated the sudden death of Cardinal Tosca.
67. "This is the real eggshell pottery of the Ming dynasty," Holmes explained (in "The Illustrious Client"). "No finer piece ever passed through Christie's." The most expensive piece of artwork ever sold at auction in Asia is a tiny ceramic bowl, made during the reign of the Qing dynasty emperor Qianlong (1736-1795); it brought £9.8 million at Christie's in Beijing last November, according to an article in The Times (Nov. 29), spotted by John Baesch. The Manchu-led Qing dynasty conquered the Han-led Ming dynasty in 1644 and ruled until 1912.

68. Feb 07 #4: The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' discussion of the manuscript of Conan Doyle's story "Billy Bones" (held in the Children's Research Literature Collection), Jens Byskov Jensen's article about Carl Muusmann's pastiche "Sherlock Holmes pa Marienlyst" (published in Danish in 1906 and in English in 1956), Tim Johnson's report on the growth of the collections, and much more; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
69. The latest issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual is at hand from The Sound of the Baskervilles in Seattle, with scholarship (including Samuel Fry's article on "Three Friends: Holmes, Stefansson & Doyle"), quizzes, reviews, a burlesque radio play, and news of the society; copies of the 46-page booklet are available from David Haugen, 3605 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332; $10.00 postpaid.
70. Ian Richardson died on Feb. 9. He began his acting career in 1958 and was a founding member of the Royal Shakespeare Company in 1960; he was perhaps most famous as Francis Urquhart in "House of Cards" (1990), and for asking for Grey Poupon Dijon mustard in television commercials. He was awarded a CBE (Commander of the Order of the British Empire) in 1989. Richardson was Sherlock Holmes in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" (1983), and Dr. Joseph Bell in "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (2000).
71. Joe Eckrich planned to publish a booklet containing all of the talks given at "Holmes Under the Arch II" in 2005, but reports that he will not be able to complete the project. And due to a water leak and a crashed computer he has only a partial list of those who paid for the booklet; please let him know how many copies you ordered: his address is 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026 <jeckrich@sbcglobal.net>.
72. A run of the first 80 volumes of The Strand Magazine in publisher's cloth, offered at an eBay auction in January, when the final bid of £1,850 did not meet the reserve, was offered again, this time with no reserve, on Feb. 8, when it sold for £1,673 (not including the shipping costs: the total weight was estimated at 100 kilograms).
73. Single issues of The Strand Magazine can also be interesting: "Royal Editions" (bound in light blue silk over bevelled boards, and on thick paper) were published when the magazine had special articles about Queen Victoria and her family; there were at least three such issues (for Mar. 1891, Dec. 1892, and Nov. 1893). Copies of the latter two issues brought £258.00 each at eBay on Jan. 29.
74. Of course if you're truly interested in The Strand Magazine, you might consider a run of the magazine offered by Vincent Brosnan from the collection of Theodore G. Schulz: 100 volumes of the British edition, plus 464 single issues in wrappers; 19 volumes of the U.S. edition, plus 201 single issues in wrappers; and a complete run of The New Strand in single issues, all for $20,000 plus shipping. A colorful brochure is available from Vinnie (1741 1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056 (858-630-2013) <sherlockinla@cox.net>.

75. Feb 07 #5: The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's report on fragments of an issue of The Strand Magazine found at the site of an excavation in Egypt (abandoned by an archaeologist rather than buried with a pharaoh), and much about the ACD@35 conference held at the library last year. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>.
76. And for those who want to plan ahead: Canadian crime writer Peter Robinson will present this year's Cameron Hollyer Lecture at the Library on Apr. 14; the lecture will be preceded by the annual general meeting of the Friends, and followed by a Bootmaker Pub Night.
77. Sid Fleischman's THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA, OR PIRATES GALORE (2005) is now available in paperback (New York: HarperCollins/Greenwillow, 2006; 194 pp., $5.99); intended for children ages 10 up, it's a well written and interesting story about "the most notorious pirate ship in the Pacific." It's not Sherlockian, although Fleischman does acknowledge his debt to the Sherlock Holmes story for the name of the ship (and its ferocious figurehead).
78. E. J. Wagner, author of THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 06 #2), will be one of 12 speakers in a Forensic Science Seminar at the University of Rhode Island in Kingston. The lectures are free and open to the public, and she will speak on "Superstition, Science, and Sherlock Holmes: The Development of Forensic Science During the Gaslight Era" on Apr. 13.
79. "Holmes and Watson in pursuit of the Hound" isn't the caption of this illustration, which John Lockwood found in National Police Gazette (Sept. 15, 1894). It's "Fitzsimmons Begins Training" and it shows him ("the Australian middle-weight") taking "a lively sprint with his trainer" at New Orleans. That's Bob Fitzsimmons, who began his professional career in Australia in 1883, and went on to make boxing history as its first three-division world champion.
80. Don W. Baranowski's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE FRANKENSTEIN MONSTER (West Conshohocken: Infinity Publishing, 2006; 164 pp., $12.95) is the story that Watson told to Mary Godwin when he was courting her, long before he met Mary Morstan (and before she met and married Percy Bysshe Shelley); it was at Watson's request that she left Holmes and Watson out of the story when she wrote her famous novel. There are some problems with chronology, of course: her novel was published in 1818, and she died in 1851.
81. Philip J. Carraher's SHERLOCK HOLMES IN NEW YORK: THE ADVENTURE OF THE NEW YORK RIPPER (West Conshohocken: Infinity Publishing, 2005; 203 pp., $14.95) is the third of his pastiches about Simon Hawkes, the alias Holmes used in disguise in New York during the Great Hiatus; the first of them was SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEAD RABBITS SOCIETY (Oct 01 #6). This time Holmes is pitted against a serial killer who may be London's Jack the Ripper. The publisher's web-site is <www.infinitypublishing.com>.

82. Feb 07 #6: "All smokers should be prosecuted as nuisances, and the manufacture and sale of tobacco should be prohibited," George Bernard Shaw announced, according to a story in the N.Y. Times (Dec. 5, 1926). Asked to comment on this, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle remarked: "Sherlock Holmes would smile at that."
83. Stanford University's Community Reading Project is again publishing Sherlock Holmes stories by mail and on the Internet in serial facsimile (Dec 06 #1). "The Empty House" (with notes by Mary Eichbauer) is now available at <sherlockholmes.stanford.edu/2007/2007\_issue1.pdf>.

84. Randall Stock noted a story in the Wall Street Journal (Feb. 9) about plans to reissue Playboy on six DVDs, one for each decade. The first two decades will be issued in October, accompanied by 200-page books, at $100 each (a lot more than you'll pay now for the magazine's first three issues (all had Sherlockian content). The Playboy disks will be created by the same company that created THE COMPLETE NEW YORKER on eight DVDs (Oct 05 #1).
85. There's an interesting exhibition of "Victorian Bestsellers" at the Pierpont Morgan Library in New York through May 6; none of Conan Doyle's books are on display, but you can see a copy of Isabella Mary Beeton's THE BOOK OF HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT (1861). Their web-site's at <www.themorgan.org>.
86. "Which word or phrases do you most overuse?" was one of the questions posed to Ellen DeGeneres in the "Proust Questionnaire" in the Mar. 2007 issue of Vanity Fair. "I say 'By Jove!' way too much," she replied. "Either I do or Sherlock Holmes does. Whoever it is, it has to stop." How many times does Sherlock Holmes use that oath in the Canon? Is there any other oath he uses more often?
87. Dave Morrill spotted the first issue of THE HELMET OF FATE: DETECTIVE CHIMP (DC Comics, $2.99); it's the first of five-part series, and Detective Chimp is in Sherlockian costume. You can see the cover, and the first six pages, at <www.dccomics.com/comics/?cm=6623>.
88. Paul Spiring reports a new web-site devoted to Bertram Fletcher Robinson at <www.bfronline.biz>; there are plans to publish ON THE TRAIL OF DR. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: AN ILLUSTRATED DEVON TOUR, by Spiring and Brian Pugh; A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON, by Spiring and Philip Weller, and monographs on Dr. George Turnavine Budd (by Pugh) and Robinson (by Spiring).
89. Thanks to Joe Coppola for spotting the television film "Written in Blood" (2002). The film stars Michael T. Weiss, Peter Coyote, Maureen Flannigan, and Luke Williams, and was written by David Keith Miller; a serial killer leaves clues taken from the Sherlock Holmes stories.
90. Al Gregory has reported nice news for those who have charged foreign-currency transactions to their credit cards: credit card companies have agreed to pay up to $336 million to people who were charged excessive transaction fees from 1996 to 2006. Needless to say, lawyers will receive a lot of the money. There's a lot more information at <www.ccfsettlement.com>, and you can call 800-945-9890 to request a claim form.
91. Feb 07 #7: "The Backyardigans" is a 30-minute animated series broadcast by Nickelodeon cable, and Pablo ("a precocious penguin") is seen in Sherlockian costume in "Whodunit?" (which first aired in 2006 and is repeated frequently) and in THE MYSTERY OF THE JEWELLED EGGS, adapted by Lara Bergen from a teleplay by Janice Burgess (New York: Simon Spotlight, 2007; 24 pp., $3.99). Thanks to Jim Suszynski for spotting the book.
92. The BBC America Shop continues to expand its Sherlockian offers: they now have a framed color reproduction of the poster for John Barrymore's movie "Sherlock Holmes" (1922); item 14003 ($59.98) (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043) (800-898-4921) <www.bbcamericashop.com>.
93. Four Southern Sherlockian societies (in Atlanta, Nashville, Birmingham, and Greenville) will hold their Third Annual Gathering of Southern Sherlockians at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 14-15. More information about the event is available from Kent Ross at 6875 Fielder Road, Rex, GA 30273) <kenthross@aol.com>.
94. Miklos Rozsa's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" was written for Jascha Heifetz and premiered by the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in 1956; it was then used in the score for Billy Wilder's "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970). Now Rozsa expert Nic Raine has reconstructed and orchestrated the score for the film, and it has been recorded by the City of Prague Philharmonic Orchestra and will be released on Apr. 18, the 100th anniversary of Rozsa's birth; an added feature on the CD is more than 20 minutes of music composed for scenes that were cut from the final version of the film. The special pre-release price of the CD "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (Tadlow 004) is £12.95 postpaid (world-wide); Tadlow Music (57 High Street, Tadlow, Royston, Herts. SG8 0EU, England) <www.tadlowmusic.com>.
95. The next gathering of The Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society will be held on May 6, as part of the West End Jazz Band's 6th Annual Hudson Lake Train Trip Concert and Buffet; Hudson Lake is an easy train ride from Chicago; more information is available from Donald B. Izban (1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068) (874-292-1270). You can hear samples of the band's music at their web-site <www.westendjazzband.com>.
96. The International Guild of Miniature Artisans held its annual show at the Marriott Marquis in New York in February, and one of the dealers was Ferenc J. Albert (449 Capri Court, Marco Island, FL 34145) (239-642-2357); he specializes in handblown glass miniatures, and offers an attractive one-inch scale (that's 1 inch = 1 foot) tantalus; $132.00.
97. Greg Darak reports that the 1991 television films "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" and "Sherlock Holmes: Incident at Victoria Falls" (starring Christopher Lee and Patrick Macnee) are now available in two-disk DVD sets from Madacy Home Video ($14.98 each).
98. The February issue of Classic Images has a full-color cover photograph of a six-sheet (81" x 81") poster for "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) that will be sold at auction on Mar. 31 by Heritage Auction Galleries (3500 Maple Avenue, 17th floor, Dallas, TX 75219) (800-872-6467) <www.ha.com>; it is the first known copy of the poster, estimated at $10,000-15,000.

99. Feb 07 #8: FACTION PARADOX: ERASING SHERLOCK, by Kelly Hale (Des Moines: Mad Norwegian Press, 2006; 187 pp., $17.95), is the last novel in a series "based on the spin-off range as created by Lawrence Miles," who invented the Faction Paradox cult in his "Doctor Who" novels; it's set in 1882, and "Rose Donnelly, maid-of-all-work, disguises herself as a boy in order to follow the callow, yet brilliantly determined Sherlock Holmes in his pursuit of a thief." Rose is a time-traveller, and there's considerable sex and violence (the book's not for the faint-hearted). There's much more about the Faction Paradox series at <www.madnorwegian.com>.
100. That's a mug shot of Gene Morrison, who conned British courts for almost 26 years, falsely claiming to be a forensic investigator and testifying for the prosecution in 700 court cases. Morrison described himself as "Sherlock Holmes" and was paid at least £250,000 for giving evidence from the witness box and writing reports he based on cut-and-paste information from the Internet. His qualifications included three advanced degrees he bought at <www.affordabledegrees.com>. And he received a five-year sentence for his deception.
101. <www.comicart.dk/group.asp?group=267&page=&sub=239> is the URL for the web-site of Peter Hartung, a Danish dealer who is selling original artwork from Nis Jessen's spectacular edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (Jul 05 #6); he also offers copies of the signed and numbered special edition of the book.
102. Derek Waring died on Feb. 19. He began his acting career on stage and continuing in films and on television; he played Henri Fournay in "The Second Stain" in the Peter Cushing series on BBC-1 (1968), and Dr. Watson in Leslie Bricusse's "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" in Exeter (1988) and London (1989).
103. Sorry about that: the CBE mentioned in the report on the Queen's New Years' honours list (Jan 07 #3) is the abbreviation for Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire.
104. The Serpentine Muse, published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, now has an annual award: the WHIMSEY [Whimsy Is My Specialty, Enjoy Yourself] award for the most whimsical piece published in the preceding volume. The award was established by Al Gregory in memory of his wife Jan Stauber, and this year's winner was Regina Stinson, who received a Canonical check for $221.17 during a ceremony at the William Gillette Luncheon in January.

105. There has been considerable publicity recently about scanning books to make them available on the Internet: Google and Microsoft and other archives are working on such projects, and Sandy Kozinn notes that John Kendrick Bangs' amusing R. HOLMES & CO.: BEING THE REMARKABLE ADVENTURES OF RAFFLES HOLMES, ESQ., DETECTIVE AND AMATEUR CRACKSMAN BY BIRTH can be read page-by-page at www.archive.org/details/holmesbeing00bangrich. It's an interesting site: with a little exploration you can find books by Conan Doyle, plays by William Gillette, John Dickson Carr's biography of Conan Doyle.

106. Mar 07 #1: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will honor the world's first forensic geologist at dinner on Wednesday, Apr. 4, at George's Greek Cafe (318 Pine Street in Long Beach, Calif., during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; drinks at 7:00 and dinner at 8:00. Come one, come all, as they say, and watch geologists and Sherlockians try not to confuse each other. Dinner will cost $27.00 per person, and there will be a cash bar (beer and wine). Please let me know if you're going to attend my e-mail address is blau7103@comcast.net.
107. An on-line poll at www.worldbookday.com asking people in the United Kingdom and Ireland to name "the books the nation cannot live without" wound up with Jane Austen's PRIDE AND PREJUDICE in first place. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was 89th, behind Mitch Alborn's THE FIVE PEOPLE YOU MEET IN HEAVEN and ahead of Enid Blyton's THE FARAWAY TREE.
108. Further to the report on the manuscript of "The Illustrious Client" (Jul 06 #3), formerly owned by Dame Jean Conan Doyle and now by the National Library of Scotland in Edinburgh, the winter 2006 issue of Discover NLS has Owen Dudley Edwards' interesting four-page article about the manuscript, and the story (which had an alternative title: "The Adventure of the Blue Saucer"). The postal address is George IV Bridge, Edinburgh EH1 1EW, Scotland, United Kingdom, and www.nls.uk/about/discover-nls/issues/discover-nls\_03.pdf is the URL for the issue.
109. "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (the play that Jeremy Paul wrote for Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke) will be performed by Shakespeare & Company in Lenox, Mass., Sept. 28 to Oct. 28, with Michael Hammond as Holmes and Dave Demke as Watson; the theater address is 70 Kemble Street, Lenox, MA 01240 (413-637-1199) www.shakespeare.org.
110. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GRAND HORIZONTALS, by Frank J. Morlock (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2006; 223 pp. $20.95), is a collection of seven plays that involve Holmes with French courtesans and Fantomas, Father Brown, Police Commissioner Theodore Roosevelt, and Count Dracula (not all in the same play, of course).
111. Further to the item "Smoking Ban Will Leave Theatre World Fuming" (Jan 06 #3) about a ban on smoking by actors working in film, television, and theater in Scotland, the ban was of some interest to the producers of a BBC-4 program that aired on Mar. 1. "Reichenbach Falls" (based on a story by Ian Rankin) starred Alec Newman as Jim Buchan (a younger and more modern version of Rankin's John Rebus) and Richard Wilson as Arthur Conan Doyle; according to a report by Hugo Rifkind in The Times (Feb. 21), Newman's cigarettes were emptied out and filled with jasmine incense; "He never actually takes a drag," said a producer, "He can't."
112. Noted by Karen Murdock: The Chess Store (20811 NW Cornell Road #200, Hillsboro, OR 97124) (888-810-2437) offers two Sherlockian chess sets: a handdecorated set with board ($429.00) www.thechessstore.com/product/163SSJ and a different brown-and-ivory antiqued-finish set without board ($199.95) www.thechessstore.com/product/SH163SA.

113. Mar 07 #2: The publisher of Andrew Lycett's new biography CONAN DOYLE: THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, due from Weidenfeld & Nicolson in August (416 pp., £20.00), has started publicizing the book at their web-site www.orionbooks.co.uk/item-details.aspx?id=34072&T=HB. The American edition is due from Free Press in November, and you can pre-order the book at www.amazon.co.uk and www.amazon.com. Lycett also has written bio-graphies of Ian Fleming, Rudyard Kipling, and Dylan Thomas.
114. The new issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) with news from various societies, and offers of Sherlockian merchandise (including an attractive new necktie); the URL is www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times07-3.htm, and you can request an e-mail subscription at www.sherlock-holmes.com.
115. David Stuart Davies reports that SHERLOCK is closing. Despite David's fine editing and the magazine's interesting content, the publisher wasn't able to find enough paying readers. But David won't be bored: he is now editing a "Mystery & Supernatural" series for Wordsworth Editions, and nine books are planned for 2008, including a collection of new Sherlock Holmes stories by modern authors.
116. Steve Hockensmith's amusing Amlingmeyers pastiche "Wolves in Winter" (published in the Feb. 2006 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine) was tied for sixth place in the magazine's "Readers Award" poll.
117. Variety has reported (Mar. 15) that Warner Bros. will "reimagine Sherlock Holmes as an action-adventure sleuth" in a film to be based on Lionel Wigram's unpublished Sherlock Holmes comic book; Wigram, formerly a creative executive at Warner, oversaw the first three "Harry Potter" films, and his "vision has Holmes losing some of his Victorian stuffiness and being more adventuresome, including playing up his skills as a bare-knuckle boxer and expert swordsman as he goes about solving crime." Wigram "intends to play up parts of the detective's character that have been largely overlooked" in previous adaptations of Conan Doyle's books for other media.
118. This likely is the same film reported on by the Daily Express in a story on Mar. 22 that noted "Hollywood insiders" saying that Russell Crowe is "lined up" to play Holmes. The story also says that Clive Owen is a contender for the role. Of course one should be skeptical of such pre-production gossip.
119. The latest issue of the August Derleth Society Newsletter has an intriguing cover: a black-and-white reproduction of the Dec. 1970 issue of the comic book CONAN THE BARBARIAN. And with good reason: that issue included a letter from Derleth praising the artwork of Roy Thomas, who drew Conan. There also is a review of the latest book from Arkham House: EVERMORE, edited by James Robert Smith and Stephen Mark Rainey (2006; 237 pages, $34.95), with 15 essays about Edgar Allan Poe, one of them ("An Author and His Character") by Vincent Starrett. Their web-site is at www.arkhamhouse.com. The Derleth society also has a web-site at www.derleth.org; membership includes the newsletter and costs $15.00 a year (Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583. August Derleth is best known to Sherlockians for his stories about Solar Pons; he was also a friend of and literary executor for H. P. Lovecraft, a poet, and a prolific writer in horror and other genres.

120. Mar 07 #3: Further to the item (Feb 07 #1) about the sale of costumes at Bonhams on Mar. 6, Jeremy Brett's black Victorian-style cape/ coat (estimated at £2,000-2,500) sold for £1,900 (plus Bonhams' 20% premium); his gray dressing gown (£1,000-1,200) sold for £1,600; and Christopher Lee's khaki linen shirt (£100-140) sold for £160. The sale highlight was the cloak Alec Guinness wore as Obi Wan Kenobi in "Star Wars" (1977), which sold for £54,000.
121. Liberation Entertainment plans to release 60-minute animations of the four long stories on DVDs in May ($9.95 each); these are the animations produced by Burbank Films in Australia and released on videocassette in 1984; Peter O'Toole provided the voice of Sherlock Holmes. You can see samples of the films at www.libent.com.

122. Dr. William R. Hanson offers a Sherlockian FDC for "A Study in Scarlet" with a cachet showing a view of Salt Lake City from Harper's New Monthly Magazine, Apr. 1893), and his painting of the Hope party fleeing Salt Lake City. $10.00 postpaid (to the U.S. and Canada) or $11.00 (elsewhere); his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
123. The 27th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held in Miamisburg, Ohio, on March 7-9, 2008; Cathy Gill (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net> maintains the mailing list.
124. Adam Hime's catalogs are always interesting, not only for the descriptions but also for what he has to offer. Catalog 34 is available at his web-site at <www.bibliotopus.com> with (among other treasures) manuscripts of "Lady Frances Carfax" ($500,000) and "His Last Bow" ($375,000). They're still on offer in catalog 35, along with a Sidney Paget portrait of Holmes ($60,000) and a copy of the first book edition of "A Study in Scarlet" ($265,000).
125. Reported: Michael Quinion's GALLIMAUFRY: A HODGE-PODGE OF WORDS VANISHING FROM OUR VOCABULARY (Oxford University Press, 2006; £12.99/$25.00); accord-ing to Dot Wordsworth's interesting review in The Spectator (Oct. 7) it has a section on carriages, "and takes as his guide Conan Doyle, since Holmes was forever clattering around in one." Quinion appears to be an author for people interested in language; he also has written BALLYHOO, BUCKAROO, AND SPUDS: INGENIOUS TALES OF WORDS AND THEIR ORIGINS and PORT OUTBOARD, STAR-BOARD HOME: AND OTHER LANGUAGE MYTHS.
126. It has been a while since I have mentioned The Sherlock Holmes Collections web-site at <special.lib.umn.edu/rare/holmes.phtml>; it's a fine example of how useful on-line resources can be. It offers Ron De Waal's bibliography "The Universal Sherlock Holmes", seven supplements prepared by Tim Johnson, information about the collections, finding aids, exhibition catalogs, links to other important Sherlockian and Doylean web-sites and to a brochure for the "Victorian Secrets and Edwardian Enigmas" conference scheduled in Minneapolis on July 6-8, and much more.

127. Mar 07 #4: When biographical questionnaires were mailed to living members of the Baker Street Irregulars this month, a cover letter from Julie McKuras and Sue Vizoskie was omitted. The questionnaire is available from them by e-mail and answers can be submitted by e-mail; they also have prepared a questionnaire relating to deceased Irregulars that you can request from Julie or Sue. They hope that friends and family will be able to provide information and memories about those who are "beyond the Reichenbach. If you have obituaries of deceased Irregulars, Julie and Sue would appreciate copies of those as well. Julie McKuras' address is 13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124 <mike9750@aol.com>; Sue Vizoskie's is 90 Ralph Avenue, White Plains, NY 10606 <svizoskie@aol.com>.
128. "Professor Moriarty's is for sale" (Apr 06 #1), and it now has been sold. Dale Easter opened the restaurant in Saratoga Springs (N.Y.) in 1984, and decided it was time to retire. According to a story in the Saratogian on Mar. 19 (at hand from Ken Lanza), the new owner is Jeff Ames, who plans to change the name of the restaurant to Cantina, and the menu to Californiastyle Mexican cuisine.
129. "It is a bust to Longfellow, the American," Frank Cross told his wife Maude, "I believe he is more read than any poet in England." Frank and Maude discovered the bust in Westminster Abbey, A DUET: WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS, and were careful to read the inscription: "This bust was placed among the memorials of the poets of England by English admirers of an American poet." A new stamp in our "Literary Arts" series honors Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882) and one his more famous poems, "Paul Revere's Ride".
130. Roger Johnson notes in the March issue of The District Messenger that Redfield Arts is "in pre-production" on a film called "The Crimes of Sherlock Holmes" (it's to be the first of the series); the company's web-site is at <www.redfieldarts.com>, but they offer no information on script-writers or cast or credits or a date for beginning of filming. He also reports that YouTube has five minutes of video of Roger Llewellyn in excerpts from his one-man play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!". The District Messenger is available at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/district.php> as well as by mail, and it's full of news from Great Britain and elsewhere in the Sherlockian and Doylean world.
131. Emory Lee has reported an EasyRead edition of THE VALLEY OF FEAR (244 pp., $13.99) from <www.readhowyouwant.com>, and from <www.amazon.com>; the company publishes redesigned large-print editions of public-domain books.
132. Freddie Francis died on Mar. 17. He began his film career as a clapper boy at Elstree Studio, and became a prolific cinematographer and director; he directed "The Deadly Bees" (1967), from Robert Bloch's screenplay based on H. F. Heard's novel A TASTE FOR HONEY (Heard's "Mr. Mycroft" was in Bloch's script but not in the film; according to Bloch, the script was revised by Anthony Marriott, who took vast liberties with Bloch's adaptation, and he had never seen his "deformed offspring"). Francis also directed "The Case of Harry Crocker" and "The Case of the Deadly Prophecy" in the Sheldon Reynolds television series "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1980).

133. Mar 07 #5: A new biography of Harry Houdini has received considerable attention in the media after its authors announced that they are planning to exhume Houdini's body in hopes of determining whether the magician had been murdered. THE SECRET LIFE OF HOUDINI: THE MAKING OF AMERICA'S FIRST SUPERHERO, by William Kalush and Larry Sloman (New York: Atria Books, 2006; 592 pp., $29.95), raises the possibility of murder, and suggests that Conan Doyle may have been involved, and of course that has been mentioned prominently in many of the news stories and reviews, which certainly reminds one of the continuing campaign to exhume B. Fletcher Robinson's body.
134. The Houdini story ran on the Associated Press and Reuters wires, and it was picked up by newspapers and magazines and television stations all over the world (you only need to run a Google search), and of course there were many stories that Google didn't report, including an excellent (and amusing) debunking article by David Segal in the Washington Post on Mar. 24 (which may still be available on-line).
135. One of the experts involved in the exhumation plans is James E. Starrs, who edited the anthology THE NOISELESS TENOR: THE BICYCLE IN LITERATURE (Apr 96 #4), which includes "The Priory School", two excerpts from Christopher Morley, and a splendid Foreword by William Saroyan. He's also well known for forensic investigations of questions such as whether Alferd Packer dined on the party he was supposed to be guiding through the mountains (Starrs dug up the victims, and concluded that they had indeed been murdered, and quite likely butchered).
136. Getting back to the book, which suggests that when Houdini's first visited London and met with William Melville (who then headed Scotland Yard's Speccial Brach), Melville enlisted Houdini as a spy; Melville went on to head the British intelligence operation that became MI-5. And the book raises the possibility that Houdini's death was not accidental, but rather deliberate murder by a spiritualist organization that sought revenge for his unmasking of fraudulent mediums. The Washington Post article notes that the current publicity given to the plans for an exhumation does seem carefully timed to revive lagging sales of the book.
137. Bob Byrne, who has an interesting web-site at <www.holmesonscreen.com>, has launched an electronic newsletter: Baker Street Essays discusses the cases and their illustrations, and the first issue (16 pages, with colorful artwork) is available at the web-site.
138. <www.youtube.com/watch?v=38HGyxMThOw> is the URL for an interesting video compiled by Jeremy Holstein, using photographs and artwork showing William Gillette as visual accompaniment to the audio recording he made in 1936 of scenes from his play. It's the complete recording (rather than the shorter version issued on various records); you can click on "Part 1" and "Part 2" to hear the complete recording. The original recording was made by Harvard professor Frederick Clifton Packard at his home near Boston; Packard read Watson's lines and his wife Alice was Alice Faulkner.

Packard went on to found the Harvard Vocabarium, which in 2003 was named by the Library of Congress to the National Recording Registry, which is intended to "celebrate the richness and variety of our audio legacy."

139. Mar 07 #6: Yuichi Hirayama offers JAPAN AND SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 05) for those who like signatures: the copies are signed by all three editors and seven of the contributors. The book launched the Baker Street Irregulars' International Series, which makes available in English some of the fine Sherlockian scholarship published in other languages. The price is $49.95 postpaid (checks for US dollars, and currency for pounds and euros, please); 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181-0012, Japan); the number of signed copies is limited, so you might want to use e-mail to ask him if copies still are available <hirayama@parkcity.ne.jp>.
140. The Lambda Literary Foundation, which celebrates LGBT [Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender] literature, reports that Laurie R. King's THE ART OF DETECTION is a finalist for a Lambda Literary Award (Lesbian Mystery). The winners will be announced at an awards ceremony in New York on Mar. 31.
141. Tim Kline's THE GAME OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: A COMPREHENSIVE COLLECTOR'S GUIDE is the result of a decade of collecting, and it covers more than 150 games of all sorts, ranging from the card game issued by Parker Bros. in 1904 to current computer games, with stops along the way for board games, fingerprint kits, and chess sets; there are photographs (almost all in color) of all the games, and identifications of the publishers. The 40-page booklet costs $30.00 postpaid from Tim (1880 Marsh Lane #1608, Dallas, TX 75287). And Tim has started The Game Masters, a society for collectors of Sherlockian games; e-mail at <mrholmesk@peoplepc.com>.
142. Geocaching is a modern version of the 150-year-old letterboxing, which is a kind of treasure-hunt for those who don't care if the treasure is valuable; geocachers use Global Positioning System (GPS) devices to find the caches. Geocoins were created in 2001; each coin has a unique number, and thus can be tracked from one person to another on the Internet, similar to the dollar bills you may have seen with rubber stamps telling you to go to the website <www.wheresgeorge.com>. Tim Kline reports a Sherlockian geocoin offered by Star-Beam Enterprises ($19.99) at eBay; these are collectibles, of course, and unlikely to turn up in a geocache.
143. "Who is chicsherlock? She is driven by wanderlust, an adventurous spirit that leads her hunting for the elusive." <www.chicsherlock.com> (spotted by John Baesch) is a web-site offering designer jewelry (and only the name is Sherlockian).
144. Something recent about an older film: "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970). According to Maurice Zolotow, in BILLY WILDER IN HOLLYWOOD (1977), In 1963, after the success of "Irma La Douce", Wilder proposed a Technicolor musical with starring Peter O'Toole as Holmes and Peter Sellers as Watson, but was unable to proceed with the project. This month entertainment wires reported that O'Toole, now 75 years old, said that "jealousies, uncertainties, and sexual confusion are not merely the domain of the young," adding that "You can't trust anybody. Billy Wilder once asked me to play Sherlock Holmes without reading the script. He told me I just had to trust him. I said, 'Even if you were Shakespeare, I still wouldn't trust you.'"

145. Apr 07 #1: Ely M. Liebow ("Inspector Gregory") died on Mar. 30. He taught literature at Northeastern Illinois University for more than 40 years, and was famous (or perhaps notorious) for his deadpan humor; his autobiography at his NEIU web-site notes that "I was born at the age of 12 in a body-and-fender shop just this side of the village of Yehupitz. I was handed over (for two submachine guns) to Portuguese sailors seeking a new trade route to Chicago." He was a member of The Hounds of the Baskerville [sic] and many other Sherlockian societies in and near Chicago, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1979 and their Two-Shilling Award in 1991. His excellent biography DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (1982) has been reprinted by the University of Wisconsin Press (286 pp., $26.95), and you can listen to an excellent memorial to Ely on the Internet at Wisconsin Public Radio's <www.wpr.org/webcasting/audioarchives_display.cfm?Code=ua>: a one-hour interview with Ely recorded shortly before his death.
146. The May issue of Miniature Collector Magazine has a well illustrated article by Mary Lou Santovec about miniatures created by Janice Brooks, including her replica of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street (30595 Eight Mile, Livonia, MI 48152 $5.99).
147. Further to the item (Mar 07 #2) about Hollywood pre-production gossip that Russell Crowe is "lined up" to play Holmes in an action-adventure film from Warner Bros., many web-sites later reported that the producers had instead chosen Nicholas Rowe, who starred in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985), as the lead. The story was launched by Scott Monty, and appeared on Apr. 1 in his blog at <www.bakerstreetblog.com>; it was quickly picked up and repeated by people who didn't bother to click on the "Background info" link that brings you to the Museum of Hoaxes list of "The Top 100 April Fool's Day Hoaxes of All Time".
148. Scott Monty's report about Nicholas Rowe wasn't the only April Fool's Day hoax on the Internet, of course; Dan Baines' announcement that he had found the remains of a mummified fairy while walking his dog in rural Derbyshire received considerable publicity, some of which mentioned Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Cottingley fairies. Baines quickly acknowledged the hoax and put the fairy up for auction on eBay, where it was sold for £280. You can see photographs of the fairy at <www.lebanoncircle.co.uk/DeadFairy.htm>.
149. Marsha Pollak reports that Google now offers a news archive search that explores historical newspaper and magazine archives (some of the pay-per-view and some of them free) at <www.google.com/archivesearch>. There are about 26,500 hits for "conan doyle" and about 79,000 for "sherlock holmes".
150. ON THE WRONG TRACK, by Steve Hockensmith (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2007; 292 pp., $23.95), is the second in his series about Old Red and Big Red Amlingmeyer, Montana cowboys who enjoy the Sherlock Holmes stories as they appear in the 1890s, and attempt to solve mysteries on their own; the novel has lots of action, humor, and red herrings. There's a third novel in the works, and perhaps more short stories (three have appeared in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine), and there are amusing samples of Hockensmith's work at his web-site at <www.stevhockensmith.com>.
151. Apr 07 #2: It has been some time since I asked (Mar 01 #4) about Investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have appeared in films, and there have been quite a few added to the list (which now includes both films and television): Curtis Armstrong, Elmer Davis, Al Gregory, Jerry Margolin, John Pforr, Donald Pollock, H. C. Potter, Mary Ellen Rich, Philip Shreffler, Richard B. Shull, Jean Upton, Bill Ward, and (possibly) Julian Wolff. Julie McKuras has found one more: Evan Wilson, who appeared (as himself) in the British television series "Palestine" (produced by Thames Television and broadcast on ITV in 1978).
152. The new CD "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (Feb 07 #7) is delightful, offering a reconstruction of the score, including scenes cut from the final version of the film. Ken Lanza notes that you can see video of a rehearsal at <www.tadlowmusic.com>, and you can hear some of the tracks from the CD at <www.screenarchives.com/title_details.cfm?ID=6676>. Ken also found the Miklós Rózsa Society at <www.members.iinet.com.au/agfam/miklos>.
153. There have been various reports on the Internet about Hercules, the world's biggest dog, according to the Guinness World Records; he's a three-year-old English mastiff who weighs 282 pounds and has a 38-inch neck, and he would certainly make a fine Hound of the Baskervilles.

154. But of course there's a problem: just because it's on the Internet doesn't mean it's true, and Hercules appears to be a hoax. The Urban Legends website at <www.snopes.com/photos/animals/hercules.asp> shows a photograph of Hercules and debunks the story, and the Guinness World Records web-site has no mention of a world's biggest dog.

155. Apr 07 #3: The Russian statue honoring Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson (Nov 06 #7) was to be unveiled on Apr. 27, coinciding with an international festival of crime movies, according to the Russian news agency Novosti; their dispatch noted that the statue "could bring a welcome change to Moscow's sculptural landscape, which is dominated by formal monuments to statesmen, often with a controversial legacy."
156. Further to the report (Feb 07) on the six-sheet poster for "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) at auction at Heritage Auction Galleries last month): it is the first known copy of the poster, and there were five bidders, and it sold for $31,070 (including the buyer's premium). You can see an image at <www.ha.com>.
157. Ken Lanza spotted Indy Magnoli's "Magnoli Collection of Prop Replicas" on the Internet <www.indyprops.com>; two of replicas on display are the passport Sherlock Holmes used in his travels in five of Universal's Rathbone/Bruce films in the 1940s, and the original document recounting the curse of the Baskervilles.
158. Michael Dibdin died on Mar. 30. His first mystery novel was the pastiche THE LAST SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY (1978), and he went on to win a Gold Dagger Award from the Crime Writers' Association in 1988 for RATKING, the first of his series about Italian detective Aurelio Zen.
159. Further to the report on the Peepolykus touring production of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Jan 07 #4), the three-man company has received rave reviews, and they'll open at the Duchess Theatre in London on Apr. 16 for a ten-week run. Their web-site is at <www.peepolykus.com>; you can click on "more show info" to hear a four-minute segment about the show from the BBC Radio 4 program "Today". According to the Daily Telegraph's review, "Only the most po-faced Conan Doyle enthusiast will fail to enjoy this wonderfully barking spoof."
160. Reported: A READING DIARY: A PASSIONATE READER'S REFLECTIONS ON A YEAR OF BOOKS, by Alberto Manguel (New York: Farrar Straus Giroux, 2004; 205 pp., $22.00); with commentary on "The Sign of Four" as one of his books-of-themonth.
161. The manuscript of "The Adventure of the Three Gables" will be sold at auction at Sotheby's in New York on June 21. Previously owned by the Marquess of Donegall and then by Walter Pond, the 31-page manuscript has more than a hundred revisions by Conan Doyle, and is signed and bound in vellum. Sotheby's estimate is $350,000-$500,000. Walter Pond's Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 (a complete copy, with some repairs and restoration) will also be in the sale, estimated at $75,000-$125,000.
162. The spring issue of the Tonga Times (published by the Mini-Tonga Scion Society) has an excellent article about Ted Bergman's miniature of 221B Baker Street (with many photographs of the miniatures that fill five rooms), and other news from the world of Sherlockian miniatures. The newsletter costs $11.00 for three issues/$12.00 to Canada/$14.00 elsewhere) from Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229), and the society has a fine web-site at <www.hometown.aol.com/mini-tongasociety/mini1.htm>.
163. Apr 07 #4: Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson investigate the murder of Lord Westerbrook (in Russian) in an amusing 18-minute animation that was written and directed by Alexander Bubnov and released in 2005; it's now available on the Internet at YouTube, but the best place to view it is at Scott Monty's blog at <www.bakerstreetblog.com>, where you'll find links to the video (subtitled in English), the Russian script, and some preliminary artwork. Scott notes that according to YouTube, the film won the Best Dramaturgy Award and the third-best rating at the Open Russian Festival of Animated Film in 2006; the Mehr News Agency reported (Mar. 2), the awards at the 5th Tehran International Animation Festival included an honorary diploma for the film.
164. Bob Clark died on Apr. 4. Best known as the director of the adolescent sex comedy "Porky's" (1982) and the holiday-favorite adaptation of Jean Shepherd's "A Christmas Story" (1983), he began his film career as an assistant director on 1967 and went on to produce "Murder by Decree" (1979).
165. Francine Kitts notes that the "Solomon/Ex-Lambert" Stradivarius violin went to auction at Christie's in New York on Apr. 2; it sold for $2,732,000 (including the buyer's premium), rather less than the $3,544,000 someone paid for the "Hammer" Stradivarius last year (May 06 #8). Sherlock Holmes said that he paid 55 shillings for his Stradivarius.
166. This year's Canonical Convocation and Caper will take place in Door County, Wis., on Sept. 28-30; there's a web-site at <www.cccdoorcounty.com>, or you can request additional information from Jane Richardson, 3427 East Exchange Street, Crete, IL 60417 (708-672-4303).
167. There's a bit more to the report (Mar 07 #5) that plans are afoot to exhume Harry Houdini's body in hopes of determining whether the magician had been murdered. Houdini's grandnephew George Hardeen was in favor of the exhumation but a few days later the Associated Press reported that Bess Houdini's grandnephews John and Jeffrey Blood have objected, saying that "the family believes this is likely being done to promote sales" of the book by William Kalush and Larry Sloman.
168. THE EMPRESS OF INDIA, by Michael Kurland (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2006; 310 pp., $24.95), is the fourth in his series about Professor Moriarty, and it's well done indeed (as are the first three: THE INFERNAL DEVICE, DEATH BY GASLIGHT, and THE GREAT GAME); in this one, Holmes is hired by the Bank of England to protect a shipment of gold en route to Britain from India and almost immediately disappears, leaving the story to Moriarty (who is of course suspected of doing away with Holmes). Moriarty and Moran wind up on the same ship with the gold, and a nice assortment of intriguing supporting characters, and adventures and surprises. Kurland's web-site is at <www.michaelkurland.com>.
169. <vc.hul.harvard.edu:11080/vc/deliver/home?\_collection=scarlet> is the URL for another example of how interesting digital collections can be. "Studies in Scarlet" (reported by Les Moskowitz) offers images of full text of more than 420 trial narratives, with "a number of trials of the wealthy and renowned," as well as a verbatim account of the trial of William Palmer in 1856 (Sherlock Holmes mentions Palmer in "The Speckled Band").
170. Apr 07 #5: "The courts have decided that almost any act of license--from a scurrilous biography to filmed close-ups of writhing genitalia --is just what the Founding Fathers had in mind to defend when they wrote the First Amendment to the Constitution." That was written forty years ago by Alistair Cooke, in his foreword to SIX MEN (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1977); it's an excellent book, by a skilled writer, with biographical essays on Charles Chaplin, Edward VIII, H. L. Mencken, Adlai Stevenson, Bertrand Russell, and Humphrey Bogart, all of whom Cooke met during his long career as a journalist. And there's comment on Sherlock Holmes, although not where one might expect it; a few years later Cooke was quoted as saying that "The three most memorable men of the twentieth century so far are Winston Churchill, Adolf Hitler and Sherlock Holmes" (Aug 85 #1), but that's not the point Cooke makes in SIX MEN: the two-page discussion of Holmes is in the chapter on Bogart. "It is no accident that Bogart can now be seen as a direct descendant of Sherlock Holmes as are most fictional detectives invented since Conan Doyle, in a moment of unconscious social perception, cast the original mold."
171. I mentioned (Feb 99 #5) but never got round to reviewing VISITORS FROM OZ: THE WILD ADVENTURES OF DOROTHY, THE SCARECROW, AND THE TIN WOODMAN, by Martin Gardner (St. Martin's Press, 1998/St. Martin's Griffin, 2000); the intrepid trio journey through Oz (where they are assisted by Sheerluck Brown, a private-detective bear who wears a deerstalker) and an alternate-universe Wonderland to New York. Gardner does a fine job of

- capturing the style and humor of L. Frank Baum. Both editions are out of print, but readily available from Internet booksellers; don't confuse this book with THE VISITORS FROM OZ, by L. Frank Baum (Hungry Tiger Press, 2005), which is a reprint of Baum's "Queer Visitors from the Marvelous Land of Oz" with additional material that includes new illustrations by Eric Shanower.
172. Further to the report on Mary Russell's MySpace profile (Jan 07 #5), Laurie R. King notes on her blog <www.laurierking.blogspot.com> that Mary now has her own blog <blog.myspace.com/maryrussell>, on which she has some acerbic comments about her literary agent.
173. Iwao Takamoto died on Jan. 10. Takamoto learned to draw in an internment camp, and after World War II went on to a long career in animation with Walt Disney and with Hanna-Barbera, where he created Scooby-Doo in 1969.
174. Scooby-Doo has been seen in Sherlockian costume, on television in "The Hound of the Scoobyvilles" (1983) and on boxes of Nestle Scooby Doo Mystery Pops (in grocery stores now).
175. The author's given name and the title of Kinky Friedman's SPANKING WATSON (New York: Simon & Schuster, 1999; 218 pp., $23.00) might lead one to suspect that something truly interesting is going on, but that's not the case: the Kingster merely sets his Village Irregulars competing against each other to determine who's really Watson to his Sherlock Holmes. Of course it's Ratso who has been Friedman's Watson throughout the mystery series, and we have heard of Ratso before: his real name is Larry Sloman, who is a friend of Friedman and co-author with William Kalush of THE SECRET LIFE OF HOUDINI (Mar 07 #5 and Apr 07 #4).
176. Apr 07 #6: Laurie R. King's speech on "Meeting Mister Holmes" (presented during the January birthday festivities) has been published in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal, which also has Sonia Fetherston's entertaining examination of high fashion in the Canon. The BSJ is published quarterly and costs $26.50 a year (or $29.00 foreign), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331). There's an option offering subscriptions to the BSJ and to the Christmas Annual for $36.50 ($40.00 foreign); the BSJ's web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> also accepts subscriptions, and offers additional material, including papers written by past winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues, and information about Baker Street Irregulars publications.
177. Sorry about that: Charles Prepolec has reported that the Dec. 1970 issue of the comic book CONAN THE BARBARIAN (Mar 07 #2) was written by Roy Thomas, and that the artist likely was Barry Windsor Smith.
178. Johnny Hart died on Apr. 7. He created the comic strip "B.C." in 1958, and achieved syndication in more than 1,300 papers. He also was co-creator of the comic strip "The Wizard of Id" with Brant Parker, and recognized by the National Cartoonist Society five times, including the Reuben Award as cartoonist of the year in 1968. This "B.C." strip appeared on June 22, 1982.
179. Brant Parker died on Apr. 15. He created the widely-syndicated comic strip "The Wizard of Id" with Johnny Hart in 1964, and collaborated with others on the strips "Crock" and "Goosemeyer". He won seven awards from the National Cartoonists Society, including their Reuben Award in 1984 and their Elzie Segar Award in 1986. This "Crock" strip ran on Feb. 6, 1981.
180. May 07 #1: William Safire's column "On Language" in the N.Y. Times Magazine is entertaining and instructive, and occasionally Sherlockian or Doylean. On Apr. 22 he discussed the word "varmint" and cited various usages, including its appearance "in a 1907 A. Conan Doyle story as an adjective: 'thin, ascetic, varminty'." So: whom did he describe as varminty?
181. Further to the report (Jan 07 #3) about the copy of Conan Doyle's THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT brought to the Antarctic by Capt. Robert Falcon Scott (and it's still there, preserved in the small hut from which he launched his ill-fated attempt to reach the South Pole), the July issue of British Heritage has photographs of the hut, including one showing a visit by Princess Anne in 2003, when she launched a £10 million preservation appeal.
182. It has been quite a while since I mentioned London Walks (Jul 83 #1); they are still in business, now with the name the Original London Walks, and a web-site at <www.walks.com>; they offer some interesting Sherlockian walks, and Ripper expert Donald Rumbelow leading a walk through "Jack the Ripper's Haunts".
183. "The Fat Hound of the Baskervilles" was the headline on a story in the [London] Daily Mail (Apr. 10, 2006). "As spaniels go," the paper reported, "he is hardly a springer. In fact, weighing nearly seven stones [that's 98 pounds], Ashley is at best a sloucher. Given his girth, walkies can be only a short waddle for the dog whose life was in danger after he was fed huge amounts of sausages, bacon, and roast dinners." Eight-year-old Ashley has been rescued by Brenda Baskerville, who runs a dog-grooming shop in Cheshire and has limited Ashley to a strict diet: low-fat dog food and no treats between meals.
184. There were many Sherlockian nominees for Edgars from the Mystery Writers of America (Jan 07 #5); the awards were announced at the MWA annual dinner on Apr. 26. E. J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR won for best critical/biographical, and Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" won for best play. The nominees and winners are listed at the MWA web-site <www.mysterywriters.org>.
185. Cicada is an interesting magazine for ages 14 and up; the November-December 2006 issue has "The Blue Carbuncle" with attractive black-and-white illustrations by David Wyatt. $9.95 postpaid; Box 9304, La Salle, IN 61301.
186. "Can Sherlock Holmes Restore the Reputation of Our Bungling Spies?" was the headline on a story in the Evening Standard (Apr. 14), spotted by Jon Lellenberg. Officers from MI5 and MI6 and civil servants dealing with intelligence material are being sent to a course at King's College in London, and the reading list includes "A Scandal in Bohemia" (in which Holmes warns not to "twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts.")
187. May 07 #2: Steve Rothman has curated an exhibition on "Thinking about Haverford & Christopher Morley" at the Magill Library at Haverford College in Pennsylvania; Morley grew up on Haverford's campus, and the exhibition, which runs through Sept. 30, commemorates of 50th anniversary of the death of the "local boy made good." Christopher Morley was the founder of The Baker Street Irregulars, and THE STANDARD DOYLE COMPANY: CHRISTOPHER MORLEY ON SHERLOCK HOLMES (1990), edited and with an Introduction by Steve, is still in print from Fordham University Press ($30.00).
188. Who was "thin, ascetic, varminty"? The "unspeakable Louis" (better known as Louis XI, fervent adversary of Charles the Bold), in the discussion of Sir Walter Scott's QUENTIN DURWARD in Conan Doyle's THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR (and yes, it's a book rather than a story).
189. Stylometry (the study of linguistic style) has been used for centuries to determine who wrote what, and A. Q. Morton may have been the first person to apply stylometry to Sherlock Holmes stories, in 1978 (he compared a pastiche written by Nicholas Utechin and Austin Mitchelson with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories). Of course it's all much easier in the computer age: Peter Smith presented a paper on "Stylometric Analysis Using Discriminant Analysis: A Study of Sherlock Holmes Stories" at a conference in Tuebingen in 2002. Smith investigated whether there is any evidence to support the thesis that Conan Doyle may not have written all of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and concluded "there is absolutely no support for this." The URL for his paper is <www.uni-tuebingen.de/cgi-bin/abs/abs?propid=27>.

190. Sylvia Agnew opened her "Legend of the Hound Project" two years ago (Aug 05 #3), and she now offers a "Baskerville Dining Experience" at Lafter Hall, near Princetown on Dartmoor. According to a story in the Plymouth Western Morning News (May 5), the evening includes an atmospheric carriage ride, a five-course dinner with Sherlock Holmes, and mystery. More information is available at her web-site <www.baskervillecarriages.co.uk/index.php?tab=6>, with links to YouTube video.
191. Further to the item on the National Library of Scotland's plans to acquire the John Murray archives (Feb 05 #5), the Library won a £17.7 million grant from the national lottery, and received more from the Scottish Executive, but still needs to raise £6.5 million to complete the purchase. Actor Sean Connery and author Ian Rankin have now joined the campaign, and Connery has described the archives as being of "world class importance". The archives include the company's correspondence with its authors, one of whom was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
192. Gyles Brandreth has written a novel OSCAR WILDE AND THE CANDLELIGHT MURDERS (London: John Murray, 2007; 352 pp., £12.99), and in an article in the Daily Telegraph (May 6) mentioned the meeting between Wilde and Conan Doyle at the Langham Hotel in 1889, and made an intriguing point: when Brandreth was in his early teens he knew John Badley, who had been a friend of Wilde; according to Brandreth, "Badley told me that he and Wilde had both been members of an occasional dining society, the Socrates Club. When Conan Doyle, four years after his first meeting with Wilde, introduced his readers to Holmes' elder brother (in The Greek Interpreter), he set him in an armchair in a gentlemen's club named after another Greek philosopher, Diogenes."

193. May 07 #3: The new issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) with a history of The Hansom Wheels and photographs from a recent meeting, and from "A Gathering of Southern Sherlockians", and as always offers of interesting Sherlockian merchandise; the URL is <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times07-5.htm>, and you can request an e-mail subscription at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
194. Bouchercon is a long-established world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, and named in honor of Anthony Boucher; Bouchercon 38 will be in Anchorage on Sept. 27-30, 2007 <www.bouchercon2007.com>, Bouchercon 39 is in Baltimore on Oct. 9-11, 2008 <www.bouchercon2008.blogspot.com>, and Bouchercon 40 will be in Indianapolis on (tentatively) Sept. 10-13, 2009.
195. Those who fondly remember "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" will surely want to visit The Unofficial Kuklapolitan Web Page at <www.kukla.tv>. Bill Vande Water reports that the URL <www.kukla.tv/magic.html> takes you to the "Magic Gift of Life" in which Helen Bolstad reports that Burr Tillstrom qualified for membership in the Mystery Writers of America thanks to Ollie's fondness for playing "detec-a-tive", and once went to a party honoring Anthony Boucher, where "shortly the two retired to a quiet corner, first, to swap Sherlock Holmes opinions, and second, to discuss learnedly plans for a space ship."
196. Reported: David Timson's excellent readings of the Canon for Naxos Audiobooks have extended to THE VALLEY OF FEAR on five CDs (£19.99/$34.98); the Naxos web-site <www.naxosaudiobooks.com> offers an opportunity to listen to a sample of the recording, and an MP3 download (£11.91).
197. If you're planning to attend the "Victorian Secrets and Edwardian Enigmas" conference in Minneapolis (and there's still time to register), the University of Minnesota Showboat Players are presenting Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" this summer, and Friday, July 6, will be the night to see it; their web-site <www.showboat.umn.edu/sherlock.html> has more information (and they offer dinner), and you can buy tickets at the web-site or by calling the box office (651-227-1100). The conference web-site URL is <www.tc.umn.edu/~bergq003/norwegianexplorers/2007\_conference.html>.
198. The new catalog from the BBC America Shop (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043) (800-898-4921) <www.bbcamericashop.com> has more new Sherlockian items: a second Sherlock Holmes Marble Coaster Set ($49.98) with four more Paget illustrations on coasters cut from Botticino marble imported from Verona, and a set of Victorian Binoculars ($99.98) with a tripod connection and a tripod (the catalog notes that Holmes used Watson's "very excellent field-glass" during the events recorded in "Silver Blaze").
199. Further to the item (Oct 06 #1) about Jack L. Herman's play "The Unexpected Return of Sherlock Holmes" having been plagiarized from David Belke's "The Reluctant Resurrection of Sherlock Holmes" (1992), David Staples' interesting and amusing article in the Edmonton Journal (May 6) reveals that Herman Belke $2500 in an out-of-court settlement. And what does Herman do when he isn't plagiarizing? He's a police officer in Portage County, Ohio, and was (until he was placed on paid administrative leave pending an investigation of his theft of intellectual property) the detective in charge of the sheriff's concealed-weapons permits.

200. May 07 #4: The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Bob Katz's "100 Years Ago" tribute to THE CROXLEY MASTER (accompanied by a nice story about his Bar Mitzvah), Tim Johnson's report on a library benefit in Savannah that included a visit by Sherlock Holmes, and news from and about the collections; a copy of the newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
201. SHERLOCK HOLMES: TA'ALUMAT HABALASH BEN HA'ALMAVET, by Michael Handalzalts (Tel Aviv: Mapa Books, 2007; 170 pp., NIS 64) is an attempt (according to a review by Dror Mishani in Haaretz) to solve "one of the greatest mysteries in the history of detective fiction and European literature over the last two hundred years: the secret of the success of Arthur Conan Doyle's London sleuth." The book is in Hebrew, and the title translates into English as SHERLOCK HOLMES: HOW REAL CAN A LEGEND BE.
202. Jerry Margolin notes that Debby Applegate has won a Pulitzer Prize for biography for her THE MOST FAMOUS MAN IN AMERICA: THE BIOGRAPHY OF HENRY WARD BEECHER (Jul 06 #1); Beecher's unframed portrait stood upon the top of Watson's books. Applegate spoke on "Henry Ward Beecher and Victorian America" at Amherst College last year, and you can listen to her one-hour lecture at <www.amherst.edu/~pubaff/events\_multimedia/events/2006-09-25/applegate/>.
203. "As far as I know," Watson wrote (in "The Final Problem"), "there have been only three accounts in the public press: that in the Journal de Geneve on May 6th, 1891, the Reuter's dispatch in the English papers on May 7th, and finally the recent letters to which I have alluded." The 156-year-old news service agreed this month to be acquired by Thomson Corp. for $17.24 billion. The new company will be called Thomson-Reuters Corp., and it will be the world's largest provider of financial market data and trading systems to investing professionals.
204. Members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London celebrated Conan Doyle's birthday on May 22 with members of the cast of the Peepolykus production of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Duchess Theatre (Apr 07 #3); there's a picture at <www.whatsonstage.com/index.php?pg=20/&story=E8821179993698>. And there's still time to see the play, which closes on June 23.
205. Lisa Polisar's THE GHOST OF MARY PRAIRIE (Albuquerque: Univ. of New Mexico Press, 2006; 273 pp., $18.95) is a ghost story and a mystery, set in rural southern Oklahoma in 1961 and well written and nicely told. The protagonist is 15-year-old Jacob Leeds, who enjoys the Sherlock Holmes stories, and quotes from them from time to time.
206. LOCKED UP, an anthology edited by Sue Pike (Ottawa: Deadlock Press, 2007; 278 pp., CA$15.95), offers "tales and mystery and mischance" along the Rideau Canal Waterway, which runs from Kingston to Ottawa and is celebrating its 175 anniversary this year; the stories are interesting, and especially

Peter Calamai's "The Riddle of the Rideau Rifles" (set in 1894 and featuring a familiar investigator named Sigerson). Amazon may not have the book yet, but it's available from Sleuth of Baker Street, 1600 Bayview Avenue, Toronto, ON M4G 3B7, Canada <www.sleuthofbakerstreet.com>.

207. May 07 #5: The Isle of Man works hard to attract tourists and film companies to the island; the web-site at <www.isleofmanfilm.com> has links that include a "film & television catalogue" with a listing for the Roxburgh/Hart "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002), filmed in Glen Maye, Jurby and Druidale. An article in the Daily Telegraph (May 12) lists locations elsewhere for films and television series featuring Inspector Morse, Miss Marple, Poirot, Foyle, and Kingdom.
208. The Friends of Gillette Castle State Park (67 River Road, East Haddam, CT 06423 <www.friendsofgillettecastle.org> publish the Gillette Gazette; the April issue has a two-page article "Tyke and Teddie Star as Will and Helen" (that's Tyke and Teddie Niver) and a report on plans to restore Gillette's electric locomotive. Membership costs $20.00 a year.
209. Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley have edited ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, due from HarperCollins in Britain in September (£25.00) and from Penguin in the U.S. in November ($37.95), and it's a book that Doyleans and Sherlockians will welcome: it's an annotated and illustrated collection of letters that Conan Doyle wrote to his mother and other members of his family, starting in 1867, when he left home to attend boarding school. The letters were among the family papers that were locked away for decades because of family disagreements; Dame Jean Conan Doyle received the letters shortly before her death and then bequeathed them to the British Library. Jon notes that the book reads like a far more candid autobiography than his MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES ("which was long on the adventures, but rather guarded where memories were concerned"), and he offers a teaser for Sherlockians: "what happened in October 1890 to make Conan Doyle resurrect Sherlock Holmes in short stories." Jon also notes that everyone should have both editions of the book, because there will be differences.
210. Randall Stock has an excellent web-page, with much more information about ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, at "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" at <members.aol.com/shbest/ref/conan-doyle-life-letters.htm#/letters>.
211. The second edition of Ely M. Liebow's splendid biography DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (Apr 07 #1) has a British distributor, Roger Johnson has noted: the Popular Press, 3 Henrietta Street, London WC2E 8LU, England (£16.50), and of course it's also available at <www.amazon.co.uk>.
212. Lee Shackelford's play "Holmes & Watson" was performed last year in Maryland (Oct 06 #4), offering an interesting look at the relationship between Holmes and Watson after Holmes' return to London from the Great Hiatus, and some surprises; the latest version of the script is now available (Charleston: BookSurge, 2007; 131 pp., $14.95), with helpful production notes.
213. Hans-Uno Bengtsson died on May 18. He was Assistant Professor of Theoretical Physics at Lund University in Sweden, a former Assistant Associate Professor at UCLA (where he won the "outstanding teacher" award three years in a row), and an enthusiastic Sherlockian: his articles appeared in The Baker Street Journal in the 1980s and 1990s, and his analysis of "The Depth Which the Parsley Had Sunk into the Butter" (which was translated into English in the recent SCANDINAVIA AND SHERLOCK HOLMES) is a fine example of his application of physics to Canonical problems.

214. May 07 #6: One can find Sherlock everywhere, as Mycroft almost said, and while it might be difficult, there tend to be connections from just about anything to Holmes or Conan Doyle. As at Hearst Castle, at San Simeon in southern California, where one can visit the library of William Randolph Hearst, who collected books and manuscripts as well as furniture and tapestries and paintings. His manuscripts were sold in the 1940s, when the Hearst Corp. was in financial difficulties, and his holdings appear to have included "The Abbey Grange", Charles Augustus Milverton", "The Missing Three-Quarter", and "The Valley of Fear", plus "How the Brigadier Took the Field Against the Marshal Millefleurs", "The Last Galley", "The Marriage of the Brigadier", "Michal Clark", "The Leather Funnel", "The Refugees", "Rodney Stone", and "The Striped Chest". One of the best, and by far the most amusing, books about Hearst is Marion Davies' THE TIMES WE HAD: LIFE WITH WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST; she began recording notes for her memoirs in 1951, a few months before Hearst died, and the book was published in 1975 and is still in print in a paperback reprint. Basil Rathbone's in the book, but not as Holmes (he and Ouida came to one of Hearst's costume parties, with Rathbone dressed as the French ambassador). Marion Davies had a delightful sense of humor, about herself and others, and it shows in the book.
215. Martin Pope's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Dangerous Game" (an adaption of "The Illustrious Client") was performed in Long Beach (Nov 03 #4), and revived at the Maplewood Barn in Columbia, Mo., last year; according to a report at PLAYBACK:stl (May 29), Pope has plans to write a five-play cycle of Holmes plays, "culminating in a showdown between Holmes and Jack the Ripper," and is working on forming a theater company in Los Angeles, which he hopes will be the home for the series.
216. "My Dear Watson" was a three-act play written by Edward Chodorov in 1941; producer Oscar Serlin is reported to have offered the r"le of Watson to Nigel Bruce; Otto L. Preminger then acquired the play, offering the r"le of Holmes to Basil Rathbone and Brian Aherne; in March 1942, Philip Merivale was under consideration at Holmes, and Melville Cooper at Watson, but as Rathbone later wrote to Vincent Starrett, Adrian Conan Doyle was disgusted with the play and "has absolutely forbidden its production." Susan Dahlinger reports that the William Reese Company (409 Temple Street, New Haven, CT 06511) <www.biblio.com/books/70936591.html> is offering a mimeographed typescript of the play for $500.
217. And a reminder: the Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will dine with the Red Circle of Washington on Monday, June 25, at the National Press Club in Washington; drinks at 6:30 and dinner at 7:30, and everyone is welcome. Dinner will cost $41.00 including tax and tip, and there will be a cash bar and a choice of entrees (salmon, beef, or vegetarian plate). Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson will be dining with us, and there will be toasts and informal presentations by some of the visitors and locals. The deadline for reservations is Monday, June 18th (by phone) or Thursday, June 21st (by e-mail); payment in advance is neither requested nor required, but please specify your choice of entree when making your reservations.

218. Jun 07 #1: The British publisher of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley) reports that there will be readings from the book broadcast by BBC Radio 4 as its "book of the week" in five 15-minute episodes the week of Sept. 24-28; the program airs on the Internet at <www.bbc.co.uk/radio4/arts/book\_week.shtml>, and you can "listen live" or "listen again" for six days afterward.
219. On Aug. 4, 2004, not long after it was revealed that the Richard Lancelyn Green collection, the Portsmouth News reported that pressure was mounting on the city council to have a building worthy of the collection, and "city museum boss" Sarah Quail said that "I'm absolutely certain that a collection like this could act as a catalyst for funding." Now (May 30) the paper has reported that "culture chiefs in Portsmouth are under fire for allowing the world's largest private collection of Sherlock Holmes memorabilia to collect dust." Simon Bosher, Tory spokesman for economic regeneration, said "we're sitting on a cash cow. It's like a goldmine but we've done nothing but stick it away in a dusty attic." And reporter Emily Pykett wrote "It is feared Portsmouth has broken the terms of the will which stipulated the collection should be catalogued in two years," adding that "This leaves the - city open to a potential legal challenge from museums in Oxford and Edinburgh, which stood to get the collection if Portsmouth turned it down." Pykett also reported that the council wants a new super-museum to house the collection, "which could attract up to 250,000 new visitors a year."

220. Let's see: if the new super-museum were open six days a week for 52 weeks, that's 312 days. That's just over 801 visitors a day (the calculation is a simple one), which is far more than visit to collections in Minneapolis and Toronto. The BBC did a bit more research, and reported the next day that Neil McCaw, academic director of the collection, said that there were more than 40,000 items in the collection, all of them uncatalogued when it came to Portsmouth; the vast majority have been catalogued since then, and work continues. Scirard Lancelyn Green, Richard's brother and the executor of his will, said that Richard's family was "delighted" with the way the city council had dealt with the connection.
221. The Baker Street Irregulars' running of The Silver Blaze has been held at Jamaica, Aqueduct, Belmont, and New York (Wayne B. Swift wrote an excellent history of the races in The Baker Street Journal's Christmas Annual 2000); Jamaica was closed and torn down by the end of the 1950s, and now N.Y. governor Eliot Spitzer has proposed that Aqueduct be closed and the land sold to developers. According to a report in the N.Y. Times (May 20), Belmont would be converted and run nearly year-round, and racing would continue at Saratoga, which now has a six-week summer season and was the venue for The Silver Blaze in 2006.
222. The first issue of Excursionz Magazine has a well illustrated cover story on Gillette Castle (and one of the visitors shown in the cover photograph is a motorcyclist, which would please William Gillette), and much more information about tourist attractions in the area. $3.00 postpaid from Excursionz Magazine, c/o Larry Kalbfeld, 1300 Boston Post Road, Guilford, CT 06437 <www.excursionzmagazine.com>.
223. Jun 07 #2: James E. Starrs edited THE NOISELESS TENOR: THE BICYCLE IN LITERATURE (1982) (an anthology that included "The Priory School" and two excerpts from Christopher Morley), but he's much better known for the work that resulted in A VOICE FOR THE DEAD: A FORENSIC INVESTIGATOR'S PURSUIT OF THE TRUTH IN THE GRAVE (New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 2005; 284 pp., $24.95) (New York: Berkeley, 2006; 304 pp., $14.00). The book covers his exhumations and research into the cases of Alferd Packer, Jesse James, and others, and of course he mentions Sherlock Holmes. Of special interest (in view of current proposals to exhume B. Fletcher Robinson) are the "desiderata for an exhumation" that Starrs discusses in his Introduction (and you can read what he has to say at <www.amazon.com> by using their "search inside" feature and searching for "desiderata").
224. "On the edge of a jutting pinnacle, three or four hundred feet above him, there stood a creature somewhat resembling a sheep in appearance, but armed with a pair of gigantic horns." ("A Study in Scarlet"). Our postage rates have gone up, and so have ink-on-paper rates for this newsletter; the new 17c stamp for additional first-class ounces shows a bighorn sheep. The bighorn is popular with the U.S. Postal Service, having been shown on six stamps since 1972, and it was included on an endangered species set issued by the United Nations in 2002.
225. There's no mention of a murderous attack on Sherlock Holmes in a recent article about the Cafe Royal in the Sunday Express (Apr. 8), kindly forwarded by John Baesch, but there's some interesting news: the Crown Estate (that's Her Majesty's property company) plans to sell the lease on the eight-story, 21-suite restaurant as part of a plan to revitalize the area around Regent Street and Piccadilly Circus. The asking price for the lease will be £80 million, according to the paper, and the "smart money" is on the restaurant being turned into a luxury hotel.
226. As promised earlier (Sep 06 #5), Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle are indeed mentioned in Daniel Stashower's THE BEAUTIFUL CIGAR GIRL: MARY ROGERS, EDGAR ALLAN POE, AND THE INVENTION OF MURDER (New York: Dutton, 2006; 336 pp., $25.95); it's a well written account of Poe's life and the events that led to "The Mystery of Marie Roget"; you can read the prologue and see some illustrations at his web-site at <www.stashower.com>.
227. The first issue of QuinCahier (May 2007) has arrived from the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France, 24 pages all in color (and all in French), with news and scholarship and excellent artwork by Jean-Pierre Cagnat; 8 euros postpaid to France, 10 euros to Europe, and 12 euros elsewhere (36 avenue Jean-Jaures, 63500 Issoire, France). You can see what it looks like at the society's web-site <www.sshf.com>, and order there with PayPal.
228. Barrie Roberts died on June 10. He was a criminal lawyer, an accomplished musician specializing in folk music, and a mystery writer, with many novels and short stories to his credit. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE AMERICAN ANGELS (Sutton: Severn House, 2007; 185 pp., £18.99) (and New York: Severn House, $28.95), is the 9th in his series of novel-length pastiches; it begins in London and moves to Scotland, with Holmes and Watson investigating a possible Jacobite conspiracy and searching for golden lost treasure.
229. Jun 07 #3: I'm not sure how common it is for the names of members of The Baker Street Irregulars to be used for characters in works of fiction, but Bud Livingston reports Otto Penzler as a Waffen SS tank commander for Rommel in Africa in Elmore Leonard's UP IN HONEY'S ROOM (2007). Les Klinger is one of two members of the BSI who can be found as characters in Laurie R. King's THE ART OF DETECTION (2006), and Mike Whelan appears in Jerry Neal Williamson's THE TULPA (1981).
230. Gayle Harris has forwarded news of a new on-line archive: the University of London Research Library Services <archives.ulrls.lon.ac.uk>. A search for "conan doyle" [without quotes] turns up 67 records, all apparently from the papers of psychic researcher Harry Price.
231. Sherlock Holmes is alive and well, and speaking Hindi, on Pogo, the number two kids' television channel in India. Pogo is broadcasting Granada's "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" in English and Hindi, with Tom Alter and Aanjan Srivastav dubbing the voices of Holmes and Watson.
232. The second issue of Bob Byrne's "Baker Street Essays" is available at his web-site <www.holmesonscreen.com>, with 16 pages of discussion of eight of the Canonical cases. And the third issue of The Solar Pons Gazette (June 2007) is available at Bob's <www.solarpons.com>; the on-line newsletter has 30 pages, with an excellent article by Roger Johnson (president of The Solar Pons Society of London), reprints from the Pontine writings of Edgar W. Smith, A. E. van Vogt, and Cecil Ryder, and much more. Earlier issues of the newsletter also are available at the web-site.
233. Richard Roberts has an amusing teaser for his book RAGS TO RICHES: THE CASE OF THE HIRE SHOP FIEND (Dec 06 #3) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=CRUJObnIsiY> (the teaser shows the book's Sherlockian artwork).
234. "Our coveted Sherlock Holmes Award," Jon Henley reported in the Guardian on Mar. 27, "goes to the Greater Manchester police, who, having been told by several witnesses that suspected thief Aaron Williams repeatedly screamed 'Don't let them take me,' as three men with knives dragged him from a security van outside Salford magistrates court, explained that they had 'not ruled out the possibility that Mr. Williams was taken against his will.'"
235. Will Thomas' THE HELLFIRE CONSPIRACY (New York: Touchstone/Simon & Schuster, 2007; 316 pp., $24.00 cloth/$14.00 paper/$9.99 eBook) is the fourth in his Victorian mystery series featuring Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant Thomas Llewellyn. As with the preceding novels, it's well written, with interesting characters and an imaginative plot, and appropriate late-Victorian atmosphere.
236. Charles Press' PARODIES AND PASTICHES BUZZING 'ROUND SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Battered Silicon Dispatch Box Press, 2006; 173 pp., US$21.00 postpaid) is an entertaining examination of the imitations published while Conan Doyle was alive, with excerpts and a bibliography and history. And with humor: I'm sure this is the first Sherlockian book in which the first chapter begins with a quote (and an appropriate quote) from Jimmy Durante; signed (or inscribed) copies are available ($15.00 postpaid) from the author at 6291 Whiskey Creek, New Era, MI 49445.

237. Jun 07 #4: The murder of Alexander Litvinenko in Britain, perhaps by Andrei Lugovoi, has brought a reminder of "The Valley of Fear": the Regnum News Service reported from Russia (June 6) that Lugovoi claimed that Litvinenko, in an attempt to recruit him to work for British intelligence, gave him Yevgeny Grishkovets' novel RUBASHKA to use as a "means for secure connection." The proposal was to use the novel for a book code, and a Russian specialist in cryptography noted that the book code still is popular among criminals and celebrities; as for British intelligence using a book code, he explained, it reminded him of "the times of Sherlock Holmes." "It is rather strange," the expert added, that "Lugo-voi did not mention a book by Conan Doyle." The Regnum headline read: "Litvinenko Brought British Special Services into the Time of Sherlock Holmes."
238. Israel Shenker died on June 9. He was a correspondent for Time, and then a reporter for the N.Y. Times, and, according to Margalit Fox in her obituary for Shenker, he was "a scholar trapped in a newsman's body" who was known to readers of the papers "or his vast erudition and sly, subversive wit." In 1974 when the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of William Gillette's play arrived in New York, Shenker's article "Sherlock Holmes Craze Is Far from Elementary" offered readers a warm and enthusiastic view of the Sherlockian world.
239. The Wessex Press sponsored its first "From Gillette to Brett" conference in 2003, devoted to Sherlock Holmes on stage, screen, radio, and television, and Steve Doyle reports that "From Gillette to Brett II" will be held Nov. 16-18 at the Indianapolis Hilton North Hotel in Indianapolis. The lists of speakers includes special-guest Jeremy Paul, who wrote many of the Granada series scripts, and the play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes". The deadline for reservations is Oct. 5, and detailed information is available from the Wessex Press (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268) <www.wessexpress.com>. A video advertisement can be seen at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=xLP2OJ5hge0>.
240. Belgium has a portrait of Lord Robert Baden-Powell on a postage stamp honoring the centenary of the founding of Scouting. Baden-Powell is mentioned in Conan Doyle's history THE GREAT BOER WAR, and Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes are mentioned in Baden-Powell's SCOUTING FOR BOYS.
241. Basil Rathbone was an officer in the 10th (Scottish) Battalion of the King's (Liverpool) Regiment during World War I, and was awarded the Military Cross for "daring and resource" on patrol; according to an article in the Liverpool Daily Post (June 11), the citation read: "Lieutenant Rathbone volunteered to go out on daylight patrol, and on each occasion, brought back in-valuable information regarding enemy's posts, and the exact position and condition of the wire. On 26 July, when on the enemy's side of the wire, he came face to face with a German. He shot the German, but this alarmed two neighbouring posts, and they at once opened a heavy fire with two machine guns. Despite the enemy fire, Lieutenant Rathbone got his three men and himself through the enemy wire and back to our lines. The result of his patrolling was to pin down exactly where the enemy posts were, and how they were held, while inflicting casualties on the enemy at no loss to his own men. Lieutenant Rathbone has always shown a great keenness in patrol work both by day and by night."
242. Jun 07 #5: Ken Lanza spotted the report in Variety (June 12): "Gold Circle Films has picked up feature rights to Thomas Wheeler's fantasyadventure 'The Arcanum' out of turnaround from Miramax." Miramax optioned the story in 1999 along with the publishing rights, and the novel was published in 2004 (Aug 04 #2). The novel "is set in 1919 and follows the titular secret society comprising the era's leading occult investigators--Arthur Conan Doyle, Harry Houdini, H. P. Lovecraft, and Marie Laveau--as they battle demons descending on New York City." Gold Circle's president Paul Brooks said that "We see this as a potential franchise property."
243. "What do Van Gogh, Iron Chef Morimoto, Sherlock Holmes, and Tai Shan have in common?"
244. Malice Domestic XX will be held at the Crystal City Marriott in Arlington, Va., on Apr. 25-27, 2008, featuring Lindsey Davis as international guest of honor, Charlene Harris as guest of honor, a lifetime achievement award for Peter Lovesey, and Daniel Stashower as the toastmaster; the ghosts of honor will be all those so honored in past years (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was the ghost of honor in 2000). More information is available from the convention (Box 8007, Gaithersburg, MD 20898) <www.malicedomestic.org>.
245. Laurie R. King has launched the Laurie R. King Virtual Book Club ("a book club where readers don't have to bring cookies, hire a baby sitter, or even change out of their pajamas") at <www.laurierking.com/vbulletin>. The club will discuss one novel a month, and there will be essays from Laurie about the book, and contests and drawings. A GRAVE TALENT was discussed in June, and THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE will be discussed in July. There is a new URL for Laurie's blog <www.laurierking.com/wp.php>, and Mary Russell's blog will be found at <www.myspace.com/maryrussell>.
246. And there's an incentive for joining Laurie's Virtual Book Club: there will be a drawing in mid-July for a signed (and inscribed, on request) copy of the first edition of THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE; you can find signed copies offered by Internet book dealers for $300 and up.
247. The June 11 issue of The New Yorker had an interesting article written by D. T. Max about the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas in Austin. "Ransom, who earned the nickname the Great Aquisitor, not only bought these writers' manuscripts and letters, he tried to gather everything from baby book to death mask," Max reports. As a result, the Center has Arthur Conan Doyle's undershirts. The article may still be on-line at <www.newyorker.com/reporting/2007/06/11/070611fa\_fact\_max>.
248. "Victorian Secrets and Edwardian Enigmas: The Riddles of the Rooms of Baker Street" is the title of an exhibition that has just opened in the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis; the exhibition is open through Aug. 20, and features the miniature that Dorothy Rowe Shaw created for her husband John Bennett Shaw, the full-scale sitting-room that Allen Mackler created for his own home and bequeathed to the University, and other material from the Special Collections. Registration for the Norwegian Explorers' conference on July 6-8 has now closed; if you aren't going, you can get an idea of what you'll miss at the conference web-site at <www.tc.umn.edu/~bergq003/norwegianexplorers/2007\_conference.html>.

249. Jun 07 #6: "What do Van Gogh, Iron Chef Morimoto, Sherlock Holmes, and Tai Shan have in common?" is the question on an envelope mailed by the Smithsonian Associates. Needless to say, they've all been subjects of presentations at Smithsonian Associates events, and you can find more information about the program at <www.smithsonianassociates.org/join>.
250. And what do you get when you cross Father Christmas with Sherlock Holmes?
251. I suggested some years ago (May 96 #5) that Sherlockians visiting San Diego might wish to stay at the Hotel del Coronado (which is the world's largest wooden hotel, carefully preserved and registered as a national landmark) in the room where William Gillette stayed in December 1898, when he settled in to write his play "Sherlock Holmes". I'm happy to report that the room is quite comfortable, with a balcony overlooking the hotel's courtyard (rather than the ocean), and considerably more expensive than it was in 1898.
252. People who spend much time on the Internet have surely encountered Internet slang, which is now widely used in text-messaging: abbreviations such as u, brb, lol, and omg. Peter Ashman says this suggests a line of Holmes-Watson text messages: tga!, ykmm, and ysbdydno. And for those who don't

- spend much (or no) time on the Internet, the first set of abbreviations are shorthand for you, be right back, laughing out loud, and oh my god. You get to figure out the Holmes-Watson text messages on your own.
253. David Kotin (manager of special collections, archives, and digital collections at the Toronto Public Library) plans to retire in July, after a long career at the library and many years of help the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, and to Sherlockians and Doyleans everywhere. Collections such as the one in Toronto can't survive without strong support from within the library system, and David's efforts have been valuable indeed. His successor will be Mary Rae Schantz, who is currently manager of the library's performing arts & languages, periodicals & newspapers, and urban affairs departments.
254. <www.ihearofsherlock.com> is the URL for Scott Monty and Burt Wolder's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" twice-monthly 30-minute podcast. A podcast is one of the wonders of modern technology: audio on demand, or radio for your computer; you can listen on the Internet, or download broadcasts to your PC or iPod, or subscribe to have the podcast delivered by e-mail. The first of the podcasts is an interesting conversation between Scott and Burt; future podcasts will include guests.
255. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (it won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America) is scheduled at the Fulton Theatre in Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 18 to Nov. 4. The box office address: 12 North Prince Street, Lancaster, PA 17608 (717-397-7425) <www.thefulton.org>.
256. Walter Pond's copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 sold for $156,000 (including the buyer's premium) at Sotheby's in New York on June 21, setting a new record for Beeton's; the Insley Blair copy sold for $153,600 in Dec. 2004. Pond's manuscript of "The Adventure of the Three Gables" (estimated at $350,000-$500,000) wasn't sold when bids didn't reach the seller's reserve. Details (and illustrations) are available at Randall Stock's website <www.members.aol.com/\_ht\_a/shbest/ref/three-gables-sothebys.htm>.

257. Jun 07 #7: There's still no word on whether or when the British television mini-series "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" (which was broadcast by BBC-1 on Mar. 25 and Apr. 1) will be seen in the United States, but you've likely seen Jonathan Pryce (Sherlock Holmes) in one or more of the "Pirates of the Caribbean" films; he has played Governor Weatherby Swan (Elizabeth Swan's father) in all of them. Maggie Schpak's handiwork can also be seen in the films: she created Capt. Jack Sparrow's rings, and jewelry and ornamentation worn by other characters in the films.
258. And what do you get when you cross Father Christmas with Sherlock Holmes? Santa Clues. According to the Sunday Mirror (Dec. 24, 2006), that's one of the ten worst puns found by researchers in Christmas crackers in Britain.
259. Boris Yeltsin died on Apr. 23. He was Russia's first freely elected president, and became the leader of post-Soviet Russian. According to the Sherlock Holmes Gazette (spring 1992), the Times reported just before Christmas that Yeltsin was an ardent admirer of Sherlock Holmes, and had ordered from a London store sweaters with a Sherlock Holmes logo for himself and Mikhail Gorbachev.
260. It was Holmes vs. Holmes in the battle for this year's Tony Award for best performance by a leading actor in a play: Frank Langella was nominated for "Frost/Nixon" and Christopher Plummer for "Inherit the Wind". Langella won the award for his performance as Nixon.
261. Don Terras has noted Daniel T. Willingham's article "Critical Thinking: Why Is It So Hard to Teach?" in the summer issue of American Educator, with a sidebar by the editors asking "Did Sherlock Holmes Take a Course in Critical Thinking?" (they suggest that "no one better exemplifies the power of broad, deep knowledge in driving critical thinking than Sherlock Holmes"). The article is on-line at <www.aft.org/pubs-reports/american\_educator>, and copies of the magazine are available without charge from the American Federation of Teachers (555 New Jersey Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20001).
262. John Baesch spotted an interesting look at "cultural literacy" in Britain: Gordon Brown, the new prime minister, "is renowned for his ability to make himself scarce at the first hint of political embarrassment," according to Roland White in his "Atticus" column in the Sunday Times (Apr. 29, 2007). "Yet this instinct, which has earned the chancellor a reputation as Macavity the political mystery cat, seems to have failed him last week." White saw no need to explain to his readers who Macavity is, nor to mention T. S. Eliot or OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF POLITICAL CATS, in which he modelled Macavity after Moriarty.
263. John also has noted an interesting letter offered by a dealer: "I have always liked Boucher's stuff. He writes like an educated man, and the Seven Sneezes starts as if it were going to be superb. Did you ever read a Sherlock Holmes pastiche of his - I forget the title? Darn good." The letter was written by P. G. Wodehouse in 1967 to Don Benson at Pyramid Books; the pastiche was Anthony Boucher's CASE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS.

264. HOUNDING THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: A POETIC PORTRAIT OF THE DETECTIVE NOVEL, by Yair Mazor (Madison: Goblin Fern Press, 2007; 101 pp., $12.95), offers an interesting examination of the clues that Conan Doyle offered in the story that would allow a perceptive reader to solve the mystery before all is revealed at the end of the case; Mazor concludes that "the reader is given equal opportunity to solve the case independently, without the detective's help, sometimes even receiving clues (verbal analogies) that are not available to the detective."
265. Steve Doyle reports that the "From Gillette to Brett II" conference in Indianapolis on Nov. 16-18 (Jun 07 #4) is already half full, and that there are some additional speakers on the schedule: Michael A. Hoey (son of Dennis Hoey, who played Lestrade in the Rathbone films) and Jenny O'Hara, who played opposite Larry Hagman in "The Return of the World's Greatest Detective" on NBC in 1976 (the film will be screened at the conference); Steve also notes that the Wessex Press web-site at <www.wessexpress.com> now has information about all of their in-print titles, and about the conference. There's also a new trailer for the conference available at YouTube; the URL is <www.youtube.com/watch?v=yn03\_oHXASI>.
266. Ron Weyman died on June 26. He was a Navy veteran who saw HMS Hood go down and landed at Omaha Beach in the invasion of Normandy, and then worked in film and television in Canada for many years. After retiring from the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. in 1980 he started writing novels, short stories, and screenplays; his Sherlockian pastiches included SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE MARK OF THE BEAST (1989), SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE ULTIMATE DISGUISE (1991), and SHERLOCK HOLMES: TRAVELS IN THE CANADIAN WEST (1994).
267. Forecast: THE CRIMES OF DR. WATSON, by Duane Swierczynski, from Quirk Books in November; an "interactive mystery" with pull-out clues that allow readers to pretend they're Sherlock Holmes and solve a formerly lost case.
268. Jasper Fforde has delighted book lovers since Thursday Next first appeared in THE EYRE AFFAIR, "a genre send-up hailed as an instant classic," according to publicity for his new FIRST AMONG SEQUELS (New York: Viking, 2007; 400 pp., $24.95); in this fifth novel in the Thursday Next series she pursues a serial killer in Bookworld. "Sherlock Holmes is killed at Rheinback Falls and his series is stopped in its tracks. And before this can be corrected, Miss Marple dies suddenly in a car accident, bringing her series to a close as well."
269. Rheinback Falls is a mistake by the publicists; Fforde gets it right, and his use of Sherlock Holmes is intriguing. Thursday's uncle Mycroft Next, appeared in Fforde's first book, and is a continuing character, with nice echoes of Mycroft Holmes. If you get a chance to go to a Fforde book-signing, by all means do so; he's a performer, and a good one, and offers all sort of useful advice: "if there are blue nouns in your students' homework, they have been using Wikipedia." The Thursday Next series is set in Swindon, in Wiltshire, as was Mark Haddon's THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (and of course Sherlock Holmes once ate lunch there); Swindon now has a Mycroft Street, named in honor of Thursday's uncle.

270. Jul 07 #2: For the completists: Joyce Carol Oates reviewed Steven Hall's THE RAW SHARK TEXTS (Canongate, 2007; 428 pp., $24.00) in the N.Y. Review of Books (July 19); she says the book is "essentially a graphic novel in prose," and "by naming a monstrous villain of Victorian times Mycroft Ward ('a creature with one enormous mind inhabiting hundreds of bodies'), Hall would seem to be alluding to Mycroft Holmes, the elder, obese genius-brother of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes."
271. Further to the item on Bouchercon (the long-established world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, and named in honor of Anthony Boucher; Bouchercon 40 will be held in Indianapolis on Oct. 15-18, 2009; their web-site's at <www.bouchercon2009.com>).
272. Doug Marlette died on July 10. He began drawing editorial cartoons for the Charlotte Observer in 1972 and went on to win every major award for editorial cartooning including the Pulitzer Prize in 1988. His comic strip "Kudzu" delighted faithful readers and had occasional Sherlockian allusions (and was adapted into a musical in 1998); there's a web-site about Marlette at <www.dougmarlette.com>. Sen. Jesse Helms (R-NC) was one of Marlette's favorite targets; this editorial cartoon appeared in the Charlotte Observer in Oct. 1983, when Helms was running for reelection to the U.S. Senate.
273. Actor Peter Sallis was appointed a CBE (Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) in the Queen's birthday honours list last month. He played Watson in the musical "Baker Street" (1964), and Jonas Oldacre in "The Norwood Builder" on BBC Radio 4 (1993).
274. Robert D. Jones died on June 15. After a 25-year career in the U.S. Army, he retired and became a sports columnist covering golf on the Monterey Peninsula in California, where he was a long-time member of the Diogenes Club. He wrote four books about golf, including (writing as Bob Jones) SHERLOCK HOLMES SAVED GOLF (1986) and SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE GOLFER (1991).
275. "Ratatouille" is the latest Pixar/Walt Disney animation, and quite enjoyable, but non-Sherlockian (although Peter O'Toole does provide the voice of Anton Ego). On the other hand: theaters showing "Ratatouille" likely have the trailer for "Underdog" (due from Spyglass/Walt Disney) on Aug. 3; the trailer shows Underdog trying on various superhero costumes, with a brief glimpse of Underdog with Sherlockian deerstalker, cape, and pipe. You can see the trailer on-line at <www.disney.com/underdog>.
276. "Sherlock Holmes (The Early Years)" is a British "musical parody" that had its world premiere at the Oxford House in Bethnal Green in 2005, and Susan Dahlinger reports that its New York premiere will be at the Theater at St. Clements, Sept. 24 through Oct. 6, during the N.Y. Musical Theatre Festival. The Festival's office is at 242 West 38th Street #1102, New York, NY 10018 (212-664-0979) <www.nymf.org/Show-117.html>. You can see more about the musical at <www.themightyfin.com/MightyFin\_SH.html>.

277. Jul 07 #3: Les Klinger notes that the UCLA Film & Television Archive and Hugh M. Hefner Classic American Film Program will present the 125-minute version of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) on Aug. 29 at the Billy Wilder Theater (10899 Wilshire Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90024) (310-206-8013) <www.cinema.ucla.edu>. This is the shorter theatrical release of the film directed by Billy Wilder, with Robert Stephens and Colin Blakely as Holmes and Watson.
278. Fred Saberhagen died on June 29. He was a prolific writer of science fiction and fantasy, best known for his Berserker and Dracula series; he wrote two Sherlockian pastiches: THE HOLMES-DRACULA FILE (1978) and "The Adventure of the Metal Murderer" (1980).
279. Dana Richards found a Sherlock Holmes hanging felt ornament (6 inches high) made by St. Nicolas Ltd. and sold by The Christmas Company (item 9148SH, £4.64); 59 High Street, Burford, Oxfordshire OX14 4QA, England) <www.christmascompany.co.uk>.
280. Dorothy Stix has decided to sell her collection of Sherlockian translations (there are 492 books in the collection, in three dozen languages from Arabic to Ukrainian, and including braille and shorthand, individually priced, on her sales list). Her address is 1342 Hickory Moss Place, Trinity, FL 34655-7015 (727-372-2214) <dorothystix@aol.com>.
281. "Pulps, videos, comics, sleaze, art, authors, artists, and more!" will be featured at this year's New York City Paperback & Pulp Fiction Expo at the Holiday Inn (440 West 57th Street) on Oct. 7. And some of the authors (Ed Hoch and Ron Goulart among them) have Sherlockiana in their bibliographies. For more information, you can contact Gary Lovisi (Gryphon Books, Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228 <www.gryphonbooks.com>).
282. "Hook Meets Holmes in Floral Fantasy" was the headline on a report in the Maldon Standard (July 18), spotted by Karen Murdock. "Books in Bloom" was the theme of the annual festival of flowers held at St. Michael's Church in Woodham Walter in Essex; "arrangers had interpreted classic fairytales and literature such as Peter Pan and even Victorian detective Sherlock Holmes." Alas, there was no photograph of the Sherlock Holmes arrangement.
283. For collectors of foreign translations: there's an on-going Brazilian edition of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES. Four volumes of SHERLOCK HOLMES: EDICAO DEFINITIVA: COMENTADA E ILUSTRADA (AS AVENTURAS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES, AS MEMORIAS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES, A VOLTA DE SHERLOCK HOLMES and O ULTIMO ADEUS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES) have been published so far, by Jorge Zahar Editor <www.zahar.com.br>; R$89.50 each for vols. 1-3, and $74.50 for vol. 4.
284. "Trams Put the Squeeze on the City's Streets" was the headline on a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (July 25); the city's new £594 million tram line, with stops and bus interchanges, will require many changes, including moving the statue of Sherlock Holmes now located in the traffic circle in Picardy Place. There's no word on a new location, but presumably it won't be far from the site of the house where Conan Doyle was born.

285. Jul 07 #4: There was a delightful variety of interesting presentations at The Norwegian Explorers' conference on "Victorian Secrets and Edwardian Enigmas" in Minneapolis on July 6-8, with an opportunity to see many of the furnishings of Allen Mackler's full-scale 221B sitting-room and other treasures from the Special Collections (the exhibit will be on display through Aug. 20). Christopher Roden offers a far more detailed report on the conference at his "blog" at <www.sirhenry1.blogspot.com>.
286. <special.lib.umn.edu/rare/holmes/victorianguidefinalcompressed.pdf> is the URL for the Library's colorful 20-page booklet prepared for the exhibition. The booklet (one per customer) costs $10.00 postpaid (to the U.S. and Canada, $15.00 elsewhere); checks (U.S. currency please) made payable to the University of Minnesota can be sent to Tim Johnson (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Minneapolis, MN 55455).
287. The society also has published THE NORWEGIAN EXPLORERS OMNIBUS, edited by Phillip G. Bergem, Michael V. Eckman, and John E. Bergquist, with reprints of the now-long-out-of-print THE CROWDED BOX-ROOM (1951), SHERLOCK HOLMES: MASTER DETECTIVE (1952), EXPLORING SHERLOCK HOLMES (1957), and CULTIVATING SHERLOCK HOLMES (1978), with new introductions and an afterword. The 297-page book costs $30.00 postpaid ($31.00 to Canada, $37.00 elsewhere) from Phillip Bergem, 3829 172nd Avenue NW, Andover, MN 55304; checks payable to the Norwegian Explorers, please.
288. Also available from Phillip are two new works that will be welcomed by collectors of Conan Doyle's writings as they were published in magazines and newspapers: A DOYLEAN AND SHERLOCKIAN CHECKLIST OF THE STRAND MAGAZINE and A BIBLIOGRAPHIC LISTING OF STORIES, POEMS, AND OTHER WRITINGS OF A. CONAN DOYLE. The 37-page CHECKLIST is a detailed listing (with helpful notes) of relevant material in the British and American editions of THE STRAND MAGAZINE, plus THE NEW STRAND and 21 issues of the new STRAND now published by Andrew Gulli; $17.50 postpaid (CA$20.00 to Canada, and US$24.00 elsewhere). And the 158-page BIBLIOGRAPHIC LISTING covers fiction and fact (arranged by story title), plus

- additional listings by magazine and newspaper appearances and a chronology, with newly discovered material not found in the Gibson/Green bibliography; $52.00/CA$56.50/US$62.00. Checks payable to Phillip Bergem, please.
289. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2006" has John Bergquist's discussion of "The Curious Incident of the Policemen's Wives", Sue Vizoskie's report on "Georgiana, the Duchess of Devonshire: An Unusual Mother in the Canon" and other scholarship and entertainment; copies of the 56-page booklet are available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122) for $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
290. Add one more to the list of Investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have appeared in films and on television (Apr 07 #2): Paul Singleton (who has had speaking parts on three daytime television soaps).
291. Scott R. Kurtz is one of the many modern comic-strip artists who don't get a lot of exposure in newspapers, but are readily available on the Internet; <www.pyponline.com/article/3416/fri-jul-06?y=2007> has a bit of Sherlockian artwork, kindly reported by Samantha Wolov.

292. Jul 07 #5: It's quite possible that more people saw Arthur Conan Doyle's name in newspaper articles this month than any other month, ever: there was a flood of articles about what was going to happen in J. K. Rowling's HARRY POTTER AND THE DEATHLY HALLOWS, and the legions of ardent fans who were worried that Rowling would kill off Harry Potter in the last book of her series. And of course there were parallels drawn to other authors who put an end to their characters, with prominent mention of Conan Doyle's decision that Holmes should perish at the Reichenbach. No spoilers here, in case there are readers who have not yet found their way to the end of Harry Potter's story. Some writers have suggested other authors for bereft Potter fans, including Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories.
293. Mike Berdan spotted an interesting quote in the Philadelphia Inquirer (July 5): "I'm great at spying. I should have been Sherlock Holmes." Turns out that Russian tennis star Maria Sharapova would also like to be a James Bond girl. You can find photographs of Sharapova (and one of Basil Rathbone) at <www.sportsbybrooks.com/maria-sharapova-bond-girl-fantasy-13250.php>.
294. "The ghostly gas lamps fail at twenty feet," Vincent Starrett wrote (in his famous sonnet "221B"), and while London hardly has Sherlockian yellow fogs any more, you can still see gas street lights, and lamplighters. This year marks the 200th anniversary of gas lights in London, according to an article spotted by John Baesch in the Daily Telegraph (June 18), and the city's six remaining lamplighters attending the unveiling of a plaque at the site of the first gas lamp, in Pall Mall. Back in the 1960s, there were still gas lamps to be found in the streets behind 221B Baker Street, and I hope they've survived.
295. James J. DeStefano ("The St. Pancras Case") died on May 9. He worked as an electrical designer, and was an active and enthusiastic member of The Three Garridebs, The Priory Scholars, and Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers; he contributed to The Baker Street Journal and Prescott's Press, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
296. The Anthony nominees have been announced for Boucheron 38 in Anchorage on Sept. 27-30 <www.bouchercon2007.com>; the convention and awards are named in honor of Anthony Boucher. Steve Hockensmith (HOLMES ON THE RANGE) has been nominated for best first novel, and Dan Stashower (THE BEAUTIFUL CIGAR GIRL) and E. J. Wagner (THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES) for best critical nonfiction.
297. "CSI: The Experience" is an interactive exhibit that will be at the Museum of Science in Boston, Sept. 30 through Jan. 1; the web-site for the exhibit is at <www.mos.org/visitor\_info/museum\_news/press\_release&id=1896>; the intention is to explore the tools and technology behind crime scene investigation, and E. J. Wagner will lecture on "Superstition, Science, and Sherlock Holmes" on Oct. 17.
298. "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" (the mini-series starring Jonathan Pryce as Holmes and broadcast by BBC-1 earlier this year) now is available on DVD in the U.S.; $24.99 from Acorn (Box 1670, West Chester, OH 47071) (888-870-8047) <www.acornonline.com>; Amazon <www.amazon.com> lists it for release on Sept. 4 ($22.49 and eligible for free shipping).

299. Jul 07 #6: The new issue of the Sherlockian E-Times is at hand from Joel and Carolyn Senter (Classic Specialties) with news of Sherlockians and their gatherings, and a report on Jerry Riggs (whose new book THE UNUSUAL SHERLOCK HOLMES is a collection of three pastiches), and as usual offers of S'ian merchandise; <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times07-7.htm> is the URL for the newsletter, and you can request an e-mail subscription at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
300. "Jane Annie, or the Good-Conduct Prize" has been scheduled by the Rockford Operetta Party at the Central Christian Church in Rockford, Ill., on Oct. 19-20; this appears to be the North American premiere of the comic operetta that was written by Arthur Conan Doyle and J. M. Barrie in 1893. More information will be available from Scott Farrell (5288 Granite Drive, Love's Park, IL 61111) <scottfarrell@yahoo.com>.
301. The New Yorker published a long list of Sherlockiana and Doyleana (beginning with discussion of Conan Doyle in "Talk of the Town" (Feb. 21, 1925), and THE COMPLETE NEW YORKER: EIGHTY YEARS OF THE NATION'S GREATEST MAGAZINE (issued on eight DVDs in 2005) offers a chance to see how fine a magazine it was under its first two editors, Harold Ross and William Shawn. E. J. Kahn, Jr., hired in 1937, wrote for the magazine for five decades and was one of its best writers; his ABOUT THE NEW YORKER & ME: SENTIMENTAL JOURNAL (1979) is his memoir of the year 1977, with many anecdotes about his earlier life (he writes with considerable affection about his first wife, mistress, and second wife), and about his friends at the magazine. Kahn also explains that he and many others disliked Brendan Gill, who wrote HERE AT THE NEW YORKER (1975); Gill, on the other hand, told some great stories but had little to say about Kahn. Kahn's book is not Sherlockian, except for one passing allusion, but it's grand fun to read.
302. Circulo Holmes is one of the more active Sherlockian societies in Europe; their web-site's at <www.circuloholmes.org.es>, all in Spanish, as is their annual Agony Column, now in its seventh year. Copies of the new (130-page) issue, which has much about Holmes and Watson and Moriarty, and "The Lost World" and the fatal battle of Maiwand, are available for E30.00 postpaid from Miguel Ojeda Peral (Passeig Maragall 23, esc A, 7.0 1.a, 08026 Barcelona, Spain).
303. Not a politician in sight, nor a trained cormorant, but the Postal Service has honored five Pacific Lighthouses, in the five states with coastlines on the Pacific Ocean.
304. Aug 07 #1: John Gardner ("Moriarty") died on Aug. 3. Best known for his novels about the cowardly secret agent Boysie Oakes, and 14 novels extending the James Bond saga after Ian Fleming died, he also wrote two fine Moriarty journals, THE RETURN OF MORIARTY (1974) and THE REVENGE OF MORIARTY (1975); according to his obituary in the Independent (Aug. 7), a third volume, with the provisional title THE REDEMPTION OF MORIARTY had been completed just before he died. He received an Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1988, and wrote proudly of the honor at his web-site <www.john-gardner.com>.
305. Karen Murdock found <www.magicdragon.com/SherlockHolmes>, the URL for the Sherlock Holmes Reference Service, which offers assistance in writing resumes, and with links at the web-sites to the resumes of Sherlock Holmes and James Bond.

306. Some touring Sherlockians have visited the Brambletye Hotel in Forest Row (it's mentioned in the Canon), and have had a drink or two at the hotel's Black Peter's Bar. And now there's a coffee shop called Sherlocks in nearby East Grinstead, according to the story East Grinstead Courier (July 5) spotted by Karen Murdock. There also is a Sherlocks coffee shop about 13 miles away, in Crowborough.
307. Evy Herzog discovered the Museum of Jewelry (401 First Street #205, Richmond, CA 94801 (800-385-2700) <www.museumofjewelry.net>; the company uses name from English literature to title some of their products, which include "Moonstones of Baker Street Earrings" and "Arnsworth Castle Earrings".
308. The Societe Sherlock Holmes de France provides interesting news at their web-site <www.sshf.com>, and a helpful "Alerte Sherlock Holmes" by e-mail. They recently noted a new set of stamps scheduled for issue Sept. 6 by the Swiss post office honoring "Switzerland as Seen by Foreign Artists--England"; the artists are all writers: Mary Shelley, William Wordsworth, Lord Byron, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who will be represented by James Peel's photograph of the Reichenbach Falls.
309. Sir Hans Sloane founded the British Museum (Nathan Garrideb hoped to be the Hans Sloane of his age), and according to an item spotted by John Baesch in Country Life (July 12), also invented milk chocolate. Chocolate-maker Bill McCarrick offers a "Sir Hans Sloane of London" line, priced from £8.00 for four pieces to £36.00 for 25 pieces. Available from Selfridges, and from McCarrick's web-site <www.sirhanssloane.com>.
310. John also noted a story in Orient Express Magazine about the Langham Hotel (mentioned in three of the Canonical tales), which has recently opened its Artesian bar, named in honor of the 360-foot artesian well that in the 19th century provided "the best water in London" to the hotel. They now serve bottled artesian water for £4.00, and their classic martinis cost £11.00.
311. The bar's web-site is at <www.artesian-bar.co.uk>. The hotel's web-site is at <www.london.langhamhotels.com>; rooms cost £199 and up.
312. Aug 07 #2: Some new pastiches: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HEIR OF ALBION, by Ronan Coghlan (Bangor: Xiphos Books, 2007; 188 pp., $11.99), is a Sherlockian fantasy, with echoes of H. P. Lovecraft; the story is told by journalist Hector Wace, who substitutes for an absent Watson as Holmes does his best to counter a dire threat against the royal family. And THE UNUSUAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Jerry 'B-P' Riggs (West Conshohocken: Infinity Publishing, 2007; 369 pp., $18.95), offers three stories that Riggs has been telling to Boy Scouts for many years (the 'B-P' in his name honors Baden-Powell, the founder of the movement); they're adventurous tales that deal with stolen rifles in Michigan, space-travel fantasy, and Arthurian roundtable reenactors.
313. EYE OF THE CROW, by Shane Peacock (Toronto: Tundra, 2007; 250 pp., $19.95), is announced as the first case in a series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" ("Sherlock Holmes, just thirteen, is a misfit. His highborn mother is the daughter of an aristocratic family, his father a poor Jew."); it's an exciting and atmospheric story for young readers. The cast of characters includes Andrew C. Doyle (who isn't Arthur Conan Doyle) and Mohammad Adalji (who isn't George Edalji), and a few other names that echo jarringly from the Canon. There's a web-site at <www.theboysherlockholmes.ca>.
314. "There is cocoa ready in the next room," Sherlock Holmes said "The Priory School"), and a cup of cocoa is shown on a stamp in a set honoring chocolate that will be issued by the Swedish post office in September. Cocoa beans and chocolate bars have been shown on postage stamps in the past, but this seems to be the first philatelic cup of cocoa.
315. The People's Light & Theatre Company plans to produce Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lily" in Malvern, Pa., June 13-July 18, 2008; Accompanied by that consummate wit Oscar Wilde, the beautiful actress Lillie Langtry (the Jersey Lily) seeks help from the brilliant detective Sherlock Holmes in a small matter involving blackmail, some missing jewels, and the royal family." The theater's address is 39 Conestoga Road, Malvern, PA 19355 (610-644-3500) <www.peopleslight.org>.
316. Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE COMPLETE GRANADA TELEVISION SERIES, a set of 12 DVDs with all 41 programs, for a total of 43 hours, from MPI Home Video ($229.98); bonus features include three commentary tracks, interviews with Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke, an interview with Adrian Conan Doyle, a report on the Sherlock Holmes Museum, and subtitles in Spanish and English.
317. Also: LADIES, LADIES: THE WOMEN IN THE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (San Diego: Aventine Press, 2007; 148 pp., $11.95), edited by Katherine Karlson and Patricia Guy; an anthology of essays, poems, and music-hall ditties about the ladies in the Canon.
318. "Tales from the Darkside: The Movie" was released by Paramount in 1990, described as "four ghoulish fables in one modern nightmare." "Lot 249" was one of the four stories, adapted by Michael McDowell from the Conan Doyle story "Lot No. 249", and the cast included Christian Slater, Steve Buscemi, and Julianne Moore. The film was released on DVD in 2001, and is still available.
319. Aug 07 #3: Ken Lanza spotted a report on the American Theatre Wing's website at <www.americantheatrewing.org>, where you can watch or listen to all sorts of interesting material, including video of Frank Langella participating in 90-minute seminars on "Working in the Theatre" taped in Sept. 1984 and in Apr. 2002, and a 48-minute "Downstage Center" program broadcast by XM Radio in May 2007 in which Langella talks briefly about why he has played Sherlock Holmes twice (and he says that he adored playing the title role in William Gillette's play, and was way in over his head when he produced and starred in "Sherlock's Last Case"). There are many more fine actors in programs available at the web-site.
320. The Friends of Gillette Castle State Park will hold a celebration on Oct. 6 benefiting the restoration of William Gillette's locomotives; there will be hors d'oeuvres, music, beverages, and a silent auctions, and tickets cost $35.00 each. The Friends are a non-profit organization that helps maintain and restore the trails and grounds of the Castle, and their address is Box 133, East Haddam, CT 06423 <www.friendsofgilletecastle.org>.
321. Laurie R. King's Virtual Book Club ("a book club where readers don't have to bring cookies, hire a baby sitter, or even change out of their pajamas") at <www.laurierking.com/vbulletin> discussed THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE in July, and A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN in August; Laurie comments on the book from time to time, and the discussions don't close at the end of the month. A LETTER OF MARY is scheduled for November, and THE MOOR for April 2008. Her new stand-alone novel TOUCHSTONE will be published in January. Laurie's blog is at <www.laurierking.com/wp.php>, and Mary Russell's blog at <www.myspace.com/maryrussell>.
322. As noted earlier (Jul 07 #1), Jasper Fforde's FIRST AMONG SEQUELS (2007) is Sherlockian, although Sherlock Holmes doesn't actually appear as a character in the book. Mycroft does appear, in a fashion (he's Thursday Next's uncle, and a ghost), and the book is both interesting and amusing, with a lot of literary puns. Fforde's web-site at <www.jasperfforde.com> is thoroughly intriguing (especially if you've read one or more of his books), and offers upgrades to the books, interviews, merchandise, a helpful emergency "boss approaching" feature, and much more.
323. Madeleine B. Stern died on Aug. 18. She was a bibliophile, rare-book dealer, and literary sleuth, she and her partner Leona Rostenberg in 1942 identified Louisa May Alcott as the author, under a pseudonym, of a series of (at the time) racy stories, and their reminiscences about their long partnership can be found in OLD BOOKS, RARE FRIENDS: TWO LITERARY SLEUTHS AND THEIR SHARED PASSION (1997) and BOOKENDS: TWO WOMEN, ONE ENDURING FRIENDSHIP (2001); she also wrote about Sherlock Holmes, and in 2001 gave The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Lecture in 2001 (published in the summer 2001 issue of The Baker Street Journal).

324. "Baker Street" and "Honour Among Punks" were two series of comic books published by Caliber some years ago (May 90 #3, Aug 90 #4, Dec 91 #5) for "mature" audiences (they were quite graphic, although not porno). Karen Murdock has spotted a report of HONOUR AMONG PUNKS: THE COMPLETE BAKER STREET GRAPHIC NOVEL, by Guy Davis and Gary Reed (Ibooks Graphic Novel, 2003; 368 pp., $19.95).
325. Aug 07 #4: Allen and Pat Ahearne have presided over the book shop Quill & Brush since 1976, and they have written interesting books about collecting; their web-site <www.qbbooks.com> offers a link to "first edition identification" that will be of help to collectors who want to identify first and later editions and printings from many publishers.
326. The British edition of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley) will be issued by Harper-Collins on Sept. 17, and it will be featured as BBC Radio 4's "Book of the Week" with five 15-minute readings from the book on Sept. 24-28. You can listen to the program on the Internet (and for seven days after the broadcast date) at <www.bbc.co.uk/radio4/arts/book\_week.shtml>.
327. <www.westminster.gov.uk/libraries/special/sherlock.cfm> is the URL for the web-site for the Marylebone Library's Sherlock Holmes Collection, and there is a link to their "special competition page" and a chance to win a copy of the British edition of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (May 07 #5); the contest closes on Oct. 31.
328. Subscribers to the ink-on-paper edition of Scuttlebutt will find enclosed a copy of the flier for the ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS. If you're reading this in bits and bytes, Randall Stock's comprehensive and interesting web-site at <members.aol.com/shbest/ref/conan-doyle-life-letters.htm> information about the book, and the same images that are on the fliers.
329. The Baker Street Irregulars and The Sherlock Holmes Society of London (as The Quartering Press) have announced their first joint publication: TO KEEP THE MEMORY GREEN, a collection of essays by friends and colleagues honoring the memory of Richard Lancelyn Green; the contributors include June Lancelyn Green, Scirard Lancelyn Green, Cilla Lancelyn Green, John Michael Gibson, Douglas Wilmer, Sir Christopher Frayling, Owen Dudley Edwards, Philip Porter, Peter Horrocks, Doug Wrigglesworth, Marina Stajic, Brian W. Pugh, David Drummond, R. Dixon Smith, Marina Stajic, John Michael Gibson, Andrew Malec, John Nichols, and Jonathan and Elaine McCafferty, and a bibliographical checklist of Richard's writings compiled by Steven Rothman (224 pp., with 24 pages of illustrations).
330. The book will be available from both the BSI and the SHSOL in October, but it can be ordered now; there will be a standard edition and a numbered edition limited to 50 copies that's signed by editors Steven Rothman and Nichlas Utechin, Douglas Wilmer, Michael F. Whelan ("Wiggins" of the BSI), and Guy Marriott (Chairman of the SHSOL). Copies of both editions can be purchased on-line at <www.quarteringpress.com>. BSI copies also are available by mail (2 Detting Road, Maynard, MA 01754); $30.00/$75.00 plus shipping: $3.95 (North America) or $9.95 (elsewhere) plus $1.50 for each additional copy. SHSOL copies are available from Judi Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England); standard edition £17.50 (UK) £20.00/E30.00 (Europe) £22.50/$45.00 (elsewhere), and special edition £40.00 (UK) £42.00/E63.00 (Europe) £45.00/$90.00 (elsewhere).
331. And the book's editors Steve Rothman and Nick Utechin have been interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder for episode #8 of their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcast available now at <www.ihearofsherlock.com>.
332. Aug 07 #5: It has been some years since I mentioned Goshō Aoyama's "Case Closed" (May 04 #6), a 30-minute animated series based on the Japanese manga comic-book "Meitantei Conan" (Shinichi Kudo is a 17-year-old master detective, turned by villains into a child, who assumes the name Conan Edogawa and pursues evil-doers). The series ran on the Cartoon network in English, and there's now a series of paperbacks from VIZ Media (19 volumes and counting, $9.99 each); only the first volume is of real interest to Sherlock Holmes: the cover shows Conan Edogawa in Sherlockian costume, and there's a page at the end of the book about Aoyama's "mystery library" featuring Sherlock Holmes. The web-site <www.caseclosed.com> has information about the animated series, which is available on DVDs.
333. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (it won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America) is scheduled at the MeadowBrook Theatre in Rochester, Mich., Oct. 10 to Nov. 4; box office at 207 Wilson Hall, Oakland University, Rochester, MI 48309 (248-377-3300) <www.mbtheatre.com>. The Amateur Mendicant Society of Detroit will have a theater party on Oct. 14; the society meets quarterly, and Chris Music reports on the society's activities at <www.amateurmendicant.blogspot.com>.
334. Further to the item about Basil Rathbone receiving the Military Cross (Jun 07 #4), Paul Churchill notes that the Wikipedia biography for Rathbone mentions that when he joined the London Scottish Regiment as a private, Rathbone served alongside Claude Rains, Herbert Marshall, and Ronald Colman. The entry, at <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Basil\_Rathbone>, displays a portrait of Rathbone as Commissar Dimitri Gorotchenko (in the 1937 film "Tovarich") rather than as Sherlock Holmes, presumably arranged by someone who knew that Rathbone much preferred to be known for his non-Sherlockian work.
335. What do Edmond Hillary, Moscow mayor Yuri Lushkov, and Sherlock Holmes have in common? According to a story in the Moscow News (Aug. 17), at hand from Ray Betzner, all three men are famous beekeepers. The Russian Union of Apiarists has organized Moscow's 18th annual Honey Festival, opening Sept. 1, and the RUA hopes to increase production of Russian honey. Russia exported 262,000 tons of honey a year to Europe before 1917, but last year produced only 100,000 tons, not enough to supply the domestic market.
336. E. J. Wagner reports that her THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR: THE REAL FORENSICS BEHIND THE GREAT DETECTIVE'S GREATEST CASES (Jun 06 #2) has been translated into Italian and Korean. The Italian edition is available from Bollati Boringhiere Editore (E20.00) <www.bollatiboringhiere.it/scheda.php?codice=17498>, and the Korean edition from Han Seung (12,000 won) <www.hansbook.com/index.html>. Her own web-site is at <www.forensic.to/webhome/ejwagner>.
337. After 40 years of collecting Sherlockian books, Jerry Margolin has sold his collection of books, pamphlets, pastiches and parodies to Otto Penzler at the Mysterious Bookshop in New York; his collection included first editions of all of the Canon except for A STUDY IN SCARLET, and many other rare items, many in original dust jackets. If you're seeking a particular item, you can contact Otto (212-587-1011) <ottopenzler@mysteriousbookshop.com>. Jerry has not stopped collecting, and plans to continue adding to his original artwork for Sherlockian illustrations and cartoons.
338. Aug 07 #6: MC Black is now leading "Detective Walks" in London, offering half a dozen different routes to places mentioned in the Canon and of importance in Conan Doyle's life; if clients have particular interests, he's willing to do the research and include them on a walk. A discount is offered to members of "reputable Holmesian and Sherlockian societies," and he has a web-site at <www.detectivewalks.co.uk>. Additional information is available from him at Hardknott, Chadwell, Ware, Hertfordshire SG12 9JY, England (44(0)1920-467-930) <info@detectivewalks.co.uk>.
339. I've reported on Peter Abrahams' DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE: AN ECHO FALLS MYSTERY (Apr 05 #1), and his suspense novel THE TUTOR is Sherlockian as well. (New York: Ballantine Books, 2002), available in paperback (New York: Ballantine Books, 2003; 384 pp., $7.50) and on audiocassettes and a CD read by James Daniels (Brilliance Audio); the novel is a real page-turner, and features a thoroughly nasty villain and a precocious 11-year-old girl-in-peril who is a passionate reader of the Canon, and uses Sherlockian observation and logic to bring the villain to book.

340. News from Japan: Kitano Ijinkan is a district in Kobe that contains a number of foreign residences built in the late 19th and early 20th centuries after the Kobe was officially opened to foreigners in 1867; Western merchants built their houses in a section that was set aside for foreigners, and about 20 houses (of the more than 100 that were built in the district) have survived and are preserved. Tomoka Sakihara (director of business planning and marketing for the Ijinkan) writes that a recreation of the sitting-room at 221b will open Oct. 7 at English House, which celebrates its 100th anniversary this year. They have had assistance from The Japan Sherlock Holmes Club, and the exhibit will be on permanent display. There are entries for Kobe and the Kitano area at <www.wikipedia.org>.
341. The DVD of "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" (the mini-series starring Jonathan Pryce as Holmes and broadcast by BBC-1 earlier this year) made it into the shops in August, despite a release date of Sept. 4; it's possible that it won't be broadcast here, since it has gone to DVD already; $22.49 and eligible for free shipping at <www.amazon.com>.
342. Forecast for October: a new edition (with coverage from the earliest silent films to the latest television films, through 2007) of David Stuart Davies' STARRING SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: Titan Books, 2007; 208 pp., £24.99) (distributed in the U.S. by Random House, $35.00). The first edition was delightful (Aug 01 #6), and the new edition will be equally interesting.
343. Steve Doyle reports that there's still some room (but not that much) at the "From Gillette to Brett II" conference in Indianapolis on Nov. 16-18 (Jul 07 #1). There's another new trailer for the conference on-line at YouTube at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=bMDCEjlsy2U>, and details of the schedule are at <www.wessexpress.com>.
344. And a warning: the end-of-September issue of this newsletter will be a few days late, with an explanation that may serve as an excuse.
345. Sep 07 #1: "El Misterio de Whitechapel" is a new Spanish pastiche written by Enrique Garcia Diaz and published in January 2007 (in Spanish); "en esta aventura, Holmes se embarca junto a Watson en la investigacion de los atroces asesinatos de prostitutas en el West End de Londres." You can read it without charge at <www.sherlock-holmes.es/archivo/?ir=biblioteca&entry=61>.
346. And Les Klinger reports that Ripperologist, an electronic journal available at <www.ripperologist.info>, will publish the first complete translation of the early 20th-century Sherlockian pastiche "Jack el Destripador" (in a new translation by Eduardo Zinna, with a brief introduction by Les) in the next three issues, beginning with #83 (Sept. 2007). Anthony Boucher contributed a brief partial translation, with a summary, to Allan Barnard's THE HARLOT KILLER (1953); the complete pastiche has more than 18,000 words, and there will be a preface by the translator and new original illustrations by Jane Coram.
347. Electronic newsletters continue to appear in the Sherlockian world, and it shouldn't be all that surprising, considering that publishing on a web-site or by e-mail avoids the costs of printing and postage. One nice example is Musgraves Matters, edited for The Musgraves by Rafe McGregor and available from him <musgravesmatters@aol.com> as a .pdf attachment to an e-mail message (the third issue was published this month).
348. Forecast (for January): ON THE TRAIL OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: AN ILLUSTRATED DEVON TOUR, by Brian Pugh and Paul R. Spiring, with an introduction by Roger Johnson (Brighton: Book Guild, 128 pp., £12.99); a German edition is in the works (AUF DER SPUR VON ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: EINE RUNDREISE DURCH DEVON, from Dryas in Mannheim), and there are plans for French, Spanish, and Japanese editions.
349. Canonical Sleuths, Inc., is the Sherlockian society for the students in the senior-citizen class Francine Kitts teaches at the College of Staten Island, and they have a lapel pin, available for $10.00 postpaid ($12.00 outside the U.S.) from Francine (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301).
350. The 32nd annual Toronto International Film Festival opened on Sept. 6, and Toronto chefs worked hard to please the celebrities who attended the festival. According to a story in the Globe and Mail (Sept. 5), noted by Karen Murdock, Four Seasons executive chef Robert Bartley themed the hotel's menus to 1920s Hollywood glamour, offering Moroccan-style Casablanca chicken wings and Sherlock Holmes martinis served on magnifying-glass coasters. It's quite likely that it was the coaster that made the martinis Sherlockian.
351. Scholastic Books, world-famous as the publisher of J. K. Rowling's "Harry Potter" series, still publishes other books, including two written and illustrated by Mark Teague about a wire-haired terrier named Ike LaRue. DETECTIVE LARUE: LETTERS FROM THE INVESTIGATION (New York, Scholastic Books, 2004; 32 pp., $15.95) is suitable for children aged 4-8, and for Sherlockian parents who may be amused by two passing Canonical allusions.
-
352. Sep 07 #2: The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection of the Toronto Public Library will present a lecture by Andrew Lycett (author of the new biography CONAN DOYLE: THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES) on Oct. 25 at 7:00 pm in the Elizabeth Beeton Auditorium at the Toronto Reference Library (798 Yonge Street); there's no charge for admission, and all members of the public are invited.
353. "I wonder what naked ghosts wear on Halloween," is the question on the cover of a new Halloween card from Hallmark ($2.99).
354. There's a Sherlock Mountain (elevation 6,604 ft) in Broadwater County, Montana, recognized by the U.S. Geological Survey in its Geographic Names Information System (but with no information about who named it, or for whom). There's another Sherlock Mountain in Berkshire County, Massachusetts, not recognized by the U.S.G.S., but it's the site of six exclusive home sites (three still available) at Birchridge of Sherlock Mountain. You can read all about it at <www.birchridgeofsherlockmtn.com>.
355. Further to the report on the death of John Gardner (Aug 07 #1): Otto Penzler reports that the third Moriarty novel was completed and edited before Gardner's death; MORIARTY will be published by Harcourt/Penzler next fall. It's the equal, at least, of the first two, Otto notes.
356. Otto also reports that he has launched a blog, at <otto.gather.com>; just click on the link to "It's a Mystery to Me" (where's there's a link to an archive of his weekly columns for the New York Sun).
357. "Autumn in Baker Street" (at the Doubletree Hotel in Norwalk, Conn., over the Labor Day weekend) was a delightful gathering; Bob Thomalen did a fine job arranging and presiding over the festivities, and he was excellent performing as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (with an appropriate Scots accent) in a new one-act play about Houdini and Conan Doyle: "The Other Side" was written by Jerome Coopersmith, who also was the author of the book for the musical "Baker Street" (1964) and was present to enjoy the show.
358. John Patrick Bray directed a production of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" at the University of Louisiana (Lafayette) last year (Sep 06 #6) and his play "Hound" (his adaptation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles") will have its world premiere at the Cite des Arts in Lafayette, Oct. 4-20. The theater's at 109 Vine Street in Lafayette, (337-291-1122) <www.citedesarts.org>.
359. Alan R. Kaplan ("Charles Augustus Milverton") died on Aug. 20. He was an attorney, and a member of Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
360. David Stuart Davies wrote his one-man two-act play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act" for Roger Llewellyn in 1997; it premiered in Salisbury in 1999, and has toured in Britain and overseas. David has written that "I thought I'd really said all I wanted to say about Holmes in 'The Last Act'. Then they played a dirty trick on me: they offered me money." His new play "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" (also starring Llewellyn) will premiere in Guildford on Mar. 6, 2008, and then go on tour, including a two-week run at the Assembly Rooms in Edinburgh during next year's Festival.

361. Sep 07 #3: LADIES, LADIES: THE WOMEN IN THE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Patricia Guy and Katherine Karlson (San Diego: Aventine Press, 2007; 134 pp., $11.95), is an intriguing anthology of essays, poems, music-hall songs that mention Sherlock Holmes (and some that don't), by way of examining "topics ranging from libations to libido, perfumes to prejudice, in the context of the Sherlock Holmes stories."
362. "I wonder what naked ghosts wear on Halloween," was the question on a Hallmark Halloween card. The answer inside the card is "No sheet, Sherlock." Thanks to John McGowan and Dante Torrese, who spotted the card early on.
363. Further to the item (Jul 07 #3) about the statue of Sherlock Holmes in Edinburgh needing to be moved when the city's new tram line is built, there seems to be no threat to the nearby pub The Conan Doyle: the Evening News reported (Sept. 5) that the pub is planning to fit its entrance with traditional lanterns, and install new seating. A photograph of the pub, and a review and comments, are at <www.edinburgh247.com/pubreview.asp?pubID=11>.
364. There are many new products available to coin collectors, including colored (or coloured) coins, produced by national and other mints, and there's now a set of four such coins honoring Sherlock Holmes, issued by the New Zealand Mint. They're NZ$2.00 coins, each minted from one ounce of pure silver and legal tender in the Cook Islands, although people are quite unlikely to want to spend them, because a set of four coins costs NZ$325.00 (or US$260.00). The coins feature a portrait of Sherlock Holmes (as played by Vasily Livanov), and characters from "The Sign of the Four", "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and "His Last Bow", and you can see them all in full color and much better detail at <www.newzealandmint.com>. Thanks to Bill Barnes for this numismatic report.
365. "The Uncanny Appearance of Sherlock Holmes" (a new musical written by Brad Krunholz for the North American Cultural Laboratory) will be performed at the NACL Theatre in Highland Lake, N.Y., on Oct. 5 during the NACL Catskill Festival of New Theatre (845-557-0694) <www.nacl.org>.
366. Irene's Cabinet is an annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (42 pp.) offers Andrew Solberg's investigation of Sherlockian and Doylean material published in the Washington Post in the 1890s and 1900s, John C. Sherwood's amusing full-color two-page comic "The Adventure of the Faux Phillistine", and the winning essays in the society's annual Sherlockian contest for seventh-graders in Howard County, Md. (the student's work is imaginative and intelligent). $15.00 postpaid Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886); copies of annuals from 2003 through 2006 also are available (same price).
367. Baker Street West 1 is "a Sherlockian journal from the western USA" and now in its 13th year; the Sept. issue (46 pp.) offers Chuck Kovacic's report on his discoveries of a five-color sign advertising Campbell's Shag, and Sherlock Holmes on the scorecard glass for a pinball machine ("The Dragonette") produced in 1954, plus other interesting Sherlockian material. $7.00 postpaid from Jerry Kegley (9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343); $12.00 a year (two issues) or $15.00 outside the U.S.

368. Sep 07 #4: Tim Johnson's "The Adventure of the Unopened Box: Building the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota" is an excellent history and description of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the university (where Tim presides over all the special collections). Pub-Collections Management (fall 2004), it's also available from Tim as a .pdf file via the Internet <johns976@umn.edu>.
369. "Undershaw Goes Under the Hammer" was the headline on a story in the Haslemere Herald (Sept. 28), spotted by Laura Kuhn; Undershaw, where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, is now on the market. Owned by Fossway Limited, a company registered in the British Virgin Islands, the house and grounds are available to buy or let from estate agents Lambert Smith Hampton in Guildford. The Victorian Society, with support from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, successfully fought plans to subdivide the house into 13 apartments (Jul 06 #4 and Feb 07 #2), and the Waverley Borough Council announced on Apr. 25 that Fossway had ignored several requests to protect the house from further deterioration and the Council had commissioned protective work on the house (and is entitled to recover the costs from the owner). On May 15 the director of the Victorian Society noted that windows had been broken so that vandals could enter the house, and that attempts to steal lead from the roof had resulted in water damage. As of press time, the estate agents have not announced an asking price for Undershaw.
370. "Louisiana's famous carnival will be celebrated in Bahrain, at the Sherlock Holmes' Mardi Gras Costume Party tomorrow night," according to a story in the Bahrain Gulf Daily News (Sept. 5), spotted by Ken Lanza; it was an end-of-summer festival, and guests were encouraged "to come decked in their favorite gear from the 60s and 70s or in carnival garb." One hopes that one or more guests came in Sherlockian costume, of course.
371. The Bootmakers of Toronto have launched their web-site, with handsome and imaginative artwork by Jean-Pierre Cagnat, at <www.bootmakers.ca>.
372. Zoran Kovacic's new play "A Taste of Murder & Not a Crumb of Evidence" will open at the Hedgerow Theatre in Media, Pa., on Oct. 27 and run through Nov. 7; featuring Hesione Holmes, "an American cousin of the famous sleuth Sherlock Holmes." The theater address is 64 Rose Valley Road, Media, PA 19063 (610-566-4211) <www.hedgerowtheatre.org> [click on "our season" and "horizon series"]. Thanks to Francie Monahan for the report.
373. Mark Alberstat's 2008 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The calendar costs US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
374. Frank Middlemass died last year (on Sept. 8). He began acting in 1949 after retiring from the British army as a lieutenant colonel, and had a long career on stage, radio, and television. Well known as Rocky Hardcastle in the long-running BBC television series, Middlemass also played Peterson in Peter Cushing's "The Blue Carbuncle" (1968), Henry Baker in Jeremy Brett's "The Blue Carbuncle" (1984), and Dr. Froelich in Christopher Lee's "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" (1992).
375. Sep 07 #5: Prescott's Press, edited by Warren Randall for The Three Garridebs, continues to offer a nice mix of scholarship and whimsy, and the September issue (#45) offers a well-illustrated reprise of the "Baker Street Belles" fashion show ("a fashionable look at Victorian England") presented by Cynthia Wein and a posse of models at "Autumn in Baker Street" in 1989. Issue #45 costs $6.00 postpaid, and a subscription costs $14.00 for four issues ($18.00 outside the U.S.) from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
376. ITV3 is a British cable channel that broadcasts the Granada series weekly; according to a report in the Islington Gazette (on Sept. 12), at hand from Ken Lanza, the City and Islington College's Forensic Crime Scene Investigation team will participate in a documentary that will air in November during a Sherlock Holmes week: Richard E. Grant will recreate a murder scene from "A Study in Scarlet" for investigation by the lecturers and students. Grant has played Sherlock Holmes on television in "The Other Side" (1992), Mycroft Holmes in James D'Arcy's "Case of Evil" (2002), and Jack Stapleton in Richard Roxburgh's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002).
377. And Jon Lellenberg reports that the week's broadcasts will include another documentary ("The Shackles of Sherlock") about Holmes and Conan Doyle; Jon was filmed for the program at the British Library this month. It is possible that the Sherlock Holmes week will start in late October; you can see the channel's schedule and watch it's programs at <www.itv.com>.

378. "For the British Grenadiers: Sherlock Holmes and the British Army" is the theme for this year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" (sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies) at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 10; the festivities begin with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00, and end at 1:00. There's no charge, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
379. Dr. William R. Hanson has designed a special cancel for the GlenPex Stamp and Postcard Show in South Glens Falls, N.Y., on Nov. 17; his own cachets will be available after the show, but you can send your own (stamped) covers and postcards to GlenPex Station, c/o Postmaster, 16 Hudson Avenue, Glens Falls, NY 12801; they will be cancelled and returned on Nov. 17.
380. I mentioned the upcoming American premiere of Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" in Lenox, Mass., earlier (Mar 07 #1); the play will have 16 performances, from Sept. 28 to Oct. 28, and now there's news of a special Sherlockian weekend on Oct. 19-21. Events will include a reception at Ventfort Hall (a Gilded Age mansion that was built by George and Sarah Morgan in 1893), three presentations by Sherlockian guests, a performance of the play, and a Victorian (and Sherlockian) brunch. Details are available at Shakespeare & Company's web-site <www.shakespeare.org> and from the theater (70 Kemble Street, Lenox, MA 01240) (413-637-1199). Scott Monty and Burt Wolder interviewed the leading actors and the director for the latest "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" at their blog <www.ihearofsherlock.com>.

381. Sep 07 #6: The National Aeronautics and Space Administration launched its new Phoenix Mars Lander on Aug. 4, and the unmanned spacecraft is expected to land on May 25, 2008, with Sherlock Holmes on board. Tina Rhea has spotted a report about the "Visions of Mars" mini-DVD prepared by The Planetary Society, with 80 stories and articles by leading writers and scientists, a collection of Mars artwork, and classic radio shows, that the lander will carry to Mars. Poul Anderson's Sherlockian pastiche "The Martian Crown Jewels" is one of the stories on the DVD, and two other members of the Baker Street Irregulars (Isaac Asimov and August Derleth) are represented by non-Sherlockian stories. You can read more about the mini-DVD at <www.planetary.org/programs/projects/messages/vom\_contents.html>.
382. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS is a delightful book. Edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley (London: HarperPress, 2007; 710 pp., £25.00), the many letters to his mother, preserved in the family papers, are augmented by other letters to family and friends, with helpful annotations and illustrations. The actor Stephen Fry once said that "Personally I would walk a mile in tight boots to read his letters to the milkman," and one can only agree: Conan Doyle's letters offer an excellent picture of his imagination, humor, and energy, and it is grand that so many of his letters have been preserved and are now available to those who want to know more about him.
383. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will honor the world's first forensic geologist at dinner on Wednesday, Oct. 31, at Dixon's Downtown Grill at 1600 16th Street in Denver, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America; drinks at 7:00 and dinner at 8:00. Come one, come all, as they say, and watch the geologists and Sherlockians try not to confuse each other. Dinner will cost about $25.00 per person, and there will be a cash bar. Please let me know if you can attend the festivities; my e-mail address is <blau7103@comcast.net>.
384. Andrew Lycett's CONAN DOYLE: THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: Weidenfeld & Nicholson, 2007; 527 pp., £20.00) is an impressive biography. Lycett has had access to far more sources than any previous biographer of Conan Doyle: the earlier biographies, Georgina Doyle's OUT OF THE SHADOWS, many of papers and letters now at the British Library (with permission from Dame Jean's estate), and material owned by collectors and in Richard Lancelyn Green's collection. The book is full of information for those interested in the life and career of Conan Doyle, and there's plenty of opinion as well, often tending toward the sensational: Lycett's article about Conan Doyle in The Guardian (Sept. 15) was headlined "Adultery, My Dear Watson".
385. As predicted (Aug 07 #6), this issue is a few days late, because I was away from home for almost two weeks; we visited in London, and returned on the Queen Mary 2 and thoroughly enjoyed the "Cunard experience." The ship has many attractions, among them the only planetarium and the largest library afloat; the library has 8,000 volumes, but only one of them is Sherlockian: Donald Thomas' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE VOICE FROM THE CRYPT AND OTHER TALES (2002).
386. Oct 07 #1: Francine Swift ("The Wigmore Street Post Office") died on Oct. 10. She was proud to be a Texan, faithful to her corgis Prudence and Hatty, and devoted to her husband Wayne. Francine was a librarian when she joined the Sub-Librarians in the late 1960s, moved to Washington in the 1970s, and met Wayne at a running of the Silver Blaze at Pimlico. She was a member of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes (as "Hatty Doran"), and many other Sherlockian societies; Francine was honored by the Baker Street Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1983, and received her BSI Investiture in 1994.
387. "We've also recreated Sherlock Holmes' study as an onboard office for one customer," Ewan Foster told Daily Mail reporter Victoria Moore (Sept. 14). Foster is head designer for Sunseeker, a British company that builds superyachts for the very rich. "That was quite a strange request because we put it in a boat that looked very futuristic from the outside," he added. "We had to make certain adaptations. A big mahogany bookcase filled with hardbacks would have been too heavy, so we had trompe l'oeil bookshelves painted onto wooden panels. It looked fantastic." Visit <www.sunseeker.com> to learn more about their boats (but not the one with the Sherlockian office). Thanks to Karen Murdock for spotting the article.
388. <www.audiobookstanddl.com>, spotted by Les Klinger, is an interesting website that offers digital audiobooks that you can buy and download to your PC or portable listening device; searches for "sherlock holmes" and "conan doyle" bring up scores of hits for Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian stories, radio broadcasts, and pastiches.
389. Bob Robinson has recalled a story about Nigel Bruce, told by Sean Wright, who heard it from Bruce's nephew Ian, almost 30 years ago: in October 1953, Nigel Bruce, seriously ill in a hospital, had been following the World Series between the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers on the radio, and lapsed into a coma before the final game was played; when he awoke from his coma on Oct. 8, he asked his wife, Bunny, "The Dodgers, did they beat the Yankees? Did they win the World Series?" His wife replied, "No dear, I'm sorry. The Dodgers lost. They did not win the World Series." And Nigel Bruce sank back onto his pillows, sighing, "Oh sh*t," and turned his head and died.
390. Darlene Cypser discovered <steampunkworkshop.com/lcd.shtml>, where you can see what Sherlock Holmes' computer might have looked like.
391. DARK AND STORMY NIGHTS (Alma: Yarddog Press, 2001; 71 pp., $6.00) has five short stories by Bradley H. Sinor, one of them being his atmospheric pastiche "The Adventure of the *Other* Detective". The collection also offers Sherlockian cover art by Laura J. Underwood. Yarddog's address is 710 West Redbud Lane, Alma, AR 72921 <www.yarddogpress.com>.
392. Ken Lanza noted an announcement for "Sherlock Holmes versus Arsene Lupin", a new computer game produced by Frogware, the company responsible for the earlier game "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Awakened" (Sep 06 #4). A 90-second trailer is available at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/sh>; the game is scheduled for release later this year.

393. Oct 07 #2: The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's discussion of Conan Doyle's "Nelson Notebook" (recently acquired for the Collection), Peggy Perdue's report on an intriguing miniature edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and Dayna McCausland's introduction of Mary Rae Shantz, who has succeeded

- David Kotin as manager of special collections at the Library. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>.
394. The Toronto Reference Library is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year with a gala exhibition showing material from its special collections, and there's a web-site at <ve.torontopubliclibrary.ca/collected_works/acd.html> offering a virtual tour of some of its Sherlockian and Doylean treasures. And if you click on "More" at the upper right you'll find links to two other virtual exhibits: "A Case of Considerable Interest" and "Footprints of the Hound".
395. The Workshop Theater Company will present Andrew Joffe's two-act dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" (in a double bill with O. Henry's "The Gift of the Magi"), Dec. 6-22, at 312 West 36th Street (4th floor) in New York City (212-695-4173 ext 5) <www.workshoptheater.org>. Paul Singleton plays Sherlock Holmes, and Todd Butera is Dr. Watson, and the performances are recommended "for ages 9 to 109."
396. The September issue of Ripperologist (Sep 07 #1) has been published, with the first of three parts of "Jack the Ripper: From the Private Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes", an early pastiche (1907) written by Kurt Matull and Theo von Blankensee, translated into English by Eduardo Zinna and illustrated by Jane Coram and introduced by Leslie S. Klinger. The pastiche is one of the long series known to Sherlockians as the "memorias intimas" (although they were first published in German), and Zinna's preface offers a fine history of the series and the many languages in which it appeared. Ripperologist is an electronic journal available at <www.ripperologist.info>; if you want only the three issues with the pastiche, Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> will be happy to tell you the cost. The September issue also has an excerpt from the Canon in Zinna's "Opium Dens and Other Victorian Delights".
397. Richard Valley died on Oct. 12. In 1991 he launched the magazine Scarlet Street, offering enthusiastic coverage of classic horror and mystery films, and wrote the album notes for the CD "Sherlock Holmes: Classic Themes from 221B Baker Street" (Jun 96 #6) and MPI Video's DVD set of the 14 Rathbone/Bruce films (Apr 03 #4).
398. Stuart M. Kaminsky's dramatization of his short-story pastiche "The Final Toast" (1987), will have its world premiere during the International Mystery Writers' Festival at the RiverPark Center in Owensboro, Ky., June 12-22, 2008; the festival will also feature the U.S. premiere of Agatha Christie's long-lost play "Chimneys" adapted from her novel THE SECRET OF CHIMNEYS (she wrote the play for performance in London in 1931, but her manuscript was lost during a trip to North America and discovered 70 years later in Canada). The festival's web-site <www.newmysteries.org> will have more information about next year's events.
399. Oct 07 #3: The University of Wisconsin's reprint of Ely M. Liebow's splendid biography DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (Apr 07 #1) is available for a 30% discount from the $26.95 retail price, via the Internet <www.wisc.edu/wisconsinpress/books/2150.htm> or by phone (800-821-2736); use the code "AU657" in the "comments or special instructions" box.
400. It has been many years since I mentioned the J. Peterman Company, possibly because (like so many companies) they now depend more on the Internet than on printed catalogs; Gideon Hill notes that Peterman now offers a "Classic Inverness Cape Coat" (with an atmospheric mention of Sherlock Holmes in the description) for $699 <www.jpeterman.com> or (888-647-2555). The coat actually appears to be a MacFarlane, Gideon suggests (apparently purists insist that an Inverness is a cape without sleeves).
401. L. Frank James died on Sept. 2. He was a pastor and an actor, and author of AN OPENED GRAVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES INVESTIGATES HIS ULTIMATE CASE (Dec 06 #6); Holmes investigates the truth of the Biblical history of Jesus Christ.
402. The Sherlock Holmes Hotel at 108 Baker Street now is the Park Plaza Sherlock Holmes London, and it's holding Sherlock Holmes Murder Mystery Evenings, according to a press release spotted by Ken Lanza. Actors perform an interactive mystery during dinner, and the next events will be on Nov. 24 and Dec. 13. More information is available at <www.murdermysteryshop.com>.
403. Twin Engine Productions has published new print-on-demand editions of THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD and THE ADVENTURES OF GERARD at $10.95 each; their web-site's at <www.twinengine.se>.
404. A life mask of Basil Rathbone, "made circa 1939 and used to design make-up appliances for an unknown production," offered by Heritage Auction Galleries on Oct. 6, sold for $215.10 (including the buyer's premium); of course it's likely that there would have been spirited bidding if the seller had been able to demonstrate that the life mask was made for "The Hound of the Baskervilles". You may still be able to see a photograph of the life mask at <www.ha.com> (auction 648, item 22105).
405. Reported: ROUND THE RED LAMP AND OTHER MEDICAL WRITINGS, edited and with an introduction by Robert Darby (Kansas City: Valancourt Books, 2007; 348 pp., $16.95); a reprint of the 1894 book and three other medical stories.
406. Denny Martin Flinn died on Aug. 24. He acted on stage, screen, and television, and he was a writer: two pastiches, SAN FRANCISCO KILLS (1991) and KILLER FINISH (1991) featured San Francisco private Spencer Holmes (grandson of Sherlock Holmes); he also co-wrote the film "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country (1991) with Nicholas Meyer and adapted Meyer's THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION for BBC Radio 4 (1993).
407. There are a few Sherlockians who like to denigrate Petri wine, despite the fact that modern Petri wine is made by an entirely different company than the one that sponsored radio broadcasts by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce (1943-1946) and by Ben Wright and Eric Snowden (1949-1950); the old company exhibited at the California State Fair and Exposition in 1959, and the medal it won for its grappa sold at eBay this month for $54.00.

408. Oct 07 #4: Connections between Sherlock Holmes and James Bond are tenuous (although Sherlockian scholars have not neglected them), and it is nice to know that the Royal Mail plans to issue a set of stamps honoring James Bond and Ian Fleming on Jan. 8, showing different editions of six of his most famous novels; there will be a Prestige Stamp Book written by novelist Kim Newman, whose ANNO DRACULA (1992) had many interesting Canonical aspects. And it is of interest that one of the stamps will show the nudest young woman I can recall seeing on a British postage stamp. It's the cover of the current pa-perback edition of one of his novels, which you can see now on-line at Amazon; search for [for your eyes only penguin].
409. LibriVox is an Internet project for which volunteers read works in the public domain; they have an interesting list of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian stories by Arthur Conan Doyle, and they're at <www.librivox.org>.
410. Craig Wichman's Quicksilver Radio Theater broadcast Craig Wichman's dramatization of "The Speckled Band" in 1999, and the East Lynne Theater Company will perform the play in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 7 and 8, 2008. Their website is at <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
411. Jon Lellenberg has reported Christopher Hitchens' article "An Anglosphere Future", which discusses "how a shared tradition of ideas and values--not bloodlines--can be a force for victory," and begins with consideration of Conan Doyle's THE WHITE COMPANY and his views on the common heritage of the Americans and English; it's available on-line at <www.city-journal.org>.
412. Wanda Dow found amusing an parody "The Adventures of Wassup Holmes" created by Raul E. Duke, at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=wOj-Is2yIA0>; it's another example of the interesting things out there on the Internet.

413. Mary Schulz died on Oct. 15. Married to Ted Schulz for 54 years, Mary graciously agreed to name their son William Sherlock Schulz; she enjoyed classical music and golf, and was an enthusiastic member of The Scowrs and the Molly Maguires and The Persian Slipper Club in San Francisco; she was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1998.
414. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Lenox, Mass., on Oct. 19-21 offered both scholarship and entertainment (Sep 07 #5), including a chance to see Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes", and you can read about it in the Pittsfield newspaper at <www.berkshireeagle.com> searching for [sherlock holmes], and hear podcasts by Scott Monty (who performed and recorded) at <www.ihearofsherlock.com>.
415. Further to the report on "Undershaw Goes Under the Hammer" (Sep 07 #4), the Daily Telegraph had a well-illustrated story (Oct. 20) that likely still is available to their web-site <www.telegraph.co.uk>. Conan Doyle wrote about the house to his mother (Sept. 1897): "As the house and grounds & furniture stand they represent £6000 without any mortgage or charge of any kind upon it." According to the web-site <www.measuringworth.com>, a calculation of the increase in purchasing power from 1897 to 2006 yields £467,956.16 (far less than what the house will bring on the market). You can read the letter (and much more about the house, and many other things) in ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (2007).
416. Oct 07 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 154th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 11, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:30 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 <susan221bee@gmail.com> know if you're coming to the event.
417. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcx@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather.
418. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Sir Christopher Frayling, the rector of the Royal College of Art, an expert on spaghetti westerns, and author of NIGHTMARE: THE BIRTH OF HORROR (1996), a book that accompanied a four-part BBC-TV mini-series that included a detailed examination of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating will be limited, and you are advised to reserve early (details below).
419. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house on Friday, from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011. Many items from Jerry Margolin's collection will be available for purchase.
420. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $44.00 for chicken taragon or salmon Wellington ($50.00 for prime rib). You can request a formal announcement from Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com>.
421. The Beacon Society will hold its annual meeting at 3:15 pm in the lobby of the Algonquin to make the Fourth Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. More information on the award is available at <www.beaconsociety.org>.
422. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919). Please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). There is more information at their website <www.baskervillebash.homestead.com>.
423. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised.
424. Oct 07 #6: Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs included in the various dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), and 110 copies (for the Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
425. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in the dealers' room (Covent Garden West) on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> has information about dealers' tables. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the writings of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent event) on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel at 10:30 am; if you're planning to attend the event, please get in touch with Anne Cotton (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
426. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:30 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); the reception will feature a performance of Jerome Coopersmith's one-act play "The Other Side" (first performed at "Autumn in Baker Street" earlier this year) starting promptly at 1:15, and there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). The cost is $70.00 (details below) or $80.00 after Dec. 8 or at the door.
427. Baker Street West 1 and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will present a very irregular "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner at 6:00 pm at Kennedy's Irish Pub & Restaurant (327 West 57th Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues); details are available from Chrys Kegley (9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343) (818-894-1501) <ckegley@socal.rr.com>.
428. "Sherlock: Solo" (the new one-man play written and performed by Victor L. Cahn) will be performed at the Kirk Theatre at Theatre Row (410 West 42nd Street) at 8:00 pm; the box office phone number is 202-279-4200 and their web-site's at <www.resonanceensemble.org>, tickets cost $20.00. The play opens on Jan. 10 and closes on Feb. 3, so locals will have a chance to see the play on other dates.
429. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 54th Street (between 7th and 6th Avenues) (and yes, 6th Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas), and the cost will be $20.00 including tax and tip. It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations will be important; please send your checks to Judith Freeman (280 Ninth Avenue #1-C, New York, NY 10001. Overseas guests are welcome to reserve via e-mail and pay at the door; her e-mail address is <judith-freeman@worldnet.att.net>.
430. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement with the prices and a reservation form for the Thursday lecture and the Saturday reception, you can request a copy from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278.
431. Oct 07 #7: The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has made arrangements with the Algonquin for their "classic full" with one bed at $175.00 (or $275.00 for a "premiere suite"), Tuesday through Sunday. This is the total cost, since there is no tax on reservations arranged by the BSI. The offer's available to all Sherlockians, and room reservations must be made directly to the Algonquin (mention The Baker Street Irregulars) at 212-840-6800 before Dec. 8 (warning: last January our block of rooms sold out well before the deadline).

432. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to provide advice about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at websites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, and <www.expedia.com>; wise shoppers will then check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and don't neglect non-optional extras such as 14% in state and city taxes). John Pffor praises the Super 8 Hotel Times Square at 59 West 46th Street (212-719-5944); $119.99 plus tax per night.
433. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
434. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bsiweekend.com>.
435. Dan Stashower, one of the editors of the new collection ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (Sep 07 #6), will be interviewed on "The Diane Rehm Show" at 11:00 am on Nov. 19 on WAMU-FM (88.5); the show is broadcast by public radio in many other cities and on satellite radio, and is available on-line at <www.wamu.org/programs/dr>.
436. An exhibition on "Crime Scene Edinburgh: 20 Years of Rankin and Rebus" has opened at the National Library of Scotland, through Jan. 13. The focus of the exhibition is on Ian Rankin, but the exhibits include the original manuscript of "The Illustrious Client". There's additional information at the library's web-site <www.nls.uk/events/rebus20/index.html>.
437. Scott Monty has launched a "Sherlock Holmes Social Network" on the Internet on an open-source system called Ning, to give Sherlockians a chance to create their own community, at <sherlockholmes.ning.com>. It's an interesting demonstration of one of the many ways people can communicate on the World Wide Web, starting discussions, sharing media files, etc.

438. Nov 07 #1: New information about the birthday festivities in New York in January: on Saturday the dealers' room will be open from 9:00 am to noon.
439. Forecast: KNIFE POINT, by Lyndsay Faye, from Simon & Schuster. The author is Lyndsay Faye Lehner, a New York actor (Lyndsay Faye is her stage name) who has turned to writing ("the actors outnumber the pigeons in New York," she said in an interview in the Longview Daily News on Oct. 14); her first novel, a mystery about Jack the Ripper and Sherlock Holmes, brought her a $100,000 advance from the publisher (the book is scheduled for 2009).
440. Richard E. Crandall's article "The Challenge of Large Numbers" in Scientific American (Feb. 1997) has an interesting variant on the now-famous room full of monkeys typing away to produce Shakespeare's plays: "It would take approximately 10|3,000,000| [that's 10 to the 3 millionth power, for anyone reading this item via the Internet] years before a parrot, pecking randomly at a keyboard, could reproduce by chance *The Hound of the Baskervilles*" Don Dillistone spotted a reprint of the article in a pamphlet published by the magazine last year to encourage readers to renew their subscriptions.
441. Christopher Roden reports an announcement of "Re-Examining Conan Doyle: Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium" at the University of Regina on Nov. 7-9, 2008. There has been a call for papers about various aspects of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes have been requested, and there will be a film evening and a stage dramatization of a Holmes story; more information is available from Dr. Nils Clausson (Dept. of English, University of Regina, Regina, SK S4S 0A2, Canada) <www.uregina.ca/hri/Conferences/conan\_doyle\_2008.shtml>.
442. Robert F. O'Neill died on Oct. 23. He was a supervising producer and producer for many series for Universal Television from the 1960s through the 1990s, winning two Golden Globes (for "Murder, She Wrote") and an Emmy (for "Columbo"). He produced "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes" (1984), the twohour pilot for "Murder, She Wrote".
443. The October issue of Ripperologist (Oct 07 #2) has appeared, with the second of three parts of the early (1907) pastiche "Jack the Ripper: From the Private Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes", and reports on goings-on in the world of students of the infamous murderer. Ripperologist is an electronic journal available at <www.ripperologist.info>; if you want only the three issues with the pastiche, Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> will be happy to tell you the cost. The October issue also has news of the "Guardian News & Media Archive": the first phase is already on-line offering The Guardian from 1821 to 1975 and The Observer from 1900 to 1975; the remainder of the archives will launch next year, when every edition of the newspapers will be available <mediaguardian.co.uk/presspublishing/story/0,,2191657,00.html>.
444. Copies of the late Al Hirschfeld's limited-edition lithograph "The Game's Afoot" (showing Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce as Holmes and Watson) still are available (for $1,600) from the Margo Feiden Galleries at 15 East 9th Street, New York, NY 10003) (212-677-5330) <www.alhirschfeld.com>. The original artwork has been sold, and you would have been wise to buy a copy of the lithograph when it was first offered (Mar 92 #1) for $500.
445. Nov 07 #2: The Gotham Book Mart closed earlier this year; the N.Y. Times reported on May 23 on the sale of its contents to satisfy the store's arrears in rent to its landlord. Frances Steloff founded the bookshop in 1920 and made it a gathering place for authors and their readers; her slogan was "Wise men fish here," and one of those wise men was Christopher Morley, who discovered the shop in 1931, and spent many hours helping with publicity and other business matters (such as writing a set of dunning verses to be sent to delinquent customers). When she was arrested in 1935 for selling obscene literature (Random House's edition of Andre Gide's autobiography), Morley came to her defense, in his "Bowling Green" column in the Saturday Review of Literature, and his column was quoted by the judge when he dismissed the case. She died in 1989, at the age of 101; but the shop remained open and was a haven for admirers of Edward Gorey's work.
446. There's a new "Wordsworth Literary Lives" edition of Conan Doyle's autobiography MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES (reprinting the first British edition), with an excellent introduction by David Stuart Davies (London: Wordsworth, 2007; 368 pp., £3.99). Wordsworth also has a "Library Collection" (£9.99) that will soon include THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES.
447. Samantha Wolov has found THE SUPERHERO DETECTIVES, written by Beth Engleman Berner and illustrated by Jenna Riggs (Inglewood: Piggy Toes Press, 2005; 5 pp., $10.95); young children can follow the clues to solve a mystery (the cover shows the superhero detectives' dog Watson).
448. An article by Jess Blumberg in the November issue of Smithsonian about the *Mary Celeste* ("Phenomena: Abandoned Ship") provides a modern scientific explanation of what might really have happened to ship and its crew, with a mention of Conan Doyle's story "J. Habakuk Jephson's Statement".
449. Dr. Watson's Pub opened in the early 1970s in Philadelphia, and it's still going strong (at 216 South 11th Street), and (of course) there's a web-site at <www.drwatsonspub.com> with a cute little animated Sherlock Holmes.

450. The Easton Press (677 Connecticut Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857 (800-211-1308) <www.eastonpress.com> still offers their three-volume THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES; first issued in 1987, it's a handsome leather-bound reprint (with color frontispieces) of the Heritage Press edition they published in 1952 and 1957; $59.00 per volume postpaid (item 0135). They also have the PROFESSOR CHALLENGER SERIES in three volumes in a similar format, with an introduction by science-fiction author Robert Silverberg (2005); $65.00 per volume postpaid (item 1575).
451. Peter Haining died on Nov. 19. He started his career as a reporter, became editorial director at New English Library, and a full-time writer in 1970s; he edited many anthologies, and reference books devoted to James Bond, Doctor Who, and of course Sherlock Holmes: A SHERLOCK HOLMES SCRAPBOOK (1973), THE FINAL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1981), and THE TELEVISION SHERLOCK HOLMES (1986).
452. Nov 07 #3: John J. Miller had an interesting essay about Arthur Machen in the Oct. 31 issue of the Wall Street Journal, and discussed his novel THE THREE IMPOSTERS (published in 1895 and reprinted this year by Dover. Miller notes that after borrowing a copy of THE THREE IMPOSTERS, Conan Doyle told his friend Jerome K. Jerome: "Your pal Machen may be a genius all right; but I don't take him to bed with me again!"
453. Paul B. Smedegaard ("The Randall Gang") died on Nov. 14. He was involved in business administration, and in local politics in Racine, Wis., and an enthusiastic member of many midwestern Sherlockian societies. He enjoyed presiding over his own societies, including C.A.L.A.B.A.S.H. (Convivial Attendant Liaisons Among B.S.I. and Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes) and The Last Dog Hung Post-Prandial Club, and energetically pursued the goal of becoming a member of every one of the all-male Sherlockian societies. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1977.
454. Doug and Laura Marr's play "A Christmas Spirit" (about Conan Doyle and his involvement with Spiritualism) was first staged in 2002, and it will be revived at the Circle Theater in Omaha, Neb. (402-554-4715), through Dec. 22.
455. In Australia: "Sherlock Holmes and the Unsolved Case at Victor Harbor" is the title of a weekend Steamranger Heritage Train Murder Mystery in Mount Barker and Victor Harbor, scheduled in February and March by the Bearly Together Co. in Adelaide; contact Allen Lyne (8 Redgate Court, Moana Heights, SA 5169, Australia) <www.bearly.net>.
456. The Sherlock Holmes, the Whitbread theme pub in launched in Northumberland Street in 1957, celebrated it's 50th anniversary with "some small jollification" on Nov. 6, when a selection of ales and popular foods was available in the bar at 1957 prices. The pub still is a fine and atmospheric place to visit, and its web-site at <www.sherlockholmespub.com> explains its history, with lots of photographs.
457. THE HAMMER STORY: THE AUTHORIZED HISTORY OF HAMMER FILMS, by Marcus Hearn and Alan Barnes (London: Titan Books, 2007; 192 pp., £24.99/$35.00), is a second revised edition (the first appeared in 1997); it's a fine book, with two pages devoted to the 1959 Cushing/Morrell film "The Hound of the Baskervilles". Wayne Kinsey's HAMMER FILMS: THE BRAY STUDIOS YEARS (Richmond: Reynolds & Hearn, 2002; 356 pp., £19.95) will also be of interest to those who enjoyed the film.
458. Karen Murdock spotted a story in the Newark Star-Ledger about an exhibition at the Rupert Ravens Contemporary art gallery. Asha Ganpat's "The Marys" (according to the report) is "a votive table covered with scores of 6-inch statues of the Virgin, one of which, as in Sherlock Holmes' 'Adventure of the Six Napoleons,' has a diamond buried in the plaster. Could you smash to Mother of God to find it?"
459. "Surrey Votes Give Holmes Another Term" was the headline on a story in the Newport News Daily Press (Nov. 6), spotted by Ken Lanza; incumbent M. Sherlock Holmes won reelection to the Surrey County Board of Supervisors. And he has been active in local politics for decades: a story about him in the N.Y. Times on Jan. 22, 1972, was headlined "Negro Heads Virginia County".
460. Nov 07 #4: <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times07\_calendar-special.htm> is the URL for the latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times; it's an advertisement for their new Sherlockian calendar for 2008, with Sherlockian birthdays and events, and new artwork ($19.99), and for their new Christmas cards ($19.99 for a pack of ten). The Christmas cards also are available as single cards and in packs of twenty.
461. Thos. Kent Miller reports that his SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD (Oct 91 #3) has a second edition, as THE GREAT DETECTIVE ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD (Rockville: Wildside Press, 2007; 104 pp., $14.99); Leo Vincey (whom some will recall from Rider Haggard's SHE and AYESHA) is in Lhassa in 1891, and encounters a Norwegian named Sigerson, who is an excellent detective.
462. Don Martin's portrait of Sherlock Holmes (or of someone disguised as Sherlock Holmes) appeared in Mad magazine in the early 1970s; you can see it in full color at <www.nachshon.org/il/~its/Don%20Martin/posters/Holmes.jpg>. And it's included in MAD'S GREATEST ARTISTS: THE COMPLETELY MAD DON MARTIN (MAD'S GREATEST ARTIST SERIES), a new two-volume boxed set (Philadelphia: Running Press, 2007; 1200 pages, $150.00) offering a real fix for his fans.
463. It's always a pleasure to find that Conan Doyle's work is still in print: ROUND THE RED LAMP AND OTHER MEDICAL WRITINGS, edited and with an introduction by Robert Darby (Kansas City: Valancourt Books, 2007; 348 pp., $16.95), has the 1894 book, three other medical stories, and his non-fiction writings about medicine from 1887 to 1910. Darby's introduction offers an interesting discussion of Conan Doyle's work as a doctor and an author, and the state of medicine when he was in practice; the "realism" of his medical fiction often offended critics, and the reasons for this are intriguing.
464. Steve Hockensmith's THE BLACK DOVE (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2008; 304 pp., $23.95) is the third in his "Holmes on the Range" series about Old Red and Big Red Amlingmeyer, Montana cowboys who are enjoying the Sherlock Holmes stories as they appear in the 1890s, and solving mysteries on their own; this time they're in San Francisco, mostly in Chinatown and the Barbary Coast, involved with some thoroughly nasty villains. Hockensmith was an Edgar nominee for the first novel in the series, and there are amusing samples of his work at his web-site at <www.stevhockensmith.com>.
465. Ira Levin died on Nov. 12. Best known for his novels ROSEMARY'S BABY, THE STEPFORD WIVES, and THE BOYS FROM BRAZIL, he also wrote the award-winning Broadway comic thriller "Deathtrap" and the lyrics for "Drat! The Cat", a musical that ran for only eight performances in 1965, and contained a song "Holmes and Watson".
466. Thierry Saint-Joanis has noted a new French computer game: CEREBRAL SHERLOCK: LES ENQUETES CEREBRALES DE SHERLOCK HOLMES (from Anuman Interactive, E19.99); you can see his report at <www.sshf.com> (and you can click on the British for an English version). It's an animated game ("amusant pour les enfants et approuve par les parents"). Thierry maintains the web-site for the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France, and it's well worth a visit.
467. Nov 07 #5: Don Izban reports that SBIOS (Sherlockians by Invitation Only) will hold a Colonel Sebastian Moran Secret Gun Club "Hunt for the Mongoose Named Moriarty" on Feb. 29 (the event takes place only during Leap Years), and they will be celebrating Sherlock Holmes' "real birthday" on Oct. 10. All in Chicago, and additional information is available from Don (1812 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 06068).
468. David Stuart Davies reports that his new pastiche "Sherlock Holmes and the Ghost of Christmas Past" is in the holiday 2007 issue of Andrew Gulli's new Strand Magazine. Subscriptions (four issues) cost $19.95 (U.S. and Canada) or $44.95 (elsewhere), and the magazine's address is Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (UK: 800-961-280) <www.strandmag.com>.

469. The World Fantasy Convention ("Ghosts and Revenants, Memory, History, and Folklore") was held in Saratoga Springs, N.Y. this month, and Barbara and Christopher Roden were special guests, recognizing their Ash-Tree Press and The Ghost Story Society. The convention started in 1975, and you can read about its history at <www.worldfantasy.org>. Note: the Michael Whelan who their award as artist in 1981, 1982, and 1983, isn't the Michael F. Whelan who heads The Baker Street Irregulars.
470. Harold J. Berman died on Nov. 11. An expert in Russian law, he taught for decades at Harvard Law School and Emory University School of Law; according to his obituary in the N.Y. Times, when he decided to study Soviet law as a World War II army veteran at Yale Law School, there was no one to teach it, so he taught himself, and the first case he ever argued was in 1958 in Moscow, on behalf of the estate of Conan Doyle. The suit was against four Soviet state publishing houses and the Ministry of Culture of the USSR, seeking royalties on the millions of Conan Doyle's books that had been sold in the Soviet Union, and in a Moscow city court he won the right to pursue the case before the Supreme Court of the USSR, where (to no one's surprise) the court ruled that no royalties were owed.
471. [murmer] is a Canadian documentary oral history project that now includes descriptions of the Arthur Conan Doyle Room at the Toronto Public Library by Barbara Rusch, Doug Wriggleworth, and Peggy Perdue. You can listen to their stories at <www.murmertoronto.ca/tr/>; click on "arthur conan doyle room".
472. Reported: THE EYE OF JADE, by Diane Wei Liang (London: Picador, 2007; 240 pp., £12.99); Mei, the heroine, is a private detective in Beijing, as well as an admirer of Sherlock Holmes, and the book's described as "a gripping account of a female gumshoe's search for a Han dynasty artefact in modern Beijing is part thriller and part analysis of the city's past and present." An American edition's due from Simon & Schuster next year.
473. MEET ME IN BOHEMIA: A SHERLOCK HOLMES CZECH BOOK is the excursion book for The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's visit to Prague this year: Bob Ellis and Guy Marriott have edited an excellent anthology of scholarship about the many Canonical aspects of Bohemia and Czechoslovakia; the costs of the handbook is £14.00 (UK), £16.00/€25.00 (Europe), or $36.00/€18.00 (rest of the world) postpaid from Judi Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England.
474. Nov 07 #6: Alan Coren died on Oct. 18. He was a writer, magazine editor, and broadcaster, who joined the staff of Punch in 1963 and became its editor in 1978; Coren also was a television critic for The Times, columnist for many British papers, highly-acclaimed humorist, and author of a children's series that began with ARTHUR AND THE GREAT DETECTIVE (1981), and pastiches that included "The Curious Case of the Distressed Gentlefolk" in Punch and THE CRICKLEWOOD DIET (1982).
475. There's a new edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, illustrated by Pam Smy (Cambridge: Candlewick Press, 2006; 272 pp., $17.99); the illustrations are atmospheric and nicely done, and you can see the front cover and an inside spread at <www.candlewick.com>.
476. Further to the report about Liberton Bank House, where Conan Doyle lived as a child (Nov 06 #8), the Edinburgh Evening News reports (Nov. 15) that Dunedin School pupils enjoyed their first day at the 18th century house, which has been rescued from neglect after a long restoration campaign.
477. For admirers of Sherlock Snoopy: I reported the book when it was published (Jun 82 #3), but only recently have seen THE SNOOPY COLLECTION: ONE THOUSSAND FABULOUS SNOOPY PRODUCTS, edited by J-C Soares (New York: Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 1982) (New York: Ballantine Books, 1982); it has photographs of the plush doll and the mini vinyl figure of Snoopy in Sherlockian costume.
478. Visitors to Australia might want to stop by the Sherlock Holmes Inn in Melbourne; according to a web-site review, "It's about twenty years old, features classic low ceiling (very English pub, we do say) and does big on the traditional idea of having a knees-up."
479. Dana Richards has for many years specialized in Victorian (as well as modern) puzzles: riddles, conundrums, enigmas, charades, anagrams, acrostics, and many others, and his VICTORIAN ENIGMAS AND SHERLOCKIAN PUZZLES offers a fascinating (and challenging) exploration of the genre. His 82-page booklet (published this year by his Petty Puzzle Press) includes solutions, and costs $12.00 postpaid.
480. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder have now reached episode #13 of their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcasts at <www.ihearofsherlock.com>, with a 55-minute interview with Jon Lellenberg and Dan Stashower about their work on ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, about their letters, and about Conan Doyle.
481. Alberene Royal Mail has added a Sherlock Holmes pocket magnifier ($29.95) a Sherlock Holmes pocket watch ($59.95), and a Diogenes Club Strangers Room wall clock to their Sherlockian offerings; (Box 902, 9 Mill Alley, Harrisville, NH 03450) (800-843-9078) <<http://www.alberene.com>>.
482. Ken Lanza spotted a report on The Second Street Irregulars, a group that's "modeled after the Sherlockian Baker Street Irregulars." They're members of the Lizzie Borden Society Forum, who gathered this month in Fall River, Mass., at the Borden House on Second Street. You can read all about it at their web-site at <www.wordpress.com/tag/second-street-happenings>.

483. Nov 07 #7: Laurie R. King reports that Picador has published new editions of the first four "Mary Russell" books with striking new covers ($14.00); THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE, A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN, A LETTER OF MARY, and THE MOOR appeared in October. Her web-site, which has a link to her blog, is at <www.laurierking.com>.
484. Enola Holmes, the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock, was featured in Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE MISSING MARQUESS (Dec 05 #4), and it's now available in paperback (New York: Puffin, 2007; 224 pp., $4.99). There are two more titles in the series: THE CASE OF THE LEFT-HANDED LADY (New York: Philomel, 2007; 192 pp., $12.99) and THE CASE OF THE BIZARRE BOUQUETS (New York: Philomel, 2008; 192 pp., $14.99); for younger readers (ages 9-12).
485. Reported by Laura Kuhn: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, read (abridged) by Ben Kingsley on 4 CDs (Ashland: Blackstone Audio, 2007; $19.95); you can hear a sample at their web-site at <www.blackstoneaudio.com>.
486. There are two mentions of St. Pancras in the Canon (the St. Pancras Hotel in "A Case of Identity" and the St. Pancras case in "Shoscombe Old Place"), and St. Pancras has been in the news again: the St. Pancras railway station is now the London terminus of Eurostar (that's the company that runs trains through the Channel Tunnel). I'll leave it to the railways experts to provide a list of cases in which Holmes and Watson took trains from the station. St. Pancras Chambers, derelict since the 1980s, is being refurbished as a five-star hotel and apartments; <www.stpancraschambers.co.uk> is the URL for a web-site with interesting photographs, old and new.
487. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists honored the world's first forensic geologist at dinner in Denver on Oct. 31, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America; the visitors were welcomed by Bill Dorn on behalf of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients. There were two technical sessions, and a public forum, on forensic geology during the convention, with some interesting "war stories" as well as some science. Our next dinners will be in San Antonio on Apr. 23, and in Houston on Oct. 8.
488. "They Might Be Giants" (the rock group that took its name from the film in which George C. Scott played a psychotic judge who believes that he's Sherlock Holmes) first performed in 1983, and issued its first record in 1986; you may have heard them if you watch "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" on Comedy Central (they perform the theme). They're on tour now, and were at the 9:30 Club in Washington this month; they're excellent - musicians, and if you want to hear them, their tour schedule is available at their web-site at <www.tmbg.com>, where you can also listen to their podcasts.

489. It has been quite a while since I mentioned The Wolfe Pack (Jul 96 #1); the society has about 400 members (many of them as fanatic about Nero Wolfe as some Sherlockians are about Holmes), and a web-site at <www.nerowolfe.org>. They have an annual dinner in New York, a literary award called the "Nero" (Laurie R. King won for A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN in 1996) and a lifetime achievement award called the "Archie" (Rex Stout, Agatha Christie, and Arthur Conan Doyle were the first winners in 2005). Membership in the society costs $35.00 for two years (and includes four issues of The Gazette); Box 230822, Ansonia Station, New York, NY 10023.

490. Nov 07 #8: Gideon Hill reports "The Complete Conan Doyle Sherlock Holmes" set of 64 CDs with all of the BBC Radio 4 programs that starred Clive Merrison and Michael Williams, released in July by BBC Audiobooks America; it retails for $250.00 but is discounted to $139.99 by Tower Books <www.tower.com>. The same CDs were issued earlier by the BBC in Britain as a "Complete Sherlock Holmes Box Set" (Nov 04 #2) along with a book by Bert Coules offering "a look behind the scenes at the highs and lows that came with the undertaking of such an enormous project," but there's no mention of a book in descriptions of the American set.
491. The new Disney film "Enchanted" is a delightful and amusing romance, suitable for all ages; if you go to see it you can keep an eye on the jewelry worn by Amy Adams, Susan Sarandon, and others: it was all hand-crafted for the film by Maggie Schpak (whose Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars is "The Soup Plate Medal").
492. Frederic Dorr Steele's portrait of Sherlock Holmes appears in full color in the December issue of Smithsonian magazine, on its "This Month in History" page, honoring the appearance 120 years ago of "A Study in Scarlet" in Beeton's Christmas Annual.
493. MURDER, 'ORRIBLE MURDER (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 2006; 238 pp., $18.00) is a collection of stories by Amy Myers, including her Sherlockian pastiche "The Case of the Faithful Retainer"; Crippen & Landru, Box 9315, Norfolk, 23505) <www.crippenlandru.com>. Her pastiche was first published in Mike Ashley's anthology THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: Robinson, 1997; 512 pp., £6.99) (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1997, 512 pp., $10.95).
494. A gorgeous copy of the first edition of THE LOST WORLD (with Conan Doyle on the front cover, disguised as Prof. Challenger) is shown in full color on the cover of the Oct. 2002 issue of Firsts: The Book Collector's Magazine, which also has Robin H. Smiley's "Books on Film" report on the story. The issue also has Don Herron's article on "Arkham House Ephemera: The Classic Years" (for those who saved, or wish they had saved, August Derleth's brochures, sales lists, and postcards). $9.00 postpaid; Box 65166, Tucson, AZ 85728 <www.firsts.com>.
495. G. K. CHESTERTON'S SHERLOCK HOLMES (Feb 03 #3) offered his essays and his illustrations for a never-published edition of the stories, and the American Chesterton Society now offers a "a 300-pound Christmas gift" (a colorful Christmas-tree ornament). It costs $24.95 postpaid (4117 Pebblebrook Circle, Minneapolis, MN 55437 <www.chesterton.org>).
496. Bouchercon 2007 ("Bearly Alive") went well in Anchorage, from all reports. Laurie King moderated a "My Name Is Sherlock Holmes" panel (on "the enduring romance between the great Holmes and his fans"), with Les Klinger, Michael Kurland, and Michael Masliah. Bouchercon 2008 ("Charmed to Death") will be held in Baltimore on Oct. 9-12; the convention's web-site will be found at <www.charmedtodeath.com>. Bouchercon 2009 ("Elementary, My Dear Indy!") will be held in Indianapolis on Oct. 15-18.
497. Dec 07 #1: The digital world offers more and more opportunities to publish Sherlockian pastiches: "Amazon Shorts" are available at <www.amazon.com> at $0.49 each, and there are at least three Sherlockian pieces listed "Sherlock Holmes and the Wayward Wife" (by Woodrow W. Walker) and "The Belgian at Baker Street: Did Hercule Poirot Meet Sherlock Holmes" and "A Study in Watson: The Extraordinary Life of the Man Behind Sherlock Holmes" (by Rafe McGregor). Rafe McGregor also has a web-site at <www.rafecmcgregor.co.uk>.
498. Rohase Piercy's MY DEAREST HOLMES, was published almost 20 years ago (Apr 88 #1), and it's now back in print (Charleston: BookSurge, 2007; 144 pp., $12.99); it's an intriguing book: it is homosexual in its intellectual and emotional approach, but it is neither erotic nor pornographic. It's a twopart pastiche; the first half presenting Watson's account of a new case in 1887, and the second offers a thoroughly revised report on the events that preceded and followed the fateful journey to the Reichenbach.
499. Further to the item (Nov 07 #2) on the Easton Press' three-volume THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES: Jon Lellenberg notes that the current edition is not an exact reprint of the Heritage Press edition that appeared in the 1950s, which did not include all the introductions published by the Limited Editions Club. Easton's 1987 edition was a reprint of the Heritage Press set, but Jon recommended that they expand the set to include all the introductions that had appeared only in the Limited Editions set, and the current Easton set has the introductions by Vincent Starrett, Elmer Davis, Fletcher Pratt, Rex Stout, Anthony Boucher, and Christopher Morley. $59.00 per volume postpaid (item 0135); 677 Connecticut Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857 (800-211-1308) <www.eastonpress.com>.
500. The November issue of Ripperologist (Nov 07 #1) has appeared, with the last of three parts of the early (1907) pastiche "Jack the Ripper: From the Private Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes", and reports on goings-on in the world of students of the infamous murderer. Ripperologist is an electronic journal available at <www.ripperologist.info>. If you want only the three issues with the pastiche, Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> will be happy to tell you the cost.
501. Laurie R. King's new stand-alone (and non-Russell) novel TOUCHSTONE will be published on Boxing Day (that's Dec. 26, for those who don't celebrate the holidays in British style), and there's lots of news, as well as a link to her blog, at her web-site at <www.laurierking.com>. The Laurie R. King Online Store at <www.cafepress.com/laurierking/4076810> offers tote-bags and shirts and such that show the covers of the new editions of the first four Mary Russell novels (Nov 07 #7).
502. Jean-Paul Gratiis is the editor of SHERLOCK HOLMES DANS TOUS SES ETATS (Paris: Editions Payos & Rivages, 2007; 374 pp., E9.50); the anthology has 13 stories, four by French authors and nine translated from English (including an unpublished out-take from William Kotzwinkle's MURDER IN BUGLAND). Only four of the stories are reprints, and Gratiis has cast his net widely, covering both the old (Stephen Leacock's "Le Mystère qui rend maboul") and the new (Ole Joe's "L'Aventure du clitoris en feu").
503. Dec 07 #2: Francine Kitts has reported THE 101 MOST INFLUENTIAL PEOPLE WHO NEVER LIVED: HOW CHARACTERS OF FICTION, MYTHS, LEGENDS, TELEVISION, AND MOVIES HAVE SHAPED OUR SOCIETY, CHANGED OUR BEHAVIOR, AND SET THE COURSE OF HISTORY, by Allan Lazar, Dan Karlan, and Jeremy Salter (New York: Harper Paperbacks, 2006; 336 pp., $13.95); Sherlock Holmes is #8.
504. "It's elementary. EAT SMART" is the title of an imaginative poster (#4417) intended to encourage healthy eating, available from Learning ZoneXpress, Box 1022, Owatonna, MN 55060 (888-455-7003) <www.learningzonexpress.com> for $14.95. "Find the produce," the poster urges, asking children ("appropriate for grades 1 to 12") to identify "apple, asparagus, beans, Napa cabbage, cantaloupe, dried chili peppers, chives, garlic, grape, lentils,

- okra, onions, pea, bell peppers, raisins." There are posters with similar "fun food" portraits of Albert Einstein and George Washington, and the company also makes the Sherlock Holmes portrait available on an "It's elementary. READ" poster.
505. There's a new edition of THE LOST WORLD (London: Headline Review, 2007; 288 pp., £4.99); it's an addition to the "Headline Review Classics" series that included the nine volumes of the Canon (Nov 06 #4).
506. Forecast for January: CRITICAL SURVEY OF MYSTERY & DETECTIVE FICTION, edited by Carl Rollyson (Pasadena: Salem Press, 2008; five vols., 2,080 pp., $399.00); the table of contents and some of the articles (including Terry Heller's discussion of Conan Doyle) can be viewed at the publisher's website at <https://salempress.com/Store/samples/cs\_mystery/cs\_mystery.htm>. This is a revised and expanded edition; the first (four volume) edition was edited by Frank N. Magill and published in 1988.
507. Garry James has written about Sherlock Holmes' weapons in the past, and his latest article ("The Guns of Sherlock Holmes") is in the Nov. 2007 issue of Guns & Ammo <www.gunsandammomag.com/classics/ge\_sherlock\_0711>. Their postal address is 7819 Highland Scenic Road, Baxter, MN 56425 (800-260-6397); $8.00 postpaid to the US, $13.00 to Canada, or $18.00 overseas).
508. <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times07-12.htm> is the URL for the latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times; in which they offer their S'ian calendar as well as books and other items, as well as some news of recent Sherlockian events.
509. The 27th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium ("The Year of the Yard") will be held in Dayton, Ohio, March 7-9, 2008; Cathy Gill manages the mailing list (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
510. Ben Kingsley, who was excellent as Watson in the film "Without a Clue" in 1988, went on to read abridged versions of seven stories from the Canon for Dove Books on Tape (Jun 89 #4). Kingsley is a fine reader (the stories are (Scan/RedH/Twis/Copp/Card/Croo/Sixn), and the recordings have been reissued on four CDs as THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($19.95) by Blackstone Audio (800-729-2665) <www.blackstoneaudio.com>; you can hear a sample reading at their web-site.
511. Dec 07 #3: The American edition of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley (New York: Penguin Press, 2007; 706 pp., $37.95), is almost the same as the British edition (May 07 #6): there are a few additional explanations of material that might not be familiar to American readers. It's a book that Doyleans and Sherlockians will welcome, and Randall Stock has an excellent web-page, with much more information about the book, at "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" at <members.aol.com/shbest/ref/conan-doyle-life-letters.htm>.
512. "The Adventure of the Blue Carbuncle (Version 2.0)" is Dean Clark's radioplay script, described by Don Hobbs as loosely based on the Canonical tale with a bit of "Without a Clue" thrown in for good measure. The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa and The Diogenes Club of Dallas for performed the play, which Don notes is "a superb stocking-stuffer for silly Sherlockian scion societies." The script is available by e-mail from Dean <dclark@seg.org>.
513. Pat Ward spotted a three-minute skit from "The Muppet Show" on YouTube, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=IjrQB2rEtFE>. It's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Disappearing Clues" (with Rowlf as Sherlock Holmes and Baskerville as Dr. Watson); the skit aired on Oct. 18, 1976 (Jim Henson played Rowlf).
514. Donald J. Terras (whose Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars is "The Politician, the Lighthouse, and the Trained Cormorant") takes the Investiture seriously: he has been elected president of the American Lighthouse Coordinating Committee, which (of course) has a web-site at <www.alcc.ws>. Don presides over the Grosse Point Light Station near Chicago; its web-site is at <www.grossepointlighthouse.net>. Don lives in the keeper's quarters, and the light station is still in operation as a private aid to navigation on Lake Michigan.
515. "How tastes change." Denis Welch noted in the New Zealand Listener on Dec. 15. "It was not much more than 60 years ago that the *Listener* authoritatively declared: 'With the possible exception of Sherlock Holmes, the creation of Conan Doyle, no other fiction character is better known to English readers than Captain Kettle.' Captain who?"
516. Ted Riccardi's THE ORIENTAL CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Random House, 2003; 320 pp., $24.95) was reported earlier (Sep 03 #3); nine stories about cases Holmes solved during the Great Hiatus in exotic settings, including India, then part of the empire of Edward VII. Riccardi warns in his preface that "the reader who looks to these tales for historical consistency will be disappointed," and that's certainly accurate in this case (Edward traveled to India as Prince of Wales in 1875, and of course Victoria was on the throne during the Great Hiatus).
517. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company are continuing their CD series, and their latest CD is "The Beryl Coronet and "The Speckled Band" (dramatized by Chris Drake), with a fine cast that includes Jim Crozier as Holmes and Dave Hawkes as Watson. The CD is available from the Society at Mole End, Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England); £5.00 postpaid to the U.K., £6.00/€9.00 to Europe, £9.00/$12.00 elsewhere (sterling checks payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks payable to Jean Upton; euros in currency, please).
518. Dec 07 #4: Edinburgh's new Conan Doyle Medical Centre was officially opened on Nov. 30; it's located in Nether Liberton Lane, and you will find a color photo at <www.richardmurphyarchitects.com/projects/353>. The medical center, which will serve 3,700 patients, is near Liberton Bank House, where Conan Doyle lived as a child; the long-derelect house has been restored and converted into the Dunedin School (Nov 07 #6).
519. Captain who? Captain Owen Kettle was the creation of C. J. Cutcliffe Hyne, as a minor character in HONOUR OF THIEVES (1895) and then in his own story Pearson's Magazine in 1897; he also appeared in THE ADVENTURES OF CAPTAIN KETTLE and other later books, and in silent films. Some of the stories are available on-line at <gaslight.mtroyal.ca/kettmenu.htm>, and there are some interesting web-sites with more information about Cutcliffe Hyne and Kettle at <www.collectingbooksandmagazines.com/hyne.html> and an intriguing blog at <yesterday-papers.blogspot.com> (use the "search blog" feature to find "kettle").
520. Admirers of Derham Groves' imaginative work as architect, artist, and writer will be glad to hear that he now has a blog at <www.derhamgroves.com>. There's a long list of categories, including "Sherlock Holmes", where you will find his report on "Conan Doyle's Moustache for Sale". And if you're not familiar with his work, spend some time at his blog.
521. Dragoncat <www.etsy.com> is the web-site for Earlynn Collier's hand-painted china and needlework, and she has ten Sherlockian items, including an imaginative night-light. Her postal address is 104 Brunswick Drive, Greenwood, IN 46143.
522. Bob Katz and Dean Clark spotted a news report about a giant rat discovered in a "lost world" in the remote Foja Mountains in western New Guinea; expedition scientists also found a pygmy possum, one of the world's smallest marsupials. The photograph shows Martua Sinaga with a giant rat that weighed 1.4 kg. Pygmy possums weigh from 10 to 50 grams, and of course one might wonder if giant rats dine on pygmy possums.
523. Reported: a bit of Conan Doyle in SHORE CHRONICLES: DIARIES AND TRAVELERS' TALES FROM THE JERSEY SHORE 1764-1955, edited by Margaret Thomas Buchholz (West Creek: Down the Shore Publishing, 2003; 368 pp., $16.95); Conan Doyle visited Atlantic City in 1922, and wrote about it in OUR AMERICAN ADVENTURE (1923), excerpted in Buchholz's book.
524. Reported: Michael A. Hoey's ELVIS, SHERLOCK & ME (Albany: BearManor Media, 2007; 336 pp., $24.95); the memoirs (subtitled "How I Survived Growing Up in Hollywood") of the son of Dennis Hoey, who played Lestrade in the Universal "Sherlock Holmes" series.

525. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder have now reached episodes #14 and #15 of their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" podcasts at <www.ihearofsherlock.com>, with a two-part interview with Mike Whelan, covering his first experience with Sherlock Holmes, how he became head of The Baker Street Irregulars, and the BSI and its traditions, including the birthday festivities.
526. Dec 07 #5: The Feb. 2008 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, offers Sherlockian cover art by Phil Cornell, a new Amlingmeyer brothers pastiche by Steve Hockensmith ("The Devil's Acre"), a pastiche by Ed Hoch ("A Scandal in Montreal"), and reviews of recent Sherlockian and Doylean books by Jon L. Breen.
527. Miklos Rozsa's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" was written for Jascha Heifetz and premiered by the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in 1956; it was then used in the score for Billy Wilder's "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and a new recording of the score was issued by Tadlow earlier this year (Feb 07 #7). Now Naxos has issued a new recording of Rozsa's "Violin Concerto" and "Sinfonia Concertante" by the Russian Philharmonic Orchestra on a CD ($9.98); it's also available from Amazon Digital Services as an MP3 download ($7.99). This year marks the 100th anniversary of Rozsa's birth.
528. Australia will issue a set of stamps in February honoring the centenary of Scouting in Australia, with a portrait of Lord Robert Baden-Powell on one of the stamps; he is mentioned in Conan Doyle's history THE GREAT BOER WAR, and Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes are mentioned in Baden-Powell's SCOUTING FOR BOYS.
529. Jeff Falkingham's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE COUNTY COURTHOUSE CAPER was published in 2001, and a new "2007 flood edition" was issued this year to benefit flood recovery in Browns Valley, Minn.; there's a brief excerpt at his web-site <www.cccaper.com/excerpt4.html>, and the cost of the 227-page book is $20.00 postpaid (Box 307, Browns Valley, MN 56219). Falkingham brings Holmes to Browns Valley in 1886 to help solve a series of murders, and the book offers a lot of local history.
530. Laurie R. King reports that she has started work on her ninth Mary Russell novel, which has the working title THE LANGUAGE OF THE BEES. Her web-site (with a link to her blog) is at <www.laurierking.com>.
531. Forecast for April: Shane Peacock's DEATH IN THE AIR (Tundra); a sequel to his EYE OF THE CROW (Aug 07 #3). A flying trapeze artist dies at Holmes' feet, and he notices that the trapeze bar has been cut twice.
532. Andrew Lycett's THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (New York: Free Press, 2007; 557 pp., $30.00) is the American edition of his biography CONAN DOYLE: THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, published earlier this year in Britain (Sep 07 #6). Lycett has had access to far more sources than any previous biographer of Conan Doyle, and he was able to make some corrections to statements in the British edition.
533. Richard L. Kellogg has written for psychologists and children in addition to Sherlockians; his VIGNETTES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Gryphon Books, 2008; 106 pp., $16.00) is a collection of 20 essays published in journals that range from The Baker Street Journal to Studies in Psychoanalytic Theory, and the subjects of his essays include James Hilton, Eliot Ness, Allan Pinkerton, and Henry David Thoreau. Gryphon's address is Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228 <www.gryphonbooks.com>.
534. Dec 07 #6: According to a poll commissioned by British health insurer BCWA this year, Dr. Watson "is sadly more well-known to the average Brit than many real-life medics that have actually made a genuine difference to people's lives." Watson was correctly identified by 59% of the respondents, followed by Sir Alexander Fleming (51%), Dr. Kildare (47%), Dr. Frasier Crane (43%), and Florence Nightingale (37%).
535. Dan L. Hover, Sr., has dramatized "A Study in Scarlet" for a full-cast recording on 4 CDs ($24.95) available from ACD Productions (Box 191, West Salem, OH 44287) <www.acdproductions.com>; it's well done, with a fine cast, including Ron Cuirle as Holmes and Geoffrey Darling as Watson.
536. Eleanor Schweickert died on Dec. 13. She was a generous, refined, and gracious lady, the widow of William P. Schweickert, and she was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1984.
537. Further to the item (Feb 07 #2) on the campaign to upgrade the protection of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, the Department for Culture, Media, and Sport has rejected the appeal of its decision the building lacks the level of special architectural interest which would justify a Grade 1 listing." The decision (at hand from John Baesch) notes that it cannot be said that the house "survives little-altered from the time when Conan Doyle occupied it," and that "were Conan Doyle to return he would find both the appearance and the 'feel' of his old home much altered."
538. Dr. William R. Hanson has designed a cachet to accompany his special cancel for the GlenPex Stamp and Postcard Show in Glens Falls, N.Y., on Nov. 17; the cachet shows Holmes and Watson in front of Simpson's on the Strand, and a quote from "The Dying Detective" (which Baring-Gould dated Nov. 19, 1887, almost exactly 120 years before the show opened), and the cancel shows Conan Doyle and James Fenimore Cooper (the show had exhibits on Holmes and Cooper). The cost of the cover is $4.50 postpaid (to the U.S. and Canada) or $5.00 (elsewhere); his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
539. Joe Bevilacqua's 30-minute parody radio series "The Misadventures of Sherlock Holmes" was launched on WKNJ-FM (Union City) in 1980 and continued on WBAI-FM (New York) in 1983 and 1984; the programs were available on CDs and cassettes (Aug 00 #1), and now you can listen to them (and many of his non-Sherlockian programs) without charge at <www.joebev.com> (click on "audio library" and then on "comedy library"). Daws Butler was Joe's good friend and mentor, and wrote the script for the first program ("Sherlock Holmes in Trouble"); go back click on "writings" to find books Joe has written about Daws Butler. There's a photo gallery and more information about the series at <www.comedyorama.com/holmes>.

Jan 08 #1:

1. "A long weekend of Sherlockian activities, largely involving too much food and even more drink," was Michel Dirda's forecast in his "Dirda on Books" on-line conversation at <www.washingtonpost.com>, and the description certainly was appropriate. The festivities began with the now-traditional ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's, and the Christopher Morley Walk was led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (with lunch at McSorley's).
2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was Sir Christopher Frayling, who presented a fascinating report on the genesis of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" based on new information revealed in Conan Doyle's pocket diary for 1901. You'll be able to read his lecture in The Baker Street Journal later this year (see below for information on how to subscribe).
3. On Friday members of The Hounds of the Internet met informally at the bar at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant before the William Gillette Luncheon; the luncheon featured The Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) in a reprise of their 1984

- presentation of excerpts from the Canon as written by Chandler, Shakespeare, Pinter, Joyce, and Milne. And Otto Penzler's traditional Mysterious Bookshop open house offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
4. The Gillette Luncheon also featured Evelyn Herzog's announcement of 19 new members of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, a society for many years XX-rated (with regard to chromosomes), until 1991, when four men were made full members (with Investitures). At the end of 2006 men were invited to make ASHes of themselves by applying for membership, and the new members are: John F. Baesch ("Cardinal Tosca"), Peter J. Crupe ("The Noble Bachelor"), Allan Devitt ("The Criterion Bar"), Joe Fink ("Tonga"), Alexian Gregory ("The Coptic Monasteries of Syria and Egypt"), Andrew Joffe ("The Dog That Did Nothing in the Night-Time"), Roger Johnson ("Shinwell Johnson"), Robert S. Katz ("Dr. Jackson"), Brad Keefauver ("Something Hunt"), William Nadel ("These Modern Gramophones"), Andrew J. Peck ("The Date Being-?"), Warren Randall ("An Impish Habit"), Christopher Redmond ("The Glamour of His Convictions"), Philip A. Shreffler ("Radix Pedis Diaboli"), Andrew L. Solberg ("Professor Coram"), Thom Utecht ("Montague Street"), Edwin Van der Flaes ("Nonpareil Club"), Bill Vande Water ("A Very Ordinary Individual After All"), and Ben Vizoskie ("Briarbrae").
  5. The Beacon Society gathered for its annual meeting at the Algonquin on Friday afternoon; the group's mission is to encourage and recognize programs that introduce young people to Holmes, and the winner of this year's Beacon award was Watson's Tin Box (the society was honored for its sponsorship of an annual student essay-writing competition).
  6. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Union League Club, and Heloise Rathbone (granddaughter of Basil Rathbone) was honored as the "highly irregular" guest at the reception, offering some fine stories about her grandfather. The dinner featured the usual toasts and traditions (including Andy Fusco's imaginative and ad-lib rendition of the Constitution and Buy-Laws), Michael Dirda's tribute to Vincent Starrett (this year being the 75th anniversary of the publication of his THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES), Betsy Rosenblatt's stirring up-date of Samuel Rosenberg's NAKED IS THE BEST DISGUISE, Ray Betzner's toast to Old Irregular Vincent Starrett, a tribute in song (with words by Henry Boote) to the four senior Irregulars present at the dinner (Art Levine, David Weiss, Peter Blau, and George McCormack), and much more.
7. Jan 08 #2: Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, awarding Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Betsy Rosenblatt ("Lucy Ferrier"), Dana Richards ("The Priory School"), Dave Morrill ("Count Von Kramm"), Barbara Roisman Cooper ("Mary Maberley"), Randall Stock ("South African Securities"), John Genova ("Harry Pinner"), and Guy Marriott ("The Grand Hotel du Louvre").
  8. Mike also presented the BSI's Two-Shilling Award (for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty) to Sherry Rose-Bond, and the Editor's Medal to Roy Pilot, Al Rosenblatt, and Christopher and Barbara Roden, in recognition of their services as editors of books and Christmas Annuals published by the BSI.
  9. The Gaslight Gala, held at the Manhattan Club, celebrated "Damsels in Distress" with toasts, music and song (by the Gaslight Damsels and Dudes), a skit ("That Was No Lady, That Was My Watson"), Donny Zaldin as "Carnac the Magnificent, Sherlock Style", Don Hobbs' Sherlockian video tour of "Texas, Oklahoma, and perhaps Arkansas", a raffle (a sweatshirt donated by Cynthia Wein), and an auction.
  10. On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin welcomed (as usual) sellers and buyers, and at 10:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) gathered for their Junior Bloodstain, which featured a dramatic reading of Marilyn MacGregor's dramatization of Poul Anderson and Gordon R. Dickson's 1953 pastiche "The Adventure of the Misplaced Hound".
  11. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party was again at the New York City Bar Association, with entertainment in the auditorium, and wining, dining, and conversation in their reception room. The entertainment began with a performance of Jerome Coopersmith's one-act play "The Other Side" (starring Paul Singleton and Elyse Locurto as Harry and Bess Houdini, and Bob Thomalen and Mary Ellen Rich as Sir Arthur and Lady Conan Doyle), and continued with Al and Betsy Rosenblatt's poetic report on events of the previous year and the previous evening, and Mary Ann Bradley's introduction of the ladies who have been honored by the BSI as the Woman.
  12. Ray Betzner was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year: his article "The Wicked Beginnings of a Baker Street Classic!" And the John H. Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets (by June Kinnee, Sue Vizoskie, Elaine Coppola, and Carol Cavaluzzi) for a prize donated by Patricia Guy: a bottle of 1985 Masi Amarone ("A census taker tried to quantify me once. I ate his liver with some fava beans and a big Amarone," Hannibal Lecter said, in THE SILENCE OF THE LAMBS).
13. Jan 08 #3: The Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to the this year's auction were Maggie Schpak and the Curious Collectors of Baker Street (a glamorous replica of the Beryl Coronet), Joe Copolla and the Mycroft Holmes Society (an arts-and-crafts style hand-crafted bracket clock), Gail Postal (an oil portrait of Sherlock Holmes), Elaine Coppola (Google's official lapel pin with their Sherlockian logo from May 22, 2005), and Joanne Zahorsky-Reeves (a custom tailored replica of Sherlock Holmes' dressing gown).
  14. A Saturday-evening event was the "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner at Kennedy's Irish Restaurant, where Sherlockian from at least five nations joined Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street for additional festivities (including a traditional reading from Ogden Nash's THE PRIMROSE PATH). Many Sherlockians (and a few non-Sherlockians) also attended an evening performance of "Sherlock: Solo", a one-man play that written and performed by Victor Cahn. And Sunday morning a convivial group of visiting and local long-weekenders gathered at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant for a brunch arranged by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
  15. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $26.50 a year ($29.00 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); and there's an option offering a subscription to the BSJ and to the Christmas Annual for $36.50 (or $40.00 foreign). You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, where there's additional interesting material such as some of the papers written by past winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSJ, and information on the BSI's other publications.
  16. And a final note, for those who are planning ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 9, 2009, honoring the 150th anniversary of the birth of Arthur Conan Doyle and the 75th anniversary of the founding of the BSI. And planning continues for the BSI's "A Study in Scarlet" excursion to Salt Lake City (Aug. 29-Sept. 1), and for the Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium at Harvard University's Houghton Library in Cambridge (May 7-9, 2009).
  17. "A REMARKABLE MIXTURE": AWARD-WINNING ARTICLES FROM THE BAKER STREET JOURNAL, edited and introduced by Steven Rothman (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 2007; 362 pp., $35.00), is an anthology of the writings of winners of the Morley-Montgomery Award, from Poul Anderson in 1958 to Harold Billings in 2006. The award was established by Lew David Feldman in honor of Christopher Morley and James Montgomery, and honors the author of the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal in the preceding year; the anthology is a fine demonstration of how interesting the BSJ has been, and is. By mail: (2 Dettling Road, Maynard, MA 01754); $35.00 plus shipping: $3.95 (North America) or $9.95 (elsewhere) plus $1.50 for each additional copy. You can also order on-line at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.

18. Jan 08 #4: George MacDonald Fraser died on Jan. 2. An excellent writer, he was best-known for a long series of novels about the picaresque coward, bully, and womanizer Harry Flashman; Fraser also wrote fine screenplays and insightful introductions to reprints of THE WHITE COMPANY/SIR NIGEL and THE EXPLOITS AND ADVENTURES OF BRIGADIER GERARD. His Flashman series debuted in 1969, and "Flashman & the Tiger" was first published in the Daily Express in 1975 and collected in FLASHMAN AND THE TIGER, AND OTHER EXTRACTS FROM THE FLASHMAN PAPERS (Oct 99 #4); it's a splendid tale: the "tiger" is Col. Sebastian Moran, with whom Flashman had three encounters (this being the third, in an empty house in Baker Street in 1894).
  19. Fraser's introduction to THE EXPLOITS AND ADVENTURES OF BRIGADIER GERARD is available on-line at <www.nybooks.com/shop/product?product\_id=4>; click on "Read the introduction" (kindly reported by Cliff Goldfarb). The book is still in print, as is THE COMPLETE BRIGADIER GERARD, published by Barnes & Noble in 2005 with an introduction by Cliff, and you can read his introduction on-line as well, at <www.barnesandnoble.com> (use their "see inside" feature).
  20. The famous/infamous "tent joke" was unveiled to The Hounds of the Internet in July 1998, and seems to have appeared in print first in the Reader's Digest (Nov. 1998), and it was published here somewhat later (Dec 01 #6), and it came in second in voting for the world's funniest joke (Oct 02 #1); it's still being told, by Olivia Wilde (who appears on television in the series "House"), in the January issue of Esquire in their "Funny Joke from a Beautiful Woman" department. You can read the joke (and there's a photograph); go to <www.esquire.com/women> and search for [olivia wilde]. Jim Hawkins noted the magazine's disclaimer: "Esquire cannot guarantee that this joke will be funny to everyone."
  21. <www.cafepress.com> is an interesting web-site with some amusing Sherlockiana: John Pforr has reported a Sherlock Holmes license plate frame (this is one of the six advertised at the site, at $14.00 each); go to <www.cafepress.com/bakerstreet> and click on "auto accessories" to see all six.
  22. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for Edgars (to be awarded at their gala banquet on May 1 in New York). The nominees include (best critical/biographical) ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley. Their web-site at <www.mysterywriters.org/pages/awards/nominees07.htm> lists the nominees in all the categories.
  23. Tom Dunn launched his The Pipe Smoker's Ephemeris in 1965, and continued to publish it for his Universal Coterie of Pipe Smokers until he died in 2005. Albert Mendez, a stalwart member of the Coterie, has now launched his own The Pipe Smoker's Thing: the first issue (autumn 2006) offered a heart-felt tribute to Tom Dunn, and the third issue (autumn 2007) has 12 pages of almost entirely Sherlockian content. Following in Tom Dunn's footsteps, Albert Mendez offers copies on request, "in consideration of a small donation to help defray the costs of printing and postage." His address is 142-35 38th Avenue, Flushing, NY 11354.

24. Jan 08 #5: There were some familiar names on the Queen's New Year's honours list: Sir Ian McKellen and Roy Dotrice. McKellen, who was appointed CBE (Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) in 1979 and knighted in 1991, was appointed to the Order of Companions of Honour (CH) for services to drama and to equality; he appeared in Sherlockian costume in a 4-minute skit ("Hot Air Balloon Mystery Theater") on "Saturday Night Live" (2002). And Roy Dotrice was appointed CBE for services to drama; he played Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the Disney film "Young Harry Houdini" (1987), and he played Douglas Stone in the BBC-2 dramatization of "The Case of Lady Sannox" (1968).
  25. Edward D. Hoch died on Jan. 17. He was a masterful short story writer, and a novelist and editor. John Dickson Carr once wrote about Hoch that "Satan himself would be proud of his ingenuity"); he had a story in every issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine for more than 34 years (sometimes more than one story in an issue, writing under a pseudonym as well as his own name), and 1991 was honored as a Grand Master by the Mystery Writers of America. He wrote many Sherlockian and Doylean pastiches (some of them as R. L. Stevens); his "A Scandal in Montreal" appeared in the February issue of EQMM that was distributed at the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner.
  26. "To be a book-collector is to combine the worst characteristics of a dope fiend with those of a miser." Robertson Davies, in THE TABLE TALK OF SAMUEL MARCHBANKS (kindly, or perhaps unkindly, forwarded by Alan Rettig).
  27. "The Case of the Influential Illustrator: Sidney Paget's Sherlock Holmes" is the title of an exhibition that opened on Dec. 1 at the Church Farmhouse Museum in Greyhound Hill, London, and will remain open through May 5. The exhibition honors the centenary of Paget's death in January 1908, and the museum is located near Finchley, where Paget lived for a time and is buried in Marylebone Cemetery. There's more information about the museum at its web-site at <www.churchfarmhousemuseum.co.uk>
  28. <www.westminster.gov.uk/libraries/special/sherlock.cfm> is the URL for the web-site for the Marylebone Library's Sherlock Holmes Collection, with news of the discovery of two portraits painted by Sidney Paget; there's a link to Catherine Cooke's interesting discussion of the portraits.
  29. Interesting things turn up at auction (thanks to Wilfrid de Freitas for observing this item): a copy of Mary Conan Doyle's A VISIT TO HEAVEN (1899), inscribed "With the Author's loves" (Arthur Conan Doyle's daughter was nine year old at the time); it sold for £780 (plus premium and tax) at Bonhams in Bath on Oct. 30. And Alec Guinness' handwritten 20-page script for his dramatization of "The Adventure of the Dying Detective" (done in 1929, when he was a 15-year-old schoolboy) went for £360 (also plus premium and tax) at Bonhams in Knightsbridge on June 20.
  30. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2007" has fine tributes to Allen Mackler and his 221B room (now on display at the University of Minnesota), a tour of other reproductions of the sitting-room, and additional scholarship, entertainment, and poetry; the 46-page booklet is available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122) for $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
31. Jan 08 #6: Lionsgate will have its premiere for "The Bank Job" in London on Feb. 25. The film had the working title "Baker Street" and claims to be based on the bank robbers who tunneled into a Lloyds Bank on Baker Street in 1971 and got away with £1.5 million; some of the culprits were caught and convicted in 1973, and of course newspapers and magazines noted similarities to "The Red-Headed League" (Nov 06 #8). A story by John Millar, spotted by John Baesch in The Express on Sunday (Jan. 6), reports that in the film it's a safety-deposit box robbery, set up by MI5 to recover sexually compromising photographs of a British princess, and that there was a note scribbled on the inside of the safe: "Let Sherlock Holmes try to solve this."
  32. Benton Wood ("A Scandal in Bohemia") died on Dec. 8, 2007. He was an educator, chaplain, philatelist, and numismatist, and for many years the Recorder of The Pleasant Places of Florida. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1979, succeeded the Rev. Leslie Marshall as the Chaplain of the BSI; and received the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1997.
  33. "World Book Club" is a 27-minute weekly series broadcast by the BBC World Service, and Harriett Gilbert's interview with Umberto Eco about THE NAME OF THE ROSE aired on Dec. 29. You can download the interview (and earlier broadcasts) at <www.bbc.co.uk/podcasts/worldservice/wbc>.
  34. RBC Computers made some of the Soviet "Sherlock Holmes" television series starring Vasily Livanov available on cassettes and DVDs with English subtitles some years ago (Nov 02 #1); the company's now called RussianDVD.com (269 Brighton Beach Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11235) (800-901-5543),

- with a website at <www.russiandvd.com>, and the DVDs are in NTSC format. Phil Bergem reports that if you order all five titles, they arrive as a boxed set.
35. Interesting and useful things continue to turn up on the Internet: Ken Lanza has noted Chris Haycock's web-site at <www.sherlockandwatson.com>, where he offers a download of the text of all the Sherlock Holmes stories, with a long list of Conan Doyle's other fiction and non-fiction, all for $19.97.
  36. Another example of how interesting the Internet can be: "The Author Trail" at <www.authortrail.eu> offers you a chance to identify some of the sites in East Sussex, Medway (in Kent), and the Somme associated with famous authors (including Conan Doyle, for whom the East Sussex map provides links for Crowborough, Forest Row, Groombridge, Newhaven, Rotherfield, and Winchelsea).
  37. Jon Lellenberg has reported an interesting review of Matthew Hughes' novel MAJESTRUM: A TALE OF HENGHIS HAPTHORN: Publishers Weekly called Hapthorn a "sleuth who combines the confident brilliance of Sherlock Holmes with the amusing voice of P. G. Wodehouse's Bertie Wooster, in a fantastical mystery reminiscent of Randall Garrett's Lord Darcy novels." A second novel (THE SPIRAL LABYRINTH has already been published, and a third is in the works. Hapthorne first appeared in six imaginative stories published in The Magazine of Fantasy & Science Fiction in 2004 and 2005, and they've been collected in THE GIST HUNTER AND OTHER STORIES. Night Shade Books is the publisher, with a web-site at <www.nightshadebooks.com>, and you can read excerpts from the two novels at <www.archonatebooks.com>.

  38. Jan 08 #7: Raymond Betzner has edited the 75th anniversary edition of Vincent Starrett's THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2008; 221 pp., $29.95); the new edition is a splendid tribute to Starrett and his book (which Julian Wolff said was "the greatest book about Sherlock Holmes that has ever been written"), with a facsimile of the first edition (1933), an appreciation of Starrett by Robert J. Mangler, a discussion of the origins of Starrett's book, and a bibliography of the many subsequent editions. $37.20 postpaid (to the U.S.) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268) <www.wessexpress.com>; costs of shipping outside the U.S. available at the web-site.
  39. Gasogene has also published BAKER STREET RAMBLES, by Leslie S. Klinger (210 pp. $18.95), reprinting his Sherlockian essays and reviews (and a radio-play script) that appeared in various journals and newspapers from 1994 to 2005. $24.45 postpaid (to the U.S.); publisher's address as above).
  40. THE QUINTESSENTIAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Richard L. Boyer (Alexander: Alexander Books, 2008; 496 pp., $75.00), is a collection of five pastiches, from "The Giant Rat of Sumatra" (1976) to "The Wilton Water Horror" (2007); it's a deluxe leather-bound and boxed edition, with atmospheric illustrations by Phil Hawkins. Four of the stories are reprints, but they have been revised and expanded for this volume. The publisher's at 65 Macedonia Road, Alexander, NC 28701 (800-472-0438) <www.sherlockholmeslives.com>. Boyer won an Edgar (for best novel) in 1983 for his BILLINGSGATE SHOAL, the first in his series of "Doc Adams" mysteries.
  41. The March issue of Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine has "The Adventure of the Red Circle" with annotations by Leslie S. Klinger, who also contributed a guest editorial ("The Immortal Sherlock Holmes") on Holmes' enduring appeal to modern readers. Les reports that several of the annotations are new, bringing the scholarship current.
  42. Add another site to a tour of places associated with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: Parnham House, near Beaminster in Dorset. The Wrenwood Hotel's web-site states that "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, awoken by the baying of the hounds during a night's stay at Parnham, is said to have been inspired by the sound to write his famous classic THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES." But the Automobile Association's EXPLORING BRITAIN'S HISTORIC HOUSES (by Penny Wicks, 1995) offers a rather different story: "In the 1920s Parnham was a fashionable country club, and its patrons included the Prince of Wales and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Conan Doyle always stayed in what is now the Country Room, and was convinced that it was haunted."
  43. "The Madness of Sherlock Holmes: Conan Doyle and the Realm of the Faeries" is a 70-minute DVD written, directed, and narrated by Philip Gardiner, who has written books that include QUANTUM MIND OF GOD and GATEWAYS TO THE OTHERWORLD. Produced by Reality Entertainment ($24.95), the DVD explores the gnostic, theosophist, and mystic aspects of Holmes and Conan Doyle; there's a 3-minute preview at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=cbUczdKHdQ8>. There's also an audiobook, available at <www.real2can.com/storeaudiobooks.htm> for purchase (oe10.99) or MP3 download ($10.99). And you can interviews with Gardiner about some of his non-Sherlockian books can be heard at a metaphysical talk show at <www.exploreyourspirit.com/podcasts.html>.

  44. Jan 08 #8: The Toronto Public Library has made available a digital edition of Lady Conan Doyle's diary for Conan Doyles' tour of Canada in 1914. You can turn pages, zoom in and out, and click on related text notes and images; the URL is <ve.torontopubliclibrary.ca/showcase/lcd\_diary>, and it's a grand example of what can be done with up-to-date digitization (and the Internet), and it is well worth a visit.
  45. Yuichi Hirayama has resumed his English-language blog about "Sherlockiana in Japan" at <ameblo.jp/shinjanpan>, and his web-site for the Shoso-In Bulletin is at <www1.parkcity.ne.jp/hirayama>.
  46. Karen Murdock reports her discovery of Kessinger Publishing's Rare Reprints <www.kessinger.net>; they publish "thousands of rare, scarce, and out-of-print books," and there are many titles available if you search for [conan doyle] or [sherlock holmes].
  47. Patricia Guy's BACCHUS AT BAKER STREET was published some years ago (Nov 95 #6), and it's now back in print (Lincoln: iUniverse, 2007; 150 pp., $13.95) with the subtitle "Sherlock Holmes & Victorian Drinking Lore" and new (and attractive) cover art by Gianni Burato. She discusses the wine, beer and spirits found in the Canon, and the brewers, vintners, barkeepers and winemercants, with flavor and humor and an occasional surprise.
  48. <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times08-1.htm> is the URL for the latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times, in which they offer their S'ian calendar as well as books and other items, as well as Sherlockian news and web-links.
  49. Ten years ago Ramute Plioplys, a member of The South Downers near Chicago, created a series of attractive Sherlockian eggs, to hang on your Christmas tree or elsewhere; they were decorated in the Lithuanian tradition (using heated beeswax and multiple dye baths) and featured dancing men and S'ian mottos. Ramute died last year, and her brother has showcased her art on a new web-site at <www.ramute-pliedplys.com>, where you can see her Sherlock Holmes Eggs and her other creations.
  50. Reported by Phil Attwell: the Royal Mail's presentation pack for the set of stamps honoring James Bond, issued on Jan. 8, includes a time-line for Bond and his creator Ian Fleming; the entry for Bond in 1964 states "Bond--like Sherlock Holmes--declines a knighthood." There are links to more information about the stamps at <www.royalmail.com/portal/stamps>.
  51. Ales Kolodrubec reports that a Czech publisher (Garamond) has issued a series of bilingual editions (English on one page and Czech on the other) of Sherlock Holmes stories (three short stories or one novel per volume) and some of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories. The books cost from $9.00 to $14.00 each plus shipping, and if you're interested you should send an e-mail to Ales at <ales@sherlockholmes.cz> and ask for more information. Another company is publishing Czech translations of some of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian work, and Ales has information about them as well.

  52. Feb 08 #1: The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 7-9 will include a new mystery ("Sherlock Holmes and the Music Box Murders") presented by Midsummer Night Productions, and a performance of Craig Wichman's dramatization of "The Speckled Band" by the East

- Lynne Theater Company. The festival web-site at <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html> has more information (the Sherlock Holmes weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years).
53. I began last month's issue quoting from Michael Dirda's weekly on-line conversation "Dirda on Books" at <www.washingtonpost.com>, and I might as well do it again: he was asked to recommend a collection of the Sherlock Holmes stories that can be read without the assistance of a magnifying glass, and he had three suggestions: the Heritage Press edition, the OXFORD ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, and THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, noting that for the last of the three that you "would have to enjoy or put up with the bizarre kind of playful scholarship associated with the Baker Street Irregulars."
  54. <www.sherlockiancalendar.homestead.com>, maintained by Ron Fish and Ben and Sue Vizoskie, is an excellent list of upcoming Sherlockian events, for anyone who would like to know what's happening when, and where; if you want to have something listed, Ron is at <ronf404@aol.com>.
  55. "Despot Bigwigs Ban Sherlock Holmes Carriage" was the headline on a story in the Hampstead & Highgate Express (Jan. 18), at hand from Ken Lanza. The historic hansom cab (which is billed as London's only Victorian horse-drawn taxi) has been banned from the Royal Parks because it advertises the Sherlock Holmes Museum. A spokesman for Royal Parks (which include Hyde Park, Green Park, and Regent's Park) said that "managing the parks is about balance and we seek to limit commercialization and advertising where we can." John Aidiniantz, director of the museum, said that "it is not reasonable or practical for us to cover up our advertising," and that the museum has been trying to get a commercial license to travel through the Royal Parks for 15 years. Aidiniantz said the latest refusal is "the last straw," and the cab has now been taken off the streets, because "you cannot take the cab around London without going through the parks because you have to go around them which is no good for the horses."
  56. An addition to the familiar names on the Queen New Year's honours list (Jan 08 #5): June Lancelyn Green (Richard Lancelyn Green's mother) was appointed MBE (Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire) for services to the community in Merseyside. Thanks to Steve Rothman for the report.
  57. Michael Cox, the executive producer of the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" television series, was the keynote speaker at the first Sherlock Holmes Review symposium at Indiana University in Bloomington in 1987, offering his audience the inside story of the creation of the series. His talk was recorded, and it's a delight to hear his account of the imagination and hard work involved in launching and continuing the series. "A Study in Celluloid" is a 58-minute CD available from the Wessex Press (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268) <www.wessexpress.com>. $18.45 postpaid (to the U.S.); see the website for shipping costs outside the U.S.

58. Feb 08 #2: OLD DEVIL MOON, by Christopher Fowler (London: Serpent's Tail, 2007; 296 pp., £7.99/$14.95); his tenth collection of "dark and sometimes uneasily humorous" short stories, including "The Lady Downstairs" (an amusing Sherlock Holmes story told by his landlady, who has an entirely different perspective on the Great Detective); the story was read by Hannah Gordon in the BBC 7 radio series "Cult Holmes" in 2005.
  59. Nancy Springer's "Enola Holmes" mysteries continue with THE CASE OF THE BIZARRE BOUQUETS (New York: Philomel, 2008; 170 pp., $14.99); the series is for young readers, and the stories and characterizations are excellent (THE CASE OF THE MISSING MARQUESS and THE CASE OF THE LEFT-HANDED LADY are the previous books). Enola is the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock, and is hiding from them in London and solving mysteries on her own.
  60. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2008 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
  61. The Pleasant Places of Florida are sponsoring a Sherlock Holmes Film Festival at St. Petersburg College on Mar. 29; it's open to the public without charge, and the films are "The Case of the Whitechapel Vampire" (2002, with Matt Frewer), "The Musgrave Ritual" (1986, with Jeremy Brett), and "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" (2007, with Jonathan Pryce). This is the sort of event that brings new members to a society, of course, in addition to helping "keep the memory green."
  62. Rupert Holmes (who is perhaps best known as the author of the musical "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" and whose pen name reflects his enjoyment of Rupert Knickerbocker beer and the Canon) has joined the executive committee of the International Mystery Writers' Festival, and he has adapted two episodes of his delightful television series "Remember WENN" (1996) for performance (as "Armchair Detective: A Remember WENN Musical Mystery") in Owensboro, Ky., June 12-22. "Remember WENN" was a 30-minute series about a fictional radio station in Pittsburgh during the golden age of radio, and "Armchair Detective" had the station doing a Sherlock Holmes broadcast. The festival website <www.newmysteries.org> will have more information about the schedule, which also will feature Stuart Kaminsky's dramatization of his short-story pastiche "The Final Toast" (1987).
  63. "In lighter moments she turns to Conan Doyle," Wilson Harris wrote, in an article on "The Education of a Queen" in the Atlantic Monthly (Dec. 1943), also reported by Jon Lellenberg. The article was about Princess Elizabeth, then 17 years old, and Harris hoped that she read THE WHITE COMPANY as well as SHERLOCK HOLMES. You can read the entire article at the Atlantic's website at <www.theatlantic.com/doc/194312/queen-elizabeth>.
  64. Plan ahead (but decide quickly): the announcement for the Baker Street Irregulars' "A Study in Scarlet" excursion to Salt Lake City on Aug. 29-Sept. 1 is being mailed to those who asked Mike Whelan to put them on the mailing list; space will be limited, so if you haven't asked to be on the mailing list already, write to Michael F. Whelan (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278).

65. Feb 08 #3: "There have been millions of detective stories over the years. Many of them are forgettable. Somehow Sherlock Holmes has endured, mainly because no one could write a detective story as brilliantly as Conan Doyle and nobody could come up with a character as interesting and flawed as Sherlock Holmes." Stan Lee (who has created some enduring characters himself), interviewed at <www.forbes.com> on Feb. 7. Thanks to Ken Lanza for spotting this.
  66. Laurie R. King discusses THE ART OF DETECTION on a new 38-minute DVD "Mysterious California: Four Authors" created by Pamela Beere Brings and William McDonald for the California Center for the Book, which offers a "book club in a box" without charge to libraries in California <www.calbook.org>. The other authors are Kirk Russell (SHELL GAMES), Nina Revoyr (SOUTHLAND), and Nadia Gordon (SHARPSHOOTER), and all four of them have written mysteries set in California and have interesting things to say about their books. The DVD is available for purchase by out-of-state libraries ($85.00 to public libraries, and $150.00 to college and university libraries) at the website or by phone (800-343-5540). The filmmakers also have kindly made it available to individuals for home use only at a "writer's discount" price of $35.00 until June 1 (same phone number: 800-343-5540).
  67. Laurie already has written more than 100 pages of her next book, THE LANGUAGE OF BEES. It's the new Mary Russell/Sherlock Holmes novel, of course, and you'll find more information about Laurie and her work and her blog at her web-site <www.laurierking.com>.
  68. And Laurie will be on tour, making appearances in the Detroit area on Apr. 16-18, discussing THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE and signing books. Details at their web-site <www.everyonesreading.info/meetathr.hrm>

69. Barry Morse died on Feb. 2. Best known as Lt. Philip Gerard, who pursued Richard Kimble in the 1960s television series "The Fugitive", he began his acting career when he received a scholarship to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in the 1930s, and went on to act on stage and screen and television for more than 60 years. He played Carter Morstan in CBS-TV's "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1987).
70. Reported: L'AFFAIRE DU CHIEN DES BASKERVILLE, by Pierre Bayard (Paris: Les ditions de Minuit, 2008; 166 pp., E14.50; Bayard is a psycholanalyst and a professor of French literature, and the author of HOW TO TALK ABOUT BOOKS YOU HAVEN'T READ, and in his latest book he concludes that Sherlock Holmes got it wrong, and that Sir Charles Baskervilles wasn't killed by Jack Stapleton with the help of a gigantic dog. In other books Bayard has suggested that Hamlet got it wrong (Claudius didn't kill his father) and that Poirot also got it wrong (in THE MURDER OF ROGER ACKROYD). The new book is available only in French (so far).
71. Sherlockian societies in southern cities (Atlanta, Nashville, Birmingham, and Greenville) will hold their Fourth Annual Gathering of Southern Sherlockians at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 12-13; the festivities will include a performance of Brad Keefauver and Bill Mason's "Hee-Haw Holmes". Details are available from Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@aol.com>.

72. Feb 08 #4: There may be Sherlockians still alive who saw Basil Rathbone on stage as Sherlock Holmes in 1953, and there certainly are some who could have but didn't, because they didn't attend the try-outs in Boston or the (only) three performances in New York. Susan Dahlinger and Glen Miranker have researched the history of the play for The Baker Street Journal's Christmas Annual for 2007 ("Rathbone Returns! A Misadventure Called Sherlock Holmes), and it is a delight to read their story of how the play came to be written and produced, and about why it failed. $11.00 postpaid (or $12.00 outside the U.S.) from the BSJ at 2 Dettling Road, Maynard, MA 01754; you can also order on-line at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
73. SIR HUGO'S LITERARY COMPANION: A COMPENDIUM OF THE WRITINGS OF HUGO'S COMPANIONS, CHICAGO, ON THE SUBJECT OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by David C. Humphrey (Lincoln: iUniverse, 2007; 167 pp., $22.95 cloth or $12.95 paper or $6.00 eBook), is very much what the subtitle announces: the authors include Vincent Starrett, Jay Finley Christ, and Robert J. Mangler, and their works range from scholarship to parody. Signed copies are available from the editor (1843 Winnetka Avenue, Northfield, IL 60093); $28.95 postpaid.
74. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Western Stage (156 Homestead Avenue, Salinas, CA 93901), from Aug. 15 to Sept. 14. Box office at (831-375-2111) <www.westernstage.com>.
75. If you're still seeking an attractive Sherlockian calendar for 2008, Bill Dorn's colorful calendar is illustrated with scenes from 24 films and television shows, notes more than 250 events from the Canon television, and includes a dozen original limericks; it's discounted to $10.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $12.00 to Canada or $15.00 elsewhere), from William S. Dorn at 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210. You can see sample pages (and other Sherlockian offers) at his web-site at <www.thesherlockstore.com>.
76. Further to the report (Jan 08 #8) on the new Czech bilingual editions (English on one page and Czech on the other), Don Hobbs reports there are similar Arabic/English, Danish/English, French/English, German/English, Japanese/English, Korean/English, Russian English, Spanish/English, and Swedish/English editions. If you can add to the list, please let me know.
77. Shirley Dickensheet ("Ivy Douglas") died on Feb. 8. She was an energetic member of The Trained Cormorants and then The Scowrers and Molly Maguires, and she one of the speakers at John Bennett Shaw's Sherlockian seminar at Stanford University in 1987. She was working for the Fireman's Fund when they insured in Loch Ness Monster in 1969, and paid off when it sank during the filming of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (the submersible is now at the bottom of the Loch, waiting to be found by one of the many people who still pursue "Nessie"). Shirley and her husband Dean were the sparking plugs for Vamberry's Ltd. (Wine Merchants) and The Beaune Press, and she received her Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1993.
78. The Sound & Fury Fakespearean Players performed their "Sherlock Holmes and the Saline Solution" in Los Angeles in 2006 (May 06 #4), and they're planning to repeat the show during the Fringe Festival in Winnipeg in July. You can see their poster at <sherlock.soundandfury.org>, and you can purchase the DVD ($20.00) <www.soundandfury.org>; click on [Product] at the left.

79. Feb 08 #5: Emory Lee has spotted an advertisement for SHERLOCK IN SHANGHAI: STORIES OF CRIME AND DETECTION, by Cheng Ziaoqing (Honolulu: University of Hawai'i, 2006; 214 pp., $24.00); Cheng Ziaoqing (1893-1976), described as the most popular author of Chinese detective fiction in the first half of the 20th century, wrote many stories about Huo Sang and Bao Lang (his fictional counterparts to Holmes and Watson) set in Shanghai in the 1920s and 1930s (and a 1940s edition of the Huo Sang stories ran to 40 volumes).
80. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' discussion of Edith Meiser, Philip Bergem's "100 Years Ago" report on the scrapbook from the wedding of Sir Arthur and Lady Jean Conan Doyle, Jon L. Lellenberg's amusing story about a damaged portrait of Conan Doyle that Jon has donated to the Collections, and other news from Minneapolis. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
81. <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e_times08-2.htm> is the URL for the latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times from Classic Specialties; their new offers include T-shirts and sweatshirts displaying a "Cogitavit ergo sum" design, based on a design by Tom Rieschick. The Latin paraphrases Descartes' famous dictum "Cogito ergo sum" and translates as "He [Conan Doyle] thought, therefore I am."
82. A poll of 3,000 teenagers in Britain revealed that 27% think that Florence Nightingale was a mythical character, and 20% believe that Winston Churchill was fictional. And that 58% believe that Sherlock Holmes really lived at 221B Baker Street, and 51% think that Robin Hood actually lived in Sherwood Forest. 77% admitted they didn't read history books, and 61% changed channels rather than watch historical programs on television. The poll was commissioned by the cable channel UKTV Gold, which has launched a new "Robin Hood" series; UKTV Gold's Paul Moreton said that "the elevation of mythical figures to real life showed the impact good films could have in shaping the public consciousness." "Stories like Robin Hood are so inspiring," he added, "that it's not surprising people like to believe these characters really existed." The story was picked up by many newspapers, demonstrating that UKTV Gold knew how to get attention for its "Robin Hood" series.
83. The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Apr. 11-13; the schedule includes a dinner (with Julie McKuras as the featured speaker), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. Registration forms are available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
84. Michael A. Hoey's ELVIS, SHERLOCK & ME: HOW I SURVIVED GROWING UP IN HOLLYWOOD (Albany: Bear Manor Media, 2007; 335 pp., $24.95) is written with humor and style, about the author's interesting career in Hollywood, but (more important for Sherlockians) it offers an excellent account of the stage and screen career of his father, Dennis Hoey, who played Lestrade in six of the Basil Rathbone films made by Universal in the 1940s.

85. Feb 08 #6: "Battered by talk of national decline and chronic instability, Italy has rediscovered a forgotten hero," Richard Owen wrote in a dispatch to The Times (Feb. 18). The forgotten hero is Dorando Pietri, who was the first to cross the finish line in the marathon in the Olympics in 1908, only to

- have the prize withdrawn because he had been assisted toward the finish line by officials on the track. It has been alleged that Pietri was helped by Conan Doyle, but he actually was in the stands, covering the race as a correspondent for the Daily Mail.
86. Billy E. Ross ("The Abergavenny Murders") died on Jan. 28. He entered the Sherlockian world as a member of The Maiwand Jezails, and after moving east to be a professor of educational administration at the University of Delaware was a member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches and The Six Napoleons. Billy received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1977.
  87. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Barbara Rusch's report on Andrew Lycett's talk at the Library in October, Peggy Perdue's discussion of new acquisitions from the family archives, and greetings from Mary Rae Shantz, the new manager of special collections at the Library. Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca> will be happy to send you a copy of the latest issue.
  88. Karen Ellery has found an interesting web-site for people who want to read translations into Russian: <www.fictionboon.ru> offers (according to their count) 17,273 books, including some of the Sherlock Holmes stories, SIR NIGEL, and Frank Thomas' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GOLDEN BIRD.
  89. <www.hclibrary.org/partners/holmescontest.php> is the URL for this year's Sherlock Holmes Essay Contest for seventh-grade students in Howard County, Md. The contest is sponsored by Watson's Tin Box, and students will write a five-paragraph analytical essay on "The Speckled Band"; the web-site has a link to a booklet that teachers and students can use for the content.
  90. THE CRIMES OF DR. WATSON, by Duane Swierczynski (Philadelphia: Quirk Books, 2007; 60 pp., $24.95), is an "interactive mystery" with pull-out clues that allow readers to pretend they're Sherlock Holmes and solve a formerly lost case; the format's reminiscent of the murder dossiers edited by Simon Goodenough in the 1980s, but the adventure is a new one, with some interesting twists and turn.
  91. An interesting letter written by Conan Doyle about "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be at auction at Bonhams in London on Mar. 18 (sale 16199, lot 276) <tinyurl.com/2ng6pj>. Conan Doyle wrote to Cecil P. Turner that "My story was really based on nothing save a remark of my friend Fletcher Robinson's that there was a legend about a dog on the Moor connected with some old family. I had no place in my eye." Turner seems to have written to Conan Doyle asking if the story had been based on the Black Dog of Hergest Croft, which haunted the Vaughan family in Herefordshire.

92. Mar 08 #1: The winter 2007 issue of the Soci,t, Sherlock Holmes de France's QuinCahier has arrived; 24 pages all in color (and all in French), with news, scholarship, a quiz, and grand artwork by Jean-Pierre Cagnat; 8 euros postpaid to France or 10 euros to Europe or 12 euros elsewhere (36 avenue Jean-Jaurès, 63500 Issoire, France). You can see what it looks like at their web-site at <www.sshf.com>, and order there with PayPal. The web-site also offers a fine look at the imaginative things the French are up to.
  93. For completists: CELEBRATING BOARD GAMES, by Nine Chertoff and Susan Kahn (New York: Sterling Publishing Co., 2006; 144 pp., $10.00), is a colorful review of board games, from 1861 to the present, with two pages devoted to "Alfred Hitchcock Presents Why" (a 1958 game with a character piece named Shylock Bones).
  94. There haven't been any Sherlockian comic books in quite a while, but Greg Darak reports a S'ian panel in DONALD DUCK: THE CASE OF THE MISSING MUMMY (published by Gemstone in 2007, $8.99); Gemstone seems to be the successor to Gladstone, and the comic's available at their website at <www.gemstonepub.com/disney>.
  95. Mimi Langley died on Feb. 24. She was for many years a member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and one of the volunteers who answered the letters written to Sherlock Holmes at 221b Baker Street, when they were delivered to the Abbey National Bank.
  96. And now for something non-Sherlockian and non-Doylean: a computerized geograpy quiz at <www.travelpod.com/traveler-iq> that allows you to test your knowledge of the world. You get points for being close, and fast, and no one else need know how you scored. Compliments to Peter Ashman for finding and reporting the quiz.
  97. Roger Llewellyn's tour in David Stuart Davies' new play "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" (Sep 07 #2) started on Mar. 6 in Guildford, and it continues in Britain through Sept. 6; The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/event_info.php?id=120> has a detailed schedule.
  98. ANTHONY BOUCHER: A BIOBIBLIOGRAPHY, by Jeffrey Marks (Jefferson: McFarland & Co., 2008; 213 pp., $35.00), is a delightful tribute to a multi-talented man: Boucher wrote novels, short stories, radio scripts, and book reviews, and edited magazines and mystery libraries, and Bouchercon, the world mystery convention, was named in his honor. When Boucher's novel THE CASE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS was published in 1940, Edgar W. Smith was for a time suspicious that the book had been written by a member of our BSI under a pseudonym. Boucher soon became a member of the BSI as well as The Scowrsers and Molly Maguires of San Francisco, and wrote scripts for the "Sherlock Holmes" radio series, and Marks offers an excellent account of Boucher's life and career, and a detailed bibliography of his published and unpublished work (and there are many unpublished titles in his papers at the Lilly Library at the University of Indiana).
99. Mar 08 #2: It's always nice to be reminded of Rex Stout, and his biographer John McAleer: MYSTERY WRITING IN A NUTSHELL, by John and Andrew McAleer (Rockville: James A. Rock, 2007; 100 pp., $9.95), is subtitled "The World's Most Concise Guide to Mystery and Suspense Writing" and it includes brief but interesting excerpts from John's ROYAL DECREE: CONVERSATIONS WITH REX STOUT (1983).
  100. Sam Fry spotted an Acme Metropolitan Whistle ("still standard issue to London bobbies") offered by The J. Peterman Company ($19.00); they're at 888-647-2555 and <www.jpeterman.com>. The whistle was invented in 1883, and I don't recall that anyone has proposed a connection between its inventor and someone of note in the Canon: Mrs. Hudson. Police whistles are mentioned in half a dozen of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and its inventor was Joseph Hudson; biographical information and a photograph are available at the company's web-site at <www.acmewhistles.co.uk>.
  101. William F. Buckley, Jr., died on Feb. 27. He was a committed conservative, and he wrote more than 50 books and more than 5,600 biweekly columns "On the Right". The National Review, which he founded in 1955, was launched with the claim that it "stands athwart history yelling Stop!" and his book CANCEL YOUR OWN GODDAM SUBSCRIPTION (2007) featured correspondence he received at the magazine, including this exchange with someone who wrote in 1967: "You are the mouthpiece of that evil rabble that depends on fraud, perjury, dirty tricks, anything at all that suits their purposes. I would trust a snake before I would trust you or anybody you support." To which Buckley replied, "What would you do if I supported the snake?" Brad Linaweaver's "A Scandal in Transylvania" in May 1977 in New Guard: The Magazine of Young Americans for Freedom had Buckley and D. Keith Mano in pursuit of Professor Goreviarty.
  102. CLASSICS FOR PLEASURE, by Michael Dirda (New York: Harcourt, 2007; 341 pp., $25.00), is a collection of 89 excellent essays that range from Lao-tse to Edward Gorey; Conan Doyle be found in the section on "Realms of Adventure".
  103. Julian Rathbone died on Feb. 28. He was a prolific author, twice nominated for Britain's Booker Prize, and the great-nephew of Basil Rathbone, and his pastiche "Baz" (about a thoroughly modern Holmes and Watson) was published in Maxim Jakubowski's anthology NEW CRIMES 3 (1991).

104. Greg Darak has reported a new British two-CD set "Did You Know These Stars Also Sang?" (Jasmine Music, 2007) with 108 tracks, one of them Basil Rathbone singing "I Do Like to Be Beside the Seaside" from "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939).
105. "A Scandal in Bohemia" is a new two-act chamber opera written by Nathalie Anderson (libretto) and Thomas Whitman (music), and "A Window on the Work" (an unstaged concert version of Act I) was performed at Swarthmore College on Mar. 2. Orchestra 2001 is planning a concert version of the entire opera next year, tentatively at the Kimmel Center in Philadelphia on Feb. 6 and at Swarthmore College on Feb. 8.
106. Mar 08 #3: "I had played Watson to his Holmes," Dr. Sheppard said, about Hercule Poirot, in Agatha Christie's "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd". Not in the book, but rather in the 90-minute dramatization (by Michael Bakewell) that was broadcast by BBC Radio 4 in December 1987 (and repeated this month on BBC 7). John Woodvine played Sheppard, and John Moffatt was Poirot. Thanks to Phil Attwell for spotting this.
107. The 27th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium was held this month despite a blizzard, and the organizers have surrendered to the weather and scheduled next year's Symposium ("The Merry Wives of Watson") on May 15-17 in Dayton, Ohio; Cathy Gill manages their mailing list (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
108. Further to the item (Feb 08 #6) on the new Italian stamp honoring Dorando Pietri, the design is based on the now (in)famous finish-line photograph that shows all of the people who might have been, but weren't, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. And I have some extra copies, which I will be happy to share with readers who request them (they'll be mailed with your next issue).
109. E. Gary Gygax died on Mar. 4. In 1974 he collaborated with Dave Arneson to create the fantasy game Dungeons & Dragons, and in his ADVANCED DUNGEONS & DRAGONS MONSTER MANUAL (1979) Gygax listed a "Rat, Giant (Sumatran)". And in an article the Nov. 1979 issue of the computer-gaming magazine Dragon he suggested that his readers "imagine a game based on the exploits of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's magnificent sleuth Sherlock Holmes. Which of the participants wouldn't like to play the role of the great detective? Or, at the very least, Dr. Watson? The subject matter for any such game would be particularly difficult to handle, and what would the participants do if Holmes were slain? Or merely made a fool of, for that matter?"
110. Retno Nindya Prastiwi has launched a "Sherlock Holmes Indonesia" web-site at <www.kappachan.com/sherlockholmes>, adding one more country to the list of those that have Sherlockians.
111. Faithful readers may recall my enthusiasm for Terry Jones and Brian Froud's LADY COTTINGTON'S PRESSED FAIRY LETTERS (Dec 97 #6), and it is welcome news that a book of letters written to Lady Cottingham has been returned to the Cottingham Archive, and published in facsimile (verified and presented by Brian Froud and Ari Berk) as LADY COTTINGTON'S PRESSED FAIRY LETTERS (New York: Harry N. Abrams, 2005; 48 pp., $19.95); the newly discovered letters came from dignitaries such as Wendy Darling, J. M. Barrie, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
112. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has three interesting events on its forward schedule: "Capital Watson: London Festival" (May 23-25), a cricket match against the P. G. Wodehouse Society (June 22), and their "Portsmouth Weekend" (Sept. 5-7), and their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org> ought to have details by the time you read this. Events are open to people who are not members if there's room; contact Catherine Cooke (15 Copperfield Court, 146 Worples Road, Wimbledon, London SW20 8QA, England)<avaa61@dsl.pipex.com> and mention that you're not a member.

113. Mar 08 #4: There's an interesting "The Whole Story" edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES with attractive artwork by Nicollet and annotations and additional illustrations appropriate to the story (New York: Viking, 2004; 190 pp., $25.99). An earlier edition was published by Gallimard in Paris (2002), and the American edition also was available in paper covers ($17.99).
114. Philip Sherman ("The Six Napoleons") died on Mar. 10. He retired from the Maryland National Guard in 1987, after more than four decades service, with the rank of Brigadier General, and was a lawyer, historian, and a bibliophile, and an enthusiastic member of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore (Phil was Napoleon XL, and in 1966 became Gasogene XI). He launched the annual Sherlockian weekend at the Enoch Pratt Free Library and he presided over it for many years. Phil received his Investiture in the Baker Street Irregulars in 1969, and their Two-Shilling Award in 1984.
115. Further to the review of Jerry 'B-P' Riggs' collection THE UNUSUAL SHERLOCK HOLMES (Aug 07 #2), Jerry has created a Sherlockian Scout Badge to honor Baden-Powell's admiration of Holmes. It's enameled in seven colors and costs $6.95 postpaid (303 South Norton Street, Corunna, MI 48817).
116. Miles Kington died on Jan. 30. He reviewed jazz for The Times, and joined the staff of Punch in 1965, eventually becoming its literary editor, and in 1976 he became a highly respected columnist for The Independent. He enjoyed Sherlock Holmes, and his S'ian parodies began in Punch in 1968 and continued in The Independent; Kington also wrote "The Death of Tchaikovsky: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" (which he described as a "comic musical enigma") performed in Bath in 1996.
117. Malice Domestic will announce the winners of its Agatha awards at its convention next month, and the nominees (chosen by fans rather than committee) include (best non-fiction) ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley. Dan will be toastmaster at the convention.
118. Admirers of the Russian television series that starred Vasiliy Livanov as Sherlock Holmes and Vitaliy Solomin as Dr. Watson may be interested in Igor Maslennikov's autobiography BEIKER-STREET NA PETROGRADSKOI [BAKER STREET TO PETROGRAD] (St. Petersburg: Seans/Amphora, 2007; 255 pp., $31.00); available from MIPP International at <www.mippbooks.com>. Maslennikov was the director of the series, and of course has much to say about it (in Russian, but there are lots of nice photographs for those who don't read Russian).
119. Randall Stock has reported Neil McCaw's booklet "A Study in Sherlock: Uncovering the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection" (with details on the bequest by Richard Lancelyn Green, and a foreword by Stephen Fry), available for £3.50 from the Portsmouth City Museum Gift Shop (Museum Road, Portsmouth, Hants. PO1 2LJ, England); <www.portsmouth.gov.uk/yourcouncil/11596_11804.html> has more information about the booklet, and you can order the booklet on-line at <www.portsmouthmuseumshop.co.uk/acatalog/A_Study_in_Sherlock.html>. And the web-site at <www.conandoyllecollection.co.uk> offers an interesting look at the collection itself.

120. Mar 08 #5: Paul Scofield died on Mar. 20. Best known for his performance as Sir Thomas More in "A Man for All Seasons" on stage in London and New York (where he won a Tony) and in the film (for which he won an Oscar), he also starred as Thomas ... Becket in Caedmon's recording of T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" (1968), which contains the exchange with the Second Tempter that Eliot borrowed from "The Musgrave Ritual".
121. "The Bank Job" (Jan 08 #6) has opened in the United States. I've not seen any mentions of Sherlock Holmes or "The Red-Headed League" in reviews; the film's official web-sites in both Britain <www.bankjobmovie.co.uk> and the U.S. <www.thebankjobmovie.com>
122. THE TRAINED CORMORANTS 60TH ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATIVE is an interesting tribute edited by Vinnie Brosnan and Jim Coffin; the contents include comments by members on the history of the society, photographs, recollections of its founders Bob Pattrick and Don Hardenbrook, a new Cockroach Bones parody by Kevin Reed, and amusing cover art by Colin Bailey. The cover artwork also is available on a T-shirt. $20.00 postpaid for the book, and $12.00 postpaid for the T-shirt (S-M-L-XL); both can be ordered from Vincent Brosnan, 1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056.

123. "Sherlock Holmes: Nemesis" is the new title for the computer game "Sherlock Holmes versus ArsŠne Lupin" (Oct 07 #1), due for release from Frogwares in April, there's more information about the game (under the old name) at the web-site <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/sh>.
124. Reported: Michael Farquhar's A TREASURY OF FOOLISHLY FORGOTTEN AMERICANS: PIRATES, SKINFLINTS, PATRIOTS, AND OTHER COLORFUL CHARACTERS STUCK IN THE FOOTNOTES OF HISTORY (New York: Penquin, 2008; 272 pp., $15.00) includes a chapter on "America's Sherlock Holmes". And who's that? Luke May? Ellis Parker? Encyclopedia Brown?
125. Reported: Jeffery Deaver's "The Westphalian Ring" (first published in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, Sept.-Oct. 2004) in his MORE TWISTED: COLLECTED STORIES, VOL. II, by Jeffery Deaver (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2006; 448 pp., $24.95) (New York: Pocket Books, 2007; 544 pp., $7.99).
126. Gyles Brandreth's OSCAR WILDE AND THE CANDLELIGHT MURDERS (May 07 #2) featured Wilde and his friends Arthur Conan Doyle and Robert Sherard in pursuit of a murderer, and it was reprinted in the U.S. as OSCAR WILDE AND A DEATH OF NO IMPORTANCE; the second book in the series will be OSCAR WILDE AND THE RING OF DEATH, due from John Murray in London in May (oe14.99).
127. Who's "America's Sherlock Holmes" in Michael Farquhar's book? William J. Burns, the Pinkerton detective who opened his own agency (and who knew Conan Doyle, although that's not mentioned in the book). The title also has been used to describe Luke May, a pioneering scientific detective in Seattle; Ellis Parker, the chief of detectives in Burlington County, N.J., when the Lindburgh baby was kidnapped; and Encyclopedia Brown, a fictional boy detective in a series of book by Donald J. Sobol.

128. Mar 08 #6: Reported: a new recording of THE LOST WORLD, read unabridged by Glen McReady on seven CDs, from Naxos Audiobooks ($34.98); it's also available as an MP3 download at <www.naxosaudiobooks.com> for $24.49, and you can listen to a sample at the web-site). They also offer most of the Canon (read unabridged by David Timson), four non-Sherlockian stories (read abridged by Carl Rigg), and Hesketh Pearson SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE (read abridged by Tim Pigott-Smith). Timson also has a free 13-minute podcast at <naxosaudiobooks.com/AUDIO/sherlock\_holmes\_podcast.mp3>.
129. The Admirable Beach Society was founded to promote reading of the Sherlock Holmes stories at an "admirable beach" (there's a mention of one in "The Lion's Mane"); the society's web-site is at <www.admirablebeach.com>, and members are encouraged to post appropriate photographs. The society's four-color enamel lapel pin costs $10.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $12.00 (elsewhere) from Beverly Ellis (48132 Colony Farm Circle, Plymouth, MI 48170).
130. Collectors of foreign translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories will welcome Don Hobbs' "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes". Don happily bills himself as "The Maniac Collector" and he has a splendid collection of translations, and offers a CD electronic bibliography of non-English and foreign-language editions in PDF format on a CD. A one-year subscription (with two to three updated CDs) costs $15.00 (to the U.S.); $20.00 elsewhere.
131. Joseph and Elaine Coppola have edited VOICES FROM THE STRANGERS' ROOM (San Diego: Aventine Press, 2008; 108 pp., $14.00) for The Mycroft Holmes Society; it's an anthology of interesting contributions from its members, among them Judith Freeman (who offers considerable sympathy for the goose in her alternative view of "The Blue Carbuncle") and Nancy Beiman (who provided an artistic cover).
132. Dr. William R. Hanson has designed a special cancel for the Clif-Pex Stamp Show in Clifton Park, N.Y., on Apr. 5; you can send your own (stamped) covers and postcards to the Postmaster, Clif-Pex Station, Clifton Park, NY 12065, with your request for the Sherlock Holmes cancel (requests must be postmarked by May 4).
133. Gary Lovisi's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GREAT DETECTIVE IN PAPERBACK (Jun 90 #8) has been revised and expanded with a new title: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GREAT DETECTIVE IN PAPERBACK AND PASTICHE: A SURVEY, INDEX & VALUE GUIDE, available from Gryphon Books (Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228) for $55.00 postpaid (180 pp., spiral bound). It's a delightful and extensive survey, with introductions by John Bennett Shaw (from 1990) and Michael Kurland, many illustrations in full color, wide coverage (from 1888 to 2007), and interesting commentary and annotations by Gary, who defines paperback broadly (including publisher's proofs, advance reading copies, print-on-demand books in paper covers, pamphlets published by Sherlockians and Sherlockian societies, and some British and other foreign editions).
134. Apr 08 #1: Cheng Ziaoqing's SHERLOCK IN SHANGHAI: STORIES OF CRIME AND DETECTION (Honolulu: University of Hawai'i, 2007; 214 pp., $24.00) offers a selection of fascinating stories by a Chinese author who was inspired by the Canon, but created his own detective, just as August Derleth did with his Solar Pons stories. Cheng's detective is Huo Sang, who is assisted by Bao Lang, and the stories are set in Shanghai in the 1920s and 1930s. Translator Timothy C. Wong discusses Chinese detective fiction in his preface, and also provides a short biography of Cheng.
135. It has been quite a while since I mentioned Steve Trussel's "Detectives on Stamp" web-site at <trussel.com/detfic/detect.htm>; it's delightful, as is his "Philatelic Sherlock" web-site at <www.trussel.com/detfic/sholmes.htm>. He includes stamps, covers, postmarks, and Cinderella issues, with almost everything illustrated in full color.
136. One hardly ever hears of The Great Mouse Detective any more, since Disney gives far more emphasis to characters more important (to them) than Basil of Baker Street, but Evy Herzog spotted DISNEY'S WONDERFUL WORLD OF WORDFINDS: THE ANIMATED MOVIES (Blue Bell: Kappa Books, 2006; 98 pp., $3.95), with a one-page word-puzzle based on the film.
137. Stephen Baker's HOW TO LIVE WITH A NEUROTIC CAT, first published in 1985, is still in print (New York: Gramercy Books, 1999; 128 pp., $7.99), with illustrations by Sherlockian artist Jackie Geyer, who (of course) included a Sherlockian illustration.
138. The Wessex Press continues to use YouTube to make things interesting; their advertisement for their 75th anniversary edition of Vincent Starrett's THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 08 #7) includes audio of Starrett reciting his famous poem "221B". <www.youtube.com/watch?v=rpkaTM554HI> will let you hear how Starrett pronounced "view-halloo".
139. Tom Pitner has reported Arthur Wontner's "The Sleeping Cardinal" (1931) on DVD from Amazon ($14.95); that's the British title of the film (which was released in the U.S. as "Sherlock Holmes's Fatal Hour"), and the DVD actually has the American release, presumably recorded from a copy (or perhaps a copy of a copy) of the 16mm print once owned by William K. Everson. Roger Johnson has reported that the print was screened for the Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 1951, at their first film evening, with Wontner in the audience, and the print also was screened for The Priory Scholars of Fordham in 1956. Moonlight Cinema offered the film on VHS cassette some years ago (Sep 99 #6).
140. It's likely that the DVD is a bootleg, since the box has no address or contact information for the company (Reel Classic Films) other than a URL that leads nowhere. The film's also available on DVD at eBay, where one seller kindly notes that he has downloaded the film onto DVD-R from an NTSC MPEG copy stored on his hard disk, and it is likely that the DVD offered at Amazon was made the same way. The quality of the DVD is average at best (the VHS cassette was somewhat better), but it's nice that more people will have a chance to see an interesting film with Wontner as Sherlock Holmes.
141. Apr 08 #2: Randall Stock has expanded his interesting "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" web-site to include a new "Sidney Paget Original Drawings and Artwork: A Preliminary Census and Checklist". He has lots of new information, and illustrations, and he extends his coverage to include Paget's non-

- Sherlockian work. And of course he'd like to hear from anyone who can add to the census by reporting unrecorded originals or identifying where some of the non-Sherlockian work has been published; the new web-site is <www.members.aol.com/\_ht\_a/shbest/ref/sidney-paget-original-art.htm>.
142. If you would like to read one of the textbooks Conan Doyle studied before he took his medical degree in 1881, Peter Wood has discovered Joseph Bell's A MANUAL OF THE OPERATIONS OF SURGERY FOR THE USE OF SENIOR STUDENTS, HOUSE SURGEONS, AND JUNIOR PRACTITIONERS on the Internet at web-sites the include <www.gutenberg.org/files/24564/24564-h/24564-h.html>. Bell wrote the book in 1866, and Project Gutenberg has the fifth edition (revised and enlarged) published in 1883.
143. McMurdo's Camp is the newest Sherlockian society; it meets in Charlevoix, Mich., and has a web-site at <www.mcmurdoscamp.wordpress.com>. There are many society web-sites now, and you'll find links to many of them at Chris Redmond's <www.sherlockian.net/societies/index.html>. If your society has a web-site that's not linked from Chris' site, you should let him know.
144. Ken Lanza spotted a report in the Harrogate Advertiser that a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 was discovered by two Oxfam volunteers in a pile of donated books. It will be sold at auction at Bonhams in Oxford on May 20, and the charity hopes that it "will produce a four-figure addition to Oxfam's funds." According to Bonhams, the Beeton's lacks the original wrappers and advertisements and is bound with four other works (all apparently Christmas annuals from other publishers); it's estimated at £7,000-9,000. There's more to the story, of course, and you can read all about it at Randall Stock's <members.aol.com/shbest/ref/bonhams-2008-beetons.htm>
145. Philip K. Jones has compiled (and continues to compile) an excellent data base for Sherlockian pastiches. There are 6,875 entries (and more to come, of course), and it's available on the Internet at the Illustrious Clients' web-site at <www.illustriousclients.org/index.php?name=Content&pid=5>.
146. Robert H. Steele ("The Scowrers") died on Feb. 28. He was a banker and a leader of the Republican party in San Francisco, and an enthusiastic member of the Scowrers and Mollie Maguires of San Francisco, serving as its Bodymaster for forty years until he retired in 1999. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1959.
147. Dave Smith discovered a Krone limited edition "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Sherlock Holmes" fountain pen, and it's an impressive pen indeed: solid sterling silver, intricately detailed with three-dimensional elements to help you solve a mystery that has 14 clues, and with a piece of notebook paper from Conan Doyle's personal writing pad embedded atop the cap. The edition was limited to 50 pens (with a suggested retail price of $12,500), and it sold out in a few days. The web-site <www.pensinasia.com> displays images of the pen, and you can see other equally imaginative (and still available) Krone pens at <www.kronepen.com>.
148. Apr 08 #3: The Town & County Public Library in Elburn, Ill., sponsors an annual Dewey Dash, named in honor the Dewey Decimal System, as a fundraiser for the library. The event started in 2005 and has a different literary theme each year. This year's Dewey Dash was held on Apr. 13 and called "The Game Is Afoot". It was led by its mascot Dr. Watson, with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as a "ghost runner".
149. Joe Eckrich has begun selling Sherlockian books and ephemera on eBay. Go to <www.ebay.com>, click on "Advanced Search, click on "Items by Seller", and search for "eckrich221".
150. Watson's Tin Box will host "A Scintillation of Scions" at Amherst House in Columbia, Md., with the intent of bringing together members of mid-Atlantic (and east-coast) Sherlockian societies for "an afternoon of fun, scholarship, and social time." The afternoon event will run from 1:30 to 6:30 and will include afternoon tea, papers, a limerick contest, and a dramatic presentation. More information is available at <www.watsonstinbox.org>.
151. Content is important when material comes to auction: the letter written by Conan Doyle about "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at auction at Bonhams in London last month (Feb 08 #6) sold for £3,700 (plus premium and tax).
152. The late Peter Cushing was a painter as well as an actor, and some of his artwork was sold at auction last month, with a total estimate of £12,000. The sale total was more than £20,000, and one of the watercolors sold for £2,000. Holger Hasse displays some of the paintings in full color at his blog <www.hammerandbeyond.blogspot.com/2007/12/peter-cushing-calendar.htm>.
153. Further to the item (Jul 07 #3) about Edinburgh's new tram line, the Edinburgh Evening News has reported (Apr. 3) that "fans of Sherlock Holmes are angry that the statue of the sleuth in Picardy Place is to be stored up for two years during the city's tram works." The story quoted Roy Upton-Holder as saying "Many feel that the Edinburgh Council will have succeeded where Moriarty and Conan Doyle failed: in getting rid of Sherlock Holmes." Upton-Holder is the founder of the Deerstalkers of Welshpool (a city on England's border with Wales); there is no Sherlockian society in Edinburgh.
154. A few days later the paper published a letter from C. S. Lincoln of Edinburgh (Apr. 8), who noted that the statue had been erected in Picardy Place to mark the site of Conan Doyle's birthplace, but the building had been demolished in 1969. Lincoln suggested that the statue should be moved to Infirmary Street, where Conan Doyle, in the old infirmary, clerked for Joseph Bell and observed the "amazing, deductive methods of this great doctor."
155. THE SHADOW OF REICHENBACH FALLS, by John R. King (New York: Forge/Tom Doherty, 2008; 350 pp., $25.95); Thomas Carnacki, at the Reichenbach on May 4, 1891, "rescues an amnesiac gentleman from the base of the falls only to find himself and his companion pursued by an evil mastermind whose shadowy powers may reach from the bloody crime scenes of Whitechapel to beyond the grave." Sherlockians will have no trouble identifying the amnesiac gentleman and the evil mastermind, and Thomas is William Hope Hodgson's Carnacki, before he became Carnacki the Ghost-Finder, so there's a strong supernatural content in the story.
156. Apr 08 #4: ON THE TRAIL OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: AN ILLUSTRATED DEVON TOUR, by Brian W. Pugh and Paul R. Spiring (Sussex: Book Guild, 2008; 125 pp., £12.99), offers narrative chronologies of Conan Doyle, George Turnavine Budd, and Bertram Fletcher Robinson, and discusses their connections with Devon (Budd lived in Plymouth, where Conan Doyle doctored with him for a short period, and Fletcher Robinson assisted Conan Doyle with "The Hound of the Baskervilles"); the book also includes an "Arthur Conan Doyle Devon Tour" for those who want to drive to places associated with the three men. Pugh is the curator of the Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment, and has a web-site at <www.the-conan-doyle-crowborough-establishment.com>, and Spiring has a Fletcher Robinson web-site at <www.brfonline.biz>, and they present an interesting look at the three men and what they did in Devon. The book also is available in German: AUF DER SPUR VON ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: EINE RUNDREISE DURCH DEVON (Mannheim: Dryas Verlag, 2008; 146 pp., E12.95).
157. The Hallmark Channel uses late-night slots to broadcast programs for teachers to record for use in the classroom; "The Royal Scandal" (2001) will air May 29, and "The Case of the Whitechapel Vampire" (2002) on June 26 (both at 3:00 am). The programs starred Matt Frewer Kenneth Welsh as Holmes and Watson, and there is a 27-page "Educator Guide" available for download at <www.hallmarkchannel.com/publish/etc/medialib/shared/educator\_guides.html>.
158. Samantha Wolov has reported some Sherlockian artwork at the opening page of AOL Stalker at <www.aolstalker.com>; it's a data-base of 36,389,569 searches made by AOL users in March, April, and May 2006. AOL removed the data, but the information still is available elsewhere (as is so often the case on the Internet); it is difficult but not impossible to identify searchers.

159. It may be possible to find out who actually had the telephone number XX.31 (announced by Colonel Damery in "The Illustrious Client"): John Baesch has spotted a story in The Times (Nov. 28) about a new archive of 280 million telephone numbers in the first 104 years of British telephone directories, now available to subscribers at <www.ancestry.com>.
160. Conan Doyle fought hard to protect mediums from prosecution by the authorities, and eventually the Witchcraft Act (1735) was replaced by the Fraudulent Mediums Act (1951), under which prosecutors must prove fraud and dishonest intent to secure a criminal conviction. Now, according to a story in the Observer (Apr. 6), Britain plans to replace the Fraudulent Mediums Act (under which there have been fewer than ten convictions in the past 20 years) with Consumer Protection Regulations that apply to anyone charging or accepting gifts in exchange for a service, and allow disgruntled customers to sue. Spiritualists, according to the story, are worried that they will be forced to issue disclaimers such as "this is a scientific experiment, the results of which cannot be guaranteed," and to prove they did not "mislead, coerce, or take advantage of" vulnerable customers.
161. Yuichi Hirayama has resumed his English-language blog about "Sherlockiana in Japan" at <ameblo.jp/shinjapan>. One of the recent entries displays the stamps issued for the recent convention of The Japan Sherlock Holmes Club (as in some other countries, the Japanese postal service allows you to put your own photographs on stamps). His web-site for the Shoso-In Bulletin is at <www1.parkcity.ne.jp/hirayama>.
162. Apr 08 #5: Charlton Heston died on Apr. 5. His acting career spanned more than 60 years, and his starring roles included Moses, Ben-Hur, Gen. Charles "Chinese" Gordon, El Cid, Cardinal Richelieu and Michelangelo. Heston also played Sherlock Holmes in Paul Giovanni's play "The Crucifer of Blood" in Los Angeles in 1980 (with Jeremy Brett as Watson), and in a television version of the play in 1991.
163. ELIMINATE THE IMPOSSIBLE by Alistair Duncan (Stanstead Abbots: MX Publishing, 2008; 260 pp., £9.99), is subtitled as "An Examination of the World of Sherlock Holmes on Page and Screen". Duncan discusses the Canon, focusing on the major characters and providing a synopsis for and comments on each of the stories, and then turns to the major screen and television actors, from Arthur Wontner to Jonathan Pryce. Duncan's commentary is interesting, both when he writes about the stories and the actors, and when he discusses previous Sherlockian scholarship.
164. Variety has reported (Mar. 31) that Paramount has bought the film rights to David Grann's "The Story of Z" and that Brad Pitt plans to produce and star in a film about Col. P. H. Fawcett, the explorer who vanished in the Matto Grosso in Brazil in 1925. Grann's article was published in The New Yorker (Sept. 19, 2005), and Doubleday plans to publish a book based on the article. Grann mentions Conan Doyle, who met Fawcett in 1910, and there's much more about their meeting in my newsletter (Oct 05 #1).
165. Marina Stajic forwards a report from the Kings of Scandinavia that there is a Sherlock Holmes Pub in Denmark. The pub is in Aarhus, which is where the late Henry Lauritzen lived, and I'm sure that Henry would have enjoyed visits to the establishment. The pub's web-site is <www.sherlock-holmes.dk>, where you'll find a photograph of Holmes and Watson sitting in front of the pub, flanked by two of its waiters.
166. Plan far ahead: the Marple Newton Players will present William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in Newton Square, Pa., Sept. 19-Oct. 4; the box office is at 610-353-9181 <www.playersstage.org>. The Irving Community Theatre will present Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" in Irving, Tex., Jan. 19-31, 2009 (972-594-6104) <www.irvingtheatre.org>. Vertigo Theatre will present Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" in Calgary, Apr. 25 to May 17, 2009 (403-221-3708) <www.vertigotheatre.com>.
167. Reported: THE RIVALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited and with an introduction by Nick Rennison (Manchester: No Exit Press, 2008; 320 pp., £9.99); an anthology of stories about other fictional detectives in Victorian and Edwardian London. Presumably similar to Hugh Greene's THE RIVALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: EARLY DETECTIVE STORIES (1970).
168. Ralph E. Edwards ("Dr. Barnicot") died on Apr. 2. He was an actuary and vice president of the Baltimore Life Insurance Co., and for many years one of the sparking plugs of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore, as Napoleon #41, Gasogene IX, and Commissionaire #7. Ralph also happily participated in the Carlton Club of Baltimore, and in the electronic mailing list The Hounds of the Internet, contributing each week a set of scholarly and often-amusing "Canon Queeries" for the Canonical tales. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1963, and their Two-Shilling Award in 1983.
169. Apr 08 #6: Laphroaig scotch, Lapsang souchong tea, and lemon balm are the ingredients in the rich, smoky Sherlock Holmes, according to a story in the Washington Post (Apr. 4) about new cocktails. The cocktail is available at PX, a 1920s-style speak-easy in Alexandria, Va. Proportions aren't given in the article, but you can ask PX founder Todd Thrasher; the phone number for PX is 703-299-8384.
170. Sir Christopher Frayling's splendid paper on "The Writing of The Hound of the Baskervilles" (presented during the January birthday festivities) has been published in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal, with photographs of entries in Conan Doyle's diary for 1901, and considerable detail on just what Conan Doyle was doing when and where while to story was being written. The BSJ, published quarterly, costs $26.50 a year ($29.00 foreign), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); the BSJ website <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> also accepts subscriptions.
171. Lawrence Goldman's THE ANATOMY OF DECEPTION (New York: Delacorte, 2008; 352 pp., $24.00) is a medical thriller that's set in Philadelphia in mid-March 1889; in the first chapter the narrator states that "as Holmes' popularity soared, it thus became sport among physicians to match wits with the fictional detective, eager to demonstrate that if they applied themselves to murder, theft, mayhem, they would achieve similarly sterling results." The first three chapters of the book are available on-line at Bookreporter.com <www.bookreporter.com/reviews2/9780385341349-excerpt.asp>.
172. <www.hulu.com> is another example of interesting things to be found on the Internet: a joint venture between NBC Universal and News Corp., and advertiser supported (so you don't pay anything), it offers a chance to watch a long list of films and television series, old and new. Sherlockians may be interested in Vincent Price's "Dr. Goldfoot and the Bikini Machine" (1965), and the "Remington Steele" episodes "Steele's Gold" (1983) and "Elementary Steele" (1984). And I'm sure there's other material of interest, but those are the titles that turned up in a quick scan of the web-site's contents. "Are you more in the mood for Farrah Fawcett, or Mr. T?" was the teaser title on a review in New York magazine (Apr. 7).
173. For racing fans: Karen Murdock spotted a horse named Sherlock Holmes running the 11th race (the Cotejo De Potrillos Stakes) in Santiago, Chile, on Apr. 9 and (according to Kate Karlson) finished third.
174. Phil Attwell reports that the "Doctor Who" episode "The Talons of Weng-Chiang" (1977) is available on a DVD from the BBC Shop <www.bbcshop.com> discounted to £15.99. The Doctor appears in Sherlockian costume, battling giant rats, and there also is a passing mention of a Mrs. Hudson. According to the BBC this is the first release of an unedited version of the episode, and the DVD's added features include interviews with some of the stars, 25 minutes of behind-the-scenes footage, and an Easter egg. But: the DVD was released in 2003, and it's available for £7.98 at <www.amazon.co.uk> (note: the DVD is in PAL format).

175. May 08 #1: An update on the item about International Mystery Writers' Festival at the RiverPark Center in Owensboro, Ky. (Feb 07 #2): there will be seven performances (June 13-21) of Stuart Kaminsky's dramatization of his short-story pastiche "The Final Toast" (1987) and five performances (June 14-22) of Rupert Holmes' adaptation of two episodes (one of them is Sherlockian) of his television series "Remember WENN" (1996); the festival's address is 101 Daviess Street, Owensboro, KY 42303 (877-639-6978) <www.newmysteries.org>.

176. Sorry about that: the web-site for the Shoso-In Bulletin (Jan 08 #8) now is at <shoso.ninja-web.net> (English) and <page.freett.com/Shoso> (Japanese).
177. Christopher Paul Carey notes that the Subterranean Press (Box 190106, Burton, MI 48519) <www.subterraneanpress.com> offers two books that will be of interest to admirers of Philip Jos, Farmer's Sherlockian (and other) work. PEARLS FROM PEORIA (2006, 769 pp., $45.00) offers reprints of "The Two Lord Ruftons" and "A Scarlet Study" and "The Doge Whose Barque Was Worse Than His Bight". And Carey has edited VENUS ON THE HALF-SHELL AND OTHERS (2008, 328 pp., $38.00), which includes "The Adventure of the Peerless Peer" and "The Problem of the Sore Bridge--And Others". Both titles also are available at Amazon and elsewhere.
178. Carey also reports that issue #12 of the magazine Farmerphile is Sherlockian; you can see Keith Howell's cover art showing Farmer in S'ian costume at <www.pjfarmer.com/farmerphile.htm>; the contents include Farmer's "Sherlock Holmes and Sufism" (a paper delivered to The Mexborough Lodgers in El Paso in the 1975 and now published for the first time). $11.00 postpaid to North America ($15.00 postpaid elsewhere); checks to Michael Croteau, 393 James Street SW, Lilburn, GA 30047 (ask for issue #12). Or you can order on-line at the web-site.
179. "Street Name Shake-Up Offers Public Chance to Have a Say" was the headline on a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (Mar. 24); Edinburgh will create "banks" of street names for different areas of the city, for use when new developments are built. Local residents will be able to suggest names with connections to the area (in the past the Edinburgh Council made such decisions), and the possibilities noted by the paper include political figures, great thinkers, sporting heroes, and the world of literature, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
180. There are many interesting aspects of book collecting, and it can be argued that the most interesting of those aspects is the collectors. You can read about many of them in Nicholas A. Basbanes' splendid AMONG THE GENTLY MAD: STRATEGIES AND PERSPECTIVES FOR THE BOOK HUNTER IN THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY (Henry Holt and Co., 2002, and Owl Books, 2003); Basbanes tells wonderful stories about collectors, with five pages about Daniel Posnansky (who has collected Conan Doyle for decades, and calls himself as an elitist rather than a completist, and explains the distinction), and two pages about Fred Kittle (who collects the entire Doyles and Conan Doyle family). Basbanes has an excellent web-site at <www.nicholasbasbanes.com>, with discussion of all of his books, a link to the syndicated weekly radio program "The Book Guys" (with an archive of past programs), and much more.

181. May 08 #2: Derham Groves, the first Australian to become a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (in 1985, as "Black Jack of Ballarat"), has had a long career as architect, artist, and writer, and his new THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOLMES: EXPLORING SENSE OF PLACE THROUGH CRIME FICTION (Black Jack Press, 178 pp.) is a delightful collection of essays that discuss his own work (including his detailed design for a Sherlock Holmes Centre) and the work of his students (who designed rooms and houses inspired by Canoniical tales, and a Sherlock Holmes Hotel in New York); there are many illustrations, often in full color.
182. Derham also reprints an article by R. Thurston Hopkins (from the Melbourne Herald, Aug. 31, 1933) in which he explains that he once asked Conan Doyle where Holmes actually lived, and was told that "that is one of the secrets Mr. Holmes refuses to divulge." But Conan Doyle acknowledged that he had a certain house in his mind's eye, adding that "there are clues in the Sherlock Holmes stories which may help you to locate the house quite definitely in Baker Street." And Hopkins, after considerable research identified the house (93 Baker Street). And Derham publishes, for the first time, an introduction by John Bennett Shaw, written in 1987 for the catalog for Derham's exhibition "Holmes Away from Home" (a different introduction by John appeared in the catalog, and "The Sherlock Holmes Phenomenon" is a nice reminder of John's enthusiasm and expertise).
183. You can order the book from Michael Jorgensen (392 Station Street, Carlton North, VIC 3054, Australia) <mickjorg@alphalink.com.au>; US$41.00 postpaid by airmail, US$36.00 postpaid by seemail. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau can be sent to me at 7103 Endicott Court, Bethesda, MD 20817.
184. David H. Galerstein ("Bert Stevens") died on Apr. 29. He was a teacher and a principal, and a member of the New York City Board of Education. He also was a member of many Sherlockian societies in and around New York, and with Marlene Aig edited the anthology A SINGULAR SET OF PEOPLE (1990), and with Carolyn Bryan A SINGULAR SENSE OF HUMOR: A COMPLICATION OF STUFF AND NONSENSE BY AND FOR SHERLOCKIANS (1993). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1972.
185. There's a new (well, recent) edition of MURDER IN BAKER STREET: NEW TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, the 2001 anthology edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower (New York: MJF Books, 2006; 277 pp., $7.98 at Barnes & Noble); hardcover, with an atmospheric dust jacket.
186. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists honored the world's first forensic geologist at dinner in San Antonio on Apr. 23, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, and the visitors received a friendly Texas welcome from Ben Fairbank and Richard Lackritz on behalf of The Strange Old Book Collectors. Our next dinners will be in Houston on Oct. 8, and in Denver on June 10.
187. Paul Spiring has reported the launch of "The Baskerville Weekend" (excursions arranged by Baskervilles Carriages); the inaugural weekend was held this month; the featured guest was Edward Hardwicke, who was Dr. Watson in the Granada television series. More information is available at Spiring's B. Fletcher Robinson web-site at <www.bfronline.biz>.

188. May 08 #3: Sherlockian societies in southern cities (Atlanta, Nashville, Birmingham, and Greenville) will hold their Fifth Annual Gathering of Southern at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 18-19, 2009; "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be the conference theme, and the mailing list is maintained by Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@aol.com>.
189. Alan C. Olding ("Cooee") died on May 6. He was serving in the British Royal Corps of Signals when he participated in the Normandy invasion, and in 1951 he emigrated to Australia, where he founded The Sherlock Holmes Society of South Australia (which became The Sherlock Holmes Society of Australia, and eventually merged with The Sydney Passengers). He edited the appropriately-named newsletter News from the Diggings, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1988.
190. Bochym Manor in Cornwall is for sale for £3 million, according to a story in The Sunday Times (May 25). The house is located on the Lizard peninsula and was once owned by Robert, Count of Mortain (half-brother of William the Conqueror); it is built in stone and laid out in four wings, with ten bedrooms, seven reception rooms, three bathrooms, and 18 acres of grounds with holiday cottages. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was there just before the first world war," according to the story, and "even set a Sherlock Holmes story on the estate." There's more information about the house at the website <www.struttandparker.com>.
191. It's always a pleasure to discover Conan Doyle's fiction included in anthologies: A SKELETON AT THE HELM, edited by John Richard Stephens (New York: Metro Books, 2008; 343 pp., $9.98 at Barnes & Noble), contains "The Striped Chest" (one of Conan Doyle's fine "stories of pirates and blue water").
192. <www.walrusmagazine.com/blogs/2008/05/08/cut-out-the-poetry-watson> is the URL for a blog entry by Jared Bland about the new eight-volume set of paperbacks of the Canon that Penguin has issued in Britain in their Red Classics series at £6.99 each (they've combined HIS LAST BOW and THE CASE-BOOK in one volume). Penguin's senior copywriter Colin Brush has blogged about the set at

- <www.thepenguinblog.typepad.com/the\_penguin\_blog/2008/02>, calling them "dramatic, Hammer-horror-film-poster-style" editions. Series designer Coralie Bickford-Smith wrote: "Many people will have a fixed set of idea about Holmes and I wanted to confound these expectations and show that there's more to the character. The vibrant, two-toned covers use typefaces that evoke the Victorian era and an early cinema poster aesthetic emphasizes the adventure and excitement of the stories." The series also includes THE EXPLOITS AND ADVENTURES OF BRIGADIER GERARD (oe7.99).
193. Michael Chabon won a Pulitzer Prize for his novel THE AMAZING ADVENTURES OF CAVALIER & CLAY (Apr 01 #3), and his THE FINAL SOLUTION: A STORY OF DETECTION was an intriguing Sherlockian pastiche (Oct 04 #3). His MAPS AND LEGENDS: READING AND WRITING ALONG THE BORDERLANDS (San Francisco: McSweeney's Books, 2008; 222 pp., $24.00), his first non-fiction book, is a collection of interesting essays that include "Fan Fictions: On Sherlock Holmes" (revised from its first appearance in the N.Y. Review of Books in Feb. 2005). Chabon's enthusiasms extend to Colman McCarthy, M. R. James, and Will Eisner, and it's an excellent book.

194. May 08 #4: The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will gather at 4:00 pm on Sunday, June 29, in room 207-D at the Anaheim Convention Center (that's Anaheim in California); Les Klinger will be their featured speaker, discussing "Dracula, Sherlock Holmes, and Other Victorian Friends". More information about event is available from Marsha Pollak (Sunnyvale Public Library, 665 West Olive Avenue, Sunnyvale, CA 94086) <mpollak@ci.sunnyvale.ca.us>
195. Jon Lellenberg has reported that "The Lost Cases of Sherlock Holmes" is the first computer game officially licensed by the Conan Doyle Estate. Legacy Interactive describes it as "a whodunit casual computer game of theft, espionage, and murder" in which players must tap their own powers of observation to solve puzzles and identify the culprits. The game has 16 different cases and more than 100 visual puzzles and mini-games; there is a demo online at <www.wolfgaming.net/forums/showthread.php?t=39219>, and Legacy offers a trial download (without charge) and the game itself ($19.95) on-line <www.legacygames.com/download\_games/394/the\_lost\_cases\_of\_sherlock\_holmes>.
196. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Dick Sveum's "100 Years Ago" discussion of "The Flag" (Conan Doyle's 1908 addition to "A Duet"), Julie McKuras' "50 Years Ago" tribute to Page Heldenbrand, and Tim Johnson and Gary Thaden's report on Victor Cahn's performance in his play "Sherlock: Solo" in New York, as well as other news from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
197. "Elementary, My Dear Indy!" is the motto for Bouchercon 40, to be held in Indianapolis on Oct. 15-18, 2009 (Bouchercon is the long-established world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, named in honor of Anthony Boucher, and with a web-site at <www.bouchercon2009.com>. There will be a preconference event on Oct. 14 at the Lilly Library in Bloomington; click on "Breaking News" to read all about "Doyle, Boucher, Fleming--This Will Blow You Away" (The Lilly has excellent collections of all three authors). The postal address is Bouchercon 2009, c/o The Mystery Company, 233 Second Avenue SW, Carmel, IN 46032.
198. The spring issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the newsletter of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust) offers Julie McKuras's tribute to David A. Weiss, and news of some recent additions to The Baker Street Irregulars Archives (including a letter written by Christopher Morley in which he noted that "The only clubs I have founded are the Three Hours for Lunch, the Grillparzer Club, and the Baker Street Irregulars--which are all phases of the same great idea: to avoid publicity!") Copies of the newsletter are available on request from Julie McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124) <mike9750@aol.com>.
199. Andy Peck has reported that the Mystery Guild is now offering a "exclusive softcover" edition of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (May 07 #5/Sep 07 #6) for $21.99 (order no. 05-6751); their address is Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.mysteryguild.com>. Their "exclusive" edition may or may not be the same as the Quality Paperback Book Club edition.

200. May 08 #5: E. J. Wagner reports that her THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR: THE REAL FORENSICS BEHIND THE GREAT DETECTIVE'S GREATEST CASES (Jun 06 #2) has been translated into German: WISSENSCHAFT BEI SHERLOCK HOLMES UND DIE ANFÄNGE DER GERICHTSMEDIZIN (Weinheim: Wiley-VCH, 2008; 234 pp., £14.95). E. J. has an interesting web-site at <www.forensic.to/webhome/ejwagner>.
201. Gyles Brandreth's OSCAR WILDE AND THE RING OF DEATH (London: John Murray, 2008; 395 pp., £14.99) is the second in his series of mysteries featuring Wilde as the detective, assisted by Robert Sherard as his Watson, and by his friend Arthur Conan Doyle; the mystery is ingenious and the story well told, with excellent period flavor. The U.S. title will be OSCAR WILDE AND A GAME CALLED MURDER (from Touchstone later this year, $24.00). The first novel in the series, OSCAR WILDE AND THE CANDLELIGHT MURDERS (May 07 #2), was published here as OSCAR WILDE AND A DEATH OF NO IMPORTANCE, and there's a fine web-site at <www.oscarwildemurdermysteries.com>.
202. "Faeries" is a new musical about the Cottingley fairies, written by Stephen Langston and Wendy McPike, scheduled for the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in August; there's a web-site at <www.sl-p.org/Edinburghfaeries.thm>.
203. The newly-discovered copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual (Apr 08 #2) sold at auction at Bonhams in London this month for £15,500 (well above the estimate of £7,000-9000); add 20% for the buyer's premium. The Northern Echo reported (May 21) that it was bought "by a collector from the north west of England who describes himself as a Sherlock fanatic." According to a story in the Oxford Mail (May 21), the 45-year-old Holmes fanatic from the north of England, who asked not to be named, said, "I'm elated and now I need to sort out the money--I'm lucky I have an understanding wife," and that "I'm very happy because I've been collecting Conan Doyle for about 30 years now. Randall Stock has more information about the Oxfam Beeton's at his web-site at <members.aol.com/shbest/ref/bonhams-2008-beetons.htm>.
204. Bruce Holmes is continuing to expand his explorations of Sherlockian philately (and philatelic Sherlockiana) (Aug 03 #1/Nov 04 #5/Jan 05 #4), and a colorful catalog of his philatelic offerings is available as a .pdf file by e-mail from Bruce at <ebh221b@eastlink.ca>.
205. Robert H. Schutz ("The Arnsworth Castle Business") died on Apr. 26. He was a chemist, director of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health's Testing and Certification Laboratory, and an enthusiastic amateur printer, presiding over the Plane Tree Press, from which he published many issues of The Arnsworth Castle Business Index. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1961.
206. Martin Heath reports that Bigwood Auctioneers in Stratford upon Avon will have a 42-piece set of silver cutlery at auction on June 27. The cutlery, discovered in Baskerville Hall, is engraved with the Baskerville crest, and there's a press release at <www.bigwoodauctioneers.com> with photographs of the silver. This Baskerville Hall is Clyro Court in Hay-on-Wye, where the owners have said for many years that Conan Doyle visited the family often, and found inspiration there for his story (the family asked Conan Doyle to change the setting so that they wouldn't be overrun by tourists).
207. May 08 #6: Dick Martin died on May 24. He was a fine actor and comedian, most famous for the long-running television series "Laugh-In" that he launched with Dan Rowan in 1968. They impersonated Holmes and Watson in Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill" in St. Louis in 1960, and there is a photograph of them in Canonical costume on p. 250 in Chris Steinbrunner and Norman Michael's THE FILMS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1978).

208. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" continues to be popular with regional theaters: it's on at the Park Square Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., through June 22; 20 West 7th Place, St. Paul, MN 55102 (651-291-7005) <www.parksquaretheatre.org>. It's also scheduled at the Hedgerow Theatre in Media, Pa., Oct. 16 through Nov. 16. 64 Rose Valley Road, Media, PA 19063 (610-565-4211) <www.hedgerowtheatre.org>.
209. "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" is a two-act puppet play adapted by Bob Brock from "The Final Problem" and "The Empty House", first performed at the Hole in the Wall Puppet Theatre in Lancaster, Pa., in 2000; they'll perform it again on June 6-7 and 13-14. 126 North Water Street, Lancaster, PA 17603 (717-394-8398) <www.holeinthewallpuppettheatre.com>; click on Over 21 Club.
210. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley, won an Agatha from Malice Domestic (best nonfiction), and an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America (best critical/ biographical).
211. Plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 9, 2009, honoring the 150th anniversary of the birth of Arthur Conan Doyle and the 75th anniversary of the founding of the BSI. And The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 17, 2009.
212. It was in January 1968, during the William Gillette Luncheon in an upstairs room at Keen's Chop House in New York, that a Baker Street Irregulars suggested that The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes might consider picketing the BSI's annual dinner. And so they did. And much earlier, in 1946, the William Gillette Memorial Luncheon was held at Keen's. But Keen's is famous for much more than that: Keen's Pipe Club has a long and distinguished history, and Bruce Harris has an interesting article about the restaurant and the club in the summer issue of Pipes and Tobaccos. $7.95; 5808 Farringdon Place #200, Raleigh, NC 27609 <www.pt-magazine.com>.
213. Postage rates increased this month, and my newsletter will cost $10.70 (to the U.S.), $13.90 (to Canada), and $16.50 (elsewhere); my circulation department will remind you when it's time to renew.
214. And my apologies to anyone who sent in something that didn't make it into this month's issue: I've recovered from a computer crash, but lost a few very recent notes that weren't backed up. "Have two copies of anything you ever want to see again" is excellent advice.

215. Jun 08 #1: Mike Whelan reports that The Baker Street Irregulars' 'A Study in Scarlet Expedition' to Salt Lake City on Aug. 30, 31, and Sept. 1 (with a Welcome Reception on Friday evening, Aug. 29) promises to be a very special event. It's open to all Sherlockians, and "participation in this conference will be a singular experience in scholarship and fellowship in the historic atmosphere of Utah, a backdrop for Holmes' first published case." It's open to all Sherlockians, and there are a few places available for the conference. Additional information is available from Mary Ann Bradley (317-514-8566); if you leave a message, please tell her your e-mail address.
216. Ken Lanza spotted an interesting article posted by Jem Bloomfield on May 20 at the web-site of the California Literary Review at <calitreview.com/682>; "The Right Side of the Tracks" discusses railways in the classic whodunnit, with due attention to the Canon, and an interesting photograph of a train leaving Paddington Station in 1892.
217. Amnon Kabatchnik has long been interested in drama, and he has written two books due to be published by Scarecrow Press: BLOOD ON THE STAGE: MILESTONE PLAYS OF CRIME, MYSTERY AND DETECTION: AN ANNOTATED REPERTOIRE, 1900-1925 (384 pp., $90.00) and SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE STAGE: A CHRONOLOGICAL ENCYCLOPEDIA OF PLAYS FEATURING THE GREAT DETECTIVE (208 pp., $55.00).
218. Harvey Korman died on May 29. He was a dedicated comedian whose first major television appearance was in skits in "The Danny Kaye Show" from 1964 to 1967, and when that series was cancelled he went to work on "The Carol Burnett Show" (for which he won four Emmys), and he starred in many films, including "Blazing Saddles" (1974). It was on "The Carol Burnett Show" in 1972 that he played Watson in a skit in which Anthony Newley was Holmes.
219. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>; there's a report on the 4th Annual Gathering of Southern Sherlockians with lots of photographs (with captions, so that you can tell who's who), and offers of Sherlockian books and other items of interest.
220. I still have extra copies of the new Italian stamp honoring Dorando Pietri (Mar 08 #3), who didn't win the marathon in the 1908 Olympics (and wasn't assisted by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle); if you would like to have one of the stamps, just let me know. And if you would like to know more about those Olympics, Jon Lellenberg has noted THE FIRST LONDON OLYMPICS 1908, by Rebecca Jenkins (London: Piatkus Books, 2008; 288 pp., £16.99). Also available is THE 1908 OLYMPICS: THE FIRST LONDON GAMES, by Keith Baker (Cheltenham: Sportsbooks, 2008; 224 pp., £7.99).
221. "Buckminster Fuller: Starting with the Universe" is the title of an exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York (through Sept. 21) <www.whitney.org>. Bucky Fuller was a protege and good friend of Christopher Morley in the 1930s, and a member of the Three Hours for Lunch Club, the Grillparzer Sittenpolizeiverein, and The Baker Street Irregulars, and he installed one of his Dymaxion bathrooms in Morley's "Knothole" writing studio, now on display in Christopher Morley Park in Roslyn on Long Island.

222. Jun 08 #2: WHAT'S YOUR STORY? WATERSTONE'S EXCLUSIVE COLLECTABLE POSTCARD BOOK will be published in a limited edition in July, to benefit the National Year of Reading. Each postcard contains a (very) short story, including a Harry Potter prequel by J. K. Rowling, and a Sherlockian pastiche by Neil Gaiman. You can read about (and pre-order) the book (£5.00 plus shipping) at <www.waterstones.com>, and you can read all of the stories at <www.waterstoneswys.com>. The manuscript for Rowling's story sold for £25,000 at a charity auction at Waterstone's this month.
223. Mel Ferrer died on June 2. He was an actor, director, and producer who was involved in more than 100 films, including "Lili" (1953), "War and Peace" (1956), and "Wait Until Dark" (1967); he played Moriarty (with Peter Lawford as Holmes and Donald O'Connor as Watson) in the "Save Sherlock Holmes" episode of "Fantasy Island" (1982).
224. Something for collectors of Sherlockian comic books to pursue: there were three issues of Classics Illustrated Giants, the second one being "An Illustrated Library of Exciting Mystery Stories", published in 1949; it contained "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde", "3 Famous Mysteries", "The Moonstone", and Edgar Allan Poe's "Mysteries", and "3 Famous Mysteries" included "The Sign of the Four". It was described as "probably the scarcest comic book to feature Sherlock Holmes" when a copy (in "fantastic condition") was offered at Heritage Auctions this month with a "buy it now" price of $3405.75 (it wasn't sold).
225. Reported by Tom Huntington: Bruce Wexler's THE MYSTERIOUS WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Philadelphia: Running Press, 2008; 192 pp., $14.98); "the illustrated guide to the famous cases, infamous adversaries, and ingenious methods of the great detective".
226. John Baesch spotted an imaginative "stacked books accent table" ($169.00) in a recent catalog from Charles Keath (Box 2789, Cedar Rapids, IA 52406) (888-918-4000) <www.charleskeath.com>; the second book from the bottom has a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes on the spine.
227. The manuscript of "Lady Frances Carfax" was offered by Mark Hime (Bibliotopus) at the Antiquarian Book Fair in London this month for £250,000 (essentially the same as the $500,000 he has priced it in his catalogs in recent years), but it did not sell; according to the Calcutta Telegraph (June 15), Hime said he believes the manuscript will find a buyer eventually: "if you want to play, you have to pay." The incomplete manuscript of "His Last Bow"

- (which Hime has been advertising for $375,000) was at auction at Sotheby's in New York on June 19 (estimated at $150,000-200,000), and also went unsold.
228. THE CASE OF THE LEFT-HANDED LADY (New York: Sleuth/Philomel, 2007; 234 pp., $12.99) is the second of the three novels in Nancy Springer's series about Enola Holmes, who is the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock, and hiding from them in London and solving mysteries on her own; the stories are well written and interesting, and the books are for children aged 9 to 12. THE CASE OF THE PECULIAR PINK FAN and THE CASE OF THE CRYPTIC CRINOLINE will be the fourth and fifth titles in the series. Springer describes herself as a writer/organic word farmer at her web-site at <www.nancyspringer.net>.
229. Jun 08 #3: DEATH IN THE AIR, by Shane Peacock (Toronto: Tundra, 2008; 254 pp., $19.95) is the second in his series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" (who is on his own in London and trying to learn how to be a detective); the characters are interesting and the mystery intriguing. The first novel in the series, EYE OF THE CROW, won the Crime Writers of Canada's Arthur Ellis Award for best young adult crime novel; the Arthur Ellis Awards are imaginatively named after the "nom de travail" of Canada's official hangman. The author's web-site is at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.
230. Kula Shaker is a British psychedelic rock band that has a Sherlockian promo video for its single "Second Sight" (2007) at YouTube, Mattias Boström has reported; the URL is <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ndwfyekMX-Y>.
231. Jon Lellenberg spotted a story in the Salisbury (N.C.) Post (June 19) about a new band called Resident Patient (which takes its name from the Sherlock Holmes story); they say that "this delightful quartet has travelled far and wide to assemble the most unique equipment for creating sound, everything ranging from exotic instruments to hand-made circuitry. Their web-site is at <www.residentpatient.jimdo.com>, and you can hear four of their songs at <www.myspace.com/residentpatient>.
232. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a sheetlet of stamps honoring the husband-and-wife team Charles and Ray Eames, who were famous for their Eames chair and other modern designs; four of the stamps are shown below. They also produced "The Singular Case of the Plural Green Mustache" for the IBM Pavilion at the N.Y. World's Fair (1964-1965); this mechanized puppet show that had Holmes and Watson explained what was then called "2-valued" logic. An early version of the script (as "The Case of the Purloined Train") was published in Esquire (Oct. 1963) and a later version ("The Case of the Elusive Train") in The Baker Street Journal (Dec. 1964).
233. Karen Murdock spotted a report in the Lancaster New Era (June 11) that Jeremy Sherlock Holmes, 34, was arrested for possession of controlled substances and possession of drug paraphernalia after a vehicle stop in Lancaster County, Pa. And a report in the Evening Standard (June 17) by their "City Spy" columnist, who wrote that new PR companies find it hard to resist giving themselves new names, but he "quite likes Threepipe, so called because founder Jim Hawker is a Sherlock Holmes fan."
234. Jun 08 #4: Further to the report (Mar 07 #2) about the Warner Bros. film that will "re-imagine Holmes as an action-adventure sleuth," the Hollywood Reporter noted (June 3) that Guy Ritchie has been hired to write and direct the film, now tentatively planned for 2010. Ritchie, at the moment, is best known as the husband of Madonna (who has not been mentioned as Irene Adler or Mrs. Hudson). Nicole Sperling reported in Entertainment Weekly's "Hollywood Insider" blog that Robert Downey Jr. (who is in theaters now in "Iron Man") "has had his eye on" the project.
235. Illyria is a British open-air touring company that will be performing their own dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from July 20 through Sept. 7 (with a stop at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival, Aug. 5-16). Their schedule is available at their web-site at <www.illyria.uk.com>.
236. Tina Rhea spotted a report on a new exhibition on "Jack the Ripper and the East End" at the London Museum's new Docklands branch (through Nov. 2); it is a comprehensive display of photographs, police reports, and curios, and of course the East End was part of Sherlock Holmes' London. The web-site is at <www.museumindocklands.org.uk>.
237. Spotted by Paul Martin: Wayne Petherick's CRIMINAL PROFILE INTO THE MIND OF THE KILLER (London: Modern Books, 2005); the book has pertinent quotes from the Canon and two full pages describing Holmes as "The First Profiler" (exemplified by his deductions from Watson's watch).
238. HOLMES: HAYDN'S HEAD was a four-issue comic-book mini-series by Omaha Perez (Jun 05 #2), and it's now available as a graphic novel (San Francisco: AiT/Planet Lar, 2008; 144 pp., $12.95); Perez called it "a vicious skewering of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's creations," with a Holmes who has "more in common wit with Iggy Pop than Basil Rathbone." He reports that he has retouched dozens of pages and redrawn pieces he wasn't satisfied with; he has a blog at <www.searchintodestroy.blogspot.com>, and the publisher is at 2034 17th Street, San Francisco, CA 94116 <www.ait-planelar.com>.
239. Holmes and Watson appeared in Andy Lane's "Doctor Who" novel ALL-CONSUMING FIRE (Jul 94 #4) and Conan Doyle in John Peel's EVOLUTION (Feb 95 #6); if you missed them, copies are available ($6.00 and $8.00) from the Alien Entertainment Co. (888-734-7386) <www.alientertainmentstore.com>.
240. Jay Pearlman has his computer up and running again, and the spring issue of the Tonga Times is well worth the wait. Published by the Mini-Tonga Scion Society, the newsletter has colorfully-illustrated articles about the miniature sitting rooms constructed by Yves Charles Feroq in France and by Per Engelson in Sweden, and other news from the wide world of Sherlockian miniatures. A membership covering three issues costs $11.00 ($12.00 to Canada/ $14.00 elsewhere) from Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229), and visitors are welcome at the society's excellent web-site at <www.hometown.aol.com/minitongasociety/mini1.htm>.
241. Randall Stock notes a report on a "Sherlock Holmes" five-reel, 25-payline progressive video slot with bonus free spins; there's a review and a "free spins preview" at <www.slotsjam.com/bonusgame/sherlock-holmes.html>. One-arm bandits sure are a lot fancier now than when I last played one.
-
242. Jun 08 #5: "Found: The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on a story in the Glasgow Daily Record (June 27) about the records of noted pathologist Sir Bernard Spilsbury, unearthed by one of his heirs and to be sold at auction at Sotheby's in London on July 17 (estimated at £7,000-9,000). Spilsbury was described as "Britain's living successor to mythical Sherlock Holmes" in a story in Time magazine (July 2, 1934) and is considered the father of professional forensic pathology.
243. Tina Rhea spotted Vic Lee's "Pardon My Planet" in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer (June 20). The pun's an old one, but of course a good puns never die.
244. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley, has been nominated for an Anthony (best critical work) at Bouchercon to be held in Baltimore in October), and for a Macavity (for best mystery non-fiction) from Mystery Readers International (also presented at Bouchercon); MRI is "the largest mystery fan/reader organization in the world." The book already has won an Agatha at Malice Domestic (best non-fiction), and an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America (for best critical/ biographical).
245. Another Anthony nomination (best short story) went to Steve Hockensmith's "Dear Dr. Watson"; it appeared in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (in the Feb. 2007 issue), and you can read it on-line at Hockensmith's web-site at <www.stevhockensmith.typepad.com> (look for Archives at the right, click on Big Red's Blog, and scroll down to Aug. 15, 2007).
246. Films that were never made (unfortunately) include a Warner Bros. version of "The Speckled Band" (Conan Doyle's play); there was a copy of the Samuel French script (apparently a 1930 printing) in their research library (it's now owned by a collector). It is possible, and perhaps even likely, that

- the British film "The Speckled Band" (1931) that starred Raymond Massey as Holmes preempted plans by Warner Bros. Or they may just have decided to go with "gangster studio" films such as Edgar Robinson's "Little Caesar" and James Cagney's "Public Enemy" (both released in 1931).
247. Bruce Montgomery ("The Red Circle") died on June 21. He was an excellent and accomplished musician, director the Gilbert & Sullivan Players of Philadelphia and director of musical studies and the University of Pennsylvania (including the Penn Glee Club, the Mask and Wig Club, the University Band, and the Penn Singers), and he earned his first paycheck at the age of five when he was cast in "Trial by Jury". Bruce was a second-generation Sherlockian, the son of James Montgomery (who made the song "We Never Mention Aunt Clara" part of the traditions of the S'ian world). Bruce followed in his father's footsteps with the song "We Always Mention Aunt Clara" (which he once described as "Father's Folly, or Great-Aunt Clara Revisited"), and The Baker Street Irregulars awarded him his father's Investiture in 1994.
248. Jun 08 #6: The graphic novel (well, collection) ROSEBUD GRAPHIC CLASSICS: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Apr 02 #7) is now out of print, but two of the stories are reprinted (along with seven other new stories and poems) in GRAPHIC CLASSICS: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (SECOND EDITION); the contents of the new volume include "The Copper Beeches" and "The Engineer's Thumb". And: ADVENTURE CLASSICS [GRAPHIC CLASSICS VOLUME TWELVE includes "The Crime of the Brigadier"; both collections are available in comic-book shops ($11.95) and from the publisher: Eureka Productions (878 Grove Road Horeb, WI 53572) <www.graphicclassics.com>. Their GRAPHIC CLASSICS: SPECIAL EDITION (2008) was distributed on Free Comic Book Day, has "John Barrington Cowles"; the company offers a free copy if you purchase any two of their titles.
249. Phillip Gold (221Books) has bought the Sherlockian collection of the late Jack Kerr (Oct 00 #1), and is offering them for sale at the Advanced Book Exchange <www.abebooks.com/home/221books>. If you have any specific wants you can let him know at 760 East Carlisle Road, Westlake Village, CA 91361 (800-889-2640) <phillipgold_221books@yahoo.com>
250. "I'm a huge fan of Sherlock Holmes, always was," novel Lee Child told the Chicago Sun-Times (June 22). "In a couple of the books I've put in little Conan Doyle-style tributes to Sherlock Holmes, in the same kind of language Holmes would have used." Child has written 12 books in his "Jack Reacher" series of thriller novels.
251. The latest issue of Clues: A Journal of Detection (v. 26, n. 1, 2008) is a theme issue devoted to Victorian detective fiction, and it has Maria Cairney's article on "The Healing Art of Detection: Sherlock Holmes and the Disease of Crime in the Strand Magazine". $30.00 (or $40.00 a year for two issues) from McFarland, Box 611, Jefferson, NC 28640 (800-253-2187); Clues' web-site's at <www.clues.com>.
252. Les Klinger spotted an item in The Hollywood Reporter (June 25) about plans by Central Partnership (described as Russia's largest independent film producer and distributor) to make a $16 million, 32-episode, "Sherlock Holmes" television series. Shooting will begin in the summer of 2009 and continue through 2010; half of the episodes are to be based on the Livanov/Solomin series (1979-1986), and the other half on new adaptations.
253. Some obituaries for British actors: David Atkins died on Apr. 23; he had a long career as a supporting actor on stage and screen and television, and played Mordecai Smith in Granada's broadcast of "The Sign of Four" (1987). Bernard Archard died on May 1; he had many roles on stage, screen, and television, often appearing as doctors or policemen. He played the coroner Dr. Davidson (with John Neville as Dr. Thorndyke) in a dramatization of R. Austin Freeman's "A Message from the Deep Sea" in the television series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971). Margot Boyd died on May 20; she was a student at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, appearing in a play directed by George Bernard Shaw; she acted for many years on stage, radio, and television, and played Frau Mathis in a dramatization of Baroness Orczy's "The Woman in the Big Hat" in the same television series.

Jul 08 #1:

254. John Baesch reports that Frederic Raphael, reviewing GRAHAM GREENE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (London: Little, Brown, 2008) for the Times Literary Supplement (Jan. 25), writes that "in a mock-modest late letter, to a postulant bibliographer, Greene denied being a literary man, to excuse 'preferring Conan Doyle to Virginia Woolf or E. M. Forster.'" Raphael adds, "who doesn't?"
255. Richard D. Altick died on Feb. 7. He was a noted literary scholar who had a long career at Ohio State University and wrote often about Victorian life and literature. His essay "Mr. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Samuel Johnson" was published in Vincent Starrett's 221B: STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES (1940).
256. "The Edwardians" was an excellent eight-part television series broadcast by the BBC in 1972; "Conan Doyle" featured Nigel Davenport in the title role, and four of the programs (including "Conan Doyle" were broadcast by PBS-TV in the U.S. in 1974 with commentary by Alistair Cooke. I'm not aware that any of the programs were ever issued on VHS cassettes, and it was nice to hear from Jon Lellenberg that the series will be issued in October by BBC Video and Warner Home Video as a DVD set ($49.98).
257. Bruce Montgomery died last month (Jun 08 #5), and there will be a memorial service for him on Oct. 4, at the Zellerbach Theater of the Annenberg Center at the University of Pennsylvania; the program will feature performances of several of his favorite pieces by some of the many performers whose lives and careers he guided. If you would like to know more, you should go to <www.montyart.com> and "click here to subscribe to this site's general mailing list."
258. "Without Robin, there is no Batman. Sherlock Holmes without Watson? Unthinkable." That's the blurb for "Loyal Sidekick" sweatshirts ($27.95 to $29.95) and T-shirts ($17.95 to $19.95) offered in the new Wireless catalog (Box 2599, Hudson, OH 44236) (800-669-9999) <www.thewirelesscatalog.com>. Reported by John Baesch.
259. The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic) are co-sponsoring the Second Newberry Library Sherlock Holmes-Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium at the Library in Chicago at 9:30 am on Oct. 4; the event is open to the public, and the program will feature Roy E. Pilot ("The White Company: Why an Annotated Version?"), Donald J. Terras ("The Sign of Four and Development of Sherlockian Chicago"), and Julie McKuras ("I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere...").
260. Artist Steven McGovney sculpts interesting literary teapots, some of which were in the shop at the de Young Museum in San Francisco earlier this year, and one of his sculptures is "The Hound of the Baskervilles". This black-and-white newsletter won't do justice to it, but you can see the teapot at <www.detailsart.com/index.asp?PageAction=VIEWPROD&ProdID=3063>.
261. Evy Herzog discovered ANNABEL THE ACTRESS STARRING IN: HOUND OF THE BARKERVILLES, written by Ellen Conford and illustrated by Renee W. Andriani (New York: Alladin, 2002; 83 pp., $15.00 cloth, $3.99 paper); for ages 9 to 12. "Mystery! Suspense! And a slobbering dog named Binky?!" (it's not Sherlockian except for the allusion in the title of the play).
262. Jul 08 #2: Further to the report on the death of Bernard Archard (Jun 08 #6): Dave Morrill has reported that Gordon E. Kelley's SHERLOCK HOLMES: SCREEN AND SOUND GUIDE lists Archard in "The Absence of Mr. Glass" (broadcast by BBC Radio 4 on Nov. 28, 1989); based on a Father Brown story written by G. K. Chesterton, the radio dramatization starred Archard as Dr. Hood (who may be a retired Holmes) and Andrew Sachs as Father Brown.
263. <www.the-turds.co.uk/turds/No-Sh*t-Sherlock.aspx> is the URL for the Unofficial Turds Website's new handpainted poly-resin figurine (11 cm high) available for £9.80 and certainly one of the more unusual Sherlockfigurines. Note: that asterisk is in the URL so that the electronic version of this newsletter will make it through obscenity filters; just type the actual word. Thanks to Mattias Bostrom for reporting this item.

264. John Baesch spotted a report in the Sunday Times (Mar. 30) that a new edition of T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS will be published next year by Faber & Faber to celebrate the 70th anniversary of the first edition, and the 80th anniversary of Faber & Faber. The new edition will have illustrations by Axel Scheffler; you can see samples of his earlier work at <www.imagesofdelight.com/client.asp?id=67>. The Times' art editor Richard Brooks suggested that Scheffler's new creations "are likely to be as eagerly awaited by figures in the political world as by young families," because British prime minister Gordon Brown's modus operandi "is said to bear more than a passing resemblance to that of the Mystery Cat, Macavity, who honed the knack of slinking away at times of mayhem and mideameanour."
265. Randall Stock spotted a story in the Clitheroe Advertiser and Times (July 16) about Stonyhurst College, where Conan Doyle was a student from 1868 to 1875; the college offers a guided tour that includes the table on which Oliver Cromwell slept before the Battle of Preston, and the desk on which Conan Doyle carved his name. According to the college web-site (the URL for the guided tour is <www.stonyhurst.ac.uk/article-854.shtml> you can visit "the Dark Walk which provided Sir Arthur Conan Doyle with his inspiration for Sir Henry Baskerville's murder."
266. The fourth issue of Albert Mendez' eight-page newsletter The Pipe Smoker's Thing (spring 2008) includes his article "Some Account of the Holmesian Society" (a peripatetic society founded in 1966 and "precipitated from the heights of prosperity to the depths of adversity" in 1988, when a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 was stolen from the society's bookroom in Paris. Copies are available on request "in consideration of a small donation to help defray the costs of printing and postage" from Albert Mendez (142-35 38th Avenue, Flushing, NY 11354).
267. The N.Y. Times has reported (July 22) on a surprise infestation of lion's mane jellyfish along the coast of New Jersey and New York. And on July 20 many of the athletes swimming in the New York City Triathlon were stung by the jellyfish; a 32-year-old triathlete died after being pulled unconscious from the Hudson River, but autopsy reports were said to be inconclusive.

268. Jul 08 #3: Reported: ALAS, POOR SHERLOCK: THE IMPERFECTIONS OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST DETECTIVE (TO SAY NOTHING OF HIS MEDICAL FRIEND), by Joseph Green and Peter Ridgway Watt (Beckenham: Chancery House Press, 2007; 370 pp., £16.95); "it would appear that no attempt has been made, since Dakin's classic work, to review comprehensively the vast number of imperfections in the Sherlock Holmes Canon."
269. Columbia Pictures has announced plans to film a comedy that will star Sacha Baron Cohen as Holmes and Will Ferrell as Watson. "Just the idea of Sacha and Will as Sherlock Holmes and Watson makes us laugh," Columbia co-president Matt Tolach told Variety (July 1), "Sacha and Will are two of the funniest and most talented guys on the planet, and having them take on these two iconic character is frankly hilarious."
270. And further to the report that Warner Bros. has hired Guy Ritchie to write and direct a film portraying Holmes as an "action-adventure sleuth" (Jun 08 #4), it appears unlikely that his wife Madonna will appear in the film: the [London] Sunday Mirror reported that she has decided to move permanently to America, while Ritchie plans to stay in England and wants their son Rocco raised there. "The £50 million he could receive from a divorce settlement planes into insignificance compared to his love for his son," a friend of Ritchie told the newspaper.
271. Variety has reported (July 9) that Robert Downey Jr. has been cast as Sherlock Holmes in the Warner Bros. action film, which will go into production before the Columbia Pictures comedy. Marni Soupcoff wrote in Canada's National Post (July 18) about some of "the more intriguing entries in Google's latest Hot Trends, an index that tracks the search engine's fastestrising queries." One of the queries is "deerstalker", Soupcoff said, adding that "the best guess I can offer is that the hat owes its renewed prominence to the limited imaginations of reporters sharing the news" that Downey has been cast as Sherlock Holmes.
272. "We're trying to bring a completely contemporary and entertaining perspective on an intellectual action hero true to his origins where he was more of an action guy originally," Ritchie told MTV at Comic Con in Los Angeles this month. Producer Joel Silver explained that "It's like James Bond in 1891. "Nobody ever did the 'Sherlock Holmes' story as an action movie, and he really was an action guy originally." Ritchie also said that Professor Moriarty will appear in the film, which will not be based on any one story of novel; "it's true to the period, and authentic from where it derives its influence."
273. Sherlock Holmes' comments on Edgar Allan Poe and Dupin were less than complimentary (in "A Study in Scarlet"), but Conan Doyle offered high praise to Poe in a speech on "The Poe Centenary" at the Hotel Metropole in London on Mar. 1, 1909. The Bronx Historical Society has started work on restoring the five-room Poe Cottage in which Poe lived his last years; the work will cost $250,000 and is expected to be completed next year, in time for the 200th anniversary of Poe's birth. Construction already is underway on a $4.2 million visitor center, also to be completed next year. The cottage has a web-page at <www.nycgovparks.org/sub\_about/about\_parks.html>; click on [historic house museums].

274. Jul 08 #4: Baron Von Herling's "huge 100-horse-power Benz car" was blocking the country lane (in "His Last Bow"), and Fraser Smythe, in an article in the Sherlock Holmes Journal (winter 1992) identified the car as a Benz 39/100 PS. Now Carl Heifetz has found a photograph of the car at <www.peo.de/document/11395/benz-39100-ps-1912-1920.html>, and it's indeed an impressive vehicle.
275. Spotted by Evy Herzog: ONE-MINUTE MYSTERIES AND BRAIN TEASERS, by Sandy Silverthorne and John Warner (Harvest House, 2007), with Sherlockian (and Watsonian) artwork on the cover of and in the book.
276. If you've been wondering whether the Baskerville cutlery (May 08 #5) actually sold at the auction on June 27, and how much someone might have paid for it, so am I. Neither Martin Heath nor Bigwood Auctioneers have responded to my queries.
277. Peter Calamai notes that this year's Scene of the Crime Festival will be held on Aug. 9 at Wolfe Island in Ontario, the birthplace of Canada's first crime writer: Grant Allen. There's an interesting web-site for the festival at <www.sceneofthecrime.ca> with a link to information about Allen, who was a friend of Conan Doyle, and may well have given Conan Doyle a copy of THE ATTIS OF CAIUS VALERIUS CATULLUS TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH VERSE, WITH DISSERTATIONS ON THE MYTH OF ATTIS, ON THE ORIGIN OF TREE-WORSHIP, AND ON THE GALLIAMBIC METRE BY GRANT ALLEN (1892), which in turn may have inspired the titles of some of the books mentioned in "The Empty House"; Conan Doyle completed Allen's unfinished novel HILDA WADE after Allen died in 1899. <ehlt.flinders.edu.au/english/GA/GAHome.html> is the URL for a detailed web-site about Grant Allen (reported by Christopher Roden).
278. The new Sherlockian society McMurdo's Camp (Apr 08 #2) has a blog, as more and more societies do now, and the Internet offers an excellent way of making scholarship available: Bill Briggs has written an interesting and nicely-illustrated article ("That Train") about the railroad train that brought Jack McMurdo into the Valley of Fear, and it's available at their web-site at <www.mcmurdoscamp.wordpress.com/2008/05/06/that-train>.
279. Pat Ward has reported that Christopher Plummer's autobiography IN SPITE OF MYSELF: A MEMOIR will be published this year (it's due from Knopf in October, $29.95). Plummer played Sherlock Holmes in the 30-minute television film "Silver Blaze" (1977) and in "Murder by Decree" (1979)
280. More film news: it has been quite some time since the first report on the film "Death Defying Acts" (Aug 05 #1); Guy Pearce stars as Harry Houdini, and Catherine Zeta-Jones as Mary McGarvie, an Edinburgh psychic who tries to claim Houdini's reward for anyone who can contact his mother. The film was screened at the Toronto Film Festival on Sept. 13, 2007, and it premiered in Australia on Mar. 13, 2008; it was scheduled for limited release in the U.S. on July 11. There is no mention of Conan Doyle in the cast and credits.

281. Jul 08 #5: And there's more of interest to Houdini's fans: Houdini acted in silent films from 1919 to 1923, and HOUDINI: THE MOVIE STAR, a three-DVD set from Kino International ($39.95), has three of his feature films (some color-tinted as in the original release), almost all of his 15-episode serial "The Master of Mystery", and special features that include films of his escapes and an audio recording.
282. The Independent has reported (July 27) that the University of London Library may sell the "magical library" of Harry Price because the Higher Education Funding Council has cut support to the university's libraries. Price was a famous psychic investigator and ghost hunter who clashed with Conan Doyle about spiritualism in the 1920s, and Price kept Conan Doyle's correspondence. <www.ull.ca.uk/exhibitions/harryprice.pdg> is the URL for a catalog of an exhibition of "The Magical Library of Harry Price" at the University in 2004; one of the highlights of the collection is a copy of MALLEUS MALEFICARUM [THE HAMMER OF WITCHES], a treatise on witchcraft that was published in 1487 and is considered by modern magicians as the first book to reveal the secrets of magic.
283. The summer issue of The Baker Street Journal offers Michael Dirda's amusing "A Study in Starrett" (the paper he presented at this year's annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars), Sally Sugarman's "Sherlock Holmes and the Children" (about Sherlock Holmes pastiches written for young readers), and much more, including editor Steve Rothman's announcement that the next BSJ Christmas Annual will be David F. Morrill's "SIGNS of the Times" (his discussion of film versions of "The Sign of the Four" from Arthur Wontner in 1932 to Matt Frewer in 2001). The BSJ, published quarterly, costs $26.50 a year (or $29.00 foreign), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) can be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331). There's an option for subscriptions to the BSJ and to the Christmas Annual for $36.50 ($40.00 foreign); Steve warns that the Christmas annual likely will go quickly out of print, as last year's did. The BSJ's web-site, at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, also accepts subscriptions, and offers other material, including papers written by past winners of the Morley-Montgomery articles from recent issues, and additional BSI publications.
284. Randall Stock continues to add to his "Sidney Paget Original Drawings and Artwork: A Preliminary Census and Checklist"; there's more detail, and minor corrections, and new entries for more of Paget's non-Sherlockian work: <www.members.aol.com/\_ht\_a/shbest/ref/sidney-paget-original-art.htm>.
285. The summer issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal (winter 2006) has "The Master's Birthday" (David L. Hammer's attempt to demonstrate that Holmes was born on Oct. 10), a fine article on "Sherlock Holmes and the Beginnings of Forensic Science" (by Vincent J. and Paul L. Cirillo), "Phantoms and Fairies" (June Thomson's discussion of Conan Doyle's belief in Spiritualism), and additional news and scholarship from Britain and elsewhere. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London welcomes new members: associate members receive only The Sherlock Holmes Journal, and full members also receive notices of meetings. Prices vary depending on where you are and on whether you're an adult or a junior, and details information is available from Robert Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU England) and at the society's web-site at <www.sherlock-holmes.org/uk>.

286. Jul 08 #6: The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection of the Toronto Public Library will present a lecture by Leslie Klinger on Oct. 23 at 7:00 pm at the Lillian H. Smith Library (239 College Street) on his NEW ANNOTATED DRACULA, and a lecture by Steven Rothman on Nov. 15 at 3:00 pm in the Elizabeth Beeton Auditorium at the Toronto Reference Library (798 Yonge Street); on "Tincture of Conan Doyle: Christopher Morley on Sherlock Holmes". There's no charge for admission to the events, and all members of the public are invited.
287. THE FATE OF FENELLA (1892) was an early round-robin novel, with each chapter written by a well-known British author, one of them being Conan Doyle; it's a tale of mesmerism and murder, and there's a new edition of the novel (Kansas City: Valancourt Books, 2008; 268 pp., $17.95), edited and introduced by Andrew Maunder.
288. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Don Hobb's "100 Years Ago" discussion of "The Foreign Language Collector", John Bergquist's "50 Years Ago" report on Edgar W. Smith's THE INCUNABULAR SHERLOCK HOLMES, and curator Tim Johnson's announcement that he has won a Staff Development Grant from the Friends of the Libraries that he plans to use for a trip to Portsmouth to do research in the Richard Lancelyn Green Collection. Copies are available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
289. It was 25 years ago (Sep 83 #2) that I reported on "Angst in My Pants" (an LP recorded issued in 1982 with songs by the rock group Sparks). One song was "Sherlock Holmes" (with amusing Sherlockian lyrics), and you can read the lyrics on-line at <www.sparks-lyrics.co.uk/angst-in-my-pants.html>; you can also purchase an MP3 download of the song for $0.99 at <www.amazon.com> (or listen to a brief sample). Ken Lanza gets credit for this discovery.
290. Ken also spotted a report in the Daily Mail (June 6) on Rachel Rice, who at the age of 10 played Marina Savage in the Granada dramatization of "The Dying Detective" in 1994. She's now starring in the British reality television series, and you can see recent pictures of her at <www.imdb.com>.
291. Another Internet item noted by Ken is Rod Mollise's "Sherlock Holmes Page: Homage to the Master" at <www.skywatch.brainiac.com/holmes>, where Mollise offers his own annotated versions of seven of the stories, and his paper on "The Erotic Hound" (an examination of the story "using the discourse of Roland Barthes").
292. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has reports by Stephanie Thomas on cigarette cards held in the collection, and by Peggy Perdue on some recently acquired "realia", plus news of the handover of the chairmanship of the Friends by Doug Wrigglesworth to Cliff Goldfarb. Copies of the newsletter are available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <doug.wrig@sympatico.ca>.

293. Aug 08 #1: Logan Clendening was an early Sherlockian, friend of Vincent Starrett and Alexander Woollcott, and author of the amusing and often-reprinted pastiche "The Case of the Missing Patriarchs" (1934). He was an ardent Dickensian, and his A HANDBOOK TO PICKWICK PAPERS (1936), recently noted by Jon Lellenberg, is a delightful and well-written example of how much fun can be found in the pursuit of literature. His description of "Pickwick Papers" begins: "Humble and meek in its beginning, acclaimed by no reviews, it and its successors were soon rescued by the good taste of the man in the street, and they were read as no books have ever been read before or since. They were read so diligently, in fact, that the critics were somewhat alienated: for while they recognize that this is the ultimate function of a book, the extent to which Dickens is read has always struck the professional litterateur as slightly vulgar." As apt, surely, for the Sherlock Holmes stories as for "Pickwick Papers".
294. Dick Rutter has reported SHERLOCK HOLMES Y EL CASO DE LA JOYA AZUL, adapted for children by Rosa Moyat and with colorful illustrations by Roger Olmos, published this year by Lumen in Spanish and in Catalan (E13.95). There is no Spanish version of Amazon, but <www.fnac.es> is a good web-site, and you can see the cover in full color. Thanks to Antonio Iriarte for identifying the useful web-site.
295. "With help from Arthur Conan Doyle, the Doctor and his friends discover a plot to take over the world" is the blurb for Terrance Dicks' new "Doctor Who" novel REVENGE OF THE JUDOON (London: BBC Books, 2008; 112 pp., £1.99). John Baesch kindly forwarded a report from the Sunday Times (Mar. 16) "the Doctor originally fought to save Balmoral and Edward VII with the help of Winston Churchill. Unfortunately the television people liked

- the idea, and thought they might keep Winston in reserve for a future episode," so Dicks had to make do with a cameo from Arthur Conan Doyle instead.
296. Further to the report (Jul 08 #3) on two different Sherlock Holmes films, from Warner Bros. and from Columbia, work on the Warner Bros. film, originally scheduled for 2010, will start on Oct. 6. As for the second film, to star Sacha Baron Cohen and Will Ferrell, Warner Bros. director Guy Ritchie said that "they don't even have a script yet." And there's more: in an interview in the Montreal Gazette (Aug. 6), Downey said that his mind's a total blank when it comes to figuring out how to portray Holmes. "I'm like: 'Okay they're going to pay me to do this movie and I don't have a f---ing idea in my head.'" He's also having trouble with his English accent. "I go: 'Wait! maybe it should be more like this.' Then: 'No! You don't want to do that!' Damn it! I hope I figure this out before we start shooting. Now, I'm in fear and anxiety."
297. THE FATE OF FENELLA appeared in The Gentlewoman beginning with the Christmas number in 1891, and it was an early round-robin novel by 24 well-known British authors, including Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker; the new edition (Kansas City: Valancourt Books, 2008; 268 pp., $17.95) has a long introduction by Andrew Maunder, who sets the novel in context, describes its reception by the critics, and explains who the authors were (they may have been well known at the time, but most of them aren't now).
298. Aug 08 #2: Joseph Green and Peter Ridgway Watt's ALAS, POOR SHERLOCK: THE IMPERFECTIONS OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST DETECTIVE (TO SAY NOTHING OF HIS MEDICAL FRIEND) (Beckenham: Chancery House, 2007; 370 pp., £16.95) draws upon earlier scholarship for a discussion of the many contradictions, inconsistencies, and errors that are to be found in the Canon; they rely in great part on annotations by William S. Baring-Gould and Leslie S. Klinger, and the relatively brief treatment of the later stories seems to have been the result of Klinger's "reference library" not having been completed when their book went to press.
299. Andrew Lycett spoke about his biography of Conan Doyle at the Toronto Public Library on Oct. 25, 2007, and you can listen to his 79-minute lecture (with introductions by Peggy Perdue and Doug Wrigglesworth) at the web-site of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection www.acdcollection.org [click on "Links"].
300. Alfred Weiner wants to sell his collection of Sherlockian books, magazines, and recordings, and is asking $695.00 plus shipping; you can request a catalog of his material: 4105 Marietta Drive, Vestal, NY 13850 (607-722-6251) <almar@stny.rr.com>.
301. John Baesch has provided news of Queen Victoria's bloomers at auction this month in England. Her modest cotton drawers with a 50-inch waist and monogrammed with a tiny VR, sold for £4,500 to a "lady of Leisure" from Canada. A royal chemise with a 66-inch bust sold for £3,800 and the Queen's nightdress, measuring 50 inches from shoulder to hem, sold for £5,200. Her Majesty's unmentionables were kept by one of her ladies-in-waiting, and were sent to auction by a family from Lincolnshire. Another set of her bloomers was on display at Sherlock's Baker Street Pub in Houston in 1982, and may still be there.
302. Joseph H. Gillies ("The Aluminium Crutch") died on Aug. 4. He was an executive with the Philco-Ford Corp., and a long-time member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches; he received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1962.
303. More news (well, gossip) about the Warner Bros. film that will star Robert Downey Jr. as Holmes: the web-site <www.showbizspy.com> reported on Aug. 8 that "British hardman Jason Statham is hoping to land the role of Dr. Watson" in the film," and that Ritchie is reportedly planning to cast his wife Madonna to play an unfortunate victim of a serial killer being pursued by Holmes. Other reports have Mark Strong cast to play the villain, and Liverpool being scouted for locations. And you can see a faked photograph of Robert "Iron Man" Downey Jr. in Sherlockian costume by searching for "sherlock" at <www.network.nationalpost.com/np/blogs>.
304. There's also gossip about the Columbia film starring Sacha Baron Cohen and Will Ferrell: screenwriter Etan Cohen told MTV that "what's been exciting is to do a giant comedy but at the same time try to be true to the mechanics of a Sherlock Holmes story like using the Victorian forensics that Conan Doyle used." Cohen added that he has "books about Victorian forensics, all the stories, and dictionaries for Victorian slang," and that "it looks like I'm writing a bad senior thesis on Holmes."

305. Aug 08 #3: "Art in the Blood: Sherlock Holmes and the Arts" is the theme for this year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" (sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies) at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 8; the festivities will begin with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00 am, and end at 1:00 pm. There's no charge, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
306. Terence Rigby died on Aug. 10. He had a long career on stage, screen, and television; he played Dr. Watson in Tom Baker's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1982), and Inspector Layton in Ian Richardson's "The Sign of Four" (1983). The British Library has an interesting interview with Rigby at its web-site <www.bl.uk/projects/theatrearchive/rigby.html>.
307. And the British Library's Theatre Archive Project is well worth exploring: it also has interviews with Edward Hardwicke and Ian Richardson, and a useful search engine for finding others.
308. <www.cbc.ca/wordsatlarge/blog/2008/08/the\_game\_is\_afoot\_experts\_on\_s.html> is the URL for interesting Canadian audio from the CBC: a 15-minute interview with Thelma Beam, Mark Hacksley, and Wilfrid de Freitas (1987), and a 23-minute interview with Peggy Perdue, Charles Prepolec, and Peter Calamai (2006). Thanks to Ken Lanza for this discovery.
309. Mark Terry (at Facsimile Dust Jackets, 1568 48th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94122 <www.facsimiledustjackets.com> offers reproductions of dust jackets for collectors who lack authentic dust jackets; the company has some 4,000 jackets in its archive (which he plans to expand), and each jacket has the printed statement "Facsimile Dust Jackets L.L.C." on the front or back flap ($22.00 each). The facsimiles are excellently produced in full color, and of course there are Sherlockian and Doylean jackets in the archive. Andy Moursund offers the same images as posters ($25.00 each); there's a "poster" link at the web-site, or you can contact Andy directly at 11303 Soward Court, Kensington, MD 20895 (301-922-8081) <andym108@yahoo.com>.
310. LADYBUG GIRL is an imaginative book for young readers, written by Jacky Davis and illustrated by David Soman (New York: Dial/Penguin, 2008; $16.99), with Lulu (aka Ladybug Girl) in Sherlockian costume on the rear endpapers.
311. Peter L. Stern is offering an interesting set of the "Crowborough Edition" of Conan Doyle's works (published in 1930 in 24 volumes, with his signature in the first volume); the set has the dust jackets and is in the original shipping crate, lacking the lid but with the contemporary shipping labels. $20,000; 15 Court Square, Boston, MA 01208 (617-542-2376) <psbook@aol.com>.
312. Eldridge Plays and Musicals has a web-site at <www.histage.com> where they offer three plays of interest to Sherlockians: Billy St. John's "Fantastical Friends" has a scene from "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes", Robert Mattson's "The Four Biggest Guys in Rock and Other Comedies" includes his short play "The Retirement Holmes", and Mattson's "The Man Who Thought He Was Sherlock Holmes" is a comedy featuring a man who is so psychiatrically challenged that he thinks he's Sherlock Holmes and his psychiatrist is Dr. Watson. You can download PDF previews at their web-site, and their postal address is Box 14367, Tallahassee, FL 32317.

313. Aug 08 #4: Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE THREE POISONED PAWNS (Breese Books, 2008; 204 pp., $18.95), with three pastiches: "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of Hamlet" (Emanuel E. Garcia), "Sherlock Holmes and the Belgravian Letter" (Roger Jaynes), and "Sherlock Holmes and the Highcliffe Invitation" (Eddie Maguire). Available ($18.95 plus shipping) from Classic Specialties (Box 1958, Cincinnati, OH 45219) and at their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.com/aug08\_special.htm>.
314. Will Thomas' THE BLACK HAND (New York: Touchstone/Simon & Schuster, 2008; 289 pp., $14.00) is the fifth in his Victorian mystery series featuring Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") and his assistant Thomas Llewelyn. It's an excellent continuation of the series, with Barker and Llewelyn involved in a battle between the Camorra and the Mafia, and as always there's excellent late-Victorian atmosphere.
315. OSCAR WILDE AND A GAME CALLED MURDER, by Gyles Brandreth (New York: Touchstone/Simon & Schuster, 2008; 402 pp., $24.00 cloth, $14.00 paper) is the American edition of his OSCAR WILDE AND THE RING OF DEATH (May 08 #5); it features Oscar Wilde as the detective, assisted by Robert Sherard (as his Watson), and by his friend Arthur Conan Doyle; the mystery's ingenious and the story well told, with excellent period flavor.
316. The New York City Collectible Paperback & Pulp Fiction Expo will be held on Oct. 19 at the Holiday Inn on 57th Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, Gary Lovisi reports; the guests will include Marvin Kaye, Ron Goulart, and Peter Straub. More information is available from Gary (call 718-646-6126 after 5:00 pm).
317. Jon Lellenberg reports that the new British trade paperback of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (from HarperPerennial, £12.99) contains a few minor corrections, including typos. The American trade paperback is due from Penguin Books in September.
318. Gary E. Combs Autographs (3 Sheridan Square #7-H, New York, NY 10014 (212-242-7209) <www.combsautographs.com> recently offered (for $1,500) an interesting letter from Conan Doyle: Jane Dewey Rinear, who had met Conan Doyle at a seance, wrote to him in 1927 on the stationery of the Associated True Story Clubs of America asking him to tell their 10 million readers a few of his ideas on what constitutes a charming woman. His response, written at the top of her letter (as often was the case in his later years), was: "I find all that I could imagine in my own wife. She is on the one hand practical and capable in the affairs of every day life. On the other hand she has always preserved that touch of romance which gives a glamour to existence. When a woman is good & kind right through she gets a hold of a man which is permanent and which his reason as well as his emotions endorses."
319. Irene's Cabinet is an annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (46 pp.) offers Andrew Solberg's account of his first meeting with Sherlock Holmes, John Sherwood's "Jack the Ripper: A Sherlockian Approach", and the winning essay in the society's annual contest for seventh-graders in Howard County, Md. $15.00 postpaid Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886); copies of annuals from 2003 through 2007 also are available (same price).
320. Aug 08 #5: Larry Townsend died on July 29. Townsend was active in the gay and leather communities for decades, and (writing as J. Watson) was the author of THE SEXUAL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1971); it was hardcore homosexual pornography, far more shocking in 1971 than it was when it was reprinted in 1993 (and still not for the easily shocked or annoyed).
321. Clive Francis' play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (starring Peter Egan as Holmes and Philip Franks as Watson) will be performed at the Theatre Royal in Bath on Oct. 13-18, on its way to the West End in London. The box office address is Sawclose, Bath BA1 1ET, England <www.theatreroyal.org.uk>.
322. Anyone who has seen Robert Sabuda's books knows how wonderful they are, and if you have never seen one you should visit a bookstore and look at one (or more). He creates incredible pop-up books, and his ENCYCLOPEDIA MYTHOLOGICA: FAIRIES AND MAGICAL CREATURES, designed with co-author Matthew Reinhart (Cambridge: Candlewick, 2008; $27.99) includes the Cottingley Fairies (but without any mention of Conan Doyle). Go to www.candlewick.com and click on [advance search] and search for Sabuda as author to see photographs of inside spreads from his books (and there's video for many of his books).
323. You can go to <www.tripadvisor.com/PressCenter-i200-c1-Press-Releases.html> to read a press release from the TripAdvisor Media Network that rates the "Top 10 Literary Destinations" (according to its editors): London, Stratford-upon-Avon, Edinburgh, Dublin, New York, Concord, Paris, San Francisco, Rome, and St. Petersburg. Sherlock Holmes is cited for both London and Edinburgh.
324. An auction forecast: a first book edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET will be at auction at Christie's in London in November, estimated at £5,000-8,000. It isn't described at their web-site yet.
325. David Ian Davies offers an imaginative new Sherlock Holmes pen based on a design by Tom Richmond, available for $12.95 (plus shipping) from One Voice Recordings, 1685 Halpert Street, Encino, CA 91436 (818-501-8145); you can see the pen at his web-site at <www.onevoicerecordings.com>.
326. David Palmer's "Spirit of Place" is a hand-crafted stained-glass portrait of Arthur Conan Doyle, with appropriate Portsmouth landmarks in the background, and it's now on display at the Cochrane Gallery in London through Nov. 28; the exhibition moves to the Stained Glass Museum at Ely Cathedral in January. You can see the portrait in full color at the society's website at <www.bsmgp.org.uk/Events/40cm2\_exhibition\_panels\_and\_prices.htm>, and it's for sale for £975; if you're interested, Palmer's e-mail address is <davidpalmeruk@comcast.net>.
327. A bibliographic query: Dell published two comic books under the title "New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" in 1961 and 1962, and they were reprinted by Eternity Comics/Malibu Graphics as "Sherlock Holmes Casebook" in 1989, all without credits for stories or artwork. But the listings in "The Universal Sherlock Holmes" credit Edith Meiser for the stories and Frank Giacoia for the artwork. If anyone has any evidence identifying the author and artist, please let me know (the artwork looks like Giacoia's, but I don't know of an actual credit for him); the writer seems to have been Paul S. Newman.

328. Aug 08 #6: Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be produced by the Peninsula Players at the Theatre in a Garden in Fish Creek, Wis., Sept. 3 through Oct. 19, 2008 (W-4351 Peninsula Players Road, Fish Creek, WI 54212) (920-868-3287) <www.peninsulaplayers.com>. And the Abbeville Opera House in Abbeville, S.C., on Mar. 13-21, 2009; Box 247, Abbeville, SC 29620 <www.theabbevilleoperahouse.com>.
329. John Ruyle ("Baron Dowson") died on Aug. 15. John was an imaginative and prolific printer whose Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian work included books, bookmarks, programs, souvenirs, and letterheads. He invented Turlock Loams (who appeared in a long series of parodies), composed limericks and other poetry, and presided over the Pequod Press (which was only one of the many intriguing names he devised from which to publish his work). John received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1983.
330. Doug Elliott notes that RATTUS HOLMES IN THE CASE OF THE SPOILSPORTS also features Felis Watson in "a tale of sport and athletes who cheat by taking banned drugs." The story is a comic strip published in English, Spanish, and French by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) at <unesdoc.unesco.org/images/0016/001618/161868E.pdf>. The illustration (below) also shows the evil coach Moriarty, and the comic strip was published just in time to tie in with the Olympics in Beijing.

331. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Nov. 2008) has Len Moffatt's poem "What a Friend We Have in Sherlock (A Hymn to Holmes)"; his "The Raving: A Poe-etic Version of the Baskerville Legend" was published in the Feb. 1998 issue of EQMM. Len and his wife June co-chaired Bouchercon in Culver City in 1976, in Los Angeles in 1972, and in Pasadena in 1991; they were the fan guests of honor in 1985, and received the lifetime achievement award in 1999.
332. Sep 08 #1: "Do the Strand" (Roxy Music): The Sherlock Holmes Archetype and Its Influence is the title of the Sherlockian panel at Bouchercon on Oct. 11 at 8:30 am, with Sophie Hannah (moderator), Peter E. Blau, Steve Hecox, Laurie R. King, and Hank Phillippi Ryan; there's more information about Bouchercon at <www.charmedtodeath.com>. And in case you're wondering who Roxy Music is (I sure didn't know), they're an English art rock group that was founded in 1971, and one of their songs is "Do the Strand" (according to the lyrics, available on the Internet, the strand is a dance rather than an avenue or a magazine).
333. I asked about the comic books "New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" published by Dell in 1961 and 1962 (Aug 08 #5). I recently learned that the stories were written by Paul S. Newman, and they weren't his only Sherlockian work. His widow Carol Newman has reported that in 1954 he wrote the proposal that sold the "Sherlock Holmes" comic strip, which was to be illustrated by Don Komisarow and Lou Fine, to the N.Y. Herald Tribune syndicate; the syndicate took 50% of the proceeds, and Adrian Conan Doyle demanded half of the other 50%, the team bowed out and the syndicate brought in Edith Meiser and Frank Giacoia. Newman then wrote the stories for the Dell's comic books, and in 1962 Henry Lester, representing the Conan Doyle estate, optioned a Sherlock Holmes screen treatment from Newman. And according to the GUINNESS BOOK OF WORLD RECORDS (1998), Newman was the most prolific comic-book writer, with more than 4,000 published stories for 360 different comic-book titles.
334. The new book WHO THE HELL IS PANSY O'HARA? has one of the most imaginative titles that I've seen recently. Jenny Bond and Chris Sheedy explore "the fascinating stories behind 50 of the world's best-loved books" (New York: Penguin Books, 2008; 318 pp., $13.00), and the best-loved books include (of course) THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. Pansy O'Hara, in case you haven't figured it out, is the heroine of a book written by Peggy Walsh, who wrote as Margaret Mitchell and changed the name of her heroine to Scarlet.
335. BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON, by Brian W. Pugh and Paul R. Spiring (London: MX Publishing, 2008; 234 pp., £18.99/$28.95 cloth or £12.99/$19.95 paper), is subtitled "A Footnote to The Hound of the Baskervilles", but it's far more than a footnote: the authors offer detailed documentation of the life and career of Fletcher Robinson (who did much more than provide assistance to Conan Doyle with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES), and a final chapter discussing the controversy over that assistance, plus a detailed bibliography of Fletcher Robinson's writings.
336. Plan ahead: the L.A. Theatre Works will perform "The Lost World" on May 13-17, 2009, at the Skirball Cultural Center in Los Angeles, and later broadcast a recording of the show on their weekly series "The Play's the Thing" on KPCC-FM. This is the adaptation by John de Lancie and Nat Segaloff that was issued on an "Alien Voices" audiocassette and starred with Armin Shimerman as Challenger and Dwight Schultz as Malone (Nov 97 #6); the performance was videotaped and later broadcast by the Sci-Fi channel (Jul 98 #6). Visit <www.latw.org> and <www.scpr.org/programs/latw> for more information about the production company and the radio series. And thanks to Ken Lanza for spotting the announcement.

337. Sep 08 #2: Reported: Mary Ann Gillies' THE PROFESSIONAL LITERARY AGENT IN BRITAIN, 1880-1920 (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2007; 304 pp., $65.00); there's considerable attention paid to A. P. Watt, who is generally acknowledged as having been the world's first professional literary agent, and who had Conan Doyle as a client for many years. Also: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MONTANA CHRONICLES, by John S. Fitzpatrick (Atlanta: Riverbend Publishing, 2008; 239 pp., $12.95); Holmes solves four mysteries in Montana in the late 1880s.
338. You probably won't read movie gossip in every issue, but: the [London] Sun reported on Sept. 1 that Russell Crowe had been cast as Watson in the new film that will star Robert Downey Jr. as Holmes; the article (with a doctored photograph of Crowe "as he might look in Baker Street") may still be seen at <www.thesun.co.uk/sol/homepage/showbiz/bizarre/article1630338.ece>. And the Guardian reported (Sept. 2) that director Guy Ritchie told reporters that "I don't have a Watson. Somebody just told me that I have Russell Crowe lined up but that's news to me."
339. The latest catalog from Video Collectables offers a Sherlock Holmes Clock made of Botticino marble with an illustration by Sidney Paget, similar to the sets of coasters available earlier (Nov 06 #6 and May 07 #3), for $49.98. Box 385, Lewiston, NY 14095 (800-268-3891) <www.collectables.com>.
340. "The Lost Special" (1932) was a 12-episode Universal Pictures serial based on Conan Doyle's story (considered by many to be Apocryphal), up-dated and set in the American west, and it's now available (I believe for the first time) on a single DVD (212 minutes) for $10.00 (postpaid to U.S. addresses) from Dale Knott (Serials & Such, 7159 Hope Hill Road, Brooksville, FL 34601) <www.serialsandsuch.com>. Prints of the serial were screened in the past by Chris Steinbrunner and others, and although the quality of the DVD is only fair, it is great fun to see what they've done with (and to) the story.
341. Kevin Parker reports that the full-cast audio drama DOCTOR WHO: ASSASSIN IN THE LIMELIGHT (written by Robert Ross) has Arthur Conan Doyle in Washington in 1865 [yes, that's 1865]; available on two CDs ($25.82) or as a download ($12.95) from Big Finish (PO Box 3787, Maidenhead, Berks. SL6 3TF, England) <www.bigfinish.com>.
342. Things change rapidly on the Internet: Musgraves Matters, published by Rafe McGregor for The Musgraves (Sep 07 #1) morphed into Cobwebby Bottles, and that's been succeeded by his blog, which has frequent Sherlockian content, at <www.rafemcgregor.blogspot.com>.
343. There's more about "The Lost Special": a 30-minute dramatization, with Orson Welles in the leading role, was broadcast in the "Suspense" radio series on WABC (New York) on Sept. 30, 1943; it also aired on the Armed Forces Radio Service, and an AFRS transcription disk survived and is now available on the Internet at <randsesoterictr.podbean.com/category/suspense> (scroll down to the entry for May 3, 2008).

344. Sep 08 #3: The 'A Study in Scarlet Expedition' to Salt Lake City over the Labor Day weekend was great fun, and due attention was paid to Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; participants received A TANGLED SKEIN: A COMPANION VOLUME TO THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS' EXPEDITION TO THE COUNTRY OF THE SAINTS (edited by Leslie S. Klinger, with copies of the papers that were presented during the weekend). A few copies of the 159-page book are still available for $21.95 plus shipping ($3.00 to the U.S.), and the expedition's colorful lapel pin also is available for $10.00 postpaid; checks payable to Michael W. Homer can be sent to Mike at Suitter Axland, 8 East Broadway #200, Salt Lake City, UT 84111 <mhomer@sautah.com>.
345. Les Klinger reports that there's plenty of Sherlockian content in his THE NEW ANNOTATED DRACULA (New York: W. W. Norton, 2008; 672 pp., $39.95); the official publication date is Oct. 13, but the book likely will be available earlier than that. Les explains that he mentions "The Sussex Vampire" in the introduction, and discusses the intersection of Holmes and Dracula in an essay on "Dracula after Stoker", and introduces the Sherlockian "game" to the world of Dracula (Stoker said in one of his introductions that the whole thing is true, and Les follows that path).
346. Further to the item on the Baskerville cutlery at auction at Bigwood Auctioneers on June 27, Martin Heath has reported that the cutlery went unsold when bidding failed to meet the reserve (£4,000), adding that "perhaps it may carry a curse!" Bigwood's press release, with photographs, can still be seen at <www.bigwood.co.uk/Default.aspx?id=447247>.

347. The Exeter Diocese Consistory Court has dismissed the application by Roger Garrick-Steele to exhume Bertram Fletcher Robinson's body, according to an article in the Mid-Devon Advertiser (Aug. 29). Garrick-Steele has for many years accused Conan Doyle of murdering Fletcher Robinson, and filed the application two years ago (Sep 06 #1). Sir Andrew McFarlane, the chancellor of the court, said that Garrick-Steele's theory implicated not only Conan Doyle but also Fletcher Robinson's wife, her brother, the doctor who signed the death certificate, the undertakers, and the rector of Ipplepen, and Sir Andrew said that Garrick Steele's allegations are "empty and self-serving," and that "on the basis of the material that he has placed before this court he appears to be a totally unreliable historian."
348. "Holmes Again" is the title of a non-credit course being taught at Indiana State University in Terre Haute this fall, with lectures on five Monday evenings from Oct. 20 to Nov. 17. Judith Francis reports that she will use films and radio shows and television programs, with discussion of different actors' interpretations, and the class will read A STUDY IN SCARLET and one short story. She has offered the course before, and says that it attracts variety of adults "including nuns from St. Mary of the Woods College and a gentleman who likes to arrive for the last class wearing a deerstalker."
349. Ed Hoch was a prolific short-story author, with a dozen excellent Sherlockian pastiches published in magazines and anthologies beginning in 1973, and they've now been collected in THE SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES OF EDWARD D. HOCH (Brooklyn: Gryphon Books, 2008; 171 pp., $20.00), with an introduction that Ed wrote last year, and an appreciation by Gary Lovisi. Gryphon's address is Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228 <www.gryphonbooks.com>.

350. Sep 08 #4: Jennet Conant's THE IRREGULARS: ROALD DAHL AND THE BRITISH SPY RING IN WAR-TIME WASHINGTON (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2008; 391 pp., $27.95) has been widely reviewed, and some of the reviews report that Dahl and other members of the British Security Coordination (BSC) were known as the Baker Street Irregulars. Jon Lellenberg has pointed out that it was the Special Operations Executive (SOE) that were known by that nickname, because their original offices in 1940 were in Baker Street.
351. Don Izban has announced plans for his birthday party for Sherlock Holmes, whose birthday, Don insists, was on Oct. 10. But the party will be held on Oct. 18, at the Ridgemoor Country Club in Chicago, with dinner, entertainment, and prizes, and on Oct. 19 Don's famous tour of Graceland Cemetery, followed by breakfast at legendary Jack's Restaurant. More information is available from Donald B. Izban (1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068).
352. Aziz Bin Adam has reported two translations of Sherlock Holmes stories into Bahasa Melayu (Indonesian): SHERLOCK HOLMES: PERUNDING DETEKTIF PERTAMA DUNIA and SHERLOCK HOLMES 2: DETEKTIF YANG PENUH KEJUTAN. You can view them at <pts.com.my/index.php/buku/2047> and <pts.com.my/index.php/buku/2178>, and order the second one at <www.mph.com.my>.
353. Joe Coppola has found an interesting resource for images: the N.Y. Public Library's Digital Gallery at <digitalgallery.nypl.org>. Search for [conan doyle] and [sherlock holmes]; you'll find prints from four scenes from "A Squeedunk Sherlock Holmes" (1909), a short film made by the Edison Manufacturing Co. (and except for the title, non-Sherlockian). As well as lots of other images.
354. I've reported on Logan Clendening's A HANDBOOK TO PICKWICK PAPERS (Aug 08 #1), and I also recommend SKYE HIGH: THE RECORD OF A TOUR THROUGH SCOTLAND IN THE WAKE OF SAMUEL JOHNSON AND JAMES BOSWELL (1938); it's Sherlockian in a minor way, with a short chapter on "Sherlock Holmes" and a few other references to Conan Doyle, and it's well written and of great interest to anyone who enjoys Johnson and Boswell, and a vicarious tour with two excellent writers.
355. <www.estudioenesarlata.com> is the URL for a mystery-specialist bookstore in Madrid. It has a Sherlockian section, and the owner, Juan Salvador, has a blog (the Spanish word for "blog" is "blog") with a truly amusing "Alice in Wonderland" illustration.
356. WILDE ABOUT HOLMES, by Milo Yebesiyevich (New York: Comic Masque, 2008; 363 pp., $19.95), is a pastiche that brings Sherlock Holmes and Oscar Wilde and Lillie Langtry to New York in 1884 and involves them in Grover Cleveland's campaign for the presidency; there's a lot of dialogue lifted from the Canon, and from Wilde and Wittgenstein (carefully footnoted), and situations also recycled from the Canon.
357. The Knothole is the occasional newsletter from The Christopher Morley Knothole Association, and the July issue has pictures of the cabin where Morley did so much of his writing on Long Island (there's now also a Gissing Commemorative Dog Run); members of the Association pay $20.00 a year (checks to the CMKA, c/o The Bryant Library, Paper Mill Road, Roslyn, NY 11576).
358. Sep 08 #5: John Entwistle, best known as the bass guitarist for The Who. also was an artist whose work has been collected and released in limited-edition reproductions. Four of his sketches of a character he called "Cosmic Sherlock Holmes" will be sold by the Heritage Auction Galleries on Oct. 5, and you can see the artwork at their web-site <www.ha.com> (search for lot #50075); the opening bid is $600.
359. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com>, with news of their Sherlockian calendar for 2009, reminiscences of the S'ian conference held in Bennington in 1994, and offers of new S'ian prints, as well as books and other material.
360. Many Doyleans (and Sherlockians) enjoy a good ghost story, and M. R. James wrote some fine ones; Robert Lloyd Parry will perform "Oh Whistle, and I'll Come to You, My Lad" and "The Ash Tree" at the 76th Street Theater Lab, 236 West 78th Street, in New York from Oct. 22 to Nov. 8 (212-362-0329). He'll also be performing in Portland, Maine, and Washington, D.C.; details at his web-site <www.nunkie.co.uk>.
361. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has published two new books: HOLMES & WATSON COUNTRY: TRAVELS IN SEARCH OF SOLUTIONS, by Bernard Davies, is a two-volume collection of his scholarship and research (£50.00 for the special edition and £30.00 for the regular edition); and HOLMES AND WATSON: A NEW CHRONOLOGY OF THEIR ADVENTURES, by Vincent Delay (chairman of the Societe d'etudes holmesiennes de la Suisse romande), is a revised translation (from the French) of his dating of all the recorded and unrecorded adventures (£10.00); shipping is extra, and costs vary; information is available from Judi Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England) and at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> (click on features). Her e-mail address is <shsl221b@aol.com>.
362. Laurie R. King has been posting to her blog about this and that, and occasionally about the next Mary Russell mystery, THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, which (in August) had reached the rewrite stage. Her blog, and much else, will be found at her web-site <www.laurierking.com>.
363. There are more Sherlockian and Doylean web-sites than one can visit in anything less than unlimited time, but you might want to take a look at Marsha Perry's "The Chronicles of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" at <www.siracd.com>; the web-site offers some amusing games, and a way to create and send your own Sherlockian greeting cards.
364. Andrew Clark has reported that he was passing through the Marylebone underground station this month and heard an announcement over the public address system: "Inspector Lestrade to the office, please." And he wondered for a moment whether this was a code phrase intended to alert railway staff to an emergency (hospitals sometimes use such phrases: "paging Dr. Firestone to three west" can mean "there's a fire in the west wing of the third floor"). Andrew also reports that the underground is considering replacing the faded Sherlockian tile murals that decorate the platforms and concourses at the Baker Street station (and he hopes they will continue the S'ian theme), and that the refurbishment of the former Abbey National building on the site of 221B Baker Street is nearing completion.

365. Sep 08 #6: Craig Bowlsby's two-act play "The Hound of London" (first performed in Canada in 1987) was produced for Canadian television and broadcast in 1993, with Patrick Macnee as Holmes and John Scott-Paget as Watson. It was available some years ago on VHS, and you can now buy a DVD ($15.00 plus shipping) at <stores.ebay.com/appledonmanor> or from Cathy A. Connor (171-A Rink Street #222, Peterborough, ON K9J 2K6, Canada). If ordering by mail, shipping is $5.00 to the U.S., $4.00 to Canada, and $7.00 elsewhere, and you can pay by personal check.
366. Further to the report (Jun 08 #3) on the recent postage stamps honoring Charles and Ray Eames, Dr. William R. Hanson has designed a cachet for a first day cover that honors the N.Y. World's Fair IBM Pavilion and its Sherlockian puppet show. The cost of the cover (with one of the stamps) is $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($11.00 elsewhere); his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801, and he asks that you pay with currency or U.S. postal money orders.
367. A bit more about Guy Ritchie's new "Sherlock Holmes" film: he was interviewed by the Associated Press in Toronto (Sept. 5) and said: "One of the schools I went to was a boarding school. If we shut up, behaved ourselves at night, they used to play us a Sherlock Holmes story through the speakers. They used to pipe them down to us. I suppose I've had an affection for Sherlock Holmes even since then." And Variety reported (Sept. 18) that Jude Law is "in talks" for the role of Dr. Watson, to star with Robert Downey Jr. as Sherlock Holmes. According to the Hollywood Reporter (Sept. 25), Rachel McAdams has been cast as Irene Adler (Sienna Miller, previously rumored as Irene Adler, dropped out of the project, it seems, because she didn't want to work with her former fiance Jude Law). And the villain, played by Mark Strong, is named Blackwood.
368. You can go to <hcl.harvard.edu/libraries/houghton/doyle\_symposium.html> for an update on "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Sesquicentennial Assessment" (the symposium that will be held at Harvard's Houghton Library on May 7-9, 2009. Details on registration will be available later this year.
369. "Christopher Morley was an actor and female impersonator who specialized in cross-dressing roles," according to the Internet Movie Data Base. And no, that's not the founder of The Baker Street Irregulars; the actor flourished in the 1970s and 1980s, and his character on "General Hospital" was "possibly the influence for Larry Gelbart's screenplay for 'Tootsie'." You can read more about this at <www.imdb.com/name/nm0606869/bio>. Credit Ann Marlowe for this discovery.
370. Clive Francis' play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (starring Peter Egan as Holmes and Philip Franks as Watson) will be touring in England, opening at the Theatre Royal in Plymouth on Oct. 7 and closing at the Royal & Derngate Theatre in Northampton on Nov. 8. More information on the tour is available at <www.baskervillehound.co.uk>.

371. Sep 08 #7: Plan ahead: The Baker Street Breakfast Club has announced their second conference at Bennington College in Vermont, on June 24-27, 2010; if you would like to be on the mailing list for "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds", you can contact Sally Sugarman (Box 407, Shaftsbury, VT 05262) <sugarman@bennington.edu>. Their first conference, held 15 years ago (Jul 94 #1) was well-attended (with more than 100 people on hand) and offered an excellent program.
372. SHERLOCK HOLMES WAS WRONG: REOPENING THE CASE OF THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, by Pierre Bayard (New York: Bloomsbury USA, 2008; 193 pp., $20.00), is the English translation of his L'AFFAIRE DU CHIEN DES BASKERVILLE (Feb 08 #3). He is a psychoanalyst and a professor of French literature, and he believes that "the world that the literary text produces is an incomplete world." Taking that approach to the Canon, Bayard explains that Sherlock Holmes got it wrong: Sir Charles Baskerville wasn't killed by Jack Stapleton with the help of a gigantic hound. And he identifies a different murder victim in the story, and a different murderer, and does it with style and scholarship.
373. Yet another production of Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure": at the Indiana Repertory Theatre in Indianapolis through Oct. 10. The theater is at 140 West Washington Street, Indianapolis, IN 46204 (317-635-5277) <www.irtlive.com>.
374. A new catalog from the BBC America Shop offers discounts on BASIL RATHBONE IN THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION (all 14 films, plus special features, on 5 DVDs), now $110.98; JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ULTIMATE COLLECTION (all 41 episodes, plus special features, on 12 DVDs), now $195.95; THE COMPLETE CONAN DOYLE SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION (all 60 stories, with Clive Merrison and Michael Williams, on 64 CDs, now $169.98); and THE EDWARDIANS (8 episodes, one with Nigel Davenport as Conan Doyle, on 4l DVDs), now $42.98.
375. Georgiana Cavendish, 5th Duchess of Devonshire, gave her name to the style of hat worn by Mary Sutherland (in "A Case of Identity"), and her portrait by Gainsborough was stolen by Adam Worth (who was described as the Napoleon of crime long before that title was given to the evil Prof. Moriarty). And Keira Knightly plays the title role in the film "The Duchess", which opened in the U.K. on Sept. 5 and in the U.S. on Sept. 19; Ralph Fiennes plays the Duke of Devonshire.
376. Carl Heifetz has noted an amusing (and Sherlockian) "MacNelly's Shoe" comic strip in the St. Petersburg Times (Sept. 21); Jeff MacNelly died in 2000, and the strip is being continued by Chris Cassatt and Gary Brookins. You can see the strip at <macnelly.com/archives.php>.
377. When in England: if you've enjoyed Conan Doyle's THE WHITE COMPANY and SIR NIGEL, you're in good company (Charles Addams, Barbara Tuchman, President Eisenhower, P. G. Wodehouse, George Macdonald Fraser, Nicholas Meyer, and John Ford, among others). And you can visit Sir Nigel Loring's tomb, which is in All Saints Parish Church, Chalgrave, Dunstable, Bedfordshire. It was consecrated in 1220, and it's included in Simon Jenkins' ENGLAND'S THOUSAND BEST CHURCHES. The church's web-site is at <www.allsaintschalgrave.co.uk>.
378. Sep 08 #8: Freddy the Pig continues to delight his many fans, most recently in THE WIT & WISDOM OF FREDDY AND HIS FRIENDS, by Walter R. Brooks, with illustrations by Kurt Wiese and a warm introduction by Michael Cart (Woodstock: Overlook Press, 2000; 251 pp., $23.95). The book's a compilation, and some of the illustration are Sherlockian, and it's now available at a discount: $11.00 postpaid from Kevin W. Parker (3 Ridge Road #E, Greenbelt, MD 20770). The Friends of Freddy have a web-site (of course), at <www.freddythepig.org>.
379. Spotted by Ev Herzog: A FIELD GUIDE TO MONSTERS, by Dave Elliott (Irvington: Hylas, 2004; 191 pp., $19.95), has an introduction by Abraham Van Helsing and an entry for the Hound of the Baskervilles; now on discount tables at $4.99.
380. One hears of Sherlock everywhere. Luke Harding, the Guardian's correspondent in Moscow, interviewed Andrei Lugovoi earlier this year (May 21); Lugovoi is the man British prosecutors claim murdered the Russian dissident Alexander Litvinenko in London by poisoning his tea with radioactive polonium (the Russian government has refused to extradite Lugovoi for trial in Britain). "Surprisingly, given his status as a fugitive from British justice, Lugovoi turns out to be an Anglophile," Harding wrote. "He says that he still likes many things about Britain--whisky, football, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle--a copy of the complete Sherlock Holmes stories sits on a bookshelf. 'I've read all of Sherlock Holmes,' he says, adding that he is especially fond of Conan Doyle's dinosaur adventure novel, The Lost World." A tip of the deerstalker to Dough Elliott, who spotted the report.
381. Terri Haugen has reported that John Nassivera's play "The Penultimate Problem of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Bellingham Theatre Guild Playhouse from Jan. 30 through Feb. 15, 2009; 1600 H Street, Bellingham, WA 98225 (360-733-1811) <www.bellinghamtheatreguild.com>.
382. The Shanghai Daily reported (Sept. 15) that a Nanjing-based club is organizing the world's largest competition (2009 players) of the murder-mystery game "Police and Killer" and has applied to the Guinness World Records for recognition. There are four roles in the game: police, killer, civilian, and judge, determined by drawing lots, and players keep their identity secret, except for the judge. The game is "believed to have had its origins in Sir

- Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes" and to have been "introduced to the Chinese mainland in the late 1990s by overseas Chinese students who had been to Silicon Valley in the U.S."
383. Forecast: THE ADVENTURES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, by Russell Miller (London: Harvill Secker, 480 pp., £20.00, due in October); a new biography.
384. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN PORTRAITS AND POSES is the title of Bill Dorn's imaginative calendar for 2009, with time lines for the cases, notations of holidays, and Ian Malcolm Earlson's portraits of Conan Doyle and various Canonical characters. $13.95 postpaid from William S. Dorn (2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210); his web-site's at <www.thesherlockstore.com>.
385. Oct 08 #1: Bouchercon 39 in Baltimore was enjoyable, especially for the editors of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (Jon L. Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley); the book won an Anthony for best critical work, and Dan was on hand to accept the award, which made for a proverbial hat trick: the book also has won an Agatha from Malice Domestic and an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of American.
386. Bouchercon 40 will be held in Indianapolis on Oct. 15-18, 2009; Bouchercon 41 in San Francisco, Oct. 14-17, 2010 (Laurie R. King will be guest of honor); and Bouchercon 42 in St. Louis (Sept. 15-18). Bouchercon is the longestablished world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, named in honor of Anthony Boucher, and it's a grand opportunity to meets authors and fans. You can register now for "Elementary, My Dear Indy!"; their web-site is at <www.bouchercon2009.com>.
387. You can read more about Bouchercon in Baltimore in various blogs, including Laurie's, which you can find at <www.laurierking.com>. Laurie had quite a few fans sitting up front at her various panels, and I'm sure they will be posting to Yahoo groups such as Letters of Mary; you can sign up for that one at <www.groups.yahoo.com/group/Letters\_Of\_Mary>. And if you'd like to see nominees and winners of awards for books, films, and albums, there's the Award Annals web-site at <www.awardannals.com> that you can search by author or title to see who's won what over the years.
388. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times08-9.htm>, offering a report on this year's Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society gathering in Cincinnati (next year's event will be in St. Louis) and news of new items available: Tracy J. Revels' book SHERLOCK HOLMES: MOSTLY PARODIES; Donald Thomas' THE EXECUTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND OTHER TALES FEATURING THE WORLD'S GREATEST DETECTIVE; a CD reissue of Anthony Smith-Masters' FAVOURITE MUSIC OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sep 91 #6); and a CD of Eddie Maguire's pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH AT THE CRICKET (Aug 96 #4) read by Nicholas Utechin.
389. "Truth, betrayal, and passion collide as the world's most famous detective and his beloved Watson investigate a prank turned deadly." That's in C. P. Stancich's new play ("Sherlock Holmes and the Doom of Devilsmoor") that was presented this month by the Theater Company of Lafayette; the play will run through Nov. 8 at the Mary Miller Theater (300 East Simpson Street, Lafayette, CO 80026 (720-209-2154) <www.tclstage.org>.
390. Chris Roden reports the British Library will soon issue two three-CD sets in their "Spoken Word" series, one being "British Writers", which will include the recording made by Conan Doyle in 1930, as well as recordings by P. G. Wodehouse, Virginia Woolf, Ian Fleming, Rudyard Kipling, and Harold Pinter; each set will cost £19.95. "British Writers" is not yet listed at the British Library's web-site <www.bl.uk/shop>, but it can be pre-ordered (at a discount) at <whsmith.co.uk> at. The Conan Doyle recording was included in a set issued by the British Library in 2003; Chris reports that the earlier set was withdrawn because of copyright issues.

391. Oct 08 #2: It has been a bit more than 30 years since the first two books in John Gardner's "Moriarty" series were first published, and many readers may not remember just how good a writer he was. MORIARTY (Orlando: Harcourt, 2008; 300 pp., $24.00) is a fine reminder: Moriarty is as evil and intelligent as ever, and the story is well told. There's also a British edition (London: Quercus, 2008; 320 pp., £14.99). Gardner, who was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (with the Investiture "Moriarty"), died last year (Aug 07 #1), but fortunately was able to complete the trilogy before his death; he has written about his life and career, and about Moriarty, and his many other books, at his web-site <www.john-gardner.com>, and new readers will want to pursue THE RETURN OF MORIARTY (1974) and THE REVENGE OF MORIARTY (1975).
392. Les Klinger has been on tour promoting his THE NEW ANNOTATED DRACULA (Sep 08 #3), and the tour continues into November. You can find the schedule at <www.lesliesklinger.com> (click on Events). Les was interviewed about the book at Zombo's Closet of Horror last month; do a Google search for [zombos klinger].
393. <www.youtube.com/watch?v=RAnor9cdC2Q> is the URL for a three-minute video from a press conference marking the start of work on the "Sherlock Holmes" film Guy Ritchie is making for Warner Bros., with most of the principals on hand, including Kelly Reilly, who will play Watson' love interest Mary.
394. The Internet does make it easy to share images as well as words: it didn't take long for photographs to be taken during filming for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" in London to reach the Internet. <www.justjared.buzznet.com> offers a good assortment; search for [sherlock holmes], and click on Link. Many bloggers reported that Robert Downey Jr. has decided to reinvent Sherlock Holmes as Charlie Chaplin, but some of them realized that Holmes was a master of disguise.
395. Randall Stock has a new URL for his excellent web-site "The Best of Sherlock Holmes": <www.bestofsherlock.com>.
396. And Randall is continuing to expand his "Sidney Paget Original Drawings and Artwork: A Preliminary Census and Checklist"; there's information about one of the illustrations for "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and other updates, at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sidney-paget-original-art.htm>.
397. "The Case of the Portsmouth Doctor" was the first exhibition from Richard Lancelyn Green's collection at the Portsmouth City Museum, in 2006, and a specially-adapted version of the exhibition opened in Portsmouth's sister city Maizuru in Japan on Oct. 18, running through Nov. 30; you can see the poster at <www.conandoyllection.co.uk/lancelyn-green-downloads/Maizuru> and you can request more information about the exhibition from Hiroshi Kojima <shoukou@post.city.maizuru.kyoto.jp>.
398. John S. Fitzgerald's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MONTANA CHRONICLES (Helena: Riverbend Publishing, 2008; 239 pp., $12.95) has Holmes and Watson twice visiting western Montana to solve four cases; Fitzgerald tells his readers a great deal about the history of the area and its mining industry.
399. Oct 08 #3: Further to the report (Sep 08 #1) that L.A. Theatre Works will perform "The Lost World" in Los Angeles next year, it turns out that there's a company touring the U.S. through Apr. 4, with a double bill of "The Lost World" and "War of the Worlds". The schedule of their tour is available at <www.ltw.org/Tour/tour/Tours.html>.
400. The Rosenbach Museum & Library in Philadelphia held a hands-on tour called "Sleuths & Spies" on Oct. 8, and their manuscript of "The Empty House" was one of the feature items. It will be repeated on Dec. 1, and there's more information at their web-site at www.rosenbach.org/program.
401. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Robert Brusic's "100 Years Ago" discussion of Freeman Tilden's early parody "The Last Return of Sherlock Holmes", Jon Lellenberg's "50 Years Ago" tribute to Elmer Davis, and news from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum, (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.

402. There will be three performances of Andrew Joffe's two-act dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" (as a staged reading with music, and with Paul Singleton as Sherlock Holmes) at the Theatre Encino on Nov. 15 and 16; 17500 Burbank Boulevard, Encino, CA 91316 (818-973-2262) <www.singletonactor.com>.
403. <www.library.upenn.edu/exhibits/lifeinboxes.html> is the URL for an exhibition of "Life in Boxes: Comic Art & Artifacts" at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia through Mar. 22. The exhibition is drawn from BSJ editor Steve Rothman's recent donation of more than 5,000 books and 20,000 comic books to the Penn Libraries. Steve reports that Sherlockian comics are included in the exhibition. You can read an article about the exhibition (and Steve) at <www.upenn.edu/almanac/volumes/v55/n09/pow.html>.
404. The Park Plaza Sherlock Holmes London (formerly the Sherlock Holmes Hotel) at 108 Baker Street will celebrate Christmas with a "Sherlock Holmes Murder Mystery" (according to an announcement spotted by Ken Lanza). The events will be offered beginning Nov. 1, and there's more information available at <www.murdermysteryshop.com>.
405. We may get to see a movie based on Conan Doyle's "Brigadier Gerard" stories. According to a story in the Hollywood Reporter (Oct. 15), Steve Carell has been "attached to" a film about the Brigadier; Carell appeared in "The 40 Year Old Virgin" (2005) and "Get Smart" (2008), and now stars in the television series "The Office". "King of the Hill" writers John Altshuler and David Krinsky are at work on the script. "Attached to" appears to be Hollywood-speak for "he's interested."
406. Brigadier Gerard has been in films before, starting with "Brigadier Gerard" (1915, with Lewis Waller as Gerard). "The Fighting Eagle" (1927) with Rod La Rocque as Gerard) is available on DVD from Grapevine Video (Box 46161, Phoenix, AZ 85063 <www.grapevinevideo.com>), and "The Adventures of Gerard" (1970, with Peter McEnery as Gerard) was broadcast by BBC-2 in Britain in 1994, but seems not to be available commercially (although off-the-air recordings do exist).
407. Oct 08 #4: Further to the report on the new film "The Duchess" (in which Keira Knightly plays Georgiana Cavendish, 5th Duchess of Devonshire), there also are some Doylean connections. Phil Bergem has reported that Charles Altamont Doyle (Conan Doyle's father) was one of the illustrators of Grace and Philip Wharton's THE QUEENS OF SOCIETY (1860), which contains his illustration of "The Beautiful Duchess of Devonshire: A Kiss for a Vote." And Ruth Berman has noted that in Conan Doyle's A DUET: WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS (1899) Mrs. Hunt Mortimore talks about going to a fancydress ball as the "Duchess of Devonshire" and discusses the details of her costume.
408. Dave Buchanan's "The Baker Street Kids: The Riverbank Chase" is a new oneact play based on "The Sign of Four" and written for a mixed cast of 11-14 year olds, and it's nicely done. Spotlight Publications, 259 The Moorings, Dalgety Bay, Fife KY11 9GX, Great Britain <www.spotlightpublications.com>.
409. If you've ever wondered why Nero Wolfe lives on West 35th Street, here's a reminder from almost thirty years ago: John J. McAleer reported in The Armchair Detective (winter 1979) that it's because Rex Stout remembered seeing William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes" at the Garrick Theater on West 35th Street in New York. Bantam has reissued four of Stout's Nero Wolfe novels: FER-DE-LANCE/THE LEAGUE OF FRIGHTENED MEN and SOME BURIED CAESAR/THE GOLDEN SPIDERS ($15.00 each); for those who came in late, John D. Clark suggested many years ago that Nero Wolfe inherited his father's deductive prowess and his uncle's gargantuan physique (Stout would neither confirm nor deny this, but said that when the world was ready, the Baker Street Irregulars would be the first to know).
410. Gayle Lange Puhl shepherded groups of Evansville High School to Europe in 2006 and 2008, and made sure they were aware of the Sherlockian and Doylean aspects of places they visited. And she has described their trips, in some detail, as <www.cheeseheadintheuk.blogspot.com>.
411. UNESCO (The United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) made Edinburgh the first "world city of literature" (Nov 04 #5), and the city launched a "One Book--One Edinburgh" reading campaign. THE LOST WORLD has been chosen for 2009, and thousands of free copies will be distributed through libraries, schools, and supporting partner organizations. The book's cover will feature Wallace & Gromit (courtesy of Aardman Animations), you can learn more about the campaign, and see the cover design, at <www.cityofliterature.com>.
412. Mark Alberstat's 2009 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The calendar costs US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
413. Andrew Lycett's CONAN DOYLE: THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES has been reissued as a trade paperback (London: Phoenix, 2008; 600 pp., £10.99); the American edition, titled THE MAN WHO CREATED SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, has a trade paperback due in November (New York: Free Press, 2008; 576 pp., $16.95).
414. Oct 08 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 155th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 9, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 <susan221bee@gmail.com> know if you're coming to the event.
415. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcox@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather.
416. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be John Lescroart, an author and a musician, whose twenty books include SON OF HOLMES (1986) and RASPUTIN'S REVENGE (1987), featuring Auguste Lupa; his web-site <www.johnlescroart.com> offers samples from his books and records. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating will be limited, and you should purchase tickets early (details below); no tickets will be sold at the door.
417. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Friday on the second floor of the Algonquin to present Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people.
418. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
419. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $44.00 for chicken taragon or salmon Wellington ($50.00 for prime rib). You can request a formal announcement from Susan Rice <susan221bee@gmail.com> (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014); early reservations are advised for this event.
420. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street between Broadway and Seventh

- Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919). <www.gaslightgalanyc.org> is the URL for their web-site (you are advised to reserve early, and requested to include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation).
421. People who aren't ready for bed after the annual dinner or the gala might wish to join an informal gathering at O'Lunney's Times Square Pub (145 West 45th Street between 6th Avenue and Broadway).
422. Oct 08 #6: Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs included in the various dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), and 110 copies (for the Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
423. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in the dealers' room (Covent Garden West) on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) from 9:30 am to noon; Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> has information about dealers' tables. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the writings of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent event) on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel at 10:30 am; if you're planning to attend the event, please get in touch with Anne Cotton (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
424. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:30 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). The cost is $75.00 (details below) or $85.00 after Dec. 8 or at the door.
425. Baker Street West 1 and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will present a very irregular "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner at 6:00 pm at Kennedy's Irish Pub & Restaurant (327 West 57th Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues); space at the event is limited, and more information is available from Chrys Kegley (9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343) (818-894-1501) <ccobsla@socal.rr.com>.
426. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday; more information to come later (as they say, stay tuned).
427. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement with the prices and a reservation form for the Thursday lecture and the Saturday reception, you can request a copy from Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278 <mabmfw@aol.com>.
428. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has made arrangements with the Algonquin for their "classic full" with one bed at $185.00 (or $285.00 for a "premiere suite"), Tuesday through Sunday. This is the total cost, since there is no tax on reservations arranged by the BSI. The offer's available to all Sherlockians, and room reservations must be made directly to the Algonquin; call 212-840-6800 and mention The Baker Street Irregulars (and make the call soon: the rooms sell out earlier and earlier each year).
429. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; it would be wise if you then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you shouldn't forget about non-optional extras such as 14% state and city taxes). The Seafarers International GuestHouse near Union Square Park (212-677-4800) <www.sihnyc.org> also has inexpensive accommodations.
430. Oct 08 #7: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
431. And (returning to our regular programming) it's always a pleasure to discover August Derleth's "Solar Pons" stories in print: "The China Cottage" is one of 58 stories in ALFRED HITCHCOCK: TALES OF TERROR, edited by Eleanor Sullivan (1986), which has been reprinted this year by Gallahad Books for Barnes & Noble ($9.98).
432. Paul Brundage spotted a story about 12 minutes of silent-film footage taken in London in 1904 and recently discovered in Australia; you can see some of the footage at <www.skynews.com>; search for [london 1904]. The documentary ("Living London") was made by American film pioneer Charles Urban.
433. Celia Gregory died on Sept. 8. She began her acting career on stage early in the 1970s, and went on to appear on the Sunday Times list of Britain's most promising actresses. She also worked in television, and played Maria Gibson in Granada's "Thor Bridge" (1991).
434. John Baesch spotted a report in the Daily Mail (Oct. 17): "Benedict Cumberbatch will play Sherlock Holmes in a modern-day setting. Holmes will actually be a contemporary detective, not some sort of time traveller. Steve Moffat, who works on the Dr. Who dramas, has written an hour-long pilot episode with Mark Gatiss. If senior executives at the BBC like what they see, a series will be commissioned."
435. The Baker Street Irregulars' triennial running of The Silver Blaze will be combined with the 50th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course on Oct. 31, 2009, and there will be a brunch at the Butterfield Country Club in Oak Park on Nov. 1. A block of rooms has been reserved at the Oak Brook Doubletree with a special rate of $89.00 per night (plus 9% tax); the number of rooms at the special rate is limited, and you are advised to reserve early (and you can cancel later if you can't come). Call 800-222-8733, and be sure to request the BSI-Watsonian rate. More details are available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) (630-227-9127 <szdiamond@comcast.net>).
436. Nov 08 #1: A late addition to the list of events during the birthday festivities: The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes have arranged an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, Jan. 11, from 11:30 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 54th Street (between 7th and 6th Avenues) (and yes, 6th Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas), and the cost will be $20.00 including tax and tip. It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations will be important; please send your checks to Lyndsay Faye Lehner (450 West 162nd Street, New York, NY 10032). Overseas guests can reserve via e-mail, and pay at the door; her e-mail address is <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
437. Russell Miller's THE ADVENTURES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (New York: St. Martin's Press/Thomas Dunne Books, 2008; 544 pp., $27.95) is an excellent addition to a shelf of biographies of Sir Arthur; the book is well written, and it offers new and interesting information, because Miller has had access to, and has made good use of, not only the family papers and correspondence but also material collected by the late Richard Lancelyn Green and bequeathed to the Portsmouth Library. Green cast his net widely, and owned letters from, to, and about Conan Doyle and his family, and all of this has helped Miller create an excellent, and entertaining biography. And there's a British edition (London: Harvill Secker, 2008; 480 pp., £20.00).
438. Baker Street West 1 is "a Sherlockian journal from the western USA" and now in its 14th year; the summer issue (50 pp.) has Joella D. Hultgren's "Sher-Do-Ku #2 (Sudoku can be played with letters as well as numerals), plus other interesting S'ian material. $7.00 postpaid from Jerry Kegley (9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343); $12.00 a year (two issues) or $15.00 outside the U.S.

439. Sherlockiana: Meddelelser fra Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark, is now in its 53rd year, offering news of Sherlockian goings-on in Denmark (and now color illustrations; it's all in Danish, and a fine demonstration of what one of the older Sherlockian societies is doing. Bjarne Rother Jensen is the editor (Sjaellandsgade 16, 3.th, 8800 Viborg, Denmark).
440. "India's multibillion rupee film industry, which has been fuming over a ban on smoking scenes in films, now has reason to smile. The health ministry is ready to allow the depiction of iconic characters with their favourite poison stick, according to a report (Oct. 20) by the Indo-Asian News Service. Winston Churchill and Sherlock Holmes can now be shown smoking in new films --although with a warning at the beginning and ending of the film about the dangers of smoking. The Indian government banned smoking in public places as of Oct. 2, and the health minister has estimated that on-screen smoking is accountable for more than 60 percent of new smokers. Credit Karen Murdock for spotting the story.
441. Audrey Peterson died on Feb. 12. She was a college English teacher as well as an author (one of her series was about English professor Claire Camden); her VICTORIAN MASTERS OF MYSTERY: FROM WILKIE COLLINS TO CONAN DOYLE (1984) included a chapter on "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Great Detective", and she was one of the speakers at the special program "Sherlock Holmes at 100" at UCLA in 1987.
442. Nov 08 #2: John Entwistle's sketches of "Cosmic Sherlock Holmes" went to auction this month (Sep 08 #5) and were bought by Jerry Margolin, who says they will go very nicely with his Entwistle drawing of Pete Townshend as Holmes. Entwistle and Townshend were both members of the rock band The Who. So far no one seems to have identified anything Sherlockian in any of The Who's recordings.
443. Modern technology certainly makes things more interesting: the web-site for Bouchercon 2009 <www.charmedtodeath.com> has video of one-hour interviews with guests of honor Lawrence Block, Laura Lippman, John Harvey, and Robert Rosenwald and Barbara Peters.
444. More modern technology: Paul Singleton's web-site <www.singletonactor.com> has photographs of him as Sherlock Holmes in Andrew Joffe's dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" and a clip showing Paul as a doctor in a scene with Susan Lucci on the television series "All My Children" earlier this year.
445. Len Deighton's "Sherlock Holmes and the Titanic Swindle" is the first short story he has written in more than 30 years (and imaginatively Sherlockian rather than a pastiche), and it's one of the 17 stories in THE VERDICT OF US ALL: STORIES BY THE DETECTION CLUB FOR H.R.F. KEATING, edited by Peter Lovesey (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 2006; 223 pp., $43.00 cloth or $20.00 paper); the special cloth edition is signed by the editor and has an additional story in a separate pamphlet. Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (877-622-6656) <www.crippenlandru.com>. Douglas G. Greene, the proprietor of Crippen and Landru, does an excellent job of finding interesting short stories, old and new, for his anthologies and collections.
446. "Where are they now?" department: Guy Henry, who made his small-screen debut in the title role of Granada series "Young Sherlock Holmes: The Mystery of the Manor House" (1982), played Cassius in the HBO series "Rome" (2005-2007) and this year was Jonathan Sewall in the HBO series "John Adams".
447. Reported: Sigmund Freud in Sherlockian costume on the cover of IT DIDN'T MEAN ANYTHING: A PSYCHOANALYTIC READING OF AMERICAN DETECTIVE FICTION, by Alexander N. Howe (Jefferson: McFarland & Co., 2008; 296 pp., $35.00); "the first chapter identifies several instances of hysteria within the fiction of two of the genre's pioneers, Edgar Allan Poe and Arthur Conan Doyle."
448. Andrew Gullis launched his new Strand Magazine in 1998, and has reached issue #25 (and of course is now well established rather than new); the latest issue (June-Sept. 2008) offers an excellent mix of fiction, interviews, and articles, including Michael Kurland's short story "The Picture of Oscar Wilde" (which of course features Moriarty rather than Holmes). $6.95 (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com>.
449. Jonathan Goodman died on Jan. 10. Widely praised as Britain's leading historian of crime, he edited the "Celebrated Trials" series and many anthologies, and wrote books about true crimes; his BLOODY VERDICTS: THE RHYMES CRIME (1971), included a "chryme" about Sherlock Holmes.
450. Nov 08 #3: IN SPITE OF MYSELF: A MEMOIR, by Christopher Plummer (New York: Knopf, 2008; 656 pp., $29.95), is his autobiography; he played Sherlock Holmes in "Silver Blaze" (1977) and "Murder by Decree" (1979), and as General Chang in "Star Trek: The Undiscovered Country" (1991) exclaimed "The game's afoot!" (but Chang was quoting Shakespeare rather than the Canon). Plummer is a wonderful story teller, and an interesting writer. He explains that he got along like a house afire with Basil Rathbone (they acted together in the play "J.B."), and he enjoyed playing Holmes with James Mason ("who turned in the best Watson I've ever seen"). The book lacks an index, who may be frustrating for some readers (the secret numbers are 288-289 and 564-565).
451. The Penguin trade paperback edition of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley) is now available (706 pp., $18.00).
452. The latest issue of the SBIOS Post is at hand from Don Izban (the SBIOS is the Sherlockians By Invitation Only Society), with his announcement of the next SBIOS national gathering: a Burger Bust, in or near Chicago, on Aug. 1; more information will be available some time next year (1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068).
453. The Centerstage Theatre Arts Conservatory will present Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" Feb. 27-Mar. 15 at the Knutzen Family Theater (200 S.W. Dash Point Road, Federal Way, WA 98023) <www.centerstagetheatre.com> (253-661-1444).
454. James B. Hillestad, who presides over the Toy Soldier Museum, has written an interesting article about "The Legendary Sherlock Holmes" for Toy Soldier & Model Figure magazine (Dec. 2008): it's a well-illustrated exploration of Sherlockian miniature figures, and you can read it on-line at his web-site <www.the-toy-soldier.com> (click on "articles"). Some of the sets of figures may be available from Jim (1343 Paradise Falls, Cresco, PA 19326 (750-629-7227) <jmhill@ptd.net>; you can ask him for details.
455. Tutis Digital Publishing in India has launched an on-line catalog of more than 4,000 "Tutis Classics" now available at Amazon and many other on-line stores; their web-site's at <www.tutis.com>, and they offer 23 volumes of Conan Doyle's work (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian).
456. The November issue of The Dispatch (edited by Vic Lahti for The Afghanistan Perceivers of Oklahoma) calls attention to The Word Detective, a newspaper column written by Evan Morris for many years and now available on-line at <www.word-detective.com>. The web-site includes an extensive archive, and one of the phrases he discussed (in Dec. 2005) was "brown study", with mention of its use in "The Resident Patient". It's a fine web-site for anyone interested in words and language.
457. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) honored the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Artista in Houston on Oct. 8, with a warm welcome to the visiting geologists provided by members of The John Openshaw Society. Our next meetings will be in Denver on June 10, and in Portland on Oct. 21.

458. Nov 08 #4: Cultural literacy is an interesting concept that has been described as requiring "the broad range of trivia and the use of that trivia in the creation of a communal language and a collective knowledge." An interesting example of this occurred in the Washington Post on Nov. 4, when the lead editorial was headlined "The War That Didn't Bark". The editorial contained no mention of Sherlock Holmes or a Sherlock Holmes story, and the copy editor who wrote the headline obviously expected that readers would understand the context without any explanation.

459. Another interesting example of cultural literacy is the frequent use of the phrase "the --% solution" without reference to Nicholas Meyer's novel. The writers who use the phrase assume that their readers know what's going on. One also reads descriptions of someone villainous as a "Moriarty", without mention of who Moriarty was and where he's to be found; the readers are expected to know that.
460. Paul G. Churchill ("Corot") died on Nov. 7. He had a long career in education and was an enthusiastic member of the Six Napoleons and other nearby Sherlockian societies; Paul enjoyed appearing as Watson, and even more in presenting his "evidence boxes" at society meetings: he had souvenirs for each of the Canonical cases, and when he couldn't find authentic material he was happy to provide skillful forgeries. His "evidence box" for "The Illustrious Client" was especially interesting, because he had Baron Gruner's "lust diary" complete with the Baron's photographs and descriptions (in French, of course) of his conquests.
461. <www.genericradio.com> offers a wide variety of old-time radio scripts that you can read on-line or download, and three of them are Sherlockian: "The Musgrave Ritual" (Dec. 11, 1939), "The Case of the Dead Adventuress" (Feb. 5, 1945), and "The Adventure of the Tolling Bell" (Apr. 7, 1947). And "The Lost Special" from "Suspense" (Sept. 30, 1943).
462. The Crowded Kitchen Players will perform Ara Balieb's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Christmas Goose", Dec. 5-21, at McCoole's Arts and Events Place in Quakertown, Pa., Dec. 5-21. The box-office phone number is (610-395-7176) <www.baliebwallace.com/sherlock.html>.
463. The saga of The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen continues with THE BLACK DOSSIER, a new graphic novel written by Alan Moore and illustrated by Kevin O'Neill (from Wildstorm, 2007); the story's set in 1958, but there are mentions of Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes, the Diogenes Club, and Moriarty. The book is available in softcover ($19.95), hardcover ($29.95), and as an "absolute edition" ($99.00).
464. P. N. Elrod (better known in Sherlockian circles as Patti Nead Elrod, creator of the "Baker Street Irregulars") began her THE VAMPIRE FILES book series with BLOODLIST and LIFEBLOOD (Jun 90 #3), featuring Jack Fleming (once a reporter and now a vampire) and his private-detective friend Charles Escott (whose name is not the only S'ian echo in the series, which is set in gangland Chicago in the 1930s). The series reached #11 IN 2006 with SONG IN THE DARK, and the next book will be DARK ROAD RISING, due from Ace as a trade paperback next year. Her web-site at <www.vampwriter.com> has news and some of her short stories about Fleming and Escott.

465. Nov 08 #5: Michael Crichton died on Nov. 4. He was a prolific author, of books and scripts, and a film director, who began his career in 1969 with THE ANDROMEDA STRAIN (which he dedicated to Conan Doyle). Before his movie "Jurassic Park" opened in 1993 he said in a N.Y. Times interview that "We're both failed doctors who found storytelling more congenial than healing. Sometimes I think I've devoted my life to rewriting Conan Doyle in different ways." And in 2003 he wrote in his introduction to the Modern Library edition of Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD that "Conan Doyle did something far more influential than invent a character, he invented a particular kind of fantasy story, and demonstrated a successful way to tell it."
466. Reported: SIGERSON AT THE POLE, by Mary Ellen Daugherty (Scion of the Green Dragon, 1997) has been reprinted by Classic Specialties ($5.95). And SHERLOCK HOLMES AT THE RAFFLES HOTEL, by John Hall (new from Breese Books, 172 pp., $18.95). Both pastiches are available from Classic Specialties (Box 1958, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
467. John Baesch has kindly forwarded the results of a poll of book critics published in the Daily Telegraph (Sept. 20) that ranked the 50 greatest villains in literature. #46 was Moriarty (from "The Final Problem"), between Long John Silver (from Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island") at #47 and the White Witch (from C. S. Lewis' "The Lion, the Witch, and the Wardrobe") at #45). #2 was Samuel Whiskers (from Beatrix Potter's "The Tale of Samuel Whiskers", and #1 was Satan (from John Milton's "Paradise Lost").
468. Reported: Bob Garcia's DUEL EN ENFER: SHERLOCK HOLMES CONTRE JACK L'EVENTREUR [DUEL IN HELL: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. JACK THE RIPPER (Paris: Editions du Rocher, 2008; 352 pp., E19.90). And his earlier pastiche LE TESTAMENT DE SHERLOCK HOLMES [THE WILL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2005) is still in print.
469. BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON: A FOOTNOTE TO THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, by Brian W. Pugh and Paul R. Spiring (Sep 08 #1), now has a paperback edition (London: MX Publishing, 2008; 248 pp., £12.99). And their ON THE TRAIL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: AN ILLUSTRATED DEVON TOUR (Mar 08 #1) has been published in Spanish: TRAS LAS HUELLAS DE ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: UN VIAJE ILUSTRADO POR DEVON (London: MX Publishing, 2008; 168 pp., £12.99). Both are available at Amazon in the US and the UK, and at other on-line bookshops.
470. REICHENBACH FALLS is the title of the indie-pop band Ravens & Chimes' first CD (Los Angeles: Better Looking Records, 2007; $14.98). "I grew up reading a lot of old stuff, fairy tales, Sherlock Holmes, and stories," band member Asher Lack told an interviewer, explaining that the album title comes from the Sherlock Holmes stories.
471. Marjorie Laidee has spotted a Novosti report (Nov. 10) from Novgorod: statuettes of Sherlock Holmes have been awarded to the 16 best police officers in Russia's Novgorod region; the awards were carved out of marble by local craftsmen, and the event was held to mark Police Officer's Day. "The prize event is a rare positive news story for Russian police, who have been criticized of late over a series of fatal and near-fatal attacks," according to Novosti. "The most shocking of these came at the end of October when three police officers in the Russian Volga city of Saratov admitted to burning an Armenian national alive after attempting to beat a confession out of him."
472. Nov 08 #6: Shane Peacock's EYE OF THE CROW: THE BOY SHERLOCK HOLMES (Aug 07 #2) was one of five finalists for the TD Canadian Children's Literature Award for "the most distinguished book of the year" written in English. The winner of the $20,000 prize was ELIJAH OF BUXTON, by Christopher Paul Curtis (the other four authors will receive $2,500 each).
473. Petri Wine sponsored the "Sherlock Holmes" radio series from 1943 to 1950, and bottled and sold wine that was far better than the wine sold more recently under that name, and if you would like to know more about the history of the original company, you can run a Google search for [petri family wine industry]. That will turn up "The Petri Family in the Wine Industry", an oral-history interview with Louis Petri that's part of a wine-industry archive at the Bancroft Library at the University of California (Berkeley), and the text is available on-line (look for "View the book" at the left).
474. W. H. Auden praised Sherlock Holmes in his essay "The Guilty Vicarage" (in Harper's Magazine, May 1948), but I only now learned about the play "Sherlock Holmes Chez Duhamel" that he wrote in 1932, while he was teaching at the Larchfield School in Helensburgh (northwest of Glasgow). The play is mentioned in THE CAMBRIDGE COMPANION TO W. H. AUDEN, edited by Stan Smith (2004), which quotes the Helensburgh and Gareloch Times as saying that the play was performed by pupils at the annual Prize Day in 1932. Smith says that the play is "now lost."
475. Imaginative and artistic statues of Holmes, Watson, and Moriarty, created by James Black, were distributed by Luther Norris in the 1970s, and one of Black's Sherlock Holmes statues (signed and dated 1973) will be at auction at Midwest Auction Galleries <www.liveauctioneers.com/item/5880125> on Dec. 7 (it's lot 881); the postal address is 665 North Lapeer Road, Oxford, MI 48371 (877-236-8181).
476. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's new Christmas card is titled "It's a cold night" and has an attractive full-color design by Gemma Tiley; you can see the artwork (and order packets of the cards) at the Society's website <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>. The Society will hold its annual dinner on Jan. 17 in the Members' Dining Room at the House of Commons; the guest of honor will be Gyles Brandreth, who has written two pastiches about

- Oscar Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle. The Society's announcement notes that Brandreth is a sought-after after-dinner speaker, and is featured in the Guinness Book of Records for having made the world's longest-ever after-dinner speech: to raise funds for the National Playing Fields Association he spoke non-stop for twelve hours.
477. Jon Lellenberg reports an announcement from Google that it has begun to digitize Life magazine's archives (about 10 million images), and has already completed 20% of the project; only a small fraction of the images were ever published in the magazine. Go to <www.images.google.com> and search for a subject followed by source:life; [conan doyle source:life] turns up 146 images, most of them are illustrations from the stories, but a dozen of them are photographs of various members of the family. A search for [sherlock holmes source:life] produces 160 images, again most of the illustrations, but with some interesting photographs on the last screen (you're invited to figure out who's in the photographs, and where and when they were taken).
478. Nov 08 #7: Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE BIZARRE ALIBI, by Frank Thomas (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2008; 136 pp., $20.99); he was a prolific author of pastiches, and died in 2006 (this title apparently was first published by Xlibris in 2004). Thomas' THE SECRET FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2002), SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SACRED SWORD (2003), and SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE PANAMANIAN GIRLS (2004) also are available from Xlibris. And there's an interesting entry for him at <www.wikipedia.org>.
479. Sherlockiana: Meddelelser fra Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark, is now in its 53rd year, offering news of Sherlockian goings-on in Denmark (and now color illustrations; it's all in Danish, and a fine demonstration of what one of the older Sherlockian societies is doing. Bjarne Rother Jensen is the editor (Sjaellandsgade 16, 3.th, 8800 Viborg, Denmark).
480. Fans of Peter Cushing may want to pursue Christopher Gullo's biography IN ALL SINCERITY...PETER CUSHING (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2004; 420 pp., $34.99 cloth, $24.99 paper); Cushing played Sherlock Holmes on screen and television, and wrote forewords for Sherlockian books. Gullo also presides over the Peter Cushing Association at <www.petercushing.co.uk>.
481. The October issue of The Moor (published in Swedish by The Baskerville Hall Club of Sweden) reports that Ted Bergman, now 80 years old, is continuing to work on his "Sherlock Holmes i Sverige--en bibliografi" (bringing it up to 2008). It's available on the Internet (with a nice photograph of Ted) at <www.sherlockholmesisverige.wordpress.com>; all in Swedish, but if you scroll down to the end of the screen you'll find a link to "Ted Bergman Archive File" where there's a link to "221B Baker Street Model House" (which has some excellent color photographs of Ted's miniature of the premises at 221B).
482. Ed. Lange's play "Sherlock's Legacy" was produced at the N.Y. State Theatre Institute in 2005, and it's now available in the Institute's "Family Classic AudioBook" series on two CDs in an original-cast recording; $16.96 (37 First Street, Troy, NY 12180) <www.nysti.org/merchandise.htm>. His earlier play "Sherlock's Secret Life" (1997) also is available at the same price.
483. Further to the report on plans for a film based on the "Brigadier Gerard" stories (Oct 08 #3), Michael Chabon had some nice things to say about the Brigadier in a four-minute segment on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered: You Must Read This" on Jan. 30. Chabon's "Charmed by a Dashing Brigadier" can still be read and heard on-line at the National Public Radio web-site at <www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=18521656>.
484. The Northwest Classical Theater Company is performing "Sherlock Holmes: The Speckled Band" (that's Conan Doyle's play) at the Shoe Box Theater in Portland through Dec. 28. The theater is at 2110 SE 10th Avenue, Portland, OR 97214 (971-244-3740) <www.nwctc.org>.
485. Watch for a repeat: "Live from Lincoln Center: Shaham @ the Penthouse" was broadcast by PBS-TV this month to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the death of Pablo de Sarasate. Violinist Gil Shaham played some of Sarasate's works, and at the end of the program the announcer discussed Sarasate and "The Red-Headed League".
-
486. Nov 08 #8: "Law & Order" creator and executive producer Dick Wolf received the International Emmy Founders Award this month; the International Academy of Television Arts & Sciences honored him for extending the reach of his "Law & Order" franchise into almost every corner of the globe. Five years ago he won a special Edgar award from the Mystery Writers of America; "I grew up with Conan Doyle," he once told a reporter (May 03 #4), "That's what I read when I was growing up. Sherlock Holmes is still my favorite fictional character. I started with the Hardy Boys, and then moved on to Sherlock Holmes."
487. Holmes & Watson Real Estate Inspection offers their services in California, Ken Lanza reports; their web-site's at <www.holmes-watson-inspection.com>.
488. "They Might Be Giants" (the rock group that took its name from the film in which George C. Scott played a psychotic judge who believes that he's Sherlock Holmes) first performed in 1983, and issued its first record in 1986; they continue to tour, and there was an interesting article about them in the Washington Post (Nov. 28). Go to <www.washingtonpost.com> and search for [they might be serious]. Their tour schedule's available at their website at <www.tmbg.com>, where you can also listen to their podcasts.
489. Reported: AMERICAN LIGHTNING: TERROR, MYSTERY, MOVIE-MAKING, AND THE CRIME OF THE CENTURY, by Howard Blum (New York: Crown, 2008; 339 pp., $24.95); an account of the bombing of the Los Angeles Times building in 1910 (the lead investigator was William J. Burns, who later met Conan Doyle and may well have helped inspire the writing of THE VALLEY OF FEAR).
490. The autumn issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has the first part of an article on "Grant Allen & Arthur Conan Doyle: A Victorian Odd Couple" (by Peter Calamai), a report on "The Case of the Misattributed Letter" (by Peggy Perdue), and greetings from the new head of the Friends (Cliff Goldfarb); copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>).
491. The [Norwich] Eastern Daily Press has reported (Nov. 24, 2008) the discovery at a local antiques fair the autograph book in which Conan Doyle first saw the stick drawings that inspired the dancing man cipher; he was staying at a hotel in Happingburgh in May 1903, when he was asked for an autograph and saw in the autograph book the owner's young son Gilbert Cubitt's stick figures. Thanks to Sandy Kozinn, you can read the story, and see the page in the autograph book, at <tinyurl.com/57bu9t>.
492. Michael Mallory's THE EXPLOITS OF THE SECOND MRS. WATSON (Dallas: Top Publications, 2008; 280 pp., $14.95) is a collection of 13 stories (previously published in magazines and an anthology) about Amelia Watson, who has a talent for detection as well as a sense of humor. She also has appeared in THE ADVENTURES OF THE SECOND MRS. WATSON (2000) and in the novel MURDER IN THE BATH (2003).

493. Dec 08 #1: Updating the previous report on Don Hobbs' "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes" (Mar 08 #6): his CD electronic bibliography of translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories, including both English in non-Roman alphabets and foreignlanguage editions, is a splendid example of what can be done in the electronic world. The CD is in PDF format, now with 685 pages and 89 alphabets and languages, and with full-color illustrations of the covers of many of the translations. A one-year subscription (with two to three updated CDs) costs $15.00 (to the U.S.) or $20.00 elsewhere.

494. THE CHRONICLES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Paul D. Gilbert (London: Robert Hall, 2008; 224 pp., £18.99), is a collection of seven new pastiches based on the unrecorded cases. His earlier THE LOST FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2007) had seven other new pastiches.
495. Al Gregory spotted a press release from Serica Energy, a British oil company that holds offshore leases in the East Irish Sea; Serica has identified two prospects in the Triassic Sherwood sandstone, and has named them Conan and Doyle. They hope to drill Conan in 2009, and estimate the potential to be as much as one trillion cubic feet of natural gas (the U.S. used about 23.1 tcf of natural gas in 2007).
496. Robert Q. Carver ("The Case of Mme. Montpensier") died on Nov. 27. Bob was one of the founders of The Diogenes Club of Brooklyn (one of the interesting older societies included in Jon Lellenberg's archival-history volume on the late 40s) and more recently of The Three Garridebs (Sue Vizoskie noted his very humorous, and occasionally bawdy, songs and dramatic presentations at their meetings). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1962.
497. Frogwares continues to produce Sherlockian adventure games for computers: "Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper" is to be released in Europe in March. You can see screen shots now at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/sh>.
498. Gasogene Books/The Wessex Press continues to make excellent use of YouTube to promote conferences and books, the latest being a two-minute trailer for their upcoming THE APOCRYPHA OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (the tenth volume edited by Les Klinger for their Sherlock Holmes Reference Library); you can see the video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=0VrQyj-o3mg>. The book will go on sale in the dealers room during the birthday festivities in New York in January.
499. YouTube does have interesting video: Jim Henson conducted an international workshop on "Puppetry for Film and Television" in France in 1987, and you can view a six-minute video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=CRYUIRYGz5E&NR=1> that has two appearances by a Sherlock Holmes puppet.
500. Stuart Kaminsky's dramatization of his pastiche "The Final Toast" had its world premiere at the International Mystery Writers' Festival in Kentucky last June, and it is now scheduled by Theatre Northwest at the Theatre on the Square in Tacoma from Feb. 13 to Mar. 1, 2009 (901 Broadway, Tacoma, WA 98402) (253-591-5894); there's a blog about the play at the company's website at <www.theatrenorthwest.net>.
501. Dec 08 #2: Interesting Sherlockiana continues to appear in Japan, discovered by Masamichi Higurashi: a CD with an audio dramatization (in Japanese) of "A Study in Scarlet" from Act One Co. (2006); Y2,800. And two manga (graphic-novel) adaptations of tales from the Canon (with an occasional pastiche or parody) by women writers and artists: THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES were published by Aoba Shuppan in 2006 and 2007; Y876 each.
502. Forrest J Ackerman died on Dec. 4. A legend in the world of science fiction and horror, and as editor of the fanzine Imagination! published Ray Bradbury's first story in 1938, and as a literary agent represented Bradbury and Isaac Asimov. He coined the phrase "sci-fi" in 1954 when he was listening to a car radio and heard the announcer mention "hi-fi" (Forry's wife told him "Forget it, it will never catch on"), and launched the magazine Famous Monsters of Filmland in 1958. His greatest accomplishment, to the thousands of people who visited his "Ackermansion" in Los Angeles, was his collection of books, magazines, photographs, and memorabilia: his treasures included the bolts from the neck of Boris Karloff's Frankenstein monster, Bela Lugosi's Dracula ring, and the small models of pterodactyls used by Willis H. O'Brien in the films "The Lost World" and "King Kong".
503. Reported: SHAMAN OR SHERLOCK?: THE NATIVE AMERICAN DETECTIVE, by Gina Macdonald and Andrew Macdonald, with Mary Ann Sheridan (Westport: Greenwood, 2002; 312 pp., $131.95); an academic discussion of Native American fiction.
504. GASLIGHT GRIMOIRE: FANTASTIC TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is an excellent anthology edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec (Calgary: Edge, 2008; 336 pp., $16.95); eleven new pastiches, each with an atmospheric full-page illustration by Phil Cornell. "Expect a few shivers along the way," David Stuart Davies warns in his foreword. The publisher has an interesting website at <www.gaslightgrimoire.blogspot.com>.
505. Ken Lanza spotted the Sherlock Holmes Collection at a web-site called The Voice of Reason <www.thevoiceofreason.com/sherlock/index.html>; they offer free e-book downloads of much of the Canon, three episodes from the Ronald Howard television series, and four of the Rathbone/Bruce films.
506. Jasper Jones is an 11-year-old student/detective who's known as "Sherlock Jones" and is featured with his friend Penny Gordon in four Christian-fiction mysteries written by Ed Dunlop and published by the Bob Jones University Press for readers aged 9-12. SHERLOCK JONES: THE ASSASSINATION PLOT (Greenville: JourneyForth, 2005; 116 pp., $8.99) is the first in the series, followed by THE WILLOUGHBY BANK ROBBERY, THE MISSING DIAMOND, and THE PHANTOM AIRPLANE.
507. The television series "House" (broadcast by Fox) continues to include Sherlockian references and allusions (among them: House's apartment number is 221B). The episode "Joy to the World" (Dec. 9) has House receiving a copy of Joseph Bell's MANUAL OF THE OPERATIONS OF SURGERY as a Christmas present and his associate Wilson explaining that it was given to House by a former student named Irene Adler ("the one who got away"); the book is real (Apr 08 #2). If you don't want to wait for a repeat, you can watch the episode on-line at <www.fox.com/house>.
508. Dec 08 #3: The Italian film "Gomorra" won five European Film Awards this month: best picture, best director, best actor, best cinematography, and best screenplay. The drama is based a book by Roberto Saviato (the English translation, GOMMORAH: A PERSONAL JOURNEY INTO THE VIOLENT INTERNATIONAL EMPIRE OF NAPLES' ORGANIZED CRIME SYSTEM, was published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux last year); Saviato has round-the-clock police protection, after receiving death threats, and Sherlockians will recognize the name of the organized crime system in Naples: the Camorra.
509. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times08-12.htm>, with some nice photographs of the late Paul Churchill and his Sherlockiana, and offers of old and new Sherlockian merchandise.
510. "A miniature library held on a video game cartridge is being launched for Christmas to get kids reading," the [London] Sun reported (Dec. 9); Nintendo, partnered with HarperCollins, has announced a "100 Classic Book Collection" for the Nintendo DS. Sherlock Holmes is included, and the cartridge costs £19.99. A company spokesman said that they hope to target a new generation of readers.
511. Warren Randall's new lapel pin honors the 75th anniversary of The Baker Street Irregulars as well as the BSI bus excursion to Christopher Morley's Knothole on Long Island on Jan. 11: Tom Stix, Julian Wolff, Edgar W. Smith, and Morley himself are passengers on the bus driven by Sherlock Holmes. Pin collectors who will not be at the birthday festivities in New York can order the pin from Randall (15 Fawn Lane, South Setauket, NY 11720); $11.00 postpaid.
512. John Ringham died on Oct. 20. He had a long career on stage and television in Britain, and played Inspector Lanner in Granada's "The Resident Patient" (1985).
513. The fall issue of Jay Pearlman's Tonga Times (published by the Mini-Tonga Scion Society) has a long and well-illustrated article about gasogenes and seltzogenes, and news from the wide world of Sherlockian miniatures. Membership includes three issues of the newsletter and costs $12.00 ($13.00 to Canada/$15.00 elsewhere) from Jay (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229); payment in U.S. dollars, please.
514. British publisher Atlantic Books has launched a "Crime Classics" series of reprints with afterwords by Robert Giddings (£7.99) that will include (in May) "Favourite Sherlock Holmes Stories" (based on Conan Doyle's choice of the best of the Canon).

515. "Better late than never" department: Kathleen Kaska's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES TRIVIOGRAPHY AND QUIZ BOOK (Dallas: Taylor Trade Publishing, 2000; 210 pp., $10.95) is out of print, but available at reasonable prices at web-sites; it has concise summaries of each story, mini-histories of their publishing background, quizzes on each story, and interesting bits of Sherlockian and Doylean trivia, plus a chapter on Doyle as writer and spiritualist and some Sherlockian crossword puzzles as well.
516. Dec 08 #4: Peter Ashman has reported a fine web-site for people who want Sherlockian (and other) audio: <www.audible.com>; you need not be a member, but members get a discount when they download, and the company offers more than 50,000 titles. You can listen on your computer, or burn a CD, and they have a wide selection, including Derek Jacobi's unabridged readings of the four long stories and THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.
517. Production is underway on Laurie R. King's THE LANGUAGE OF BEES (which is due in April); you can see a picture of the cover at <www.randomhouse.com>, and read her blog about the book at <www.laurierking.com/wp/php/?cat=26>.
518. Herlock Solmes is a great detective who appears in "The Adventures of Sherlock Mario" (broadcast on Oct. 3, 1989, in the syndicated television series "The Super Mario Bros. Super Show!"). The television series was based on the classic video game, and at one point in the episode Mario dons Solmes' deerstalker and calls himself Sherlock Mario. There's more about Herlock Solmes at <www.mariowiki.com/The\_Adventures\_of\_Sherlock\_Mario>.
519. The East Lynne Theater Company has announced their 2009 season, which will include Craig Wichman's radio-theater dramatization of "The Speckled Band" on Mar. 20-21, and his dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" on Nov. 6-7, at the First Presbyterian Church in Cape May, N.J. The box-office address is 121 Fourth Avenue, West Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5898); web-site at <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
520. Hugh A. Mulligan died on Nov. 26. He joined the Associated Press in 1951 and retired in 2000 after visiting 146 countries, and once said that he was "most happy that I never became an expert on anything," and that "not being anything allowed you to cover everything." He filed many stories over the years about Holmes and Conan Doyle and Sherlockians, and his books included an amusing pastiche A CHRISTMAS TO FORGET AT 221B (2002). The book is still in print at <www.hilliardandharris.com>.
521. Mitch Higurashi continues to make Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockiana available to Japanese readers: his translations of all nine volumes of the Canon have been published by Kobunsha, and his translation of Steve Hockensmith's HOLMES ON THE RANGE has been published by Hayakawa. The Dec. 2007 issue of Hayakawa's Mystery Magazine had Sherlockian content that included Mitch's report on recent events around the world, and he has edited the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club's 30th anniversary volume for The Black-Headed League.
522. Dec 08 #5: Editor Janet Hutchings notes that the Feb. 2009 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, marks the 66th consecutive year that copies have been distributed at the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner; the issue has Barry Waldman's Sherlockian cover art, Steve Hockensmith's new Amlingmeyer brothers pastiche ("Greetings from Purgatory" has them on the way to their next novel, which will be CRACK IN THE LENS), a reprint of a pastiche by Edward D. Hoch ("The Adventure of the Dying Ship"), and Jon L. Breen's review of recent Sherlockian books.
523. There were some interesting scripts offered in a Profiles in History auction on eBay this month: one lot of 42 scripts included 23 story outlines and screenplays (including variant drafts and typescripts) from Basil Rathbone's 1940s series for Universal, two variant treatments for Clive Brook's "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1929), a script from "Paramount on Parade" (1930, with Brook as Holmes), and scripts for Roger Moore's television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976), Gene Wilder's "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975), and George C. Scott's "They Might Be Giants" (1971). Another lot with 45 items had screenplays and drafts from Irwin Allen's films, including "The Lost World" (1960), and other material. The Collectors Book Store opened in Hollywood 1965 and specialized in rare comics books, science-fiction pulp magazines, and movie memorabilia. The store began to focus on movie and television memorabilia in 1983, and when it closed recently the owners decided to sell everything by auction. The hammer price on the Irwin Allen lot was $3,750 (add 20% buyer's premium), and the hammer price on the Sherlockian lot was $2,750.
524. "The London fog rolls in, and out of the darkness emerge two figures. One is tall, eccentric in his habits, always in search of mysteries and puzzles; the other is his brave and loyal companion, clearly a military man ... Holmes and Watson? No, Prince Florizel of Bohemia and Colonel Geraldine, the dashing heroes of Robert Louis Stevenson's NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS (1882)." Michael Dirda, in his excellent discussion of Stevenson in the Book World section of the Washington Post (Dec. 14); you can read the rest of the article at their web-site <www.washingtonpost.com>.
525. The Public Radio Exchange at <www.prx.org> has some interesting Sherlockian audio, including the Quicksilver Radio Theater's recordings of Craig Wichman's dramatizations of "The Speckled Band" and "The Blue Carbuncle" (the latter program is accompanied by Wichman's adaptation of "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes"); register for a free account that allows you to listen to their audio on-line).
526. "From Out of That Shadow" is the title of an exhibition that's scheduled at the University of Virginia, Mar. 7 through Aug. 1, and at the University of Texas (Austin), Sept. 8 through Jan. 4, honoring the bicentennial of Edgar Allan Poe. Exhibition highlights will include Poe's writing desk, records of his student days, a brooch containing his hair, manuscripts and letters, and Arthur Rackham's original artwork for TALES OF MYSTERY & IMAGINATION. Co-curator Richard Oram noted in a University of Texas press release that the exhibition's scope extends outside Poe's lifetime to include his considerable and often overlooked importance to authors such as Conan Doyle, "whose Sherlock Holmes owes much to Poe's brainy detective Dupin."
527. Dec 08 #6: Further to the item (Oct 08 #7) on plans for a television series starring Benedict Cumberbatch as Sherlock Holmes in a modern-day setting, the Daily Telegraph reported (Dec. 19) that Martin Freeman will play Watson; filming will begin in January in Wales on a one-hour pilot scheduled to air on the BBC next fall. Charles Prepolec has reported that Mark Gatiss, one of the writers, discusses the project in an interview with Bill Hussey at <www.horrorreanimated.com>.
528. The latest issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the newsletter of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust) offers Peter X. Accardo's report from the Houghton Library at Harvard (where the Trust archives are held), a photograph of the presentation of the trophy at the 1962 running of The Silver Blaze at Aquaduct (with Tupper Bigelow, Rex Stout, Alec Robb, Julian Wolff, and Tom Stix Sr.), and a report from Trust chairman Tom Francis. You can request copies of the newsletter from Julie McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124) <mike9750@aol.com>.
529. At hand from John Baesch is a report in National Geographic (June) on the Index Translationum maintained by UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization); it's an international bibliography of translations, created in 1932 and now computerized: the data base contains about 1.7 million bibliographic entries for books published in more than 130 countries and more than 800 languages. The URL's far too long for this newsletter, but you can run a Google search for [index translationum]. The "top 50" authors start with Walt Disney Productions at 8,941, followed by Agatha Christie at 6,516, Jules Verne at 4,162, and William Shakespeare at 3,550. Arthur Conan Doyle ranks #18 at 1,944, between Papa Joannes Paulus II at 1,960, and Alexandre Dumas Pere at 1,917. The on-line data-base contains entries from 1979 onward.

530. AN HONORABLE SOLDIER--THE TRUE STORY OF COLONEL SEBASTIAN MORAN, by Jerry Kegley (North Hills: Curious Tiger Press, 2006), takes a new and interesting look at Moran's life and career. The 28-page pamphlet, illustrated in color and black and white, costs $10.00 postpaid from Jerry, at 9338 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343.
531. Planning continues for The Baker Street Breakfast Club's "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His World" conference in June 2010 (Sep 08 #7); the "call for papers" is available from Sally Sugarman (Box 407, Shaftsbury, VT 05262), and at the society's web-site at <www.bakerstreetbreakfastclub.org>.
532. "Mad Movies with the L.A. Connection" was a 30-minute series broadcast by Nickelodeon cable in 1985; they removed original soundtracks and edited the films down to about 20 minutes, adding new dialogue, sound effects, and music, and the results were hilarious. They parodied Rathbone's "Dressed to Kill" and "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon", and then a one-hour parody of "The Woman in Green". John Sherwood reports that the parody of "The Woman in Green" aired on A&E cable some years ago; and that it's now available (without commercials) on DVD (as "Movie Madness Mystery with the L.A. Connection") from A&E for $24.95; (800-380-5692) <www.aetv.com>.

Jan 09 #1:

1. Sherlockians and Holmesians from many nations and three separate continents gathered in New York to celebrate Sherlock Holmes' 155th birthday, and the festivities started with the traditional ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's, and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (with lunch at McSorley's).
  2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was author John Lescroart, who read his pastiche "The Adventure of the Giant Rat of Sumatra". The pastiche was first published in Mary Higgins Clark Mystery Magazine in 1997 and reprinted in THE BEST AMERICAN MYSTERY STORIES 1988. And can hear him read the story at the web-site <www.kqed.org/arts/programs/writersblock/episode.jsp?essid=10424>.
  3. The Beacon Society held its annual meeting at the Algonquin on Friday morning (the group's mission is to encourage and recognize programs that introduce young people to Holmes). The William Gillette Luncheon featured the The Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) in alternate-universe versions of some of the Canonical stories. And Otto Penzler's traditional Mysterious Bookshop open house offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Union League Club, honoring two ladies (Priscilla Juvelis and Sharon Klinger as *The* Woman. The dinner featured the usual toasts and traditions, plus a thoroughly British debate between Nick Utechin and Guy Marriott on whether Sherlock Holmes attend Oxford or Cambridge, David Stuart Davies' version of one of the old Bromo Quinine radio broadcasts, Jens Byskov Jensen's performance on violin of Sherlockian music, and Henry Boote's musical tribute to Old Irregular Bruce Montgomery.
  5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, awarding Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Bill Barnes ("The *Gloria Scott*"), Susan Dahlinger ("The Bruce-Partington Plans"), Robert Ellis ("The Illustrious Client"), Walter Jaffee ("The Resident Patient"), Allan Devitt ("The Dancing Men"), Greg Darak ("The Engineer's Thumb"), Michael Pollak ("The Blue Carbuncle"), Sebastien Le Page ("The Six Napoleons"), Jens Byskov Jensen ("The Blanched Soldier"), Joel Schwartz ("The Three Students"), and Barbara Rusch ("The Mazarin Stone").
  6. Mike also presented the BSI's Two-Shilling Award (for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty) to Daniel Posnansky, and the Editor's Medal to Yuichi Hirayama, Doug Elliott, Bill Barnes, John Bergquist, Susan Rice, and Nicholas Utechin, in recognition of their services as editors of books and Christmas Annuals published by the BSI.
  7. The Gaslight Gala, held at the Manhattan Club, celebrated "Disguises in the Canon", and the agenda featured performances of "Sherlock Holmes, M.D." (by Joanne Zahorsky-Reeves and Robert Reeves) and "Two English-Speaking Persons on Holiday in Switzerland, Discussing the Recent Death of Sherlock Holmes, Consulting Detective" (by Timothy Evers and Becky Robare), and other entertainment.
8. Jan 09 #2: And while Sherlockians were celebrating in Manhattan on Jan. 9, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson were in Brooklyn: Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law were on location at the Marcy Street Armory being filmed for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes".
  9. On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin welcomed (as usual) sellers and buyers, and at 10:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) gathered for their Junior Blood-stain, which featured a dramatic reading of John Sherwood's script for an episode of "Wooster, M.D."
  10. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party was again at the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, with entertainment in the auditorium, and wining, dining, and conversation in the reception room. Al and Betsy Rossenblatt reported poetically on the events of the previous year and of the previous evening, and Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies present who have been honored by the BSI as *The* Woman.
  11. Mattias Bostrom was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year: his article "The Humble Dr. Morimer: On the Real Swedish Pathological Society." And the Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets by Sue Vizoskie, Elaine Coppola, and Carol Cavaluzzi for a prize donated by Maggie Schpak and the Curious Collectors of Baker Street: a replica of the "Mazarin" stone in a handsome and appropriate Persian box.
  12. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise be unable to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to this year's auction were Robert J. Stek (a box set of The Electronic Sherlock Holmes, issued in 1987 and the first computerized edition of the Canon), Andy Moursund (five posters showing Sherlockian and Doylean dust jackets), Bob Hess (two colorful posters designed by the late Steve Emmons), and Neil Gaiman (naming rights in one of his next books).
  13. One of the Saturday-evening events was the "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner arranged by The Curious Collectors of Baker Street at O'Lunney's Restaurant, where a new Sherlockian society was founded: The O'Lunnies of Helston Asylum. There were two Sunday events this year, one being a brunch arranged by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant, and the other a BSI "Knothole on Wheels" excursion by bus to Roslyn, Long Island, to visit the cabin where Christopher Morley wrote much of his work, and to lay a wreath on Morley's grave.
  14. And a final note, for those who are planning ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 15, 2010. And the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner will be on Jan. 9, 2010.
-
15. Jan 09 #3: I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, there will be much more in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $26.50 a year ($29.00 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) should be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); and there's an option offering a subscription to the BSJ and to the Christmas Annual for $36.50 (or $40.00 outside the U.S.). You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, where there are

- interesting features such as some of the papers written by past winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles in recent issues of the BSJ, and information on the BSI's other publications.
16. There was a video crew recording interviews and parts of the birthday festivities for two one-hour shows that are expected to air on the Discovery Channel, shortly before the Guy Ritchie film is released later this year, and the shows also will be on the DVD of the film.
  17. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2008" has Fred Levin's article on "Sherlock Holmes in Yiddish", Pj Doyle's history of the 1954 television series that starred Ronald Howard and H. Marion Crawford, and other scholarship and entertainment; the 58-page booklet is available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122) for $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
  18. Jim Webb has reported a helpful resource for translating British into American, at <www.bbcamerica.co/content/141/dictionary.jsp>; BBC America is the BBC's television channel in the U.S.
  19. "A Scandal in Bohemia" is a new two-act chamber opera written by Nathalie Anderson (libretto) and Thomas Whitman (music), and it will be performed in a concert version by Orchestra 2001 at the Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts in Philadelphia at 8:00 pm on Feb. 6 and at the Lang Concert Hall at Swarthmore College at 7:30 pm on Feb. 8.
  20. Paola Amadesi's imaginative 14-minute two-part animation of Conan Doyle's story "The Silver Mirror" is available at <www.youtube.com>; run a search for [silver mirror doyle].
  21. Watson's Tin Box will host their second "Scintillation of Scions" at Claret House in Clarksville, Md., on Aug. 15, with the intent of bringing together members of mid-Atlantic (and east-coast) Sherlockian societies for "an afternoon of fun, scholarship, and social time." Last year's gathering was entertaining, and this year's event will run from 1:00 to 7:00 pm. Additional details are available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724) <www.watsonstinbox.org>.
  22. Two issues of Beaten's Christmas Annual have been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles in Seattle, both edited by Terri Haugen. The first is a 291-page book celebrating the society's first 25 years, offering the best of the society's scholarship, pastiches, parodies, as well as some historical notes. The second is the 2008 issue, with 42 pages of fact, fiction, puzzles, and humor. The 2007 issue costs $24.95 postpaid to the U.S. (and $27.95 elsewhere); the 2008 issue costs $12.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($15.00 elsewhere); payments from overseas in U.S. dollars, please). Checks payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles should be sent to Terri Haugen (3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332).
23. Jan 09 #4: David F. Morrill, who is described as having "a collection of a bazillion books and old movies, including many of a Sherlockian bent," is the author of The Baker Street Journal Christmas Annual for 2008 ("Reading the Signs: Some Observations and Apercus on Film and Television Adaptations of *The Sign of the Four*"), and he has done a wonderful job of describing and comparing seven screen and television versions of the story, discussing the casts and characters (including Toby), missing links, additions and changes, and grand finales, with skill and humor. 64 pp., $11.00 postpaid ($12.00 outside the U.S.); you can order on-line at the BSJ's website <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> or by mail (Michael H. Kean, 3040 Sloat Street, Pebble Beach, CA 93953); checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars, please.
  24. The Baker Street Irregulars' international series has already made available in English excellent Sherlockian scholarship from Japan and Scandinavia, and the third volume, edited by Doug Elliott and Bill Barnes, does the same for Australia. AUSTRALIA AND SHERLOCK HOLMES (2008) has two articles about Richard Hughes (distinguished for having had characters modeled after him in books by Ian Fleming and John le Carre, as well as having been a spy for both the British and the Soviets, simultaneously), Phil Cornell's survey of Sherlockian films that never were (illustrated with his versions of the posters that might have promoted the films), and other interesting material, including Neil P. Hillcrop's demonstration of Australian writing before translation into English. The 208-page book costs $43.90 postpaid to the U.S. ($52.90 elsewhere), from the BSJ (as above).
  25. The Bartitsu Society honors Edward William Barton-Wright, creator of a "new art of self-defense" that Watson may well have misheard or misspelled when he recorded what Holmes said about baritsu in "The Empty House". The society has a web-site at <www.bartitsu.org>, and there also is an interesting article at <artofmanliness.com/2009/01/05/bartitsu-gentlemen> with links to two videos about bartitsu. Thanks to Steph Dawson for the report.
  26. Baker Street Miscellanea was an interesting Sherlockian (and Doylean) journal published from 1975 to 1993, and all 76 issues are now available in PDF format on a CD for $40.00 (postpaid) from Donald Pollock, 521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305; non-U.S. buyers are welcome to use PayPal and can contact Don at <donaldkpollock@gmail.com>.
  27. Ricardo Montalban died on Jan. 14. He was a leading man in Mexican films, and moved to Hollywood in the 1940s. He also acted on film and television, perhaps best-remembered as Mr. Roarke in the series "Fantasy Island"; the episode "Save Sherlock Holmes" (1982) had Mr. Roarke welcoming Ron Ely (as a department store detective) to the island to fulfill a fantasy that had him saving Sherlock Holmes (played by Peter Lawford) from Professor Moriarty (Mel Ferrer).
  28. "The Remarkable Characters of Arthur Conan Doyle" is the title of a symposium and exhibition at the Lilly Library at Indiana University in Bloomington on Sept. 26. It's a day-long event with eight presenters, sponsored by The Friends of the Lilly Library and The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis, and additional information is available from Lilly Library Conference, Calumet Court, Zionsville, IN 46077 <lillylibraryconference@yahoo.com>.
29. Jan 09 #5: The National Film Preservation Act of 1988 created a National Film Preservation Board in the Library of Congress, responsible for selecting no more than 25 films a year for the National Film Registry, "based on their historic, cultural, or aesthetic importance." The Registry includes "Sherlock, Jr." (1924), selected in 1991; "The Lost World" (1925), selected in 1998; and "The Invisible Man" (1933), added last year.
  30. And "The Invisible Man" *is* Sherlockian, in a way. Chris Steinbrunner delighted in this sort of connection, because his spectacular visual memory (as well as his love of old films) helped him recognize them. You may remember the scene in Universal's "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" (1944) in which unseen saboteurs move a railroad switch in order to derail a train; the studio took that footage from "The Invisible Man".
  31. Rafe McGregor's blog <www.rafemcgregor.blogspot.com> has frequent Sherlockian content, and a "free books" contest that closes on Feb. 26; the prize is a hamper of six books (S'ian and non-S'ian), signed by their authors and editor, and you appear to be able to win without knowing the answer to his question.
  32. Edward D. Cartier died on Dec. 25. He was a renowned artist from the Golden Age of science fiction; he started illustrating Walter B. Gibson's "The Shadow" novels in 1936, and went on to illustrate hundreds of stories for science-fiction magazines and books, and his striking portrait of Sherlock Hoka for Poul Anderson and Gordon R. Dickson's "The Adventure of the Mislplaced Hound" appeared in Universe Science Fiction in 1953 and in the collection EARTHMAN'S BURDEN in 1957.
  33. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2008 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).

34. Pattie Tierney reports that there's a new restaurant in Cottleville, Mo.: Sherlock's Steak and Seafood; the web-site's at <www.sherlockssteaks.com>. Pattie is still making interesting jewelry, and some of it's Sherlockian, including an imaginative pin; she's at 229 Hereford Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63125 <www.ptierneydesigns.etsy.com>.
35. If you've read all the pastiches and parodies, there's always the web-site <www.fanfiction.net>; a search for [sherlock holmes] brings up 396 records.
36. David Timson has completed his reading of the Canon, making him the first to have recorded all of the stories. And he is an excellent reader, good with voices and accents of all sorts. His recordings are available on DVDs from Naxos Audiobooks (3 Wells Place, Redhill, Surrey RH1 3SL, England, or 416 Mary Lindsay Polk Drive #5089, Franklin, TN 37067); their web-site's at <www.naxosaudiobooks.com>. The last set in the series is THE CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES II on 4 CDs ($28.98), with six stories ("The Veiled Lodger", The Illustrious Client", "The Three Gables", "The Retired Colourman", "The Lion's Mane", and "Shoscombe Old Place") and Timson's own imaginative pastiche "The Wonderful Toy". The Naxos catalog is well worth exploring; they have other interesting Sherlockian and Doylean recordings.

37. Jan 09 #6: Felix Leiter: "I give up. I know the diamonds are in the body, but where?" James Bond: "Alimentary, my dear Leiter." That's from Ian Fleming's DIAMONDS ARE FOREVER (1971), reported (and I don't recall seeing this before) in a review of JOINED-UP THINKING: HOW TO CONNECT EVERYTHING TO EVERYTHING ELSE, by Stevyn Colgan (London: Macmillan, 2008). The exchange also is in the film, and scriptwriter Tom Mankiewicz tells a delightfully obscene story about it at <www.mysterymanonfilm.blogspot.com>; just search for [alimentary].
38. Patrick McGoochan died on Jan. 13. He began his theatrical career as a stage manager in British repertory in the 1940s and went to act on stage, screen, and television. He was best known as Number Six in the television series "The Prisoner", and in 1968 appeared in Sherlockian costume in the episode "The Girl Who Was Death".
39. Wood from a tree in the garden of Conan Doyle's childhood home will be used to make a violin in tribute to Sherlock Holmes, according to stories at hand from the U.K. A 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh has to be cut down due to disease, and the Dunedin special school, which now occupies the house where Conan Doyle lived when he was five to seven years old, has commissioned a local violin maker to use the wood to make a violin, honoring both Conan Doyle, who may have played in the tree, and Holmes, who enjoyed playing the violin. Joan Foulner, a history teacher at the school, said that "It's been here for so long and, with its connections with Arthur Conan Doyle, there was no way we could just knock it down and have it turned into woodchips." Students at the school will use the violin for music lessons, and it is hoped that wood from the tree can be carved into a giant pipe.
40. On-line registration for "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Sesquicentennial Symposium" at the Houghton Library at Harvard is now open, and you're advised to reserve for the event sooner rather than later, since space is limited. Go to <hcl.harvard.edu/libraries/houghton/doyle\_symposium.html> for details. this will be one of the major celebrations of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Conan Doyle and the 75th anniversary of the founding of The Baker Street Irregulars.
41. Gary Lovisi's SOUVENIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: COLLECTED ARTICLES ON THE CANON AND THE PASTICHES (New York: Gryphon Books, 2002; 122 pp., $15.00) reprints articles published in magazines and journals in the U.S. and Japan, on subjects that range from hard-cover pastiche first editions to Tauchnitz editions to George MacDonald Fraser's FLASHMAN AND THE TIGER. It's available (along with other Sherlockiana and Doyleana, by Gary and others) from Gryphon Books (Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228) <www.gryphonbooks.com>.
42. "The Cultural Afterlives of Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes" is the title of a conference at the University of Hull on July 4, celebrating the 150th anniversary of Conan Doyle's birth; possible topics include Holmes as an icon of Englishness, feminist revisions of Holmes, and Holmes in cyberspace. Additional information about the conference is available from the Dept. of English, University of Hull, Kingston-upon-Hull, HU6 7RX, England <www.hull.ac.uk/english/events/conferences/cultural-afterlives.html>.

43. Jan 09 #7: Thanks to Stu Shiffman for the news that Project Gutenberg has three issues of The Strand Magazine in its on-line book catalog: Apr. and May 1893, and Jan. 1894; the first two have Sherlockian content, and the third has Inspector Maurice Moser's article about handcuffs. There are thousands of titles available at <www.gutenberg.org>, including much of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian work.
44. Tristan Jones' pastiche "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the *Mary Cel*-*este*" was published in SAIL magazine more than twenty years ago; Jones was a devoted sailor and a prolific author, and the pastiche also was published in his collection YARNS (still in print from Sheridan House; $14.95).
45. John Mortimer died on Jan. 16. He was a lawyer, and a specialist in freespeech issues (defending the publisher of Lawrence's LADY CHATTERLEY'S LOVER and the Sex Pistols), a playwright and screenwriter, and an author who created "Rumpole of the Bailey" for television in 1975. Mortimer enjoyed the Sherlock Holmes tales, and in 1995 he attended the annual dinner of The Speckled Band of Boston. In 1975 he was planning to write the book for the musical "Sherlock!" (with music and lyrics by Leslie Bricusse). Rex Harrison was under consideration to play Holmes, but the project was shelved until 1988, when "Sherlock: The Musical" was produced in England with book, music, and lyrics by Bricusse.
46. Apparently there's no end to new Sherlock Holmes films. Guy Ritchie's film starring Robert Downey Jr. is in production, and the BBC is underway with its pilot starring Benedict Cumberbatch, and Columbia hasn't announced it is cancelling its film starring Sacha Baron Cohen, and now the Daily Telegraph has reported (Jan. 20) that Simon Wilson, Britain's deputy high commissioner in Calcutta is playing Holmes in an Indian remake of "The Sign of the Four". Directed by Ashoke Viswanathan, the film stars Victor Bannerjee as detective Prashant Saigal, who is investigating a series of murders but hits a dead end and "seeks inspiration from the iconic British detective," who "in true Bollywood fashion" emerges from a misty river, complete with cape and pipe, to come to Saigal's assistance. It's a cameo role for Wilson, who saw an opportunity to "promote English literature and its ties to India," and Viswanathan praised Wilson as a fine actor who could handle a pipe and speak at the same time ("most Indian actors can't do that").
47. You can see Benedict Cumberbatch (who will be Sherlock Holmes in the pilot for a BBC television series) in the film "The Other Boleyn Girl" (2008); he played William Carey, husband of Mary Boleyn.
48. <www.raindance.co.uk/site/picture/upload/image/books/Sherlock\_Holmes.pdf> is the URL for a "first draft revisions" script dated Mar. 14, 2008 for the Guy Ritchie film. Thanks to Bert Coules for the report.
49. The Three Garridebs continue to celebrate their 35th anniversary (the celebration seems to have expanded to a second year), and their journal PRESCOTT'S PRESS offers a nice mix of history, scholarship, and humor, including Drew Thomas's amusing report on the Cafe Sherlock in Odessa (the cafe has made a strenuous attempt to ensure that its menu is Sherlockian). The journal (four issues) costs $14.00 to U.S. addresses (and $18.00 elsewhere) from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).

50. Jan 09 #8: Donald E. Westlake died on Dec. 31. His first mystery was THE MERCENARIES (1960), launching a career that won him three Edgars and a Grand Master award from the Mystery Writers of America, and an Oscar nomination for his screenplay for "The Grifters" (1990). He employed many

- pseudonyms, and as Samuel Holt he wrote WHAT I TELL YOU THREE TIMES IS FALSE (1987) in which the sleuths (and suspects) included actors noted for playing Miss Marple, Charlie Chan, and Sherlock Holmes.
51. Roberta Pearson reports an interesting article on "An Eminent British Series: 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' and the Stoll Film Company 1921-1923", by Nathalie Morris, in the Journal of British Cinema and Television (May 2007). The full text may still be available from the University of Edinburgh at <www.eupjournals.com/doi/abs/10.3366/JBCTV.2007.4.1.18>.
  52. "We are the Sherlock Holmes English Speaking Vernacular; Help Save Fu Manchu, Moriarty, and Dracula." That's from Ray Davies' lyrics for "The Village Green Preservation Society" recorded by The Kinks and included in the album "The Kinks Are the Village Green Preservation Society" (1968). Credit for the report goes to Bjarne Rother Jensen, president of The Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark and editor of its journal Sherlockiana. You can see and hear The Kinks perform the song at YouTube.
  53. Further to the report (Oct 08 #4) on the "One Book-One Edinburgh" reading campaign, the program isn't restricted to Edinburgh; many other cities will participate, and you can see the cover of the new edition of THE LOST WORLD (featuring Wallace & Gromit) at <www.lostworldread.com>. The campaign was launched on Jan. 30, and Catherine Cooke has been invited by the Westminster Libraries to lecture on the book on June 15. The actor Brian Blessed, who explored Mount Roraima in 1998 (Apr 00 #1) is helping to publicize the campaign, and 200,000 copies of the book will be distributed without charge in the U.K. this year.
  54. "CERTAIN RITES, AND ALSO CERTAIN DUTIES" continues Jon Lellenberg's exploration of the early history of The Baker Street Irregulars; he describes it as "a compendium of surprises about the origins, customs and rituals of The Baker Street Irregulars and the men who created them," and it's all of that and more: the topics include Christ Cella's speakeasy, the Friendly Sons of St. Vitus, Edgar W. Smith's early history, an amusing story about the continuing battle between Adrian Conan Doyle and Doubleday, and other discoveries. The book has 84 pp.; $14.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($15.00 to Canada, $19.50 elsewhere) from the author at Hazelbaker & Lellenberg, 211 East Delaware Place #605, Chicago, IL 60611.
  55. Dennis Lesica reported on That Videogame Blog on Nov. 21 that Frogwares is planning to bring their Sherlock Holmes computer games to the Wii. Frogwares has four games available, with a fifth due for release soon; more information is available at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/sh>. The Wii is a home video-game console invented by Nintendo that uses a wireless controller so that you can play games on your television set. The name's pronounced "we" (it's "for everyone," the company explains).

56. Feb 09 #1: The editor is solely responsible for the errors, omissions, outright falsehoods, misrepresentations, misattributions, occasional insights, inexcusable inaccuracies, fleeting moments of genius, failed witticisms, and calumnies within. A wonderful disclaimer, cribbed from Peter L. Stern's recent catalog of New England writers and New England connections.
  57. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 20-22 will offer a new mystery ("Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Mistaken Identity") presented by Midsummer Night Productions, and a performance of Craig Wichman's dramatization of "The Speckled Band" by the East Lynne Theater Company; the festival web-site at <www.capemaymac.org/content/sub-age\_tours.aspx?id=96> has more information (the Sherlock Holmes weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years).
  58. Sorry about that: one new member of The Baker Street Irregulars was omitted from last month's report (Jan 09 #1): Jeff Bradway ("A Case of Identity").
  59. Discount book dealer Edward R. Hamilton also offers audio and video; among recent offers is a DVD ($7.95) with "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978) starring Peter Cook and Dudley Moore (one of the most unusual film versions of the story). Falls Village, CT 06031-5000 <www.edwardrhamilton.com>.
  60. "I am lost without my Boswell," Holmes said to Watson (in "A Scandal in Bohemia"). And "posterity has anointed Boswell Johnson's Watson," Leah Price wrote in the N.Y. Times Book Review (Feb. 1), in a review of two new biographies of Samuel Johnson. Al Gregory noted the progress from Watson as Boswell to Boswell as Watson.
  61. Chris Redmond notes that on Jan. 15 the British Museum celebrated the 250th anniversary of its opening to the public; the British Museum actually was established in 1753, when parliament voted to accept a bequest by Sir Hans Sloane of his extensive collection. He is credited with the invention of milk chocolate, and Sloane Square in London is named in his honor; he also is mentioned in the Canon: Nathan Garrideb said that "I shall be the Hans Sloane of my age."
  62. The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will gather at noon on Sunday, July 12, at Blackie's Restaurant in Chicago; Jon Lellenberg will be their featured speaker, and his topic will be "History Detective: Researching the BSI Archival Histories". Marsha Pollak (Sunnyvale Public Library, 665 West Olive Avenue, Sunnyvale, CA 94086) <mpollak@ci.sunnyvale.ca.us> will be happy to provide more information about the meeting.
  63. "Fifteen Weeks of Bees: A Laurie R. King Celebration" began on Feb. 1, by way of publicizing the new Mary Russell novel THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, with a wide range of special events: go to <www.laurierking.com> and click on the cover of the new book to see what a full-scale campaign looks like. "Laurie's Mutterings" are an interesting example of what can be done on the Internet: she has posted some of the corrected typescript pages, and some of the corrected proofs, showing how a story evolves.

64. Feb 09 #2: Further to the item on the symposium on "The Remarkable Characters of Arthur Conan Doyle" scheduled at the Lilly Library at Indiana University on Sept. 26 (Jan 09 #4), those who want more information and don't have e-mail should write to Lilly Library Symposium (attn: Steven Doyle), 9 Calumet Court, Zionsville, IN 46077.
  65. Darlene Cypser's dramatization of "The Six Napoleons" was performed for Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients in Denver last month, and her script is available online at <www.theconsultingdetective.com/sixnapoleonsscript.pdf>.
  66. Lyndsay Faye's DUST AND SHADOW (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2008; 225 pp., $25.00) is a well-written mystery about the pursuit of Jack the Ripper by Holmes and Watson; there's an excellent sense of time and atmosphere, and the dialogue and supporting cast of characters are nicely done. She has a web-site at <www.lyndsayfaye.com>.
  67. "If every man who owed his inspiration to Poe was to contribute a tithe of his profits therefrom he would have a monument greater than the pyramids," Conan Doyle wrote (in OUR AMERICAN ADVENTURE), "and I for one would be among the builders." Our new postage stamp honors the 200th anniversary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe. The striking portrait of Poe is by Michael J. Deas.
  68. "A Little Wodehouse on the Prairie" will be the theme the next convention of The Wodehouse Society in St. Paul on June 12-14, and there will be a Senior Bloodstain by The Friends of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson); more information about the convention is available from Kris Fowler, 1338 Wellesley Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55105 <www.northwodes.org>.

69. George A. Vanderburgh's "Battered Silicon Dispatch Box" now has a backlist with hundreds of titles, Sherlockian and otherwise, and you can explore it at his web-site at <www.batteredbox.com>.
70. Karen Murdock has forwarded a report from the Xinhua News Agency (Feb. 18) that in April VisitBritain [that's the new name for the old British Tourist Authority] will launch a £6.5 million campaign to attract visitors to Britain this year. "Film tourism will play a sure part in the campaign especially after the release of Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince and Sherlock Holmes, as 40 percent of potential visitors to Britain are inspired by something they've seen in films or on TV."
71. More movie news/rumors: "I had a few words with Guy. He could be offering me a role in his new 'Sherlock Holmes' movie," Paris Hilton said, according to various gossip blogs. And Steve Doyle reports that he had a chance to chat with Lionel Wigram, one of the producers of the movie, and author of the comic book on which the movie's based, and asked him to sign a copy of the script. Wigram wasn't aware that the script was available anywhere but was happy to sign Steve's copy, noting that the script is five versions out of date, and that "there are characters in the film now who aren't even in this draft." Availability of the "first draft revisions" script dated Mar. 14, 2008, on-line was publicized earlier this year (Jan 09 #7)
72. Feb 09 #3: Bill Rabe's phonograph records VOICES FROM BAKER STREET (I, II, and III) offered a splendid opportunity to hear excerpts from the proceedings of Sherlockian societies such as The Baker Street Irregulars, The Hounds of the Baskerville [sic], The Maiwand Jezails, The Amateur Mendicant Society, and The Old Soldiers of Baker Street. The records were issued in 1961, 1965, and 1983, and are highly prized by people who still have phonographs (and some who don't), and it's nice indeed that the complete set now is available on two CDs, with an introduction, explanations, and postscript by Mark Gagen, from the Wessex Press. The earliest recording is from 1952, and the most recent from 1982, and can hear notables such as Vincent Starrett, Edgar W. Smith, Rex Stout, Jim Montgomery, William S. Baring-Gould, Julian Wolff, John Bennett Shaw, Nathan L. Bengis, and many more; highly recommended. VOICES FROM BAKER STREET costs $25.45 postpaid ($31.45 to Canada and $38.45 elsewhere) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256) <www.wessexpress.com>.
73. Leslie S. Klinger has completed his SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY with THE APOCRYPHA OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2009; 178 pp., $19.95); there's an introduction by Daniel Stashower, followed by annotated presentations of eight of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian but non-Canonical stories and plays. As he did in past volumes of the series, Klinger plays the game that many Sherlockians enjoy: assuming that the world of the Canon (and the Apocrypha) is a real one. And it is nice indeed to have the non-Canonical material back in print in a convenient and interesting book. Available from the Wessex Press (postpaid prices as above).
74. James Whitmore died on Feb. 6. He was an early student at the Actors Studio in New York in the early 1940s, and won a Tony Award for his performance in "Command Decision" on Broadway in 1949, and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television; he was best known for his one-man shows portraying Will Rogers, Harry Truman, and Theodore Roosevelt, and he starred with Margorie Main in "Mrs. O'Malley and Mr. Malone" (1950), billed as "the wackiest pair of crime hunters you've ever met." The film was based on stories written by Stuart Palmer (a member of The Baker Street Irregulars) and Craig Rice about J. J. Malone and Hildegard Withers. Both stars were photographed wearing deerstalkers in a publicity still used to promote the film.
75. THE PROBLEM OF THE NINE SAZERACS, by Donald B. Izban and Patricia Nowak Izban, brings Holmes and Watson to New Orleans for a detailed discussion of Crescent City hotels, restaurants, bars, cuisine, and cocktails, and there is an added end-of-the-book two-page memoir by the publisher; the book has 78 pages and it costs $20.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada) <www.batteredbox.com>.
76. Ken Lanza spotted <www.alsolikelife.com/shooting/?p=711>, which offers an interesting discussion of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) and links that allow you watch the film on-line (courtesy of Hulu) and download a copy of the script. And a Sherlockian costume at <www.mycostumes.co.uk>; search for [sherlock] to see a complete costume (coat, hat, pipe, and magnifying glass) for £49.99, or only the pipe and magnifying glass for £4.99.

77. Feb 09 #4: Sarah Lyall's story "A Call to Action for Sherlock Holmes" ran in the International Herald Tribune on Jan. 23 and as "Is That You, Sherlock" in the N.Y. Times on Jan. 25, reporting on the up-coming Guy Ritchie film. And two letters were published in the N.Y. Times on Feb. 1, one from Peter Sokolowski noting that Jude Law, who stars as Watson, also appeared in Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" television series. And so he did, as Joe Barnes, in "Shoscombe Old Place" (1991).
78. Debbie Clark has spotted a "Sherlock Magnifier Watch" (item ES581, $69.96) in a catalog from Herrington (3 Symmes Drive, Londonderry, NH 03053) (800-903-2878) <www.herringtoncatalog.com>. The wristwatch has a flip-up magnifying glass, a built-in LED emergency light, and other features that Holmes might have appreciated (if he ever wore a wristwatch).
79. The Societe Sherlock Holmes de France reports that Monaco has issued a postage stamp honoring the 150th anniversary of Conan Doyle's birth. Monaco's postal service has a website at <www.oetp-monaco.com>. And the SSHF has an interesting web-site at <www.sshf.com> where you'll find reports on a new French comic book LES QUATRE DE BAKER STREET, Bob Garcia's new pastiche DUEL EN ENFER: SHERLOCK HOLMES CONTRE JACK L'EVENTREUR, Lucien-Jean Bord's DICTIONNAIRE SHERLOCK HOLMES, an attempt to determine Conan Doyle's height when he visited Paris and was photographed in front of the Hotel Regina (1.87 meters) (6 feet 1.6 inches), Pierre Veys and Nicolas Barral's BAKER STREET: LE CHEVAL QUI MURMURAIT A L'OREILLE DE SHERLOCK HOLMES [yes, that's THE HORSE THAT WHISPERED IN SHERLOCK HOLMES' EAR], and much more, including their wiki Encyclopedie Sherlock Holmes.
80. There's still space available at "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Sesquicentennial Symposium" at the Houghton Library at Harvard is now open; this will be one of the major celebrations of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Conan Doyle and the 75th anniversary of the founding of The Baker Street Irregulars. More information is available (and you can register on-line) at <hcl.harvard.edu/libraries/houghton/doyle\_symposium.html>.
81. "Fake" is a new play by Eric Simonson that was read at the Manhattan Theatre Club in New York in 2008 ("the Piltdown hoax is exposed by none other than Sherlock Holmes"), and it will be performed at the Steppenwolf Theatre in Chicago, Sept. 10 through Nov. 8, 2009 ("it's a time-traveling mystery drama revolving around a house party held by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle"). The theater is at 1650 North Halstead Street, Chicago, IL 60614 (212-335-1650) <www.steppenwolf.org>. If you want a more sensible description, try "alternating between 1914 and 1953, journalists and scientists set out to uncover who planted the Piltdown Man skull, and everyone's a suspect, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
82. Jeff Falkingham's SHERLOCK HOLMES: IN SEARCH OF THE SOURCE (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2009; 132 pp., $29.99 hardcover, $19.99 softcover) brings Holmes to St. Paul in 1896, ten years after SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE COUNTY COURTHOUSE CAPER (Dec 07 #5); there's a great deal of local history and color, and a mystery that isn't easy for Holmes to solve. The author's web-site at <www.cccaper.com> has more information about both books.
-
83. Feb 09 #5: Christopher Roden and Cliff Goldfarb have noted that the late John Mortimer (Jan 09 #7) did not defend the publisher of Lawrence's LADY CHATTERLEY'S LOVER, despite frequent mentions in his obituaries. Valerie Grove, his authorized biographer, and Tony Lacey, his editor at Penguin,

- explained things after Mortimer died, but that was too late for most of the obituaries. But he did successfully defend Hubert Selby's LAST EXIT TO BROOKLYN in 1969.
84. Hugh Leonard died on Feb. 12. He was a prolific dramatist whose play "Da" won four Tony Awards in 1978 (Leonard described it as "pretty nearly totally autobiographical") and a well-known acerbic columnist for the Sunday Independent. He dramatized "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for the 1968 BBC-1 television series that starred Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock, and wrote the play "The Mask of Moriarty", which was first performed during the Dublin Theatre Festival in 1985 with Tom Baker playing Sherlock Holmes.
  85. <www.bfronline.biz/index.php?option=com\_content&task=view&id=212&Itemid=9> is the URL for the latest version of Paul Spiring's "B. Fletcher Robinson Bibliography" (which now lists 279 items that he authored, co-authored, or edited); it's an interesting demonstration of how wide Fletcher Robinson's interests ranged.
  86. "The Year of the Hound" is the theme of this year's "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 18-19; the mailing list is maintained by Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@aol.com>.
  87. It's always nice to see Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian work in print: there is a new edition of THE POISON BELT (London: Hesperus Press, 2008; 124 pp., £7.99), with an interesting introduction by Matthew Sweet; he suggests that the real value of the book "is not the efficacy of its crystal-gazing, but in its exploration of the mechanics of early twentieth-century despair."
  88. Sherlockian societies in southern cities (Atlanta, Nashville, Birmingham, and Greenville) will hold their Fifth Annual Gathering of Southern at the Sheraton Read House in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 18-19, 2009. The conference theme is "The Year of the Hound", and Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@aol.com> is the contact.
  89. It's not Sherlockian or Doylean, but it's a delightful book: THE UNCOMMON READER, by Alan Bennett (2007, also available as a trade paperback and an audiobook); it's a fantasy about Queen Elizabeth II, full of philosophy and satire, and with a wonderful surprise at the end.
  90. Jean-Pierre Ohl's MR. DICK, OR THE TENTH BOOK (Sawtry: Dedalus Books, 2008; 220 pp., £9.99/$15.99) was first published in French as MONSIEUR DICK, OU LE DIXIEME LIVRE (2004), the book is a surrealistic exploration of Charles Dickens, the world of Dickensians, and THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD, with entertaining scholarship (real and otherwise), and it includes Arthur Conan Doyle's "My First Spiritist Seance", a report on a seance held in 1884 when Dickens spoke from beyond the veil (Conan Doyle did indeed write about having heard from Dickens at a seance, but many years later).
91. Feb 09 #6: There's an interesting new collectible for Sherlockians to pursue. According to Tim Walker's story in the Daily Telegraph on Feb. 14 about Guy Ritchie's new film, "For one scene the stage hands had to help mock up the massive hull of a ship at Chatham Docks," whispers my man with the clapperboard. "It was a tough, dirty job involving a lot of black paint. When they'd finished the job, Guy arranged for everyone involved to get a fleece jacket thing emblazoned with the words Sherlock Holmes. There was a flat cap, too--just like Mr. Ritchie wears."
  92. George Vanderburgh now has a blog <www.batteredbox.wordpress.com> as well as a web-site <www.batteredbox.com>, and he reports on his blog on recent activities, including his reprint of a poster stamp August Derleth created in the 1940s to celebrate his Sac Prairie Saga (with a nice photograph of Derleth). George will be happy to send one of the reprints (on request) as a premium with any book purchase, or to anyone who sends a self-addressed stamped envelope or $1.00; his address is Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
  93. St. Martin's Minotaur Books has acquired its first non-fiction crime book: Dan Stashower's account of the plot to assassinate president-elect Abraham Lincoln in Baltimore during his inaugural trip to Washington in 1861. The book is to be published in late 2010 (Lincoln was elected president on Nov. 6, 1860).
  94. Black Coat Press has discovered "La Mort de Herlock Sholmes, ou Bandits en habit noir", a play that was written by Pierre de Wattyne and Yorril Walter and briefly produced in Brussels in 1914, and have published an English translation as SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. FANTOMAS (2009; 176 pp., $16.95). Fant" mas, one of the most popular anti-heroes in French crime fiction, was the creation of Marcel Allain and Pierre Souvestre in 1911, and still has many enthusiastic fans. The play's a fine example of what popular melodrama was like, all those years ago, and an excerpt from the play is available at the publisher's web-site at <www.blackcoatpress.com>.
  95. Black Coat Press also has published TALES OF THE SHADOWMEN: THE VAMPIRES OF PARIS, edited by Jean-Marc and Randy Lofficier (2009; 309 pp., $22.95); the Shadowmen are the heroes and villains of French pulp fiction, and this is the fifth in a series of anthologies of pastiches involving characters such as Lecoq, Rouletabille, Arsene Lupin, Doctor Omega, Madame Atomos, and many others, In this volume the others include Sherlock Holmes, John H. Watson, Isadore Persano, and Professor Moriarty (not all in the same story); obviously not all of the characters are taken from French pulp fiction. One of the more unusual stories is Stu Shiffman's "The Milkman Cometh", in which the supporting characters include Boris Badenov, Natasha, Ivan Dragomiloff, and Tevye Milkhiker. And there's an attractive set of tarot-card illustrations by Michelle Bigot, with Sherlock Holmes as XVIII: Le Soleil.
  96. Brian Stableford's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE VAMPIRES OF ETERNITY (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2009; 346 pp., $24.95) is a greatly expanded version of his THE HUNGER AND ECSTASY OF VAMPIRES (Mar 97 #3); the story is a fantasy, involving time travel, space travel, and philosophy, and the major characters include William Hope Hodgson, Oscar Wilde, Dracula, and a Great Detective who will be familiar to Sherlockians.

97. Feb 09 #7: The Pondicherry Lodgers of West 44th Street, launched informally five years ago, are now more formal, with a constitution and with Christopher and Barbara Roden as organizers; they meet for dinner at an Indian restaurant on the Saturday during the birthday festivities in New York. This year dined at the Jewel of India, where Richard Olken offered the toast to Jonathan Small's wooden leg.
  98. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company have extended their CD series of dramatizations by M. J. Elliott and Chris Drake, with Jim Crozier as Holmes, Dave Hawkes as Watson and a fine supporting cast. There are now five CDs ("The Yellow Face" and "The Three Students", "The Mazarin Stone" and "The Veiled Lodger", "The Beryl Coronet" and "The Speckled Band", "Shoscombe Old Place" and "The Five Orange Pips", and "The Gloria Scott" and "Wisteria Lodge"), and they're nicely done indeed. Available from the Society (Mole End, Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England) at £5.00 each postpaid to the U.K. (£6.00/£9.00 to Europe and £9.00/$12.00 elsewhere); sterling checks payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks payable to Jean Upton (euros in currency, please).
  99. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Dick Sveum's "100 Years Ago" discussion of the special Sherlockian and Doylean issue of Collier's magazine published on Aug. 15, 1908, Tim Johnson's report on recent visitors, a letter from Georgina Doyle, and other news about the collections. Copies of the newsletter can be requested from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  100. Shades of Sherlock and Baker Street Collecting were published by The Three Students Plus from 1966 through 1972, and Steve Rothman has discovered them on-line at Brad Kjell's web-site at <www.shadesofsherlock.org>. The website is a work in progress, Brad explains, and he calls the journals fanmagazines, but they're fine examples of what young Sherlockians were doing in those distant days of ditto and mimeograph machines.

101. Taelen Thomas, an actor who has portrayed Jack London in one-man shows on the Monterey Peninsula, brought a special presentation of "Jack London on Conan Doyle" to a meeting of The Diogenes Club some years ago (Aug 93 #6), and the text was published was been published by the society as an 18-page pamphlet; Mike Kean has discovered a few copies of the original print run, and they're available for $7.50 postpaid (checks made payable to the Diogenes Club, please). Mike's address is 3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953; he suggests that you ask him by e-mail <sherlockkean@gmail.com> before sending checks.
102. I confess to knowing very little about some (well, most) aspects of the Internet, including Facebook <www.facebook.com>. Having heard from Steve and Linda Morris that they've created a group for The Red-Headed League of Jersey, I was intrigued to find five different Red-Headed Leagues there. And 199 Arthur Conan Doyle groups and more than 500 Sherlock Holmes groups, the most active Sherlock Holmes group being The Sherlock Holmes Museum in London, with (at the moment) 10,812 fans. Facebook describes itself as a "social utility," and says it has more than 150 million active users.

103. Feb 09 #8: Warren Randall's lapel pin (Dec 08 #3) was not the only souvenir of the excursion to Christopher Morley's Knothole on Long Island on Jan. 11; Warren has also published an attractive 16-page pamphlet with color photographs and descriptions of the places visited, and extracts from the writings of Morley, Ely Liebow, and Arthur Guiterman. $5.75 postpaid from Randall (15 Fawn Lane, South Setauket, NY 11728).
104. The Sun, a British tabloid generally regarded as less than reliable as the National Enquirer and other supermarket tabloids here, reported on Feb. 18 that Warner Bros. had told Guy Ritchie to reshoot five weeks of footage of his new "Sherlock Holmes" film because the studio bosses were unhappy with an early cut. And the news was spread rapidly across the Internet by people who likely also believe that Elvis has been discovered alive and well on the Moon. Warner Bros. quickly issued a statement noting that inserts and pickup shots, a standard part of film-making, were being completed this month, and the Hollywood Reporter ran that under the headline "No Reshoot, 'Sherlock'".
105. Paul Spiring has discovered something of interest pertaining to the history of B. Fletcher Robinson's collaboration with Conan Doyle in the writing of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: Fletcher Robinson's story "The Debt of Heinrich Hermann" was reprinted in The Novel Magazine in July 1905 with an introduction in which he wrote about Conan Doyle: "It was from assisting him in 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' that I obtained my first lesson in the art of story construction." There's more about this at Spiring's web-site at <www.bfronline.biz>; click on [BFR Matters (Blog)] and then scroll down to [Fletcher Robinson & The Hound].
106. Fox's television series "House" continues to be popular, and Mike Kean has reported Henry Jacoby's HOUSE AND PHILOSOPHY: EVERYBODY LIES (Hoboken: John Wiley, 2009; 272 pp., $17.95) with Jerold J. Abrams's chapter on "The Logic of Guesswork in Sherlock Holmes and House".
107. The second edition of Chris Redmond's QUOTATIONS FROM BAKER STREET, first published in 1994, is available from Chris (523 Westfield Drive, Waterloo, ON N2T 2E1, Canada); 52 pp., $10.00 postpaid (US or CA) and $12.00 (elsewhere). It's an uncommonplace book, offering a wide range of interesting, amusing, and occasionally outrageous quotations Sherlockians, Doyleans, and others. You get to choose your own favorites; one of them might be: "The Adventure of the Illustrious Client" is an unusual Sherlock Holmes story in two ways: it contains no mystery, and it is drenched in sex.
108. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere," as someone once said. That's also true of the Canon, of course, and some of the ways one hears of the Canon are quite intriguing. Chap O'Keefe's BLAST TO OBLIVION (London: Robert Hale, 2009; 160 pp., £12.25) opens with an epigraph from "The Valley of Fear", and with good reason: the book is a western, with plenty of color and atmosphere and violence, and a mystery that will not be a surprise to those who have read and remember Conan Doyle's story. The author also has discussed the book at www.blackhorsewesterns.com; look for [Blast from the Literary Past].

109. Mar 09 #1: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) will honor the world's first forensic geologist at dinner at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver on June 10, when local Sherlockians will have a chance to meet geologists in town for the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; if anyone would like to attend the festivities, just let me know.
110. The Smithsonian Associates have scheduled a Conan Doyle evening on June 17. Similar to their Edgar Allan Poe event earlier this year, the program will have Dan Stashower talking about Conan Doyle, and actor Scott Segar reading from Conan Doyle's work. The formal announcement should be in the Smithsonian Associates schedule in April, by mail to their members and at their web-site <www.smithsonianassociates.org>; the general public is welcome to attend (members receive a discount). There may be a reception at the end of the evening (the Poe reception featured a birthday cake, brandy, and a rose for everyone).
111. Variety has reported (Mar. 10) that Central Partnership's proposed Sherlock Holmes television series (Jun 08 #6) has been delayed; shooting was to have started this summer, but has been postponed six months because of scripting problems and Russia's acute financial crisis.
112. "I Like Mountain Music" was a 7-minute "Merrie Melodie" cartoon produced by Warner Bros. Pictures in 1933, with Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson joining briefly in pursuit of a thief. Tyke Niver has reported that the cartoon is one of the special features on a DVD of "Flying Down to Rio" (1933) issued by Warner Home Video in 2006. It's also available (of course) at YouTube, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Cq2i2ZnJF38>, but in very low fidelity.
113. Lyndsay Faye's first book-signing for her new novel DUST AND SHADOW (Feb 09 #2) will be at Otto Penzler's Mysterious Bookshop in New York on May 5; the book is excellent, and there will be tequila available at the signing, what with it also being Cinco de Mayo. Her web-site's at <www.lyndsayfaye.com>.
114. "A drug addict chases a ghostly dog across the midnight moors" was the onesentence description of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in a list of 100 novels everyone should read in the Daily Telegraph (Jan. 17), kindly forwarded by John Baesch. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES was #41, well behind MIDDLEMARCH (#1) and well ahead of THE LORD OF THE RINGS (#100).
115. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e_times09-2.htm>, with a report on and photographs from a meeting of The Noble Bachelors of St. Louis on Jan. 17, and offers of old and new Sherlockian merchandise.
116. Natasha Richardson died on Mar. 18. She was the fourth generation of the famous Redgrave acting dynasty, and her first film role was as a flowergirl in a wedding scene in "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (1968), which was directed by her father Tony Richardson and starred her mother Vanessa Redgrave. She went on to perform on stage and screen and television, and was a fine Violet Hunter in Granada's "The Copper Beeches" (1985).

117. Mar 09 #2: Phil Bergem has researched two British trawlers that were named in honor of Conan Doyle (one of them, he reports, sank a German submarine during World War I). A web-site at <www.hulltrawler.net> offers more information, and a photograph; click on [vessels] and then on [sidewinder]. Phil notes that both trawlers had engines built by Holmes, and he will gladly provide his article as a Word or PDF file <pbergem@att.net>.
118. Jeffrey Marks has been nominated for an Agatha (best non-fiction) for his ANTHONY BOUCHER: A BIOBIBLIOGRAPHY (Mar 08 #1). The Agathas are awarded by vote of those attending Malice Domestic on May 1-3 in Arlington, Va. The convention's web-site is at <www.malicedomestic.org>.

119. Philip Jose Farmer died on Feb. 25. He launched his writing career in 1952 with a story "The Lovers" that was rejected by two leading science-fiction editors because of his description of sex with an alien (the story won Farmer his first Hugo award as the year's most promising new writer), and he went on to write more than 75 books. He wrote for Luther Norris' The Pontine Dossier, The Baker Street Journal, and Baker Street Miscellanea, and his book TARZAN ALIVE (1972) began his complicated Wold Newton series that included a long list of Canonical and non-Canonical characters; he presented a paper on "Sherlock Holmes and Sufism" at a meeting of The Mexborough Lodgers in El Paso in 1975, and wrote humorous pastiches for Fantasy & Science Fiction. He also was one of the founders of The Hansoms of John Clayton in Peoria, and there's much more about his life and career at the website <www.pjfarmer.com>.
120. The photograph was taken in China, rather than Sumatra, but it's certainly a giant rat, displayed by a ratcatcher named Mr. Xian, who captured it in Fuzhou, a city on China's south coast. "Chinese bamboo rats are sold for meat in Chinese markets." The photograph was published in the Daily Telegraph (Feb. 18).
121. Alistair Duncan offered an interesting examination of the Canon in ELIMINATE THE IMPOSSIBLE (Apr 08 #5), and he has now turned his attention to Sherlockian and Doylean geography in his new CLOSE TO HOLMES (London: MX Publishing, 2009; 203 pp., £9.99/$19.95): Duncan explores some of the neighborhoods in London of interest to admirers of Holmes and Conan Doyle, discussing history and displaying contemporary and more modern photographs of buildings, streets, and notables (fictional and otherwise).
122. Karen Murdock has reported Richard Davies' interesting article "Cheap, Eye-Catching & Victorian: Discover Yellowbacks" at <www.abebooks.com>; click on [Rare Book Room]. It was in "The Boscombe Valley Mystery" that Watson "lay upon the sofa and tried to interest myself in a yellow-backed novel."
123. Merry Christmas: Daily Variety has reported (Feb. 26) that Warner Bros. has announced that it will delay the release of Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" until Dec. 25. The film was previously scheduled for Nov. 20, and it will now open the same day as Disney's "The Princess and the Frog" and Twentieth Century Fox's "Alvin and the Chipmunks: The Squeakuel" (unless, of course, the studios change their schedules again).
124. Mar 09 #3: Ken Lanza has kindly forwarded a report that Sam Weller's Zion Bookstore in Salt Lake City has renamed its Nancy Drew Mystery Book Club; the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Book Club will meet monthly at the Beehive Tea Room, with light refreshments and discussion of Conan Doyle's works. The Zion is one of the few remaining old-time shops, with more than a million old and new books on its shelves (some of them from Ron De Waal's collection), and its web-site is at <www.samwellers.com>.
125. "The murder of Sherlock Holmes didn't remain a mystery for long," Richard Abshire wrote in the Dallas Morning News (Feb. 5). Sherlock Holmes Sr., of Plano, Tex., was found beaten to death in his home on Jan. 29, and police have charged Ronald Steven Davis with the crime; in the days after the murder Davis was seen by several people with the victim's cellphone, and records showed that calls were made with that phone to several of Davis' relatives.
126. Reported: "The Secret Policeman's Balls" is a three-DVD set released this year by Shout! Factory ($39.95); "The Secret Policeman's Ball" (1979) was the first in a series Amnesty International fund-raisers that featured members of Monty Python's Flying Circus and Beyond the Fringe, Stephen Fry and Hugh Laurie, and others, and completists might want to have the DVD of "The Secret Policeman's Biggest Ball" (1989), which has Peter Cook appearing in a deerstalker in a non-Sherlockian skit with Dudley Moore.
127. "Sherlock Holmes and the Golden Vampire" is one of the more unusual Sherlockian films that were never produced; it was announced in 1975 with Frank R. Saletri as writer, producer, and director, and with Keith McConnell as Holmes and Alice Cooper as the Vampire. Script City (8033 Sunset Boulevard #1500, Hollywood, CA 90046) (800-676-2522) <www.scriptcity.com> offers copies of a first-draft screenplay ($14.99), and has many other S'ian scripts available (there's no shipping charge for e-mail delivery as a PDF file).
128. David Grann's long article "The Lost City of Z" in the New Yorker (Oct 05 #8) is now an even longer book (New York: Doubleday, 2009; 352 pp., $27.50) in which Grann writes about his attempt to find traces of British explorer P. H. Fawcett, who spent years trying to uncover a lost civilization hidden in the Matto Grosso in Brazil. Fawcett vanished on his last expedition in 1925, never to be heard from again, and there's now a long list of explorers who have tried but failed to find Fawcett's lost city. Grann mentions Conan Doyle, who met Fawcett in 1910, and you can read more about them in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin (1996): they quote from Fawcett's memoirs EXPLORATION FAWCETT (eventually published in 1953). Fawcett was in London to lecture about his exploration of the Ricardo Franco Hills. "They stood like a lost world, forested to their tops," Fawcett wrote. "So thought Conan Doyle when later in London I spoke of these hills and showed photographs of them! He mentioned an idea for a novel on Central South America and asked for information, which I told him I should be glad to supply. The fruit of it was his 'Lost World'." Paramount bought the rights to the story last year, and Brad Pitts plans to produce and star in the film; in an interview available on-line at Amazon, Grann said they have hired a screenwriter and director and "seem to be moving forward at a good clip." Grann also said that he is a "huge Sherlock Holmes fan," and every few years reads the stories again.

129. Mar 09 #4: Catalogs from Mark Hime at Bibliotopus are always interesting, and his catalog 39 ("Whims of Iron or, The Sins of Plagiarism, 1553-2000") offers two manuscripts ("The Disappearance of Lady Frances Carfax" for $300,000, and "His Last Bow" for $125,000), a Sidney Paget original portrait of Holmes (for $45,000), and the signed limited edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (1953) (for $4,500). Bibliotopus is at 120 South Crescent Drive, Beverly Hills, CA 90212 (310-271-2173).
130. Thomson Gale's SHORT STORY CRITICISM series was launched in 1987, and they have now published 114 volumes; volume 83 (2006; 474 pp., $207.00) covers four authors (Arthur Conan Doyle, Gabriel Garcia M┘rquez, Toshio Mori, and Salman Rushdie), with 146 pages devoted to Conan Doyle. There are articles and essays reprinted from academic, scholarly, and literary journals from 1989 (Kate Karlson Redmond in the Baker Street Journal) to 2003 (Steven T. Doyle in the BSJ). Most of the material is taken from other journals, and an earlier survey of Conan Doyle was published in volume 12 (1993). Thanks to Andy Solberg for reporting volume 83 (which also has one of his articles from the BSJ). Thomson Gale's web-site is at <www.gale.cengage.com>.
131. Harry Warren died on Feb. 21. According to his obituary in the Modesto Bee (Mar. 3) he began his radio career as a sound effects man on popular shows that included Basil Rathbone's "Sherlock Holmes"; he went on to work as an announcer, producer, and reporter, and retired in 1984.
132. Publication of the magazine Scarlet Street ended with the illness and death of Richard Valley, but Kevin G. Shinnick has launched a successor, Scarlet: The Film Magazine. The first issue (spring 2008) has interesting articles about Edgar Allan Poe and the 1934 film "The Black Cat", and a few mentions of Sherlock Holmes, including discussion of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in a review of Marcus Hearn and Alan Barnes' THE HAMMER STORY; the second issue has appeared, and a subscription to issues #2 through 4 costs $25.00. You can remit via PayPal to <scarletthefilmmag@yahoo.com>, or send a check (mention the special subscription rate) to the magazine (Box 2092, Cleona, PA 17042). Shinnick was interviewed about his plans for the Scarlet at the web-site <www.classic-horror.com>.

133. Forrest J Ackerman died last year (Dec 08 #2), and began collecting horrorfilm material in the days when studios would have thrown it away if Forry hadn't taken it off their hands. Some of his most spectacular items, one of them Bela Lugosi's "Dracula" ring, will be sold in a "Hollywood Memorabilia" auction at Profiles in History on Apr. 30 and May 1, and their website's at <www.profilesinhistory.com>; they're still working on their catalog, and I don't know if the auction will include the model pterodactyls Willis H. O'Brien made for "The Lost World" (1925) and "King Kong" (1933).
134. Bertram Fletcher Robinson, well known to Sherlockians for his assistance to Conan Doyle with the story of the Hound of the Baskervilles, was a prolific author who wrote articles, poems, and more than 50 short stories, most of which dealt with mystery, murder, and revenge. Paul Spiring has collected some of them, reprinted in facsimile from their first magazine appearances, in ASIDE ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: TWENTY ORIGINAL TALES (London: MX Publishing, 2009; 230 pp., £12.99/$22.95); there are endnotes for each of the stories, and a detailed bibliography of Fletcher Robinson's work.

135. Mar 09 #5: More on Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" film: "There's a fantastic sequence where we duel to the death on a half-built London Bridge," Mark Strong explained in an interviewer the Total Film, "It's a perfect way to end the movie, Robert and I hammering seven bells out of each other on top of this swinging bridge with Victorian London as a backdrop." Strong's character is the villain, Lord Blackwater, an occult-dabbling Satanist who (according to Strong) is based on Alastair Crowley. You can credit Peter Ashman for this report.
136. Ken Lanza found "Dartman's World of Wonder" on the Internet, with an opportunity to download "Rudyard Kipling: Selections the Jungle Books, Read by Basil Rathbone" at <rs311.rapidshare.com/files/33397460/Jungle\_Books.zip>. Rathbone did much more than Sherlock Holmes, and did it all well; this is an LP record issued by Decca (DL-9109) in 1962.
137. John Baesch spotted an unusual two-part pastiche in The Scottish Rite Journal (Jan.-Feb. and Mar.- Apr.): Michael Halleran's "Bro. Brother's Journal: Ignorance Abroad" has Bro. Brother visiting Jabez Wilson's pawnshop, with attractive illustrations by Ted Bastien. Both parts are available on-line at <www.scottishrite.org/what/educ/srj-index.html>, and you purchase both issues for $6.00 postpaid from the society (1733 16th Street NW, Washington, DC 20009).
138. The 28th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium, to be held in Dayton, Ohio, on May 15-17, will have the theme "The Merry Wives of Watson: And All Things Watsonical", and registration is now open; Cathy Gill manages their mailing list (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
139. Charles E. Lauterbach's BAKER STREET BALLADS was published in 1971, and his MORE BAKER STREET BALLADS in 1979, and the two collections were reprinted, along with LAST BAKER STREET BALLADS, by Gasogene Books in 2005 as THE COMPLETE BAKER STREET BALLADS (129 pp., $16.95). The book is a nice reminder of the days when many Sherlockians were poets, and there's also a fine introduction by Edward and Karen Lauterbach and appropriate illustrations by Henry Lauritzen. The book is still available, for $25.45 postpaid ($31.45 to Canada and $38.45 elsewhere) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256) <www.wessexpress.com>.
140. The modern version of The Strand Magazine, published by Andrew Gulli, has an interesting web-site at <www.strandmag.com>, with on-line content that includes a pastiche by Barrie Roberts ("The Disappearance of Daniel Question"), a story by H. R. F. Keating ("Wistaria Lodge") that's not Sherlockian but has Canonical echoes, and an interesting interview with Christopher Lee.
141. Shakespeare & Company in Lenox, Mass., performed Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" in 2007, and they've announced that they will present a new version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) from Sept. 26 to Nov. 6 <www.shakespeare.org>. According to their web-site, the play is "a Monty Python-like spoof in the best tradition of British beer hall comedy." If that sounds familiar, there's good reason: it's the play presented by Peepolykus on tour in England in 2007.
142. Mar 09 #6: Donald Thomas' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE KING'S EVIL (New York: Pegasus Books, 2009; 324 pp., $25.00) is the latest in his series of pastiches, with five stories that have Holmes involved with Arthur Saville (otherwise found in a story by Oscar Wilde), blackmail and forgery perpetrated by Charles Augustus Howell (who was an inspiration for Charles Augustus Milverton in Conan Doyle's story about the worst man in London), the siege of Sidney Street, and two other adventures.
143. Tim Johnson, curator of the Special Collections at the University of Minnesota, has reported in his blog <www.umbookworm.blogspot.com> on his trip to England (thanks to a staff development grant); he spent five days in Portsmouth, much of the time devoted to research in the Richard Lancelyn Green Collection. And while you're connected to the Internet, you should visit <www.conandoyllection.co.uk/doyle-collection-video.html> and play the four-minute video that Stephen Fry (Patron of the Collection) as made about Richard and Conan Doyle and the Collection.
144. Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is scheduled at the Park Square Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., May 28 to June 23, 2010 <www.parksquaretheatre.org>.
145. Dynamite Entertainment has announced a new comic-book series THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, due in May, written by Leah Moore and John Reppion, with cover artist John Cassaday and interior artist Aaron Campbell. There's an interview with the writers at <www.newsarama.com>, and the publisher's website is at <www.dynamitentertainment.com>.
146. THE CHILDREN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ben F. Eller (Raleigh: Pendium, 2008; 243 pp., $14.95), is a vivid reminder that there was much more to Victorian London than is shown in the Canon: the children of the poor were exploited and mistreated, and that's depicted in often gruesome detail by Eller in a story that involved Holmes and Watson in an attempt to prevent some of the abuse.
147. Further to the item (Feb 09 #7) about Taelen Thomas' "Jack London on Conan Doyle", his presentation has been reprinted in The Wolf--'09 (prepared for the Annual Jack London Birthday Banquet in Santa Rosa, Calif., on Jan. 17); available from David H. Schottmann (929 South Bay Road, Olympia, WA 98506) for $4.95 postpaid.
148. Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MORPHINE GAMBIT, a new pastiche by a new pasticheur, Jason Cooke, just published by Breese Books (185 pp., $18.95), available from Classic Specialties (Box 1958, Cincinnati, OH 45219) and at their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.com/breese.htm#MG>.
149. The Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh has announced its second "Arthur Conan Doyle: Edinburgh and Medicine Conference" on May 22-23. Owen Dudley Edwards and Andrew Lycett have been invited to speak, and the College has issued a call for papers (contact Dawn Kemp at <d.kemp@rcsed.ac.uk>); for registration details, contact Emma Black at <e.black@rcsed.ac.uk>.

150. Apr 09 #1: Further to the earlier report (Oct 08 #7) that the Baker Street Irregulars' triennial running of The Silver Blaze will be combined with the 50th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course on Oct. 31, if you haven't received detailed information and a registration from Susan Z. Diamond there may still be time to register (there's a limit of 60 people); Susan's address is 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 (630-227-9127) <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
151. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower (New York: Skyhorse, 2009; 378 pp., $24.95), is the latest in their series of anthologies of pastiches; most of them bring Sherlock Holmes to the U.S., and their authors include Lyndsay Faye, Lloyd

- Rose, and Paula Cohen (Harry Houdini is the detectives in Dan Stashower's story, Christopher Redmond has contributed an essay on Conan Doyle's first visit, and the anthology ends with Conan Doyle's own remarks about "The Romance of America").
152. Carl Heifetz reports two Sherlock Holmes 1000-piece mystery-solver jigsaw puzzles are available from The Paragon (Box 4068, Lawrenceburg, IN 47025) (866-752-3714) <www.theparagon.com>: "Case of the Fallen Actress" (#40097) "Watson's Inheritance" (#40098) cost $16.99 each or $24.99 for both. These are new versions of puzzles available ten years ago (Oct 99 #6).
  153. Al Gregory has reported "22 Cases of Sherlock Holmes in Science Fiction" at <io9.com/5178945>; Alasdair Wilkins discusses some of the cross-over genre, and provides video of items such as "Bravestarr" and "Elementary, My Dear Turtle" (that's from "Teenage Ninja Mutant Turtles").
  154. The Easton Press (677 Connecticut Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857) (800-243-5160) <www.eastonpress.com> still offers their three-volume THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES; first issued in 1987, it's a handsome leather-bound reprint (with color frontispieces) of the Heritage Press edition that they published in 1952 and 1957; $59.00 per volume postpaid (item 0135). And the PROFESSOR CHALLENGER SERIES in three volumes in a similar format, with an introduction by science-fiction author Robert Silverberg (2005); $65.00 per volume postpaid (item 1575).
  155. One hears of the dog in the night-time everywhere, but not quite like "the I.R.S. is a dog that doesn't have a bark." The quote's from Sen. Charles E. Grassley (R-IA), then chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, reported in the N.Y. Times (Apr. 6, 1991), and more recently in Playboy (Apr. 2009) in an article about the current pursuit of Barry Bonds by the I.R.S.
  156. Bjarne Nielsen has a new catalog on-line at <www.sherlockiana.dk>; click on [Antiquariat] and then on [Sherlockiana]. One of the items is particularly interesting: a copy of the first edition of T. S. Eliot's MURDER IN THE CATHEDRAL (1935) together with a copy of the second printing of the John Murray edition of SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE COMPLETE SHORT STORIES (1928) signed by Eliot; Bjarne suggests that this must have been the copy of the short stories that Eliot used when he quoted from "The Musgrave Ritual" in MURDER IN THE CATHEDRAL [sorry: the books no longer are available].

157. Apr 09 #2: E. J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR: THE REAL FORENSICS BEHIND THE GREAT DETECTIVE'S GREATEST CASES (Jun 06 #2) is now available in Italian, Korean, German, Japanese, and Braille, with Russian due soon; details on the translations are available at her web-site <www.forensic.to/webhome/ejwagner>. And there's a Kindle edition, so you can read it on your iPhone or iPod.
  158. I recommended it once (Dec 05 #5), and am happy to do so again (I seldom recommend books twice, and sometimes don't recommend them once): IMAGINED LONDON: A TOUR OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST FICTIONAL CITY (Washington: National Geographic Society, 2004; 192 pp., $20.00) is Anna Quindlen's evocative tour of literary London: it's a personal essay, full of insight and humor (and of course Baker Street and Sherlock Holmes are mentioned).
  159. Further to the report about Liberton Bank House, where Conan Doyle lived as a child (Nov 07 #6), Phil Bergem has found a web-site that has photographs of the renovation of the derelict 18th-century house and its conversion into the Dunedin School <www.dunedin.edin.sch.uk/page11.html>.
  160. Barbapapa is the title character in a series of French children's books written in 1970s by Annette Tison and Talus Taylor, and the series has been translated into more than 30 languages. One of the characters is Barbabravo, who with deerstalker, magnifying glass, and the help of his faithful hound Lolita tries to act like a great detective. There are films and television shows, and toys and other merchandise, and more information at <www.barbapapa.fr/gb/barbapapa.html>, and (of course) video available at <www.youtube.com>
  161. A proponent of intelligent design has cited Conan Doyle in a blog arguing against Darwinian evolution: go to <www.arn.org> and search for [deyes conan doyle] to find Richard Deyes' blog entry, which is based on the BBC-1 mini-series "The Lost World" (2001). Intelligent design is the most recent version of creationism.
  162. Further to the report (Jan 09 #8) on the Lost World Read 2009 campaign, all sorts of interesting things are available at <www.lostworldread.com>, among them views of the covers of both new versions of THE LOST WORLD (a reprint with a new cover of the Oxford World's Classics edition, and the children's adaptation with a Wallace and Gromit cover), the text of the adaptation and a study guide, and a free download of the BBC's unabridged recording read by Matthew Rhys.
  163. OSCAR WILDE AND THE DEAD MAN'S SMILE, by Gyles Brandreth (London: John Murray, 2009; 371 pp., £14.99) (New York: Touchstone/Simon & Schuster, 2009; 371 pp., $24.00 cloth, $14.00 paper), is the third in his series featuring Oscar Wilde as the detective in a new mystery set in London, Leadville, and Paris. This time Wilde's friend Arthur Conan Doyle is present only at the beginning and end of the story, but he has an important role to play in the real solution to the mystery. Brandreth is an excellent story-teller, with a special knack for cliff-hanger endings to many of his chapters and a sure hand in his portrayal of Wilde. The British edition is due in May, and the American edition in September, and Brandreth's web-site provides a fine introduction to the first two books <www.oscarwildemurdermysteries.com>.

164. Apr 09 #3: I recently received a query from a professor who said that he had an Iranian student who wanted to read "The Greek Interpreter" in Farsi and wondered if there is such a translation. And the question was easy enough to answer, thanks to Don Hobbs' "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes"; his electronic bibliography of translations is a splendid example of what can be done in the world of bits and bytes. The CD is in PDF format, now with 685 pages and 89 alphabets and languages, and with full-color illustrations of covers of many of the translations; a one-year subscription (with two to three up-dated CDs) costs $15.00 (to the U.S.) or $20.00 (elsewhere), from Don at 2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028. And yes, the story is available in a Farsi translation.
  165. "Sherlock Holmes, Lyon, et les debuts de la police scientifique" is the title of a conference scheduled by the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France on May 22-24. Details are available at the society's web-site <www.sshf.com>.
  166. Bill Briggs notes that McMurdo's Camp <www.mcmurdoscamp.wordpress.com> has a series of "story info sheets" that may be useful to societies preparing for discussion of one of the stories (they have done about half the short stories so far). Another source of discussion points for the stories is a collection of posts to The Hounds of the Internet electronic mailing list, at <www.sherlockian.net/hounds/introduction/intro.html>.
  167. The Notorious Canary Trainers of Madison, Wis., celebrated their 40th anniversary on Apr. 20, with a broadcast on "The Access Hour" on WORT-FM that featured interviews with members of the society; you can listen to the program on-line at <www.wort-fm.org/listen.php>. There's much more about the society at their web-site <www.madison.com/communities/canary>.
  168. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Vertigo Theatre (115 9th Avenue SE, Calgary, AB T2G 0P5, Canada) (403-221-3707) <www.vertigotheatre.com> from Apr. 26 through May 17.
  169. Douglas Wilmer's STAGE WHISPERS: THE MEMOIRS (Tenbury Wells: Porter Press International, 2009; 232 pp., £19.99) is a delightful autobiography, with much about his appearance as Holmes on BBC television in the 1960s, and a bit about "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother"

- (1975), and he has written about his Canonical recordings, his friends in the world of Sherlock Holmes, and of course his other work and fellow actors. There is also a limited edition, signed and in a special binding (£45.00); P.O. Box 2, Tenbury Wells, WR15 8XX, England <www.porterpress.co.uk>
170. Edward Judd died on Feb. 24. He began his acting as a teen-ager and made his film debut in "The Small Voice" (1948); he went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television, and was Barrymore in Ian Richardson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1983).
171. "What if Sherlock Holmes and Angelina Jolie had a baby and he grew up?" was the way Bruno Heller pitched the television series "The Mentalist", according to Peter Roth, head of Warner Bros. Television, quoted by Greg Braxton in the Los Angeles Times (Mar. 22). The series airs on CBS-TV, with Simon Baker starring as Patrick Jane, an independent consultant with the California Bureau of Investigation.

172. Apr 09 #4: Thierry Saint-Joanis has announced that the first room of the museum of the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France is now open to the public, in the town of Saint-Sauvier (about 275 km south of Paris); you can read all about it (and see some photographs) at the society's web-site at <www.sshf.com>. The title of the story is "Reportage: le futur musee de la SSHF" (and if you scroll down the page you'll find a neat Google feature that translates the story into a variety of languages).
173. Millard Kaufman died on Mar. 15. He was best known for his Oscar-nominated screenplays for "Take the High Ground" (1953) and "Bad Day at Black Rock" (1955), he also wrote the screenplay for "Ragtime Bear" (1949), the animated film that introduced Mr. Magoo, a character he said was based on one of his uncles (Mr. Magoo appeared as Dr. Watson, assisting Sherlock Holmes, in a 30-minute television program in 1964).
174. A statue of Castor Oyl in Sherlockian costume will be added to the "Popeye & Friends Character Trail" in Chester, Ill., this year, Michael McClure has reported. The Chester Baskerville Society is sponsoring the five-foot-high granite statue, which will be unveiled on Sept. 12. Elzie C. Segar, who created Popeye, was born in Chester; "Castor Oyl, the Detective" appeared in a "Little Big Book" in 1937. If you would like to honor a friend (or yourself), contact Michael (618-826-5125) <watson@egyptian.net> to contribute an engraved "brick" in the column ($150) or a larger site on the base ($500).
175. "The Curious Case of a Birthday for Sherlock" was the headline on Jennifer 8. Lee's story in the N.Y. Times on Jan. 6. The story ran in their on-line City Room blog, and it's a fine example of what can be done on line: there are 18 links to other sites and stories, Sherlockian and otherwise, allowing readers to explore for more information. Go to <www.nytimes.com> and search for [birthday sherlock].
176. Laurie R. King has written a Mary Russell short story ("A Venomous Death") that has been published as a 14x20" broadside with a woodcut by Katie Wynne by the Lavendier Press, signed by the author and the artist ($38.00 for the numbered edition, or $125.00 for the lettered edition). You can e-mail to the publisher at <mlavendier1@cox.net>. Laurie will hold a drawing on May 15 for a free broadside for people who purchase THE LANGUAGE OF BEES from an independent bookseller; send your receipt to Laurie at Box 1152, Freedom, CA 95019, or a scan to <info@laurierking.com>. Additional details at <www.laurierking.com/?p=2614>.
177. And her latest Mary Russell novel was published this month: THE LANGUAGE OF BEES (New York: Bantam Books, 2009; 433 pp., $25.00) opens in England after Russell and Holmes have returned from their adventures in San Francisco (as recorded in LOCKED ROOMS) and quickly receive a visit from Holmes' son Damian. And Damian Adler (Irene was his mother) needs their assistance: his wife and daughter are missing. Soon Damian is missing as well, and Holmes and Russell (with help from Mycroft and hindrance from the official police) are hard at work solving a complicated mystery.

178. Apr 09 #5: Bruce Holmes has continued his pursuit of Sherlockian philately (philatelic Sherlockiana), and his MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: ILLUSTRATED WITH POSTAGE STAMPS displays the eleven stories represented by color illustrations of postage stamps and covers; the selection is as usual appropriate and imaginative, and there's a short monograph on the Vernets, with similar illustrations. 3170 Joseph Howe Drive, Halifax, NS B3L 4G1, Canada; US$29.50 postpaid.
179. Actors' memoirs can be interesting and amusing, and one that qualifies on both counts is Roger Moore's MY WORD IS MY BOND (New York: Collins, 2008; 336 pp., $27.95); there's a chapter titled "Elementary, Dr. Watson" (with only one page about "Sherlock Holmes in New York"), and elsewhere a story about why Oliver Reed refused to play Moriarty in the film. There's also a British edition from Michael O'Mara Books (£18.99).
180. The Hampton Roads Virginian-Pilot reported (Mar. 23) that Sherlock Holmes "fancies himself an investigator and a business consultant," even though (as Evan F. Holmes) he has convictions for credit-card fraud, forgery, and uttering dating back more than 30 years. He spent more than 20 years in jails and prisons in Virginia, and was last released in Oct. 2007.
181. The Beacon Society (whose mission is "supporting and recognizing exemplary educational experiences that introduce young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories") has resurrected its web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>; you can see the sort of activities they carry out to achieve that goal, and learn about their new grant program. And there's a June 1 deadline for applications for its pilot funding project, the Jan Stauber Grant (details available at the web-site).
182. It's an interesting concept: MYSTERY MUSES: 100 CLASSICS THAT INSPIRE TODAY'S MYSTERY WRITERS, edited by Jim Huang and Austin Lugar (Carmel: Crumb Creek Press, 2006; 224 pp., $15.00), is an anthology of essays, about and by good writers; David Thurlo praises "The Speckled Band", and Aaron Elkins THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, and the coverage ranges from Edgar Allan Poe to Dennis Lehane.
183. A bibliographic query: Edgar W. Smith and Lord Donegall published a facsimile edition of Beeton's Christmas Annual in 1960, and there are three variants: with a red-ink stamp on the title page (numbered copies sold in the U.S.), or a purple-ink stamp at the end of the publisher's note at the rear (numbered copies sold in the U.K.), or without any stamp (unnumbered copies sold after Smith died). It would be interesting to know how many copies of Smith's numbered edition were sold: if you have a copy numbered higher than 186, please let me know.
184. THE FILE ON COLONEL MORAN: VOLUME ONE: THE LURE OF MORIARTY, by Vernon Mealar (Cardiff: Clyvedon Press, 2008; 81 pp., £10.00), focuses on Moran and Moriarty, offering Moran's account of his encounters with Sherlock Holmes (before, during, and after the Great Hiatus), and two stories about Moran's early adventures with Moriarty. The cost of shipping is £3.00 (to the UK and Europe) and £4.70 (elsewhere); 95 Maes-y-Sarn, Pentyrch, Cardiff CF15 9QR, Great Britain <www.clyvedonpress.com>.
185. Apr 09 #6: Spotted by Dave Morrill: SHERLOCK HOLMES & KOLCHAK: THE NIGHT STALKER, is a new three-issue comic-book series ($3.99 for each issue) published by Moonstone Books (582 Torrence Avenue, Calumet City, IL 60409) <www.moonstonebooks.com>; the story was written by Joe Gentile, and is a spin-off from the television series starring Darren McGavin (1974) and Stuart Townsend (2005).
186. Moonstone has also published DOMINO LADY: SEX AS A WEAPON, edited by Lori Gentile (222 pp., $16.95). The Domino Lady was a masked heroine who first appeared in the May 1936 issue of Saucy Romantic Adventures; there were six stories about her in pulp magazines that year. The new book is a collection of eight new pulp-magazine-style stories, one of them Nancy Holder's "The Strange Case of the Domino Lady and Sherlock Holmes".
187. For the completists: Robert Pohle's story "The Flowers of Utah" is included in SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA (Apr 09 #1); Pohle has written westerns, including THE FLEDGLING OUTLAW (1978), of which John Bennett Shaw once wrote to Pohle that he actually liked the book, but that "you do have everything in it except Bing Crosby as a drunken Irish priest!" One of the characters in the novel is described by Pohle as "a suspiciously Holmesian Pinkerton detective," but the novel is set too early to have true Sherlockian echoes.

188. The June issue of Realm: Celebrating Britain's Rich Past and Historic Present has Vicky Sartain's nicely-illustrated full-color four-page article on "The Chronicles of Conan Doyle" (in the magazine's Great Britons series). Box 215, Landisburgh, PA 17040 <www.realm-magazine.com>; $6.99.
189. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has the conclusion of an article on "Grant Allen & Arthur Conan Doyle: A Victorian Odd Couple" (by Peter Calamai), a report on "Arthur Conan Doyle in Winnipeg" (by Barbara Rusch), and other news from and about the collection; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>).
190. CSA Word (formerly CSA Telltapes) offers two volumes of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES on CDs, each with six stories read by Edward Hardwicke (and read well) for £17.01/$31.95; these are reissues of the earlier audiocassette sets issued from 1993 to 2000). The company's address is 6a Archway Mews, London SW15 2PE, England <www.csaword.co.uk>. Hardwicke was a splendid Watson in the Granada television series, and it's somehow comforting to hear Watson read aloud what he wrote.
191. Further to the item (Dec 07 #6) on the campaign to upgrade the protection of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, there's a new effort to rescue the house: Hindhead Together has launched a campaign to preserve the house and use it as a Conan Doyle center welcoming visitors to the Heathlands of the Surrey Hills area. They have asked for pledges of support at <www.surreyhills.org/Hindhead-Together.aspx>. They've not yet appealed for funds, but the Surrey County Council estimates that acquisition and restoration of Undershaw will cost about £3.5 million; The National Trust has said that it might be persuaded to develop an action plan "if there's any interest out there in taking the project on.
192. Apr 09 #7: Macmillan's Children's Books has announced a three-book series of the adventures of the young Sherlock Holmes, to be written by Andy Lane, who has used Holmes, Watson, and other Canonical characters in the "Doctor Who" tie-in ALL CONSUMING FIRE (Jul 94 #4). This is Lane's first book for children, and the series begins "in the 1860s with the fourteen-year-old Sherlock sent to spend the summer with eccentric relatives as his soldier father heads for India; Sherlock is drawn into a sinister international plot with a brilliantly imagined villain at its heart."
193. Charles Prepolec has reported that the German film "Der Mann, der Sherlock Holmes war" (1937) is now available on DVD with English subtitles (as "The Man Who Was Sherlock Holmes"); released this year by Televista ($24.95) and available at Amazon and elsewhere. The film's imaginative and amusing, and it's nice that it's now accessible to people who don't understand German.
194. Frogwares' latest Sherlockian adventure game for computers "Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper" will be released in May; you can see screen shots and much more at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/sh>.
195. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-4.htm>; the offers of Sherlockian merchandise include some interesting "scrimshaw" items (carved from antlers rather than whalebone or whale's teeth), and there's discussion of Meiringen (and meringue) and British coinage.
196. Reported by Dante Torrese: Beau Ties Ltd. of Vermont (69 Industrial Avenue, Middlebury, VT 05753 (800-488-8437) <www.beautiesltd.com> offers "Watson" bow ties ($45.00) and neckties ($55.00) honoring Conan Doyle, Holmes, and Watson in a "handsome black, brown, and tan woven silk plaid."
197. Players Press/Empire Publishing Service (Box 1344, Studio City, CA 91614) (818-784-8918) <empirepubsvc@att.net> offers a long list of Sherlockian and Doylean pastiches, novels, and plays, and Jack Tracy's THE ULTIMATE SHERLOCK HOLMES ENCYCLOPEDIA (including many books published by Jack Tracy from his Gaslight Publications).
198. Douglas Fairbanks played Coke Enneyday (in Sherlockian costume) in the silent film "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish" (1916); it has been available on VHS cassette, and was included on the DVD "The Gaucho" by Kino Video in 2001 ($29.95). Greg Darak notes that "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish" also is available in "Douglas Fairbanks: A Modern Musketeer" (2008), a five-DVD set with 11 Fairbanks films, issued by Flicker Alley ($89.99).
199. Greg also reported a two-DVD set "Discovering Cinema" (2003), released by Flicker Alley ($29.99); the DVDs are "Learning to Talk" and "Movies Dream in Color", and the first DVD includes the Fox-Case Movietone newsreel interview "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" (1929).
200. Reported: Tracy Barrett's THE SHERLOCK FILES (for readers aged 9-12) is now a series of two books: THE 100-YEAR-OLD SECRET (New York: Henry Holt, 2008; 160 pp., $15.95) and THE BEAST OF BLACKSLOPE (2009; 176 pp., $15.99) have Xena and Xander Holmes, descendants of Sherlock Holmes, pursue solutions to cases that their famous ancestor couldn't solve.
201. Apr 09 #8: Sherlockian programs continue to show up on animated television series for children: Holmes and Watson appear in "Trials of the Demon!" in the series "Batman: The Brave and the Bold" on the Cartoon Network and at their web-site <www.cartoonnetwork.com/tv-shows/batmanbb>. And Candace and Stacy are seen in Sherlockian costume in "Elementary, My Dear Stacy" in the series "Phineas and Ferb" on the Disney Channel.
202. Martha McCormack died on Apr. 11. Martha was the wife of George McCormack ("Hosmer Angel") and they would have celebrated their 50th anniversary in June; she was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as The Woman (2004).
203. IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN 2!: MORE NEW STORIES OF OLD-TIME RADIO, edited by Jim Harmon (Albany: BearManor Media, 2000; 224 pp., $15.00), is an anthology of stories about the heroes and villains who had so many fans in days gone by. There are stories by various authors about Vic and Sade, Baby Snooks, The Great Gildersleeve, Red Ryder, and Harmon's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Duplicate Daughter". BearManor's address is Box 71426, Albany, GA 31708 <www.bearmanormedia.com>.
204. Mentorn Media is planning to produce a television series called "John Sergeant's Tourist Trail" (about tourism to the United Kingdom) to be broadcast on ITV and then distributed worldwide. They want to interview Sherlockians from the U.S. and Italy who will be in the U.K. between May 18 and July 13; if you are going to visit, and would like to be filmed, you should contact Lindsay Walsh at <lw@mentorn.tv>.
205. Postage rates are going up (again) in May, and the cost of the envelopes, and the cost of printing, so subscriptions to the ink-on-paper version of this newsletter will cost more as well: $11.55 (to the U.S.), $15.30 (to Canada), and $18.05 (elsewhere).
206. The main reason why postage rates are going up is that the U.S. Postal Service's income continues to decline while its costs don't. The USPS has estimated that it moved 213 billion pieces of mail in 2006, and expects that number to fall to 180 billion in 2009, a drop of more than 15%. While some of that drop is due to lower telephone costs (many companies are now offering a flat monthly rate for unlimited calls anywhere in the country), the Internet has had a far greater impact (many people now pay their bills online, and of course use e-mail rather than mail letters).
207. The circulation of this newsletter offers a fine example of this: 321 copies were printed in Jan. 1998, and 166 copies in Jan. 2009. Readership has not declined, of course, since the text of the newsletter is available free on two electronic mailing lists and at Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" website at <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1.htm>.

208. I hasten to note that the decline in paid circulation has had no effect on profits, since the cost of the newsletter is calculated on a break-even basis. That seems to be the goal of most rational Sherlockians who produce things for sale: don't lose money.

209. May 09 #1: "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Sesquicentennial Symposium" at the Houghton Library at Harvard (Feb 09 #4) was a delightful gathering, with more than 100 people on hand for papers (scholarly and otherwise), a film showing, dinner and entertainment, and an exhibition of treasures from the Houghton's collections. The URLs <www.hcl.harvard.edu/news/2009/doyle\_symposium.html> and <www.news.harvard.edu/gazette/2009/05.14/11-doyle.html> offer two articles about the symposium. The exhibition will run through Aug. 8.
210. "SO PAINFUL A SCANDAL" unveiled at the symposium, is the latest volume in The Baker Street Irregulars' Manuscript Series; there's a facsimile of the manuscript of "The Adventure of the Three Students", and commentary on the manuscript and the story by Sherlockian scholars, all edited by John Bergquist. There's an attractive full-color dust-jacket showing a previously unpublished Frederic Dorr Steele drawing for the story, and the cost of the book is $35.00 ($38.95 postpaid to North America and $49.50 elsewhere) from The Baker Street Irregulars (3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953); you can also order on-line at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
211. The presentations at the symposium will be published as PAPERS AT AN EXHIBITION (not yet available, but it will cost $35.00 plus shipping (as above) and you can pre-order from the BSI. There will also be a limited-edition boxed set in three volumes, that will include SO PAINFUL A SCANDAL and PAPERS AT AN EXHIBITION in a uniform Harvard crimson cloth binding stamped in gold, and EVER WESTWARD: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND AMERICAN CULTURE, the annotated catalog of the exhibition, in a special soft-cover binding; you can pre-order now (the set won't be published until October), and only by mail, by sending checks ($203.95 to North America and $229.50 elsewhere) to the BSI (address as above).
212. <www.bakerstreetblog.com/2009/05/man-of-excellent-birth-and-education.html> is the URL for Scott Monty's informative blog about goings-on at the symposium at Harvard.
213. "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" is the title of the conference planned by The Norwegian Explorers in Minneapolis on July 30-Aug. 1, 2010. More information on the conference will be available later this year, and you can enroll on their mailing list by contacting Gary Thaden (2301 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55404) <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>. The conferences have been held every three years, with interesting events and good attendance.
214. Catherine Cooke notes that the Westminster Libraries has a "Gateway" website at <www.westminster.gov.uk/libraries/gateway/history.cfm#local>, with much of possible interest to Sherlockians, including "Old London Maps" and "Proceedings of the Old Bailey".
215. "Sherlaw Kombs and the Odd Impersonators" is the title of Andrew Lycett's article in The Times (May 22) about Sherlockian pastiches and parodies. He notes that at <www.fanfiction.net> Sherlock Holmes ranks among the top 20; Harry Potter leads with more than 400,000 examples, and Holmes had 1,517. There are many other fan-fiction web-sites, of course.

216. May 09 #2: Registration has now opened for the symposium and exhibition on "The Remarkable Characters of Arthur Conan Doyle" at the Lilly Library at Indiana University in Bloomington on Sept. 26 (Jan 09 #4); their web-site's at <www.lillylibraryholmesconference.ning.com>; or you can write to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278.
217. Conan Doyle's sound-on-film news-reel interview is widely available, as is the phonograph recording he made for The Gramophone Company in 1930. Who was the first Conan Doyle to make a radio broadcast? And when and where?
218. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has two tributes to Wayne and Francine Swift (their Sherlockian collection is now in Minneapolis), a "100 Years Ago" discussion of Conan Doyle's contribution to THE PRESS ALBUM (by Christy Allen and Julie McKuras), a "50 Years Ago" examination of the anthology LEAVES FROM THE COPPER BEECHES (by John Bergquist), and news from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter can be requested from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
219. Catherine Cooke spotted an interesting zippered tote bag created by Quotable (they offer other quotes from other authors) available for ($22.95) <www.quotablecards.com>; their affiliated at <www.fridgedoor.com/qutoba.html> has the same quotations on flat magnets ($4.95); both sites offer store locaters for those who want to save shipping costs. The quote, in case you haven't got the Canon memorized, is from "A Case of Identity".
220. Paul Spiring's continuing research into the life and career of B. Fletcher Robinson has resulted in THE WORLD OF VANITY FAIR, BY B. FLETCHER ROBINSON (London: MX Publishing, 2009; 300 pp., £75.00, $145.00). Fletcher Robinson edited Vanity Fair from 1904 to 1907, and wrote 15 articles titled "Chronicles in Cartoon" for The Windsor Magazine from 1905 to 1907, discussing many of the delightful caricatures that had appeared in Vanity Fair; some of the subjects of the caricatures are mentioned in the Canon, but his selections unfortunately do not include the magazine's caricature of William Gillette (Spiring reports that Fletcher Robinson planned five additional articles, and that the series would have concluded with "The Stage" (but the series ended when he died in 1907). The articles (and the caricatures) are reproduced in full color, and he has many stories to tell about the people who appeared in the series.
221. The manuscript of "The Creeping Man" has been delivered to the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth. Dame Jean Conan Doyle owned three Sherlock Holmes manuscripts (the others were "The Illustrious Client" and "The Retired Colourman"); she died in 1997 and bequeathed the three manuscripts to the British Library, a museum in Edinburgh, and a museum in Portsmouth or Southsea (to be chosen by her trustees). "The Illustrious Client" went to the National Library of Scotland in Edinburgh, and "The Retired Colourman" to the British Library.

222. May 09 #3: Faithful readers may recall the famous (perhaps infamous) Sherlock Holmes "tent joke" being voted (temporarily) the funniest joke in the world in a "Laughlab" experiment (Oct 02 #1); the joke came in second in the final voting. British psychologist Richard Wiseman explains his contest in a 5-minute video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=PAxw3vcwY> and tells the winning joke.
223. So: who was the first Conan Doyle to make a radio broadcast? It was Lady Doyle, in April 1923 in New York. In OUR SECOND AMERICAN ADVENTURE, Conan Doyle wrote that "My wife was asked to send out a broadcast wireless message, upon spirit-teaching whilst we were at New York, and she did so from the Westinghouse Instalment on the top of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. To me it was very impressive." And he reprints the text of her message.
224. You can still visit the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York, at 50 Central Park South, but (alas) it's not the same hotel. The one he visited was on the west side of Madison Avenue between 46th to 47th Street, and it was in its kitchens that Louis Diat is credited with inventing vichyssoise.
225. Warner Bros. has contracted with Gameloft to develop a mobile game for the new Guy Ritchie film "Sherlock Holmes" (still scheduled for release on Dec. 25). A mobile game is (apparently) a video game played on a mobile phone, smartphone, PDA, hand-held computer, or portable media player. This seems to be just the thing for those who don't have anything to tweet about.
226. And there's a new 2-minute trailer for the film, likely showing in theaters now. And if it's still available, you can also watch the trailer on-line at YouTube at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=X29IK0auNnw>.

227. The Camden House web-site at <www.camdenhouse.ignisart.com> is an interesting web-site maintained by Rachel Wilcox, Julia Huggins, and Oliver Mundy, with a "Pinotheca Holmesiana" section for artwork, an "Epistolary" section for Sherlockian scholarship, and much more.
228. John Patrick Bray's "Hound" (2005), will be presented off-off-Broadway during the Planet Connections Festivity, with 6 performances from June 17 to June 25 at the Robert Moss Theater Space (440 Theaters, Astor Place and Lafayette) (212-352-3101) <www.planetconnectionsfestivity.com>; it's his 90-minute dramatization of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.
229. An article in the Daily Telegraph (May 13) reports that "a deadly peril is creeping up on the wisterias of Old England: the wisteria scale insect." Wisteria has long suggested respectable Victoria villas, such as Wisteria Lodge in the Sherlock Holmes story, according to the writer, who notes that ordinary remedies have failed to thwart the villain, and yearns for the aid of "'the most indispensable man in the country,' Sherlock's more brilliant brother, Mycroft. Wisteria hath need of him."
230. Michael Cox died on Mar. 31. He wrote a well-received biography of M. R. James before joining Oxford University Press as an editor, and he included Conan Doyle stories in many of his anthologies, including VICTORIAN GHOST STORIES (1992), VICTORIAN TALES OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION (1992), VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES (1994), and THE OXFORD BOOK OF HISTORICAL STORIES (1995).

231. May 09 #4: YouTube has a seven-minute video of appropriate British landscape, with Laurie R. King reading from THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE, at <www.youtube.com/watch?V=Q-WLgFV05w0>. She continues on tour to promote THE LANGUAGE OF BEES; she appeared at the Westport Public Library on May 2, and there is a one-hour recording of her presentation available at <www.westportlibrary.org/events/podcasts>. And Rick Kleffel's "The Agony Column" offers an interesting one-hour audio interview with Laurie at <www.bookotron.com/agony/audio/2009/2009-news/041009-laurierking.mp3>. And THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, read unabridged by Jenny Sterlin, had been issued by Recorded Books on CDs ($34.99); it's also available as a download ($7.49) at <www.audible.com>. Laurie's next book, an immediate sequel to THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, is tentatively titled THE GREEN MAN.
232. The 29th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium, to be held in Dayton, Ohio, on May 14-16, will have the theme "Investigating the Ameri-Canon"; Cathy Gill manages their mailing list (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
233. If you haven't been able to see Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (2006), you can read the acting-edition script, published by the Dramatists Play Service in 2007; $7.50. They also offer an acting-edition script of Dennis Rosa's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" (1975); $7.50. 440 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 10016 (212-683-8960) <www.dramatists.com>.
234. "Privatdetektiv Arthur Conan Doyle" is the title of a 55-minute program on WDR3 (Deutschlandfunk) that was broadcast on May 16, about the George Edalji and Oscar Slater cases. It was presented by Christian Bles, who interviewed Michael Ross, Thomas Toughill, and Andrew Lycett. It was almost all in German, and you can listen to it on-line at <www.funkscreiber.de>; click on "Downloads" and the Passwort (case-sensitive) is [Berlin]. You can also listen to a three-hour program "Watson, die Jagd beginnt!" broadcast by WDR on May 23, also presented by Bles, who interviewed Ross, Toughill, Lycett, Alistair Duncan, Marcus Geisser, and Paul Spiring.
235. "It was twenty-five to eight as we passed Big Ben, and eight struck as we tore down the Brixton Road," Watson wrote (in "Lady Frances Carfax"); Darlene Cypser has reported a recording of Big Ben (striking three) on the Internet at <www.champsclock.com/downloads.htm>.
236. Joseph Fink ("The Martyrdom of Man") died on May 8. He was a chemist and a professor of marketing and management at Fairleigh Dickenson University, president of Plastodent, and an enthusiastic member of many Sherlockian societies whose members enjoyed Joe's delightful sense of humor. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1986, and was "Tonga" in the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
237. Jerry Margolin has reported that in the new film "Star Trek" (released this month) Spock (played by Zachary Quinto) quotes Holmes: "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, no matter how improbable, must be the truth!" This is an echo from "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" (1991), in which Spock (played by Leonard Nimoy) said, "an ancestor of mine maintained that . . ."

238. May 09 #5: BBC Radio Scotland has broadcast three new 30-minute programs to celebrate Conan Doyle's birthday; one hopes they'll be repeated. "In the Footsteps...of Conan Doyle" (May 18) featured Val McDermid touring Sir Arthur's Edinburgh (with assistance from Owen Dudley Edwards). "Vote for Conan Doyle!" (May 22), written by Bert Coules, dramatized Conan Doyle's campaign for Parliament in 1900 (John Sessions played Conan Doyle). And "The Lost World of Arthur Conan Doyle" (May 29) had Louise Welsh investigating how he became an apostle of Spiritualism.
239. Further to the item (Jan 09 #6) about plans to use wood from a 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh to make a violin that would honor Conan Doyle and Holmes, The Times has reported (May 19) that Steve Burnett has completed work on the violin, and believes that Holmes "would appreciate the fine Italian tone and the look of the instrument." Burnett played the violin on May 22 at a concert at the Dunedin School, and hopes to raise funding to carve a string quartet (two violins, a cello, and a viola to be played by a Conan Doyle Quartet.
240. Brian W. Pugh's A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (London: MX Publishing, 2009; 202 pp., £13.99/$22.95) offers a splendid collection of information about Conan Doyle: the chronology is based on books and articles by and about him, and public records, and where there are contradictions Pugh has noted them. All of his sources are cited, and there's also a chronological listing of first and early appearances of his work, as well as lists of his residences, burial sites of family and friends, and statues and plaques dedicated to Conan Doyle, Holmes, and others. The publisher is at 335 Princess Park Manor, Royal Drive, London N11 3GX, England, and their web-site's at <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
241. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE THREE POISONED PAWNS, edited by Anthony J. Richards (Cambridge: Breese Books, 2008; 204 pp., £7.50/$18.50), contains three new pastiches: Emanuel E. Garcia, who is an Oxfordian, presents Holmes solving a mystery in the text of "Hamlet"; Roger Jaynes has Holmes investigating a mysterious death and a case of blackmail; and Eddie Maguire involves Holmes with the Kaiser some years before World War I. The publisher's web-site is at <www.breesebooks.com>.
242. Reported: Thomas Bruce Wheeler's THE NEW FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON: TRAVEL GUIDE TO OVER 300 SHERLOCK HOLMES SITES IN LONDON (iUniverse.com, 2009; 328 pp., $22.95); a new and expanded edition of his FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON (Mar 03 #4).
243. "Finding Feisty Fungi" is the title of an article in Smithsonian magazine (May) about the discovery that fungal decay is affecting the three wooden huts built during attempts to reach the South Pole between 1901 and 1915. The article is illustrated with a photograph of the hut that was built at Cape Evans 1910 by Robert Falcon Scott, when he launched his ill-fated expedition (all five members of his team died). The hut still contains the world's southernmost copy of a book by Arthur Conan Doyle: THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, brought there by Scott and left behind when he began his last attempt to reach the Pole.
244. May 09 #6: Scott Brown's "The Giant Nerds of Sumatra" (with an attractive illustration by Alexis Rom) discusses Sherlockians, and some of the strange things they do, in Wired (May); it's the "mystery" issue of the magazine, and there are many interesting articles, including an interview with Teller (the silent partner of Penn and Teller). John Bergquist notes a nice summary of Conan Doyle's career (with a link to Brown's article) at Wired's web-site <www.wired.com/dayintech/2009/05/dayintech\_0522>.

245. For the completists: the nine volumes of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published in 1993, were revised and reprinted as a World's Classic (1994) and then as an Oxford World's Classic (1998); they're available again in the Oxford World's Classics series with slightly different covers, still displaying Frederic Dorr Steele artwork.
246. The new edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES was chosen for the monthly "Readers' Review" book club on "The Diane Rehm Show" broadcast by WAMU-FM (Washington) on May 20; the panel consisted of Carla Coupe, Daniel Stashower, and Peter Blau, and the broadcast's archived at <www.drshow.org>.
247. <www.abebooks.com/books/sherlock-holmes-professor-challenger/arthur-conandoyle.shtml> is the URL for an interesting (and well-illustrated) article by Richard Davies about "Arthur Conan Doyle's Life Beyond Sherlock Holmes" spotted by Ken Lanza at the AbeBooks web-site; if you scroll to the bottom of the page to find informative "More to Investigate" links.
248. Plan well ahead: "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Study in Scandal" is the title of the next conference in Toronto, scheduled by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, the Toronto Public Library, and The Bootmakers of Toronto on Oct. 13-16, 2011; the Canadians arrange excellent conferences, and more information will be available at <www.acdfriends.org>. Barbara Rusch maintains the conference's mailing list (36 Macauley Drive, Thornhill, ON L3T 5S5, Canada) <ephemeradiva@rogers.com>.
249. "Happy New Year," Raymond Chandler wrote to his agent H. N. Swanson on Jan. 2, 1952, "and many thanks to you for the tie with the Sherlock Holmeses and the bloody footprints on it. I intend to wear this sometime to a post mortem." The letter will be offered at auction at Bonhams in New York on June 10, estimated at $1,000-$1,500 (sale 17109, lot 3204). Alas, the tie does not accompany the letter, and I'm not aware of any Sherlockian necktie that matches this description.
250. Also to be auctioned at Bonhams, in Los Angeles on June 14: two capes worn by Steve Allen on various television shows, with a letter written by Allen explaining that "the plaid cape/coat was one in one instance when I played Sherlock Holmes on one of my comedy shows." (sale 17018, lot 6157, estimated at $500-$700). And at Knightsbridge on June 16: two waistcoats worn by Christopher Lee, one of them as Sherlock Holmes (sale 16808, lot 247, estimated at £100-£150).
251. Jun 09 #1: Fans of Mary Russell will want to read MARY RUSSELL: MY STORY, which first appeared in 15 weekly installments on her MySpace blog; it's an amusing 16-page account of how and why Laurie R. King was chosen to receive Russell's manuscripts and you can read it at <www.tinyurl.com/lfqd4t>. Laurie hopes to publish the story eventually, and you may see it in the February issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine next year.
252. And then there's a special-edition booklet of Holmes' PRACTICAL HANDBOOK OF BEE CULTURE (considerably fancier than the booklet Laurie provided for the annual-dinner packets in January), available to those who donate to Heifer International (one of Laurie's favorite charities); additional information is available at <www.laurierking.com/?p=3118>.
253. <www.tinyurl.com>, by the way, offers a handy method of providing web-site links that are too long to fit on one printed line. It's free, and doesn't expire.
254. The National Aquarium in Baltimore had an exhibition of "Jellies: Phantoms of the Deep" from 1996 to 1998, and they have just opened a new exhibition "Jellies Invasion: Oceans Out of Balance"; up to nine species are on display, including the Lion's Mane, and you can read more about the exhibit at <www.baltimoresun.com/entertainment/bal-jellyfish-a-5020,0,7213904.story>.
255. London mayor Boris Johnson has proposed that Scotland Yard's "Black Museum" be opened to the public; a new "Blue Light Museum" would showcase exhibits from the crime museum along with artifacts from the city's fire and ambulance services. Scotland Yard now offers only restricted access to the museum, for training new police officers and as an attraction for important visitors to the Yard, Over the years those important visitors are reported to have included Edward VII (as Prince of Wales), Laurel and Hardy, Gilbert and Sullivan, Harry Houdini, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
256. The above news from the June issue of Ripperologist, an electronic journal available at <www.ripperologist.info>; this issue also has editor Eduardo Zinna's detailed (and enthusiastic) review of Lyndsay Faye's new Sherlock Holmes novel DUST AND SHADOW.
257. Sorry about that: <www.acdfriends.org> is the correct URL for The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; they'll have more information on the symposium scheduled for Toronto on Oct. 13-16, 2011.
258. Cliff Goldfarb reports that the Canadian television series "Murdoch Mysteries" has been acquired by American Public Television. APT is an American company that syndicates programs to public television and has started its own Create TV channel. "Murdoch Mysteries" will be available to local stations beginning June 30; the one-hour series aired in Canada in 2008 and is based on Maureen Jennings' mystery novels and three television films, with Yannick Bisson starring as a detective in Toronto in the 1890s. There are two episodes ("Elementary, My Dear Murdoch" and "Belly Speaker") that feature Geraint Wyn Davies as Arthur Conan Doyle, and both are included in the Season One set of 4 DVDs available from Acorn Media ($59.99).
259. Jun 09 #2: The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will gather at 12:00 pm on Sunday, July 12, at Blackie's in Chicago; the luncheon will cost $24.00 (send your checks quickly to Marsha Pollak (Sunnyvale Public Library, 665 West Olive Avenue, Sunnyvale, CA 94086). The featured speaker will be Jon L. Lellenberg, discussing "History Detective: Researching to BSI Archival Histories" (explaining the detective work behind some of his most interesting discoveries about the BSI's origins and early decades). Additional information is available from Marsha at <mpollak@ci.sunnyvale.ca.us>.
260. Paul Spiring's campaign for a memorial to Bertram Fletcher Robinson in Ipplepen (where Fletcher Robinson lived) has been successful: the parish council has installed a memorial bench (with a plaque) in the village, outside Caunter's Close. You can see photographs at <www.sherlockholmes.ning.com>; search for [memorial].
261. And just so this issue will have something about the new Guy Ritchie film, Anna Pickard had an amusing review of the trailer (and with a link to the trailer, in case you haven't seen it) in The Guardian (June 2); here's the convenient TinyURL: <www.tinyurl.com/qqoqsa>. You can also see two imaginative posters (one for Holmes and one for Watson) promoting the film in the U.K. at <www.empireonline.com/news/story.asp?NID=25101>
262. If you've been wondering what happened to the "Sherlock Holmes" film starring Sasha Baron Cohen as Holmes and Will Ferrell as Watson, you can listen to a one-minute interview with Ferrell at the Hollywood Outbreak web-site <www.hollywoodoutbreak.com/2009/06/05/will-ferrell-still-on-for-sherlock>. Ferrell said that they have a script, and they're still talking about the film, but realize that Guy Ritchie's film is likely to be a hit, and might start a franchise, and they don't want to appear to be copying the film.
263. A reminder about the next meeting of The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association, at noon on Sunday, July 12, at Blackie's Restaurant in Chicago; Jon Lellenberg will be their featured speaker, and his topic will be "History Detective: Researching the BSI Archival Histories". If you've not reserved already, and still want to attend, get in touch with Marsha Pollak <mpollak@ci.sunnyvale.ca.us>.

264. Further to the item (Apr 09 #7) on Hindhead Together's campaign to protect Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, there's an Internet petition at <www.ipetitions.com/petition/undershaw>.
265. E.J. Wagner reports that Blitzwarez, apparently a file-sharing web-site at <www.blitzwares.net>, offers free downloads of Sherlockian books and games, including her book THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and she warns that this may be a web-site that attempts to spread viruses with downloads; neither she nor her publisher has authorized the web-site to distribute her book.
266. Many of the Sherlock Holmes stories were syndicated to newspapers not long after first appearances periodicals. One of the newspapers was Philadelphia's Evening Bulletin, and it was interesting to discover that the paper began serializing A STUDY IN SCARLET on May 26 at their web-site. The URL is <www.thebulletin.us>; click on "Arts" and then "Literary Excerpts".
267. Jun 09 #3: Jon Lellenberg has forwarded a report that the first season of the British television series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971) is scheduled for release by Acorn Media this summer as a set of four DVDs ($59.99). The series was based on anthologies edited by Hugh Greene, and the programs starred fine actors such as John Neville (Dr. John Thorndyke), Robert Stephens (Max Carrados), and Roy Dotrice (Simon Carne).
268. Michael Robertson's THE BAKER STREET LETTERS (New York: Minotaur, 2009; 277 pp., $24.95) offers an interesting approach to letters written to Sherlock Holmes: Reggie Heath is a London lawyer who has offices in the building at 221B Baker Street, and a lease that requires him to answer Sherlock Holmes' mail. Heath's brother Nigel, assigned to respond to the letters, discovers a 20-year-old mystery in one of them and goes to Los Angeles to investigate; Reggie, after his clerk is murdered, follows and does some detecting on his own. It's an interesting pursuit, and Warner Bros. has bought the television rights.
269. The new Pixar/Disney animation "Up" is a delightful film ("by tying thousands of balloons to his home, 78-year-old Carl Fredricksen sets out to fulfill his lifelong dream to see the wilds of South America, according to one synopsis). And there's a visual homage to "The Lost World": Fredricksen's goal is Paradise Falls, which flows down the side of a plateau that has an isolated separate pinnacle, just as in the book and the films based on it.
270. Edward S. Lauterbach ("Thornycroft Huxtable, M.A., Ph.D., etc.") died on June 3. He was a professor in the English Department at Purdue University for 34 years, and a long-time member of The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis. He was a scholar (Sherlockian and otherwise), and a fine poet (he was hailed at the poet laureate of the Baker Street Irregulars); his BAKER STREET BALLADS (1971) offers a fine selection of his work. Ed received his Investiture from the BSI in 1965.
271. Mike Kean reports that a special-clearance offer will be launched on July 1 at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> with a discount on the Baker Street Irregulars' manuscript-series volume of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Feb 02 #1) discounted to $25.00). Click on "Items for Sale" and then on "Deal Table"; the offer's limited-time-only, so if you don't have this volume, act quickly (details on the book are available at the web-site).
272. "Inspector Hector makes brushing fun!" (according to the Vi-Jon web-site at <www.inspector-hector.com>; they offer a pre-brush rinse and a fluoride rinse. Thanks to Paul Herbert, who noted an advertisement in the Sunday-newspaper inserts.
273. I've mentioned the John Wayne film "The Quiet Man" (1952) before (May 04 #8): Francis Ford, who played Sherlock Holmes in the film "A Study in Scarlet" (1914) played Dan Tobin (the old man with the grand white beard), and when the locals arrived at the newlyweds' cottage, they sang "Mush, Mush" (the music's now used by Sherlockians when they sing "We Never Mention Aunt Clara"). The movie was inspired by one of the stories in Maurice Walsh's delightful collection GREEN RUSHES (1335), which has been reprinted as THE QUIET MAN AND OTHER STORIES (1992); I recommend reading the book from the beginning, so that you'll know who's who.

274. Jun 09 #4: Amanda J. Field's ENGLAND'S SECRET WEAPON: THE WARTIME FILMS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: Middlesex University Press, 2009; 250 pp., £11.99) is far more than a review of the Rathbone/Bruce films (and for the British, the Twentieth Century-Fox films also were wartime films); the author sets the films in context, and she writes about them well. There is new and interesting information about the production of the films, and the studios' negotiations with Denis and Adrian Conan Doyle; it's fascinating to imagine films that Edith Meiser might have written (two to four a year, according to a proposal by one of Denis' agents in 1940). Field's sources include studio archives at UCLA, and the Richard Lancelyn Green collection at Portsmouth, and there's much to be learned from her enjoyable book.
275. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) honored the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver on June 10, when the visiting geologists were welcomed by members of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients. Our next meetings will be in Portland on Oct. 21, and in New Orleans on Apr. 14.
276. Gray Thaden spotted a photograph of Rounder's Arthur Conan Doyle, an American Staffordshire Terrier, at the Pedigree Database; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/lz4ovo>. Rounder's Kennels is in Texas <www.roundersuffians.com>.
277. "The Secret Life of Mrs. Beeton" is an 85-minute television film that was broadcast in Britain by the BBC in 2006, and the U.S. by PBS-TV on "Masterpiece Theatre" in 2007; it's available on a DVD ($24.95) from Video Collection (Box 1380, Ottawa, IL 61350 (800-538-5856) <www.videocollection.com>. It was Isabella Beeton who created the famous "Book of Household Management" (the book that gave Maude Crosse considerable concern in A DUET: WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS); she died in 1865, well before her husband began publishing Beeton's Christmas Annual (in which "A Study in Scarlet" appeared in 1887).
278. Video Collection also offers "The Life and Crimes of William Palmer" on two DVDs ($34.95); the two-part mini-series was broadcast in Britain by ITV and in the U.S. by PBS-TV on "Mystery!" in 1998. Holmes said that "Palmer and Pritchard were among the heads of the profession" (in "The Speckled Band"); he also noted that "When a doctor does go wrong he is the first of criminals," and the mini-series shows just what he meant.
279. One hears of Sherlock everywhere: in this case Sherlock Holms. Naomi Tanaka reports that the Hotel New Otani Plaza Chateau in Osaka has a Sherlock Holms Boutique; the boutique sells Persian rugs, original women's wear, accessories, shawls, handbags, and shoes; you can see more about the boutique at <www.osaka.newotanic.jp/plaza/usa/26\_sherlockHomes/MISE.htm>.
280. The recent edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET, with spectacular illustrations by Nis Jessen (Jul 05 #6) is still available, in the standard edition (E39.00) and a special deluxe edition, signed and numbered in a slip-case (E78.00); posters, postcards, and stickers also are available, and you can see some of his artwork at <www.mr-holmes.com/Default.asp?ID=381>.

281. Jun 09 #5: Edwin V. King, Jr. ("Captain Arthur Morstan") died on Apr. 11. He was a chemical engineer when he joined the Army at the start of World War II (and he served on Eisenhower's staff in the European theater), and after the war had a long career with Union Carbide. Early in his Army years he discovered that he shared an interest in Sherlock Holmes with fellow-officer Robert Keith Leavitt, who gladly arranged an invitation for his friend to attend the 1943 annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars. He also attended the 1946 annual dinner, and lost contact with the BSI but found the society again in the 1990s and reminisced about the early years for Jon L. Lellenberg's BSI archival histories of the early and mid 1940s. He received his Investiture in 1991.

282. Jezail Bulletin is the quarterly journal of Circulo Holmes (the Sherlockian society in Barcelona), and the latest issue (#33) includes an interesting a report on the Sherlock Holmes pub in Valencia. The pub seems not to have its own web-site, but there are quite a few hits with a Google search. The society's web-site is at <www.circuloholmes.org.es>.
283. Discount book dealer Edward R. Hamilton has some interesting items in his latest discount catalog: "Sherlock Holmes Collection" of six films on two black-and-white DVDs ($9.95); the Peter Cook/Dudley Moore "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on DVD (Feb 09 #1) ($7.95); Donald Thomas' THE EXECUTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Oct 08 #1) ($9.95); Martin H. Greenberg's SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA (Apr 09 #1); and Pierre Bayard's SHERLOCK HOLMES WAS WRONG: REOPENING THE CASE OF THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Sep 08 #7) ($13.95); his address is: Falls Village, CT 06031-5000 <www.edwardrhamilton.com>.
284. Ev Herzog discovered Cinni-Mini Crunch at her local supermarket, it's a private brand from SuperValu, which is the third-largest food-retailing company in the U.S., so the Richfood label isn't the only one.
285. Thomas Bruce Wheeler's THE NEW FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON: TRAVEL GUIDE TO OVER 300 SHERLOCK HOLMES SITES IN LONDON (Bloomington: iUniverse.com, 2009; 302 pp., $22.95) is a new and greatly expanded edition of his FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON (Mar 03 #4). The book offers discussion of each story, and the London locations mentioned in them; listings of locations near each underground and railway station, and along each underground line; as well as a few short walking tours. It's an excellent guide for people who want to explore the London of Sherlock Holmes.
286. If you know someone who is vision-impaired, there's a fascinating new product available from K-NFB Reading Technology (a joint venture between Kurzweil Technology and the National Federation for the Blind); a special Nokia cell phone is used for print-to-speech reading, and there's a translation feature as well. A real god-send for reading menus in restaurants and figuring out the denomination of currency, and of course for reading the Canon or anything else away from home. The company's at Box 620128, Newton Lower Falls, MA 02462 (877-547-1500) <www.knfbreader.com>.

287. Jun 09 #6: The summer issue of The Serpentine Muse has news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, including Dana S. Richards' Spooneristic toast given at the 2009 annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars, and Gayle Lange Puhl's amusing pastiche "The Case of the Curious Culprit". It's published quarterly and costs $10.00 a year (checks payable to the Adventuresses, please) from Evelyn A. Herzog (31 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
288. Greg Darak reports that Kino International (333 West 39th Street #503, New York, NY 10018) (8000-562-3330) <www.kino.com/video> has issued "The John Barrymore Collection" on four DVDs ($59.95); Barrymore's "Sherlock Holmes" (1922) is one of the films, and it's also available separately ($24.95).
289. On Oct. 8 the Royal Mail will issue a set of stamps honoring ten Eminent Britons: Fred Perry (lawn tennis champion), Mary Wollstonecraft (pioneering feminist), Henry Purcell (composer and musician), Donald Campbell (water speed record broken 1959), William Gladstone (statesman and prime minister), Sir Matt Busby (footballer and football manager), Samuel Johnson (lexicographer, critic, and poet), Judy Fryd (campaigner and founder of Mencap), Sir Martin Ryle (radio survey of the universe 1959), and [of course] Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (writer and creator of Sherlock Holmes). It can't be seen in the image, but the background of the Conan Doyle stamp shows a manuscript. The Royal Mail will also offer a set of stamp cards, an official first day cover (from Edinburgh), and a presentation pack.
290. Michael Chisholm died on June 27. He was a member of the Australian Public Service, working the Department of Veterans Affairs, and according to Steve Duke a keen amateur actor, crossword puzzle enthusiast, scrabble champion, founding member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of Victoria (aka The Elementary Victorians), and Chief Canard of The Dark Rumours of Moriarty.
291. The Alley Theatre in Houston will produce Paul Giovanni's "Sherlock Holmes and the Crucifer of Blood" from July 15 to Aug. 16. Their box office is at 615 Texas Avenue, Houston, TX 77002 (713-220-5700) <www.alleytheatre.org>.
292. The Harvard Film Archive will screen three Sherlockian double features on July 25-27, and on Aug. 2 "The Lost World" (1925), and Dick Olken reports that "all friends of Sherlock Holmes" are invited to Harvard on July 25 for "an afternoon of good company, Doylean scholarship, and Sherlockian fun." From 4:00 to 5:00 pm there will be "a casual lemonade/sherry reception" at the Houghton Library, with a tour of the Houghton's exhibition "'Ever Westward': Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in American Culture", followed by dinner on Harvard Square (Dutch treat) and the film program at 7:00 pm ($8.00); the two films shown will be "The Hound of the Baskervilles" with Basil Rathbone (1939) and Peter Cushing (1959). Dick requests that you respond as soon as possible (617-482-9995) <olken@post.harvard.edu>. The Archives' web-site at <www.hcl.harvard.edu/hfa/films/2009julsep/holmes.html> offers details on it's "Sherlock Holmes and Friends" series.

Jul 09 #1:

293. The Baker Street Irregulars will celebrate the centenary of Ronald Knox's ground-breaking essay "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes" (his parody of biblical higher criticism that gave rise to the grand game that Sherlockian scholars play). Christopher Morley, the BSI's founder, was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford and recalled hearing Knox read when Morley called a "new frolic in criticism." The international competition is open to all Sherlockians not already members of the BSI, and it calls for essays that "demonstrate originality in approaching unanswered Canonical questions or in resolving those issues that have been unsatisfactorily addressed heretofore." The deadline for papers is Oct. 1, 2010, and the winner of the competition will be invited to deliver his or her paper as a guest of the BSI at the annual dinner in Jan. 2011. Details on the contest (and a link to a PDF copy of Knox's paper) are at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>; just click on "Essay Contest".
294. Further to the item (Jun 09 #6) about the Royal Mail's plans to honor Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on a stamp to be issued on Oct. 8, the manuscript shown in the background is "The Maracot Deep". You can see the photograph at the Corbis web-site as <www.corbis.com> [search for DWF15-456300]; it was taken on Oct. 16, 2003, and shows Christie's manuscript specialist Thomas Venning examining the manuscript.
295. The Pub Sign Store at <www.sherlock.pubsignstore.com> offers an imaginative Sherlock Holmes Personalized Pub Sign (item 3252) for $95.95; use the coupon code [spermaceti] to get a 10% discount.
296. Ray Betzner has reported video at YouTube showing Robert Downey Jr. at Comic-Con International talking about the new "Sherlock Holmes" film, and appearing on a along panel with producers Susan Downey, Joel Silver, and Lionel Wigram, and co-star Rachel McAdams. The URL is <www.youtube.com>; you can search for [comic-con sherlock].
297. This year's Queen's Birthday Honours list included a knighthood for Christopher Lee, for services to drama and charity. His dramatic roles have included Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and Sir Henry Baskerville, and he has made audio recordings of some of the Canonical tales.
298. Edward Starr ("The Bogus Laundry Affair") died on June 21. He taught public relations at Hofstra University, served as manager of public relations at NBC-TV, and was executive vice president of Hill & Knowlton. He was a co-founder with Bill Rabe of The Old Soldiers of Baker Street, attended annual dinners of The Baker Street Irregulars in the 1950s, and received his Investiture from the BSI in 1959. His Sherlockian specialty (according to Bill Rabe)

- was the role of facial hair in the Canon, with unpublished papers that included "Those Whiskers Weren't False" and "Why Sherlock Holmes Never Used an Electric Razor".
299. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-6.htm; there's a nicely illustrated report on Vin Mariani, an offer of attractive "Holmes and Irene" dolls created by Marcy Mahle, and other interesting Sherlockiana.

300. Jul 09 #2: The Occupants of the Empty House have been publishing The Camden House Journal monthly for more than 30 years, and have presented many of the interesting papers delivered at their meetings. Now THE CAMDEN HOUSE JOURNAL 1979-2008: AN INDEX TO THE MONTHLY MUSING lists each issue by editor and publication date, by author, and by subject. The cost is $20.95 postpaid ($22.95 outside the U.S.), from the Occupants (c/o Stan Tinsley, Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999). They also offer THE CAMDEN HOUSE COOKBOOK 3: RECIPES FROM THE EMPTY HOUSE; $11.00 postpaid ($12.00 outside the U.S.) from the same address.
301. Forecast for November: Roger Straughan's A STUDY IN SURVIVAL: CONAN DOYLE SOLVES THE FINAL PROBLEM (O Books); "Here is dramatic new evidence for the survival of our individual personalities after death. Providing this is an astonishing series of recent communications from a man who died in 1930 and whose mission, when alive, was to bring just such evidence to the notice of the widest possible audience: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
302. I don't recall ever seeing a report on a set of six Royal Doulton miniature character jugs showing Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, Mrs. Hudson, Prof. Moriarty, Inspector Lestrade, and Jefferson Hope; designed by William Harper, the set was issued in 1995 in a limited edition of 2500 that's now advertised on the Internet for $450 (it's also called the Sherlock Holmes Tinies Collection). You can see a better picture at www.doultonpriceguide.com if you search for [sherlock]. They also show a Royal Doulton Sherlock Holmes book-end, designed by Martyn Aylcock and issued 1996-2001, that sells for about $150. Sherlockian themes have been popular with Royal Doulton for many years, startwith "The Sleuth" in 1972 and continuing with "The Detective" in 1976.
303. Barnes & Noble no longer offers its "Green Quote Tote Bag" with "25 quotations from timeless novels" printed on it (Dec 05 #5), but the stores still offer a similar (free) plastic bag for carrying your books away; one of the quotations is "Exactly, my dear Watson," which is indeed taken from a Sherlock Holmes novel. Which one?
304. Karen Ballard has reported that Mark Churchill has donated his father's delightful "evidence boxes" to Watson's Tin Box; it's grand that Paul's elaborate creations, one for each of the Canonical tales, will be preserved and displayed at meetings of the society, and (eventually) elsewhere.
305. "Las Casos Misteriosas de Charlotte Holmes" (from East West Entertainment) is a Spanish-dubbed version of the British videocassette "Sherlock and Me" (distributed by Portland Films in 2002), which had two episodes of a Japanese animated series plus live introductions that feature Michael Evans as Holmes and Bernard Fox as Watson, and with Charlotte said to be the niece of Sherlock Holmes. The Japanese series, "Jouo Heika no Petite Ange", was produced by Nippon Animation, with 26 25-minute episodes broadcast in 1977 and 1978; Charlotte is a plucky young detective who assists Scotland Yard, but she's not said to be related to Sherlock Holmes. Jennie Paton reports that she found the new DVD at a Dollar Store; it's likely available at other discount outlets.

306. Jul 09 #3: www.sshf.com/index.php3?file=news&num=696 is the URL for an interesting (and colorfully-illustrated) article in Le Figaro (July 10) about Thierry Saint-Joanis titled "Les extravagants: Le francais qui se prent pour Sherlock Holmes"; Thierry was recently in England to be taped for an episode of a mini-series "John Sergeant's Tourist Trail" that is scheduled for ITV.
307. "Exactly, my dear Watson," will be found in "The Valley of Fear" (as well as "The Missing Three-Quarter" and "Wisteria Lodge").
308. "Five minutes had not passed before we were flying in a hansom down Baker Street," Watson reported (in "Lady Frances Carfax"). "But even so it was twenty-five to eight as we passed Big Ben, and eight struck as we tore down the Brixton Road." Big Ben's 150th birthday was celebrated this month; the bell first pealed on July 11, 1859, only a few weeks after the clock in the tower above the Houses of Parliament began keeping time. "Big Ben" is the nickname for the Great Bell, but many people now refer to the bell, clock, and tower as Big Ben.
309. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Phipps Center for the Arts (109 Locust Street, Hudson, WI 54106) (715-386-2305) www.thehipps.org, Sept. 17-27.
310. Paul Spiring's BOBBLES & PLUM: FOUR SATIRICAL PLAYLETS BY BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON AND P.G. WODEHOUSE (London: MX Publishing, 2009; 108 pp., £9.99/ $16.95) is the result of the discovery of an interesting collaboration; the playlets were published in the Daily Express (1903), Vanity Fair (1904 and 1905), and the World (1907), and the political satires have been reprinted in facsimile from the original sources, with a foreword and introduction by three Wodehouseans (Hilary Bruce, Norman Murphy, and Tony Ring), and commentary and annotations by Spiring.
311. Ed. Lange's "Sherlock's Secret Life" is being performed at the Coaster Theatre Playhouse through Sept. 19; 108 North Hemlock Street, Cannon Beach, OR 97110 (503-426-1242) www.coastertheatre.com.
312. "Finkelstein's Castle" is described as "a(nother) one-man operatic thriller" and "an epic, tongue-in-cheek, Sherlock Holmes 'whodunnit' that takes us from deserted castles in Scotland to a sinister hydro-demolition operating in New York via the half-submerged town of Gallumphing-on-Twee." The play was written and composed by Pete M. Wyer and is performed by cellist Matthew Sharp; it's scheduled at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival (Aug. 7-31) and the New Theatre Royal in Portsmouth (Oct. 23); you'll find more information about the show at www.sharpwire.org.
313. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Tim Johnson's report on his visit to London and Portsmouth, Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" discussion of Robin E. Dunbar and THE DETECTIVE BUSINESS, and Dick Sveum's "50 Years Ago" essay on Evelyn Waugh and Ronald Knox, plus other news about the collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minne-apolis, MN 55455) svaum001@tc.umn.edu.

314. Jul 09 #4: Further to the item (Apr 08 #3) on Edinburgh's new tram line, the bronze statue of Sherlock Holmes in Picardy Place has been moved into storage for two years; the statue will return in 2011, although not in the same place. But there's more to the story: workmen moving the statue found a time capsule underneath the statue, installed by the Federaation of Master Builders, who funded the statue in 1991; the Federation's officials have refused to reveal what's in the time capsule, which will be stored in a vault and buried again when work is completed.
315. Articles about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes turn up in interesting magazines, such as mental_floss; the July-August issue contains Ransom Riggs' "The Surreal Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. To see what else the magazine does, look for it on newsstands or in bookstores, or at their web-site www.mentalfloss.com.
316. "FETCH! with Ruff Ruffman", a 30-minute children's program that's produced by WGBH-TV (Boston) and broadcast by PBS-TV, is getting ready for its fifth season, which will include a segment about a visit by contestants Emmie and Marco (in Sherlockian costume) to the Museum of Natural History at Amherst College. There's a report on the visit (with photographs of Emmie and Marco) at www.amherst.edu/aboutamherst/news/campusbuzz/node/117907.

317. The N.Y. Times web-site's section on obituaries has a "From the Archives" feature that each month links to past obituaries published each month, and in July they had "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Creator of Sherlock Holmes, Dies at 71 (July 7, 1930). It was a long tribute, and you can read it on-line at <www.nytimes.com/learning.general/onthisday/bday/0522.html>.
318. "Clues Beyond Sherlock Holmes: The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at Michigan" is the title of an exhibition at the University of Michigan's Special Collections Library in Ann Arbor, through Aug. 31. The exhibition opened on Apr. 27, and there was a special celebration on May 17 that honored Dr. Philip Parker, who donated the collection; the celebration included a reception featuring foods mentioned in Conan Doyle's books. Thanks to Christie Allen, who reported the announcement of the celebration.
319. The "Sherlock Holmes and Friends" film series at the Harvard Film Archive (Jun 09 #6) was promoted with a long article in the Boston Globe (July 19), and the paper had an amusing "who played Holmes" quiz (with photographs) at its web-site at <www.boston.com/ae/movies/gallery/holmesquiz>.
320. Variety reported on July 15 that the BBC has approved production of three 90-minute episodes of a "comic reworking of Sherlock Holmes" co-created by mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat, and starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman as Holmes and Watson; Cumberbatch played detective Luke Fitzwilliam in the recent PBS-TV broadcast of "Miss Marple: Murder Is Easy".
321. It's commonly believed that frequent fliers don't watch the instructional videos the airlines use to explain safety and such, but Al Gregory, returning to the U.S. from France on a Continental flight, both saw and observed an in-flight video explaining how to fill out a U.S. Customs form. The instructions started out with filling in your name and address, and the address used was "221b Baker Street, Brooklyn, NY".

322. Jul 09 #5: Nancy Springer's series about Enola Holmes has now reached five novels, all imaginative and entertaining. Enola, 14 years old, is the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock, hiding from them in London and solving mysteries on her own. The series is published by Philomel (a division of the Penguin Young Readers Group), and THE CASE OF THE PECULIAR PINK FAN (2008) and THE CASE OF THE CRYPTIC CRINOLINE (2009) are the most recent titles.
323. The Stanford Theatre in Palo Alto is a grand old (and carefully restored) movie theater that opened in 1925; they had a Sherlock Holmes and British Classics film program in 2001, and this year they're celebrating the 70th anniversary of the first Basil Rathbone films, screening "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" as a double bill on Aug. 25-27. The theater's address is 221 University Avenue (650-324-3700) and their web-site's at <www.stanfordtheatre.org>; Randall Stock's web-site at <www.bestofsherlock.com/movies/stanford.htm> has more information about the theater's Sherlockian history.
324. The Chautauqua Silent Film Series is held each year in Boulder, Colo., at the Chautauqua Concert Hall, which was built in 1898 as part of the nationwide Chautauqua movement; this year's series will include "The Lost World" (1925) on Aug. 26, and there's more information and a complete film schedule at <www.chautauqua.com/silent\_film\_series.htm>.
325. "A Gallery of Rogues" is the theme for this year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" (sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies) at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 7; the festivities will begin with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00 am, and end at 1:00 pm. As in the past, there's no charge; the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
326. "The Beach Invasion with a Sting in the Tail" was the headline on a story in the Sunday Telegraph (June 14), spotted by John Baesch: blooms of jellyfish covering 62 square miles have been spotted off the coast of Wales, and among them were the lion's mane. The number of jellyfish in British waters has increased sharply in recent years, according to experts, possibly as a result of warming seas linked to climate change.
327. John has also noted a story headlined "Pupils Expelled After Tryst in Dormitory" in the Daily Telegraph (June 13): two pupils who were caught in bed together at Stonyhurst College have been asked to leave the school; the boy and girl were caught together in bed by a member of staff. Stonyhurst now charges £22,000 a year, rather more than when Conan Doyle attended (and the article mentioned that he was a former pupil). Needless to say, the school wasn't coeducational in those long-ago days.
328. Stephen Clarkson's THE CANONICAL COMPENDIUM (Jan 01 #5) started as a joint project with the late Bill Fleischauer, and the results of their research are both interesting and useful, with citations for five different editions of the Canon; long out of print, it's now available from Christopher Roden as a PDF file for $5.00 (electronic download) or $13.50 postpaid (CD). You can pay by credit card, PayPal, or personal check; Christopher Roden (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <sirhenry@telus.net>.
329. Jul 09 #6: Doug Greene reports that Crippen & Landru have added THE CASEBOOK OF GREGORY HOOD (258 pp., $29.00 cloth or $20.00 paper) to their "Lost Classics" series; the book is a collection of 14 previously unpublished scripts written by Anthony Boucher and Denis Green. And there's a tenuous Sherlockian connection: "The Casebook of Gregory Hood" began on the Mutual Broadcasting System on June 3, 1946, as a replacement for "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (also written by Boucher and Green) when Basil Rathbone left that series. "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" debuted as a new series on WJZ/ABC on Oct. 12, 1946, starring Tom Conway as Holmes and with scripts by Green and Boucher. Crippen & Landru' address is Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (877-622-6656) <www.crippenlandru.com>.
330. Forecast: "The Private Wife of Sherlock Holmes", a new Irene Adler novella by Carole Nelson Douglas, in SEX, LIES, AND PRIVATE EYES (from Moonstone). Her debut novel in the Irene Adler series, GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES (1991), will be reissued by Tor as a trade paperback with a new cover in November.
331. The July-August issue of Dollhouse Miniatures magazine has a photograph of an attractive lady in Edwardian costume that was created by Cindy Gates for Deb Weissler's Sherlock Holmes roombox. The magazine is the successor to Nutshell News, to which the late Dee Snyder was a contributing editor; the issue costs $6.95, and the address is 68132 250th Avenue, Kasson, MN 55944 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
332. The cape that Christopher Lee wore as Dracula sold for £26,400 (including the buyer's premium at an auction at Bonham's in Knightsbridge on June 16; The same sale (May 09 #6) includes two waistcoats worn by Lee, one of them as Sherlock Holmes, estimated at £100-£150, sold for £360. Another auction lot, at Bonhams in Los Angeles on June 14, had two capes worn by Steve Allen on various television shows, one of them as Sherlock Holmes, estimated at $500-$700, sold for $122. The letter Raymond Chandler wrote in 1952 to thank his agent for a Sherlockian tie, at auction at Bonhams in New York on June 10, estimated at $1,000-$1,500, did not sell.
333. The Sept. issue of British Heritage has Sian Ellis' well-illustrated article "On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes", as well as a quote from the Canon in "A Commonplace Book" at the end of the magazine. And there's a brief item noting that the South Downs has been designated as a National Park; there's a good map at <www.wikipedia.org>, and the park extends from Winchester on the west to Eastbourne on the east. It's not clear whether the South Downs National Park includes the site of Sherlock Holmes' retirement cottage.
334. The city of Portsmouth recently completed restoration of the bells in the Guildhall Clock Tower, and held a contest to choose names for four of the bells (the largest bell already is inscribed in honor of Queen Victoria). Conan Doyle made the short list, but came in eighth in the voting, well behind

John Pounds (a founding member of the Ragged Schools movement), Harry Redknapp (he led the local football club to its first FA Cup final victory in 69 years in 2008, Victory (the ship best known for her role in the Battle of Trafalgar), and Lord Nelson (the victor at that battle).

335. Aug 09 #1: Sherlockians (and there are many of them) who have wondered about the first edition of the "Reminiscences of John H. Watson, M.D." (the only mention of which being the announcement that "A Study in Scarlet" in Beeton's Christmas Annual was a reprint) will surely be interested in M. J. Morris' article about his discovery of a copy of Watson's ECHOES FROM INDIA AND AFGHANISTAN (privately printed in Calcutta in 1883) published in the spring 2006 issue of The Private Library, the quarterly journal of the Private Libraries Association. The author notes sadly that his copy was destroyed in a fire in his flat in 2002, but he was able to rescue his descriptive bibliography and a photocopy of the title page (the pseudonymous author is Paul W. Nash). Copies of the issue still are available and cost $5.00 to members of the PLA ($10.00 to non-members), plus shipping ($2.50 by sea-mail or $4.50 by air); checks payable to the Private Libraries Association can be sent to W. A. Klutts (145 East Jackson, Box 289, Ripley, TN 38063) with a note asking him send an e-mail message with your name and address to David Chambers at <dchambrs@aol.com>.
336. Sorry about that: Christopher Lee's (Jul 09 #1) roles have included Sherlock Holmes, Mycroft Holmes, and Sir Henry Baskerville, but not Dr. Watson.
337. And: to find the Pub Sign Store's imaginative Sherlock Holmes Personalized Pub Sign (item 3252), the URL is <www.pubsignstone.com>; search for [sherlock] and use the coupon code [spermaceti] to get a 10% discount.
338. It's commonly believed that frequent fliers don't watch the instructional videos the airlines use to explain safety and such, but Al Gregory, returning to the U.S. from France on a Continental flight, both saw and observed an in-flight video explaining how to fill out a U.S. Customs form. The instructions started out with filling in your name and address, and the address used was "221b Baker Street, Brooklyn, NY".
339. Otto Penzler's Mysterious Bookshop has a fine web-site, and a monthly newsletter (now in its 17th year), and a weekly update, and advice and information, and much more, all at <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>. Otto always has interesting Sherlockiana available.
340. Harry Towb died on July 24. He had a long career as an actor in supporting roles on stage, screen, and television; credited as Harris Towb he appeared in three episodes of the "Sherlock Holmes" television series that starred Ronald Howard and H. Marion Crawford in 1954, and he played John Forman in the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of William Gillette's play in London and New York in 1974 and 1975.
341. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 6-8 will offer a new mystery ("Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Mistaken Identity") presented by Midsummer Night Productions, and a performance of Craig Wichman's dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" by the East Lynne Theater Company; their web-site at <www.capemaymac.org/content/sub-age_tours.aspx?id=96> has more information (the Sherlock Holmes weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years). You can also contact the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts (1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278).

342. Aug 09 #2: Ronald Knox created the grand game that many Sherlockians like to play, but he was best known during his lifetime as a scholar who translated the Bible for the Catholic church and fervently defended his faith. David Rooney, in his THE WINE OF CERTITUDE: A LITERARY BIOGRAPHY OF RONALD KNOX (San Francisco: Ignatius Press, 2009; 427 pp., $17.95), has examined all of Knox's work, emphasizing his religious scholarship, and the book is an interesting companion to Evelyn Waugh's RONALD KNOX (1959) and Penelope Fitzgerald's THE KNOX BROTHERS (1977).
343. "Biography: Sherlock Holmes: The Great Detective" (1995) was an excellent one-hour program broadcast by A&E cable; it includes a dozen members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London at dinner at The Sherlock Holmes pub with Dr. Watson (portrayed by David Burke), and it's available from A&E Entertainment on a DVD ($24.95).
344. Further to the item about the exhibition "Clues Beyond Sherlock Holmes: The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at Michigan" (Jul 09 #4), the special collections has published an interesting 32-page catalog, which is available on request as a PDF file from <special.collections@umich.edu>.
345. Harry Alan Towers died on Aug. 2. He was a child actor in Britain, and a radio writer with the Royal Air Force during WW2, and after the war became a radio producer (his credits included the BBC's "Sherlock Holmes" series that starred John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson in 1954). Towers went on to produce and write many films, sometimes as Peter Welbeck: he produced "Incident at Victoria Falls" and "The Leading Lady" for Harmony Gold in 1992 (starring Christopher Lee and Patrick Macnee), and wrote and produced "The Lost World" and "Return to the Lost World" for Harmony Gold in 1994 (with John Rhys-Davies as Challenger).
346. Further to the item about Continental's in-flight safety video (Jul 09 #4), Scott Monty has reported an Air New Zealand in-flight safety video that's non-Sherlockian but interesting <www.youtube.com/watch?v=7Mq9HAE62Y>.
347. THE CRACK IN THE LENS, by Steve Hockensmith (New York: Minotaur, 2009; 307 pp., $24.99) is the fourth novel in his "Holmes on the Range" series about Old Red and Big Red Amblingmeyer, Montana cowboys who are enjoying the Sherlock Holmes stories as they appear in the 1890s, and solving mysteries on their own; Big Red says that his brother is a Sherlockitarian, or perhaps a Holmesodist, and they're now in Texas, trying to solve a five-year-old murder and avoid being lynched. It's a fast moving story, well told. Hockensmith's excellent web-site (which offers an attention-grabbing excerpt from THE CRACK IN THE LENS) is at <www.stevehockensmith.com>.
348. Diversicon is an annual convention for fans of speculative fiction (that's science fiction and fantasy) held each year in Minneapolis or St. Paul, and Ruth Berman has reported that this year's posthumous honorees were Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Edgar Allan Poe, and the convention slogan was "When you eliminate the impossible, what's left is Diversicon." Panels devoted to Conan Doyle included "Lost Worlds--Who Needs Them", "Starring Sherlock Holmes" (on film versions), and "Return to the Lost World" (a role-playing game); Ruth was one of the panelists for "Eliminating the Impossible" (on Conan Doyle's detective, fantasy, science fiction, and historical work).
349. Aug 09 #3: "The Beginning of the Presumed End" is the title of a Sherlockian outing scheduled for Sept. 27 in Lucerne, celebrating the revival of The Reichenbach Irregulars. The event will included a cruise in a historical paddle steamer on the Lake of Lucerne, a discussion of Conan Doyle's visit to Lucerne, and a visit to the H"tel de l'Europe where Conan Doyle stayed. Markus Geisser will be happy to provide more information on request by e-mail <the.reichenbach.irregulars@googlemail.com>.
350. The new catalog from Collectables Direct offers a new and expanded edition of Alan Barnes' SHERLOCK HOLMES ON SCREEN: THE COMPLETE FILM AND TV HISTORY ($27.95) and Christopher Plummer's "Murder by Decree" on DVD ($22.89); Box 385, Lewiston, NY 14092 (800-268-3891) <www.collectablesdirect.com>.
351. The TD Bank Financial Group, the Toronto Public Library, and Archives Canada are sponsoring "Agent 009 (TD Summer Reading Club)" with attractive artwork by Werner Zimmerman. You can see it in full color at <www.td-club-td.ca/2009/index-e.html>.
352. Steve Leadley's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CIRCLE OF BLOOD (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2009; 249 pp., $20.95/oe12.99) offers three pastiches: "The Circle of Blood" was first published as "Sherlock Holmes in Cape May" in 2006 and has much about the history and architecture of the town, and the two new stories are "The Highland Intrigue" (a bizarre mystery set in Dundee) and "The Medium Problem" (involving Spiritualism in London).

353. Conan Doyle's delightful stories about the pirate Captain Sharkey, collected in THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT (1900), are back in print, available from Amazon as a Kindle edition and as one of 13 non-Sherlockian titles digitized and published as books by the Cornell University Library Digital Collections <www.bookstore.library.cornell.edu>.
354. The Daily Telegraph reports (May 27) that Banco Santander, the Spanish bank that bought Abbey National Bank in 2004, has decided to rebrand its banks in the U.K., and "the Abbey name will disappear from the high street." Has anyone recently received a reply to a letter to Sherlock Holmes at 221b Baker Street? I've been told that the Sherlock Holmes Museum now answers his mail.
355. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) will honor the world's first forensic geologist at dinner in Portland, at Gracie's at the Hotel deLuxe on Oct. 21, when local Sherlockians will have a chance to meet geologists in town for the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America; if you anyone would like to attend the festivities, just let me know.
356. Some years ago Bill Sawisch reported (Aug 98 #1) a hair salon called Shearlock Combs in Naperville, Ill. Now Al Gregory has noted a news report in a suburban Chicago newspaper about an accident on Conan Doyle Road in Naperville. This isn't the only Conan Doyle Road: there's another one in Sykesville, Md., in a development called Sherlock Holmes Estates, which also has Sherlock Holmes Street, Watson Court, Baskerville Drive, Elementary Drive, Silver Blaze Drive, Hudson Drive, Mycroft Street, and Silver Blaze Drive.
357. Aug 09 #4: "I have always liked Boucher's stuff. He writes like an educated man, and the Seven Sneezes starts as if it were going to be superb. Did you ever read a Sherlock Holmes pastiche of his -- I forget the title? Darn good." P. G. Wodehouse, in a letter written in 1967 that was advertised by David Schulson Autographs in 2007. The reference is to Anthony Boucher's THE CASE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS (1940).
358. Dr. William R. Hanson has created a Sherlockian society for philatelists: the Sherlock Holmes Philatelic Society will have its first meeting on Sept. 26 in Albany, N.Y., during StampExpo 400 (Sept. 25-27) on the concourse of the Empire State Plaza. The show's web-site is at <www.stampexpo400.org>; information about the new society (and plans for a special pictorial postmark, cacheted cover, and exhibits) is available from Dr. Hanson (78 West Notre Dame, Glens Falls, NY 12801) (518-798-9592) <drhanson@localnet.com>.
359. Lurid covers on Canonical books are not a new phenomenon: Bantam issued a paperback edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in 1949 showing a buxom lady in an off-the-shoulder dress tied to a post. Now there's another: Hard Case Crime specializes in hardboiled crime fiction, and they'll publish THE VALLEY OF FEAR in December, explaining that "Years ago, a PI out of Chicago brought justice to a dirty town. Now he's going to pay." The cover artist is Glen Orbik, and his work can be seen in full color at <www.hardcasecrime.com>.
360. "Brad Pitt to Star as Sherlock Holmes' Arch Enemy in Guy Ritchie Film," according to a report on the Daily Mirror web-site (Aug. 17). The tabloid reported that studio execs had ordered Ritchie to include Moriarty in the film, and that there would be filming in London and on location at Clivedon House (the backdrop for Moriarty's home). The story was quickly picked up by Us magazine, and Warner Bros. immediately responded, saying that "the report is completely inaccurate," and that any additional filming would be for inserts and pick-up shots, standard film-making practice. And E! Online reported "No Pitt, Sherlock!" It wasn't all that long ago (Feb 09 #8) that the Sun announced that the studio had ordered Guy Ritchie to reshoot five weeks of footage because studio bosses were unhappy with an early cut. Exciting tabloid reporting certainly keeps things from getting dull, and of course gives hand-wringers something to talk and write about (especially if they don't observe that the breath-taking report originated in a tabloid).
361. On the other hand, Adam Rosenberg reported on <www.moviesblog.mtv.com> on Aug. 19 that Guy Ritchie has said that Moriarty will make an appearance in the film. Ritchie told MTV's Josh Horowitz that "some kind of an appearance is probably the best way to describe it." When pressed, and asked if an actor is credited as Moriarty, Ritchie replied "I believe not," adding that "I don't know how to answer that other than to say there is some kind of appearance." "All will be revealed," he promised. "I'm afraid I have to be slightly ambiguous about this but you'll understand what I'm talking about when you see the movie."

362. Aug 09 #5: Masamichi Higurashi is continuing to make Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockiana available to Japanese readers: he has translated E.J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Kawade Shobo Shinsha, 2009), Michael Hardwick's SHERLOCK HOLMES: MY LIFE AND CRIMES (Hara Shobo, 2009), Steve Hockensmith's ON THE WRONG TRACK (Hayakawa, 2009), and Mike Ashley's anthology THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES ADVENTURES (Hara Shobo, 2009). He has also edited SHERLOCK HOLMES IRREGULARS: CATALOG OF THE CASES NOT MADE PUBLIC (Enterbrain, 2008), with essays and articles by Mitch, Yuichi Hirayama, Minoru Harada, and many others, and has written an article on the birthday festivities ("From N.Y. to Washington") for Hayakawa's Mystery Magazine (Aug. 2009). Finally, he reports BOOK MANGA: CARTOONS WITH BOOKS AS THEIR SUBJECT, illustrated by Makoto Wada (Mainichi Shinbum Sha, 2009), with a Sherlockian cartoon.
363. THE WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Peter Brimacombe (Andover: Pitkin Publishing, 2009; 32 pp., £4.99), is an attractive and well-illustrated addition to the wide-ranging Pitkin Guide series; the publisher has an informative web-site at <www.pitkin-guides.com>.
364. "I Am Joe's Chapter 11 Reorganization Plan" was Paul Farhi's suggestion in the Washington Post (Aug. 18) for the title of an article that might appear in the Reader's Digest. The Reader's Digest Association, which was bought by an investor's group in 2007 has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy for its U.S. holdings, slashing its debt to $550 million (from $2.2 billion); earlier this year the company announced it would cut circulation of the magazine, publish 10 times a year rather than 12, and focus the magazine on socially conservative values. The Reader's Digest published a condensed version of "The Speckled Band" (July 1942), and many Sherlockian articles over the years, and the company published five volumes of Canonical tales (with excellent new illustrations) in the 1980s and 1990s.
365. The delightful Sherlockian dolls made by Martha Heller ("Martha-My-Dear") in the 1980s can now be seen in action, so to speak, in two amusing videos ("The Case of the Missing Afikomen" and "The Darkened Room") created by Amy Mantell; visit her web-site <www.sherlockshorts.com>.
366. Walter Young reports that he has found an article by W. J. Johnston titled "Detective Fiction Defies the Law" in the British journal The Empire Review (Oct. 1927); the article discusses problems that might arise were some of the villains in the Canon represented were by competent lawyers if actually brought to trial in British courts. The article is available as a DOC file <sir.james.walter@gmail.com>.
367. "Baltimore Gives Edgar Allan Poe the Funeral He Should Have Had," on Oct. 11 (almost exactly 160 years after he died on Oct. 7, 1849), according to Jeff Jerome (curator of the Poe House and Museum). Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will be among the featured speakers at the event, which will take place at Westminster Hall (519 West Fayette Street). There will be two services, at 12:30 pm and 4:30 pm, and tickets cost $35.00 each ($40.00 at the door, but it's likely the services will sell out early). Checks (payable to Director of Finance) can be sent to CHAP/POE (8th floor), 417 East Fayette Street, Baltimore, MD 21202; your checks will be returned if the event's sold out. There's more information at <www.poebicentennial.com>.
368. Aug 09 #6: Lee A. Matthias' THE PANDORA PLAGUE, first published by Leisure Books (Apr 81 #4) and (considerably shortened) by Unicorn-Star Press in 1984, is back available again in a revised and expanded third edition (Charleston: BookSurge, 2009; 309 pp., $16.99); the pastiche involves Holmes and Watson with Harry and Bess Houdini, anarchists, Mycroft Holmes, and the Curies in a battle to thwart an attempt to bring down governments world-wide. Matthias' interesting web-site is at <www.pandoraplague.com>.

369. Plan ahead: The Pleasant Places of Florida will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Wessex Cup with a "Wessex Weekend" on Feb. 12-14, 2010. Information about the event will be available from Carl L. Heifetz (1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655) <microdoc@verizon.net>.
370. Cliff Goldfarb has reported an interesting article by Alan M. Petrillo in Antique Trader (May 6) about Conan Doyle, the Arthur Conan Doyle Society, and the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Toronto; the URL is <www.antiquetrader.com/article/Bio_and_literatur_of-Arthur-Conan/#>.
371. Michael Viner died on Aug. 8. He was a music and television producer who launched Dove Books-on-Tape in 1985 and went on to produce a wide range of high-brow and low-brow audiocassettes that included Bennett Cohen's novelization of the film WITHOUT A CLUE (read by Ben Kingsley), THE TREASURY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (also read by Kingsley), Mark Frost's THE LIST OF 7 (read by Rene Auberjonois) and THE SIX MESSIAHS (read by David Warner), and anthologies that included Sherlockian stories by Vincent Starrett, Ed Hoch, and Andrew Joffe.
372. Al Gregory found "character posters" for Guy Ritchie's up-coming "Sherlock Holmes" showing Robert Downey Jr. as Holmes and Jude Law as Watson at eBay <www.ebay.com>; they're printed on both sides, with everything lighter and in reverse on the backs.
373. Jason Kirkfield reports that he has visited the Baker Street Pub & Grill in Boulder, Colo. Sherlock's Pub Co. owns a chain of 20 such establishments (some named Sherlock's Baker Street Pub or Watson's House of Ales) in Colorado, Oklahoma, and Texas; see their web-site at <www.sherlockspubco.com>.
374. MR. HOLMES & DR. WATSON: THEIR STRANGEST CASES (Canton: Transfuzion, 2009; 135 pp., $17.99) offers four of the grand comic strips that were written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia for the N.Y. Herald Tribune syndicate in 1954 and 1955; Mark Ellis, in his Foreword, notes that Gil Kane and Mike Sekowsky were the primary artists for almost all of the stories in the comic strip (they worked for Giacoia and received no credit), and the book also has Ron Haydock's "Sherlock Holmes and the True Legend of the Hound of the Baskervilles" (reprinted from E-GO Col-lectors Series, 1975).
375. Another title published by Transfuzion is SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE CASES OF THE TWISTED MINDS (106 pp., $14.99), with three stories first published by Caliber/Tome in the 1990s: "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll & Mr. Holmes" (story by Steven Philip Jones and art by Seppo Makinen), "The Adventure of the Opera Ghost" (story by Steven Philip Jones and art by Aldin Baroza), and "The Amazing Mr. Holmes" (story by Gary Reed and art by Wayne Reid). Specializing in graphic novels, the company has a web-site at <www.transfuzion.biz>.
376. Aug 09 #7: Thierry Saint-Joanis has reported on the discovery in Poland of a copy of the last Sherlock Holmes silent film: "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929); starring Carlyle Blackwell (Holmes) and Georges Seroff (Watson), the film was released on Aug. 28, 1929, only a few weeks before the release on Oct. 18 of the first Sherlock Holmes sound film ("The Return of Sherlock Holmes" starring Clive Brook and H. Reeves-Smith). The film is now at the Polish National Film Archive in Warsaw, undergoing cleaning and conservation. You can read more (in French or English) at the web-site of the Soci,t Sherlock Holmes de France at <www.sshf.com>.
377. "Famous guests include Vincent Van Gogh, Charles Dickens, Sherlock Holmes, George Bernard Shaw, Benjamin Disraeli, and William Gladstone," according to the history of a famous restaurant in London. Bill Briggs has reported the web-site: <www.simpsonsinthestrands.co.uk>.
378. Irene's Cabinet is an annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (46 pp.) continues the society's tradition of offering interesting articles, toasts, and poetry, this year including Dana Richards' appreciative history of Petri Wine, and Joyce Ludwig's report on her imaginative "Silver Blaze" stained-glass window. $18.00 postpaid from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886); copies of annuals from 2004 through 2008 also are available ($15.00 postpaid).
379. Laurie R. King will be on tour in England promoting THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, Sept. 9-21, with appearances in Newcastle upon Tyne, Reading, London, Luton, Oxford, and Cambridge; details at <www.laurierking.com/page_id=1263>.
380. Aziz Bin Adam reports that there's a new Malay (Bahasa Malasia) translation of Sherlock Holmes stories: SHERLOCK HOLMES: WIRA KOTA LONDON, available at the web-site <www.pts.com.my/index.php/buku/3432>. The title translates as SHERLOCK HOLMES: HERO OF THE CITY OF LONDON" and the book's cover uses artwork from promotion for the new Guy Ritchie film.
381. Cliff Goldfarb notes that the Quality Paperback Book Club continues to offer Sherlockiana in discounted softcover editions. The Club has web-sites at <www.qpb.com> and (for Canadians) <www.qpb.ca>, and its current titles include ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS ($9.99), THE SHERLOCK HOLMES NOVELS ($9.99), John R. King's THE SHADOW OF REICHENBACH FALLS, Leslie S. Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED DRACULA ($22.99), Russell Miller's THE ADVENTURES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE ($15.99), and John Gardner's MORIARTY ($14.99).
382. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Wayside Theatre (7853 Main Street, Middletown, VA 22645) (540-869-1776) <www.waysidetheatre.org> from Oct. 10 through Nov. 7. And there will be a production at the Cider Mill Playhouse (2 South Nanticoke Avenue, Endicott, NY 13760 (607-748-7363) <www.cidermillplayhouse.com> from Apr. 15 through May 2, 2010. And another at the Phipps Center for the Arts.
383. Will Thomas' THE BLACK HAND has been nominated for a Shamus Award (best paperback original) from the Private Eye Writers of America; the winners will be announced on Oct. 16, during the PWA banquet at Bouchercon in Indianapolis. It's the fifth in Will's Victorian mystery series that features Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") (Aug 08 #4).
384. Aug 09 #8: A reminder: "From Out of That Shadow", the exhibition that was on view at the University of Virginia earlier this year, will open at the Ransom Center at the University of Texas in Austin on Sept. 8 and run through Jan. 4, honoring the bicentennial of Edgar Allan Poe. Exhibition highlights will include Poe's writing desk, records of his student days, a brooch containing his hair, Arthur Rackham's original artwork for TALES OF MYSTERY & IMAGINATION, manuscripts and letters, and the typescript of Robert Barr's "A Chat with Conan Doyle" (first published in The Idler, Oct. 1894) in which Conan Doyle acknowledges his debt to Poe. The exhibition's "Poe Mania" web-site <www.hrc.utexas.edu/exhibitions/2009/poe> will (as of Sept. 4) have digital imagery, including the typescript.
385. Robert Crichton is featured in Milk Bottle Production's "The Complete Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" at the Quay Theatre in Sudbury (Suffolk); the series of weekly readings began on Sept. 16. Crichton will read 15 stories this year, and the remainder of the Canon next year; there are photographs of Crichton in Sherlockian costume at <www.milkbottleproductions.co.uk>.
386. There are now two titles in the SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS series by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin published by Orchard Books/Scholastic Press for readers ages 9-12. THE FALL OF THE AMAZING ZALINDAS (2006, 255 pp., $6.99) involves Wiggins and the irregulars (and Holmes and Watson) in an investigation that involved murder and the theft of a royal treasure, and THE MYSTERY OF CONJURED MAN (2009, 195 pp., $6.99) deals with the pursuit of a malevolent gang of swindlers. The books are well-written and nicely appropriate for their target audience.
387. The U.S. Postal Service issued a stamp this year honoring Bob Hope. There's a caricature of Bob "Sherlock" Hope at his official web-site at <www.bobhope.com/JokePage.html>, where you can click on the image and listen to him telling jokes. He's shown in Sherlockian costume in advertising for the film "My Favorite Brunette" (1947), although there's no S'ian costume in the film itself. And it would be nice indeed if someone

- could find video of his reported appearance in a skit on the "Donny and Marie Show" (1977) as Inspector Wonderful, with Jay Osmond as Doctor Watson.
388. The long-running controversy over the spelling of wisteria/wistaria seems to have been resolved, at least as far as The Times is concerned, according to an opinion piece (June 5) forwarded by Evy Herzog and John Baesch. The plant was named by eminent British botanist Thomas Nuttall in honor of Caspar Wistar, but Nuttall spelled it wisteria. THE TIMES STYLE GUIDE has for many years insisted on the spelling wistaria, but the venerable newspaper has now decided that "wisteria rules." This by no means is the first time The Times has made changes: in 1966 the paper began printing news on its front page, and Rupert Murdoch bought the company in 1981; it has been a tabloid since 2004. Today's Times is considerably different from what it was when Holmes and Watson and others consulted it (the paper is mentioned in six of the Sherlock Holmes stories).

389. Sep 09 #1: Nicholas Meyer is touring to promote his new THE VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE: MEMORIES FROM STAR TREK AND A LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD (New York: Viking, 2009; 272 pp., $25.95), and on Aug. 28 he was interviewed by John Rabe for "Off-Ramp" on KPCC-FM (Los Angeles). You can listen to (and download) the entire 45-minute interview at <www.tinyurl.com/lcxceg>. Both the interview and the book, of course, have Sherlockian content; Meyer wrote THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION (1974) and two other pastiches.
390. Barnes & Noble's reprint (1992) of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (with the introduction by Christopher Morley) available for some time in an edition in "genuine bonded leather with ribbon marker" and with gilt edges, nicely suitable for gifts (Jul 06 #1) was out of print for a while, but it's now available again in a new edition (2009), with a new introduction by Christopher and Barbara Roden. The covers, front and back, are highly decorated with a Sherlockian motif, and the price still is $19.98. And it really is a new edition: the type has been reset, with a new pagination; I've not checked to see whether any of the errors in the Doubleday edition have been corrected.
391. Further to the report on Sherlock Holmes Estates in Sykesville, Md. (Aug 09 #3), Les Moskowitz reports that the list of Canonical street names was incomplete; there are Conan Doyle Way, Sherlock Holmes Street, Watson Court, Mycroft Street, Hudson Drive, Moriarty Court, Baskerville Drive, Elementary Drive, Silver Blaze Drive, Mycroft Street, Baskerville Drive, Silver Blaze Drive, Elementary Drive, and Musgrave Ritual Drive.
392. Sorry about that: The Times (Aug 09 #8) is mentioned in seven of the Sherlock Holmes stories. That's more often than any other newspaper named in the Canon.
393. Karen Murdock noted a press release about Tod Leavitt's performance of "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" for "contrabass and characters" at a faculty recital at Valdosta State University on Aug. 28. It was the first scene of a concert version of "The Speckled Band" that Leavitt has commissioned from Jon Deak. It's not Deak's first Sherlockian work: he was commissioned by Richard Hartshorne to create a concert version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for contrabass and six voices (Oct 89 #5 and Jan 98 #3).
394. THE IMPROBABLE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by John Joseph Adams (San Francisco: Night Shade Books, 2009; 454 pp., $15.95), is a wide-ranging anthology. A few of the stories are published for the first time, with many reprints and a short Sherlockian Primer by Christopher Roden; many of the reprints are from anthologies of Sherlockian pastiches, but Adams has cast his net widely to include pastiches from the BBC Cult homepage and the webzine <www.shredofevidence.com>; some of the authors are well known (Anthony Burgess, Stephen King, Anne Perry, Neil Gaiman), while others will be less familiar. You'll find mystery, fantasy, science fiction, parody, and good writing. And <www.johnjosephadams.com/sherlock-holmes/?page\_id=16> is the URL for the book's web-site, which offers interviews with some of the authors, a chance to read some of the stories on-line without charge, and a free "ebook sampler" download.

395. Sep 09 #2: Further to the item (Apr 09 #6) on the campaign to upgrade the protection of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, the BBC reported (Aug. 25) that the house likely will be converted into flats. Waverly Borough Council chairman Matthew Evan said that there had been talks with the National Trust and the Youth Hostel Association to determine whether plans could be drawn up for community use of the house, but "the reality is that those don't seem to be viable options." He also said that the developer who owns the house is now proposing to knock down an extension that was built in the 1930s and convert the property into 11 flats, and that the new plans are "much more sensitive to the character of Undershaw."
396. Karen Murdoch reports a Sherlock Holmes chess set available from Glen Call International (4 Balgedie Court, Glenlomond, Kinross-shire KY13 9HF, Great Britain) <www.glencall.co.uk>; pieces only (natural cream and brown finish) £80.54, pieces only (hand decorated) £135.67, recommended board £62.77.
397. Lenny Picker has reported that Synergy Entertainment will release SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARCHIVE COLLECTION in October ($24.95); three DVDs with a long list of interesting films: "The Copper Beeches" (1912), "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (1921), "The Limejuice Mystery" (1930), "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" (1931), "Lost in Limehouse" (1933), "The Strange Case of Hennessy" (1933), "The Screaming Bishop" (1944), "The Speckled Band" (1949), "The Man Who Disappeared" (1951), "A Case of Hypnosis" (1952), and "The Sting of Death" (1955), plus bonus features. Some of these are first-time-on-DVD, and a few are first-time-ever.
398. Philip K. Jones has compiled an interesting spread-sheet data base of Sherlockian pastiches with (at the moment) more than 7,900 entries, and it is available for inspection (or download) at the web-site of the Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis <www.illustriousclients.ning.com>.
399. "Discover the Real Sherlock Holmes" is the invitation from the Royal Society of Medicine and the Royal Society of Surgeons of Edinburgh to an exhibition that opened at the RSM's Library on Sept. 1 and will run through Jan. 29. The focus of the exhibition is on Joseph Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle, and on Oct. 29 there will be a free public afternoon meeting on "Sherlock Holmes: Forensic Medicine and Fictional Crime Fighters". M.C. Black also provides a link <www.rsm.ac.uk/public/exhibitions.php>.
400. Bob Mangler spotted a real bargain: the Quality Paperback Book Club edition of the first two volumes of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES for $19.98. The Club's address is Box 6000, Columbia, MD 21045 (800-396-2665) <www.daedalusbooks.com>.
401. David Haugen reports that John Longenbaugh's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will have it's world premiere at the Taproot Theatre in Seattle, Nov. 20 through Dec. 30. 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>. "After being presumed dead for three years, a hardened Sherlock Holmes resurfaces, turning his back on the people who need him most. Three unexpected callers arrive on Christmas Eve uncovering clues from the detective's past, present, and future. Can they save Holmes and his world from a dire end?"

402. Sep 09 #3: The Scotsman reported (Aug. 30) that Robin Harper, chairman of the Scottish Parliament's arts advisory group, has launched a campaign to move the Richard Lancelyn Green collection from Portsmouth to Edinburgh. Harper said that "it is clear that Portsmouth is having a very difficult time handling this collection," noting cataloguing has not been completed, and that Portsmouth has not created a special museum to display the collection. Lee Hunt, the Portsmouth city councillor responsible for culture, responded that the collection is the central point of the city's bid to become a European City of Culture and was also being used to try to get the city included in England's football World Cup bid. "I think there is as much

- wind in this idea . . . as there is in your Scottish bagpipes," Hunt said, adding that "basically, the collection belongs to us and if Edinburgh thinks it's going to get it, it's not going to happen."
403. There's a Baker Street in Amsterdam, spotted by Samantha Wolov on a recent visit.
404. "Kosher Version of Sherlock Holmes Released" was the headline on a story that Al Gregory spotted at <www.isrealnationalnews.com>; the The Israeli branch of the Bilson publishing company has released a version of the Canon "adapted for the religious public." According to the publisher, hareidi-religious rabbis approved the content and vouched that "it doesn't contradict the spirit of Judaism (Hareidi Judaism is the most theologically conservative form of Orthodox Judaism). Intended to teach English to Israeli students, the book is accompanied by a CD recorded by American narrators to help Israeli students grasp American-accented English.
405. It's "in development" (which means that someone's thinking about it): "It's based on these stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Sherlock Holmes guy, that were written whatever, 100 some years ago, they're just really funny," Mike Judge told the Los Angeles Times (Sept. 3). Judge's film is "Brigadier Gerard" and John Altschuler and David Kinsky are working on a script. Variety reported last year that Steve Carrell is "attached" to play Gerard (Oct 08 #3).
406. Karen Murdock discovered costumes for Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson at the Dallas Vintage Shop <www.dallasvintageshop.com/index.php?s=sherlock>. You can see lots of other costumes if you click on "Home Page".
407. Further to the forecast of Eric Simonson's play "Fake" at the Steppenwolf Theater in Chicago (Feb 09 #4), it will run through Nov. 8. Their web-site <www.steppenwolf.org> has "Watch & Listen" audios, videos, photo galleries, and podcasts about the play, which features Francis Guinan as Conan Doyle.
408. A reminder: Eric Simonson's new play "Fake" (Feb 09 #4) opened at the Steppenwolf Theater in Chicago on Sept. 10, and runs through Nov. 8; the play begins in 1914, when Conan Doyle invites four guests to his English country home," and the play investigates how the Piltdown Hoax "rattled assumptions about evolution, faith, and science." The theater's at 1650 North Halstead Street, Chicago, IL 60614 (212-335-1650) <www.steppenwolf.org>.

409. Sep 09 #4: Forecast for October: the first four titles from Titan Books in their new series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (at £7.99 each) will be reprints of David Stuart Davies' pastiches THE SCROLL OF THE DEAD (1998) and THE VEILED DETECTIVE (2004), Daniel Stashower's THE ECTOPLASMIC MAN (1985), and Wade Wellman and Manly Wade Wellman's THE WAR OF THE WORLDS (1975); Titan's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
410. Further to the forecast of The Pleasant Places of Florida's "Wessex Weekend" on Feb. 12-14, 2010, Carl L. Heifetz is at <microdoc@tampabay.rr.com> (a new e-mail address).
411. Randall Stock notes that the typescript for "A Chat with Conan Doyle" (Aug 09 #8) is now on-line, and it turns out not to be the typescript for Robert Barr's "A Chat with Conan Doyle" but rather the typescript for the recording that Conan Doyle made for His Master's Voice on May 14, 1930; the HMV recording was issued in 1930 as "Conan Doyle Speaking". The first page of the transcript is titled (apparently in Conan Doyle's handwriting) "A Chat 'with' Conan Doyle" and you can see it at <www.tinyurl.com/lrr95e>.
412. Sorry about that: to find the Pub Sign Store's imaginative Sherlock Holmes Personalized Pub Sign (item 3252), go to <www.sherlock.pubsignstore.com>; use the coupon code [spermaceti] to get a 10% discount.
413. Reported: Partha Basu's THE CURIOUS CASE OF 221B: THE SECRET NOTEBOOKS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Noida: HarperCollins India; 288 pp., Rs299.00); "In this brilliant retelling that turns the Holmesian canon on its head, Partha Basu brings back a host of characters who have captivated generations of readers, except that they are no longer what we had made them out to be."
414. Michael Lawrence is selling his collection of Sherlockian books: they are mostly modern, and mostly pastiches; if you want to fill gaps in your own collection you can request his sales list <mwlawrence99@aol.com>.
415. Mark Alberstat's 2010 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The calendar costs US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
416. F. Andrew Leslie's 1978 play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" opened at the Repertory East Playhouse in Newhall, Calif., on Sept. 18, and it will run through Oct. 17. 24266 San Fernando Road, Newhall, CA 91321 (661-288-0000) <www.repeastplayhouse.org>.
417. Richard M. Lackritz died on Sept. 5. He was an obstetrician and fertility specialist, and an enthusiastic collector; "find a book you like, you get it in paperback," he told a reporter in 2002, "and then you say, 'that book was so good, I'll get it in hardcover,' and then you say, 'a first edition would be great,' and then a different dust jacket or one signed by the author." His collection was sold at Christie's in 2002 and 2003, and he had some nice material, including an inscribed "Starrett copy" of "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet", and (something he didn't send to auction) the manuscript of "The Three Garridebs".
418. Sep 09 #5: Jamyang Norbu's pastiche THE MANDALA OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1999), which was published in the U.S. as SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MISSING YEARS, has been translated into seven languages (Dutch, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, and Spanish), according to an interesting interview with Norbu in the Latse Library Newsletter (fall 2004). The Latse Contemporary Tibetan Culture Library is in New York and the newsletter is available on-line at <www.latse.org>.
419. An interesting Sherlock Holmes trompe l'oeil painting (described as American School, 20th Century) went to auction at Skinner Auctioneers in Marlborough (Mass.) on Sept. 11; estimated at $400-600, it sold for $830. You can see an image in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/l8d6rc>.
420. Dynamite Entertainment's comic-book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Mar 09 #6) has now reached the fourth (of five) issues, and a hardcover collection is due in October: SHERLOCK HOLMES VOL. 1: THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($24.95) will include bonus material such as annotations, script pages, and a complete Sherlock Holmes story with new illustrations. Dynamite's web-site is at <www.dynamitentertainment.com>.
421. Thad Holt has reported that a great deal of material in The Strand Magazine has been scanned and is available at Google <www.books.google.com>; enter [editions:LCCN09034301] in the search field. Full text of the magazine is available for 1891-1908, and other volumes as "snippet" views.
422. Fans of Mary Russell (heroine of Laurie R. King's continuing series) have a Yahoo group, and two different designs on a variety of merchandise (shirts, buttons, caps, mugs, coasters, mousepads, totebags, ornaments) available at <www.cafepress.com/lettersofmary>. The Yahoo group has lots of fanfic, and you can sign up at <www.groups.yahoo.com/group/Letters\_Of\_Mary>. There's a tentative publication date (June 2010) for the next book in the Mary Russell series, which will not, after all, be called THE GREEN MAN (since her publisher didn't like it, and has persuaded Laurie to change it); the

- new title is THE GOD OF THE HIVE). And there's a new way to promote books: a book trailer; Two Rock Media created an interesting one for THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, and you can view it on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=sG2f3Q9yDm8>.
423. Donald Thomas' new play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" had its premiere at the Manor Pavilion Theatre in Sidmouth on Sept. 24-30. He has written many pastiches, the most recent collection being SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE KING'S EVIL (Mar 09 #6); the play is a dramatization of his "The Case of the Phantom Chambermaid", which was published in THE EXECUTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Oct 08 #1).
424. Richard S. Warner ("High Tor") died on Sept. 19. Dick was a historian, an avid researcher, and an energetic Sherlockian. He was one of the founders of The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa, and responsible for the naming of Holmes Peak, the first and still the only geographic feature in the United States named in honor of Sherlock Holmes and officially recognized by the Interior Department's U.S. Board of Geographic Names. Dick published a delightful GUIDEBOOK AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE ASCENT OF HOLMES PEAK in 1985, and received his thoroughly appropriate Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1987.

425. Sep 09 #6: Charterhouse Auctions had some interesting Conan Doyle material on offer on Sept. 25: a black-and-white photograph, inscribed by A. Conan Doyle, and a sword with hilt inscribed "P. Leckie Forbes, from his uncle A. Conan Doyle, 1915". According to Charterhouse, Forbes served with the Middlesex Regiment, attached to the RAF during WW1, and the sword was sent to auction by his grandson. Forbes's father was married to Jean Leckie's sister Sara, according to an article by Philip Bergem in the Newsletter of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections (Dec. 2007). Estimated at £1,000-1500, the lot sold for £2,300.
426. Patrick Leckie Forbes' father was Patrick Forbes, a friend of Conan Doyle who worked with him on THE LOST WORLD and is acknowledged by Conan Doyle in his foreword to the book. Forbes appears twice (as both Summerlee and Roxton) in the photograph of "the members of the exploring party" (with Conan Doyle impersonating Challenger); the story of the photograph is told in Appendix B in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Alvin Roden (1996).
427. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Barbara Rusch's report on Michael Dirda's 2009 "Cameron Hollyer Lecture", Cliff Goldfarb's interesting account of Peggy Perdue's inspired sleuthing that identified a poster advertising one of the "Brigadier Gerard" stories, and other news from and about the collection; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>).
428. Ken Rozek has reported that San Marino issued a postage stamp honoring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on June 16, one of three stamps in a set paying homage to writers (the others being Edgar Allan Poe and Raymond Chandler); you can see them in full color at <www.aasfn.sm>. Conan Doyle's is the E0.85 stamp, with an image of a bloodhound following footprints, and you can purchase singles, sheets of 20 stamps with a descriptive strip, and first day covers (Conan Doyle's is the 0.85E stamp, with a bloodhound following footprints); if the web-site "cart" doesn't work, you can order by e-mail at <aasfn@omniway.sm>; shipping costs E7.00.
429. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-9.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new. The previous issue has an amusing and "really terrifying image of an incredibly vicious Hound" that you can view at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-8.htm>.
430. Here a rat, there a rat, everywhere a giant rat. They've been turning up almost everywhere, in southeast Asia, at least. It was more than 25 years ago that Guy G. Musser and Cameron Newcomb published "Malaysian Murids and the Giant Rat of Sumatra" in the Bulletin of the American Museum of Natural History (Dec 83 #4), and explorers have been encountering them ever since. Most recently in Papua New Guinea, where the BBC Natural History Unit paid a visit to Mount Bosavi, a dormant volcano, and found at least 30 new species, including the Bosavi woolly rat, which measures more than 32 inches from nose to tail and weighs more than three pounds.

431. Sep 09 #7: There's more on the Guy Ritchie film "Sherlock Holmes" (Aug 09 #4): on Sept. 21 the Hollywood Reporter announced that Warner Bros. is developing a sequel, with Brad Pitt in talks to play Moriarty in the next film. And there's a real possibility that Pitt will have an uncredited cameo in the first film: the story notes that Moriarty is in the first film, but in shadow and unrecognizable. Warner Bros. has firmly denied rumors that Pitt will be in the first film, but of course if they were to confirm the rumors that would spoil any planned surprise.
432. There's plenty of precedent for uncredited cameos, including "FairyTale: A True Story" (1997), which starred Peter O'Toole as Conan Doyle; at the end of the film there's a brief scene with Frances Griffith's father, played by Mel Gibson (who's president of the company that co-produced the film). And at the end of Kevin Costner's "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" (1991) there is an appearance by King Richard, played by Sean Connery.
433. Karen Murdock discovered <www.perkydesigns.net>, which has 18 Sherlockian designs available on address labels, ID name tags, note cards, magnets, and other merchandise; roll over "Site Map" and look for the category "Sherlock Holmes".
434. The September issue of The Mysterious Bookshop Newsletter is now available; go to <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> and click on "Newsletter" in the column at the left. All sort of signed editions, plus a section of Sherlockiana, and news of THE VAMPIRE ARCHIVES: THE MOST COMPLETE VOLUME OF VAMPIRE TALES EVER PUBLISHED, edited by Otto Penzler and due from Vintage in Oct. (1,056 pp., $25.00); there's a preface by Neil Gaiman, and stories by a long list of fine writers in the genre, including Conan Doyle ("The Sussex Vampire" and "The Parasite").
435. The Chester Theatre Group will present Tim Kelly's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from Oct. 9 through Oct. 24 at the Black River Playhouse in Chester, N.J. The address for the box office address is Box 38, Chester, NJ 07930 (908-879-7304) <www.chestertheatregroup.org>.
436. Les Klinger is described as "today's foremost expert on society's fascination with bloodsuckers" in the "Playbill" in the October issue of Playboy. And the cover proclaims: "Vampire Love: Bloodlust! Why the Undead Are Hot Again!" Les' essay accompanies a pictorial on "Love Bites: Vampire Lovers Turn Fear into Fantasy".
437. Peter Abrahams' DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE: AN ECHO FALLS MYSTERY (Apr 05 #1) won an Agatha (childrens/young adults fiction) at Malice Domestic, and the series continued with BEHIND THE CURTAIN (New York: Laura Geringer/HarperCollins, 2006; 346 pp., $15.99) and INTO THE DARK (2008; 300 pp., $16.99); the heroine is Ingrid Levin-Hill, eighth-grade Sherlock Holmes fan and amateur actress, who is involved in seriously-adult problems and mysteries that are well written, with interesting characters and plenty of suspense. Stephen King gave BEHIND THE CURTAIN an enthusiastic blurb (saying that "Nancy Drew was never like this; it's the real deal"), and he was correct indeed.

438. Oct 09 #1: "The Sherlock Holmes Effect: How the Arthur Conan Doyle Classics Influence Contemporary Mysteries" is the title of a symposium that will be presented by the New York chapter of the Mystery Writers of America at 6:30pm on Jan. 26 at the Mid-Manhattan Library at 40th Street and 5th Avenue in New York; it will be open to the public at no charge, and the moderator will be E.J. Wagner, who will be assisted by Lyndsay Faye, Jonathan Maberry, Reggie Nadelson, and Andrew Jay Peck. There's an illustrated flier with more information at <www.mwa-ny.org/pdf/NYPL\_flyer\_2010-01-26-sherlock-holmes.pdf>. E.J. has a new Sherlockian blog at <www.ejdissectingroom.wordpress.com>.

439. Paramount Home Video has released a new DVD "Alvin and the Chipmunks Go to the Movies: Star Wreck" ($16.99) with three episodes from the series, one of them "Elementary, My Dear Simon" (30 minutes, 1988); "Simon introduces this special mystery episode and then stars in it as monocled ace detective Sherlock Holmes," with Theodore as Watson and Alvin as Moriarty.
440. Legacy Interactive is preparing to issue a sequel to its computer game "The Lost Cases of Sherlock Holmes" (May 08 #4). Vol. 2 will be available online in December and in retail shops early next year. Six screenshots can be seen now <www.gamershell.com/news\_83320.html>.
441. William Safire died on Sept. 27. He was a speechwriter for President Nixon, a Pulitzer Prize-winner political columnist for the N.Y. Times, a pundit, and an excellent writer. His column "On Language" ran for 30 years in N.Y. Times Magazine, with assistance from correspondents he called his Lexicographic Irregulars, and he mentioned Sherlock Holmes often in his columns in the N.Y. Times and his books; it was in SAFIRE'S POLITICAL DICTIONARY (1978) that he credited a Sherlock Holmes story as the inspiration for phrase "smoking gun" that became so popular during the Watergate era.
442. Forecast from MX Publishing in 2010: THE NORWOOD AUTHOR: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND THE NORWOOD YEARS (1891-1894), by Alistair Duncan. Duncan's the author of ELIMINATE THE IMPOSSIBLE (Apr 08 #5) and CLOSE TO HOLMES (Mar 09 #2).
443. Peter L. Stern's catalogs always are interesting: his fall 2009 catalog has a copy of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES inscribed "I perambulated Dartmoor before I wrote this book. A. Conan Doyle." ($85,000) and an original wash drawing by Frederic Dorr Steele that was described by a New York bookshop in 1962 as an unpublished drawing of Sherlock Holmes, and it's attractive even though it's not Holmes ($750). Peter's address is 15 Court Square, Boston, MA 02108 (617-542-3263).
444. Forecast for March: David Grann's THE DEVIL AND SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF MURDER, MADNESS, AND OBSESSION (Doubleday, $25.95); presumably including his New Yorker article about Richard Lancelyn Green (Jan 05 #7).
445. Further to the report (Aug 09 #8) about the long-running controversy over the long-running controversy over the spelling of wisteria/wistaria, Karen Ellery notes that there is also a long-running controversy over the pronunciation of the word wisteria; and you can read an interesting discussion at <www.collinslanguage.blogspot.com/2009/07/normal-0-false-false-false.html>.

446. Oct 09 #2: It's not Sherlockian, but it's highly recommended: the Folger Shakespeare Theatre in Washington had a new production of "Macbeth" last year, directed by Teller (as in Penn &) and Aaron Posner, with fine actors and astounding magic devised by Teller; it's now available on a DVD with a new Folger edition of the play with a foreword by the directors (they describe the play as "a supernatural horror thriller"). The DVD has the play, and 50 minutes of interesting special features, and the book+DVD is published by Simon & Schuster ($16.00 and well worth it).
447. John Longenbaugh's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be produced in the Tap Root Theatre in Seattle, Nov. 20 through Dec. 30; the box-office address is 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>.
448. Chronicling America is a searchable digital data base of American newspaper pages from 1880 to 1922; it's sponsored jointly by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Library of Congress, and it now has more than a million pages. The URL is <chroniclingamerica.loc.gov> and a recent search for [sherlock holmes] turned up 352 hits; a search for [conan doyle] yielded 303 hits.
449. Nis Jessen reports that there's a new web-site displaying handsome artwork, including his work on an illustrated edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (Jul 05 #5): <www.jessen-gallery.dk>.
450. Andy Solberg notes that "It's a Mystery, Charlie Brown" (1974), with Snoopy as the Sherlockian detective, is one of six 30-minute television specials in a new two-DVD set PEANUTS 1970'S COLLECTION, VOLUME 1 (from Warner Home Video, $29.98).
451. VICTIMS & VILLAINS: BARBIE AND KEN MEET SHERLOCK HOLMES (Vancleave: Ramble House, 2009; 169 pp., $17.99) is the latest book by Derham Groves, who continues to offer interesting Sherlockian challenges to his architecture students at the University of Melbourne: this time they each read a Sherlock Holmes story and portrayed a victim or villain in the story by changing the appearance of a Barbie or Ken doll, and Derham notes that they produced "a horrifying collection of dolls that had been bludgeoned, garroted, hanged, mauled, poisoned, scared, shot, stabbed, and strangled," and the students obviously had fun with the project. The book has photographs of the dolls, and discussion of the exhibition "Murderous Melbourne" that was on display at the University last year. You can also view a podcast about the exhibition at <www.visions.unimelb.edu.au/episode/47>; there's an interview with Derham, and views of the exhibition, all in the second half of the 5-minute podcast.
452. Further to the report (Jan 09 #4) on THE COMPLETE BAKER STREET MISCELLANEA on CD, Randall Stock has provided an excellent in-depth review of the CD at <www.bestofsherlock.com/journal/bsm-review.htm#summary>, including helpful tips on using the CD; the CD is available for $40.00 (postpaid) from Donald Pollock, 521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305; non-U.S. buyers are welcome to use PayPal and should contact Don at <donaldkpollock@gmail.com>. Randall also offers an informative look at "The e-World of Sherlock Holmes" at <www.bestofsherlock.com/eworld/ewhome.htm>.

453. Oct 09 #3: Profiles in History (26901 Agoura Road #150, Calabasas Hills, CA 81391 (310-859-7701) <www.profilesinhistory.com> is offering three interesting letters: one (non-Doylean) by Joseph Bell; one written by Conan Doyle to the actor O. P. Heggie, who in 1911 was appearing as Holmes in "The Speckled Band"; and one written by Harry Houdini to Conan Doyle in 1922, after the famous seance in Atlantic City. You can see them on-line; go to the web-site and search for [conan doyle].
454. In 2004 Nicholas Utechin recorded new introductions for the BBC Digital Radio 7 series "Sherlock Holmes with Carlton Hobbs" (12 of the stories that the BBC broadcast in 1959, starring Carlton Hobbs and Norman Shelley), and BBC Audio plans to release the 12 programs in "The Carlton Hobbs Sherlock Holmes Collection" on three CDs in January (£30.00).
455. Sorry about that: to find The Strand Magazine at <www.books.google.com> you search for [editions:LCCN09034341] to get the various scanned issues of the magazine.
456. James Barry's play "Sherlock Holmes' Excellent Adventure" will be performed at the Coronado Playhouse, Oct. 30 through Nov. 29 (1835 Strand Way, Coronado, CA 92118) (619-435-4856) <www.coronadoplayhouse.com>; "this delightful parody uses visual and theatrical jokes, wordplay, and audience participation to skewer Holmesian traditions."
457. The script for the play can be read (and purchased) on-line from Lazy Bee Scripts <www.lazybeescripts.co.uk>, and there are other Sherlockian scripts available: "The Double-Headed Penny-Farthing" (by Robert Black), "Sherlock Holmes & the Emerald of Alcazar" (by Geoff Bamber), "The Death of Sherlock Holmes" (by Richard James), "Sherlock Holmes and the Pirates of the Horn" (by Vithal Rajan), "Sherlock Holmes' Last Case" (by Charlie Cook), "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of Mallen Hall" (by Richard James), "Sherlock Holmes--The Panto" (by Jenny Gilbert), "The Sinister Mrs. Eaves" (by Robert Black), and "The Man Who Died Twice" (by Robert Black).

458. Forecast: SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S SHERLOCK HOLMES, from A&E Home Video in December, on 2 DVDs ($29.95); the five surviving broadcasts from the 1968 BBC television series starring Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock ("The Hound of the Baskervilles" in two parts, "A Study in Scarlet", "The Sign of Four", "The Blue Carbuncle", and "The Valley Mystery").
459. There's always something new: a Sherlockian comic book that's available only on the Internet: John Arcudi's MENS INIURIA IN CORPORE SANO: A PANGOLIN CLASSIC at <www.myspace.com/darkhorsepresents?issuenu=26&storynum=1>. It's issue #26 in a series from Dark Horse, and they'll publish it next year in an ink-on-paper collection. Thanks to Les Klinger for reporting this.
460. Forecast for November: VICTORIAN UNDEAD, from Wildstorm; the first issue of six in comic book mini-series written by Ian Edginton ("the undead are returning to life, hungry for flesh and threatening all of Victorian London," and Holmes and Watson face "the most extraordinary case of their career"). Also: GASLIGHT GROTESQUE: NIGHTMARE TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec, from Edge in November; it's a follow-up to their GASLIGHT GRIMOIRE (Dec 08 #2).
461. Oct 09 #4: Ken Lanza spotted a story in the North Wales Daily Post (Oct. 1) about location work in Caernarfon on a new Sherlock Holmes that will star Ben Snyder as Holmes and David Gareth-Lloyd as Watson; the film is expected to be available on DVD in January. The production company explains that "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective faces the ultimate challenge when enormous monsters attack London."
462. It's not quite "Conan Doyle slept here," but a house he's said to have visited is for sale: Green Lane in Dalston in Cumbria, was built in the early 1700s and has been home to seven generations of the Trimble family and is now on the market for £1.3 million. Ron Trimble, the current owner, told the Cumberland News (Oct. 11) that Conan Doyle was a "not-infrequent visitor" to Green Lane because his sister Angel had married the local curate, and they lived at Whitesmiths at the top of the Green Lane drive. Presumably that was Conan Doyle's sister Dodo, who married Charles Cyril Angell.
463. Jerry Margolin is selling Sherlockian artist Jeff Decker's portrait in oils of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. You can request an image and price from Jerry (10007 S.W. Quail Post Road, Portland, OR 97219) <221bee@comcast.net>.
464. If you would like to be among the first to see Guy Ritchie's new "Sherlock Holmes" film, plan to be in Hong Kong or Malaysia on Dec. 24, which is the release date posted at the Internet Movie Data Base. And the film will be in theaters on Dec. 25 in Singapore and five countries in Europe (they're a few hours ahead of the U.S.). There is a new trailer for the film (you get to see Mrs. Hudson, and Dr. Watson's bull pup), and it may still be available at <www.iwatchstuff.com/29/1/new\_sherlock\_holmes\_trailer\_du.php>.
465. Stuart M. Kaminsky died on Oct. 9. He was a prolific writer who won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for Best Novel (1989), and the MWA Grand Master award in 2006. His novel THE HOWARD HUGHES AFFAIR (1979) featured hard-boiled Los Angeles detective Toby Peters and amateur Sherlockian detective Basil Rathbone, and HE DONE HER WRONG (1983) had Peters appearing as guest speaker at a monthly meeting of The Engineer's Thumbs. He wrote a pastiche "The Final Toast" (1987) and dramatized it for performance at the International Mystery Writers' Festival in 2008.
466. Reported (new pastiches): THE MERCHANT OF DEATH, by June Dixon and Donald Monat (from iUniverse); SHERLOCK HOLMES: REPORTS FROM THE DARK SIDE, by Tom Cavenagh (from iUniverse); VANISHING GIRL, by Shane Peacock (the third in his series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes," from Tundra)
467. Karen Murdock spotted the debut album titled "Theories to Suit Facts" from the Bristol-based indie/electronica band JetKing; the album features Conan Doyle on the cover. It was in "A Scandal in Bohemia" that Sherlock Holmes told Watson that "It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts." The band has a web-site at <www.jetking.info>, and the album is available as a CD (£7.99) or as an MP3 file (£6.99). Vaughn Atkinson (guitars and programme) explains that the band really liked the thought behind the quotation, and examples of that kind of thinking are still very much evident today, and that once the album was in place it seemed logical to feature Conan Doyle on the cover.

468. Oct 09 #5: Ransom Riggs' article on "The Surreal Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" was published earlier this year in the magazine mental_floss (Jul 09 #4), and his new book THE SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK (Philadelphia: Quirk Books, 2009; 221 pp., $16.95) offers an interesting and sometimes off-beat look at "the methods and mysteries of the world's greatest detective" (with helpful hints on "How to Outwit a Criminal Mastermind" and "How to Survive a Plunge Over a Waterfall"). There's a "look inside" feature, with a sample of Eugene Smith's artwork, at <www.amazon.com>.
469. Jennie Paton spotted two deeply-discounted offers from Daedalus Books (800-395-2665) <www.daedalusbooks.com>: DVDs with "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970/Robert Stephens and Colin Blakely) and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978/Peter Cook and Dudley Moore) at $6.98 each.
470. Sean Wright has reported that TCM (Turner Classic Movies) will broadcast a "Sherlock Holmes Orgy" Dec. 25-27: "Sherlock Holmes" (1922/John Barrymore), "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" (1931/Arthur Wontner), almost all of the Basil Rathbone, "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959/Peter Cushing), "A Study in Terror" (1965/John Neville), and "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970/Robert Stephens).
471. Peter H. Wood has donated his reference collection of Sherlockian and Doylean books and journals to the Rare Books Library at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia; he is the author of the pastiche THE WINGED WHEEL (1995) and a long-time member of The Bootmakers of Toronto (from whom he received a Master Bootmaker Award in 1983).
472. Reported: POWERLESS, by Matthew Cody (New York: Knopf Books for Young Readers, 2009; 288 pp., $16.99); "superhero kids meet comic-book mystery" (12-year-old Daniel has a sharp mind and is fond of Sherlock Holmes stories).
473. Milton Supman died on Oct 22. He began his television career in the 1950s and became the star of the widely-syndicated television program "The Soupy Sales Show" in the 1960s; he developed pie-throwing into an art form, and claimed that he and his guests had been hit by pies more than 20,000 times during his career. He also had puppets on his show, including White Fang ("the meanest dog in the U.S.A."), whose howl was taken from a radio broadcast of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Sales got his start in entertainment in the Navy, broadcasting over a ship's radio station, where he found, and kept, a recording of the story that had been distributed Armed Forces).
474. Andy Peck has noted that the Mystery Guild is offering book-club editions of THE IMPROBABLE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by John Joseph Adams (Sep 09 #1) for $12.99 (order no. 25-8783), and THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, by Laurie R. King (Apr 09 #4) for $14.99 (77-8398); Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.mysteryguild.com>.
475. Further to the forecast (Aug 09 #1) of the "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" coming up in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 6-8, the next weekend celebration will be held on Mar. 19-21, with a repeat of the mystery "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Mistaken Identity"; you can contact the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts (1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204) (800-275-4278) or visit the web-site <www.capemaymac.org/content/sub-age\_tours.aspx?id=96>.
-
476. Oct 09 #6: Sherlock Holmes' 156th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 15, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own

- checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 <susan221bee@gmail.com> know if you're coming to the event.
477. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcox@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather.
478. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Joan Winterkorn, an internationally recognized appraiser and archivist who evaluated the seven-generation John Murray & Sons archives; she will talk about Holmes, Conan Doyle, and other Murray authors' archival adventures. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below). Tickets will not be sold at the door.
479. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Friday on the second floor of the Algonquin to present Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people.
480. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
481. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $45.00 for chicken or salmon ($50.00 for prime rib). Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> is the contact for a formal announcement.
482. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919/phone 845-361-4320). Please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation.
483. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised.
484. Oct 09 #7: Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs included in the various dinner packets can send 170 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), and 100 copies (for the Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
485. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in the dealers' room (Covent Garden West) on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; for information about dealers' tables, contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com>. And the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the writings of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will convene for a Junior Bloodstain (a considerably less than totally reverent event) in the lobby of the Algonquin Hotel at 10:30 am; if you're planning to attend, please contact Anne Cotton (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
486. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:30 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). The cost is $79.00 (details below) or $89.00 after Nov. 25 or at the door.
487. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:15 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 64th Street (between 6th and 7th Avenues) (and yes, 6th Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas), and the cost will be $20.00 including tax and tip. It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations will be important; please send your checks to Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032). Guests from overseas can reserve by e-mail and pay at the door; her e-mail address is <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
488. The Algonquin Hotel has been the weekend home for the birthday festivities for more than 50 years, and rooms may be available (details below).
489. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Algonquin Hotel, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, you can visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and click on BSI Weekend, or contact Mary Ann Bradley <mabmfw@aol.com>.
490. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; you would be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you should not forget about non-optional extras such as almost 18% in state and city taxes).
491. Oct 09 #8: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
492. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and <www.bsiweekend.com>. News of additional events will be found in this newsletter, and at the web-sites.
493. Vic Mizzy died on Oct. 17. He had a long career as a composer for film and television, and was best known for his "Addams Family" theme (unless you're a fan of "Green Acres"); Dave Morrill notes that much of Mizzy's score for William Castle's "The Night Walker" (1964) was used again in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1972, with Stewart Granger).
494. Reported: tales of a "bloodsucking plant, a heat-draining Eskimo vampire, and a fang-bearing femme fatale" in THE VAMPIRE TALES OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Robert Eighteen-Bisang, with an introduction by Martin H. Greenberg (from Skyhorse, $14.95).
495. There's a new special-clearance offer at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> for a "six pack" of BSJ Christmas Annuals. You should click on "Items for Sale" and then on "Deal Table"; the offer's limited-time-only.
496. Christopher Morley called H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY (1941) "the most original and enchanting crime story of the year," and it is grand to have the book back in print (Nevada City: Blue Dolphin, 2009; 180 pp., $16.95) as the first in "The Mr. Mycroft Commemorative Series". The book is about "Mr. Mycroft" (many have suspected he's really an elderly and retired Sherlock Holmes); the book was adapted for television as "The Sting of Death" (1955) with Boris Karloff as Mr. Mycroft (kinescopes survive, but are not available commercially), and the film "The Deadly Bees" (1967) was based on the book, with a script by Robert Bloch (who was so annoyed when a British writer removed the Mr. Mycroft character and "juiced up the script" that

- Bloch never saw what he called his "deformed offspring"). The new edition has an informative foreword by Stacy Gillis, and an interesting afterword by John Roger Barrie, who addresses the question, "Who Is Mr. Mycroft?"
497. An accidental discovery on Wikipedia: "The Menagerie" (described as a dark fantasy-novel series written by Christopher Golden and Thomas E. Sniegowski) has four titles published by Ace Books: THE NIMBLE MAN (2004), TEARS OF THE FURIES (2005), STONES UNTURNED (2006), and CRASHING PARADISE (2007), all of them featuring Arthur Conan Doyle as a major character named Mr. Doyle, who is the second most powerful sorcerer in the world, according to the Golden's web-site <www.christophergolden.com/menagerie>.
498. Nov 09 #1: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London also celebrates the Great Detective's birthday in January: a reception honoring "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell" on Jan. 8 at the Royal Society of Medicine, an annual dinner (the title this year is "The Blackmailer's Beanfest") on Jan. 9 in the Members' Dining Room at the House of Commons (Ruth Rendell will be guest of honour), and a morning-after gathering on Jan. 10 at the Centre Page in Knightrider Street.
499. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Charles Press' "100 Years Ago" essay on Bertram Atkey and his early golfing pastiche, Jon Lellenberg's "50 Years Ago" discussion of the ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE CENTENARY ALBUM, Tim Johnson's report on a visit by John Bennett Shaw's son Patrick, and other news about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
500. Bouchercon 40 ("Elementary, My Dear Indy!") was held Oct. 15-18 in Indianapolis, and the program included a well-attended panel ("A Canonical and Conanical Confluence") with Mike Whelan as moderator, and Steve Doyle, Laurie King, Les Klinger, and Roy Pilot as panelists. Jeffrey Marks received an Anthony (best nonfiction critical work) for his ANTHONY BOUCHER: A BIOBIBLIOGRAPHY (Mar 08 #1).
501. Bouchercon 41 will be held in San Francisco, Oct. 14-17, 2010 (with Laurie King as the American guest of honor) <www.bcon2010.com>; Bouchercon 42 will be in St. Louis (Sept. 15-18) <www.bouchercon2011.com>, and there has been no selection of a city for Bouchercon 43 in 2012. Bouchercon is the longestablished world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, named in honor of Anthony Boucher, and it's a grand opportunity to meets authors and fans.
502. Technology continues to make things interesting: Mattias Bostrom's Swedish web-site at <www.sherlockholmes.se> has a "Google Translate" feature that translates from Swedish into 34 other languages, and while it's not a polished translation, you can get a good idea of what's going on in Sweden and elsewhere in the world.
503. Further to the discussion (Oct 09 #1) of wisteria and wistaria, Steve Rothman notes that Caspar Wuster anglicized his name to Wistar (the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia is named in his honor); his brother John used the spelling Wister (and one of his descendants was Owen Wister, author of THE VIRGINIAN). It is unlikely that the Worcestersters and Woosters are branches of the same family tree.
504. Titan Books' reprint series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" has launched with four excellent pastiches: David Stuart Davies' THE SCROLL OF THE DEAD (1998) and THE VEILED DETECTIVE (2004), Daniel Stashower's THE ECTOPLASMIC MAN (1985), and Manly Wade Wellman and Wade Wellman's THE WAR OF THE WORLDS (1975); £7.99/$9.95 each (trade paperbacks, with attractive covers). H. Paul Jeffers' THE STALWART COMPANIONS (1981) and Barrie Roberts' THE MAN FROM HELL (1997) are scheduled for February 2010. The publisher's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
505. Nov 09 #2: Frank S. Beckman ("Lord Backwater") died on Oct. 16. He was a mathematician, the founder and chairman of the Dept. of Computer and Information Science at Brooklyn College of the City University of New York, and then the founder and executive director of the computer science Ph.D. program at the CUNY Graduate Center in New York; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
506. "Science is cool!" is the motto of Pulse of the Planets' Kids' Science Challenge, which has a Sherlockian emblem for its "Detective Science" section; their web-site's at <www.kidsciencechallenge.com>.
507. Susan Diamond has reported that the running of The Silver Blaze at the Hawthorne Race Course in Chicago (Apr 09 #1) went very well, and that there are extra copies of two commemorative booklets and a commemorative pin; $18.00 postpaid for all three items (please make your check payable to The Watsonians) from Susan at 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106.
508. The race also was the occasion for the publication of TWO CELEBRATIONS: THE FIFTIETH ANNUAL RUNNING OF THE CHICAGO BLAZE AND THE TRIENNIAL SILVER BLAZE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS by the BSI; edited by Candace Lewis, the 56-page book includes 14 black-and-white and color photographs is available for $12.95 (plus shipping) <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>. Candace Lewis offers a description of flat-racing as shown in 19th-century art, Roger Donway investigates the fun and logic of "Silver Blaze", and Art Levine reminisces about runnings of the race in New York. The BSI's special offer of copies of BSI Christmas Annuals ($7.00 each or $35.00 for six), also available at the web-site, expires at the end of December.
509. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-11.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new, including their calendar for 2010 featuring the imaginative work of Joshua Green. There's also news from societies (including The Hansom Wheels), and an auction for an overlooked and recently-discovered copy of Bill Dorn's Sherlock Holmes bobble-head doll.
510. The Beaver creek Community Theatre will present Tim Kelly's version of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" from Dec. 4 to 13; 3868 Dayton-Xenia Road, Beaver creek, OH 45432 (937-429-4737) <www.bctheatre.org>.
511. "The Empty House" is a new and imaginative set of figures (Holmes, Watson, Lestrade, Moran, a bobby, and Mrs. Hudson), designed by Jim Hillestad, and available for $155.00. The Toy Soldier Museum <www.the-toy-soldier.com>, offers many other attractive figures, and you can see the Sherlockian set in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/yknl3au>.
512. Anthony J. Richard reports that Breese Books is offering Douglas Wilmer's memoirs STAGE WHISPERS (Apr 09 #3), and will soon publish Emanuel E. Garcia's pastiche THE CASE OF THE MISSING STRADIVARIUS and reprint Abbey Pen Baker's IN THE DEAD OF WINTER (1994) and then publish her new Myrl Norton Adler pastiche DEATH AT THE ROUND TABLE; details are (or will be) available at his web-site at <www.crime4u.com/officialbreesebo.html>.

513. Nov 09 #3: VANISHING GIRL (Toronto: Tundra, 2009; 307 pp., $19.95) is the third in his series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" (who is on his own in London and learning how to be a detective); the book has interesting characters, an intriguing mystery, and imaginative twists and turns. Peacock maintains the quality of his series, and Tundra is producing good books, with decorated covers and two-sided dust jackets. The author's website is at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.
514. Sorry about that: the Mid-Manhattan Library, site of the symposium on "The Sherlock Holmes Effect: How the Arthur Conan Doyle Classics Influence Contemporary Mysteries" on Jan. 26 (Oct 09 #1) is at 40th Street and 5th Avenue in New York.

515. Samantha Wolov has spotted a cute hand-crafted felt Sherlock Holmes mouse from Eden & Eden (560 Jackson Street, San Francisco, CA 94133) (415-983-0490); you can see it in full color at <www.edenandeden.com/item.php?p=499>.
516. Archie McPhee offered their attractive Sherlock Holmes Action Figure some years ago (Aug 04 #6); it's still available at the same price ($8.95), along with a wide variety of amusing items such as absinthe dental floss and an avenging narwhal play set (Box 30852, Seattle, WA 98113) <www.mcphee.com>.
517. AbeBooks has reported the results from BookFinder's compilation of the most sought-after books from July 2008 to June 2009: in the "mystery and thrillers" category William S. Baring-Gould's ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES ranked IN 7th place. If you want to see the top-ten titles on all of the lists, just visit <www.abebooks.com/book/rare-scarce/most-wanted-out-of-print.shtml>.
518. David Morrill has reported that Douglas Wilmer's version of "The Illustrious Client" (1965), at YouTube. All of it, in fact, in five parts. Go to <www.youtube.com>, search for [illustrious client wilmer], and then click on the "five videos" link.
519. "Elementary, My Dear Watson: The Man Behind Sherlock Holmes" is a new video by Philip Gardiner, who has written books that include SECRETS OF THE SERPENT: IN SEARCH OF THE SACRED PAST and THE BOND CODE: THE DARK WORLD OF IAN FLEMING AND JAMES BOND; produced by Reality Entertainment, the DVD attempts to answer the question "What secrets lurk hidden behind the enigmatic counterpart to Sherlock Holmes?" and concludes that there's much of Conan Doyle in both Watson and Holmes. Produced by Reality Entertainment ($24.95), the DVD includes the new 55-minute video and Gardiner's earlier 70-minute "The Madness of Sherlock Holmes: Conan Doyle and the Realm of the Faeries" (Jan 08 #7). There are previews of both videos at <www.youtube.com>.
520. Admirers of "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" and "Gus: The Theatre Cat" will enjoy a new edition of T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS (Jul 08 #2); book has had many illustrators, including the author (who designed the dust jacket for the first edition), Nicolas Bentley, and Edward Gorey, and Axel Scheffler has created attractive artwork for the new edition (London: Faber and Faber, 2009; 80 pp., £14.99) and (Boston: Harcourt Children's Books, 2009; 64 pp., $16.00).

521. Nov 09 #4: There's a long series of early pastiches known to Sherlockians as the "memorias intimas" (actually first published in German, they first came to the attention of Sherlockian collectors translated into Spanish). The original title of the series was "Detektiv Sherlock Holmes und Seine Weltberuhmpten Abenteur" (1907), and Holmes was assisted by Harry Taxon; eventually the hero became Harry Dickson, assisted by Tom Wills, and the stories are still being published, in translation and pastiche. HARRY DICKSON: THE AMERICAN SHERLOCK HOLMES (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2009; 247 pp., $20.95/£12.99) offers translations by Jean-Marc and Randy Lofficier of four stories first published in the 1930s. The publisher has a web-site at <www.blackcoatpress.com>.
522. Ken Lanza discovered the first issue of Dynamite Entertainment's comic-book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sep 09 #5) online in full color <www.newsarama.com/php/multimedia/album.php?aid=31844>. It's an interesting way to promote a series.
523. Alderney (one of the Channel Islands, and part of the Bailiwick of Guernsey) has about 2,400 inhabitants and an extremely active philatelic bureau, and it is the fourth country to issue stamps honoring Conan Doyle this year. There's a set of six stamps, sheets of ten stamps (with illustrated margins), a presentation pack, a first day cover, and a "mystery pack" that includes a special lens and hidden clues that will help you solve a case called "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Case of the Alderney Bull" (a pastiche written by Keith Robinson, who also designed the stamps). You can order all of the items from the Guernsey Philatelic Bureau (Envoy House, La Vrangue, St. Peter Port, Guernsey, Channel Islands GY1 5SS, Great Britain) and from their web-site at <www.guernseystamps.com>.
524. Bert Coules has reported that "Arthur & George", a new play by David Edgar based on the novel by Julian Barnes about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and George Edalji (Sep 05 #5) is scheduled at the Birmingham Repertory Theatre, Mar. 19 through Apr 10, 2010. Broad Street, Birmingham, West Midlands B1 2EP, England <www.birmingham-rep.co.uk>.
525. VAMPIRE STORIES: SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Robert Eighteen-Bisang and Martin H. Greenberg (New York: Skyhorse, 2009; 271 pp., $14.95), casts its net widely: the contents include nine stories (three Canonical and six non-Canonical), a new pastiche ("The Case of the Vanished Vampire") by Bill Crider, and a comprehensive "Sherlock Holmes Vampire Bibliography" of short stories, books, and comic books. And the editors offer interesting explanations for their choices (in case you're wondering, the other two Canonical stories are "The Illustrious Client" and "The Three Gables"). Skyhorse also published the anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA (Apr 09 #1); their web-site's at <www.skyhorsepublishing.com>.
526. Ely M. Liebow's excellent biography DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (1982) is now available in French as L'HOMME QUI TAIT SHERLOCK HOLMES: UNE BIOGRAPHIE DU DOCTEUR JOE BELL, with a new preface by Thierry Saint-Joannis (Paris: Editions Baker Street, 2009; 304 pp. E21.00); the translation was published by Ely's daughter Cynthia, and the book is available from Amazon in France <www.amazon.fr>.
527. Nov 09 #5: Peter Calamai reports that the Canadian Wildlife Federation's 2010 calendar includes a colorful photograph of a fluorescing Lion's Mane. The Federation's web-site is at <www.cwffcf.org.en>; search for [2010 calendar]. If you'd like to see the photograph (in vivid color), go to <www.mindenpictures.com> and search for [cyanea].
528. The Societe Sherlock Holmes de France has reported on the new Centara Grand Mirage Beach Resort Pattaya in Thailand, which is advertised as a "unique and exciting Lost World themed hotel." Alas, there is nothing related to Conan Doyle's "Lost World" except some jungle. You can read more (in both French and English) at <www.sshf.com/index.php3?file=news&num711>. And the hotel's web-site's at <www.centarahotelsresorts.com/pattaya\_hotels.asp>.
529. Thanks to the Internet, we are able to provide advance news of some of the items that will be in the auction and raffle that will benefit the Dr. John H. Watson Fund during the reception on Saturday, Jan. 16; here's the URL: <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/bsiweekend/auction.html>.
530. Christopher Lee received a knighthood in the Queen's Birthday Honours list for services to drama and charity (Jul 09 #1); he was knighted on Oct. 30 at Buckingham Palace by Prince Charles. Sir Christopher's dramatic roles have included Sherlock Holmes, Mycroft Holmes, and Sir Henry Baskerville, and he has made audio recordings of some of the Canonical tales.
531. Vector graphics uses points, lines, curves, and polygons based on mathematical equations to display images in computer graphics, and Sean Wright found an interesting and imaginative set of Sherlockian images offered for sale by ClipartLab. Their web-site is at <www.clipartlab.com>; search for [sherlock].
532. "Treasures at the National Library of Scotland" is an exhibition in Edinburgh through Jan. 8, and one of the "ten iconic items" from the Library's collections is the manuscript of "The Illustrious Client".
533. More information is available on The Pleasant Places of Florida's 20th-anniversary celebration of the Wessex Cup on Feb. 12-14, 2010. The "Wessex Weekend" includes meals, presentations, and other festivities, as well as the running of the race. Carl L. Heifetz (1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655) <microdod@verizon.net> will be happy to provide details on request.

534. Randall Stock continues to add interesting and useful material to his "The Best of Sherlock" web-site, the latest being his census of the known pages from the manuscript of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (35 pages are known to exist: 25 pages are held by libraries and 6 by private collectors, and the owners of 4 more pages are not known). You can see the results of his research at <www.bestofsherlock.com/baskervilles-manuscript.htm>. And he has prepared a list of Sherlock Holmes gifts, for those who are preparing their Christmas lists or who are wondering what to give Sherlockians; he has suggestions for new fans and for long-time S'ians, and you will find his lists at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm>.

535. Nov 09 #6: Edmond and Leon Bloch were specialists in disguised and hidden "detective" cameras; they made Physiographe cameras (disguised as minoculars and binoculars), and a Photo-Cravate (with the camera hidden behind a necktie), and the rarest of their designs is Le Sherlock Holmes, a magazine box camera that's disguised as a small briefcase; it's very rare, and nearly all of the handful of examples known worldwide are in museums. All of this according to WestLicht, which is offering Le Sherlock Holmes at auction in Vienna on Dec. 5 (estimated at E16,000 to E20,000, with a starting bid of E8,000). The camera is dated c.1912, and there's a photograph at <www.westlicht-auction.com/index.php?id=175121&acat=175121&\_ssl=off>.
536. Robert Crichton is continuing his readings of "The Complete Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (Aug 09 #8); he'll perform 12 stories at the Barons Court Theatre at the Curtains Up pub in London, Jan. 5-10, 2010. The pub address is 28a Comeragh Road, London W14 9HR, England (020-8932-4747), and there's a web-site at <www.offwestend.com/index.php/theatres/view/42>.
537. Sir Andrew Sloan died on Nov. 11. He was a career detective, and in 1979 he was appointed national coordinator for the regional crime squads of England and Wales, and was one of the specialists invited to review the investigation into the Yorkshire Ripper case, which led to the creation of a new computer called the Home Office (Large) Major Enquiry System [HOLMES] (Apr 85 #6). HOLMES eventually was succeeded by HOLMES 2, and Sloan received a knighthood in 1991.
538. Cookie Beck offers miniatures, dolls houses, and dolls, including Sherlock Fox ($550.00) and his assistant Miss Mouse ($425.00) at Cookie's Bits and Pieces (21 Field Rock Road, Monroe, CT 06468) (203-268-8610), and you can see them in full color at her web-site <www.cookiesbitsandpieces.com>; the dolls are 6 in. high.
539. "Sherlock Holmes in Miniature" is the title of Robert Nicol's interesting web-site at <webspaces.webring.com/people/us/shnicoll/index-English/html>. The site displays many miniatures and figures, old and new, some of them still available for purchase (including the imaginative "Pixi" collection from Alexis Poliakov).
540. Reported: THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, a "luxury edition" celebrating the 150th anniversary of the birth of Conan Doyle, with a new introduction by P. D. James, from Random House UK, £25.00. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN RUSSIA, seven pastiches edited by George Piliev and translated by Alex Auswaks, from Robert Hale, £18.99. THE CASE NOTES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Guy Adams and Lee Thompson, from Andre Deutsch, £19.99; a scrapbook of evidence, some of it in evidence bags, for six of the Canonical tales. SHERLOCK, JOHN, AND TREVOR, three pastiches by C. C. Williamsen, from AuthorHouse, $15.99. THE PENGUIN COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, with a new introduction by Ruth Rendell, from Penguin, £30.00 cloth, £16.99 paper.
541. A new catalog from Alberene Royal Mail (Box 902, 9 Mill Alley, Harrisville, NH 03450) (800-843-9078) <www.alberene.com> has many Sherlockian items, including pub glasses, a pub chalkboard, a pub-in-a-box, a pub sign from The Sherlock Holmes, a pocket magnifier, a pocket watch, a movie poster, and a wall clock (as well as a Diogenes Club wall clock).
542. Nov 09 #7: The Red Circle of Washington continues to look for politicians who display some Sherlockian expertise, and we can now add Vice President Joe Biden to the list. Dan Stashower spotted him on "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" on Comedy Central on Nov. 17, discussing the Recovery Act: "One thing you haven't seen is that old thing about the dog that hadn't barked: you haven't seen the big waste."
543. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES, by Steven Doyle, from For Dummies in March; 384 pp., $19.99. The series began in 1991 with DOS FOR DUMMIES, and there are now more than 1,700 titles; according to the publisher, "It's elementary! SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES is an indispensable guide for students and fans alike!"
544. Pattie Tierney has created an attractive Sherlock Holmes Holiday Greeting Photo Card ($3.50) that comes with a recipe for Sherlock's gingerbread; you can see it at <www.etsy.com/view\_listing.php?listing\_id=35011606>.
545. Edward Woodward died on Nov. 16. He began his acting career on stage at an early age, and went on to star as "Callan" on television from 1967 to 1972, and as "The Equalizer" from 1986 to 1989, and received an OBE [Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire] in 1978. Woodward played Mason in "Shoscombe Old Place" in the BBC Peter Cushing television series in 1968, Dr. Watson in John Kane's play "Murder, Dear Watson" in 1983, and Sherlock Holmes in the television film "Hands of a Murderer" in 1990.
546. Pat Ward discovered the American Library Association's series of READ posters, including one showing Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law from the upcoming Guy Ritchie film, with the quotation "When you have eliminated all which is impossible, then whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." $16.00 at their web-site <www.alastore.ala.org>. Early purchasers may have acquired a first edition with a typo ("improbably"). Another poster shows Rachel McAdams, but in a different film ("The Time Traveller's Wife").
547. Further to the report (Sep 09 #2) on SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARCHIVE COLLECTION, the three-DVD set from Synergy Entertainment ($24.95) is a splendid collection of early films. Produced by Ronnie James, one of the earliest and most energetic collector of old and not-so-old films, the set has some real treasures, including "The Sting of Death" (1955), a one-hour dramatization for television of H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY that starred Boris Karloff as Mr. Mycroft that has never been available before. The same is true of "Lost in Limehouse, or Lady Esmerelda's Predicament" (1933), a 20-minute short with Olaf Hytten as Sheerluck Jones, and "A Case of Hypnosis" (1952), a short detective film with an all-chimpanzee cast (with a detective in Sherlockian costume). There are many other films in the set, with Holmes played by Georges Treville, Eille Norwood, Arthur Wontner, Alan Napier, and John Longden, and the quality of the transfers is splendid. Recommended.
548. Raymond B. Browne died on Oct. 22. He founded Bowling Green State University's Center for the Study of Popular Culture in 1967, and its department of popular culture in 1973. With his wife Pat he founded the Popular Press in 1970, and in 1982 they published the first edition of Ely Liebow's DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES.
549. Nov 09 #8: William Gurstelle's ABSINTHE & FLAMETHROWERS (Chicago: Chicago Review Press, 2009; 208 pp., $16.95) has an intriguing title, and an explanatory subtitle: PROJECTS AND RUMINATIONS ON THE ART OF LIVING DANGEROUSLY; the section on "The Physical Arts" discusses bullwhips, knife throwing, and bartitsu (invented by E. W. Barton-Wright, and quite likely misspelled as baritsu in the Canon).
550. Warner Bros. continues to come up with imaginative ways to promote the new Guy Ritchie film: Ken Lanza spotted the game "221B" at <www.221b.sh>; it's a two-player game (but you can play it alone) connected to Facebook, and it has excellent graphics taken from the film. Hot-drink sleeves at 7-Eleven stores ask "How Holmes are you?" and direct you to <www.7-11.221b.sh> (noted by Debbie Clark); 7-11 also will have window banners and point-of-purchase signage for the film, and there's some pay-back in the game, in which one piece of evidence is a vintage newspaper that features a front-page advertisement for "Joe C. Thompson's Coffee Emporium--Open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m." (in 1927, Joe C. Thompson Jr. founded the Southland Ice Company, the precursor to the 7-Eleven chain).

551. And there's more: if you would like to tour the film's locations, the studio has teamed up with VisitBritain (the national tourism agency) to offer a list at <www.visitbritain.us/campaigns/british-film/index.aspx>; click on "British Locations" to learn about six sites for the films, and many others of Sherlockian and Doylean interest. Holmes is on Facebook, of course, at <www.facebook.com/SherlockHolmes>. Anne Mitchell's colorful blog for the film is at <www.thesherlockholmesmovie.com>. The California Lottery offers four "scratchers" cards with poster artwork; there are images of the cards at <www.calottery.com/Games/Scratchers/Gallery/SherlockHolmes.htm> (reported by Gordon Adelman).
552. Warner Bros. also was one of two sponsors for the 30-minute special "Family Guy Presents: Seth & Alex's Almost Live Comedy Show" broadcast on Nov. 8 by Fox; Warner Bros. replaced Microsoft when that company withdrew after seeing the script and presumably deciding it wasn't appropriate for their customers). The commercial was introduced by Stewie Griffin, the one-year-old member of the family.
553. John Baesch spotted the November issue of Script: Celebrating the Writer, which has a long article by Ray Morton about the writing of the film script, and Morton's long interview with Nicholas Meyer about his memoirs THE VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE (Sep 09 #1).
554. Presumably there's a long line of people hoping to piggy-back on publicity for Guy Ritchie's new film, but the Visit Kent web-site is off and running; <mediafiles.thedms.co.uk/Publication/TK-Kent/cms/pdf/Sherlock\_Holmes.pdf> is the URL for a "Sherlock Holmes Mystery Tour of Kent" that guides visitors to Chatham (where the film company worked on location) and other Sherlockian and Doylean locales. And it is possible that the other "Sherlock Holmes" (with Ben Snyder as Holmes and David Gareth-Lloyd as Watson) will be available on DVD on Jan. 26 <www.tinyurl.com/yf2jzs9>.

Jan 10 #1:

1. Sherlock Holmes' 156th birthday was celebrated heartily in New York on Jan. 15, and others date during a never-boring long weekend that began with the traditional ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (with the usual lunch at McSorley's).
  2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was Joan Winterkorn (archivist and appraiser for the British bookseller Bernard Quaritch), who spoke about evaluating the papers of seven generations of Conan Doyle's publisher John Murray.
  3. The Beacon Society held its annual meeting at the Algonquin on Friday morning (the group's mission is to encourage and recognize programs that introduce young people to Holmes), and the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's featured The Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) in a reprise of their imaginative "Holmes in the Nursery". The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the Jan WHIMSEY award (in memory of his wife Jan Stauber) for the most whimsical piece published in The Serpentine Muse last year; the winner was Philip Shreffler, who received a certificate and a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Yale Club, with Jerry Margolin offering the first toast to Karen Gurian as *The Woman*. The dinner featured the usual toasts and traditions, and Nils Nordberg's proposal that Sherlock Holmes was Norwegian, a report by Hartley Nathan on an authentic Penang lawyer that security concerns prevented him from bringing onto the plane in Canada, Sue Vizoskie's discussion of what might have happened in Sherlock Holmes had been a woman, and a toast to Old Irregular Bill Rabe, singing of "Aunt Clara" by Henry Boote to the original music that was composed by Bud Willis in 1936, followed by a performance by Ray Jessel (who was one of the authors of the musical "Baker Street").
  5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, awarding Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Tom Cynkin ("Lord Bellinger"), PJ Doyle ("Ettie Shafter"), Sir Christopher Frayling ("Vernet"), Patricia Guy ("Imperial Tokay"), Laurie King ("The Red Circle"), Sarah Montague ("Violet Smith"), Daniel Polvere ("Holloway and Steele"), Sally Sugarman ("The Three Gables"), and Maria Carmen Veiga-Hayzen ("Isadora Klein").
  6. Mike also presented the BSI's Two-Shilling Award (for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty) to John Bergquist, Bob Coghil, and Steve Doyle; and Editor's Medals were awarded to John Bergquist, Susan Dahlinger, Glen Miranker, Gianluca Salvatore, and the late Paul Jeffers in recognition of their services in editing books and Christmas Annuals published by the BSI. Mike also presented an engraved crystal vase to Freda Howlett, recognizing her as co-founder, honorary member, and past president of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London.
7. Jan 10 #2: The Gaslight Gala, held as usual at the Manhattan Club, celebrated "Poisons in the Canon" with toasts and songs (including a performance by Cynthia and Richard Wein's of Warren Randall's "You've Got to Pick a Poison or Two"), plus a skit (Warren Randall's "Watson's Agency, or a Case of Double Indemnity" acted by Elyse Locurto and Don Hobbs), a quiz game (Donny Zaldin's "Who Wants to Be a Sherlockian Millionaire"), and other entertainment.
  8. On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin welcomed (as usual) sellers and buyers, and at 10:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) gathered for their Junior Bloodstain, which featured a dramatic reading of Anne Cotton's script for "Sherlock Holmes and the Sure Thing".
  9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party was again at the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, with wining, dining, and conversation in the Great Hall, and entertainment in the Meeting Room: Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies present who had been honored by the BSI as *The Woman*, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported poetically on the events of the previous year and of the previous evening.
  10. Mike Berdan was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year: his article "Holmes Alone: Glimpses of Post-Watson Baker Street in 'The Mazarin Stone'". And the Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets by June Kinnee, Sue Vizoskie, Elaine Coppola, and Carol Cavaluzzi for a bottle of vintage (and well traveled Madeira donated by Patricia Guy <www.patriciaguy.com>).
  11. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise be unable to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to this year's auction were The Denizens of the Bar of Gold (a pillow hand-crafted and decorated by Alice Zalik that commemorated "The Abbey Grange", Joseph Coppola (a diploma issued by the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh and signed by the father of Joseph Bell), The Curious Collectors of Baker Street and Jerry and Chrys Kegley (a set of five medals crafted by Maggie Schpak), Chuck Kovacic of Baker Street Los Angeles (posters and fake lottery tickets for Guy Ritchie's new film), and Scott Monty (the annual-dinner packet he left behind at the Yale Club and kindly bought back from the Fund).
  12. There was an informal "The One Fixed Point Dinner" at Kennedy's on Saturday evening, with the traditional reading from Ogden Nash's work and the traditional toasts ("the Guinness flowed like wine," one of the participants has reported); and on Sunday a brunch arranged by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant.

13. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 7, 2011. And the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner will be on Jan. 15, 2011.

14. Jan 10 #3: I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, you can visit Scott Monty's well-illustrated blog at <www.bakerstreetblog.com>, or wait for the reports that will be published in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSJ appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $37.50 (to the U.S.) or $47.50 (international); checks can be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331), and credit-card payments are accepted from foreign subscribers. You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSJ, and information on the BSI's other publications.
15. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2010 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
16. Highly recommended: "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" is a set of four DVDs issued by Acorn Media last year ($59.99) with the 13 programs in the first series broadcast by ITV in 1971. The series was based on the anthology edited by Hugh Greene, and featured excellent performances by fine actors in good stories, including John Neville as Dr. John Thorndyke, Robert Stephens as Max Carrados, Roy Dotrice as Simon Carne, Peter Vaughan as Horace Dorrington, and Donald Pleasance as Carnacki. It will be nice indeed if Acorn Media follows up with the second season.
17. Donald J. Terras (whose Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars is "The Politician, the Lighthouse, and the Trained Cormorant") presides over the Grosse Point Light Station near Chicago, and lives in the keeper's quarters (the station is still in operation as a private aid to navigation on Lake Michigan). And he happily reports that the federal government has awarded $165,000 to help preserve the lighthouse.
18. David Levine died on Dec. 29. His artistic caricatures were a trademark for the New York Review of Books, which published more than 3,800 of his drawings over 40 years. His work appeared on the cover of Time, and in many other magazines and newspapers, and his art is in the permanent collections of the Library of Congress and the National Portrait Gallery in London. His subjects included both Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes; this portrait of Conan Doyle appeared in the New York Review of Books on Aug. 17, 1978, accompanying Julian Symons' long review of Michael Dibdin's THE LAST SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY.
19. William Safire's death (Oct 01 #1) has not ended his interesting N.Y. Times column "On Language": Erin McKean wrote (Dec. 17, 2009) about Wordnik.com, a new on-line dictionary (she's its founder and chief executive) that "uses text-mining techniques and the unlimited space of the Internet to show as many real examples of word use as we can, as fast as we can." The URL is <www.wordnik.com>, and there are (as I write this) 300 million example sentences, 4.7 million unique words, and 29,177 Wordniks who contribute. You are welcome to join their ranks, if only to add to the examples for sherlock, Sherlock, and Sherlock's (or for moriarty, Moriarty, and Moriarty's).

20. Jan 10 #4: Phillip Bergem has compiled two extensive checklists of Sherlockian and Doylean television programs, with more than 800 entries, annotated for date, country, actors who played Holmes and Watson (or Conan Doyle), production company, and alternate titles. It's available by e-mail from Phil <pbergem@att.net> as a PDF or Excel file.
21. This year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library will be given by Peter Calamai on May 29, and the Friends have announced that a "revitalization" of the Library will involve creation of a new Special Collections Centre on the 5th floor that will allow access to the Arthur Conan Doyle Room whenever the Library is open.
22. Further to the item (Jul 09 #4) on the statue of Sherlock Holmes in Edinburgh, the Scotsman has reported (Dec. 21) that planning calls for development of Picardy Place as a public square that will include a new hotel, part of a £850 million commercial development. There's no word on where the statue now in storage will wind up.
23. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 19-21, 2010 will offer a new Sherlockian mystery ("The Case of the Demons in a Padded Room") written by John K. Alvarez. The weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years, and there's more information at the festival web-site at <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html>, and from 1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278).
24. "The membership of Holmes societies around the world is of high intellectual caliber," Theodore Dalrymple suggests in a long piece on "The Eternal Detective" in the National Review (Dec. 31, 2009). "Their publications are learned and ingenious. Never is pedantry more joyously or innocently employed, for example, than in the ferreting out of the details of the biography of Sherlock Holmes (and Dr. Watson, of course)."
25. Donal Donnelly died on Jan. 4. He described himself as "an itinerant Irish actor," and had a long career on stage, screen, and television. He played a fine Watson to Frank Langella's Holmes in "Sherlock's Last Case" in Washington and New York in 1987.
26. The series of Sherlockian mystery jigsaw puzzles was launched quite a few years ago (Mar 96 #3), and two of the 1000-piece puzzles ("The Kent Chapel Murder" and "Watson's Inheritance") are back, with a twist: they're now bilingual, with English and French booklets in each puzzle box ($29.99); you "assemble the puzzle, read the mystery booklet, search for clues, and solve the crime!"
27. Will Thomas reports that the Bartitsu Forum is receiving increased attention, thanks to Guy Ritchie's new "Sherlock Holmes"; the Bartitsu Society's web-site at <www.bartitsu.org> offers an interesting interview with Richard Ryan, who choreographed the fight scenes in the film. There's also a link to a 4-minute preview of an up-coming documentary ("Bartitsu: The Lost Martial Art of Sherlock Holmes") about E. W. Barton-Wright's "new art of selfdefense" that Watson may well have misheard or misspelled when he told his readers what Holmes said about baritsu in "The Empty House".

28. Jan 10 #5: The January-February issue of Dollhouse Miniatures (successor to Nutshell News) has an interesting and well-illustrated article by Deb Weissler about her Sherlockian room box. And the magazine is honoring the 30th anniversary of the founding of The Mini-Tonga Scion Society with a new room-box contest, open to all miniaturists and collectors; you should submit one or more photographs of your Sherlockian room box with a brief description (up to 250 words) to the magazine (68132 250th Avenue, Kasson, MN 59994) <kim@dhminiatures.com>, and the contest deadline is Mar. 10). The magazine costs $6.95 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
29. The 2009 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 48 pages of scholarship and occasional whimsy; the scholarship includes Terri Haugen's report on the research by the late Samuel C. Fry for his paper "The Influence of Mr. Sherlock Holmes on Twentieth Century Arctic Exploration". $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.), with checks payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles, from Terri Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332. Their 2007 annual also is available, with 290 pages celebrating the society's 25th anniversary with a compilation of the best material published in earlier issues; the cost is $24.95 postpaid to the U.S. ($27.95 to Canada, $35.95 elsewhere).
30. L'HOMME QUI ETAIT SHERLOCK HOLMES: UNE BIOGRAPHIE DU DOCTEUR JOE BELL (Paris: Editions Baker Street, 2009; 355 pp., E21.00) is the French translation of Ely Liebow's DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (1982), and it is nicely done indeed, with a new preface by Thierry Saint-

- Joanis; it's interesting to see that it has been "traduit de l'american" (the French obviously are aware that Yanks and Brits don't use the same language). You can buy the book easily at <www.amazon.fr>.
31. Patrick Stewart was knighted by the Queen in her New Year's Honours List, for services to drama. As Captain Jean-Luc Picard he commanded the Enterprise in the series "Star Trek: The Next Generation", and in "Lonely Among Us" (1987) he mentioned "the immortal Sherlock Holmes" (this was the first episode of the series to pay tribute to Holmes).
  32. Watson's Tin Box will host their third "Scintillation of Scions" at Claret House in Clarksville, Md., on Aug. 28, with the intent of bringing together members of mid-Atlantic (and east-coast) Sherlockian societies for "an afternoon of fun, scholarship, and social time." It's an entertaining gathering, and additional information is available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724) <www.watsonstinbox.org>.
  33. Alastair B. Martin ("Colonel Sebastian Moran") died on Jan. 12. He was an art collector, and chairman of the Brooklyn Museum from 1984 to 1989, and a devotee of tennis, many times an amateur champion in court tennis (the game dating back to the Middle Ages and played on walled courts) and in the more modern United States Open; as president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association he supported opening its amateurs-only tournaments to professionals. And he was a Sherlockian: he was a member of the Five Orange Pips of Westchester County, and he owned the four surviving pages of the manuscript of "The Crooked Man" and first contributed to The Baker Street Journal in 1970 with a paper suggesting that Moriarty was a woman. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1972.

34. Jan 10 #6: "During one of the Church of England's more gruesome civil wars recently, I happened to meet the Archbishop of Canterbury at a literary festival," A. N. Wilson wrote in the December issue of the British edition of the Reader's Digest. "I asked how he managed to stay sane. 'I just keep reading the Sherlock Holmes stories,' he said." The article was titled "Sherlock Holmes: What *Is* the Secret of His Success?"
  35. "Sherlock Holmes" is the title of a new DVD released on Jan. 26 by The Asylum Home Entertainment ($24.95), nicely timed to benefit from the attention given to Guy Ritchie's film. This one's billed as "an explosive, creaturefilled mystery adventure in the vein of Harry Potter and Hellboy," and it's a low-budget film produced last year in Wales. Sherlock Holmes is played by Ben Snyder and Watson by David Gareth-Lloyd, and they're supported by a cast that includes a sea monster, dinosaurs, fantastic steam-punk machinery and a robot; the film's not to be taken seriously (the box for the DVD carries a warning that it "contains scene of creature and sci-fi action"), and there is more about the film (and the company) at <www.theasylum.cc>. "Attack of the Clones" is a long and interesting article by Brian Raftery about The Asylum that appeared in the January issue of Wired; according to Raftery, the company's planning to make "a meteor film, an airplane-disaster movie, a western, and something called 'MILF'."
  36. Tim O'Connor reports that "The Sherlock Holmes Collection" (a two-sided DVD from Echo Bridge Entertainment in 2009) has three of the Matt Frewer television films ("The Hound of the Baskervilles"/"The Case of the Whitechapel Vam Vampire"/"The Royal Scandal") in a box with artwork echoing the colors of the posters for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" (sold on discount racks at Target for $5.00). And there's a variant with more sedate generic artwork in black and white (sold on discount racks at Walmart for $5.00).
  37. "Majoring in the Memoirs" is the theme of this year's "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 17-18; their mailing list is maintained by Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@aol.com>.
  38. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2009" includes Timothy Reich's amusing "A Theft Forgiven: A Newspaper Vendor's Letter to Watson", Robert Brusic's "A Baker Street Visit from St. Nicholas", and other entertainment and scholarship; the 50-page booklet is available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122) for $8.00 postpaid (please make checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers).
  39. Reported: Michael Chabon's MANHOOD FOR AMATEURS: THE PLEASURES AND REGRETS OF A HUSBAND, FATHER, AND SON (New York: Harper, 2009; 320 pp., $25.99) includes an essay titled "The Ghost of Irene Adler" (not really Sherlockian).
  40. There's a new date for the conference planned by The Norwegian Explorers in Minneapolis (May 09 #1): "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" will be held on Aug. 6-8 at the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota. You can enroll on the mailing list by contacting Gary Thaden (2301 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55404) <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>. The conferences have been held every three years, with interesting events and good attendance.

41. Jan 10 #7: "Sherlock Holmes. Duration: 2 hours and 6 minutes. Can you hold it that long?" Kelly Blau discovered <www.runpee.com>, a website devoted to "helping your bladder enjoy going to the movies as much as you do." "Sherlock Holmes" is one of the films, with synopses provided for four points recommended by the site for bathroom breaks.
  42. Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" obviously is a commercial success: according to the Box Office Mojo web-site, as of Jan. 27 (32 days after the film opened, the film had grossed $389.1 million worldwide ($192.1 million domestic and $197.0 million foreign), and ranked #121 in the list of biggest grossing films ("Avatar" is #1 with $1.878 billion, and "Titanic" is 2 with $1.848 billion). And the attention devoted to the film has had some interesting side-effects: reviews and side-bar stories included interviews with local Sherlockians and publicity for local Sherlockian societies, and (according to the Hollywood Reporter) sales of the MPI Media set of "Sherlock lock Holmes" DVDs increased by nearly one-third in the first week after the film's release.
  43. Dennis Palumbo, blogging about the film to the Huffington Post on Jan. 5, recalled and told once again the famous (perhaps infamous) "tent joke" that was posted to The Hounds of the Internet in July 1998 and apparently first published in the Nov. 1998 issue of the Reader's Digest. I've reported the full text of the joke some years ago (Dec 01 #6); I won't reprint it here.
  44. "Sherlock Holmes (well-cut trenches) meets Edwardian dandy (slick, elegant, eight-button double-breasted suits) meets...Hong Kong Phooey? (silk boxer briefs)." That's GQ's description of John Galliano's fall 2010 collection, unveiled in Paris this month; thanks to Mitch Higurashi for a URL that has lots of photographs <www.gq.com/fashion-shows/brief/F2010MEN-JGMEN>. One suspects, of course, that Galliano was inspired by the Guy Ritchie film.
  45. Robert Downey Jr. received the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's Golden Globe Award for best performance as an actor in a motion picture (musical or comedy) for his performance in "Sherlock Holmes" (winning over Matt Damon, Daniel Day-Lewis, Joseph Gordon Levitt, and Michael Stuhlborg), and in his acceptance speech (one of the more interesting during the evening) he quoted the Canon: "Art in the blood is liable to take the strangest forms," he said, noting that the Hollywood Foreign Press Association is a "strange bunch."
  46. The Critics' Choice Awards (bestowed by the Broadcast Film Critics Association) included a nomination for Hans Zimmer ("Sherlock Holmes"); the winner in the category was Michael Giacchino ("Up"); nominations were announced on Dec. 14, and the awards were made on Jan. 15.
  47. Jacquelynn Morris reports that Laurie R. King will speak (and sign books) at East Columbia Branch of the Howard County Library at 5:00 pm on Apr. 30; 6000 Cradlerock Way, Columbia, MD 21045. More information will be available at <www.hclibrary.com>. Laurie will be on tour promoting the new Mary Russell novel THE GOD OF THE HIVE.
-
48. Feb 10 #1: The papers presented at "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Sesqicentennial Symposium" at the Houghton Library at Harvard last May have been published as PAPERS AT AN EXHIBITION, and it is a delightful volume, with 14 papers about Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and Sherlockians, and a

- full-color dust jacket showing a portrait of Holmes by Frederic Dorr Steele. $38.95 postpaid to the U.S. (or $49.50 elsewhere) from The Baker Street Irregulars (3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953) <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
49. Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (originally commissioned by Jeremy Brett in 1988) will be performed at the People's Light & Theatre, from July 7 through Aug. 8; 39 Conestoga Road, Malvern, PA 19355 (610-544-3500) <www.peopleslight.org>.
  50. Spotted by Joan Betzner: THE GRAPHIC NOVEL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Vincent Goodwin, from the ABDO Publishing Co.; six titles, $28.50 each, tgfkm, $19.95 each at the company's web-site <www.abdopub.com>; you can also request a catalog (8000 West 78th Street #310, Edina, MN 55439 (800-800-1312)).
  51. THE CARLTON HOBBS SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION (BBC Audiobooks, 2010; £30.00) is a set of three CDs with twelve programs from the old 30-minute Carlton Hobbs/Norman Shelley series and new introductions by Nicholas Utechin, that were broadcast by BBC Digital Radio 7 in 2004; Hobbs and Shelley did (and Utechin does) well indeed.
  52. There's a trailer for The Asylum's DVD "Sherlock Holmes" (Jan 10 #6); Lloyd Rose spotted it at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=DbJgOYupRT>.
  53. Catherine Wynne discusses the connections, both literary and personal, between Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker in her interesting introduction to a new reprint of Conan Doyle's THE PARASITE and Stoker's THE WATTER'S MOU' (Kansas City: Valancourt Books, 2009, 163 pp., $16.95); the book also reprints Conan Doyle's "John Barrington Cowles", Stoker's "The Coming of Abel Behenna", and an interview written by Stoker after a visit with Conan Doyle at Hindhead in 1907, and offers a fine look at authors who are much better known for Sherlock Holmes and Dracula. Valancourt has reprinted two other books by Conan Doyle, and has many other authors in print; their website's at <www.valancourtbooks.com>.
  54. Frogwares' latest Sherlockian adventure game for computers "Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper" was released last year (Apr 09 #7); Dreamcatcher plans to release the game for Xbox 360 in March. There are screen shots and much more at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/sh>.
  55. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Dana Richards' "50 Years Ago" discussion of Martin Gardner, accompanied by Gardner's "Remembering John Bennett Shaw", Russell Merritt's reminiscences about Chris Steinbrunner, and other news from and about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.

56. Feb 10 #2: Jeff Katz has reported an 87th language for translations of the Canon: HANETA IS A STUDY IN SCARLET translated into Tigrigna (a language in Eritrea). It's available from Ibex (a Swedish on-line company that specializes in African books) for 125kr (about $17.50); you can order at <www.ibexbook.com/book/haneta>. The new discovery will be listed in the next edition of THE GALACTIC SHERLOCK HOLMES, Don Hobbs' electronic bibliography of translations; a one-year subscription (with two to three up-dated CDs) costs $15.00 (to the U.S.) or $20.00 (elsewhere), from Don at 2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028.
  57. The Westport Community Theatre has scheduled F. Andrew Leslie's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for Apr. 9-21; Town Hall, Westport, CT 06880 (203-226-1983) <www.westportcommunitytheatre.com>.
  58. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for Edgars (to be awarded at their gala banquet on Apr. 29 in New York). The nominees include (best juvenile) Nancy's Springer's THE CASE OF THE CRYPTIC CRINOLINE, (the latest in her series featuring Sherlock Holmes' younger sister Enola). The MWA web-site <www.mysterywriters.org/pages/awards/nominees07.htm> lists the nominees in all the categories.
  59. YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD is the title of the first book in Andrew Lane's new series for children (Apr 09 #7); it's due from Macmillan in the UK on June 4, and there's a one-minute trailer at <www.youngsherlock.com>.
  60. "Walk in the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes," advises MC Black, who offers to guide visitors to appropriate Canonical locales, with the price discounted to £5.00 for those who say the magic word [scuttlebutt]. He has a web-site at <www.detectivewalks.co.uk>, and he's at Hardknott, Chadwell, Ware, Hertfordshire SG12 9JY, England <info@detectivewalks.co.uk>.
  61. Sorry about that: the correct dates for the conference ("Spirits of Sherlock Holmes") planned by the Norwegian Explorers in Minneapolis (Jan 10 #6) at Aug. 6-8.
  62. Francine Kitts reports that there's a third Sherlockian mystery jigsaw (Jan 10 #4): it's "The Case of the Fallen Actress" and she discovered all three of them priced at $2.99 each at her local Christmas Tree Shop (which is a discount-store chain that seems to be open throughout the year).
  63. Boa Sr. died this month. She was 85 years old, a member of the Great Andamese tribe, and the last person to be able to speak Bo, one of the ancient tribal dialects in the Andaman Islands; it is not known whether Tonga was a speaker of Bo, but (thanks to the BBC) you can listen to a recording of Boa Sr. speaking Bo <news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/8499000/8499752.stm>.
  64. THE FRENCH ARTILLERY OFFICER, by Lawrence Fischman (Dallas: Gram's Group, 2009; 491 pp., $26.95 cloth/$18.95 paper) is billed as "a Sherlock Holmes/John Watson adventure" and offers plenty for both of them to do, working to help save Alfred Dreyfus from a second conviction, and involved with Winston Churchill, La belle Otero, Auguste Escoffier, Cesar Ritz, Mycroft, and a variety of villains of various nationalities and allegiances; you can order on-line at <www.thefrenchartilleryofficer.com>.
65. Feb 10 #3: It's nice news indeed that "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes: Set 2" will be issued by Acorn Media in March with the second set of 13 programs that were broadcast in the U.S. in 1972 and in the U.K. in 1973 ($59.99). As with the first set (Jan 10 #3), there are excellent performances by actors who include Douglas Wilmer (Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen), Charles Gray (Eugene Valmont), Barrie Ingham (Dr. John Thorndyke), and John Thaw (Lieutenant Holst).
  66. SHERLOCK HOLMES CASEBOOK: FAMOUS CRIME SCENES, a series of attractive artwork by Larry Gosser, now runs to nine scenes ($9.95 each). and you can see them all in full color at his web-site <www.drawingroomg.com>; just click on "gallery" to see his Sherlockian and other art.
  67. "Is It Inevitable, My Dear Watson?" was the headline on Lenny Picker's informative article in Publishers Weekly (Jan. 18), reflecting on the likelihood of another "boom" resulting from all the attention that has been given to Guy Ritchie's new film; you can read all about it at their web-site at <www.publishersweekly.com/article/CA6715287.html>.
  68. Rod Mollise's web-site <skywatch.brainiac.com/holmes/index.htm> is an interesting "Homage to the Master"; he offers newly annotated versions of the first eight short stories, and his paper on "The Erotic Hound: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES as a Text of Pleasure".
  69. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: A SHERLOCK HOLMES GRAPHIC NOVEL is the first in a new series adapted by Ian Edginton and illustrated by I. N. J. Culbard (London: SelfMadeHero, 2009; 132 pp., £14.99); it's nicely done, with fine artwork, and there's an American edition from Sterling ($14.95). A STUDY IN SCARLET is next, followed by THE SIGN OF FOUR and THE VALLEY OF FEAR.
  70. The Falls Players will perform Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" at the Lunda Theater Stage on Apr. 16-18; Box 371, Black River Falls, WI 54615 (715-896-4123) <www.fallsplayers.org>.

71. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times10-1.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new, including a CD with Joel Senter's radio drama "The Golf Stroker's Quirk" from its premiere performance during the Canonical Convocation and Caper in Door County, Wis., in 1996.
72. "Lively and cogent speculations on the life and times of Sherlock Holmes, including a new theory on the site of 221B," was Edgar W. Smith's description of Gavin Brend's MY DEAR HOLMES (London: Allen & Unwin, 1951). Francine and Richard Kitts have found mint copies of the second impression of this classic, in dust jacket, and are offering them for $30.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($35.00 elsewhere); you can contact Francine at 35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301 <fkitts@aol.com>.
73. The script for K. C. Brown's play "Sherlock's Veiled Secret" has been published by the Dramatists Play Service (440 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 10016) <www.dramatists.com>; $5.25 plus postage. The play is set in 1920, when young Violet Sheridan discovers she has a family connection to Sherlock Holmes and collaborates with him on a case involving blackmail.

74. Feb 10 #4: THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION: AN ELEMENTARY GUIDE, by Daniel Smith (London: Aurum Press, 2009; 192 pp., £20.00/$27.95), is an interesting, attractive, and useful book; he offers summaries for each of the stories (without spoilers), essays on Conan Doyle and Holmes and the Canon, interviews with actors and authors, and a wealth of artwork and illustrations. It's an excellent demonstration of how much fun the world of Sherlock Holmes can be.
75. The detailed schedule and registration form for "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds" (to be held at Bennington College in Bennington, Vt., June 24-27, 2010) is now available from Sally Sugarman (Box 407, Shaftsbury, VT 05262) and at <www.bakerstreetbreakfastclub.com>.
76. The March issue of Playboy has a Sherlockian cartoon by Clive Colins, and news of GAHAN WILSON: 50 YEARS OF PLAYBOY CARTOONS (Seattle: Fantagraphics Books, 2010; 942 pp., $125.00); three volumes in a slipcase, with introductions by Neil Gaiman and Hugh Hefner. Gahan's first Sherlockian contribution to Playboy was in the Dec. 1959 issue, and he has had many S'ian cartoons in later issues.
77. Ken Lanza found a new Sherlockian first day cover for the new "Seabiscuit" stamped envelope created by Tris Fall at Baker Street Cachets, which began last year with the Edgar Allan Poe stamp and now has four different covers available <www.tinyurl.com/ybcyzu>.
78. Malice Domestic has reported that Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE CRYPTIC CRINOLINE, the fifth in her series featuring Enola Holmes, 14 years old and the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock, has been nominated for an Agatha (best children's/young adult novel); the winners will be announced at the convention banquet on May 1.
79. The comic book mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS ZOMBIES has reached it's third issue (March, $2.99 from Wildstorm), with an interesting story by Ian Edginton and fine artwork by Davide Fabbri; there are previews at the web-site <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics/?cm=13662>.
80. Pj Doyle reports: "Fringe's annual 'Five Fifths of...'" is tackling a Sherlock Holmes story this year." That's the Minnesota Fringe, and the event will be at the Ritz Theatre in Minneapolis on May 3; the Fringe has invited five different performing arts companies to "tear apart and piece back one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories" More information will be available at <www.fringefestival.com>.
81. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine has added podcasts to its web-site, and one of them is Steve Hockensmith and Michael Wiltrout reading Steve's "Dear Dr. Watson" (from the Feb. 2007 issue). Go to <www.themysteryplace.com/eqmm> and scroll down to the podcast link.
82. Michael Procter has discovered Retrovision Internet TV, a web-site that has a wide variety of films and television programs that you can watch on-line at <www.retrovision.tv>; the Sherlockian offerings range from Arthur Wontner's "The Sleeping Cardinal" (1931) to Christopher Lee's "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" (1992).

83. Feb 10 #5: DREAMS OF FUTURE PAST: THE SCIENCE FICTION WORLDS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND H. G. WELLS, by Dana Martin Batory (Indianapolis: Wessex Press, 2010; 141 pp., $13.95), is a collection of essays published in the 1980s and 1990s in hard-to-find magazines such as Riverside Quarterly and The Age of the Unicorn, and Batory offers interesting insights into the work of Conan Doyle and Wells. The publisher's address is: Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256 <www.wessexpress.com>.
84. The Baker Street Irregulars were born and nurtured in the pages of the Saturday Review of Literature, but the SRL was not the first American literary magazine to aid and abet Sherlockians: The Bookman came first, and did so during its entire history from 1895 to 1933. The editors (Harry Thurston Peck and Arthur Bartlett Maurice) debated "The Hound of the Baskervilles" as each episode was published in the American edition of The Strand Magazine, and in Feb. 1903 an editor described a contributor to The Bookman's Letter-Box as a "true Sherlockian," the first known usage of the word. And over the years The Bookman published commentary, articles (by authors that included Arthur Conan Doyle and Vincent Starrett), and pastiches and parodies (by Charlton Andrews, Corey Ford, and others). SHERLOCK HOLMES, CONAN DOYLE & THE BOOKMAN, edited and annotated by S. E. Dahlinger and Leslie S. Klinger (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2010; 271 pp., $29.95), is a fascinating demonstration of just how much Sherlockians and Doyleans owe to The Bookman. Gasogene Books is an imprint of the Wessex Press; see above for the publisher's address.
85. Forecast for March (from Doubleday): THE DEVIL AND SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF MURDER, MADNESS, AND OBSESSION, by David Grann (352 pp., $26.95) (and from Simon & Schuster in the U.K., £12.99); Grann is a staff writer for The New Yorker, and the collection includes his 2004 article "Mysterious Circumstances" about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green.
86. There's a new 30-second animated Sherlockian commercial, for Red Bull, and you can watch it at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=M0FykOCcX1E>. There's also a Sherlockian puppet in two 1-minute commercials (Episodes 2 and 3) at <www.nikebasketball.com>; check the "Crew" to see more of The Detective.
87. "Arthur & George" (the new play by David Edgar based on the novel by Julian Barnes about Conan Doyle and Edalji) will premiere at the Birmingham Repertory Theatre from Mar. 19 to Apr. 10 (Nov 09 #4), and will then move to the Nottingham Playhouse from Apr. 22 to May 8 (Wellington Circus, Nottingham, NG1 5AF, England (0115-941-0410) <www.nottinghamplayhouse.co.uk>
88. Spotted by Evy Herzog: COLOR YOUR OWN GRAPHIC NOVEL: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, adapted and illustrated by John Green (Mineola: Dover Publications, 2009; 46 pp., $4.99); an imaginative approach, and it's nicely executed. Dover also has issued SHERLOCK HOLMES PAPER DOLLS, by Tom Tierney (32 pp., $9.99); Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, Lestrade, and Irene Adler, with different costumes, and interchangeable heads for many actors who have played Holmes and Watson over the years. And a SHERLOCK HOLMES ACTIVITY BOOK, by David Schimmell (48 pp., $4.99); 32 puzzles for young detectives. Also the SHERLOCK HOLMES STICKER ACTIVITY BOOK, by Arkady Roytman (4 pp., $1.50); you create your own crime scenes with 20 reusable stickers. The publisher's web-site is at <www.doverpublications.com>.
89. Feb 10 #6: Forecast for April (from Bantam Books, 368 pp., $25.00): Laurie R. King's THE GOD OF THE HIVE, her tenth Mary Russell/Sherlock Holmes novel. There are excerpts from the novel at <www.laurierking.com>, weekly episodes of a new short story ("A Case of Correspondence"), contests (she's now well into "Twenty Weeks of Buzz!"), links to blogs (both ladies have their own blogs) and to Russell's tweets at <www.twitter.com>.

90. SHERLOCK HOLMES - THE DEATH AND LIFE, a two-CD set from Big Finish (PO Box 3787, Maidenhead, Berks. SL6 3TF, England) <www.bigfinish.com>, is a twoact play written by David Stuart Davies and performed by Roger Llewellyn in 2008 in Guildford, and then on tour. It's an imaginative script and a fine performance, and the CD set costs $24.40 (or $12.99 as a download); the set includes interviews with Llewellyn, Davies, and director Nicholas Briggs. SHERLOCK HOLMES - THE LAST ACT, written by Davies for Llewellyn and first performed in 1999 and then on tour, was recorded and issued last year on a similar two-CD set, available from Big Finish (same address, same price).
91. It's nice when radio station keep their program available in archives: Doug Wrigglesworth and Karen Campbell were on the CBC series "Fresh Air" on Feb. 7 discussing the new film, Sherlock Holmes, Sherlockians, and The Bootmakers of Toronto, and you can listen to the 13-minute segment at the CBC website at <www.cbc.ca/freshair/2010/02/sherlock_holmes_livesontario_m.htm>.
92. Martin Gardner is an entertaining and knowledgeable writer; there are Canonical allusions in his THE ANNOTATED CASEY AT THE BAT (1984) and THE ANNOTATED NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS (1991), and many other books, and his WHEN YOU WERE A TADPOLE AND I WAS A FISH: AND OTHER SPECULATIONS ABOUT THIS AND THAT (New York: Hill and Wang, 2009; 246 pp. $26.00) is an interesting collection of essays about science, bogus science, mathematics, and other topics; Conan Doyle appears in two essays, both about bogus science.
93. Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" won two Oscar nominations: Sarah Greenwood and Katie Spencer (best art direction) and Hans Zimmer (best achievement in music written for motion pictures, original score); the winners will be announced on Mar. 7. And Robert Downey Jr. won an Irish Film and Television Award (best international actor) on Feb. 20 in Dublin.
94. According to the Box Office Mojo web-site, the film has grossed more than $462 million worldwide, and is now in the top 100 all-time films ("Avatar" is #1, with $2.463 billion).
95. Entertainment web-sites have reported that Warner Home Video plans to issue the film on Blu-ray disc and on DVD on Mar. 30; the Blu-ray disc ($35.99) will have many additional features that aren't listed for the DVD ($28.98), but the company likely will also issue a special DVD with that includes the features. The success of the film has won some attention from film-makers who are said to be considering up-dated "action" version of "The Three Musketeers" and "Treasure Island". And Al Gregory spotted a report in Retail Jeweller (Jan. 21) that jewellers have noted an increase in demand for fob or pocket watches coinciding with the release of the movie.

96. Mar 10 #1 If you're a member of the generation that still wishes your mother hadn't thrown out your collection of comic books, the record for the world's most expensive magazine is now held by a very-fine copy of Detective Comics #27 (May 1939), in which The Bat-Man first appeared: it brought $1,075,500 (including the buyer's premium) at auction last month.
97. Tom Tierney's SHERLOCK HOLMES PAPER DOLLS (Feb 10 #5) is artistic and imaginative, with Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, Lestrade, Irene Adler, Irene Adler, and Mrs. Hudson in different costumes, and a set of interchangeable heads for 30 pairs of actors who have played Holmes and Watson, from Gillette and Mason to Downey and Law (and Cohen and Ferrell, who may or may not get to make a Sherlock Holmes film). Published by Dover in 2009 (32 pp., $9.99) <www.doverpublications.com>.
98. Jon Lellenberg has noted Douglas Kerr's interesting article "The Straight Left: Sport and the Nation" in the March issue of Victorian Literature and Culture. His title alludes to "The Solitary Cyclist" ("It was a straight left against a slogging ruffian"), and Kerr explains persuasively why Conan Doyle's enthusiastic participation in sports, his writing about the subject, and his understand of sporting culture have a great deal to tell us about Victorian Britain." The journal is published by the Cambridge University Press, and the article is available on the Internet as a PDF file at <www.journals.cambridge.org>.
99. Roger Johnson has reported in his excellent newsletter The District Messenger that BBC Radio 4 will air a new program in their series written by Bert Coules and starring Clive Merrison and Andrew Sachs as Holmes and Watson. "The Marlbourne Point Mystery" will be broadcast in two parts on Apr. 5 and 6, and you can listen to it on-line. The program will be included with two others in THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME FOUR, from BBC Audiobooks in April (£17.99).
100. The District Messenger (launched in 1985 and now with more than 300 issues) is available by mail from Roger, at 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford, Essex CM2 6DE, England, and on-line at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/district.php>.
101. Laurie R. King's Mary Russell short story "A Venomous Death" was published as a 14x20" broadside last year (Apr 09 #4), and her new broadside story is "Birth of a Green Man" (illuminating a character in her upcoming THE GOD OF THE HIVE); 250 copies, numbered and signed by Laurie and artist Jean Lukens ($25.00 plus shipping). Details at <www.laurierking.com>, where you will also find contests and an invitation to a Russell/Holmes Twitter Party at <www.twitterfall.com/#hivegod> (sorry, the party will be over by the time you read this, but you can read what those at the party have tweeted).
102. THE GOD OF THE HIVE (New York: Bantam Books, 2010; 368 pp., $25.00) continues the story that began last year in THE LANGUAGE OF BEES. Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes and Mycroft Holmes are all being pursued by the official police, Holmes' son Damian and granddaughter Estelle are in serious peril, and there's a villainous opponent behind it all; the supporting characters are interesting, and there are interesting twists and turns.
103. Mar 10 #2: THE DARK DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES began last year as a threeissue comic-book mini-series from Black House Comics in Australia (AU$5.00 each), but there are now four issues (with more to come, presumably ; macabre and gruesome, with stories by Christopher Sequeira and art by Australian Sherlockian Phil Cornell and others. You can order at their web-site <www.blackhousecomics.com/the-dark-detective-sherlock-holmes.html> and download a free preview of the series.
104. Francine Kitts discovered Read How You Want, which offers a wide variety of large-print books in sizes from 16pt to 24pt, and in Braille editions, with many of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian books available. The web-site is at <www.readhowyouwant.com>.
105. The Los Angeles Chronicle reported (Feb. 25) that a new annual independent paranormal film festival will debut at the 2010 Paranormal Symposium in Angel Fire, N. Mex., Sept. 9-12; the festival will present Sir Arthur Awards to winning submissions, honoring his interest in spiritualism and the paranormal. The symposium is sponsored by the Alliance Studying Paranormal Experiences, and more information is available at <www.aspefiles.org>.
106. CNN sent Katie Walmsley to record some of the birthday festivities in New York, and broadcast a 3-minute segment on Jan. 21. You can view the segment (which includes interviews with some of the Sherlockians on hand for the festivities) at <www.tinyurl.com/ydwb34j>.
107. William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" will be produced at the Rochester Civic Theatre, Sept. 10-26; 20 Civic Center Drive SE, Rochester, MN 55904 (507-282-8481) <www.rochestercivictheatre.org>.
108. The Noble and Most Singular Order of the Blue Carbuncle will hold its 35th annual Reichenbach Day at Mulnomah Falls, near Portland, Ore. It's a festive event, and more information is available from Kent Teynor (910 NW Island Terrace #B-4, Beaverton, OR 97006) <kent@teleport.com>.
109. The registration form for "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" (the conference in Minneapolis on Aug. 6-8) is now available from Gary Thaden (2301 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55404) <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>. The University of Minnesota's Anderson Library will have an exhibition with the same title from June 1 through Aug. 29, exploring "the many meanings of the word 'spirits' and how they relate to Sherlock

- Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and the Victorian Era. And the Library's gallery will have an exhibition highlighting the collection of the late Allen Mackler (whose replica of the sitting-room also is on display at the Library).
110. Jon Lellenberg has noted Douglas Kerr's interesting article "The Straight Left: Sport and the Nation" in the March issue of Victorian Literature and Culture. His title alludes to "The Solitary Cyclist" ("It was a straight left against a slogging ruffian"), and Kerr explains persuasively why Conan Doyle's enthusiastic participation in sports, his writing about the subject, and his understand of sporting culture have a great deal to tell us about Victorian Britain." The journal is published by the Cambridge University Press, and the article is available on the Internet as a PDF file at <www.journals.cambridge.org>.
111. Mar 10 #3: A commemorative Green Plaque has been installed at the Langham by the City of Westminster, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, the Oscar Wilde Society, and the hotel. Unveiled by Gyles Brandreth on Mar. 19, the plaque reads "Oscar Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle dined here with the publisher of 'Lippincott's Magazine' on 30 August 1899, a meeting that led to 'The Sign of Four' & 'The Picture of Dorian Gray'." The plaque is green not because of the Irish heritage of the two authors, but rather because the City of Westminster uses green to distinguish its plaques from the blue plaques installed by English Heritage.
112. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times10-3.htm>, with news of their plans for a 2011 calendar featuring likenesses of Sherlockians pets, plus offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new.
113. The latest catalog from Acorn (Box 1670, West Chester, OH 45071) (888-870-8047) <www.acornonline.com> offers "Sherlock Holmes: Collector's Edition" ($39.99) with Christopher Lee's "Incident at Victoria Falls" and "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady", and the documentary "The Secret Identity of Jack the Ripper" narrated by Peter Ustinov, on a 5-DVD set with a 32-page booklet in a gift tin.
114. Well known for his assistance to Conan Doyle with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, B. Fletcher Robinson was a prolific writer, and his RUGBY FOOTBALL, first published in 1896, offers a detailed look at a sport that's perceived by many Americans as merely an excuse for post-game drinking and singing. Of course rugby also is of interest to Sherlockians, and his book explains well just what a three-quarter does, and why it can be a disaster if he's missing. RUGBY FOOTBALL DURING THE NINETEENTH CENTURY (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 338 pp., £9.99/$15.99/€12.99) is a facsimile reprint of Fletcher Robinson's book, accompanied by some modern essays, all compiled by Paul R. Spiring.
115. Some Americans do take rugby seriously, Paul notes, and are pleased that it will be reinstated as an Olympic sport in 2016 in Rio de Janeiro. The U.S. will be the defending champion, having won gold medals the last time rugby was an Olympic sport, in 1924.
116. The Hollywood Reporter announced (Feb. 22) that PBS-TV will co-produce the BBC "Sherlock" television series co-created by Mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat (Jul 09 #4); Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman will star as Holmes and Watson. This Holmes will be a modern-day detective, giving the series a "21st century spin." Filming is now underway, Gatiss has said that "the fact that Steven, myself, and millions of others are still addicted to Conan Doyle's brilliant stories is testament to their indestructibility."
117. Jim Suszynski has noted Caroline Lawrence's "The Roman Mysteries" series, from Orion's Children's Books in London; the detective is a young girl in ancient Rome, and there are 17 books in the series, which started in 2002 and ended this year. THE LEGIONARY FROM LONDINIUM AND OTHER MINI-MYSTRIES (176 pp., £6.99) is an additional collection of short stories that fills in gaps and wraps up loose ends, and two of the stories were inspired by tales from the Canon. The author has a web-site at <www.romanmysteries.com>.
118. Mar 10 #4: The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Apr. 23-25; the schedule includes a dinner (with a musical tribute to Sherlock Holmes), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. Registration forms are available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
119. The Beacon Society has announced a May 15 deadline for teachers, librarians, Sherlockian literary societies, and others to apply for a Jan Stauber Grant, which funds (up to $250) development of a project that will introduce young people to the Canon. An application form, guidelines, and other details are available at the society's web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
120. "Duke Ellington Meets Sherlock Holmes" is being performed by the University of New Hampshire Dance Company from Mar. 30 through Apr. 3 (83 Main Street, Durham, NH 03824) (603-62-2290) <www.unh.edu/theatre-dance>; it's a jazz, tap, and aerial production paying homage to Sherlock Holmes through the music of Ellington, who read the Sherlock Holmes stories when he was a child (May 85 4).
121. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Kanata Theatre Company on Mar. 23 through Apr. 3 (1 Ron Maslin Way, Kanata, ON K2V 1A7, Canada) (613-831-445) <www.kanatatheatre.com>.
122. "The Strange Case of the Too Few Suspects" is a new one-act play written by Dan Hurwitz, available on-line at <writersnotebook.org>
123. Mystery Scene Magazine has published more than a hundred issues, and it's a fine way to keep up with what's happening in the mystery genre. Edited by Kate Stine, it is published five times a year ($32.00 a year to the U.S.) and you can subscribe by mail at 331 West 57th Street #148, New York, NY 10019, or on-line <www.mysteryscenemag.com>; the web-site offers links to articles from the current and past issues, and to all the book reviews published in the magazine.
124. Kenneth Smookler is planning a tour "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" from Toronto to England (Sept. 28-Oct. 9), with Switzerland an additional option (Oct. 9-15); there is much more information available at a web-site <www.cwttravelsource.com/SherlockHolmes2.html>.
125. The BBC America Shop's spring catalog (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043) (800-898-4921) <www.bbcamericashop.com> offers a set of two "Book Lovers Mugs" (item 15137) for $24.98; bone china, 12 ounces, decorated with "cherished, gilded leather-bound novels," from PRIDE AND PREJUDICE and JANE EYRE to SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE HOBBIT.
126. Barry Grant's THE STRANGE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sutton: Severn House, 2010; 13 pp., $27.95) is an intriguing pastiche: correspondent James Wilson has been invalided home after a brief stint in Afghanistan in 2008, and encounters a mysterious detective named Cedric Coombes, who often calls Wilson Watson, and is thoroughly Sherlockian; there are mysteries to be solved (and more to come, presumably), and it's an entertaining novel.
127. Mar 10 #5: A bibliographic query from Nicholas Utechin, who is conducting research on Ronald Knox's ESSAYS IN SATIRE (1928): there was a signed and numbered limited edition of the book, and he would be delighted to hear from anyone who has a copy of the limited edition in a dust jacket. You can reach him at Highfield Farmhouse, 23 Highfield Avenue, Headington, Oxford OX3 7LR, England <highfieldfarmhouse@yahoo.co.uk>.
128. The list of Sherlockian societies with web-sites continues to grow, and the newest one is The Crew of the S.S. May Day, in Northern Ireland; their URL is <www.thessmayday.org.uk>. The best round-up of society web-sites I know of is provided by Chris Redmond <www.sherlockian.net/societies/index.html>.
129. Ripperologist, an electronic monthly journal edited by Eduardo Zinna, casts its net widely, and has had Sherlockian content in all three issues so far this year: "Ripping Yarns: Sherlock Holmes on Screen" (#110/Jan) is Zinna's long review of the Guy Ritchie film and retrospective review of the

- Rathbone films, followed by "Jeremy Brett: An Appreciation" (#111/Feb) by Jon Rees, and (also by Rees) "The BBC TV's Sherlock Holmes: Productions of the Past Decade" (#112/Mar); information on subscriptions is available on request from Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
130. The campaign to preserve Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, continues, and Jim Ballinger has reported a story on the BBC web-site that includes a two-minute video showing what the house looks like now, inside and out <www.tinyurl.com/yaa8c6c>.
131. The Birmingham-Southern College Library now has a Sherlock Holmes Collection: Richard Green and his son Joshua have placed their Sherlockian collection on indefinite loan to the Library. The Greens are both members of the Genius Loci, the local S'ian society, which was founded at the college in 1980.
132. The delightful Sherlockian dolls made by Martha Heller ("Martha-My-Dear") in the 1980s can again be seen in action, so to speak, in an amusing video ("Rule, Britannia") by Amy Mantell at <www.sherlockshorts.com>, along with two earlier Sherlockian videos (Aug 09 #5).
133. Al Gregory has found the web-site for Craig-a-Bella Sherlock, described as a "newly refurbished centrally heated two bedroom apartment, perched on the cliff above Poldhu Cove" <www.tinyurl.com/ybgepm2>; it's available for rental by vacationers, and the web-site says that it's the "little whitewashed house" where Holmes and Watson stayed in "The Devil's Foot".
134. Michael Procter offers "an elegant solution for a Sherlock Holmes library" using Internet images to create attractive labels for book-shelf boxes used to store magazines and other ephemera; there is a PDF file of what he has done at <www.michael-procter.com/SHLib.pdf> and he's at <micproc@aol.com>.
135. The Minnesota Fringe boasts that it "celebrates the wacky and the sublime (and the sublimely wacky)," and this year their sixth annual "Five-Fifths of..." event will feature five different theatrical companies or artists in five pieces of "A Study in Scarlet" on May 3 at the Ritz Theater in Minneapolis. Tickets go on sale on Apr. 1 at <www.fringefestival.org>.
136. Mar 10 #6: Peter Egan and Philip Franks had a well-received tour as Holmes and Watson in Clive Francis' "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Britain in 2007-2008, and now they are playing Holmes and Watson once again in Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (first performed by Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke in 1988); the tour opened in Bath on Mar. 8 and will close in Cambridge on Apr. 24.
137. PLANETARY: LEAVING THE 20TH CENTURY is the third in a four-volume graphic novel by Warren Ellis and John Cassaday that offers "a complete new Elijah Snow astonishing adventure" (Wildstorm, 2004, $24.95 hardcover and $14.99 softcover); the third volume includes issue #13 (Feb. 2001), which has an aged Holmes. Published by Wildstorm <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm>.
138. Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin now have three titles in print in their SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS series for readers ages 9-12, the latest being IN SEARCH OF WATSON (Dec 09 #5), and there was an interesting feature article about them in the Jan.-Feb. issue of Berkshire Living (their home is in Ashley Falls, Mass.). You can read the article online at <www.berkshirelivingmag.com>.
139. Paramount has joined The Asylum (Jan 10 #6) in releasing DVDs in boxes with covers in the same colors Warner Bros. is using for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes": "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985) has been reissued, but according to reviewers the cover is all that's new; the DVD $19.99) is the same one that was released ($19.99), and there are no extra features.
140. "Sherlock Holmes" has been nominated for Saturn Awards from the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy & Horror Films in eight categories: best action/ adventure/thriller film, best actor (Robert Downey Jr.), best supporting actor (Jude Law), best supporting actress (Rachel McAdams), best director (Guy Ritchie), best music (Hans Zimmer), best costume (Jenny Beavan), and production design (Sarah Greenwood); the winners will be announced on June 24 in Burbank. And Jameson Empire Awards (sponsored by Jameson Irish Whiskey and Empire magazine and voted for by British film fans) went to "Sherlock Holmes" (best thriller) and Jude Law (Empire Hero)
141. And the film continues to do extremely well at the box office: it has now grossed more than $500 million worldwide. Department of placing things in perspective: according to Walter Scott (Parade, Mar. 28) Daniel Radcliffe will be paid $40 million for starring in both parts of the last "Harry Potter" film, and Emma Watson and Rupert Grint will each be paid $30 million; that's a total of $100 million for three actors, more than the entire cost of Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes".
142. John Watkiss, an artist who has worked on Neil Gaiman's "Sandman" series, was commissioned by Lionel Wigram to create a set of "pitch illustrations" for the film, and is reported to have credited Watkiss' work as the leverage needed to convince Warner Bros. to proceed with the project. You can see the artwork at <www.gallerynucleus.com>; search for [watkiss]. Some of the original artwork still is available for purchase.

143. Apr 10 #1: Christopher Redmond's A SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK (1993) was a comprehensive guide to all things Sherlockian, and the second edition (Toronto: Dundurn Press, 2009; 336 pp., $32.00/£19.00) is even more comprehensive: Chris discusses the Sherlock Holmes stories, their author, pastiches, parodies, fans and followers, Sherlock Holmes in the media, and much more, offering intelligent comment and insight. And the book is thoroughly up to date, exploring in depth the many Sherlockian aspects of the Internet. Recommended.
144. Sorry about that: the link for Katie Walmsley's CNN video segment about the birthday festivities in New York doesn't work. You can go to <www.cnn.com> and search for [sherlock holmes intrigues fans], or you can try this URL <www.tinyurl.com/ybcqght>.
145. Reported: BAKER STREET MYSTERIES is a series for readers aged 9-12, written by Tim Pigott-Smith (who has played Watson on stage and Holmes on radio), published by Hodder Children's Books in London. There are three titles so far: THE DRAGON TATTOO (2008), THE ROSE OF AFRICA (2009), and THE SHADOW OF EVIL (2009); £5.99 each.
146. If you want to read twelve Sherlock Holmes stories on your iPod, just visit <www.notescasts.com/booksnew/sherlockholmesnotescast.html>, where you can download THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES for $0.99.
147. A new "Sherlock Holmes Shaped Puzzle" available from Bits and Pieces (Box 4150, Lawrenceburg, IN 47025) (866-503-6395) <www.bitsandpieces.com> comes in two formats (300 pieces or 750 pieces) (items 45849 and 45850) and costs $16.99.
148. Records are meant to be broken: the very-fine copy of Detective Comics #27 (May 1939) that sold for $1,075,500 at auction in February (Mar 10 #1) was surpassed by the $1.5 million paid for a copy in even better condition of Action Comics #1 (June 1938), which featured the first appearance of Superman, in March. Thanks to Paul Herbert for the report.
149. LibraryThing is an interesting user-generated Internet project for people who want to catalog their books and make that information available to others (May 06 #8), and it's now possible to catalog someone else's library. Benjamin L. Clark has done just that for Conan Doyle, and you can see 403 titles at <www.librarything.com/profile/acdoylelibrary>. He has cast his net widely, and includes books about which Conan Doyle wrote (as in THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR), books inscribed to Conan Doyle, books inscribed by Conan Doyle to others, and books that have the bookplate commissioned by Adrian Conan Doyle (and placed in some books purchased by Adrian and added to the library at the Chateau de Lucens). And he would be happy to hear from anyone who can add titles to the list; he's at <benjaminlclark@gmail.com>.

150. It has been a while since I mentioned the Internet Archive (Feb 07 #8); the web-site offers a wide variety of scanned books. Allyn Gibson has reported that the site now offers Ellery Queen's classic anthology of pastiches and parodies THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1944), not easy to find ink-on-paper, at <www.archive.org/details/scriblio\_test\_044>.

151. Apr 10 #2: Jon Lellenberg has forwarded an announcement of the 2010-2011 season at the City Lit Theater in Chicago <www.citylit.org>. A new dramatization of "The Sign of the Four" by Terry McCabe begins previews on May 27, 2011, and run through July 3. Sherlock Holmes will be played by Don Bender, who previously was Holmes in the their productions of "Holmes and Watson" (2006) and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2007).
152. Anglofile, offering detailed coverage of British entertainment and formerly available by mail, now is a blog by Leslie King, and you can read her reports at <anglofileplus.livejournal.com/6322.html>.
153. Al Gregory has noted a report in the Glasgow Herald (Apr. 1) that Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, where Conan Doyle lived as a child, is one of 16 nominees for a Scottish Civic Trust Place Award that recognizes "good local design and conservation." The formerly-derelict 18th-century house was renovated and converted into the Dunedin School (Apr 09 #2).
154. Our new set of four stamps honoring "Cowboys of the Silver Screen" includes one commemorating Roy Rogers, who starred in the western "San Fernando Valley" (1944). When a herd of horses is rustled one dark evening, Roy deduces that it must have been an inside job, because of the ranch dog; Roy noted that "If they'd a been strangers, he would've barked, and there wasn't a peep out of him." William S. Hart, Gene Autry, and Tom Mix are the other three cowboys, so far with no known Sherlockian connections.
155. GRAPHIC CLASSICS is an attractive series of collections and anthologies edited by Tom Pomplun and featuring imaginative artwork; vol. 2 was devoted to Conan Doyle's work (Apr 02 #7), and it was followed by vol. 12 (ADVENTURE STORIES) with "The Crime of the Brigadier", a "special edition" with "John Barrington Cowles", and a revised and expanded second edition of vol. 2 (Jun 08 #6). Vol. 17 (SCIENCE FICTION CLASSICS), published in 2009 (144 pp.) included "The Disintegration Machine". Almost all of the issues can be ordered at <www.graphicclassics.com>: vol. 2 (second edition) and vol. 12 cost $11.95 each, the special edition is $6.95, and vol. 17 is $17.95; you can also see samples of the artists' work at the web-site. Eureka Productions is the publisher (8778 Oak Grove Road, Mount Horeb, WI 53572), and (due in October) their CHRISTMAS CLASSICS will include British cartoonist Hunt Emerson's new adaptation of "The Blue Carbuncle".
156. There was an interesting run of The Strand Magazine at auction at PBA Galleries in San Francisco on Mar. 18, from the collection of Roger Wagner, who had a nearly complete run from Jan. 1891 to Mar. 1950 in publisher's cloth, library cloth, and single issues in wrappers. Estimated at $6,000-9,000, the lot went unsold.
157. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Ralph and Kacoo's in New Orleans on Apr. 14, when the visiting geologists were welcomed by Dr. Rennie Culver on behalf of the local Sherlockians (Le Cercle de Sherlock Holmes). Our next meetings will be in Denver on Nov. 3, in Houston on Apr. 13, in Minneapolis on Oct. 12.

158. Apr 10 #3: Thomas A. Stetak ("The Head of the Police at Cleveland") died on Apr. 12. He owned a company that restored historic buildings and energetically pursued history, both local and Victorian, and he presided over Mrs. Hudson's Lodgers of Cleveland; as a resident of Cleveland he was delighted when he received his thoroughly appropriate Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1990.
159. "Jack el Destripador contra Sherlock Holmes" is the name of a tour that Luz Retamar has led for five years for Spanish tourists who want to join Holmes in pursuing Jack through the actual locations in London. You can read more about the tour (in Spanish) at <viajesconimaginacion.com> and (in English) in issue #113 of Ripperologist, an electronic monthly journal edited by Eduardo Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
160. Recently discovered: THE ADVENTURE OF THE SOLITARY CYCLIST (Mankato: Creative Education, 1991); it's a 48-page book with attractive design and imaginative dust-jacket artwork. The company also published similar editions of "The Red-Headed League", "Silver Blaze", and "The Speckled Band", all out of print but available at <www.abebooks.com> and other web-sites.
161. Sherlox Parlour is the name of a head shop in Dinkytown, newly opened and offering a store-wide sale to celebrate, according to a story in the Minnesota Daily (Apr. 19), reported by Don Pollock. Dinkytown adjoins the University of Minnesota, and the store is offering an occasional 20-percent student discount on its selection of glass and pipe products. A head shop (for those who aren't familiar with the phrase) specializes in paraphernalia related to consumption of cannabis, other recreational drugs, and New Age herbs, as well as counterculture art, magazines, music, clothing, and home decor.
162. "Give Jeremy Brett a Posthumous BAFTA Award" is the title of an on-line petition at <www.petitiononline.com/JBBAFTA2/petition.html> launched by Charlotte Smith. BAFTA is the British Academy of Film & Television Arts, and you can see more about the campaign at <www.bafta4jb.com/To>.
163. Reported: the television film "The Crucifer of Blood" (1991, with Charlton Heston and Richard Johnson), previously available on VHS cassette (1998), has now been issued on DVD from Warner Home Video ($14.98).
164. Donald Pickering died on Dec. 19. He made his stage debut in 1951 and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television. He played Watson in Sheldon Reynolds' second television series "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1980, with Geoffrey Whitehead as Holmes), and recorded "The Speckled Band" for an audiocassette in 1982.
165. Tweet, tweet . . . messages from an estimated 105 million users of Twitter will be archived by the Library of Congress, and of course there are Sherlockian corners in what's known as the Twittiverse; you can read Sherlockian tweets at Scott Monty's Baker Street Blog <www.bakerstreetblog.com>, at other web-sites, and on your cell phones. For those who came in late: some 50 million messages limited to 140 characters) are posted each day, and you can read all about it at <www.twitter.com> (where the slogan is "discover what's happening right now, anywhere in the world").

166. Apr 10 #4: Further to the report (Dec 08 #1) that the British oil company Serica Energy had named two natural-gas prospects in the East Irish Sea "Conan" and "Doyle", Jon Lellenberg spotted an announcement that Serica has entered into a farm-out agreement with Agora Oil & Gas (UK) for the prospects, and that drilling on Conan will begin in May. Serica holds the lease, Agora will drill the test well, and the two companies will share the proceeds if exploration is successful.
167. Last year's THE WIND OF CERTITUDE: A LITERARY BIOGRAPHY OF RONALD KNOX, by David Rooney (Aug 09 #2), has been followed by another new biography: RONALD KNOX AND ENGLISH CATHOLICISM, by Terry Tastard (Leonminster: Gracewing, 2009; 232 pp., £12.99), favorably reviewed in the Sunday Telegraph (Feb. 6).
168. Dr. William R. Hanson has designed Sherlockian cachets for a first day cover for last year's "Early TV Memories" (with his portrait of Ronald Howard and the artwork from the closing credits on the 1954 series) and for a cover honoring the 30th anniversary of Altamont's Agents (with his portraits of society founder Tom Dandrew and Sherlock Holmes); the covers cost $10.00 each postpaid to the U.S. ($11.00 elsewhere). His address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801; please pay with currency or U.S. postal money orders.

169. The iPad ($499.00), Apple's response to Amazon's Kindle, is much more than a just new way to read books, and there's already a Sherlockian adventure game for the iPad available at <www.itunes.com/appstore> ($2.99). "Sherlock Holmes Mysteries" is inspired by the Guy Ritchie film. Also available is "The Sherlock Holmes Experience" ($2.99), which has "The Speckled Band" and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" accompanied by "videos that provide historical perspective and annotations from academics and experts."
170. Katie Forgetting's 2008 play "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Barter Theatre from Oct. 1 through Nov. 13; Box 867, Abingdon, VA 24212 (276-628-3991) <www.bartertheatre.com>.
171. An interesting signed baseball was offered at auction at Heritage Auction Galleries on Apr. 23: signed by Babe Ruth, Jack Johnson, Clarence Darrow, Jack Dempsey, Bob Muesel, Ted Williams, and Arthur Conan Doyle (the auction house considered describing the lot as "the strangest multi-signed baseball on Earth"); it sold for $1,792.50 (including buyer's premium). It wasn't the only signed baseball in the auction; the most expensive was a baseball signed by Babe Ruth alone that sold for $11,950 (ditto).
172. Apr 10 #5: The Times has reported (Apr. 25) that a painting of the ghosts of dead Australian soldiers in the Gallipoli campaign, bought by Conan Doyle in 1928, has been found in Australia, and will be offered at auction by Bonhams in Sydney in June. The painting is by Will Longstaff; the story says that Conan Doyle kept in his home until his death, and it is estimated at AU$20,000-40,000. You can see the painting in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/35t9qow>.
173. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a stamp honoring cartoonist Bill Mauldin, who died in 2003. He became famous for his creation of Willie and Joe in World War II cartoons, and went on to a long career as an editorial cartoonist. He won two Pulitzer prizes, and used Sherlockian themes in at least three of his editorial cartoons, including this one, which was published on July 1, 1987; Ed Meese is shown with the caption "He's got a rear-view mirror on his magnifying glass."
174. Further to the report (May 09 #5) about the violin that Steve Burnett made from wood from a 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, the "Sherlock" violin will be used in a concert celebrating Conan Doyle at the Usher Hall in Edinburgh on May 15. Concert proceeds will aid the SOS Children's Haiti Appeal and the program is to include shorter pieces of music from the era of Conan Doyle and the world premiere of "Elsie and Frances" by the Scottish composer James Clapperton (inspired by the girls who invented the Cottingley Fairies), plus short dramatic excerpts by storyteller Mike Maran.
175. Keir Helberg is offering for sale 19 transcription disks for "The Falcon", "Sherlock Holmes", and "Bulldog Drummond" radio broadcasts from the 1940s, and will be happy to supply details on request. He's in England; his telephone numbers are 020-8809-4991 (home) and 07747-611889 (cell); his e-mail address is <sthellusson@googlemail.com>.
176. Reported from India: a graphic novel of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, adapted by J. R. Parks and illustrated by Vinod Kumar, published in 2009 by Campfire (72 pp., $9.99 postpaid); some of the artwork can be seen at their web-site <www.campfire.co.in>.
177. Joe and Brad Dickinson's 1992 comedy-spoof "Sherlock Holmes: The Melodrama" is being performed at the Pocket Sandwich Theatre through May 15 (5400 East Mockingbird Lane #119, Dallas, TX 75206) (214-821-860) <www.dallas.net>.
178. Long-lost old films do turn up from time to time: a copy of "When Lincoln Paid" was discovered in an old barn in New Hampshire, according to newspaper reports this month. The 30-minute film, released in 1913, survived on nitrate stock and has now been preserved and restored; Francis Ford, older brother of director John Ford, directed and played Lincoln in the film. It is nice to think that someone may some day find a copy of "A Study in Scarlet" (1914); Francis Ford directed that film as well, and played Sherlock Holmes (John Ford, credited as Jack Ford, played Watson).
179. Apr 10 #6: <www.books.google.com> is a useful resource for research: Thad Holt reports that Google has digitized OUT OF DOORS: A SELECTION OF ORIGINAL ARTICLES ON PRACTICAL NATURAL HISTORY, by the Rev. J. G. Wood (1874), a book which Sherlock Holmes quotes in "The Lion's Mane" (Thad also notes that Holmes actually misquoted Wood).
180. Arkham House was founded by August Derleth and Donald Wandrei in 1939, and published many Solar Pons stories from their Mycroft & Moran imprint; the company continues to publish interesting books, including (due in November, $39.95) Jon Lellenberg's BAKER STREET IRREGULAR, a novel that begins in the 1930s and involves the BSI in mystery and espionage. There's a brief history of Arkham House at <www.arkhamhouse.com>, and much more about Derleth at the web-site of the August Derleth Society <www.derleth.org>.
181. Laurie R. King's new Mary Russell novel THE GOD OF THE HIVE (Mar 10 #1) has been published, and Laurie reports from Lisbon (where she's in the midst of researching and writing the next book in the series) that Russell has been dragged into an absurd film venture and is sailing off for Portugal in the company of a megalomaniacal director making a movie about pirates. You can read all of that and much more at <www.laurierking.com>; click on "God of the Hive, day one" and then on the link to the interview.
182. "Baffling clues, astonishing Holmesian deductions, nimble repartee, catch-your-breath scenes of one slam thing after another" is the description of the Guy Ritchie film on the DVD box. And there's a reason to buy the "deluxe edition" of the DVD from Target ($24.99): it includes a limited edition (30,000 copies) of a 52-page booklet with the John Watkiss "pitch illustrations" that Lionel Wigram used to convince Warner Bros. to make the film (Mar 10 #6). Still available at Target stores and at their web-site <www.target.com>. Early publicity for the film said that it was going to be based on a comic book written by Wigram, but since no such comic book or graphic novel has been published, it's quite possible that the pitch illustrations are all there is; Wigram's original story only vaguely resembles the film.
183. And there's more: the Los Angeles Times reported (Apr. 23) that Kieran and Michele Mulroney, the writers working on the sequel, have said that "there have been a number of serious conversations at Warner Bros." about producing the new film in 3-D. The Mulroneys have also said that Brad Pitt has been reading the script to see if he wants to play Moriarty. "I hope Brad likes it," Kieran Mulroney said, "Let's leave it at that."
184. The film has now grossed more than $515.6 million at the box office worldwide. It also headed the list of DVD rentals in the U.S. in mid-April.
185. Finally, Ken Lanza has reported an amusing story about the DVD of the film: KSFN-TV (Fresno) said (Apr. 21) that a woman who bought a copy of the DVD at Wal-Mart discovered when she got home that someone had replaced the DVD with a pornographic video with a fake "Sherlock Holmes" label; Wal-Mart has replaced the porno video with a real DVD without charge.

186. May 10 #1: One of the more interesting copies of Beeton's Christmas Annual will go to auction at Sotheby's in London on July 15. Previously owned by William S. Hall and then by William R. Smith, it is one of two surviving copies signed by Conan Doyle, and it's inscribed "This is the very first independent book of mine which ever was published" and dated Jan. 9, 1914, on an extra leaf. Bill Hall wrote about this copy in the June 1963 issue of The Baker Street Journal, reproducing Conan Doyle's inscription and discussing some of the points of the two variants of Beeton's.
187. If you would like to know more about the surviving copies of Beeton's, you can go to <www.bestofsherlock.com/beetons-christmas-annual.htm>, where Randall Stock offers an excellent survey. And if you're wondering what to bid in July, the record price for a copy of Beeton's is $156,000

- (including the buyer's premium) for Walter Pond's copy, at Sotheby's in New York in 2007; that one's unsigned, and complete except for having the spine in facsimile, and some repairs and restorations (the inscribed copy going to auction in July is complete except for four leaves of advertisements).
188. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Tim Johnson's report on how the Collection benefited from publicity for Guy Ritchie's new film ("The Adventure of the Media Buzz"), Julie McKuras' examination of a 100-year-old parody, and other news from and about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  189. Phil Attwell has reported that Legacy Interactive's computer game "The Lost Cases of Sherlock Holmes 2" (Oct 09 #1) is now available on-line: you can download a 60-minute demo (243 MB) without charge at <www.virginmedia.com>; "find hidden objects and decipher clues alongside Sherlock and Watson, as you travel to Stonehenge, Marisbury Castle, and London's Music Hall."
  190. Tony Harries, who had been Sherlock Holmes' secretary at 221B Baker Street, toured the U.S. and Canada in 1990. And he kept a journal, which has now been published: THE CASE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES' SECRETARY (Morrisville: Lulu, 2010; 185 pp., $11.15 paper/$9.40 download/$3.92 download) offers an interesting and amusing look at Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) America, and at many of the Sherlockians who provided him with hospitality (and only a few of their names have been changed); you can order the book from the publisher <www.lulu.com>, and it will soon be available from major bookstores and web-sites. If you would like to have a signed bookplate, you can send a request to Tony; his address is 11 Longridge, Colchester, Essex CO4 3FD, England <rhinehart@sky.com>.
  191. Further to the report of the discovery of a giant rat in a "lost world" in the remote Foja Mountains in western New Guinea (Dec 07 #4), there's an article about a new expedition to the area in the June issue of National Geographic, with a handsome photograph of the woolly giant rat, which has been named *Mallomys* sp. nov. (it's the photograph that's handsome, rather than the rat). The article is available on-line at <www.ngm.com/foja>, with the photograph and (scroll down) links to earlier reports and photographs.

  192. May 10 #2: Felony & Mayhem Press has an interesting catalog of good books by fine authors, and one of their books is a reprint of WHAT I TELL YOU THREE TIMES IS FALSE, by Samuel Holt (Mar 87 #1); it's an entertaining murder mystery in which the sleuths (and suspects) include actors noted for portraying Miss Marple, Charlie Chan, and Sherlock Holmes. Samuel Holt is one of the many pseudonyms used by the late Donald E. Westlake, and if you'd like to know what the others are, you can visit his web-site at <www.donaldwestlake.com>.
  193. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Footlight Players Theatre, June 24-July 3 (20 Queen Street, Charleston, SC 29401) (843-722-4487) <www.footlightplayers.net>.
  194. Al Gregory reports a nice seven-page article about Sherlock Holmes ("Elementary, My Dear Watson") in the Feb.-March issue of Britain (the official magazine of VisitBritain) [the new name for the old British Tourist Authority]; you can read the story (and many others) at the magazine's web-site at <www.britain-magazine.com/articles/sherlock-holmes-feature>.
  195. Ken Lanza noted a listing for an imaginative event: "Horror at the Museum--Mummy Stories by Conan Doyle" at the Petrie Museum of Egyptian Archaeology at University College London on May 14. British actor Steven Wickham read "The Ring of Thoth" and "Lot 249" in the "atmospheric surroundings" of the museum, and "in the break between the stories the museum will be available to explore by torch light--if you dare!"
  196. Kids on Stage will present Thomas W. Olsen's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" (1989) at the Main Street Theater (Chelsea Market) from May 7 to May 9 (4617 Montrose Boulevard, Houston, TX 77006) (713-524-6706) <www.mainstreettheater.com>.
  197. Reported: PETER PAN'S FIRST XI: THE EXTRAORDINARY STORY OF J. M. BARRIE'S CRICKET TEAM, by Kevin Telfer (London: Sceptre, 2010; 336 pp., £16.99); the cricket team was the Allahakbarries, and its members included Barrie's fellow authors A. A. Milne, E. W. Hornung, Jerome K. Jerome, P. G. Wodehouse, A. E. W. Mason, and Arthur Conan Doyle.
  198. Malice Domestic (the Washington-area convention celebrating the traditional mystery) was enjoyable, and included a panel ("The Game Is Afoot: Sherlock Holmes' Influence on Modern Sleuths") moderated by John Betancourt and with panelists Parnell Hall, William Link, Daniel Stashower, and Steven Steinbock. Malice 23 will be held in Bethesda, Md., Apr. 29 through May 1, 2011 <www.malicedomestic.org>.
  199. Further to the item about the set of four stamps honoring "Cowboys of the Silver Screen" (Apr 10 #2), Paul Herbert reports that Eleanor Packer's GENE AUTRY IN PUBLIC COWBOY NO. 1 (Big Little Book #1433, Whitman, 1938) has a mention of Frog (Autry's assistant) wearing Sherlockian costume, and a photograph of Frog (Smiley Burnette) with a deerstalker and a curved pipe (p. 190). The book is based on the film "Public Cowboy No. 1" (1937), which is available on DVD, restored to its full 61 minutes, from Image Entertainment (2007); there's a one-minute scene with Frog in S'ian costume, and the special features include two stills and one lobby card.

  200. May 10 #3: A STUDY IN SCARLET is the second in the new series of graphic novels adapted by Ian Edginton and illustrated by I. N. J. Culbard (London: SelfMadeHero, 2010; 130 pp., £14.99) and (New York: Sterling, $14.95) as with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Feb 10 #3) the artwork's excellent and the adaptation is faithful. THE SIGN OF FOUR and THE VALLEY OF FEAR and next in line.
  201. Bob Byrne published two issues of his electronic newsletter "Baker Street Essay" in 2007, and he has returned to his keyboard, so to speak, with the third issue (spring 2010), and he offers 16 pages of interesting Canonical comment and analysis; all three issues are available at Bob's web-site at <www.solarpons.com/BakerStreetEssays.htm>.
  202. Further to the report (Apr 10 #5) about the Edinburgh concert at which the "Sherlock" violin will be played, there's a two-minute video of Ani Batikian playing the violin at <www.tinyurl.com/39ktnwk>.
  203. Doug Wrigglesworth notes that Peggy Perdue has created a tribute to "Sidney Paget: Iconic Illustrator of Sherlock Holmes" on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of his birth; it's nicely done, and well illustrated, and there are interesting examples of Paget's work for other magazines as well as the Strand. You can view the tribute at the Toronto Public Library's web-site at <ve.torontopubliclibrary.ca/sidney_paget/index.html>.
  204. Waterstone's (the British bookstore chain) held a contest for a new design for their electronic gift cards, and one of the winners was Rochelle Donald of Inverness; her design features a silhouette of Holmes and page from "The Blue Carbuncle", and the card now can be purchased in Waterstone's 315 stores across the U.K.
  205. Bert Coules spotted a report that the BBC and Warner Home Video are planning to release (on Sept. 14) a set of two-DVDs with 11 of the delightful "Sherlock Holmes" television programs that starred Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock in 1964 and 1965; two programs ("The Abbey Grange" and "The Bruce-Partington Plans") will not be included in the set, which will be priced at $11.98 in the U.S.
  206. Nice news for researchers (eventually): the Daily Telegraph reported (May 19) that the British Library will digitize up to 40 million pages of newspapers from its archive over the next ten years, and will make them available on-line. The project will be funded by Brightsolid, a private company that owns the Friends Reunited and Genes Reunited web-sites; the data-base will be available free at the British Library, and for a charge at Brightsolid's web-sites.

207. BBC Radio 7 continues to air web-site repeats of the Clive Merrison/Michael Williams dramatizations; it was a fine series, and the only one to do all 60 stories with the same actors and Holmes and Watson. You can listen to the repeats at <www.bbc.co.uk/iplayer/radio/bbc\_7>.

208. May 10 #4: Laurie R. King's new THE GOD OF THE HIVE made the best-sellers list in the N.Y. Times Book Review on May 16, ranked at #11 in its first week on the list. You can download a copy of her short story "A Case of Correspondence" (an imaginative story told in postcards and other correspondence, released on the Internet during the run-up to the launch of the book); it's available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/32lwcjf>
209. There's an interesting discount offer at the Deal Table at the Baker Street Journal's web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> (click on "items for sale" and then on "deal table"): IRREGULAR PROCEEDING OF THE MID-FORTIES and IRREGULAR CRISES OF THE LATE-FORTIES are available at $25.00 (plus shipping) for the two books. And Henry Boote has recorded a CD with selection of the period Doylean and Sherlockian music performed during the Harvard symposium in 2009 <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/doyleat150.html>; $9.95 plus shipping.
210. Les Klinger spotted "Letters with Character: Letters Written to Fictional Characters by Real People", an imaginative (and sometimes amusing) blog at <www.letterswithcharacter.blogspot.com>; there is a letter to Dr. Watson, and of course you're welcome to write your own letter to a character in the Canon.
211. "The Suite Life on Deck" (a 30-minute series that airs on the Disney channel) has a Sherlockian episode ("Rollin' with the Holmies") that was first broadcast on Jan. 29, 2010; "Cody attempts to solve a mystery surrounding a stolen book that belongs to Queen Elizabeth II." Episodes repeat often on the Disney channel.
212. The comic book mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS ZOMBIES has reached its final (sixth) issue (June, $2.99 from Wildstorm); story by Ian Edginton and artwork by Davide Fabbri, and there are previews at their website <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics/?cm=13662>. It's quite likely that a graphic-novel collection will appear sooner rather than later.
213. Christy Kinahan, dubbed the "Irish Godfather" and believed to be head of a gang operating on the Costa del Sol, was arrested this month by Spanish police in Malaga. According to a blogger's report on May 25, Malaga's police headquarters is located on Calle Conan Doyle.
214. Mark Hime's catalogs are always interesting, and his latest (Biblioctopus #44) offers a portrait of Sherlock Holmes by Sidney Paget ($45,000); the portrait reportedly was torn in half by the artist and the top portion recovered by his wife from a waste-paper basket. It was shown at the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House in London in 1951 and the Plaza Art Galleries in New York in 1952, and published in The Cornhill Magazine (summer 1951).
215. SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES, by Steven Doyle and David A. Crowder (Indianapolis: Wiley, 2010; 360 pp., $19.99) is a useful addition to a series that began in 1991 with DOS FOR DUMMIES and now has more than 1,700 titles; it's up to date (with mention of Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes") and of course nicely timed to take advantage of the renewed interest in Holmes. The book is an excellent introduction to the Canon, Conan Doyle, the world of Sherlock Holmes, Sherlockiana, and Sherlockians.
216. May 10 #5: Martin Gardner died on May 22. Born in Tulsa, he grew up with John Bennett Shaw (and reminisced delightfully about their long friendship in the Dec. 1990 issue of The Baker Street Journal), and went on to write more than 70 books about mathematics, magic, Alice in Wonderland, the Wizard of Oz, Casey at the Bat (an annotated edition in which he paid tribute to John by including a mention of Moorville, Kans.), religion, philosophy, and the paranormal and supernatural (which he happily and energetically debunked, sometimes with unkind comments about Conan Doyle).
217. Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is scheduled at the Park Square Theatre, June 4 to July 3; the dates are different from those announced earlier (May 09 #6). The theater is at 20 West 7th Place, St. Paul, MN 55102 (651-291-7005) <www.parksquaretheatre.org>.
218. Macmillan had a launch party at the English-Speaking Union in London in April for Andrew Lane's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD, the first in his new series for children, due to be published on June 4. The photograph (by Carl Court), forwarded by Jon Lellenberg, shows a copy of the book in the hands of Joshua Conan Doyle, the great-grandson of Sir Arthur's younger brother Innes. You can see a one-minute trailer for the book at <www.youngsherlock.com>.
219. MUPPET SHERLOCK HOLMES, a new fourpart comic-book mini-series (reported to be "in development" by BOOM! Studios) with a story by Patrick Storck and artwork by Amy Mebberson and David Petersen. Gonzo appears as Holmes, and Fozzy Bear as Watson; you can see some preliminary cover artwork at the web-site <www.muppet.wikia.com/wiki/Muppet\_Sherlock\_Holmes>.
220. The Muppet Wiki, by the way, has some interesting features, including entries for characters in "The Muppet Show", including Sherlock Holmes' cat, Sherlock Holmes (whale), and Baskerville the Hound. And, of course, Sherlock Hemlock in "Sesame Street".
221. Keith Topping blogged on May 14 that BBC dumped all the footage for the 60-minute pilot of "Sherlock" (starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman) after deciding to turn the drama into a three-part 90-minutes series; the production cost of the pilot was reported to be £800,000. The series (Mar 10 #3) has Holmes as a modern-day detective. A BBC spokeswoman confirmed the decision not to air the pilot, and said that the series is expected to air in July or August.
222. Oscar Ross spotted an announcement for "Tom and Jerry Meet Sherlock Holmes" (an original animation) to be released by Warner Home Video in August. The film will run 75 minutes, and the DVD has been announced at $18.95 in the U.S. and £9.99 in the U.K. There also will be a Blu-ray version ($19.99). You can see the cover artwork at <www.amazon.com>.
223. May 10 #6: Cameo Auctioneers <www.cameo-auctioneers.co.uk> had an interesting sale of material from films and television productions on May 23: the lots included a dinner jacket worn by Nigel Bruce as Watson in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (£850), a frock-coat worn by Jeremy Brett as Holmes (£340), a waistcoat worn by Michael Caine as Reginald Kincaid in "Without a Clue" (£100), and a tail coat worn by Christopher Lee as Mycroft in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (£60). Some items went unsold: a woolen tweed jacket worn by Alan Arkin as Sigmund Freud in "The Seven-PerCent Solution" (estimated at £50-80) and a jacket worn by Ben Kingsley as Watson in "Without a Clue" (£80-120).
224. Alex Braun has reported "The Watson Files", a new radio series that's produced by Strobie Studios, in Riverside, Iowa, and is available on the Internet at <www.strobiestudios.com>; the series debuted on Apr. 11, and you can listen to it on-line, on YouTube, and on iTunes. Written and directed by Scott Strohsal, the series features the grandchildren of Holmes and Watson: Spencer Holmes (played by Michael Helgens) and Dr. Jack Watson (Greg Kilberger).
225. Robert Downey Jr. has already started work on provoking buzz for the "Sherlock Holmes" sequel: according to a message posted at the LiveJournal website Downey has announced that "I'm doing Sherlock Holmes again so I'm going be going back and reading all the Conan Doyle books again. I just finished them, I'm gonna start over again, at volume 1." He also joked that there will be a "pantsless" nude scene between him and co-star Jude Law in the sequel.

226. The film has won an Excellence in Production Design Award (for period film) from the Art Directors Guild, and ITV's National Movie Award (best action/ thriller); the ITV awards are voted for by the public in the U.K. (Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law were nominated for the ITV best performance award, which went to Robert Pattinson for his performance in "The Twilight Saga: New Moon"). Accepting the ITV award, Guy Ritchie made a brief speech, explaining that "We set out to make a comedy but we'll take it where we can get it."
227. The John Watkiss "pitch illustrations" for the film aren't the only artwork available; <www.heyuguys.co.uk/2010/05/13/sherlock-holmes-concept-art> has six atmospheric images that Warner Bros. made available in Britain during promotion for the DVD there.
228. The "Sherlock Holmes" Blu-ray disk ($35.99) has a 31 minute "special feature" that isn't found on the commercial DVD: a sequence of "focus points" that includes a 3-minute segment ("The Sherlockians") in which "the experts at a Sherlockian conference in New York explain why Sherlock Holmes is one of fiction's most enduring characters." That footage was filmed during the birthday festivities in 2009 and offers glimpses of (and brief interviews with) some of those who were on hand for the festivities. It is possible, of course, that the special feature will be included on a later version of the DVD of the film.

229. Jun 10 #1: It is nice, as we approach the centenary of Ronald Knox's classic "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", to see a renewed interest in Knox: last year saw David Rooney's THE WIND OF CERTITUDE: A LITERARY BIOGRAPHY OF RONALD KNOX (Aug 09 #2), and now there is Terry Tastard's RONALD KNOX AND ENGLISH CATHOLICISM (Leominster, Gracewing, 2009; 215 pp., £12.99). Both books were published exactly 50 years after Evelyn Waugh's excellent biography of Knox, and Tastard takes the reader through Knox's spiritual life: Knox was born and raised in a Protestant family, became a convert to Catholicism and chaplain to Oxford University, and created a new translation of the Bible, and Tastard suggests that Knox's story reflects the revival of Catholicism in England in the first half of the 20th century.
230. TCM (Turner Classic Movies) will celebrate summer with a weekly series of "family-time favorites" hosted by John Lithgow; "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) will air on Aug. 1.
231. For the completists: Phil Jones reports that SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS: THE FALL OF THE AMAZING ZALINDAS, by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin (Sep 6 #6), was first published as THE FALL OF THE AMAZING WALENDAS ; an advanced reader's edition exists, with different cover, title, text, and pagination, and can be found (if you're lucky) at web-sites such as Alibris and Abebooks. It is possible that the authors or publisher received a complaint from the Amazing Wallendas (that's the correct spelling of the circus act's name).
232. Anthony D. P. Mann, who earlier produced a Canadian version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Jul 04 #4) is now in production on "Sherlock Holmes and the Shadow Watchers", which is scheduled for release on DVD later this year. His web-site <www.anthonypmann.com> has more information about the new film, and a 2-minute trailer.
233. "Of all ghosts the ghosts of our old loves are the worst," is a thoroughly romantic sentiment, written by Arthur Conan Doyle and quoted in "A Commonplace Book" in the May issue of British Heritage. Who spoke those words, and in what work?
234. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times10-5.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new, including Art Schroeder's SHERLOCKIAN SHTICK!, other books, lapel pins, notecards, and much more.
235. Catherine Cooke reports that the Folio Society is planning a new edition of THE LOST WORLD, in pictorial binding and with a new introduction by Andrew Lycett and illustrations that include the drawing and photographs that Conan Doyle commissioned for the first edition of the book. The new edition will cost $48.95, and you can read more about the book and see some of the illustrations at <www.foliosociety.com/book/LWR/lost-world>. And if you'd like to join the society, Catherine will be happy to introduce you, since she's a member and gets vouchers for introducing people; she's at 15 Copperfield Court, 146 Worple Road, Wimbledon SW20 8QA, England, and her e-mail address is <ccooke@westminster.gov.uk>.

236. Jun 10 #2: The new independent film "Cold Weather" (not yet in theaters) appears to be Sherlockian: according to one review, Cris Lankenau (Doug) moves in with his sister and quickly finds himself thrust into a real-life who-done-it when his ex-girlfriend suddenly vanishes; being an admittedly big fan of Sherlock Holmes, Doug sets out to play real-life detective.
237. It was Justice of the Peace Trevor who said that "Of all ghosts the ghosts of our old loves are the worst" (in "The *Gloria Scott*"). He was offering an explanation of the initials tattooed in the bend of his elbow, but the sentiment isn't all that romantic when one realizes that the initials were his own: J.A. (for James Armitage).
238. The "It's That Time Again" series edited by Jim Harmon continues, offering stories about the popular heroes and villains from those long-ago days of old-time radio. IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN 3: (Boalsburg: BearManor Media, 2006; 236 pp., $15.00) has imaginative encounters that include Martin Grams Jr.'s "Hold the Press: Palladin vs. Dillon" (Gunsmoke/Have Gun Will Travel), Michael Leannah's "Vacation in Hollywood" (Jack Benny/Richard Diamond), and Gareth Tilley's "The Singular Affair of the Gentleman Cracksman" (Sherlock Holmes/Raffles). IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN, VOLUME IV (Albany: BearManor Media, 2009; 278 pp., $19.95) Harmon's "Sherlock Holmes Out West" (with Sherlock Holmes and Tom Mix), and other non-Sherlockian tales that include two nostalgic stories by Jack French. Ben Ohmart, proprietor of BearManor Media, offers many other OTR radio titles at <www.bearmanormedia.com>.
239. Arthur Conan Doyle, on tour in the United States in 1894, visited Rudyard Kipling at his home in Vermont, and gave Kipling golf lessons in a field near the house (Mar 05 #1). And Kipling's home, which he named Naulakha, carefully restored and with his original furniture, is now a vacation rental: Anne Lawrence Guyon wrote an interesting report about the house for the N.Y. Times <www.nytimes.com/2010/03/19/travel/escapes/19kipling.html>, and there's an on-line slide show of the house and its rooms.
240. Sherlock Holmes stories have been translated into Croatian, and so have six of Laurie R. King's series about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes, with interesting new cover artwork. Available from Algoritam in Zagreb priced at 69 to 79 kuna (that's about $11.38 to $13.02) <www.algoritam.hr>.
241. Rue McClanahan died on June 3. She made her stage debut at the age of 4 in "The Three Little Kittens" and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television, where she became famous as Blanche Devereaux in the series "The Golden Girls" from 1985 to 1992; Her autobiography was titled MY FIRST FIVE HUSBANDS...AND THE ONES WHO GOT AWAY (2007), and she acted with George C. Scott as Justin Playfair's supportive sister Daisy in "They Might Be Giants" (1971).
242. Prescott's Press, edited by Warren Randall for The Three Garridebs, continues its nice mix of scholarship and whimsy, and the March issue (#55) has Mike McKuras' "Variety Is the Spouse of Life" (in which he offers an amused look at Sherlockians and their world). Subscriptions cost $15.00 for four issues ($20.00 outside the U.S.), and issue #55 costs $5.00/$6.00 postpaid, from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).

243. Jun 10 #3: "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" is an "interactive murder mystery comedy theatre" show that was written by Matthew D. Osmun first performed at the Broker Restaurant in Denver on Mar. 6; it is still being presented in repertory on Saturdays, at least through July 24. The Broker Restaurant's address is at 621 17th Street, Denver, CO 80202 (303-292-5065) <www.thebrokerrestaurant.com/mysterydinner.htm>, and there's more about MO Productions at <www.moproductions.net>.

244. The Oxford University Press has an "English Language Teaching" series that includes SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SPORT OF KINGS, retold by Jennifer Bassett and illustrated by Ron Tiner; first published in 2003, it was reissued with new cover artwork in 2007 (56 pp., $6.75/£4.75).
245. SparkNotes, an on-line version of the old student standbys Cliff Notes and Monarch Notes, will be found at <www.sparknotes.com>. They have long offered "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Sep 05 #1), and now have added "The Red-Headed League" to their repertoire. SparkNotes provides analysis, discussion, quotations, study questions, and other assistance to those who are studying good literature.
246. Howard Ostrom has reported that the Orlando Jai-alai and Race Book in Fern Park, Fla., offers a "Sherlock's Sure Shot" promotion on Thursdays and Fridays: "Sherlock" posts a horse pick for the day, and you buy a $10.00 win ticket and you either win the money the horse pays for winning or you can get $10.00 worth of food or drink in exchange for the losing ticket. And suggest, in their e-mail promotion, "be sure to read Arthur Conan Doyle's 'Silver Blaze' if you don't think Sherlock knows a thing or two about the Sport of Kings!" <www.orlandojaialai.com>.
247. It is interesting to see how many good Sherlockian books are being written for young reader: the latest is Andrew Lane's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD (London: Macmillan Children's Books, 2010; 311 pp., £6.99), and it's a fine start to a new series. Fourteen-year-old Sherlock, on holiday from school, is quickly involved in investigating a bizarre murder, learning deductive skills from an American tutor whose tomboy daughter helps Sherlock combat sinister villains and foil a plot against the Empire.
248. Roger Johnson notes that it's possible to pre-order "Sherlock Holmes: The Rediscovered Railway" ("four more thrilling Sherlock Holmes adventures from John Taylor, the creator of 'The Unopened Casebook of Sherlock Holmes'") at the BBC Shop <www.bbcshop.com>; £12.99, or £9.09 at the web-site. "The Unopened Casebook" was a series of six stories broadcast by BBC Radio 5, with Simon Callow as Holmes and Nicky Henson as Watson (Mar 93 #1).
249. The phrase "flash fiction" seems to have originated in 1992, and the genre has quickly found a home on the Internet, where fiction with a limited number of words is welcome. HOLMES IN A FLASH: NEW SHORT HOLMES STORIES, edited by Stephen Abbott (Manchester: Abbott ePublishing, 2010, $2.49); offers 13 new stories (1,100 words or less) and Conan Doyle's own short parody "How Holmes Learned the Trick", and can be downloaded from the publisher's web-site <www.abbottpub.com>. Some pieces are atmospheric snapshots rather than plot-driven stories, and the eBook is an interesting introduction to a new format for pastiche and parody.

250. Jun 10 #4: Sonia Fetherston has noted that the Sherlock Building in Portland has been bought by the Church of Scientology. The building, which has been on the National Register of Historic Places since 1977, is named for William Sherlock, who came to the United States from Ireland in the 1840s and completed construction of the property in 1893, and it has an interesting web-site at <www.sherlockbuilding.com>. A development company paid $9.75 million for the building in 2007, and sold it to the Scientologists for $6.4 million.
251. Kelly Blau reports that she received a message from Amazon saying that because she had bought the "Sherlock Holmes" DVD, they had some suggestions that might be of interest to her: "Crack in the World" (with Dana Andrews), "Thanks for the Memories Collection" (with Bob Hope), and "Freud" (with David Suchet). She thinks it must say something profound about Sherlockians.
252. Himan Brown died on June 4. His career in radio began in the late 1920s, and he was best known as the producer of series such as "Inner Sanctum Mysteries", "Bulldog Drummond", "Dick Tracy", and "The Adventures of the Thin Man"; he estimated that he created more than 30,000 radio shows over seven decades. In 1974 Brown launched the "CBS Radio Mystery Theater", which ran for nine years and won a Peabody Award; the series included many dramatizations of Sherlock Holmes stories and, "Nightmare in Gillette Castle" (with Kevin McCarthy as William Gillette/Sherlock Holmes).
253. The Waverley Borough Council met on June 9 to consider the future of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, and approved the developer's latest plan: the house will be converted into three homes, with a public pavilion with information about Conan Doyle, and a new second wing will be built to provide five town houses; the developer said the project would provide restoration of the building, including the historic details and leaded windows, and enhance the landscape. According to a story posted at the web-site <www.getsurrey.co.uk>, Conan Doyle's grand-nephew Richard Doyle was at the meeting, and said afterward that "It is just such a shame that all that history will be lost forever. The family had been trying to come up with ways of buying it, but the price was so high we could not afford it. We just wish there was something we could do." Actor Stephen Fry described the proposal as "a foolish, short-sighted, and wanton act of vandalism. The Surrey County Council estimated last year (Apr 09 #6) that acquisition and restoration of Undershaw would cost about £3.5 million.
254. E.J. Wagner, author of THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 06 #2) discussed Holmes and forensics in a 5-minute interview on BBC Radio Ulster on May 22. You can listen to the interview at <www.ejwagner-crimehistorian.com>; the link is under "What's new".
255. <www.huffingtonpost.com/2010/06/14/sherlockian-graham-moores_n_609293.html> is the URL for an advance report on Graham Moore's pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (with favorable comments by Christopher Hitchens and Rupert Holmes, and a 2-minute video; the book's due from Twelve/Grand Central in December. According to a post by Amy Hertz: "When literary researcher Harold White is inducted into the preeminent Sherlock Holmes enthusiast society, The Baker Street Irregulars, he never imagines he's about to be thrust onto the hunt for the holy grail of Holmesophiles"

256. Jun 10 #5: Catherine Cooke's article on the collection at the Marylebone Library appeared in the first issue of CADS: Crime and Detective Stories (Sep 85 #3), and publisher Geoff Bradley has included Sherlockiana in many issues since then. The magazine is celebrating its first 25 years of publication with the June issue, and it leads with an interesting discovery: George Bellairs' article "Sherlock Holmes and the Bankers" (reprinted from the spring 1954 issue of Martins Bank Magazine). There's other S'iana as well in the 80 pages in CADS 58, and many interesting articles about old and new books. You can order a copy of CADS 58 from the publisher (9 Vicarage Hill, South Benfleet, Essex SS7 1PA, England); £5.75 to the U.K./$12.00 to the U.S./£7.00 or £10.00 other.
257. One of the useful features of CADS is Marvin Lachman's "Death of a Mystery Writer" section of brief obituaries for writers and others associated with the genre. John Dankworth died on Feb. 6; he was an accomplished musician, and wrote the music (Benny Green wrote the score) for "The Diamond and the Goose" an oratorio first performed in Birmingham in 1981. Jim Harmon died on Feb. 16, 2010; he was a great enthusiast for old time radio, and a prolific writer; his pastiche "Confidence Game" appeared in Galaxy (June 1957) and "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Duplicate Daughter" in IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN 2 (2004). Robert Weverka died on May 19, 2010; his MURDER BY DECREE (1972) was an adaptation of the film (he adapted many non-Sherlockian films as well).
258. Frogwares continues to engineer new Sherlockian computer games; their website <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/index.php?rub=news> offers links to "Sherlock Holmes: The Mystery of Osborne House" (for Nintendo DS) and "The Testament of Sherlock Holmes" (only a trailer, since the next game in the series has not been released.

259. Go to <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/sothebys-2010-beetons.htm#description> if you'd like to see Randall Stock's updated report on the inscribed copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual that will be at auction at Sotheby's on July 15 (May 10 #1); it includes links to Sotheby's five-page catalog description, and to news articles about the sale.
260. Dollhouse Miniatures' room-box contest for Sherlockians (Jan 10 #5) was won by Judy Rosshirt, and they have a description (and full-color photograph of her impressive room in the May-June issue, along with photograph from three other miniaturists (including Joe Coppola), and a story about Jay Pearlman and the Mini-Tonga Society. $6.95 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
261. "The Man Who Murdered Sherlock Holmes" is a new 60-minute "drama documentary" from Electric Theatre in Britain; so far all that's available is a 4-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=OOix4QgTCi8>, with brief comments by Owen Dudley Edwards, Roger Johnson, and Catherine Cooke.
262. "What man wouldn't pass up a necktie for a chance to be associated with an educated, supermacho giant rat?" asked Nicholas D. Kristof in an op-ed column about Father's Day in the N.Y. Times (June 16). African giant pouched rats have been trained by a Dutch company, Apopo, to detect landmines and cases of tuberculosis, and you can read about (and donate to) the HeroRATS program at <www.globalgiving.org>.

263. Jun 10 #6: The Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest, which since 1982 has sought "the opening sentence to the worst of all possible novels," has named Dennis Pearce as the runner-up in the "detective" category this year, and his entry was: "As Holmes, who had a nose for danger, quietly fingered the bloody knife and eyed the various body parts strewn along the dark, deserted highway, he placed his ear to the ground and, with his heart in his throat, silently mouthed to his companion, 'Arm yourself, Watson, there is an evil hand ahead.'" The best of this year's entries can be read on-line <www.bulwer-lytton.com>; the contest's motto is "Where www means 'Wretched Writers Welcome.'" A Sherlockian entry previously won in the "detective" category (Aug 92 #4).
264. Will Longstaff's painting of the ghosts of dead Australian soldiers in the Gallipoli campaign, bought by Conan Doyle in 1928, was sold at auction by Bonhams in Sydney this month; estimated at AU$20,000-40,000, the painting went for AU$72,000 including the buyer's premium (that's about $62,586). More information at <www.tinyurl.com/2dftf6s>.
265. Peter Egan and Philip Franks began their British tour in Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" last spring (Mar 10 #6), and the play will now begin an eight-week run at the Duchess Theatre in London's West End on July 15 <www.nimaxtheatres.com>. Robert Daws will play Watson.
266. Laurie R. King will be on tour in England and Scotland, signing in libraries and bookshops, from July 15 through Aug. 2 (Allison and Busby are publishing British editions of her books with attractive cover art); you will find a detailed schedule at <www.laurierking.com/events/whereslaurie>. And she will be guest of honor at Bouchercon 41 in San Francisco, Oct. 14-17; there's more information the convention at <www.bcon2010.com>.
267. Elephant Family (a financial support organization for endangered Asian elephants) draws attention to its work with an Elephant Parade of decorated life-size model baby elephants displayed in major cities around the world; the parade has now reached London, where 258 elephants are to be sold in an auction that will end on July 4. Cherrie Waltho has reported (and photographed) a Sherlock Holmes elephant in Baker Street (Nick Utechin notes that it's almost outside #109, which was James Holroyd's choice for 221B). More information, along with color photographs, is available at their web-site at <www.elephantparadelondon.org>, where there's also a shop that sells miniature reproductions in four sizes, from 10 cm (£27.50) to 35 cm (£199.00). The artist who created the Sherlock Holmes elephant is Turdsak Piromkraipak, and it was sponsored by the Evening Standard. The organizers are hoping for an audience estimated at 25 million, and that the auction will raise £2 million.
268. Apologies for being a few days late with this month's newsletter: the Sherlockian conference ("Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds") in Bennington was great fun, and I'll report more about the event next month.

Jul 10 #1:

269. "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds" (the conference held at Bennington College on June 24-27) was nicely done (as was the first conference, 16 years ago); Sally Sugarman and her accomplices offered a varied schedule of lectures by authors, scholars, and others; late night (and early morning) movie screenings; tours of local attractions (including the Park-McCullough House, a spectacular Victorian mansion where the tour featured a champagne tea); an exhibition of Sherlockian art and artifacts; a Victorian Musicale and a performance of a (non-Sherlockian) play by the Oldcastle Theatre Company. There was an article about the conference in the Bennington Banner; go to <www.benningtonbanner.com> and search for [sherlock holmes].
270. One of the nicer extracurricular opportunities at the conference was a visit (at Lloyd Rose's recommendation) to Owl Pen Books in Greenwich, N.Y. It is one of the last of the grand old book barns, and one of my finds was Elmer Davis' novel GIANT KILLER, published by John Day in 1928 and reprinted by the Readers Club in 1943 (the Readers Club, a competitor of the Book-of-the Month Club, had Clifton Fadiman, Sinclair Lewis, and Carl Van Doren as its judges). The novel is not Sherlockian (except for having been written by a future member of The Baker Street Irregulars and The Red Circle), but it's great fun (according to Lewis "is a lively, well-colored and sometimes ribald restoration of King David the Psalmist, Joab who was his field marshal, his other sanguinary and difficult relatives, and their innumerable girls.")
271. One of the panelists at the conference in Bennington was M. Lee Alexander, whose course on "Detective Fiction: From Victorian Sleuths to the Present" includes a lecture on "Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and the Victorian Era"; the course is available on CD ($98.75) or as a download ($59.75), and there's a course description at <www.tinyurl.com/2ckpfqo>. You can also listen to a 7-minute interview with her (June 14) at The Modern Scholar Blog at <www.themodernscholar.ordwpres.com>.
272. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a colorful cachet and an official postmark for the conference (there was someone from the local post office on hand to sell and cancel stamps), and the covers cost $6.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $7.00 (elsewhere); please pay with currency or U.S. postal money orders, and his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
273. Further to the report (Jun 10 #4) on the Waverley Borough Council decision to approve the developer's latest plan for Undershaw. the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, John Gibson, who is chairman of the Undershaw Preservation Trust <www.saveundershaw.com> is challenging the decision on legal grounds, and Lynn Gale has more information about the campaign at <www.undershawhelp.blogspot.com>. Gibson was co-author with Richard Lancelyn Green of the landmark A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE (1983), and coeditor with him of volumes of Conan Doyle's previously uncollected work.

274. Jul 10 #2: "A Keyboard to Make Sherlock Holmes Proud" was the title of a post to the Tom's Guide web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/2fg8sx7>, reported by Ken Lanza. The item is an imaginative steampunk computer keyboard created by Richard R. Nagy of <www.datamancer.net>, offered at eBay this month; bidding began at $1,500, and the keyboard sold for $2,646.
275. "Dr. Watson's 158th Birthday Celebration" is the title of a joint meeting of Rochester Row, The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse, An Irish Secret Society of Buffalo, and Watson's Holmestead of Binghamton, on Aug. 7, 2010, in Rochester, N.Y. More information on the all-day event is available from Lewis Neisner (585-360-4715) <lewisneisner@yahoo.com>.

276. Youngsters know all about Silly Bandz, which are die-molded with non-toxic silicone; they're worn by kids as bracelets that return to their original shapes when taken off. Ray Betzner spotted the new "Guess Who?" pack ($5.49 from PII Industries) with twelve bandz that feature the outlines of six famous people, including Marilyn Monroe, Alfred Hitchcock, and (of course) Sherlock Holmes. The pack is shown in full color (and you can order it) at <www.amazon.com/Rubba-Bandz-Rubba-Bracelets-Guess/dp/B003MA9OIE>.
277. THE FICTIONAL 100, by Lucy Pollard-Gott (Bloomington: iUniverse, 2010; 475 pp., $25.95), is a ranking of "the most influential characters in world literature and legend," and the author casts her net widely to include less-well-known characters from Asian and African literature as well as those to be found in European and American books; it is fascinating to read (or to browse) what she has written. Sherlock Holmes ranks #9, and you can read an excerpt from his chapter at <www.fictional100.com>.
278. The Baker Street Irregulars have two new items available for purchase. The original of the Sherlockian switch plate that Edgar W. Smith installed in his cottage in Morristown, N.J., has been reproduced in unfinished aluminum ($55.00 postpaid to the U.S., $57.50 elsewhere); proceeds from the sale directly benefit the BSI Archives at the Houghton Library at Harvard, where the original switch plate has been preserved. Jens Byskov Jensen's FIFTY YEARS IN BAKER STREET (95 pp.) is a history of The Cimbrian Friends of Baker Street, and is published jointly by the two societies ($11.95, shipping extra). You can order at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
279. Ceil Baring-Gould died on June 27. She married Bill Baring-Gould in 1936 and happily shared his varied interests over many years; they jointly authored the well-received THE ANNOTATED MOTHER GOOSE (1962), and it was Ceil who saw THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (1967) into print after his untimely death. She once complained that Bill's most popular book seemed to be THE LURE OF THE LIMERICK (1967), judging by the number of letters received from readers who sent him obscene limericks they felt ought to be in second edition. In 1969 Ceil was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1969, and in 1992 she was the first (and still the only) woman ever to dine with The Five Orange Pips, at the home of the late Ben Clark.

280. Jul 10 #3: SHERLOCK ALIVE, compiled and annotated by Karen Murdock, is a delightful collection of the Sherlockiana that Vincent Starrett wrote for his "Books Alive" column in the Chicago Daily News and the Chicago Tribune from 1942 to 1967 (and a bit more, since he contributed to other columns in the paper). There's an appreciative Introduction by Susan Rice, and a dozen appendices, including brief biographies of many of the people mentioned by Starrett, and the book offers a splendid view of the literary talents and knowledge of one of the early and most knowledgeable Sherlockians. The publisher is George Vanderburgh (2010; 503 pp., $35.00); visit <www.batteredbox.com/VincentStarrett/25-Starrett-SherlockAlive.htm> for a detailed description of (and an excerpt from) the book, and information on how to order is at <www.batteredbox.com/contactus.html>. It's not a book to be read quickly, and the annotations will be most helpful to people who aren't familiar with all the things that Starrett (and his audience) knew in those distant Sherlockian days.
281. Bret M. Herholz's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE PAINFUL PREDICAMENT OF ALICE FAULKNER is a graphic-novel adaptation of William Gillette's play from Alterna Comics (2009; 128 pp., $11.99); the artwork is quite atmospheric, reminiscent of Edward Gorey, and you can see a sample at the publisher's web-site at <www.alternacomics.com/#/sherlock-holmes/4535753000>.
282. Christopher Roden has noted that some interesting Conan Doyle letters have been advertised by Classic Bindings Ltd. (61 Cambridge Street, London SW1V 4PS, England) <www.classicbindings.net>. One lot (priced at £4,300) is an exchange of correspondence in 1919 between Lord Alfred Douglas (son of the Marquess of Queensbury and intimate friend of Oscar Wilde) and Conan Doyle; Douglas accused Conan Doyle of promoting Spiritualism for the sake of money and notoriety and "with the same flat-footed low persistence as you worked your idiot 'Sherlock Holmes' business," and Conan Doyle replied that "It is only your approval which could in any way annoy me." The letters are accompanied by a label written by Lady Doyle: "A splendid answer from my darling to that rat Alfred Douglas."
283. The other lot (priced at £8,300) is a collection of eleven letters he wrote to his wife Jean in 1923 from Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Cincinnati; they are affectionate and amusing: in one he says that he has "Nothing to read all day but the Bible which is interesting but old fashioned rather," and in another that Pittsburg is "a hateful place--hell upon earth." Both of the lots were in the family papers sold at auction at Christie's in 2004, when they sold for £1,912 and £3,585 (including buyer's premium).
284. Tina Rhea has reported a spectacular color photograph of a Lion's Mane, the "picture of the day" (for July 6) at the National Geographic's web-site; it is possible to download it as wallpaper for your monitor, and you see it at <www.tinyurl.com/37zntft>.
285. THE MAN WHO MURDERED SHERLOCK HOLMES is an interesting 63-minute documentary from Electric Theatre Productions; it was written, produced, and presented by Richard Jones, and features interviews with Roger Johnson, Catherine Cooke, Owen Dudley Edwards, and others, and it's available on a DVD in PAL format only (£15.99) at <www.amazon.co.uk>. And you can see a brief clip from the series at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=GFzgZTw2D2A>.
286. Jul 10 #4: Dixie Haywood (aka The Little Georgia Magnet), "known for being able to withstand the strength of some of the world's strongest men," including Eugene Sandow, is the subject of a book by Susan and Hugh Harrington <www.annieabbott.com>; it's a fine example of the strange things that Sherlockians get do (Hugh is "Wisteria Lodge" in The Baker Street Irregulars, class of 1996).
287. Ken Lanza spotted a blog (July 5) with some interesting ideas for a Sherlock Holmes Party (posted by a homeschooling parent); you'll find the blog at <www.syndiluhu.blogspot.com/2010/07/sherlock-holmes-party.html>.
288. "A Study in Pink", "The Blind Banker", and "The Great Game" are the titles of the three-part mini-series "Sherlock", according to Wikipedia; the entry is informative, and has links to older articles and the BBC's latest press release. Go to <www.wikipedia.org> and search for [sherlock (tv series)]. Oscar Ross kindly reported this entry; one might say that anything important has an entry on Wikipedia (of course one does need to be careful about blithely believing everything found there).
289. I can't do it justice in my newsletter, but a search for [jacques camory] at <www.amazon.com> will display an image of his attractive giclee poster print of a scene in "The Dancing Men" ("Sherlock Holmes Studies the Case at His Desk") offered in various sizes and priced from $34.99 to $179.99.
290. THE CASE OF THE ILL-FATED PLAYWRIGHT, by Fred W. Edmiston (Scotts Valley: CreateSpace, 2010; 155 pp., $13.99), has Holmes and Watson involved in an attempt to rescue Oscar Wilde from dire peril at the hands of the Marquess of Queensbury; their attempt was not successful, of course, but there are many Wildean epigrams in the book.
291. Bidding on the inscribed copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual (Jun 10 #5) opened at £140,000 and stopped at £240,000, not reaching the reserve, Nick Utechin has reported, and the Beeton's did not sell. It was estimated at £250,000 to £400,000; the buyer's premium was 25% on the first £25,000 and 20% thereafter, so the person who bid £240,000 was willing to pay £289,000 (a bit more than $444,000). Randall Stock has lots of information on this copy at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/sothebys-2010-beetons.htm#description>.

292. THE SECRET FIEND (Toronto: Tundra, 2010; 244 pp., $19.95) is the fourth in Shane Peacock's series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" (still on his own in London and learning how to be a detective); Peacock has won many awards for his books, and deserves them: he's good at character, atmosphere, and mystery. And his web-site's at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.
293. MX Publishing <www.tinyurl.com/34725mh> is offering its five books by and about B. Fletcher Robinson as a set and at a significant discount to members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London: £81.96/$148.41 postpaid (if bought separately the books cost £131.96/$238.95 plus shipping). The titles are BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON: A FOOTNOTE TO THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Sep 08 #1), ASIDE ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: TWENTY ORIGINAL TALES (Mar 09 #4), THE WORLD OF VANITY FAIR (May 09 #2), BOBBLES AND PLUM: FOUR SATIRICAL PLAYLETS BY BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON AND P.G. WODEHOUSE (Jul 09 #3), and RUGBY FOOTBALL DURING THE NINETEENTH CENTURY (Mar 10 #3).
294. Jul 10 #5: Alan Plater died on June 25. He trained as an architect, and became a full-time writer in 1961, earning more than 200 stage, screen, radio, and television credits. He was appointed CBE (Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire), for services to drama, in 1995, and he dramatized two of the stories for Granada's television series: "The Solitary Cyclist" (1984) and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (1986).
295. Sad news for researchers: the web-sites for The Times and The Sunday Times are now available "exclusively by subscription" (£1 for 30 days and then £2 a week); free access will continue, I expect, at libraries that subscribe to the web-sites.
296. Barry S. Brown's THE UNPLEASANTNESS AT PARKERTON MANOR (Santa Fe: Sunstone Press, 2010; 260 pp., $22.95) is the first in a projected series that stars Mrs. Hudson doing the detecting, with assistance of Holmes and Watson; the unpleasantness involves two murders, and exotic heroines and villains.
297. "Can Holmes solve the mystery of the Hound of the Baskervilles and 27 other crimes before Moriarty tightens his grip? And just who does keep sending postcards from Reichenbach Falls?" Answers to those questions may be found in the play "Sherlock (Abridged)" performed on Aug. 8-10 during the Camden Fringe in London. <www.camdenfringe.com>
298. The play "Sherlock Holmes in the Crucifer of Blood" (by Paul Giovanni) will be produced at Theatre Three ("the theatre-in-the-round at the quadrangle") from Aug. 5 to Sept. 5; 2800 Routh Street #168, Dallas, TX 75201 (214-871-3300) <www.theatre3dallas.com>.
299. Reported: THE FICTIONAL 100, by Lucy Pollard-Gott (Bloomington: iUniverse, 2010; 496 pp., $25.95); Sherlock Holmes ranks #9, and you can read an excerpt from his chapter at <www.fictional100.com>. KILLER'S DOZEN, by Richard A. Lupoff (Rockville: Wildside, 2010; 252 pp., $14.95); 13 of his previously uncollected stories, including "Inga Sigerson Weds" reprinted from SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE AMERICAN YEARS).
300. <www.canada.com> is a web-site maintained by Canwest Communications Corp. (Canada's largest media company), and Laura Kuhn has reported their interesting (and well illustrated) story (by Robert Evans) about Meiringen and Sherlock Holmes, at <www.tinyurl.com/23rxkw8>.
301. Spoken Ink: The Audio Story Website <www.spokenink.co.uk> offers a wide variety of downloadable recordings by authors who include Conan Doyle: four of the Sherlock Holmes stories read by Edward Hardwicke (£2.99 each), "The Brazilian Cat" read by Graham Seed (£2.99), and "B24" read by Ben Whybrow (£1.99).
302. Cambridge Scholars Publishing has issued a CSP Classic Texts edition of THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE IN 56 VOLUMES, with an introduction by Neil McCaw (he's academic director of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth) (2009; 10,988 pp., £399.00); Jonathan Barnes reviewed the set in the Times Literary Supplement (June 23), noting that it's not comprehensive (no plays, letters, or journalism), almost entirely without illustrations, not scholarly, and poorly copy-edited.
303. Jul 10 #6: Paul Spiring spotted a BBC report (July 16) about the possible closing of the 200-year-old Dartmoor Prison; a Ministry of Justice study has suggested the "permanent closure of old and inefficient existing capacity." The prison, mentioned (as the Princetown Prison) in "The Sign of the Four", "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and two "Brigadier Gerard" stories, is now a Category C facility for less violent offenders; the Prison Reform Trust said earlier in July that the prison "should eventually be closed because it was too isolated and too old."
304. Karen Ellery has kindly noted Russell Stutler's web-site <www.stutler.cc>, where you will find his striking birds-eye view of 221B Baker Street in an improved version with annotations and a link to <www.zazzle.com>, where you can purchase his artwork in various formats and sizes. He also has a link to his imaginative Japanese hiragana version of the Dancing Men code.
305. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is a delightful parody that was written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007; it debuted at the Central Square Theatre on July 22 and will run through Aug. 22. 450 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02139 (617-576-9278) <www.centralsquaretheater.com>.
306. "From the tiny scratches on your mobile, I deduce that your brother is an alcoholic and that you don't get on with him," is something that Benedict Cumberbatch says, according to The Guardian (July 17), in the new television mini-series "Sherlock", which was debuted on BBC-1 on July 25; it will premiere on "Masterpiece Mystery" on PBS-TV on Oct. 24, and they will begin running a promotion on Aug. 4 at <www.pbs.org/masterpiece>. "Sherlocking" (a fan site devoted to the series) is at <www.sherlocking.org>; preview reports and reviews in the British press have been quite favorable.
307. John Sherwood reports that Holmes and Watson are expected to be on hand for "The Adventure of the Nameless Corpse" as part of the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Weekend at the Victorian Villa Inn on Sept. 24-26 (John will impersonate Sherlock Holmes). Additional information is available from the management (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094) (800-348-4552); the e-mail address is <info@avictorianvilla.com>.
308. Randall Stock notes that this is the 150th anniversary of the birth of Sidney Paget, and Randall has updated and expanded his census of Paget's original artwork at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sidney-paget-original-art.htm>. It would be nice indeed if unrecorded originals could be added to the census.
309. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere." The Associated Press reported (July 19) that Patti Blagojevich has been reading "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" on her cell phone during less-riveting stretches of her husband's corruption trial. She is the wife of former Illinois governor Rod Blagojevich, who is on trial for scheming to sell President Barak Obama's former Senate seat (and other offences); she says she's also fond of Jane Austen.
310. Wait, wait, there's more: the TPM Muckraker reported (July 19) that the 41-page memorandum filed by Blagojevich's attorneys in support of a motion for acquittal quoted Conan Doyle: "It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts." Judge James Zagel denied the motion.

311. Jul 10 #7: Rugby is not the only British sport with rules and jargon that are incomprehensible to most Americans: there's cricket, which is Canonical (barely) and which the Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the P. G. Wodehouse Society have played against each other nine times in the last decade. Nicholas Utechin's WYCOMBE WONDERS is a 30-page pamphlet that was published by the SHSOL for this year's match, and it's interesting, amusing, and generally understandable. £3.50 to the U.K., £5.00 to Europe, $9.00 elsewhere; available at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/shop.php> (credit cards accepted).

312. There are now (at least) 25 titles in Marjorie Weinman Sharmat's "Nate the Great" series that features Nate in Sherlockian costume; some of the early volumes have been reissued by Yearling/Random House (with "extra fun activities inside!"), and there's a musical first performed by Theatreworks USA in New York in the spring of 2008 and then on tour.
313. Further to the discussion of miniature Sherlockian room-boxes (Jun 10 #5), a letter from Ann Dickerson in Dollhouse Miniatures (July-Aug. 2010) notes (with a color photograph) a miniature of 221B Baker Street in the collection of Samie Keith's dollhouses at the Mining Museum in Butte, Mont. (the museum's open from June to September); the cost of the issue is $6.95 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
314. For Sherlockian golfers: Nick Utechin observed that up until the end of the second day of the Open at St. Andrews, the players included Holmes, Watson, and Moriarty. And Overton, Garcia, and ("so nearly," Nick notes) Garrido.
315. Further to the report (Jun 10 #6) on the Sherlock Holmes elephant in Baker Street, installed during a fund-raising campaign by Elephant Family (a financial support organization for endangered Asian elephants), the campaign raised more than £4 million, and the Sherlock Holmes elephant sold at auction for £9,750. Needless to say, one hopes to see it eventually on some Sherlockian's front lawn (or in some Sherlockian's very large living room).
316. Lion's mane jellyfish seem to be invading British waters every year; last month John Baesch spotted an astounding color photograph in the Daily Telegraph (June 15) showing a diver making a close inspection of a lion's mane <www.tinyurl.com/3xrz9o3>. It's difficult to decide whether the diver was brave or foolhardy.
317. According to a story in the Hollywood Reporter (May 27), Warner Bros. has announced that Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" sequel will open in the U.S. on Dec. 16, 2011; the date was included on a slide during a presentation by Warner chairman and CEO Barry Meyer during Time Warner's investor day. And the Sun reported (June 29) that Ritchie plans to shoot the sequel in 3D and has hired some of the crew that worked on "Avatar" (truth alert: the Sun is regarded by many as the least reliable of the British tabloids). And there is continuing Internet buzz about candidates to play Moriarty: in addition to Brad Pitts, the list now includes Daniel Day-Lewis, Sean Penn, Gary Oldham, and Javier Bardem.
318. Aug 10 #1: "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" (the conference in Minneapolis on Aug. 6-8) was delightful (as always for these triennial gatherings), with excellent panels and exhibits. Four librarians (Tim Johnson, Neil McCaw, Catherine Cooke and Peggy Perdue) talked about the present and future in Minneapolis, Portsmouth, London, and Toronto; Ev Herzog reminisced about the beginnings of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; Gideon Hill reported on Watson's possible dipsomania; Dick Sveum and Jon Lellenberg debated whether Ronald Knox should be honored as the creator of the Grand Game that (some) Sherlockians play; Ray Betzner paid tribute to Vincent Starrett (only a few of the items on the agenda).
319. And there was an important announcement: the university has reached its $1 million goal for the E. W. McDiarmid Fund that will endow a curator for the Sherlock Holmes Collections, and the first endowed curator is Tim Johnson, who received thunderous applause, a plaque, and a handsome medallion handcrafted by Maggie Schpak.
320. Tim Johnson would like people to know about the Elmer L. Anderson Research Scholars Program, which supports scholarly research projects that use material from the rare and special collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries. The deadline for applications this year is Sept. 30, and there is more information at <www.tinyurl.com/38ecc9w>.
321. Tim also has reported on new links at the Sherlock Holmes Collections website: the proceedings of "Rogues, Rascals, and Ruffians" (the Norwegian Explorers' conference in 1993 are now available at <www.tinyurl.com/2vgvau2>. And there's a preliminary inventory of the John Bennett Shaw correspondence at <www.tinyurl.com/358tqyz>, and of the "Lumber Room" collection of John's miscellaneous and single-issue periodicals <www.tinyurl.com/3xvudkp>. And of the Vincent Starrett papers <www.tinyurl.com/37cc39c>. There has been additional upgrading on the Sherlock Holmes Collections web-site, including material from the conference this year, and it's well worth exploring <special.lib.umn.edu/rare/holmes.phtml>.
322. The souvenirs from the conference included THE SPIRITS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, a 58-page pamphlet edited by Michael Eckman, with articles such as the editor's discussion of Sherlockian in Mad magazine, and Lucy Brusic's analysis of changes Edith Meiser made over the years in her scripts for radio broadcasts of "The Red-Headed League"; $12.00 postpaid from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122).
323. Oliver Sacks' "A Neurologist's Notebook: A Man of Letters" in The New Yorker (June 28) tells the story of "the novelist who suddenly couldn't read." The novelist is Howard Engel: after a stroke, he could no longer read, but he could write, and it's a fascinating article. Engel is the author of the Benny Cooperman mysteries, and of MR. DOYLE & DR. BELL: A VICTORIAN MYSTERY (Nov 97 #3), a fiction-based-on-fact pastiche that has Conan Doyle still a medical student in Edinburgh in 1879, involved with Joe Bell in solving a mystery full of echoes from the decades-later Oscar Slater case. Sacks, in his article "An Anthropologist on Mars" in The New Yorker, Dec. 23, 1993, noted that Sherlock Holmes showed some of the symptoms of autism.
324. Aug 10 #2: Ann Marlowe has discovered Gallica, an interesting Internet resource that you can visit at <www.gallica.bnf.fr>; it's the digital library of the Bibliotheque nationale de France, and allows users to download and read books published in France. There are 389 hits for [conan doyle] and 436 hits for [sherlock holmes]; note: you can't get full access to some of the more recent titles.
325. You're able to "check which famous writer you write like" at <www.iwl.me>. Maybe, maybe not: I pasted in a few paragraphs from my June newsletter, and was told I write like H. P. Lovecraft. Thanks to Ann Lewis for the discovery of the web-site. The domain is .me for Montenegro; Wikipedia says that "the dot-ME top-level domain replaced the dot-YU (Yugoslavia) domain previously used by Serbia and Montenegro, in addition to declaring .me independent of .yu" (someone has a sense of humor).
326. And there's more: Jason Kirkfield has discovered a blog by Steve Tuttle at <www.newsweek.com/2010/07/23/consider-the-crowded.print.html>; Tuttle found that "I Write Like" is the brain-child of 27-year-old Dmitry Chestnykh, who founded a software-development company called Coding Robots, and whose website had had (as of July 23) more than a million visitors since July 12 and 4.4 million page views. Tuttle also discovered an amusing parody called "I Actually Write Like" at <www.richardclegg.org/write>.
327. Noted by Karen Murdock: Peter Macinnis' THE KILLER BEAN OF CALABAR AND OTHER STORIES (published in Australia in 2004, and in the U.S. in 2005 as POISONS: FROM HEMLOCK TO BOTOX AND THE KILLER BEAN OF CALABAR); passing references to Conan Doyle and Holmes, and lots of interesting stories.
328. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Thaddeus Holt's "100 Years Ago" discussion of Lyndon Orr and his Sherlockian contribution to The Bookman, Dick Sveum's "50 Years Ago" tribute to Fred Kittle, and other news and other news from and about the Collections; the newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
329. It is interesting to see how authors and publishers are using the Internet to publicize their books: Graham Moore, author of the THE SHERLOCKIAN (Jun 10 #4), which is due in December, has a blog about the book (and many other things) at <www.thesherlockian.com/about-graham-moore>.
330. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's report on Conan Doyle's connection with the 1916 Olympics, Barbara Rusch's discussion of "Arthur Conan Doyle Among the

- Fairies", and Peggy Perdue's essay on the Library's Virtual Exhibit on Sidney Paget; copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
331. Forecast: THE BEST AMERICAN MYSTERY STORIES 2010, edited by Lee Child and Otto Penzler (from Mariner in September) will include Lyndsay Faye's "The Case of Colonel Warburton's Madness" (reprinted from last year's anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA).
332. Aug 10 #3: It may (or may not) be true that there are some security clearances that are so secret that those who have them can't tell you unless they know you know anyway. According to the three-part story in the Washington Post about "Top Secret America", there now are 854,000 Americans with Top Secret clearances, 265,00 of them private contractors; David Sarasohn (Portland Oregonian, July 27) quoted a Senator who said that all that is needed is "someone responsible for keeping everyone on the same page and making sure the dots are connected." Sarasohn also quoted Sherlock Holmes' statement about the abilities of his brother, who "could get separate advices from various departments, focus them all, and say off-hand how each factor would affect the other." Sarasohn ended by lamenting that "Mycroft Holmes just isn't available" now. Credit Sonia Fetherston for the report.
333. THRILLERS: 100 MUST-READS, edited by David Morrell and Hank Wagner (Longboat Key: Oceanview, 2010; 378 pp., $27.95), casts its net widely, and is an interesting survey of the genre, from the ancient Greek myth of Theseus and the Minotaur (1500 B.C.) to Dan Brown's THE DA VINCI CODE (2003). And of course THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is a thriller, discussed by Laura Benedict. Carol Nelson Douglas has an intriguing chapter on Bram Stoker's DRACULA (managing to include a mention of Irene Adler).
334. Jeff Bradway spotted a set of artistic "Great Moments in Literature Note Cards" available from Bas Bleu (Box 2599, Hudson, OH 44236) (800-433-1155) <www.basbleu.com>; four cards each of four designs ("Gulliver's Travels", "Peter Pan", "The Three Musketeers", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), and the Sherlock Holmes artwork also is on the cover of the box. $12.00 (item UD2842).
335. Randall Stock continues to expand the scope of his "Best of Sherlock" website and has added a census of known copies of the first edition of Vincent Starrett's classic pastiche "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet", including the copy inscribed by Starrett and sent to Conan Doyle in 1920. Needless to say, Randall hopes to locate more copies, and will be happy to hear from those whose copies aren't listed. Go to <www.bestofsherlock.com> to read the census, which includes a careful description of the first edition and a link to the text of the pastiche.
336. Jim Ballinger spotted a news release about CHARM (The Centre for the History and Analysis of Recorded Music) at King's College London; they've made almost 5,000 history recordings available on-line, one of them the recording Conan Doyle made for the Gramophone Company on May 14, 1930. The quality of the recording is splendid <www.charm.kcl.ac.uk/sound/sound.html>.
337. Forecast: a Japanese translation (by Masamichi Higurashi) of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley, from Toro Shorin next year.
338. The late David Levine caricatured both Holmes and Conan Doyle in the N.Y. Review of Books (Jan 10 #3); Lucy Pollard Gott reports that the magazine's web-site has a gallery of many of his caricatures, and offers made-to-order print of his Sherlock Holmes ($150.00) <www.tinyurl.com/34o7osx>. His Conan Doyle, unfortunately is not available as a print.
339. Aug 10 #4: Molly Carr's THE SIGN OF FEAR (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 310 pp., £12.99/$19.95/€16.99) is an entertaining pastiche in which just about everyone is a bit (or more) different from what they are in the Canon: Mrs. Watson is the detective, working with Mrs. Neville St. Clair, encountering Prof. Moriarty, John Clay, J. Neil Gibson, and others who include Raffles, Bunny, Hercule Poirot's father, and Miss Marple's mother (to name only a few); the detectives travel to Australia and the Vatican, and manage to solve quite a few mysteries (some but not all with the assistance of Dr. Watson).
340. Reported: KILLER'S DOZEN, by Richard A. Lupoff (Rockville: Wildside, 2010; 252 pp., $14.95); 13 of his previously uncollected stories, including "Inga Sigerson Weds" reprinted from SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE AMERICAN YEARS.
341. Aaron Smith's SEASON OF MADNESS: A DOCTOR WATSON ADVENTURE (Metairie: Cornerstone, 2009; 190 pp., $21.95) has Watson and John Seward pursuing a macabre and grotesque mystery that involves other characters from the worlds of the Canon and Dracula; there are two stories in the book, and the second ("Attack of the Electric Shark") features Hound Dog Harker (the son of Jonathan and Mina Harker).
342. Tina Rhea spotted a report in The Independent (Aug. 11) that the web-site <www.ancestry.com> now offers a data base that contains more than six million British wills, dating from 1861 to 1941; one of them is the will of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who left an estate of £63,491 (nearly £3 million today, according to the article).
343. Plan well ahead: NATMEET is what Sherlockians in Australia call their national meeting of Sherlockian societies, and Steve Duke has reported that NATMEET 6 will be held in Adelaide in 2012, on Easter Weekend (Apr. 7-8).
344. It's hard to imagine Conan Doyle "knew his title character would be the inspiration for an electro-pop band from down under made up of four guys and a sultry lead singer," David Dennis Jr. wrote at <www.spinner.com> on Feb. 25; the sultry lead singer is Tanya Horo, who said that Conan Doyle is one of her favorite writers, and "I think I'm slightly obsessed with him om a really unhealthy way [laughs]." Their music is pleasant to listen to, and you'll find it easily on the Internet; search for [sherlock's daughter].
345. Forecast: Andrew Lane's "Young Sherlock Holmes" series (Jun 10 #3) continues with RED LEECH, which is due from Macmillan in November; the first title in the series was DEATH CLOUD, scheduled for an American edition from Farrar, Straus and Giroux in February.
346. James J. Kilpatrick died on Aug. 15. He was a journalist and author, and a fervent conservative, and his great interest in language was expressed in his column "The Writer's Art". In 1989 he discussed the coinage of verbs, complaining that Conan Doyle used the verb "disillusionize" in "The Reigate Squires". He heard from many readers who could find only "disillusion" in the story, and later explained (one paper used the headline "Schlock Holmes Says It's Elementalized, Dr. Watson") that the offending word does appear in the story (and indeed it does, in The Strand Magazine and British editions of the Canon).
347. Aug 10 #5: Anne Perry wrote an afterword for a new Signet Classics edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Dec 02 #5), and an introduction for a new Signet Classics edition of THE SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES: 22 STORIES (2005, $5.95), and an introduction for a Modern Library edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (2003, $9.00); all nicely done.
348. And there's more about the campaign to preserve Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907 (Jul 10 #1): "Conan Doyle and the Barbarians" was the headline on a letter published in The Times (July 31) with signatures from 53 people who included authors, actors, relatives of Conan Doyle, and Sherlockians from a dozen different countries. The Times also had a story about the campaign.
349. The discussion of Sherlock Holmes in The Times that day also focused on a suggestion by Jeremy Hunt, the government's Culture Secretary, that funding for the BBC could be cut, with a story that quoted Steven Moffat: "If you want shows like 'Sherlock' and 'Doctor Who', you are going to need

- the BBC." Moffat, co-creator of "Sherlock" and lead writer for "Doctor Who", must have welcomed a review of "Sherlock" by Caitlin Moran, who announced: "Sherlock is so good, if BBC funding is ever called into question I'll pay for it myself."
350. A later story in the Petersfield Post (Aug. 15), forwarded by Al Gregory, reports that John Gibson, chairman of the Undershaw Preservation Trust, is seeking a judicial review of the Waverley Borough Council decision to approve the application of a developer to convert the house into three flats. According to the story, Max Norris, a professional developer who wants to keep Undershaw as a single dwelling, with limited public access, submitted his own application shortly before the Council meeting, too late for formal consideration; the Trust said that the house was valued at £600,000 before the Council's decision, which increased the value to £1.5 million, which is more than Norris can afford to pay. And Paul Spiring reports that there's a recently-updated Wikipedia entry for Undershaw; it's a work-in-progress, at <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Undershaw>.
351. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Minstrel Players at Houghton Hall (on Long Island), Nov. 13-21 (120 Main Street, Northport Village, N.Y. 11768) (631-732-2926) <www.minstrelplayers.org>.
352. George Vanderburgh has published Hugh T. Harrington's RE: SHERLOCK, A COLLECTION OF OBSERVATIONS & COMMENTARIES (2005; 80 pp., $12.00); the book reprints his interesting Sherlockian scholarship from magazines and newsletters from 1987 to 1999. The publisher's at Box 50, R.R. #4, Eugenia, ON NOC 1E0, Canada <www.batteredbox.com>.
353. The spring issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the newsletter of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust) offers a report (with photographs) from the 2009 sesquicentennial symposium at the Houghton Library, Tom Francis' discussion of the Trust's activities, and archivist Bob Coghill's description of his work on the correspondence that has been donated to the Trust. Copies of the newsletter are available on request from Marshall S. Berdan (2015 Main Street, Glastonbury, CT 06033) <editor@bsitrust.org>.
354. Aug 10 #6: Alan Stockwell's pastiche "The Singular Adventure of the Vanishing Nobleman" was published in his THE SINGULAR ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2003) and then dramatized as "The Singular Adventure of the Gloved Pianist" and performed for the Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 2008; Stockwell has turned the play back into a pastiche, and his SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SINGULAR ADVENTURE OF THE GLOVED PIANIST (Ashford: Vesper Hawk, 2010; 128 pp., £6.95/$12.95/E10.00); it's an entertaining mystery (in more ways than one with opportunities for audience participation. The publisher's web-site is at <www.vesperhawk.com>.
355. "The Great Mouse Detective" is now available on a "Mystery in the Mist Edition" DVD from Disney ($19.99); it's an "all-new digital restoration" with special features that include a "So You Think You Can Sleuth" game, a "making of" featurette, and a "World's Greatest Criminal Mind" sing-along.
356. "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" is a new play written by Heather Wallen and scheduled at the York Little Theatre, Oct. 29 to Nov. 7; 27 South Belmont Street, York, PA 17403 (717-854-3894) <www.ylt.org>.
357. Steve Rothman delivered the annual Cameron Hollyer Lecture at the Toronto Public Library on Nov. 15, 2008, and his remarks (titled "Tincture of Conan Doyle: Christopher Morley on Sherlock Holmes") were published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. A limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now <www.acdfriends.org> (or contact Cliff Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada); the minimum donation is $25.00. Michael Dirda's 2009 lecture ("The Press Is a Most Valuable Institution: Conan Doyle as Essayist and Journalist") will be sent to members of the Friends later this year.
358. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 5-7, will include a repeat performance of "The Case of the Demons in a Padded Room" (written by John K. Alvarez. The weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years; there's more information available from 1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278) and at the festival's web-site, which is at <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html>.
359. Gene Grossman's "Peter Sharp Legal Mysteries" feature a former lawyer and private detective who is legal guardian of 12-year-old Suzi, who's a better detective than he is, and the series has reached #15, THE SHERLOCK HOLMES CAPER (Magic Lamp Press, 2010; 167 pp., $12.95); there's imaginative use of clues from the Canon, and you can read the first chapters of earlier books in the series at <www.legalmystery.com> (the author reports that there are Sherlockian allusions in other titles in the series).
360. Acorn Media continues to issue interesting old film and television on DVDs, and Randall Stock spotted a review of RAFFLES: THE COMPLETE COLLECTION on six DVDs ($59.99); Anthony Valentine played Raffles in a British television film in 1975, and then in a 13-episode television series; you can read the review at <www.dvdtalk.com/reviews/42814/raffles-complete-collection>. As far as I know, neither the film nor the series has ever been broadcast in the U.S., and there's nothing Sherlockian about them (other than the fact that Raffles was created by Conan Doyle's brother-in-law). But Valentine did play Baron Gruner in Granada's "The Illustrious Client" (1991).
361. Aug 10 #7: Leo Sauvage was a journalist and author, the N.Y. correspondent for Le Figaro from 1950 to 1975, and then the drama critic for the New Leader, and he was a Sherlockian (investitured as "Victor Savage" in the Baker Street Irregulars). When he died in 1988 he had been working on a book about Holmes, and most of his first draft has been found and has now been published. SHERLOCKIAN HERESIES, edited by Julie McKuras and Sue Vizoskie (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2010; 233 pp., $19.95), offers fine Sherlockian scholarship; there are reprints of his earlier work (he wrote articles for The Baker Street Journal in 1958, 1983, and 1984) and there's much that's new.
362. Gasogene also has published MURDER IN THE VATICAN: THE CHURCH MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ann Margaret Lewis (2010; 151 pp., $18.95); there are three pastiches that involve Pope Leo XIII: "The Death of Cardinal Tosca", "The Vatican Cameos" (recorded by His Holiness), and "The Second Coptic Patriarch", and they're all nicely done. The publisher's at Box 63808, Indianapolis, IN 46268 <www.gasogenebooks.com>.
363. Michael Capuzzo's THE MURDER ROOM: THE HEIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES GATHER TO SOLVE THE WORLD'S MOST PERPLEXING COLD CASES (New York: Gotham Books, 2010; 439 pp., $26.00) is a history of the Vidocq Society, which is named in honor of the brilliant 18th-century detective Eugene Vidocq; it is a group of forensic experts based in Philadelphia who use joint forensic expertise to attempt to solve "cold case" homicides and other crimes. Capuzzo reports that they are similar to the Baker Street Irregulars (both societies being "strictly fraternal"), and that forensic psychologist and forensic profiler Richard Walter has been described by Scotland Yard as "the living Sherlock Holmes."
364. But Walter doesn't like that description: when one of his colleagues said that Walter looks like Basil Rathbone in "The Hound of the Baskervilles": "he talks like him, thinks like him, Walter responded that "Whenever someone says that, I look away and wait for the moment to pass, as if someone just farted." Sherlockian allusions aside, it's a fascinating book; there will be a segment about the society (and the book) on "20/20" on ABC-TV on Sept. 21.
365. "Miss Marple is aiming to break up the illustrious duo to prevent herself being demoted from the ranks of Britain's foremost detectives, and the pair must set out to prevent Watson from being framed for the murder of one of the aristocratic Baskervilles." That's the Scotsman's description of the play "Sherlock Holmes and the Sound of the Baskervilles" performed by Two Shades of Blue during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in August. It was so well received that they added three matinee performances at the end of the one-week run.

366. The British Film Institute has renewed its "BFI Most Wanted" campaign with a list of 75 films it would like to find, preserve, and make available from its archives, and the "ten most wanted" films include "A Study in Scarlet" (1914), described as the first British feature film to be based on the adventures of "the immortal detective". You can read more about the project, and the film, at <www.bfi.org.uk/nationalarchives/news/mostwanted>; there are some interesting stills and a publicity release at the web-site.
367. Aug 10 #8: Oscar Ross reported a story at the Digital Spy web-site (July 26) about ratings for the first episode of BBC-1's "Sherlock", which attracted 7.5 million viewers (30.4% of people watching television). "Antiques Roadshow" ran second that night, with only 4.82 million viewers (24.3%). The population of the U.K. was estimated at 61.8 million people in mid-2009 (according to Wikipedia). "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" (the first program in David Pirie's series), aired on BBC-2 in 2005 with 2.63 million viewers (12.6%); the most popular show that night was "Coronation Street" with 9.95 million viewers (47.1%).
368. You can watch "Sherlock" on the Internet, even though the BBC web-site does not allow access from the United States; <www.youtube.com> has the episodes in (I think) nine parts each, and the episodes are available at web-sites such as <www.megaupload.com> (well, at least they were available) (one never knows how long it will be before they're removed). If you want to know where their 221B Baker Street is, the address is 185 North Gower Street and you can dine (as they do) at Speedy's Sandwich Bar on the ground floor of the building.
369. Or you can wait until Oct. 24, when the series will begin on PBS-TV's "Masterpiece Mystery". <www.pbs.org/wgbh/masterpiece/sherlock/index.html> is the URL for their promotion, which includes a few video clips. I can report that the series is extremely good overall, with intelligent scripts, delightful humor, and good acting; it's quite Canonical (if you accept the basic premise that the Canon is set in modern London).
370. And things do change: as with Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes", the new series generated a mild flurry of press and Internet comment about suggestions that Holmes and Watson were gay; I don't recall that sort of publicity when the Granada series aired in the 1980s.
371. Nice news: the BBC, encouraged by the 7 million people who tuned in for the third episode of the series, has announced that there will be more programs ("We're having a meeting to talk about how many and when," series producer Sue Vertue said). She should know: her husband Steven Moffat is co-creator of the series. Mark Gatiss, the other co-creator, can be seen in the series, uncredited, as Holmes' brother Mycroft.
372. Nicer news: according to <www.amazon.co.uk>, the series will be released on region 2 DVD and Blu-ray on Aug. 30, and the disk will include the 60-minute pilot that was never broadcast; region 2 is the U.K., but those in other regions will be able to watch the DVD on their computers (if their computers have the nice software that plays DVDs from any region) or on multiregion DVD players.
373. And the Bookseller reported (Aug. 12) that the series has boosted sales of books such as Penguin's THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (up 83%), Wordsworth Classics' THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (up 431%), Macmillan's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD by Andrew Lane (up 18%), and Quirk's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK by Ransom Riggs (up 57%).
374. Sep 10 #1: Good news: Ken Ludwig has written a new play about William Gillette. The first play was "Dramatic License", a murder mystery set in Gillette's home that had its premiere in 1983, starring Patrick Horgan as Gillette; renamed "Postmortem", it has had more than two dozen productions by local theater groups. The new play is "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays", a "comedy-mystery-thriller" that's also set in Gillette's home, and it is absolutely hilarious; there was a staged reading, directed by Ludwig, at the Terrace Theatre of the Kennedy Center in Washington on Sept. 6 as part of a free "Page-to-Stage" festival over the Labor Day weekend.
375. Bad news: that was the only performance of the play, and there are no plans for a full-scale production. The author said that he is hoping to find a producer (one does wonder how hard it is for Ken Ludwig to get a play produced).
376. Jon Lellenberg's BAKER STREET IRREGULAR (Sauk City: Mycroft & Moran, 2010; 404 pp., $39.95) is a novel about the early days of the BSI: it begins in 1933, when New York lawyer Woody Hazelbaker gets into conversation with the librarian of the Harvard Club, Earle Walbridge, who takes him to lunch at Christ Cella's and introduces him to Christopher Morley and other members of the Three Hours for Lunch Club. Woody soon becomes a member of the BSI, finds romance and intrigue, and with the assistance of other Irregulars is heavily involved in intelligence operations during World War Two, turning the novel into a thriller rather than an Irregular history. $44.95 postpaid to the U.S. from Arkham House Publishing, Box 122, Sauk City, WI 53585 <www.arkhamhouse.com>.
377. Jon also has created a web-site at <www.bsiarchivalhistory.org>; it's full of interesting material, including links to some of his published essays, excerpts from his books, his blog, and departments that include "The Editor's Gas-Bag" and "Ask Thucydides!" (in which Jon attempts to answer his readers' questions about the web-site and about BSI history). And if you click on "novel" you'll find a link to "Woody's World" in which there are weekly posts about the new book. The web-site's a lively read, including his links to non-Sherlockian but intriguing web-sites.
378. Janice Fisher has noted an intriguing trivia question from Nancy Friedman at her "Fritinancy" web-site: "What do Grace Kelly, Kurt Vonnegut, Johnny Weir, and Sherlock Holmes have in common?"
379. "Previously unseen colour footage of London during the Blitz has been discovered after lying in an attic for almost 70 years," the Daily Telegraph reported on Sept. 6 (noted in a post by an admirer of Mary Russell to the "Letters of Mary" group at Yahoo); go to <www.westendatwar.org.uk> to see the film. Click on "Rare Colour Film Footage" and then on Part 5 of "Pages from St. Marylebone's War Diary" to see "Baker Street Bazaar (Druce & Co.) Is Burnt Out, May 10, 1941". The Baker Street Bazaar was on the west side of Baker Street, between Dorset Street and King (now Blandford) Street, and had an entrance at what is now 59-63 Baker Street, according to Catherine Cooke, who notes that the Bazaar is on the end-paper maps in James Edward Holroyd's SEVENTEEN STEPS TO 221B (1967).

380. Sep 10 #2: "What do Grace Kelly, Kurt Vonnegut, Johnny Weir, and Sherlock Holmes have in common?" They've all had asteroids named after them. Actually, you should add Dr. Watson and Prof. Moriarty to the list: three of the many asteroids discovered and named by American astronomer Edward L. G. Bowell are 5048 Moriarty, 5049 Sherlock, and 5050 Doctorwatson (and the names have been approved by the International Astronomical Union's Committee on Small-Body Nomenclature).
381. Jon Lellenberg has reported "Literary Worlds: Illumination of the Mind", an impressive exhibition at the L. Tom Perry Special Collections of the Harold B. Lee Library at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, running through June 2011; their web-site is <www.lib.byu.edu/exhibits/literaryworlds>, and you can click on "Arthur Conan Doyle" to see their images of the manuscript of THE REFUGEES, an interesting letter about his work on THE WHITE COMPANY, and other material.
382. Pat Ward has noted that Cracker Barrel restaurants have shops that offer a Sherlockian resin basset hound figure that's also available on-line at <www.crackerbarrel.com> (click on "Halloween"); item #329933 ($24.99). And Karen Murdock reports a similar (and smaller) shelf-sitter figure ($6.00) that apparently is available only in the shops and not on-line.
383. It's not often that one finds allusions to O.J. Simpson, Madonna, and the Rat Pack in a book of Sherlockian essays, but those who have heard Bill Mason speak at S'ian conferences won't be a bit surprised. PURSUING SHERLOCK HOLMES (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2010; 151 pp., $29.99 cloth, $19.99

- paper, $9.99 Ebook) offers conference presentations, reprints of earlier limited-circulation articles, and new pieces, all nicely done, and more important, interesting and amusing. Signed copies can be ordered from Bill (2367 Lights Chapel Road, Greenbrier, TN 37073); $24.00 postpaid for cloth, or $16.00 for paper.
384. Further to the report (May 10 #5) on rhw four-issue comic-book mini-series MUPPET SHERLOCK HOLMES due from BOOM! Studios, there's going to be a book edition coming out in March ($9.99/£6.63), noted at <www.amazon.com> and at <www.amazon.co.uk>.
385. Corbis Motion <www.corbismotion.com> offers easy access to "motion content" (more than 500,000 clips, of which more than 300,000 are in HD); they can be viewed at the web-site (but you need to pay to download and use them). Four clips tagged for [sherlock holmes], and three actually are Sherlockian (two clips at the Sherlock Holmes Museum, and one at the statue in Baker Street).
386. THE PONTINE DOSSIER was a delightful journal published from 1967 to 1977 by Luther Norris for The Praed Street Irregulars; the contributors wrote about Solar Pons, of course, and many other things, and it's grand to find it all available again, this time on a CD (in PDF format) issued by George Vanderburgh ($10.00). If you were a contributor and don't yet have a copy of the CD, let him know and he'll send you a free copy; Box 50, R.R. #4, Eugenia, ON N0C 1E0, Canada <gav@cablerocket.com> <www.batteredbox.com>.

387. Sep 10 #3: H. Ripley Crommarsh's THE SECRET OF MOOR COTTAGE was published in 1906, and has been reprinted by various public-domain publishers; it's available at Amazon and AbeBooks, and is of interest because H. Ripley Crommarsh was a pseudonym used by Bryan Mary Angell, Arthur Conan Doyle's youngest sister Dodo. She wrote two other books, THE EPISODES OF MARGE: MEMOIRS OF A HUMBLE ADVENTURESS (1903) and AT THE WATERS OF STRIFE (1913), but they haven't been reprinted. I suspect that none of the current publishers know who Crommarsh actually was.
388. A reminder that Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" web-site has links to lists of Sherlockian societies; at the moment there are 874 societies, including 415 active societies in 21 countries. And many other links, of course; the URL is <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/sherlocktron>.
389. And Willis, back from vacation in Africa, reports that he found a copy of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES in the library of Abu Camp in the Okavango Delta in Botswana; there's a photograph of the library at the bush camp's web-site <www.abucamp.com> (alas, you can't quite make see the books).
390. Just in time for Halloween: BuyCostumes.com (5915 South Moorland Road, New Berlin, WI 53151) (866-726-7886) <www.buycostumes.com> offers a nice selection of costumes and accessories for men and women who want to dress up as Holmes or Watson.
391. You can live like a Baskerville: Paul Spiring has reported that Honeysuckle Cottage in Ipplepen is for sale; two bedrooms, one bathroom, garden, asking price £210,000. It's the former home of B. Fletcher Robinson's coachman, Harry Baskerville, who received a copy of the first edition of the book inscribed by Fletcher Robinson with thanks for the use of the name.
392. <www.sherlockpeoria.net> is the URL for Brad Keefauver's weird and wonderful Sherlock Peoria web-site, now in its ninth year, offering personal essays, contribution from The Maniac Collector, interesting links, and an imaginative "Action Sherlock Brain Theater" (all well worth checking out).
393. Sherlock Holmes: The True Story" was broadcast on the Discovery channel in 2003 (Oct 03 #1); it's a 46-minute documentary about Dr. Joseph Bell, with interviews with Owen Dudley Edwards and Ely Liebow, and Dorothy Young has reported that it's now available on the Internet at YouTube and other websites.
394. Singer/songwriter Brian McKnight's group "The Baker Street Irregulars" has issued a CD "Hanging on for Dear Life" (Atomic Mouse Recordings, 2006). It is available at Amazon ($10.98) and as MP3 downloads of the albums and each track (you can also listen to samples).
395. THE WORLD'S SHORTEST STORIES, edited by Steve Moss (Philadelphia: Running Press, 1998; 224 pp., $8.95); some of the results of a "Fifty-Five Fiction" contest, which challenged authors to write short stories exactly 55 words long. And one of them is Sherlockian: Tom Ford's "The Mystery". The story also appears in a CoasterBook edition with fewer stories (but you can use the stories as coasters), issued in 2001 ($6.95) and now out of print.
-
396. Sep 10 #4: The Green Bag was (and still is) a monthly magazine published for lawyers, and early issues had items of Sherlockian interest: J. B. Mackenzie's "Sherlock Holmes' Plots and Strategy" (Sept. 1902) and Donald B. Richberg's "Sherlock Holmes, Witness: The Famous Detective Testifies" (Aug. 1907); Les Klinger has discovered both of the articles at <www.books.google.com> (search for the titles).
397. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Townhouse Players at the Powerhouse Performing Arts Center, Oct. 29-Nov. 13. Box 201, New Canaan, CT 06840 (203-966-7371) <www.tpnc.org>.
398. Further to reports on the campaign to preserve Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, there was a two-minute segment about the house on the BBC-1's "South Today" news program in March, with views of the outside and inside of the derelict house, and statements by John Gibson and Richard Doyle. You can see it at <www.youtube.com>; search for [arthur conan doyle's house].
399. Cindy & Bert (Jutta Gusenberger and Norbert Berger) are a German vocal duo; you can watch them perform their hit song "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1970) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=PIYRFvQMh7A> (reported by the Baskerville Hall Club of Sweden).
400. Kieron Freeburn's THE OFFICIAL PAPERS INTO THE MATTER KNOWN AS 'THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES' (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 162 pp., £14.99/£17.99/ $22.95) is an imaginative reprint of the files of the Metropolitan Police and the Devon County Constabulary, offering an instructive and often entertaining look at what the police did during the case, and what they thought about what Sherlock Holmes did.
401. Mystery Readers Journal has been published quarterly for many years by Mystery Readers International, and many back issues are available for purchase and download at their web-site <www.mysteryreaders.org>. Their fall 1996 issue (v. 12, n. 3) was devoted to Sports Mysteries, and included Philip L. Scowcroft's article "Sport and Sherlock Holmes".
402. THE BAKER STREET PHANTOM, by Fabrice Bourland (London: Gallic Books, 2010; 185 pp., £7.99), was published in France in 2008 and is now available in an English translation; it's set in London in 1932, when American detectives James Trelawney and Andrew Singleton become involved with the widow of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the ghosts of Sherlock Holmes and a variety of fictional (and non-fictional) characters.
403. Al Gregory is trying to assemble a complete run of The Baker Street Journal and needs a copy of the March 1965. If you have one for sale, he's at 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044 <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net>.
404. Further to the report (Apr 10 #5) about the violin that Steve Burnett made from wood from a 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, the "Sherlock" violin has been presented to Edinburgh University's instrument collection. Burnett plans to make a "Conan Doyle" string quartet (two violins, a cello, and a viola) next year using more wood from the tree.

405. Sep 10 #5: The wonders of modern technology: many Sherlockian societies in non-English-speaking countries have on-line web-sites and newsletters, and they're easily found at Chris Redmond's <www.sherlockian.net>. And Google has a useful "translate" feature that will automatically translate from other languages into English, not fluently but good enough that you can figure out what's going on there, wherever there might be. Google Translate also works for English into other languages, needless to say, and there are more than fifty languages available.

406. Sherlockians and Doyleans have long been interested in Charles Dickens' unfinished novel THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD, as long ago as 1905, when Andrew Lang's pastiche-solution appeared in Longman's Magazine; Conan Doyle himself discussed the story with Dickens, who explained that "Edwin is alive and Chris is hiding him" (the discussion took place during a seance, needless to say). And there still are Dickensians who debate ins and outs and possible endings, including Ray Dubberke, who wrote DICKENS, DROOD, AND THE DETECTIVES (May 92 #5), and now DICKENS, DROOD, AND REDEMPTION (New York: Vantage Press, 2010; 169 pp., $22.95); the new book is not Sherlockian, but begins by quoting Vincent Starrett, who wrote that the story is "the greatest detective-story in the world."
407. Irene's Cabinet is the annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (42 pp.) offers the usual interesting mix of articles, toasts, and poetry, including Fred Glueckstein's essay on Conan Doyle as a baseball fan, Andrew Solberg's investigation of reports in the press when "A Study in Scarlet" was first published, and Deborah Belchis' "Dancing Men Gangsta Rap"; $15.00 postpaid from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).
408. There's more information on "Tom and Jerry Meet Sherlock Holmes", the animation released on DVD by Warner Home Video (May 10 #5): Michael York is the voice of Holmes, John Rhys-Davies is Watson, and Malcolm McDowell is Moriarty.
409. WHODUNITS: MORE THAN 100 MYSTERIES FOR YOU TO SOLVE, by Tom Bullimore, Hy Conrad, Derrick Niederman, and Stan Smith (New York: Sterling Innovation, 2008; 275 pp., $6.98), includes Holmes and Watson in Bullimore's SHERLOCK HOLMES' PUZZLES OF DEDUCTION (1997) and Holmes' great-great-grandson Sherman Oliver Holmes in Conrad's WHODUNIT CRIME PUZZLES (2002); it's a reprint of CLASSIC WHODUNITS (Dec 03 #5).
410. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at Centre Stage, Feb. 10-26, 2011; the theater's at 501 River Street, Greenville, SC 29601 (877-377-1339) <www.centrestage.org>.
411. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, SHERLOCK HOLMES, AND DEVON: A COMPLETE TOUR GUIDE AND COMPANION, by Brian W. Pugh, Paul R. Spiring, and Sadru Bhanji (London, MX Publishing, 2010; 255 pp., £12.99/$19.95/E14.99), is a valuable and interesting guidebook for those who want to tour Devon, and for those who want to know more about an area that includes much more than Dartmoor. The book has five sections, about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, George Turnavine Budd, Sir George Newnes, Bertram Fletcher Robinson, and (the largest) Devon itself, all carefully researched and well illustrated.
412. Sep 10 #6: Stuart Kaminsky died on Oct. 9, 2009. A film historian, screenwriter, and prolific novelist, he had Sherlockian allusions in two of his "Toby Peters" mysteries: Basil Rathbone was Peters' Sherlockian assistant in THE HOWARD HUGHES AFFAIR (1979), and Peters attended a meeting of a Sherlockian society called The Engineer's Thumbs in HE DONE HER WRONG (1983). He also wrote two Sherlockian pastiches, one of which ("The Final Toast") he dramatized for performance at the International Mystery Writers' Festival in 2008.
413. Ken Lanza spotted the "Sherlock Holmes" shoe at <www.keepcompany.com/detail.aspx&id=115>; it looks much better in full color, needless to say. The unisex tweed-and plaid shoe is made by Keep ($75.00 at their web-site).
414. Further to the report on NATMEET, which is what Sherlockians in Australia call the national meeting of their Sherlockian societies (Aug 10 #4), Steve Duke now reports that something likely will be going on down under in 2012, but not on Easter Weekend. Stay tuned, as they say.
415. Worth a look: Shahan Cheong's web-site <www.scheong.wordpress.com> offers a link to "The Encyclopedia Sherlockian".
416. This year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" at the Enoch Pratt Free Library will be on Nov. 6, from 10:00 to 1:00; 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore. The event, open to the public and free, is sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies, and this year's theme is "Is There a Doctor in the House?".
417. What's the most valuable modern Sherlockian periodical? A likely candidate is the first issue of Playboy, which included an excerpt from "The Sign of the Four"; it sold for 50c in Dec. 1953 and had a press run of 53,991 copies, and a copy sold at auction this month for $3,032. It would have sold for much more, of course, if it had been signed by Hugh Hefner (and signed copies do exist).
418. There are some aspects of Sherlock Holmes' world that tend to be neglected by most commentators, one of those aspects being sanitation. Ripperologist (an interesting electronic journal edited by Eduardo Zinna) has been running Tim Mosley's intriguing multi-part article "The House That Jack Built" (it's a pun, since in Britain the common term for "privy" was "jakes" (believed to be derived from "Jack's house" rather than having anything to do with Jack the Ripper); the article began in issue #115 (July 2010) and is continuing. Contact Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> for information about subscriptions.
419. The story of the meeting between Conan Doyle and Chaplin has been told by many, but the source is never stated. The original, in Conan Doyle's own words, was a reported in the N.Y. Times (Dec. 7, 1925) about his speech at the annual dinner of the Savage Club in London: "At one theatre," he said, they had a boy playing the page in 'Sherlock Holmes'. If I had said to him 'we will go halves for all our lives,' I should have made a great deal, for that little boy was Charlie Chaplin." It should be noted that Conan Doyle did not say that he actually had met Chaplin.

420. Sep 10 #7: I'm not sure it's worth buying the DVD with the complete first season, but the Canadian one-hour series broadcast (and now in repeats) by Syfy cable included "Revelations" (a two-part story that first aired on Dec. 29, 2008, and Jan. 5, 2009) in which Dr. James Watson (played by Peter Wingfield) is described as having been Conan Doyle's inspiration for Sherlock Holmes (and this Dr. Watson was modest, and satisfied to have his name used for the secondary character in the stories).
421. Heather Brown's creative Knitwits include Sherlock Holmes (2.5 in. high and in appropriate colors); you can see a full-color image at <www.flickr.com/photos/londonmatt/3190604849>. $27.00 postpaid (they're knitted to order); you can contact Heather at <heatherjanebrown-at-googlemail.com>.
422. "A character so sinister he makes Arthur Conan Doyle's Professor Moriarty look like a common shoplifter" is how the publisher described Fantomas when a new translation of the novel by Marcel Allain and Pierre Souvestre appeared in 1986. FANTOMAS was first published in 1911. launched a flood of novels and silent films; a new DVD will show you just how sinister he was. The DVD has five films (1913-1914), plus additional features, and you can see a trailer at <www.kino.com>.
423. Audio Editions offers a long list and wide range of books on CDs and as MP3 downloads; searching their web-site <www.audioeditions.com> yields 153 hits for [conan doyle] and 131 for [sherlock holmes]. Their more-limited catalog is available by mail (Box 6930, Auburn, CA 95604 (800-231-4261).
424. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE AMERICAN YEARS, edited by Michael Kurland (New York: Minotaur, 2010; 347 pp. $25.99), is an anthology of ten new stories about Sherlock Holmes in America, by authors who include Rhys Bowen, Peter Tremayne, and Steve Hockensmith (whose has arranged a meeting between Holmes and William Gillette).
425. Bernard Davies ("A Study in Scarlet") died on Sept. 21. A stalwart member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, he was its chairman from 1983 to 1986, and became an honorary member in 1995. His specialty was the locations of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and he was an expert guide to the geography of the Canon and wrote many articles based on his research. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.

426. The artist Charles Wysocki (1928-2002) specialized in Americana, and there is a web-site at <www.charleswysocki.com> that shows his work, including a print "Hound of the Baskervilles" that was published in 1997. The print is available at eBay for $425.00, Ken Lanza reports, along with a less-expensive plate and calendar.
427. Tina Rhea noted a story in the Observer (Sept. 26) about a television commercial in which John Lennon footage is used to advertise the Citroën DS3. But the footage was dubbed; the original footage, shot by the BBC in June 1968, shows Lennon talking about reading the Sherlock Holmes stories in Tahiti, before he went on to write about Shamrock Wolmb's and Doctored Whopper in a story in A SPANIARD IN THE WORKS (1965). You can see both versions of the footage at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ipyUk5-wlFg>.

428. Sep 10 #8: The Scowrers and Molly Maguires invite people who are coming to San Francisco for Bouchercon to a reception on Saturday, Oct. 16, 6:00-8:00 pm, at Schroeder's Restaurant (240 Front Street); there will be a cash bar, and you're asked to RSVP by Oct. 9 to <sfbsi221@gmail.com>. The Bouchercon schedule is now available at <www.bcon2010.com>, and there's still time to register for the whole convention, or just one day (hint: the Sherlockian panel will be on Oct. 14, at 3:00 pm).
429. The BBC mini-series "Sherlock" started on Showcase in Canada on Sept. 10, which gave viewers there access before viewers in the U.S., where the series starts on PBS-TV on Oct. 24. There's a 2-minute preview available at <www.pbs.org/wghb/masterpiece/sherlock/index.html> (it also can be seen at YouTube). The American version of the two-DVD set is scheduled for release in the U.S. on Nov. 9 on DVD ($34.98) and on Blu-ray ($39.98), and the set will include audio commentaries, a making-of featurette, and the unbroadcast pilot episode.
430. "Masterpiece Mystery" will screen the first episode at New York Comicon at 10:00 pm on Oct. 8. And there will be a Twitter Party during the broadcast on Oct. 24.
431. The BBC has announced that they have commissioned three new episodes of the mini-series, for broadcast next autumn. The BBC press release quoted cocreators Mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat as saying "there'll be baffling new puzzles, old friends, and new enemies--whether on two or four legs. And we might be seeing the cold master of logic and reason unexpectedly falling. But in love? Or over a precipice? Who can tell?" And (sorry about that): Sue Vertue's husband (Aug 10 #8) is Steven Moffat.
432. The nifty little hand lens that Sherlock Holmes uses in the new "Sherlock" mini-series is a designo slide-out magnifier made by Eschenbach in Germany, and you can win one the write-a-pastiche contest at <www.sherlocking.org> (click on "The Contest"); the fan-site is maintained by Sean Duncan and Liz Elcessor, and they have other interesting news and links.
433. I guess it's time for some gossip about Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes 2": according to the Hollywood Reporter (Sept. 11), Noomi Rapace (who starred in "The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo") has been signed as the female lead, perhaps playing a French gypsy (although Irene Adler is reported to be returning). Mycroft and Moriarty are to appear in the film. And Jon Lellenberg reports that principal photography will begin in early October (so you can expect a lot more gossip).
434. And Stephen Fry has announced on a BBC radio show that he will be playing Mycroft in the film. There have been rumors as far back as 1991 of a television series in which he would star with Hugh Laurie as Holmes and Watson, but it was reported (Jan 05 #6) that Fry said at annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, that he had realized that he doesn't resemble Holmes ("there's no description in the Canon of Holmes looking like 'a bin liner full of yoghurt'), and that the project had been scrapped.

435. Oct 10 #1: Thad Holt has noted the impressive Wikipedia entry at <www.wikipedia.org> for "Sherlock Holmes Baffled" (the very first Sherlock Holmes film, made in 1900). There are interesting aspects to Wikipedia, such as the "View history" feature (at the upper right) that allows you to review the work that Wikipedia's editors have done, starting with Mary Read (who describes herself as "a goofy pirate chick with a penchant for crazed copy-editing") and others since she launched the entry on Jan. 26, 2007. It has been selected as a "featured article" (click on the gold star at the upper right); there are at the moment 3,075 featured articles out of 3,453,810 articles on the English Wikipedia.
436. And it is intriguing to consider that by the time of "His Last Bow" Holmes would have had a chance to see a "Sherlock Holmes" film (perhaps one of the eight films that were made by the Franco-British Film Co. in 1912 starring Georges Treville).
437. The Baker Street Irregulars is a reggae rock group in Seattle and Bellevue, with a presence at <www.youtube.com>; search for [irregulars mars]
438. Peter Ashman reported an interesting entry in the "Lens" blog at the N.Y. Times web-site at <www.nytimes.com>; search for [artistry and artifice in the times studio]. Slide #2 shows Charles Laughton as Hercule Poirot, but more important is a mention of Basil Rathbone in a "Sexiest Men" feature in 1926. And so he was, in the Rotogravure Picture Section on Dec. 26, 1926. Headlined "The Matinee Idols of 1926: Florenz Ziegfeld, America's Most Famous Judge of Beauty, Selects the Handsomest Men of Broadway", who was then playing the lead in "The Captive". On Feb. 9, 1927, "The Captive" was one of three plays raided by the police on charges of obscenity, but that, as they say, is another story.
439. Randall Stock has added new information to his "Best of Sherlock" census of known copies of the first edition of Vincent Starrett's pastiche "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet" (Aug 10 #3); go to <www.bestofsherlock.com> to see the latest version.
440. John Longenbaugh's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Taproot Theatre, from Nov. 26 through Dec. 30, with previews on Nov. 19-20; 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>.
441. John Baesch spotted a report in the N.Y. Times (July 27) about the discovery of bone fragments of a giant rat in caves on East Timor; the rat, which may have lived as recently as 1,000 years ago, is estimated to have weighed 13 pounds. It has been many years since Guy G. Musser and Cameron Newcomb published their article "Malaysian Murids and the Giant Rat of Sumatra" in the Bulletin of the American Museum of Natural History (Dec 83 #4), and the new discovery is described by K. P. Aplin and K. M. Helgen in "Quaternary Murid Rodents of Timor" (Bulletin of the American Museum of Natural History (n. 341). The giant rats are in the genus *Coryphomus*, and one of the new discoveries was named *Coryphomus musseri* in honor of Musser; you can read the Bulletin on-line at <digitallibrary.amnh.org/dspace/handle/22466077>.

442. Oct 10 #2: Mr. Frankland, of Lafter Hall, was not the last person to try to prevent people from crossing his land on Dartmoor: John Baesch has forwarded a story in the Sunday Telegraphy (Aug. 8) about what the paper calls "the battle of Vixen Tor". For generations Vixen Tor has been a highlight for people walking across Dartmoor (and for Sherlockians, since it's mentioned in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), but in 2003 Mary Alford bought the land and barred access to the site. Last year the Devon County Council's public rights of way committee unanimously called for two footpaths to be opened across Vixen Tor on the grounds that a right of way had existed before Mrs. Alford bought the land; she has appealed to the Planning Inspectorate, forcing a public inquiry into the case.
443. Earle W. Jacobs' THE GRIMPEN MIRE AFFAIR (Bloomington: AuthorHouse, 2010; 101 pp., $10.99) involves Holmes, Watson, their landlady Mrs. Grimes, and Inspector LeStrade in an adventure that has nothing to do with the Hound, and is told by Watson as a journal entry rather than a story.

444. Anne Cotton reports that The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (who are devotees of the writings of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will convene a Junior Bloodstain (a considerably less than totally reverent event) during the annual convention of the Wodehouse Society on October 13-16, 2011, in Dearborn, Mich. Additional information is available from Anne (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
445. Evy Herzog found a new Sherlockian T-shirt sold by Literary Threads; the color is mustard, and it is available in various sizes ($20.00 postpaid) (904-557-3479) <www.literarythreads.com>.
446. Jack Cassin-Scott died on June 9. An artist, author, and actor, he was also an expert model-maker ; his attractive Cassin Baker Street Series of 12-inch latex figures (1969-1971) included Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, Irene Adler, Prof. Moriarty, and Mycroft Holmes.
447. There's almost always something new for fans of Mary Russell at Laurie R. King's web-site <www.laurierking.com>; click on the Bouchercon page for a virtual tour of many of the locations in LOCKED ROOMS and THE ART OF DETECTION. There's news of STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES, an anthology edited by Laurie and Les Klinger, with an interesting list of contributors, due from Random House for Christmas 2011. Laurie also offers A MARY RUSSELL COMPANION as a free e-Book, with excerpts from all the books, an essay by Laurie describing the writing process, and lots of extra features. The COMPANION will be up-dated when additional books in the series are published (PIRATE KING is due next year).
448. There's something new in Scotland: The Sherlock Holmes Society of Scotland has held its first meeting, and plans to meet monthly in Glasgow. It's the first Sherlockian society in Scotland, and its founder is Barry Young; his postal address is 19 Windsor Court, Dirleton Drive, Glasgow G41 3BG, Great Britain, and the society's e-mail address is <sherlockscotland@btinternet>. They have a web-site at <www.sherlockscotland.blogspot.com>.

449. Oct 10 #3: Martha Stewart is now firmly in the world of Sherlock Holmes: in the Grandinroad catalog, which has a "Martha Stewart Detective Woman's Halloween Costume" (cape, collar, and cap) at $119.00 (item #41814), and you can see it in full color at <www.grandinroad.com>; thanks to Evy Herzog, who noted the item. It's too late for Halloween this year, of course, but you'll be in plenty of time for next year.
450. But this isn't the first Sherlockian connection for Martha Stewart: "Where there is no imagination there is no horror" was the appropriate Halloween quote in Martha Stewart Living (Oct. 2008), credited to Conan Doyle. And where did he write that?
451. LONDON QUIZ, by Travis Elborough and Nick Rennison, is a handy pocket-size collection of "400 provocative, curious, and humorous questions to enlighten and entertain" (New York: The Little Bookroom, 2010; 240 pp., $14.95), and it offers a pleasant challenge for people who think they know all about the city and its history (at least three of the questions are Sherlockian or Doylean).
452. Tsukasa Kobayashi ("Baritsu") died on Sept. 27. He was a psychologist, an educator, a novelist, and an active Esperantist, and he was a co-founder of the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club in 1977. He received his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
453. Plan ahead: The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, the Toronto Public Library, and The Bootmakers of Toronto have scheduled a conference on "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Study in Scandal" in Toronto on Oct. 13-16, 2011; their website's at <www.acdfriends.org> and more details are available on request from Barbara Rusch (36 Macauley Drive, Thornhill, ON L3T 5S5, Canada) <ephemeradiva@rogers.com>. The Wessex Press is sponsoring its third "From Gillette to Brett" weekend in Indianapolis on Nov. 11-13, 2011; more information (and an impressive video trailer at <www.wessexpress.com>. The Baker Street Irregulars and the UCLA School of Theater, Film, and Television will hold a Labor Day conference on "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" in Los Angeles on Aug. 31-Sept. 3, 2012; details to come. And The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has scheduled a new Swiss Pilgrimage for Sept. 9-16, 2012; they'll spend four days in Interlaken and three days in Meiringen, presumably all in appropriate Sherlockian costume.
454. "Such Suite Music with Holmes" was the headline on a story by John Gibson in the Scotsman (Oct. 20), spotted by Scott Monty. The Electric Light Orchestra will include Patrick Gowers' "Sherlock Holmes Suite" (from the Granada series) in a concert at the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh on Nov. 6.
455. News from Toronto: three manuscripts that were owned by Adrian Conan Doyle and were bequeathed by his widow Anna to the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection have arrived at the Toronto Reference Library: "The Crown Diamond" (a play that was first performed in 1921 and then adapted as "The Mazarin Stone"), "Some Personalalia about Mr. Sherlock Holmes" (an article first published in The Strand Magazine in 1917), and "On the Intemperance of Our Country, the Cause of Its Prevalence, and the Means of Its Suppression" (an essay that was written for a competition in 1878). Randall Stock discusses all three manuscripts at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/crown-diamond-manuscript.htm>.
456. Oct 10 #4: Bouchercon 41 ("Bouchercon by the Bay") was nicely done indeed, with registration about 1,400 plus about 400 one-day attendees. There were two Sherlockian panels: "Going Home" (with Michael Kean, Peter E. Blau, Chris Goetz, and Richard Sveum) and "Letters from the Grave" (with Les Klinger, Steve Hockensmith, Laurie R. King, Michael Kurland, and Graham Moore), and a third non-Sherlockian "A Trout in the Milk" about sex in mysteries (none of the panelists were familiar with the trout in the milk in the Canon). The titles of the panels presented their own mystery, and it was revealed at the end of the convention that the titles of all the panels were titles of (appropriately) of the television series "The Streets of San Francisco".
457. The Scowrers and Molly Maguires hosted a Saturday-evening reception to welcome the Sherlockian visitors, and the conventional also offered an opportunity to visit an exhibition on "Sidney Paget's Sherlock Holmes: A Sesquicentennial Exhibition" at the Arion Press Gallery. The exhibition honors Paget's 150th birthday, runs through Nov. 17, and features six original illustrations (from the collection of Glen Miranker); there's more about the gallery and the exhibition at <www.arionpress.com/paget.html>.
458. Future Bouchercons will be held in St. Louis, Mo., on Sept. 15-18, 2011; in Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 4-7, 2012; in Albany, N.Y., Sept. 19-22, 2013; and in Long Beach, Calif., Nov. 13-16, 2014. More information about Bouchercons past, present, and future will be found at <www.bouchercon.info>.
459. "Where there is no imagination there is no horror" was said by Holmes, to Watson, in A STUDY IN SCARLET.
460. Mark Alberstat's 2011 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
461. Dennis Wickline's audience-participation mystery "Sherlock Holmes Is Coming to Dinner" opened at the Broadway Onstage Live Theatre on Oct. 22, and will run through Nov. 20. 21517 Kelly Road, Eastpointe, MI 48021 (586-771-6333) <www.broadwayonstage.com>.
462. Paul Singleton has reported that F. Andrew Leslie's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978) will be performed by the Gotham Radio Theatre on Nov. 8 at the Mint Theater (311 West 43rd Street #307, New York, NY 10036) (866-992-9263) <www.gothamradiotheatre.com>. There will be two performances, at 7:00 and 9:00 pm.
463. David F. Musto ("Dr. Anstruther") died on Oct. 8. He was for many years a professor at Yale University, and a leading historian of U.S. drug policy. His essay "A Study in Cocaine: Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud" appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association in 1968, and was cited by Nicholas Meyer as one of the inspirations for his novel THE SEVEN-PERCENT SOLUTION. Dave also was founder of the Yale Sherlock Holmes Society, orchestrating annual summer meetings that featured guest speakers and the screening of a Basil Rathbone film. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1969.

464. Oct 10 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 157th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 7, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> or Evy Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you are coming to the event.
465. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcx@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather. Burt Wolder reports that The Three Hours for Lunch Club will honor Frederic Dorr Steele's memory at 1:00 pm at The Players (16 Gramercy Park South).
466. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 2nd floor of the Midtown Executive Club (at 40 West 45th Street); the speaker will be Michael Sims, editor of the anthology THE PENGUIN BOOK OF GASLIGHT CRIME and the upcoming THE DEAD WITNESS: A CONNOISSEUR'S COLLECTION OF VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below). Tickets will not be sold at the door.
467. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Friday in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 4th Street) to present their Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. Their web-site's at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
468. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
469. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $45.00 for chicken or salmon ($50.00 for prime rib). Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> is the contact for a formal announcement.
470. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street at Seventh Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919 (845-361-4320).
471. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised.
472. Oct 10 #6: Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs or other mementos included in the various dinner packets can send 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 110 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15.
473. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available from vendors in the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) in the Vanderbilt Suite on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; for information about dealers' tables, contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com>.
474. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:00 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). The cost is $79.00 (details below) or $89.00 after Nov. 26 or at the door.
475. For those who wish to continue partying, there are as yet no plans (firm or infirm) for sporting events at Kennedy's or other venues on Saturday evening; stay tuned (as they say) for a further report.
476. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:15 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 54th Street (between Sixth and Seventh Avenues) (and yes, Sixth Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas), and the cost will be $20.00 including tax and tip (payable by cash or check at the door). The brunch is open to all, but space is limited; please let Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032) <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com> know if you are coming.
477. Arrangements have been made for a block of rooms at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) at a special tax-free rate; the special rate is available only for reservations made through The Baker Street Irregulars (details below).
478. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Roosevelt Hotel, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, after Nov. 1 you can visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and click on "BSI Weekend".
479. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; special rates also are available at <www.travelzoo.com/top20/82851294-890255>. You will be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you should not forget about non-optional extras such as almost 20% in state and city taxes).
480. Oct 10 #7: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
481. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and <www.bsiweekend.com>. News of additional events will be found in this newsletter, and at the web-sites.
482. More television news: BBC Worldwide has said it has sold its mini-series "Sherlock" for broadcast in France, Russia, the Czech Republic, Slovenia, Estonia, Serbia, New Zealand, South Africa, Latin America, and Ireland, in addition to Canada and the U.S. And co-creator Steven Moffat offered some clues about the next series in an interview on Oct. 15 on National Public Radio's "Morning Edition": Linda Wertheimer asked for hints, and Moffat replied "The critical words, I'd say, would be--Adler, Hound, Reichenbach." You can go to <www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyid=13572175> for audio and a transcript.
483. The new British government's call for budget cuts totaling £83 billion includes a 30% reduction in funding for the Arts Council, which supports the BBC. The Financial Times noted (Oct. 22) that Benedict Cumberbatch, Simon Pegg, and Liam Nesson have all asked that the arts be spared, and the paper's

- columnist Jonathan Guthrie asked, "Who can gainsay the combined economic wisdom of men who between them have personated Sherlock Holmes, Scotty from 'Star Trek', and Jedi Knight Qui-Gon Jin?"
484. The U.S. broadcast of the first episode was marked by a Sherlockian first: PBS-TV created a live Twitter chat in which on-line viewers could watch and comment on the program. Scott Monty was one of the hosts, and reports that there were more than 1,500 tweets in less than 90 minutes; you're can visit <www.bakerstreetblog.com/2010/10/more-to-me-than-twitter-illu.html> to read all about it at Scott's "Baker Street Blog".
485. More movie news: Jared Harris (he plays Lane Pryce on "Mad Men" series) has been cast as Moriarty in Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock 2" (putting to rest those rumors about Brad Pitt, Daniel Day-Lewis, Sean Penn, and others). And production has started on "Sherlock 2"; go to <www.dailymail.co.uk> and search for [downey law richmond] to see a story (Oct. 19) with photographs taken during filming in Richmond Park, which reportedly was turned into a gypsy camp. The photographs don't show Noomi Rapace, who may be playing a French gypsy in the film (Sep 10 #8); if you would like to know how to pronounce her name, do a Google search for [pronounce noomi rapace].
486. Nov 10 #1: Sorry about that: the Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Saturday, Jan. 8, during the birthday festivities in New York, in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel (at 45 East 4th Street) to present their Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. Their web-site's at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
487. And Chrys Kegley of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will once again host The Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians Dinner at Kennedy's Irish Restaurant & Pub (327 West 57th Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues) on Saturday at 6:00 pm; $44.50 for dinner, one alcoholic drink, tax, and tip. Please send checks (payable to the CCOBS) to Chrys at 18014 Sherman Way #275, Reseda, CA 91235, to arrive by Dec. 28; if you have questions, she's at (818-675-5581) <bswl@socal.rr.com>.
488. Al Gregory requests everyone cooperation in ensuring that material intended for the packets at the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars will be received by Dec. 15; his address is 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044 <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net>.
489. Julie Snell has discovered The Nostalgia League, an interesting on-line resource that includes a department called The Diogenes Club, where you can read two Sherlockian parodies: Sir James M. Barrie's "The Adventure of the Two Collaborators" (1893) and P. G. Wodehouse's "Dudley-Jones, Bore-Hunter" (1903) <www.thenostalgialeague.com/olmag/doyle.html>.
490. The Strand Magazine (published by Andrew Gulli) offers its "Sherlock Holmes 2011 Wall Calendar" accompanied by a bonus DVD that has five Holmes films from 1921 to 1945). $24.95 (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com>.
491. Karen Murdock has noted a "The Doctor Is In... Literature" list on-line at <www.abebooks.com>; the doctors include Mengele, Doolittle, Moreau, Jekyll, Fu-Manchu, Nikola, Van Helsing, No, Zhivago, and Watson.
492. E.J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 06 #2) is now available (unabridged) as an audio book at <www.audible.com>; she narrates the book, with the assistance of Simon Prebble. And she has an interesting web-site at <www.ejwagner-crimehistorian.com>
493. Geoffrey Crawley died on Oct. 29. He was for many years editor-in-chief of the British Journal of Photography, and wrote a ten-part series of articles in 1982 and 1983 that exposed the photographs of the Cottingley fairies as fakes. It is an interesting coincidence that Conan Doyle wrote a series of articles about photography that were published in the magazine from 1881 to 1885.
494. TWITTERATURE: THE WORLD'S GREATEST BOOKS IN TWENTY TWEETS OR LESS, by Alexander Aciman and Emmett Rensin (New York: Penguin, 2009; 224 pp., $12.00), the contents include "Sherlock Holmes". The book was published in Britain as TWITTERATURE: THE WORLD'S GREATEST BOOKS RETOLD THROUGH TWITTER. Thanks to John Baesch for spotting the latest version of the Canon.
495. Nov 10 #2: Mystery Scene Magazine (Mar 10 #4) is informative and colorful; the fall issue has Cheryl Solimini's interesting interview with Nancy Springer about her Enola Holmes young-adult mystery series (which is ending with the sixth book this year), Laurence Block's column (intriguing but non-Sherlockian) about Charles Willeford, and a great deal more. The magazine is edited by Kate Stine and is published five times a year ($32.00 a year to the U.S.); you can subscribe by mail (331 West 57th Street #148, New York, NY 10019, or on-line <www.mysteryscenemag.com>. The web-site has links to articles from the current and past issues, and to all of the book reviews published in the magazine.
496. Further to the death of David F. Musto (Oct 10 #4), the 27th annual Sherlock Holmes Lecture at Yale was given by Dr. Thomas Duffy on June 12, 2008, on "Sherlock Holmes' Syringe"; there's a 23 minute video of the lecture at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=JYsuQbo3FM>.
497. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver on Nov. 3, and the visiting geologists were welcomed by Bill Dorn and other members of the local Sherlockian society (Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients). Our next dinners will be in Houston on Apr. 13 and in Minneapolis on Oct. 12.
498. Jill Lepore's "A Critic at Large" essay in The New Yorker (Oct. 18) can be read at their web-site <www.newyorker.com>: it's titled "Too Much Information: Books about the Birds and Bees" and opens with an amusing (and quite appropriate) quotation from the Canon.
499. "Research papers and essays for all" is the motto at <www.oppapers.com>, a paid-access data-base at <www.oppapers.com>, spotted by Francine Kitts. At the moment they have more than 200,000 papers, including some of interest to Sherlockians or would-be Sherlockians. "Submitting papers to a website and reviewing other users' papers is not plagiarism," the company explains, adding that "submitting another's work as your own is plagiarism. Please never turn in any articles from this web-site as your own."
500. Apologies to all those who reported (and some quite a while back) amusing T-shirts available at <www.snorgtees.com>; they're available for $15.16 and in various sizes, and you can search for [velociholmes] or [sedimentary].
-
501. Nov 10 #3: Phil Bergem has found an amusing "Literary Pets" calendar for 2011 at Half Price Books; it's written and illustrated by Chet Phillips, and the page for September features Sir Arthur Canine Doyle (author of THE WHINE OF FOUR and THE HOUND OF THE BASSETVILLES) and the famed detective Curlock Holmes. The calendar is available only in stores and is free with a purchase of $30.00 or more.
502. Reported: a 2011 Sherlockian calendar that features Sherlockian pets (photographs of pets of Sherlockians, that is), available from Classic Specialties <www.cafepress.com/sherlockholmes2.478406128>; $19.95.
503. Hemlock Holmes was one of the character on the animated series "The Dick Tracy Show"; there were 130 five-minute episodes produced by UPA from 1961 to 1963, and they're all available on a set of four DVDs that was issued in 2006 ($14.97 at Amazon). Hemlock Holmes (voice by Jerry Hausner) was a canine assistant to Tracy, and is non-Sherlockian except for his name.
504. Aziz Bin Adam reports that "Elementary, My Dear View" (a documentary presented by Richard E. Grant) is available at YouTube in four parts (46 minutes total); the documentary is nicely done, and was broadcast in the U.K. by ITV3 on Nov. 17, 2007.
505. "I know what I loved about Conan Doyle's work was he made his characters so real. I mean not only me, but the people that read Sherlock Holmes felt that they knew him." Comic industry legend Stan Lee, in an interview with L. Vincent Poupard at FanFare in Detroit (thanks to Jon Lellenberg for the report). To read more of the interview, go to <www.associatedcontent.com> and search for [stan lee interview with associated content].

506. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has much about the recent conference that was devoted to "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" (including Jon Lellenberg's reminiscences about Allen Mackler); copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
507. Bill Dorn's "Sherlock Holmes Calendar" for 2011 is devoted to "Dr. John H. Watson, M.D., on Film and Television" (with photographs of many Watsons and a few Holmeses); the postpaid price is $12.95 to the U.S., $13.95 to Canada, and $17.95 elsewhere. You can see the calendar, and take an interesting trivia quiz, at <web.me.com/billdorn/2011_Holmes_Calendar/Home.html>.
508. "Watson" (subtitled "The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes") is a new play written and directed by Jaime Robledo, running at the Sacred Fools Theater through Dec. 11 (600 North Heliotrope Drive, Los Angeles, CA 90004) (310-281-8337) <www.sacredfools.org>.
509. CONAN DOYLE AND THE DIVORCE LAW REFORM UNION is a well-researched monograph that Dana Richards has written about a relatively-unknown aspect of Sir Arthur's life; he served as president of the Union from 1909 to 1920, and the 62-page pamphlet offers interesting coverage of a campaign to which he devoted a great deal of effort and enthusiasm. It costs $10.00 postpaid from the author (10814 Rippon Lodge Drive, Fairfax, VA 23032).

510. Nov 10 #4: If you collect Sherlockian records, you may want to extend your search to include wax cylinders: it would appear that the earliest known audio recording to mention Sherlock Holmes was issued in 1910. The song is "The Jingle of Jungle Joe" (words by Jack Mahoney and music by Theodore Morse); the sheet music was published by the Theodore Morse Music Co. in 1910, and there were at least two recordings, one performed by Collins & Harlan in 1910 (Columbia 967) and the other by the American Quartet in 1911 (Edison Amberol 638). You can listen to and download the song from the Internet: the mention of Sherlock Holmes is in the second verse. And if you have trouble understanding the song, I can provide the lyrics, copied from the sheet music.
511. Halloween pumpkins can be quite artistic: Debbie Belchis of Ellicott City celebrated this year with a Sherlockian jack-o-lantern.
512. THE CASE FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Dr. John Watson (New York: Fall River Press, 2009; 62 pp., $22.50), is done with imagination (and without identifying the author); a scrapbook of six of the cases, accompanied by actual artefacts that include interesting items such as a love letter written by Stapleton to Laura Lyons. It was published in Britain (as THE CASE NOTES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES) by Andre Deutsch (£19.99), and the American edition has been seen discounted to $14.98.
513. Penguin has published THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in their Penguin Hardcover Classics Series with an attractively lepidopterous cover designed by Coralie Bickford-Smith ($20.00); this is a reissue of the Penguin Classics edition with the informative introduction and notes by Christopher Frayling (Jun 01 #5).
514. Herbert P. Tinning ("Dr. Leon Sterndale") died on Nov. 7. He worked as an association executive, and was a dedicated deacon in the Episcopal church and an active Sherlockian as a member of societies in the midwest and then in the northeast; his special enthusiasms included the Antarctic (where he believed Dr. Watson visited during the Great Hiatus) and his namesake story "The Devil's Foot". He was awarded his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1974.
515. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's discussion of anniversaries celebrated this year of people who had Sherlockian or Doylean connections: Frederic Chopin (200), Sidney Paget (150), J. M. Barrie (150), and Theodor Herzl (150), plus Peggy Perdue's report on manuscript acquisitions, and other news from and about the collection. Copies are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
516. Paul Spiring has reported that Frederick Moy Thomas' FIFTY YEARS OF FLEET STREET: BEING THE LIFE AND RECOLLECTIONS OF SIR JOHN R. ROBINSON (1904) has been reprinted, and you can read it at <books.google.com>; it includes an enthusiastic letter that Conan Doyle wrote to Robinson from Amherst, Mass., in 1894, saying (among other things), "It's a great country, Sir."
517. Nov 10 #5: Aziz Bin Adam has noted a story on CNN that will be of interest to anyone who wants to see and hear what Mecca was like in 1885 (only a few years before Sherlock Holmes "looked in" there); it was Dutch adventurer Christiaan Snouck Hurgronje who made the photographs and recordings, some of which are now on display in Dubai. The full report, by Barry Neild, is at <www.tinyurl.com/2ukqkbw>.
518. Gayle Harris has reported that a catalog from Alberene Royal Mail (Box 902, Harrisville, NH 03450) (800-843-9078) <www.alberene.com> has many Sherlockian items, including pub glasses, a pub chalkboard, a pub-in-a-box, a pub sign from The Sherlock Holmes, a pocket magnifier, a pocket watch, a movie poster, and a wall clock (as well as a Diogenes Club wall clock).
519. Dynamite Entertainment has announced their new comic book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: YEAR ONE, with six issues written by Scott Beatty. There's a blog (with art-work) at <www.comicbookresources.com/?page=article&id=29431>, and the publisher's web-site is at <www.dynamiteentertainment.com>.
520. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's new Christmas card is titled "The Snow Queen" and has an intriguing photograph from the Victoria and Albert Museum, dated ca. 1890, of a man who's wearing a deerstalker and making a snow sculpture of Queen Victoria; you can see the artwork and order packets of the cards at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>. And the Society's annual dinner will be held on Jan. 15 in the Members' Dining Room at the House of Commons; the guest of honor will be Andrew Horowitz, a prolific author and editor, and creator and writer of the television series "Foyle's War".
521. There's an interesting discount offer at the Deal Table at the Baker Street Journal's web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>: the International Series volume SCANDINAVIA AND SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 07 #6) is now available at a 25% discount. The book offers English translations of fine scholarship from Denmark, Sweden, and Norway.
522. Randall Stock has added a new feature to his "Best of Sherlock" web-site at <www.bestofsherlock.com>; "What's New in 2010: Top Holmes Gifts for Long-Time Sherlockians" offers nice choices for Christmas presents, and there's also a list of "Holmes Gifts for New Fans".
523. Peter Cushing recorded THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES for the Royal National Institute for the Blind in 1971, and his work at long last is available to the general public: Cosmic Hobo Productions is issuing his readings on CDs, with new notes by David Stuart Davies. The first volume, with four stories, is available now (£19.99) at <www.cosmichobo.com>; if you order before Jan. 31 and enter the discount code [moriarty] at check-out, you'll get a 25% discount. They are excellent readings, needless to say, and he demonstrates well the visual imagery at which Conan Doyle was so skilled.
524. Cosmic Hobo also has a reissue of Cushing's (abridged) reading of his first autobiography PAST FORGETTING (1988) on two CDs (£14.99); 144 minutes, plus a bonus 16-minute documentary featuring some of the people who worked with him, and with new album notes written by Mark Gatiss (co-creator of the BBC mini-series "Sherlock").
525. Nov 10 #6: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company have issued a new audio recording of William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes", adapted for radio by Roger Johnson and starring Jim Crozier and Dave Hawkes as Holmes and Watson, nicely done indeed.

- The 110-minute recording can be heard or downloaded free at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> and is available on two CDs from the Society (Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England) for £12.00 or $32.00 postpaid; sterling checks should be payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks to Jean Upton.
526. John Baesch notes that the J. Peterman Company (1001 Primrose Court, Lexington, KY 40811) (888-647-2555) <www.jpeterman.com> still offers items of interest to Sherlockians, and so they do: a deerstalker ($128.00), a Sherlock Holmes pipe ($295.00), a blackthorn walking stick ($120.00), a herringbone caped coat ($750.00), and an Acme Metropolitan whistle ($19.00).
527. It's now possible to view at least some of the first known Sherlockian film produced in color: Alexis Barquin has noted a four-minute excerpt available at YouTube. The film is "My Grandfather's Clock", and it's a parody, a 17-minute "musical murder mystery" produced in Technicolor and released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Oct. 27, 1934. The film stars Charles Judels (Philo Holmes) and Franklin Pangborn (Dr. Watkins), and one of the musical numbers has everyone singing "For he's a jolly good Philo." A second (shorter) excerpt also is available; search for [bizarre musical number from 1934].
528. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a cachet for a first day cover for the Edgar Allan Poe stamp, showing a scene from "The Murders in the Rue Morgue" and a Canonical quote about Dupin. $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. (and $11.00 elsewhere); payment only in U.S. currency or postal money orders, please, but other arrangements can be made for overseas buyers; his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801 <drhanson@localnet.com>.
529. Nov 10 #7: Japanese Sherlockiana: Daniel Stashower's TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE has been translated by Masamichi Higurashi (Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 2010; 568 pp., Y3,600), and Hayakawa's Mystery Magazine (Nov. 2009) honored the 150th anniversary of the birth of Conan Doyle with a selection of pastiches (by Steve Hockensmith, Kim Newman, Len Deighton, Edward D. Hoch, and Peter Lovesey), and essays about Holmes and Conan Doyle. And Hara Shobo has reissued Mitch's translation of Dick Riley and Pam McAllister's THE BEDSIDE, BATHTUB, AND ARMCHAIR COMPANION TO SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published in 2000 (Jul 01 #5).
530. John Baesch and Evy Herzog have kindly forwarded a first day cover of the postage stamp issued this year by the Vatican in honor of the 200th birthday of Pope Leo XIII, who reigned from 1878 to 1903, and who twice was the client of Sherlock Holmes (see "Black Peter" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles").
531. J. L. Hazen's SOJOURN: AN ACCOUNT OF THE QUEEN'S BENCH (Bloomington, iUniverse, 2009; 400 pp. $22.95) is set in 1903, and begins with the murder of Sherlock Holmes; the story involves Mycroft and Watson and secret societies, and offers a complicated mystery.
532. Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger are editing A STUDY IN SHERLOCK for publication by Bantam in Dec. 2011; it's an anthology of new stories to be written by authors who range (alphabetically) from Alan Bradley to Jackie Winspear, and there's a web-site at <www.astudyinsherlock.com>.
533. Late-breaking news: there will be some interesting Sherlockiana at auction at Sotheby's in London on Dec. 16: a copy of the pre-publication dummy of the first American edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (estimated at £15,000-20,000) and a copy of the first state of the first American edition (£30,000-40,000), plus the letter from Conan Doyle to Robert Collier (Apr. 3, 1903) announcing the resuscitation of Sherlock Holmes (£15,000-20,000). There's more information on the items at <www.sothebys.com>.
534. The Literary Encyclopedia is an interesting on-line reference work launched in 2000 and available by subscription at <www.litencyc.com>; there are previews of the entries, which include Nils Clausson's new discussion of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (and he's now at work on THE LOST WORLD).
535. Michael Procter has noted an interesting Internet web-site called The Victorian Dictionary <www.victorianlondon.org>, which offers a great deal of information, and much more than a dictionary. One intriguing item is the "Stanford's Map of Central London 1897", which provides large-scale views of a digitized version of the map.
536. CONVERSATIONS WITH...ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, by Simon Parke (Guildford: White Crow, 2009; 137 pp., £14.99/$21.99 cloth or £8.99/$12.99 paper), is an interesting (and imagined) interview with Conan Doyle in 1930; his comments are taken from his published work, and the interview deals mostly with his belief in Spiritualism. White Crow also offers reprints of THE NEW REVELATION, THE VITAL MESSAGE, THE EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN, and D. D. HOME: HIS LIFE AND MISSION (which was edited by Conan Doyle) <www.whitecrowbooks.com>.
537. Nov 10 #8: Edward Hardwicke was on hand for the renaming of a theater in honor of his father, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, according to a story in the Stourbridge News (Nov. 9). The Hardwicke Theatre is at Thorns Community College in Lye, where Sir Cedric was born in 1893. He played Sherlock Holmes in "The Speckled Band" on the BBC Home Service in 1945, and he appeared in the film "I Remember Mama" (1948) as a boarder, reading to the family from THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES and ending his reading with the classic line "Mr. Holmes, they were the footprints of a gigantic hound."
538. Les Klinger was interviewed by Mark Coggins in the San Francisco Chronicle (Nov. 29), and you can read the interview on-line at <www.sfgate.com>. And there's a mention of Coggins' serial pastiche "The Adventure of the Black Bishop", which ran in five weekly parts beginning on Oct. 25; you can read it at the web-site as well (you'll need to adjust your search to include 90 days). The story also is available at <www.amazon.com> as a Kindle short for 99c.
539. Graham Moore's pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (New York: Twelve, 2010; 350 pp., $24.99) has two mysteries: one set in 1900, when Conan Doyle decides to do his own detecting, and the other in 2010, when Harold White, newly made a member of The Baker Street Irregulars, investigates the murder of a Sherlockian who has announced that he has discovered Conan Doyle's missing diary from the last three months of 1900. It's an interesting (and sometimes amusing) story, and you can read more about the book (and other things) at Moore's blog at <www.thesherlockian.com>.
540. Work on Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock 2" continues. And Joel Silver (producer of the series) was quoted in a story in Variety (Nov. 13) as saying that "I'd like to believe that we could keep going with these stories as long as we can. I know that my 9-year-old has started reading the books now, and he would not have done that had he not seen the movies."
541. By now many if not most of you have seen the new BBC mini-series "Sherlock" (starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman), but if you watched the programs on PBS-TV you haven't seen everything: WGBH-TV has edited the programs, and some bits and pieces are missing. If you want the shows as they were broadcast by the BBC, you can see everything on the U.S. DVD set (but you won't see the introductions by Alan Cumming). Another reason for buying the DVD set is the closed captioning, helpful to those who have trouble understanding people who speak quickly in British. There's a Blu-ray version of the mini-series, which of course offers high definition, but it appears not to have any features that are not on the regular DVD.
542. Abbie Bernstein interviewed Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss for Assignment X <www.assignmentx.com>, and Gatiss said that their favorite Sherlock Holmes films starred Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce; their favorite is "Spider Woman", and Moffat added that "it has more plot than any other movie you're ever going to see. It's extraordinary. There's a fantastic friendship at the heart of it, and I think a great time, it's full of ludicrous lurid details."

543. Dec 10 #1: The Red Circle of Washington is alive and well and on the World Wide Web, as many of you already know. We launched our web-site at our dinner meeting on Dec. 10, and the URL is <www.redcircledc.org>. We are fortunate to have an enthusiastic web-master (Alan Rettig) and a knowledgeable technical guru (Bob Howard).
544. Karen Murdock spotted news of a new Sherlock Holmes slot machine unveiled at the European iGaming Congress this month. It is described as a 5-reel, 25-line slot game based on the Sherlock Holmes stories; players will get to search for clues and collect prizes for winning combinations, and in a bonus round help Holmes and Watson solve a murder (there's also a progressive jackpot to be won). And there's a brief video at <www.sherlockholmes.com>; the game is manufactured in Europe, and will in full production next year. And your friendly neighborhood casino can get in touch with GTECH G2; their web-site's at <www.gtechg2.com>.
545. Reported: THE HORROR OF THE HEIGHTS AND OTHER STRANGE TALES (New York: Fall River Press, 2010; 334 pp., $6.98); fourteen of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories (apparently an exclusive at Barnes & Noble).
546. "Story Hour in the Library" (at the University of California Berkeley) featured Laurie R. King on Nov. 4, 2010; there's a 51-minute video at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=TzLHUK5pQVM>, and you can see and hear her read an excerpt from the next Mary Russell novel (THE PIRATE KING).
547. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND CONAN DOYLE LOCATIONS: A VISITOR'S DIRECTORY, by Allan Foster, from McFarland, spring/summer 2011 ($35.00); more information at <www.mcfarlandpub.com>.
548. Laura Kuhn reports a long interview with Raymond Massey (done in the 1970s) in the summer issue of Films of the Golden Age; Massey was asked about his film "The Speckled Band" (1931) and said that he got the job because he was recommended by Gerald du Maurier, who was the first choice but said, "I'm feeling rather tired, old boy, so you try it on, will you?" According to Massey, he was the "worst ever Holmes."
549. Robert J. Mangler ("Sir Hugo Baskerville") died on Nov. 29. He was an attorney, and was the first and longest-serving (27 years) corporation counsel of Wilmette, Ill. Bob also was an ardent Sherlockian, and in 1960 he resurrected both The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic) and Hugo's Companions; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1962.
550. Ripperologist is an interesting electronic journal edited by Eduardo Zinna, and almost always has discussion of something Sherlockian; the latest issue (#177) reports that Sony Pictures Home Entertainment has started an online service that offers more than 100 classic films from its Columbia Pictures catalog, available for the first time on burn-on-demand DVDs and in high-quality transfers, priced at $19.94. And one of them is "A Study in Terror" (1965). Go to <www.columbia-classics.com> and search for the title of the film. Contact Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> for information about subscriptions to Ripperologist.
551. Dec 10 #2: The Feb. 2011 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will be on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, has imaginative Sherlockian artwork on the cover, Donald A. Yates' pastiche "A Study in Scarlatti", Jon L. Breen's review of recent Sherlockian books, and editor Janet Hutchings' explanation of why THE ADVENTURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was so important to Fred Dannay and to EQMM.
552. Further to the item on plans for an Indian remake of "The Sign of the Four" (Jan 09 #7), Aziz Bin Adam spotted a report in the Calcutta Telegraph (Aug. 27) that "Gumshuda" (directed by Ashoke Viswanathan) stars Rajit Kapur as private detective Prashant Saigal, and former British deputy high commissioner Simon Wilson as a "British gentleman with a hooked pipe, an overcoat, and a tendency to use the word 'elementary' more than once." The film is in Hindi, and Aziz has also has noted a brief trailer at <www.youtube.com>; search for [gumshuda (2010)].
553. Richard Luman died on May 21. He was a professor of religion at Haverford College from 1969 to 1995; he also taught courses on Victorian and Edwardian detective novels, and Icelandic sagas, and his Baker Street Journal article on "The Second Hand in The Second Stain" (Sept. 1978) won the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best contribution to the BSJ that year.
554. Les Klinger has reported "The Game Is Afoot!: The Significance of Gratuitous Transfers in the Sherlock Holmes Canon", by Stephen R. Alton (professor law at Texas Wesleyan School of Law); it's a pastiche that discusses the inheritances, wills, and trusts in the stories, and it can be read or downloaded at <papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract\_id=1676852>.
555. Chris Music reports that The Amateur Mendicant Society of Detroit will celebrate their 65th anniversary at their winter meeting on Jan. 29. More information's available at their web-site <www.amateurmendicant.blogspot.com>
556. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times10-12.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new, including their Sherlock Holmes 2011 Calendar (featuring Sherlockian pets), pastiches, notecards, and much more.
557. Further to the report (Aug 10 #5) on a possible judicial review of the Waverly Borough Council's decision to approve the application of a developer to convert Undershaw (the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907) into three flats, Paul Spiring has forwarded reports from the BBC News and the Daily Telegraph (Dec. 16), the Undershaw Preservation Trust has filed a formal request with Britain's High Court in hopes of overturning the decision.
558. Tom Bosley died on Oct. 19. He acted on stage and television, and was best known as Mr. Cunningham on the series "Happy Days". He also played sheriff Amos Tupper on the series "Murder, She Wrote" and Father Dowling in "Father Dowling Mysteries". In 1976 he narrated a 30-minute program "That's Hollywood!: Sherlock Holmes" broadcast by WABC-TV (New York), and in the "Father Dowling Mysteries" episode "The Consulting Detective Mystery" (1991) he was assisted in investigating a murder by his mentor Sherlock Holmes (played by Rupert Frazer), whom only Dowling could see.
559. Dec 10 #3: Prescott's Press, edited by Warren Randall for The Three Garridebs, has (as always) a nice mix of scholarship and whimsy; the September issue (#75) has Susan Rice's affectionate tribute to John Bennett Shaw. Subscriptions cost $15.00 for four issues ($20.00 outside the U.S.), and issue #75 is available for $6.00/$7.00 postpaid from Warren at 15 Fawm Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720.
560. There is a wide variety of Sherlockian web-sites, including Charles Prepolec's colorful "Sherlock Holmes News" <www.sherlockholmesnews.com>, where you will find news, reviews, and what he describes as "unsavory opinions."
561. The three interesting Sherlockian items at auction at Sotheby's in London on Dec. 16 (Nov 10 #7) went unsold when the bids did not reach the reserves. The pre-publication dummy of the first American edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES was estimated at £15,000-20,000, the first state of the first American edition at £30,000-40,000, and the letter from Conan Doyle to Robert Collier (Apr. 3, 1903) announcing the resuscitation of Sherlock Holmes at £15,000-20,000.
562. Shakespeare & Company in Lenox, Mass., performed "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) in 2009, and they're reviving the show from July 21 to Sept. 4; it's the play presented by Peepolykus on tour in England in 2007, and it's a delightful spoof. 70 Kemble Street, Lenox, MA 01240 (413-637-3353) <www.shakespeare.org>.

563. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a colorful cachet for a first day cover for the Seabiscuit stamped envelope, showing Shoscombe Prince and a Shoscombe spaniel. $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($11.00 elsewhere); payment only in U.S. currency or postal money orders, please, but other arrangements can be made for overseas buyers; his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801 <drhanson@localnet.com>.
564. Dec 10 #4: "Girls with Slingshots" is an on-line comic strip drawn by Danielle Corsetto, available at <www.girlswithslingshots.com>; the cast of characters includes cats as well as people of various genders and persuasions, and there are (of course) collections of older strips. GIRLS WITH SLINGSHOTS: VOLUME FIVE (2010) has a sequence with Jamie McJack as a "Romance Detective" in Sherlockian costume (she's also on the cover), and it's available at the web-site ($19.95).
565. Robert C. Clyne ("The Opal Tiara") died on Dec. 12. He was an attorney and long interested in history and literature, and was a founder of The Diogenes Club of Brooklyn and co-editor of their newsletter The Growler (which they boasted was published every eight years). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1959.
566. The Strand Magazine (published by Andrew Gulli) offers a "221B Baker Street Magnifying Glass" ($19.95) that has a hand-crafted rosewood panel inscribed "Sherlock Holmes/221B Baker Street London" (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com221b.htm>.
567. Quite a few Christmas shoppers have reported a new Sherlockian nutcracker, at Target stores and at <www.target.com> ($12.99); search for [holiday nutcracker detective].
568. The 2010 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 57 pages of scholarship, quizzes, and pastiches; the scholarship includes John Longenbaugh's "The Curious Case of Jack the Ripper: An Unsolvably Sherlock Holmes Mystery", Allen Nelson's "To Joseph, Without Whom?--The Story of an American Publisher and the Future of Sherlock Holmes", and Stu Shiffman's "Holmes, Agatha, and Jeeves". The annual costs $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.), with checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles, from Terri Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332. The 2007 annual also is available, with 290 pages celebrating the society's 25th anniversary with a compilation of the best material published in earlier issues; $24.95 postpaid to the U.S. ($27.95 to Canada, $35.95 elsewhere); other details as above.
569. Dynamite Entertainment's new comic book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: YEAR ONE (Nov 10 #5) will launch in January, and Michael Bershad has reported an interesting preview by Cliff Biggers, with artwork by Daniel Indro, in the weekly Comic Shop News <www.csinsider.com/1222.htm>.
570. Steve Hockensmith's WORLD'S GREATEST SLEUTH (New York: Minotaur, 2011; 324 pp., $24.99) is the fifth in his series about Old Red and Big Red Amlingmeyer, who are summoned to the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago for a contest with some of the world's most famous detective, and are confronted with a real mystery when the contest organizer is found murdered, face down in the Mammoth Cheese from Canada; it's interesting and amusing. He has another series for non-Sherlockians: PRIDE AND PREJUDICE AND ZOMBIES; DAWN OF THE DREADFULS was published in 2009, and DREADFULLY EVER AFTER is due in 2011, and his web-site's at <www.stevhockensmith.com>.
571. Dec 10 #5: Michael Dirda delivered the annual Cameron Hollyer Lecture at the Toronto Public Library last year, and his remarks (titled "Arthur Conan Doyle as Essayist and Journalist") were published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. A limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now <www.acdfriends.org>; you can also contact Cliff Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>, and the minimum donation (which includes three issues of the Friends' newsletter "Through the Magic Door") is $25.00. This year's lecture by Peter Calamai ("The Real World of Sherlock Holmes: How Does Historical London of 1895 Compare with the London Described by Arthur Conan Doyle in the Sherlockian Canon?") will be sent to members of the Friends next year.
572. Michael H. McCoy has noted the "Sherlock Holmes Drinking Game", devised by Jill Brumer and published at <www.examiner.com> <www.tinyurl.com/2uopbpz>; she has more on the game, and a recipe for a "Blue Carbuncle" cocktail, at <www.tinyurl.com/2ekx4kb>.
573. The Wildstorm comic book mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS ZOMBIES has been followed by the one-issue story SHERLOCK HOLMES VS JEKYLL/HYDE, written by Jim Edginton and with artwork by Horacio Domingues (Dec., $4.99) and the first issue of a five-issue mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES VS DRACULA with story by Edginton and artwork by Davide Fabbri (Jan., $3.99); the publisher's web-site is at <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics>.
574. It's no secret that pirated copies of movies are now available on web-sites such as BitTorrent, and it's not surprising that someone keeps track of how people use the web-site. Another web-site, TorrentFreak, has reported that the most frequently downloaded film this year was "Avatar" (with 16,580,000 downloads), with "Kick-Ass" (11,400,000) and "Inception" (9,720,000) next; "Sherlock Holmes" ranked 8th (7,160,000 downloads).
575. Dave Itzkoff blogs about "The Culture at Large" for the N.Y. Times, and reported (Dec. 20) on an interview with Steven Moffat (who is co-creator of the mini-series "Sherlock") about the latest Doctor Who special "A Christmas Carol"; responding to Itzkoff's question "Are you being asked all the time when the Doctor and your Sherlock Holmes will meet up?", Moffat said "I think everyone who's passing me in the streets is suggesting that at the moment. I think there are problems of doing that, because then you would say that Sherlock Holmes lives in the same world as the Doctor, and there are Daleks and all sorts of things. If a Sherlock Holmes story depends on time travel being impossible, it's quite hard if he's a personal friend of the Doctor, isn't it?"
576. I seldom run full-page illustrations, but this captioned photograph of Benedict Cumberbatch in "Sherlock" is well worth it; the photograph (see next page) was submitted by "Greg" to <www.roflrazzi.com>, which is a sub-set of <www.icanhascheezburger.com>, and was spotted by Samantha Wolov. For those who aren't reading this issue ink-on-paper, go to <www.tinyurl.com/26c642n> to see the photograph.
