  - More first day covers for the British "Sherlock Holmes" set are available, from Benham (A. Buckingham), Benham House, The Bayle, Folkestone, Kent CT20 1SD, England. A set of five single-stamp covers, with different postmarks and different full-color Granada photograph on silken fabric, costs £12.50, and the set of stamps is available on two different covers with postmarks honoring Granada, at £4.95 each (possibly still available signed by Jeremy Brett, at £8.99 each). Postage costs £1.00 extra, and credit-card orders are welcome.
  - Mark Alberstat has a few copies left of his 1994 Sherlockian Calendar with illustrations from The Strand Magazine, and with William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases; 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada, and the cost (postpaid) is US$12.00.
  - Baker Street Miscellanea began publishing in Apr. 1975, founded by William D. Goodrich, John Nieminski, and Donald K. Pollock (who modestly described themselves as "editorial staff"). Their stated goal was "a periodic unpretentious mini-anthology, the best of the new spiced with a goodly dollop of the old, the rare and the little known, each issue a diverting mixture of odds and ends which complement rather than duplicate the more substantial fare of senior publications in the field," and they certainly succeeded, as demonstrated by the fact that BSM now itself is one of the senior, as well as one of the best, Sherlockian periodicals. And Don Pollock, now formally the editor, has announced that BSM will cease publication soon, likely with issue #76, because it is becoming harder and harder to maintain a backlog of material that meets the high standards set by those who have contributed to the magazine over the years. And those standards have been high, as the readers of BSM know well, and as shown by the fact that its circulation of more than 450 makes BSM one of the half-dozen most-widely-read Sherlockian periodicals published in English. Don and his colleagues merit our thanks.

- Jan 94 #2: The birthday festivities in New York were (as always) enjoyable and entertaining, and the wintry weather less so (Richard Shull suggested at the Saturday cocktail party that the weather outside reminded him of the Donner Party, although the food was better) (and someone asked, "How do you know?"). Thursday's informal events included the annual Christopher Morley Walk arranged by Allen Mackler and Charlie Shields (this year with a guided tour of the Woolworth Building) and the Aunt Clara Sing at O'Lunney's Steak House.
  - Friday's schedule began with the lavish Mrs. Hudson Breakfast at the Hotel Algonquin and continued with the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea, with honors paid to Gillette and Edith Meiser (with excerpts from her unfinished stage play "The Sign of the Four" performed by Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague Joffe, and Andrew Joffe). And the day continued with Otto Penzler's traditional hospitality (and Sherlockian books) at an open house at the Mysterious Bookshop.
  - The Baker Street Irregulars gathered at 24 Fifth Avenue, where *The* Woman was Theresa Thomalen, who was toasted by Bill Schweickert during the predinner cocktail party and then departed to dine at the National Arts Club with other ladies who have received that honor. The BSI's agenda featured the usual toasts and traditions, and Bruce Montgomery's melodic tribute to his grand-aunt Clara and to his father, and then focused on 60

- years of BSI history, including George Fletcher's anecdotal history of The Baker Street Journal, a joint presentation by Susan Rice and Mickey Fromkin of some of the better Irregular poetry, Steve Rothman's discussion of the very early meetings of the BSI, and reminiscences of the annual dinners of the 1950s by David Weiss (who has been attending the annual dinners for more than 40 years). Bill Schweickert's own poetic birthday tribute to the Master ended the historic and historical festivities.
10. Irregular Shillings and Investitures were given to Bruce Montgomery ("The Red Circle"), Peter J. Crupe ("The Noble Bachelor"), Mickey Fromkin ("The Missing Three-Quarter"), Ruthann Stetak ("The Camberwell Poisoning Case"), Geoffrey Stavert ("The Shingle of Southsea"), Bill Vande Water ("An Enlarged Photograph"), Don Izban ("Market Street"), Tom Joyce ("A Yellow-Backed Novel"), Hirotaka Ueda ("Japanese Armor"), Thomas Utecht ("Arthur Charpentier"), and Francine Swift ("The Wigmore Street Post Office"). Eleanor O'Connor was awarded the Queen Victoria Medal in recognition of her many years of assistance to the BSI at the annual dinners, and Don Redmond (who is almost ready to publish a new index to the Baker Street Journal updated through 1993) received the BSI's Two-Shilling Award.
  11. The Fortescue Symposium (sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, The Priory Scholars of New York, and The Montague Street Lodgers of Brooklyn), also was convened Friday evening, at the St. Moritz Hotel, moderated by Allan Devitt and Kate Karlson and with a program of toasts, songs, and presentations by Marilyn MacGregor on "Plumming Sherlock Holmes" (exploring Sherlockian allusions in the writings of P. G. Wodehouse), Patricia Guy on "Victorian Medicinal Imbibing" (and it was considerable), and B.J. Rahn on "Dorothy L. Sayers and Sherlock Holmes: The French Connection" (in which she revealed that Sayers was indeed the issue of a liaison between Sherlock and Irene).
12. Jan 94 #3: And on Saturday morning the huckster room at the Algonquin (aka Covent Garden West) was well attended, as was the BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party at 24 Fifth Avenue, where the agenda included Jon Lellenberg and Clint Gould's "March of Time" report on the history of the BSI, a performance by Paul Singleton and Philip Brogdon of an excerpt from Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes", poetic reports by Al Rosenblatt and Marilyn McKay on the events of the previous evening, the award of an Irregular Shilling and Investiture to Catherine Cooke ("The Book of Life"), the usual fast-and-furious auction (raising a generous $380 for the Dr. John H. Watson Fund), and a warm tribute to Tom Stix delivered by Bob Thomalen. And the Chisholm Gallery stayed open after the party, so that visitors could view Steven Emmons' new Sherlockian posters.
  13. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI or the ASH is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully anonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by checks payable to John H. Watson and mailed (without return any address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, c/o Thomas L. Stix, Jr., who will forward the checks unopened. Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity, and Tom's address is 34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648.
  14. Other news from the birthday festivities: George A. Vanderburgh distributed (on behalf of a society called The Retired Colonels) a floppy-disk edition of Mark Twain's A DOUBLE-BARRELLED DETECTIVE STORY that contained more news of Ron De Waal's THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, which (as noted earlier) is scheduled to be published on May 22, 1994 (the deadline for orders is Mar. 15). The new information is that the bibliography will have a "selective concordance" with about 5,000 different words, and those words will include the last names of all the purchasers of the set; George also has asked for nominations (by Mar. 15) of your favorite words, to be included, with entry numbers, in the selective concordance. And George has announced that after May he will take orders for a second printing, that will be priced at least 50% more than the $100 cost (plus postage) of the first printing. George's address is: Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada.
  15. And Julie and Al Rosenblatt will present a four-day mini-course on Sherlock Holmes at Vassar College on July 10-15, 1994 (Sunday evening through Friday morning counts as four days in the Hudson Valley). The mini-course is open to all, and additional information is available from Maryann Bruno, Vassar College, Conferences and Summer Programs, Box 77, Poughkeepsie, NY 12601.
  16. And (plan ahead) the Third Occasional Sherlockian Cruise will sail on June 17, 1995, from Fort Lauderdale on the MV Zenith. Seven days, with stops at Ocho Rios, Grand Cayman Island, Cozumel, and Key West, and with a two-day Sherlockian symposium en route. Holmes at His Zenith (Box 96, Norwood, NJ 07648) is the contact, and enquiries are welcome.
  17. On Nov. 21 and 28, 1982, "The Jeffersons" on CBS-TV involved a "mysterywriters cruise" that included Sherlockian allusions. If you have an off-the-air videocassette of the second episode, please tell Jennie C. Paton (206 Loblolly Lane, Statesboro, GA 30458). And Jennie also would be glad to hear about any other Sherlockian episode of "The Jeffersons".
18. Jan 94 #4: HOLY BLOOD: AN INSIDE VIEW OF THE AFGHAN WAR (Westport: Greenwood, 1993; 248 pp., $55.00) is Paul Overby's account of the most recent hostilities in that still-violent land, where he fought briefly on the side of the rebels, and he includes a passing mention of an earlier Afghan veteran: Dr. Watson.
  19. Peggy Nelson died on Sept. 20. She was toasted by the Baker Street Irregulars as *the* woman in 1967, to the delight of her husband, old Irregular Jim Nelson, and joined us again for the toast to all of *the* women at the BSI's cocktail party in 1989, and she will be missed by her many friends.
  20. "'Come, Watson, come!' cries Sherlock Holmes, 'the game is afoot' and so they leap into a hansom cab and rattle through foggy Victorian London to Paddington or Waterloo or indeed to No. 221B Baker Street, where the gasogene burns in the corner, a put-upon but devoted Mrs. Hudson prepares bacon and eggs and a mysterious visitor awaits them." From the flier prepared by the Folio Society last year to publicize their set of the short stories. I don't recall that anyone has wondered (at least in print) about that lovely description, but Alan Olding does now, in the latest issue of News from the Diggings. "The gasogene burns in the corner?" he asks. "Does the tantalus also sing in its little cage?"
  21. The Folio Society completes its version of the Canon with SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE COMPLETE NOVELS, a four-volume boxed set with illustrations by Francis Mosley and a binding uniform with the five-volume set of the short stories published in 1993. The set will be published in April at $149.00, but the Society offers a pre-publication price of $124.00 postpaid to its members and to readers of this newsletter if you order before Mar. 31. They take plastic, and their toll-free number is 800-688-6247, or you can order by mail from Folio Books at 2323 Randolph Avenue, Avenel, NJ 07001; to qualify for the discount price, mention "Scuttlebutt from the Spermaceti Press" and pay them $124.00.
  22. Tom Rieschick offers an illustrated flier for his attractive prints of Sherlock Holmes (as portrayed by Rathbone and Brett), and Watson and Moriarty, and Hercule Poirot, and others, and he accepts commissions; his address is 179 Gold Kettle Drive, Gaithersburg, MD 20878.
  23. THE DISNEY VILLAIN, written by Ollie Johnston and Frank Thomas (New York: Hyperion, 1993; 232 pp., $45.00), is a well-illustrated book written by two of the "Nine Old Men" who were Disney's head animators for more than forty years. The excellent coverage runs from a surly wooden-legged pirate in the "Alice" series in the 1920s to Jafar in "Alladin", and does not neglect the infamous Ratigan in "The Great Mouse Detective".
  24. HarperAudio has issued THE STORIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, VOL. 1 (with Basil Rathbone's fine reading of "The Speckled Band" and "The Final Problem") at $5.99. The cassette is a reissue of the 1963 recording from Caedmon, and it would be nice indeed if other Rathbone readings are reissued as well.

25. Jan 94 #5: Further to earlier reports (Sep 90 #3; Jul 92 #4) on plans for an animated film of "Cats" (which one hopes would include the infamous Macavity), the latest issue of Anglofile reports that Andrew Lloyd Webber has decided to produce the film himself, and that the playwright Tom Stoppard has been recruited to write a screenplay. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter that offers detailed coverage of British entertainment; the cost is $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
26. Listen for Pleasure (EMI) offers boxed two-cassette sets of readings of the four long stories: "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Sign of Four" read by Tony Britton, "The Hound of the Baskervilles" by Hugh Burden, and "The Valley of Fear" by Martin Jarvis. The stories have been abridged to fit the two-hour format, but they are read well, with excellent voices; the first three are reissues, but Jarvis' "Valley" is newly recorded (1992).
27. The Parallel Case of St. Louis have prepared a new cloisonne pin, similar to their 1991 Sherlock Holmes pin but showing Dr. Watson (patterned after Nigel Bruce). $13.00 postpaid from Joseph J. Eckrich, 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026.
28. The Serpentine Muse is the quarterly journal of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and it is always of interest. The current issue (winter 1993) offers Dorothy K. Stix's thoughts on what it's like "Being Married to the Head of the BSI", and subscriptions cost $10.00 a year, from Evelyn A. Herzog, 360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011-3310.
29. "The whole trouble in trying to write on any aspect of the Canon," Tupper Bigelow once suggested, in an early contribution to our literature, "is that in your reading of it, for the particular purpose you have in mind, you become so fascinated with the story (no matter how often you may have read it before) that unconsciously you forget what it is you are looking for, and before you know it, you have finished the story, having made no notes at all, and then have to go back and try to read it all over again with an attempted deliberate detachment that I have never yet found to be completely possible." THE BAKER STREET BRIEFS, by S. Tupper Bigelow (Toronto: Metropolitan Toronto Library, 1993), in 168 pages of selections from his Sherlockian writings, easily shows that he was far too modest about his scholarly skills. The cost is $15.95 postpaid, from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada.
30. What on Earth (2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087) continues to offer Sherlockiana in their mail order catalogs, including a 20-oz handpainted porcelain Sherlock Stein (item G1869) at $129.95.
31. THE REALLY RAGGED SHAW: BEING THE EXPANDED RAGGED SHAW (Dubuque: Gasogene Press, 1994; 161 pp., $16.95) is David L. Hammer's birthday tribute to John Bennett Shaw, offering splendid examples of the imagination and inspiration and humor to be found in the quizzes devised by the Sage of Santa Fe. John did not rest from his labors when THE RAGGED SHAW appeared in 1987 with 45 quizzes, and there now are 59 quizzes to bemuse and bedevil all who claim true knowledge of the Canon. The publisher's address is Box 1041, Dubuque, IA 52004. Recommended.

32. Jan 94 #6: The August Derleth Society continues to honor the creator of Solar Pons (and many other fine works), most recently with A DERLETH COLLECTION (Sauk City: Geranium Press, 1993; 61 pp., $17.00 postpaid), which offers a variety of hitherto unreprinted material, including his comments in the July 1951 issue of the Unicorn Mystery Book Club News when THE MEMOIRS OF SOLAR PONTS was one of the club's monthly selections. The book is available from the society, at Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583.
33. Nate the Great continues his sleuthing, deerstalked and assisted by his dog Sludge, in the amusing children's series written by Marjorie Weinman Sharmat and illustrated by Marc Simont, from the Delacorte Press. NATE THE GREAT AND THE PILLOWCASE (1993; 48 pp., $12.95) and NATE THE GREAT AND THE MUSHY VALENTINE (1994; 44 pp., $12.95) are the latest titles, suggested for young readers aged 6-9.
34. IT WAS A DARK & STORMY NIGHT: A POP-UP MYSTERY WHODUNIT, designed by Keith Moseley and with pictures by Linda Birkinshaw (New York: Dial Books, 1991; $12.95), is an amusing children's book, with Inspector Derek Dog appearing in Sherlockian costume.
35. The J. Peterman Co. (2444 Palumbo Drive, Lexington, KY 40509) offers its Owner's Manual #27, with a wide range of entertainingly-described items, one of which is the "most fiendishly intelligent hat ever designed" (an Irish tweed deerstalker) now discounted to $37.00.
36. Spotted by Jennie Paton: SOCCER CIRCUS, by Jamie Gilson, with illustrations by Dee deRosa (New York: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, 1993; 177 pp., $12.00); an entertaining book for older grade-school readers, with Hobie Hanson and his soccer team attending a soccer tournament, which neatly happens to coincide with a meeting of WORMS (World Organization of Readers of Mysteries), which allows Hobie to meet a grandfatherly and deerstalkered mystery readers, and to help solve a mystery, and to impersonate a penguin.
37. Those who know Michael Harrison only as an author of Sherlockian books and as a fine raconteur will learn much more about the man and his work in Tina Rhea's THE BOOKS OF MICHAEL HARRISON (Greenbelt: Firecat Press, 1994; 47 pp., $5.00 postpaid). This is an annotated bibliography of Michael's 64 published books, with comment and occasional tales-out-of-school by Michael and by Tina, and with a fine portrait of Michael by Stephanie Hawks. The book is available from Tina at 3-E Ridge Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770-1969.
38. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be performed from June 18 to Oct. 15 at the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake in Ontario. The box office has a toll-free number (800-267-4759); they take plastic. The Bootmakers of Toronto and An Irish Secret Society at Buffalo are planning a theater party on July 2, with lunch, the play, and souvenirs; details are available from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada.
39. Al Rosenblatt has received a report that the Oriental Hotel in Bangkok has an "authors' residence" decorated with photographs of famous authors who have (allegedly) stayed at the hotel and found inspiration there. And Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is one of those authors. Along with Tolstoy, Gorky, and Dostoyevsky, and Gertrude Stein, and Victor Hugo, and other improbables.

---

40. Jan 94 #7: Simon & Schuster's audiocassette THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES #23 ($12.00) offers two more of the fine old radio shows from scripts by Denis Green and Anthony Boucher, with new introductions by Harry Bartell (who was one of the announcers in the 1940s). "The Gunpowder Plot" (5 Nov 45) stars Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce and is already available on records and cassettes (with lower fidelity). The new-to-audio "The Babbling Butler" (27 Jan 47) has Nigel Bruce and Tom Conway (as Watson and Holmes, with top billing going to Bruce).
41. A special Sherlock Holmes cover was issued on Jan. 8 at "Stamp Expo '94" in Long Beach, with a silhouette cachet and commemorative postmark. A few of the covers still may be available from the International Stamp Collectors Society, Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408; $4.95 postpaid.
42. Recent Sherlockian comic books, reported by Ralph Hall and Jim Suszynski: Muppet Babies (Dec. 1993) from Harvey Classics, reprinting "The Strange Case of the Missing Mermaid Costume". Walt Disney's Donald & Mickey (Sept. 1993) from Gladstone, reprinting "Mickey and the Sleuth: The Case of the Wax Dummy"; (Jan. 1994) reprinting "The Case of the Pea Soup Burglaries"; and (Mar. 1994) reprinting "The Great Winks Robbery". Walt Disney's Comics & Stories (Feb. 1994) from Disney, with "Inspector Clew Gluesome: Synthetic Lightning".
43. Roger Zelazny's A NIGHT IN THE LONESOME OCTOBER (New York: William Morrow/AvoNova, 1993; 280 pp., $18.00) is an imaginative blend of fantasy, horror, and humor, with thoroughly appropriate illustrations by Gahan Wilson. The story is told by a dog named Snuff who, when he isn't involved in calculating where the world will end, is a watch-dog for his knife-wielding master Jack not far from London, where they encounter an intriguing number of the more well-known characters from the various literatures that Zelazny knows so well. The Great Detective is one of those

- characters, otherwise unnamed but easily identified, both from his actions in the story and from the artwork (including Wilson's color portrait on the back of the dust jacket).
44. Plan ahead: the fourth annual Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair and Convention will be held at the Holiday Inn (Independence Mall) in Philadelphia on Nov. 4-6, 1994. Membership is limited to 400, full registration costs $40.00, and you can contact Deen Kogan at Detecto-Mysterioso Books, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147.
  45. Shots in the Dark ("Britain's only Crime Writing Convention") will be held in Nottingham on June 10-12. Nottingham also will host Bouchercon 26, from Sept. 28 through Oct. 1, 1995, with Colin Dexter and James Ellroy as guests of honour. More information is available from Broadway Media Centre, at 14 Broad Street, Nottingham NG1 3AL, England.
  46. It's always interesting to watch Sherlockian actors do other things. Ian Richardson (Sherlock Holmes) and Colin Jeavons (Insp. Lestrade) have been on display in "To Play the King" on "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV. And in the second episode (broadcast on Jan. 23), Jeavons (Tim Stamper) said, "I'm a notorious snapper-up of unconsidered trifles." Whom is he quoting?

  47. Jan 94 #8: Who claimed to be a "snapper-up of unconsidered trifles" before Colin Jeavons did? Not Sherlock Holmes, although it does sound like something he would have said, sufficiently so that I couldn't imagine why I wasn't able to find that phrase in Bob Stek's electronic Canon. The answer (with thanks to Jerry Bangham) is that William Shakespeare gave the words to Autolycus ("a rogue") in "The Winter's Tale" (Act IV, Scene iii). Vincent Starrett later put the phrase on the title page of his AUTOLYCUS IN LIMBO (New York: E. P. Dutton, 1943), a collection of poetry that includes his wonderful sonnet "221B" and other poems with Sherlockian allusions.
  48. Reported by Kevin Parker: John Peel, the author of WHERE IN THE U.S.A. IS CARMEN SANDIEGO? (Apr 92 #4), is now writing EVOLUTION, a novel in a soon-to-start DOCTOR WHO: THE MISSING ADVENTURES series. Tom Baker's Doctor and his companion Sarah Jane will meet Sherlock Holmes, and the book is due to be released in September (with Baker in Sherlockian costume on the cover).
  49. A Canadian edition has been reported of June Thomson's THE SECRET JOURNALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (McClelland & Stewart, CA$29.99). Also Nicholas Meyer's THE CANARY TRAINER (Penguin, CA$24.99)
  50. And THE OXFORD BOOK OF VILLAINS, edited by John Mortimer (Nov 92 #2) is now available as a paperback (Oxford University Press, $11.95); Prof. Moriarty is present, in a reprint of T. S. Eliot's poem "Macavity: The Mystery Cat".
  51. "Genius's residence" was the clue in the crossword puzzle in the N.Y. Times Magazine on Jan. 2. And the answer was: "Sherlock's home".
  52. Tim O'Connor reports that videocassettes with the edited two-hour versions of "The Leading Lady" and "Incident at Victoria Falls" (the 1992 television films starring Christopher Lee as Holmes) are now deeply discounted: $9.99 each (at EP speed) from Critic's Choice Video (800-367-7765).
  53. Dick Lesh reports that the 300-piece jigsaw puzzle showing "The Great Mouse Detective" issued by Western Publishing at $5.99 (Dec 93 #5) also is available (but as "Poster Puzzle") for $7.99 (add $4.50 shipping) from Donovan Distributing, 732 Clinton Street, Waukesha, WI 53186 (800-236-7123).
  54. According to my not-always-infallible records, you all now should have my seasonal souvenir for 1994 ("CUSHLAMOCHEE!"), received during the birthday festivities in New York, or since, or with this mailing. If I managed to miss anyone, please let me know.
  55. And a few commercials: the revised 15-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, *The* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.10 postpaid. The 70-page list of 632 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for the 386 active societies, costs $3.55 postpaid. A run of address labels for 329 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.25 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.

  56. Feb 94 #1: A new issue (#26) of The Tonga Times has arrived from Carol Wenk, who has reactivated The Mini-Tonga Society, which the late Dee Snyder founded for creators and keepers of Sherlockian miniatures. Membership costs $6.00 a year (with three issues of the newsletter, and back issues are available), and Carol's address is Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107.
  57. Oliver Smith died on Jan. 23. He was a co-director of the American Ballet Theatre for more than 35 years, and was best known as an award-winning set designer on Broadway, and in opera and films. His sets were an important feature of Broadway shows such as "West Side Story", "My Fair Lady", "Hello Dolly", "Camelot", and "Baker Street".
  58. Reported by Ralph Hall: ELEMENTARY DOCTOR WATSON! is a new CD and cassette starring country artist Doc Watson, issued by Sugar Hill Records; none of the tracks appear to be Sherlockian, and the contents are similar to, but not the same as, the phonograph record issued by Poppy Industries in 1972. Star Trek: The Next Generation #26 (Feb. 1994) has an interview with Alex Singer, director of "Ship in a Bottle" (which he compares to Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author"). The "Great Illustrated Classics" series from Baronet Press now includes THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Malvina G. Vogel and illustrated by Brendan Lynch (look for it on bookshop bargain tables); this is a reissue of the paperback from Playmore Inc. (Mar 85 #4).
  59. COOKIE MCCORKLE AND THE CASE OF THE CROOKED KEY and COOKIE MCCORKLE AND THE CASE OF THE MYSTERY MAP are the latest titles in Sharon Cadwallader's nice series of juveniles (ages 7 to 9) about a young girl who is fascinated by Sherlock Holmes, and has named her dog Moriarty, and solves mysteries; from Avon Books (Young Camelot), $3.50 each.
  60. The eighth volume of Beeman's Christmas Annual offers 32 pages of Sherlockian scholarship from past meetings of The Occupants of the Empty House; the cost is $11.00 postpaid, from the society (105 Wilcox, Zeigler, IL 62999).
  61. The BBC's six-hour dramatization of George Eliot's "Middlemarch" will air on "Masterpiece Theatre" starting on Apr. 10, according to the latest issue of Anglofile, and with some fine actors, including Robert Hardy and Patrick Malahide. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter that offers detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
  62. The third issue of Troy Taylor's The Whitechapel Gazette is at hand, with 58 pages of nicely illustrated articles on Conan Doyle and Houdini, Basil Rathbone's "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror", a possible identification of Cheeseman's near Horsham, and much more. Troy's address is 805 West North, Decatur, IL 62522, and the cost is $6.00 postpaid.
  63. Robert W. Wright, who is Branch Manager at the U.S. Colonial Office of the Franco-Midland Hardware Co., reports that the society is planning a meeting at the Gillette Castle in Hadlyme, Conn., some time during the summer. If you would like more information about the event, his address is R.R. 3, Box 401, Myerstown, PA 17067.

  64. Feb 94 #2: The winter 1993 issue of Scarlet Street offers tributes to the late Vincent Price, Richard Valley's discussion of Rathbone's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (with excerpts from alternate versions of the script), interviews with Ida Lupino and Terry Kilburn (both of whom were in the film), and David Stuart Davies' report on Granada's most recent work (with production stills from "The Red Circle" and "The Three Gables"). $20.00 a year (four issues), from Scarlet Street Inc., Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452. David has reported in a later letter that Jeremy Brett is in the final stages of filming "The Cardboard Box", and that the new shows will be broadcast in Britain beginning Feb. 28.

65. Eleri Arden's SHERLOCK HOLMES OBSERVED, OR WATSON TV TONIGHT is a 32-page guide to the Granada series, offering brief discussion of each program and notes on their Canonical anomalies, published in 1993 by the Teapot Press. Cheryl Hurd, the proprietor of the press, has herself written pamphlets on DRESSING UP VICTORIAN (36 pp.) and COME TO TEA! (40 pp.), both interesting guides for those who wish to sample or recreate turn-of-the-century lifestyles. The pamphlets are available from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219; $6.00 each postpaid.
66. Marina Stajic found a nicely Sherlockian sign on a door of the Institut de Police Scientifique et de Criminologie in Lausanne.
67. Andrew Jay Peck reports for the completists that Nicholas Meyer's THE CANARY TRAINER, published at $19.95, is now available from the Book-of-the-Month Club at $16.95 (and when one adds in postage, there isn't much discount).
68. David L. Hammer's investigation of THE 22ND MAN: IN RE SHERLOCK HOLMES: GERMAN AGENT (Jul 89 #5) has a sequel: THE QUEST: BEING THE SEARCH FOR THE TREASURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE 22ND MAN, by Angus Maclaren (Gasogene Press, 1993; 125 pp., $15.95). Maclaren, in a style remarkably similar to Hammer's, reports on his successful pursuit of Holmes' own case reports, which are scheduled for publication later this year. THE QUEST is well-illustrated by photographs taken in Germany, England, and Switzerland, and is available from the publisher (Box 1041, Dubuque, IA 52004); $18.70 postpaid.
69. The winter 1994 issue of Varieties of Ash is available, with Francine and Wayne Swift's explanation of the difficulties of preparing and displaying properly a flag that actually is a quartering of the Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes, and David R. McCallister's suggestion that the villains of half a dozen different stories were all members of an "invisible gang", and other Sherlockian scholarship. $12.00 a year (two issues), from Susan E. Dahlinger, 758 Third Street, Secaucus, NJ 07094.
70. Frank Darlington reports that the Johnson Smith Company (which has supplied generations of customers with sneezing powder, whoopee cushions, and rubber chickens, and other neat stuff) still offers woolen deerstalkers at $16.95 in their mail-order catalog (Box 25500, Bradenton, FL 34206).

71. Feb 94 #3: David Rush has provided a copy of a flier received from Malcolm Payne about The Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment's plans for a series of limited-edition commemorative covers honoring the birthday of Sherlock Holmes, the death of Conan Doyle, the birth of Conan Doyle, and the cricket match in which Conan Doyle bowled W. G. Grace. Information on prices and payment is available from Richard Greep, The Limes, Eridge Road, Crowborough, East Sussex, England.
72. Claude Akins died on Jan 27. He made his movie debut in 1953 as a sergeant in "From Here to Eternity" and went on to specialize in supporting roles in films and television, most recently as Teddy Roosevelt in "Sherlock Holmes: Incident at Victoria Falls" (1992).
73. W. K. Dolls (6641 Backlick Road #206, Springfield, VA 22150) offers a color flier showing six different Sherlockian dolls designed by William Knoth and priced at $500 each (or $2,500 for all six).
74. Further to Frank Darlington's report (Nov 93 #5) that the Oxford University Press is holding a drawing for a set of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES signed by the editors, Barbara Roden notes that Wallace Robson died before proof sets were available, and that her husband Christopher has signed his books only for members of his family, so it is rather dubious that a signed set actually exists. Barbara also notes that space is still available at the meeting of the Arthur Conan Doyle Society in Toronto on Apr. 29-May 1, and that additional information is available from the society, at Ashcroft, 2 Abbotsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester, Cheshire CH4 0JG, England.
75. Virginia Lou Seay (Calhoun Book Store, Box 24552, Edina, MN 55424) offers sales-lists of in-print and out-of-print Sherlockian and Doylean magazines, books, audiocassettes, comic books, etc.
76. The new catalog from Barnes & Noble (126 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011) offers Barnes & Noble reprint editions of THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ken Greenwald (first published in 1989, with 13 stories adapted from the Denis Green/Anthony Boucher scripts for the Rathbone radio series) at $4.98 (item E104047); DEATH LOCKED IN, edited by Douglas G. Greene and Robert C. S. Adey (an anthology of locked-room stories first published in 1987, with "The Lost Special") at $9.98 (item 1954635); and 100 DASTARDLY LITTLE DETECTIVE STORIES, edited by Robert Weinberg, Stefan Dziemianowicz, and Martin H. Greenberg (an anthology of short fiction that Richard Wein reports has reprints of at least seven Sherlockian parodies and pastiches) at $7.98 (item 1858729).
77. Ralph Hall notes that the Mar. 1994 issue of Sesame Street Magazine has an illustration of Sherlock Hemlock in "I Can Follow Clues", and that there is an approving report from London on The Sherlock Holmes Museum and its justopened Hudson's Restaurant in Victoria Magazine (Mar. 1994). And Mystery Forum Magazine #8 has Retta West Whinnery's "Forensic Firsts", quoting from H. M. Robinson's SCIENCE CATCHES THE CRIMINAL (New York: Blue Ribbon Books, 1939): "When Sherlock Holmes whipped out his magnifying glass to examine a flake of Latakia tobacco found on the Smyrna rug in the 'Boscombe Valley Affair', he became not merely a very charming character in detective fiction, but an exponent of a whole new way of looking at life."

78. Feb 94 #4: MEG MACKINTOSH AND THE MYSTERY IN THE LOCKED LIBRARY (Boston: Little Brown, 1993; 44 pp., $13.95) is the latest in Lucinda Landon's imaginative solve-it-yourself mystery series for young readers; this time Meg and her brother Peter are racing the clock to find valuable Sherlockian treasure hidden in, and almost stolen from, the local library.
79. The Northern Musgraves continue to publish interesting scholarship in The Ritual (two issues a year) and in The Musgrave Papers (an annual); a fine example (in the 1993 annual) is Richard Lancelyn Green's report on Conan Doyle's initial plans to end the Memoirs with "The Naval Treaty" (with "The Final Problem" having been added somewhat later), and on just who it was who first noticed the dual appearance of the famous mind-reading episode, and called it to the attention of the author and the publisher. Membership costs $32.00 a year (with airmail to the U.S.), from David Stuart Davies, Overdale, 69 Greenhead Road, Huddersfield, W. Yorks. HD1 4ER, England.
80. "Back to Baker Street" is the formal title for the ten-day festival planned by the Sherlock Holmes Society of London from May 20 to May 30, with a wide variety of events, all open to Sherlockians and the general public; anyone planning to be in London on any of those days will surely find something of interest in the schedule, now available from Pamela Bruxner, St. Cuthbert's Cottage, 23 North Street, Barming, Maidstone, Kent ME16 9HE, England.
81. Steve Robinson has a small supply of the smaller (4" x 4") Sherlock Holmes cigar-box labels, available for $16.00 postpaid. His address is 6980 South Bannock Street #3, Littleton, CO 80120 (303-794-9709).
82. Chris Redmond's THE TIN DISPATCH-BOX: A COMPENDIUM OF THE UNPUBLISHED CASES OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published in 1965 (when a great deal of S'ian scholarship was published in multi-colored hectograph), has been reprinted; it's a well-researched 32-page pamphlet, with two full-page illustrations by Jon Wilmunen, and the cost is US$7.00 postpaid from the author (at 523 Westfield Drive, Waterloo, Ont. N2T 2E1, Canada).
83. Roger Johnson reports that the script for the play THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, written by J. E. Harold Terry and Arthur Rose for Eille Norwood and produced in London in 1923, has been published by Ian Henry at $61.00 postpaid (20 Park Drive, Romford RM1 4LH, England). Philip Weller's ELEMENTARY HOLMES: A POCKET REFERENCE GUIDE TO THE WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is $15.00 postpaid from Sherlock Publications (6

- Bramham Moor, Hill Head, Fareham, Hampshire PO14 3RU, England). Anne Jordan's I LOOKED IN AT MECCA (a monograph on Holmes' visit) costs $6.00 postpaid (payment in currency, please); Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorkshire, BD16 4DN, England.
84. Jon Lellenberg reports that John Barrymore's film "Sherlock Holmes" (1922), seldom seen in theaters and never broadcast on television, will be one of the films in a retrospective of MGM silent films at the Film Forum in New York. They will be showing a print supplied by Turner Entertainment, so it may well be from the vaults, rather than the print reconstructed some years ago from bits and pieces found in the archives at George Eastman House in Rochester. The film will be screened three times on May 3; the Film Forum is at 209 West Houston Street (just south of Greenwich Village), and their box-office telephone number is 212-727-8110.

  85. Feb 94 #5: Jim Suszynski has spotted another Sherlockian children's book: SHERLOCK HOUND AND THE CASE OF THE FOUL SMELL, illustrated by Scott Ross "from the case files of Dr. Bulldog Watson" (Morris Plains: Unicorn Publishing, 1993; 40 pp., $6.95); if you can't find it at Waldenbooks or other bookstores, the publisher's address is 120 American Road, Morris Plains, NJ 07950. Later: there's a second title available: SHERLOCK HOUND AND THE CASE OF THE MYSTERIOUS MISSING PUMPKIN.
  86. Bob Burr reports in a supplement to the Mar. 1994 issue of Plugs & Dottles that Kendall J. Pagan, the mysterious leader of the Reichenbachian Cliff Divers, has been merely missing, rather than deceased, and that a new issue of The Reichenbachian Cliff-Notes will be due in April. Plugs & Dottles is an interesting monthly, and costs $10.00 a year from Robert C. Burr, 4010 Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614.
  87. William Allen (602 West Houstonia, Royal Oak, MI 48073) offers a Sherlock Holmes Mouse Pad (that's something used by some computerized Sherlockians) in blue Lexan (8 x 9.5 in.) with a white S'ian design, for $12.95 postpaid.
  88. Harold and Teddie Niver's A SHERLOCKIAN SONGBOOK, first published in 1982, is still available, offering thirteen turn-of-the-century songs, with new Sherlockian lyrics (such as "On the Trail of the Fearsome Hound" and "Yes Sir, That's My Sherlock"); $10.00 postpaid from Harold E. Niver, 29 Woodhaven Road, Rocky Hill, CT 06067. A new supply of lapel pins for the Men on the Tor (Mar 93 #5) also is available, in case your checks were returned when the original supply was exhausted (or in case you weren't reading this newsletter then); also $10.00 postpaid, from the same address.
  89. Chuck Kovacic (14383-B Nordhoff Street, Panorama City, CA 91402-1927) will be happy to send a copy of his new sales-list of Sherlockian pins, posters, photographs, press kits, and the like.
  90. A subscriber reports an addition to the list of homosexual pornography with a Sherlockian theme: EXPOSED, by Aaron Travis (New York: Badboy/Masquerade, 1993; 177 pp.; $4.95); it's a collection of Travis' stories, including "The Adventure of the Ragged Youth" (with Holmes and Watson being thoroughly un-Canonical). Masquerade Books (801 Second Avenue, New York, NY 10017) has a toll-free number (800-458-9640); $1.00 extra for shipping.
  91. IRENE'S LAST WALTZ (New York: Tom Dougherty/Forge, 1994; 480 pp., $22.95) is the fourth book in Carole Nelson Douglas' imaginative series about Irene Adler Norton and her friend Penelope Huxleigh, who this time investigate a murder at the Parisian establishment of Charles Worth, the king of couture, and then return to Prague for a second encounter with the King of Bohemia. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson make an appearance, but as usual the story is Irene's, and it is well told.
  92. The Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair and Convention (in Philadelphia on Nov. 4-6, 1994) will feature publication of THE MID-ATLANTIC MYSTERY COOK BOOK (with recipes for suspenseful beginnings, mysterious main meals, villainous vegetables, sinister salads, and deadly desserts). Interested readers and writers are invited to submit their recipes, by May 31, to Deen Kogan, at the Society Hill Playhouse, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147.

  93. Feb 94 #6: VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES is the Oxford University Press's title for the paperback edition of VICTORIAN TALES OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION, which was edited by Michael Cox and published in 1992 (Oct 93 #5); the anthology has 31 stories, with one from the Canon, as well as Conan Doyle's "The Lost Special", and the trade paperback costs $12.95.
  94. NATMEET is what Sherlockians in Australia call their national meeting of Sherlockian societies, and this year's NATMEET will be held on Aug. 6-7 in Toowoomba in Queensland, celebrating "The Empty House" and featuring the third annual Toowoomba Silver Blaze Race Day. Travelers from afar will be welcome, and details are available from Michael Farrell, 86 Bridge Street, Toowoomba, Q. 4350, Australia.
  95. There certainly is no shortage of roses in the Canon, but doves seem to be few and far between (one candidate is the "sucking dove" mentioned in "His Last Bow"). Roses and doves were both featured on this year's "love" stamps.
  96. Cate Pfeifer, who presides over a Sherlockian society called The Nocturnal Journalists of 131 Pitt Street (their motto being "si hoc adfixum in obice legere potes, et liberaliter educatus et nimis propinquus ades") has kindly sent the second issue of the society's newsletter The Midnight Oil, with an imaginative outline for a "Multiple-Choice Sherlock Holmes Story" (you can ask Cate for your a copy, and her address is 3939 North Murray Avenue #402, Milwaukee, WI 53211).
  97. It is unlikely that there are many Sherlockians who are not aware of the contribution that The Strand Magazine made to ensuring the fame of Sherlock Holmes, but it is possible that only a few Sherlockians know that there was once also The New Strand, launched in 1961 in hopes that it could be worthy successor. Unfortunately, The New Strand lasted only 15 months, but every one of those 15 monthly issues had delightful articles on "Baker Street and Beyond", written by Lord Donegall. Don was the 6th Marquis of Donegall (a Marquis ranks just below a Duke), a wonderful Sherlockian, an enthusiastic collector, the editor for many years of The Sherlock Holmes Journal, and a fine writer. The Westminster Libraries and The Sherlock Holmes Society of London have recently published BAKER STREET AND BEYOND: ESSAYS ON SHERLOCK HOLMES, reprinting all of Don's articles from The New Strand, and (in full color) his spectacular Sherlockian series of Christmas cards. The cost is $35.00 postpaid (checks payable to City of Westminster, please), and orders can be sent to the Sherlock Holmes Collection, Marylebone Library, Marylebone Road, London NW1 5PS, England.
  98. Jim Duval has reported a set of "Peanuts" trading cards issued by ProSport Specialties. Card #25 shows the comic strip from Oct. 16, 1979, in which Charlie Brown buys Snoopy a new book. "How thoughtful!" Snoopy says, "This is one I hadn't heard of: 'The Hound of the Beaglevilles'." Charles Schulz has been using Sherlockian references at least since 1962, when Snoopy was shown with a deerstalker and pipe, about to track down some rabbits.

  99. Mar 94 #1: "People used to kill for *noble* reasons--for revenge or honor or to usurp a throne. Today, everyone lets it 'all hang out.'" His lip curled around the phrase disdainfully. "You can't build a believable mystery around simple *scandal* for its own sake anymore. Can you *imagine* trying to write *A Scandal in Bohemia* today? Instead of hiring Sherlock Holmes to retrieve that picture of himself with Irene Adler, the king would probably be trying to peddle the negatives to *The National Enquirer*." Sigrid laughed. "And would probably be turned down because both parties in the picture were fully clothed." Spotted by Tom O'Day in CORPUS CHRISTMAS, by Margaret Maron (New York: Doubleday, 1989); p. 176-176.
  100. The new Granada series began on ITV on Mar. 7, with "The Three Gables" and a story by Adrian Furness in TV Times (Mar. 5) that noted that Jeremy Brett was diagnosed as suffering from heart failure after collapsing during work on the show. "I have bounced back like Bambi," said Brett. "I'm as fit as a fiddle, though still a little fragile." Brett also said that these would be his final six films as Holmes, and he wants to celebrate them: "I've got think of a way of publicizing this series. Perhaps I could streak naked across Lord's cricket ground with S and H painted on my backside..."

101. The series continued with "The Dying Detective" on Mar. 14, and "The Golden Pince-Nez" on Mar. 21 (with Frank Finlay as Sergei), and "The Red Circle" on Mar. 28. Press reviews have been mixed, with some comment on overacting and on over-the-top directing, and some reviews welcoming the chance to see more fine Sherlock Holmes stories. And informal comment from British users of the Internet was generally enthusiastic. Charles Gray (as Mycroft) got high marks as Mycroft in "The Golden Pince-Nez" (apparently Granada did not tell the press that this was the first show filmed, and that Mycroft subbed for Watson because Edward Hardwicke was still working on the film "Shadowlands"). Edward Hardwicke's daughter Emma appeared as Dora in "The Three Gables".
102. And the latest news from Britain was an article in the Sun (Mar. 25) with the headline TV SHERLOCK IN A MENTAL WARD, reporting that Jeremy Brett had been admitted to London's Chelsea and Westminster Hospital after breaking down with severe depression. The story noted that he had collapsed from serious heart problems last November during filming of the current Granada series, and that he had been using lithium since his nervous breakdown in 1986. Granada confirmed that Brett was hospitalized on Mar. 16, and that doctors are readjusting his medication for the treatment of depression.
103. MITIGATED BLEAT is the title of the latest collection of Sherlockian verse from the pen of John Ruyle and the metal-and-ink of his Pequod Press. The 41 quartets are his "observations on HIS LAST BOW," and the cost is $35.00 (cloth) or $15.00 (paper) postpaid; you can order from the author at 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
104. Vinnie Brosnan has issued a grand tenth catalog from Sherlock in L.A. (1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056); packed with Sherlockiana old and new, and with interesting articles by Michael Boss and John Ruyle, and a reprint of Ben Abramson's flier promoting THE PAINFUL PREDICAMENT OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.
105. Mar 94 #2: Tiger Books (Yew Tree Cottage, Westbere, Canterbury, Kent CT2 0HH, England) has published an ABBREVIATED BIBLIOGRAPHIC CHECK LIST OF A. CONAN DOYLE (60 pp., £16.50); the information is restricted to first appearances of his articles and stories in magazines and newspapers and to the first editions of his books, and relies to a great extent on the Green/Gibson bibliography. The checklist is certainly much handier for the collector to carry along to bookshops than the more detailed bibliography, but has one serious defect: there is no index, and magazines are reported chronologically according to the first appearances of Conan Doyle item, so anyone finding a run of Pearson's, for example, will locate the check list of ACD's contributions to the magazine only by searching a three-page table of contents.
106. Tom Kowols notes in The Police Gazette (published by The Scotland Yarders) that the Laser Disc Newsletter reports that the entire Granada series has been released in Japan on twenty laserdiscs, each 104 minutes and priced at ¥4,800 (about $45.00). The series is broadcast in Japan in English, with Japanese subtitles, and I expect the laserdiscs are the same.
107. The west-coast branch of the International Wizard of Oz Club sponsors the annual Winkie Conference, and the 1994 gathering will be held on July 8-10 in Pacific Grove, Calif., with L. Frank Baum's mystery novel THE LOST PRINCESS OF OZ (1917) as its theme. Their publicity flier shows a portrait of Toto drawn by Frank Kramer for Jack Snow's novel THE MAGICAL MIMICS IN OZ (1946), and the conference events will include a presentation of Baum's play "The King of Gee-Whiz" (at the end of which a fat missionary called Willie Cook emerges from a cannibal kettle to declare that he is none other than Sherlock Holmes). Dick Rutter (long an enthusiast in the worlds of Oz and the Canon) is in charge of the program, and additional information about this year's Winkie Conference is available from Peter E. Hanff, 1083 Euclid Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94708.
108. Stafford Davis reports that The Afghanistan Perceivers will celebrate their 20th anniversary on May 21 (Queen Victoria's birthday) as part of a threeday weekend that will include a picnic on Holmes Peak. Travelers from afar will be welcome, and details are available from Staff, at 2144 North Elwood Avenue, Tulsa, OK 74106-3632.
109. Bob Burr reports that Nintendo's time-travel game "Star Tropics II" has an 1890s London segment featuring Sherlock Holmes. Bob also notes that those who do not subscribe to his newsletter Plugs & Dottles, and who do wish to receive a copy of the just-published four-page Aug. 1991 issue of Kendall Pagan's newsletter Reichenbachian Cliff-Notes, are invited to send a #10 SASE and $1.00 to The Lascarian Press, 4010 Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614. The lead story in the newsletter deals with an intriguing parallel between an event reported in "The Naval Treaty" and a recent criminous assault in Detroit that still echoes in the nation's headlines.
110. Mar 94 #3: Roger Johnson has reported in the latest issue of The District Messenger that Robert Godfrey, the owner and publisher of The Sherlock Holmes Gazette, has died after a long illness. And Carolyn Senter of Classic Specialties reports that a new publisher has been found: he is Peter Harkness, and he hopes to have the next issue of the Sherlock Holmes Gazette off to press and into the mails soon.
111. Roger Johnson has also noted that Sherlock Holmes Fine Ale (described as a "palatable brew") is now available at The Sherlock Holmes in Northumberland Street in London.
112. Bob Mangler reports that the Book-of-the-Month Club is offering members THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES in an exclusive ("not available in any bookstore") nine-volume uniform hard-cover set priced at $44.95. This is not a reprint of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES, but instead seems to have been produced from earlier editions: A STUDY IN SCARLET and THE SIGN OF THE FOUR probably were copied from a pirated edition first published by Orange Judd in 1907, and the other seven volumes were copied from the first American editions (from a quick examination of photocopies kindly forwarded by Bob Fritsch. BOMC's address is 485 Lexington Avenue, New York, NY 10017.
113. Ruth Brandon's THE LIFE AND MANY DEATHS OF HARRY HOUDINI (London: Secker & Warburg, 1993; 338 pp., £17.99) is a splendid biography of Houdini, drawing upon his correspondence and scrapbooks in collections such as those at the Library of Congress and the University of Texas, and examining the man and his family and friends in addition to his magic and showmanship. She does not neglect Houdini's relationship with Conan Doyle, but her discussion of that aspect of his campaign against Spiritualism is only one part of a fine portrayal of a man driven to create his own miracles.
114. Geoffrey A. Landis' "The Singular Habits of Wasps" (Analog Science Fiction and Fact, Apr. 1994) is a somewhat different Sherlock-Holmes-and-Jack-the-Ripper pastiche, with illustrations by Broeck Steadman (who obviously is a fan of Basil Rathbone).
115. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: EINE ILLUSTRIERTE BIBLIOGRAPHIE DER VEROEFFENTLICHUNGEN IM DEUTSCHEN SPRACHRAUM, by Gerhard Lindenstruth, is an impressive 236-page review of all of Conan Doyle's work published in German in German-language nations, and in English in those nations. There are illustrations (some in color) of some of the more interesting book covers, a translation table of the bibliographic terms and abbreviations, and an appendix with the English translations of the German titles of books and stories. The bibliography can easily be used by collectors who are not fluent in German, and offers a splendid look at how well Conan Doyle's work has been presented in another language. The book is available from the publisher (Verlag Munniksmas, Lindengasse 5, D-35390 Giessen, Germany) in paper covers at $35.00 (or £23.00) postpaid, and in cloth (with additional color illustrations) at $70.00 (or £46.00) postpaid.

116. The late Isaac Asimov may not be the only Investitured member of The Baker Street Irregulars to have a school named in his honor, but he's the only one that I know of. Thanks to Pj Doyle for the news that Public School 99 in Brooklyn is now the Isaac Asimov School for Science and Literature.
117. Mar 94 #4: Visitors to Montreal may or may not wish to dine at Sherlock's, the first in North America of a chain Swiss-owned restaurants all with that name (there are more than 30 such restaurants in Switzerland land, according to a review in the Jan. 27 issue of The McGill Reporter, at hand from Chris Redmond). The "may not" involves the menu, which features nothing Sherlockian, or even British, except for the shepherd's pie. But you can get grilled buffalo steak, and they have mystery nights, a dance floor, and 14 "state-of-the-art" pool tables.
118. Alex Jack, author (as "Hapi") of THE ADAMANTINE SHERLOCK HOLMES (1974), has returned to the S'ian genre with INSPECTOR GINKGO TIPS HIS HAT TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (Becket: One Peaceful World Press, 1994; 231 pp., $12.95). Ginkgo is a holistic detective who lives in Boston and follows the deductive principles (although not the diet) of Sherlock Holmes in attempting to recover the ceremonial headpiece of a high Tibetan lama, in a pursuit that takes him to London, the Reichenbach, and Nepal, with many Canonical echoes. The publisher's address is Box 10, Becket, MA 01223.
119. As some of you know, The Red Circle's quizzes consist of questions devised by our members, with the Committee on Quizzes selecting the most malevolent questions for the quiz. One of the categories systematically rejected by the committee is "abstruse mathematical calculations," which explains why a question proposed by Brad Schaefer for this month's quiz on "Silver Blaze" was disallowed. But it deserves wider circulation. So: at the speed that Holmes calculated the train was going, how long would it have taken for the train to win the Wessex Cup?
120. Book-hunting tourists in London should not neglect Ming Books, a mysteryspecialist bookshop at 110 Gloucester Avenue in Primrose Hill, just to the north of Regent's Park (in which Holmes and Watson occasionally strolled, and in which Holmes visited the Zoo, and conveniently, because Baker Street is just to the south of the Park).
121. The BBC's six-hour dramatization of George Eliot's "Middlemarch" will air on "Masterpiece Theatre" starting on Apr. 10, according to the latest issue of Anglofile, and with some fine actors, including Robert Hardy and Patrick Malahide. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter that offers detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
122. Last year's river-boat Sherlockian convention "The Game's Afloat" was quite successful, and The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn are now planning another one, on Oct. 8-9 (and hoping that the excitement of last year's flood will not be repeated this year). Additional information is available from Len Cleavelin, 35 St. Lawrence Drive, St. Peters, MO 63376.
123. Mary Russell is a new addition to the list of Sherlockian protagonists, and she will be found in Laurie R. King's THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1994; 347 pp., $21.95). Russell, in her teens when she almost stumbles over Holmes in a field on the Sussex Downs in 1914, becomes his friend and student, and then his associate in war-time England, solving cases with him and telling her own story in a book that offers consistent character and voice. She has her own strengths, and weaknesses, and tells her story well. St. Martin's also offers credit-card sales (800-228-2131).
124. Mar 94 #5: Plan ahead: four of the Sherlockian societies in New York have arranged a joint dinner meeting at 6:00 pm on Apr. 6 at the Old Garden Restaurant at 15 West 29th Street. Nicholas Meyer, author of books of Sherlockian interest, will be the guest of honor, and copies of his THE CANARY TRAINER will be available for purchase so that people can have them signed. Additional details are available from Dante Torrese of The Three Garridebs; his daytime telephone number is 914-965-4004.
125. George Vanderburgh has issued an addendum to the first edition of S. Tupper Bigelow's THE BAKER STREET BRIEFS (Jan 94 #5), offering material that was omitted from the first edition; it is available to purchasers of the first edition for $0.50 (United States and Canada) or $1.00 (elsewhere). And the second (revised) edition of THE BAKER STREET BRIEFS is available, at $15.95 postpaid. And since many readers of this newsletter have enquired whether Ron De Waal's THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES will be issued on floppy disks or CD-ROM discs, George wrote recently that he has "no plans to release De Waal in ASCII at any time." George's address is: Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. LON 1S0, Canada.
126. Forecast: MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME 2 (due from Bantam Doubleday Dell audio in August, priced at $15.99 for a two-cassette set) will have four more stories from the BBC Radio series starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams. And THE ADVENTURES OF THE DETECTED DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES IN JAMES JOYCE, by William D. Jenkins, is due from Greenwood Press in April ($46.00).
127. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner on June 15, at the Denver Press Club, during the annual convention of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. Geologists and Sherlockians (and visitors of either persuasion) are welcome to join us in honoring the world's first forensic geologist; you can make reservations with (and obtain additional information from) Steve Robinson, 6980 South Bannock Street #3, Littleton, CO 80120.
128. Forecast in "Otto Penzler's Sherlock Holmes Library" in paperback reprints from Otto Penzler Books ($8.00 each): R. HOLMES & COMPANY, by John Kendrick Bangs (in April); SEVENTEEN STEPS TO 221B, edited by James Edward Holroyd (in June); MY DEAR HOLMES: A STUDY IN SHERLOCK, by Gavin Brend (in August); BAKER STREET BY-WAYS, by James Edward Holroyd (in October); and HOLMES AND WATSON: A MISCELLANY, by S. C. Roberts (in December). Also due in cloth ($21.00 each): SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MASQUERADE MURDERS, by Frank Thomas (in May, reprinting the now-almost-impossible-to-find paperback original published by Medallion Books in 1986; and THE ANGEL OF THE OPERA: SHERLOCK HOLMES MEETS THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA, by Siciliano (in June).
129. The reason why the paperback original of SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MASQUERADE MURDERS is so difficult to find is that Medallion Books planned to sell its titles by subscription, and didn't distribute to bookstores, and went broke before word of the pastiche reached most Sherlockians. Much of their stock was sold to a discounter who shipped it off to Australia, where a supply of the pastiche was located and sent to me (that's at least 18,000 miles for a round trip), and in 1988 those well-traveled copies were offered at $6.00 postpaid in this newsletter and quickly sold out.

130. Mar 94 #6: The Arthur Conan Doyle Society plans to publish a new edition of Conan Doyle's WESTERN WANDERINGS (an account of his visit to the United States and Canada in 1914); cloth-bound, 80 pp., with six photographs and an introduction by Christopher and Barbara Roden, and the cost is £19.50 (or $33.00) postpaid, from the Society (Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester CH4 0JG, England).
131. A new third "fully revised and updated" edition of THE TELEVISION SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Peter Haining (London: Virgin Books, 1994; 255 pp., £14.99 or $19.95), is now available in Britain (there's no word yet on an American distributor); half of the book is a discussion of Sherlock Holmes and S'ian television pre-Granada, and the other half covers the Granada series. Both sections are profusely illustrated, with much color, and there's a new onepage foreword by Jeremy Brett, a new six-page introduction by Haining about the Granada series, and coverage of the series through the newest one-hour show (although the book went to press before cast lists were available for some of the programs).
132. Fanatic completists may face some problems with the set of stamps issued by Britain last year in honor of Sherlock Holmes: Philip Weller has managed to find more than 50 different first day covers for the set. Some still are available, and offered in the latest issue of The New Baker Street Pillar Box, the quarterly periodical of The Franco-Midland Hardware Company. The issue's 42 pages also contain a wealth of British news and scholarship, and an

- 8-page booklet giving information about the society and its publications is available for $1.00 (currency please) from Philip (6 Bramham Moor, Hill Head, Fareham, Hampshire PO14 3RU, England).
133. Dave Galerstein reports that Arthur and Joyce Liebman will offer "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" at the New School for Social Research in New York on Apr. 22, from 8:00 to 9:30 pm; the New School's address is 66 West 12th Street, admission costs $10.00, and reservations aren't required (the phone number is 212-229-5600, if you want to check for a schedule change).
  134. Melanie Hughes has discovered William J. McGrath's review, in Newsday (Apr. 8, 1990), of READING FREUD: EXPLORATIONS AND ENTERTAINMENTS, by Peter Gay (Yale, 204 pp., $14.95), which notes that one of the essays in the book is titled "The Dog That Did Not Bark in the Night" and discusses the question of whether Freud had an affair with his sister-in-law Minna Bernays. Some 65 letters written when the affair would have occurred are missing from the Freud-Bernays correspondence, but Gay is not concerned, and believes there was no love affair, and states that "The missing letters are like Sherlock Holmes' famous dog that did not bark in the night ... there are times when dogs do not bark because they have nothing to bark about."
  135. THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF HISTORICAL WHODUNNITS, edited by Mike Ashley (London: Robinson, 1993; 522 pp., £5.99) (and New York: Carroll and Graf; $9.95), is an interesting anthology of stories that (almost all) fit the editor's rule that a tale be set in a time earlier than its author's birth. The contents include reprints of Adrian Conan Doyle's "The Case of the Deptford Horror", Edward D. Hoch's "Five Rings in Reno" (as by R. L. Stevens, and about Conan Doyle), and Elizabeth Peters' "The Locked Tomb Mystery" (S'ian deduction by the sage and scholar Amenhotep Sa Hapu, assisted by his friend Wadjsen).

  136. Mar 94 #7: Readers of TV Guide may recall being asked to participate in an annual reader poll last summer. Victoria Robinson has kindly sent a copy of the poll that appeared in the Canadian edition of TV Guide on June 26, with (in some cases) different questions and proposed choices. In the U.S. and Canada, readers were asked to vote on the best drama actor, with a list that included (in Canada only) Jeremy Brett (Sherlock Holmes). And in Canada only, readers were asked to choose the sexiest TV actor, from a list that included Jeremy Brett. Alas, Jeremy Brett didn't make the top three in either category: Canadian readers selected Patrick Stewart, Tom Skeritt, and Michael Moriarty as best drama actors; and Joe Lando, Patrick Stewart, and Ted Danson as sexiest TV actors.
  137. Barbara Roden has reported from England that the hard-cover edition of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES is now almost sold out; the set will be published in paperback this fall at £3.99 per volume, with Owen Dudley Edwards' corrections of some errors in the Notes and Introductions.
  138. The wide variety of Sherlockian societies in the broad category described as "other" includes The Sherlock Holmes Wireless Society, whose members are licensed amateur radio operators who are known to each other by mysterious code names such as WA2PXM or W6NKE or WD8NUK or N9RGW. Or KX1W (Ron Fish), who edits their newsletter (The Log of the Canonical Hams); his address is Box 3382, New Haven, CT 06515-3382.
  139. Don Hobbs notes that Greek translations of five of the nine volumes of the Canon are available from G. C. Eleftheroudakis SA, International Bookstore, 4 Nikis Str., Athens 105 63, Greece.
  140. Tom Stix reports that Gruntal & Co. (stockbrokers) have discovered Watson Pharmaceuticals Inc., a company that makes and sells off-patent (generic) drugs. There is no information on whether a descendant of John H. Watson is president of the company.
  141. Noted by Gary Westmoreland: Michael Howard's review, in the Times Literary Supplement (Feb. 11), of Martin Walker's THE COLD WAR AND THE MAKING OF THE MODERN WORLD (Fourth Estate, 404 pp., £18.99), in which Walker writes that "the costs of the Cold War, and the distortions inflicted upon the social systems of what had been the world's most powerful economies, suggests that the superpowers had become superlosers during the Cold War's final decade final struggle, plunging over the Reichenbach Falls together in a deadly embrace, then the USA was left clinging perilously and exhausted to the rim while the Soviet Union crashed down to the rocks below."
  142. Cathy Childs (1510 Lake Drive, Grand Island, FL 32735) offers a new saleslist, with reduced prices for her Sherlockian artwork, portraits of Jeremy Brett and other actors in the Granada series, and cartoon material.
  143. Further to an earlier report (Nov 93 #3) that "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) was scheduled for release in letterbox format on laserdisc, Jim Dooley has reported to the Hounds of the Internet that the release has been delayed while work continues on putting the pieces back together. And it would appear that the laserdisc version may have some (but possibly not all) of the footage that was edited out before the film was released.

  144. Mar 94 #8: Spotted by Al Rosenblatt in Richard Jenkyns' review in the New Republic (Jan. 31) of Catherine Peters' THE KING OF INVENTORS: A LIFE OF WILKIE COLLINS: "Count Fosco is one of the most splendid villains ever imagined. With his megalomania tempered by intellect, courtesy, and an almost feminine delicacy, he is an ancestor of Professor Moriarty and those world-domination baddies in the James Bond books, though he is vastly superior to these descendants."
  145. Television ratings. The Wednesday-night Nielsen rating for the half-hour in which Tonya Harding skated during the Winter Olympics was 50.5 (that's 47.6 million television households) with a 64 share (that's 64 percent of all households where the sets were turned on). And for the half-hour when Nancy Kerrigan skated, the rating jumped to 53.4 with a 70 share. Friday night, which is sometimes called "baby-sitters night" (and when there was less suspense), the rating was 44.2 with a 63 share. The record-holder for highest-rated network program is the final episode of "M*A*S*H" (broadcast in 1983) with a rating of 60.2 and a 77 share. And the highest-rated Sherlockian broadcast recorded in my notes is the television film "Hands of a Murderer" (with Edward Woodward as Holmes, on CBS-TV in 1990), which had a rating of 9.5, with a 15 share.
  146. Maxine Reneker reports that her daughter Sarah, recently in Vietnam, found a Vietnamese translation of some of the Sherlock Holmes stories, published in Hanoi in 1993. The title is NHU'NG CUOC PHIEU LU'U CUA SHERLOCK HOLMES (with accents here and there that my computer won't reproduce), and there are six stories (Danc/3Stu/Dyin/Lady/RedH/Blue) presented on the even pages in English and on the odd pages in Vietnamese. Readers who are planning to visit Vietnam are invited to find a convenient bookstore and to bring back more copies, since Vietnamese apparently is not (until now) on the list of languages into which the Canon has been translated.
  147. The Barnes & Noble reprint edition of Ken Greenwald's THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Feb 94 #3) also is available at other chain bookstores at $4.98; it's a minor variant, since the order of the last two stories has been reversed. The book is a collection of short-story adaptations of radio scripts from the Rathbone/Bruce series.
  148. Video-taper alert: "The Deadly Bees" (1967) will be broadcast by USA cable at 2:30 am on Apr. 21. Robert Bloch's screenplay is based on H. F. Heard's novel A TASTE FOR HONEY, but Bloch told me that a British writer [Anthony Marriott] took "some vast liberties" with Bloch's version (which did have Mr. Mycroft as a character). Bloch was informed that the script was to be juiced-up to include more horror, and suspected (correctly) that the gentle Mr. Mycroft had vanished from the screenplay (and Bloch refused to see his "deformed offspring").
  149. "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held on Oct. 22-23 at the Tarrytown Hilton in Tarrytown, N.Y. This annual gathering is always well-attended, and the agenda interesting, and additional information is available from Robert E. Thomalen, 69 Glen Road, Eastchester, NY 10709.

150. Apr 94 #1: Well, yes, I didn't give the answer to the question Brad Schaefer submitted for The Red Circle's quiz on "Silver Blaze", just in case there are readers who didn't want me to spoil their fun. The question was: at the speed that Holmes calculated the train was going, how long would it have taken for the train to win the Wessex Cup?
151. Eugene Ionesco died on Mar. 28. He was widely recognized as the inventor of the "theater of the absurd" and was famous as a writer of plays such as "The Bald Soprano" (1950) and "Rhinoceros" (1959). Zero Mostel starred in the film of "Rhinoceros" and did a magnificent job of turning into a rhinoceros without using makeup. And "The Bald Soprano" has a scene in which a man and woman deduce that because they live on the same street, and in the same house, and share the same bed, they must be married. But it is the family's maid who declares, "I am Sherlock Holmes."
152. This obviously is the year for German bibliography. Gerhard Lindenstruth's ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: EINE ILLUSTRIERTE BIBLIOGRAPHIE DER VEROFFENTLICHUNGEN IM DEUTSCHEN SPRACHRAUM (Mar 94 #3) has excellent coverage of all of Conan Doyle's work published in German in German-language nations, and in English in those nations, and now Michael Ross and other members of Von Herder Airguns Ltd. have produced JUBILAUMSBIBLIOGRAPHIE DEUTSCHER SHERLOCKIANA 1894-1994. This centenary bibliography celebrates the appearance of SPATE RACHE in German in 1894, and offers excellent coverage of a hundred years of the Canon, pastiches, parodies, scholarly articles, journals, and games. The annotations are in German and English, and there is glossary explaining the abbreviations, and the bibliography's 290 pages provide a splendid view of German Sherlockiana, both original and in translation. The book is available for DM 40.00 ($24.00) from Michael Ross, Bendheide 65, D-47906 Kempen, Germany; U.S. dollars in currency only, please.
153. Forecast: SEANCE FOR A VAMPIRE, by Fred Saberhagen (from Tor Books in May); "When Sherlock Holmes disappears, evidently abducted by malign powers while investigating a seance, Dr. Watson knows that it is up to him to perform the distasteful ritual of summoning the only one who might be able to help: Holmes' vampire cousin, Prince Dracula himself."
154. "Otto Penzler's Sherlock Holmes Library" continues to reprint fine older Sherlockiana (and covers that show Frederic Dorr Steele's artwork in full color) in a paperback format that will make the books available to people who have not been able to find them (and who in some cases may never have known they existed). Vincent Starrett's 221B: STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES ($7.95) was published in 1940 and was the first anthology of Sherlockian fiction and scholarship to be published in the United States; it offers a grand example of how well the Sherlockians of the 1930s played our Grand Game. John Kendrick Bangs' R. HOLMES & CO. ($8.00) offers ten stories that appeared in Harper's Weekly in 1905 and were collected in a book in 1906; Bangs offered apologies to both Conan Doyle and Hornung for "the remarkable adventures of Raffles Holmes, Esq., Detective and Amateur Cracksman by Birth" (the collection includes an explanation of how Raffles Holmes had a detective father and an amateur-cracksman grandfather, and tells some tales of how he followed in their footsteps, in New York rather than London).
155. Apr 94 #2: And for the readers who didn't want to calculate the answer to the question (at the speed that Holmes calculated the train was going, how long would it have taken for the train to win the Wessex Cup), it would have taken 109.3 seconds to win the race (the distance was 1.625 miles, the velocity was 53.5 miles per hour, and the formula is  $D/V=T$ ).
156. Patricia Dalton died on Apr. 6. She was Patsy to her friends, and she had many of them in The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, which she joined in 1966, and which she served in many ways, as a member of its Council, as its chairman from 1980 to 1983, and as co-editor of The Sherlock Holmes Journal from 1982 to 1983.
157. "Brief Writing and Oral Argument in Appellate Practice", by the Honorable Albert M. Rosenblatt, was published in the fall 1993 issue of Trial Lawyers Quarterly (the official journal of the N.Y. State Trial Lawyers Institute), and uses Canonical names in examples of what to avoid. Such as: "While in front of her home at Grosvenor Square in the Town of Brewster, on March 15, 1987, the seven year old infant plaintiff herein, Isadora Klein, was struck by a vehicle having been driven by defendant third-party plaintiff, Grice Patterson." Al not only has to read this sort of thing, but is supposed to understand it, and deserves our sympathy. The Institute's address is 132 Nassau Street, New York, NY 10038.
158. Jennie Paton has forwarded an item in the Library Journal (Mar. 15), about Mark Frost's novel THE LIST OF 7 (Sep 93 #4): "Morrow put plenty of time, money, and energy into promoting this book, and though it didn't break out as expected, the estimated sale of 40,000 copies is nothing to regret." Avon will issue the book soon in paperback.
159. Jennie also spotted Christopher Morley's essay about Walt Whitman in the Jan. 25, 1953, issue of the N.Y. Times Book Review (the editors noted that "Mr. Morley has largely taken the place of Walt Whitman on Long Island"). Morley suggested that "Some innocent (or well-trained) mortal ingredient was lost in Walt's makeup. At bottom he was tellurian, telluride, whatever the word may be. See Conan Doyle's gorgeous burlesque, 'When the Earth Screamed.' You can take that tale (which Walt would have called 'cute') as a quite unconscious parable of 'Leaves of Grass.' The description of the palpitant earth-jelly, uttering its appalling yell of outrage (and spattering the inquisitive pressmen with grievous muck) is a neat precis of the career of the 'Leaves.'"
160. The U.S. has issued a set of ten stamps showing Al Hirschfeld's caricatures of stars of the silent screen. Some of them appeared in Sherlockian roles, including Charlie Chaplin (as Billy in William Gillette's plays "Sherlock Holmes" and "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes") and Buster Keaton (in the film "Sherlock Jr."). Can you identify another one?
161. Apr 94 #3: There was some interesting Conan Doyle manuscript material in an auction at Sotheby's in New York on Dec. 10, 1993. The lots and prices (including the 15% buyer's premium): four letters, with one to Greenhough Smith about "The Man with the Watches" ($2,070); the poem "The Ballad of the Eurydice" (3 leaves) (unsold); "A Shadow Before" (14 leaves) ($3,738); "The Home Coming" (17 leaves) ($3,738); "The Last Galley" (10 leaves) ($3,163); "The Last of the Legions" (9 leaves) ($3,738); "The Vital Message" (67 leaves) ($6,900); and "The Bully of Brocas Court" (27 leaves) ($7,475). According to the catalog, the material was the "Property of a California Collector."
162. Lawrence E. Spivak died on Mar. 9. He founded and produced and served as a panelist on "Meet the Press" (the longest-running program in the history of television); the program debuted on Nov. 6, 1947, and still is one of NBC's most important news shows. Jon Lellenberg has reminded me that Spivak was at the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars in 1943, and it was not merely as a curious onlooker. Spivak had been the publisher of The American Mercury since 1939, and the Mercury Press was the publisher of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine from its first issue in 1941 until 1954, when he decided to work full-time on his television series. The Mystery Writers of America gave him their Raven award in 1981 for launching EQMM.
163. The third silent-screen star who appeared in a Sherlockian role is Harold Lloyd, who played Tonga on stage in "The Sign of the Four" in 1912 (in a stock-company production of Charles P. Rice's play at the Grand Theatre in San Diego).
164. Don Hobbs reports that a set of THE CROWBOROUGH EDITION is available from Barber's Book Store, at 215 West 8th Street, Fort Worth, TX 76102 (800-327-5471). Brian Perkins is the proprietor of the store, and the set and its dust jackets are in very fine condition, and the price is $2,000. The set

- is the last "authorized" collection of Conan Doyle's works, in 24 volumes published in 1930, and the first volume was signed by the author (and in 1930 you could have bought the set from the publisher for $240). And if you call or write, Brian Perkins would like to know you read about it here.
165. Jim Vogelsang reports that Beethoven and Sarah Rose Karr (stars of the film "Beethoven's 2nd") are wearing deerstalkers on the cover of FT Magazine #1 (which has minor Sherlockian content in its puzzles-for-kids, and may still be available free at McDonald's).
  166. Graham Sudbury has proposed creating a society called SKIRMISH (an acronym for Sherlockians Keen to Inhibit and Rectify Mendacious Identifications of Sherlock Holmes) for those who would like to join in identifying and gently exposing "obvious misstatements" about Holmes, such as a suggestion in the Boston Sunday Globe's review of THE CAVEMAN'S VALENTINE that author "George Dawes Green has invented just about the most original amateur sleuth since Sherlock Holmes." Graham's address is Box 52062, Tulsa, OK 74152.
  167. The latest issue of The Sherlock Holmes Review features a long interview with Nicholas Meyer, and "Some Thoughts on Holmes and Raffles" by Edward and Karen Lauterbach, and costs $6.00 postpaid from Steven T. Doyle, Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077 (subscriptions cost $20.00 for four issues).

  168. Apr 94 #4: It has been a while since I mentioned a fine catalog of Bargain Books from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031-5000). One book still available at a bargain price, I'm reminded by Gordon Kelley, is William S. Baring-Gould's THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES in a one-volume edition published by Outlet Books in 1992; it's item 83744X, and the price is $19.95 (plus $3.00 shipping per order). And Hamilton's catalogs always are packed with other bargains.
  169. Thanks to Kevin Reed for the report on the imaginative promotion of the Santa Anita Derby on Apr. 9. Fans could wear buttons proclaiming that they liked one of the three favorites: Brocco, Valiant Nature, and Tabasco Cat. Brocco was the winner, with Tabasco Cat second and Strodes Creek third. And Valiant Nature wasn't even there, having been withdrawn and shipped east for the Bluegrass and the Kentucky Derby (the latter on May 7).
  170. Cherie Jung reports that the May issue of her magazine Over My Dead Body will have a story on the Sherlock Holmes pub and a short profile of Jeremy Brett. Box 1778, Auburn, WA 98071, is the address; $5.00 (or $12.00 for four issues).
  171. Ellery Queen's THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1944) quickly achieved almost legendary status, for two reasons: one being that Adrian Conan Doyle managed to force Frederic Dannay to stop publication of the book after only five printings (making the book difficult to add to one's collection), and the other being that it was such a splendid anthology, of material selected with expertise and enthusiasm and ably presenting a wide range of excellent Sherlockiana. And Marvin Kaye's THE GAME IS AFOOT (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1994; 512 pp., $24.95) is in many ways a better anthology, and not just because Kaye has been able to select material from an additional fifty years. Kaye also has included some of the best Sherlockian scholarship (or pseudo-scholarship), and has found a publisher that will see that the book is widely distributed. As it deserves to be: it is packed with wonderful writing and grand fun, and offers new material as well as reprints of old favorites. And while Kaye has not included everything that he might have, that's only because he hopes to edit a second anthology, which is nice news indeed. Recommended.
  172. John Brunner's MUDDLE EARTH (New York: Ballantine/Del Rey, 1993; 275 pp., $3.99) offers a look at "the most unlikely place in the known and unknown universe" and includes among its characters "the adolescent Sherlock Holmes and his Biker Street Irregulars." It's an amusing fantasy, full of awful puns and some really weird characters, few of whom are what they seem to be (or even what they seem to think they are).
  173. G. C. Burner's short Sherlockian pastiche "The Puzzle of Graceland Manor" (first-place winner for Elvian prose) was published in the first issue of The International Journal of Elvisology and the Elvian Era, published by the Florida First Coast Writers' Festival and the Florida Community College at Jacksonville. You can request a copy of the 8-page journal from Howard Denson, FCCJ North Campus, 4501 Capper Road, Jacksonville, FL 32218.

  174. Apr 94 #5: The latest issues of The Parish Magazine (semi-annual) and ACD (annual) are at hand from The Arthur Conan Doyle Society, with interesting articles and essays, and reports. ACD's contents include Conan Doyle's "The Wild Geese: The Story of the Irish Brigades in France" (a fascinating lecture published only once before, in an Irish newspaper in 1954) and Cameron Hollyer's detailed article about the play "Angels of Darkness" (Conan Doyle's own dramatization, without Holmes, of "A Study in Scarlet"). Society membership costs £14.00 (or $27.00) to U.S. addresses (or £19.00/ $35.00 airmail); the address is: Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester CH4 0JG, England.
  175. Paul Giovanni's play "The Crucifer of Blood" is on the summer schedule of The Phoenix Theatre at the Performing Arts Center at Purchase College in Westchester County, from July 20 through Aug. 7. Discount rates are available to groups of ten or more, and the group sales director is Jane Katz, at 5 Barker Avenue #407, White Plains, NY 10601 (914-681-9398).
  176. Andy Peck reports that the Mystery Guild is offering its members a Sherlock Holmes key chain ($7.95) and a Sherlock Holmes letter opener ($14.95). The picture of the letter opener is too dark to reproduce here; the Guild's address is Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206.
  177. Further to the report on plans for a meeting of The Practical, But Limited, Geologists on June 15 at the Denver Press Club (Mar 94 #5), the contact for more information about the meeting (honoring the world's first forensic geologist) is Guy Mordeaux, 705 Forth Street, Castle Rock, CO 80104.
  178. Comic books are getting to be extremely strange. THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE is a sort-of-related set that tells a series of stories that (at the beginning and the end, at any rate) involve two dead boy-detectives who are influenced to some degree (although not really all that much) by Sherlock Holmes. There are seven comic books in the series, which is published by Vertigo/DC, and they cost $3.95 each.
  179. The latest news about Jeremy Brett is that the Daily Mail reported on Apr. 11 that he was out of hospital to attend a party in Manchester marking the tenth anniversary of the Granada series, having lost 49 pounds and feeling much better, and planning to go into a mental home for a week or ten days. If you would like to know why lithium can be dangerous, take a look in the PHYSICIANS' DESK REFERENCE at a library or a your doctor's office, to see what the book says about lithium carbonate in the sections on WARNING and DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION and ADVERSE REACTIONS.
  180. If you don't want to wait until 1985, or whenever WGBH-TV decides to broadcast the newest one-hour Granada shows on "Mystery!" here, and if you are willing to wait in line, so to speak, Jennie C. Paton has added "The Three Gables" and "The Dying Detective" (and possibly more of the six new shows, by the time you receive this newsletter) to her video lending library, and is now accepting reservations. You can write to Jennie for additional information (please enclose a #10 SASE) at 206 Loblolly Lane, Statesboro, GA 30458; her e-mail address is <jennie_paton@mailgate.armstrong.edu>.

  181. Apr 94 #6: Mel Hughes has spotted a report that "Return to the Lost World" is available on videocassette from WorldVision at $59.95 (and it is likely that "The Lost World" also is available). The two shows were produced in 1991 by Harmony Gold (the company that made the two mini-series with Christopher Lee as Holmes and Patrick Macnee as Watson), and were intended for similar syndication on television, but were overtaken by the far more spectacular dinosaurs in "Jurassic Park" (Harmony Gold pretty much had pieces of life-size models, with feet thumping through the underbrush, and heads poking through the trees). The Harmony Gold series stars John Rhys-Davies as Challenger and David Warner as Summerlee (they're the only name actors in the casts); I've seen both of the shows on preview cassettes, and they're worth renting, if only to see what dinosaurs films used to be like.
  182. Bill Vande Water reports an article by John Devonport about the Battle of Maiwand (with mention of Conan Doyle) in Military History (June 1994); the magazine's address is 602 South King Street #300, Leesburg, VA 22075.

183. Richard M. Nixon died on Apr. 22. His first known contact with the world of Sherlockians was the telegram of greetings he sent to the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars in 1956, and which was noted with disdain by Rex Stout in the June 1961 issue of The Baker Street Journal. The investigation of Watergate launched a flood of Sherlockian allusions in editorials and in editorial cartoons. But Nixon did know about Sherlock Holmes: Julie Baumgold reported in New York (June 9, 1980) that he had told her, "I don't care for novels, and mysteries bore me except on TV, and since Holmes is off, what is there?" He also found an appropriate context for a mention of "Sherlock Holmes's dog that did not bark" in his book 1999: VICTORY WITHOUT WAR (1988, page 76).
184. The Scowfers and Molly Maguires will hold their workshop/playshop/conference/ seminar/funfest (that's Ted Schulz's cover-all-the-bases description) at Stanford University on Aug. 3-7. Details are available from Charlotte A. Erickson, 1029 Judson Drive, Mountain View, CA 94040-2310.
185. A man in Sherlockian costume is shown swinging on a bordello chandelier on the cover of Spider Robinson's LADY SLINGS THE BOOZE (New York: Ace Books, 1993; 257 pp., $4.99); there was an Ace Books hardcover edition in 1992, possibly with the same artwork on the dust jacket. Holmes isn't a character in the book (although Ralph von Wau Wau is), but there are occasional Canonical allusions in an amusing story set in the best little whorehouse in the universe.
186. Dave Galerstein and Bill Nadel have reported that the Walter Reade Theater (apparently at or near Lincoln Center in New York) will screen Rathbone's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) on May 19 (2:00/5:15/8:30) and Brook's "Sherlock Holmes" (1932) on May 24 (5:05/8:05). Admirers of fine actors who have portrayed Moriarty well have rated Ernest Torrence highly, and properly, since he glowered just as well as Lyn Harding or Eric Porter ever did, and Torrence does his glowering in "Sherlock Holmes" (and George Zucco is a nicely suave Moriarty in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes").

187. May 94 #1: The "Sherlock Holmes" series of briar pipes launched in 1987 by Peterson of Dublin is still available, and at discount prices. There are seven different shapes, and various finishes, and a pipe-rack, and a flier is available from Gideon D. Hill <gideonhill221@earthlink.net>.
188. Jon Lellenberg has supplied a copy of Godfrey Smith's column in the Sunday Times (Apr. 10), reporting that Kevin Charles, now Sherlock Holmes' secretary at Abbey National, receives and answers about 20 letters a week, and has occasional visitors, with whom he is happy to shake hands ("often, he says, emotional Japanese fans are overcome by the honour").
189. This month's contribution to Canonical philately offers more roses, on one of the stamps in our new booklet showing summer garden flowers.
190. Queen Elizabeth II and President Francois Mitterand officially inaugurated the Channel Tunnel on May 6. The 31.4-mile tunnel cost $16 billion to build, and it has been 81 years since Sir Arthur Conan Doyle voiced support for the project ("The matter seems to me to be of such importance that I grudge every day that passes without something having been done to bring it to realization," he suggested in a letter published in The Times on Mar. 11, 1913). At least four more months will be needed before regular traffic begins between Folkestone and Calais on the Eurotunnel car trains (passengers will remain in their cars during the 35-minute trip, which will cost from $330 (in winter) to $460 (in summer)).
191. The spring 1994 issue of Scarlet Street offers the usual interesting mix of mystery and horror, including a long interview with Edward Hardwicke, and David Stuart Davies' fond farewell to the Granada series (he was there when they demolished the Baker Street rooms). $20.00 a year (four issues), from Scarlet Street Inc., Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
192. The spring-summer catalog from The Mysterious Bookshop has three pages of in-print Sherlockiana, and other items such as the special edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (published by Doubleday in 1953 with Conan Doyle's signature ($2,750) and a sketchbook with scores of non-Sherlockian sketches by Sidney Paget ($350); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019.
193. And the spring 1994 issue of The Armchair Detective includes an interesting article by Gary Lovisi proposing that the first hardboiled detective ("this most American of all characters") can be found in a book written by a British author: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the detective being Birdy Edwards, in THE VALLEY OF FEAR. Quarterly ($26.00 a year); same address.
194. "A hobby is only really amusing when it becomes an obsession," according to H. Rider Haggard (quoted recently by John Ruyle). John also reports that he has now completed his verse exegesis of the Canon, with THE AGENT'S LAST BOW: THE 'CASE-BOOK' RE-CASED. There are 53 verses in the latest pressing from Pequod, which costs $40 (cloth) or $18 (paper), from John Ruyle, 521 Vincent Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
195. May 94 #2: LEAVES FROM THE COPPER BEECHES (1959) and MORE LEAVES FROM THE COPPER BEECHES (1976) are among the best of the anthologies of scion-society scholarship, and they are still in print from The Sons of the Copper Beeches. The second issue of LEAVES (in paper covers) costs $5.00, and the first issue of MORE LEAVES (in boards) costs $15.00 (prices include postage), from James G. Jewell, 1012 Waltham Road, Berwyn, PA 19312.
196. David Langton died on Apr. 25. He was best known for his portrayal of Lord Bellamy in the television series "Upstairs, Downstairs" from 1971 to 1976, and he was seen as Sir Charles Baskerville in Ian Richardson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1983) and as Sir James Damery in Granada's version of "The Illustrious Client" (1991).
197. Stephen F. Rosenberg (3 Greenwood Place #307, Pikesville, MD 21208) offers a Sherlock Holmes lapel pin, in black plastic outlined in gold; $4.00 postpaid.
198. Basil Copper continues to add to his series of Solar Pons pastiches, with THE EXPLOITS OF SOLAR PONS (Minneapolis: Fedogan & Bremer, 1993; 239 pp., $24.00). The book has four new novellas that pay skillful tribute to August Derleth's style, and an attractive dust jacket and four full-page illustrations by Stephanie Hawks; the publisher's address is 700 Washington Avenue #50, Minneapolis, MN 55414 (a limited edition also is available, priced at $60.00).
199. The busts of four different people are mentioned in the Canon. Try naming those four different people.
200. Michael Ross reports that there's an amusing Sherlock Holmes figurine in the German "playmobil" series (the most popular series of toys for some 25 years, and on sale throughout Europe); the figurine is 7.5 cm high, made of plastic with movable limbs, and available from Michael Ross (Bendheide 65, D-47906 Kempen, Germany) for DM 10.00 (or $6.00) sent by surface mail (U.S. dollars in currency only, please).
201. And Michael reports that Sherlockiana continues to appear in German: M. J. Trow's LESTRADE UND JACK THE RIPPER [LESTRADE AND THE RIPPER] (Rowohlt, DM 12.90 paperback); Mark Frost's SIEBEN [THE LIST OF SEVEN] (v.g.s., DM 44.00 cloth); SHERLOCK HOLMES [a German version of Gibson's card game with Paget artwork] (Schmidt Spiele, DM 30.00); and an inexpensive nine-volume edition of the Canon, in a faithful translation and with annotations (Haffmans, DM 49.80). Michael can also supply these, but warns that additional postage costs could be expensive.
202. Robert C. Hess (559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwaters, NY 11718) offers a new sales-list of Sherlockian collectibles, including a just-released pair of Holmes-and-Watson bookends from Rohn Porcelain ($185.00 including shipping and insurance) and other interesting posters, pins, advertising, etc.
203. Reported: Barnes & Noble have published their own edition (with a new dust jacket) of A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPENDIUM, edited by Peter Haining ($7.98); the book was published by W. H. Allen in 1980, and by Castle Books in 1981, and is an interesting anthology of reprinted Sherlockiana.

204. May 94 #3: As for those four different people whose busts are mentioned in the Canon, they are: Sherlock Holmes (of course) and Napoleon (of course) and Athene (Milverton's bookcase had "a marble bust of Athene on the top") and Brenda Tregennis (the photograph "showed the bust and face of a very beautiful woman"). David McCallister spotted an advertisement in The New York (May 2) for a reproduction of a bust of Pallas Athena (from an original in the Louvre) offered (for $260 postpaid) by Eleganza, 3217 West Smith #145, Seattle, WA 98199. The advertisement notes that Pallas Athena was the protectress of heroes who fought against evil, which makes her an interesting choice to decorate Milverton's study.
205. And if you are now wondering about Brenda Tregennis' bust, please keep in mind that our language has changed a bit from what it was in Victorian and Edwardian times.
206. Further to earlier reports (Nov 93 #3 and Mar 94 #7) on plans for a laserdisc version of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), Jennie Paton reports that her copy has arrived, with the film letterboxed on two discs, and offers some (but not all) of the sequences cut from the film, and music and other nice material. The set costs $55.48 postpaid from Crane's Laserdisc, 15251 Beach Boulevard, Westminster, CA 92683 (800-624-3078); or you can pay $59.95 (plus shipping) from Movies Unlimited, 6736 Castor Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19149 (800-523-0823).
207. Spotted by Mel Hughes: a report in Daily Variety (May 5) on recent rulings by the Classification & Ratings Administration of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, which assigned "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (issued by MGM/UA Home Video) a PG-13 rating ("for brief drug-related plot material").
208. Forecast: THE PILTDOWN CONFESSION, by Irwin Schwartz ("a mildly entertaining yet ill-conceived fictional solution" to the Piltdown hoax, with Conan Doyle as a major character, but apparently not as the culprit), from Wyatt/St. Martin's in July ($20.95).
209. The Folio Society has completed its version of the Canon: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE COMPLETE NOVELS is a four-volume boxed set with illustrations by Francis Mosley, and an interesting Introduction by Michael S. Cox (producer of the early programs in the Granada series). Cox discusses the novels, and offers some intriguing insights into the series (which he had hoped would begin with "The Sign of Four"). In his comments on "The Hound of the Baskervilles" he suggests sadly that their version "limps home in third place" behind the films made by Basil Rathbone (1939) and by Peter Cushing (1959). Both boxed sets presumably are still available (but at $149.00 each) from Folio Books, 2323 Randolph Avenue, Avenel, NJ 07001.
210. The Great Detective and The Prince of Darkness were allies in Fred Saberhagen's THE HOLMES-DRACULA FILE (1978), set in 1897, and his SEANCE FOR A VAMPIRE (New York: Tor Books, 1994; 285 pp., $21.95) brings them together again in 1903; the story is told by both Dracula and Watson, and involves pirates, mesmerism, executions by hanging, stolen treasure, murder, kidnapping, revenge, seduction, women taken by force, and attempts to materialize the spirits of the dead. "I know what you are going to say," Dracula suggests, "everything in the above list is a bit out of the ordinary."
211. May 94 #4: Sherlockians who were impressed by that Sherlockian caricature of Valiant Nature (Apr 94 #4) did well only if they didn't bet on him in the Kentucky Derby on May 7. The winner was Go For Gin, followed by Strodes Creek and Blumin Affair. Valiant Nature "gave way readily" and was 13th, finishing 15 lengths back.
212. Noted by Pat Ward: an excellent still from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) in HOLLYWOOD DOGS, edited by J. C. Soares (San Francisco: Collins, 1993). And Laurie Langbauer's long article on "The City, the Everyday, and Boredom: The Case of Sherlock Holmes" in Differences: A Journal of Feminist Cultural Studies 5.3 (1993) 80-120; noting discussion by others of how many wives Watson had, and how many times he was wounded, she suggests that "the connection here between women and wounding goes without saying, but what is worth comment is the uncertainty that attends it: through it, Doyle seems to be at least acknowledging that such misogyny (even as he practices it) is actually an unsuccessful attempt to pin down and contain vague threats, to ground amorphous categories."
213. The "Rache Road Rally" from Racine to Sheboygan, planned by The STUD Sherlockian Society for May 1, has been postponed until Oct. 9 to coincide with their celebration of Sherlock Holmes' birthday. Additional information is available from Donald B. Izban, 5334 Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago, IL 60639.
214. Don also reports that the third annual Watsonian Weekend (celebrating Dr. Watson and the Battle of Maiwand) will be held in Arlington Height, Ill., on July 8-10, featuring a horse race, a dinner, a collegium, and a pistol competition; additional details are available from Robert W. Hahn, 2707 South 7th Street, Sheboygan, WI 53081.
215. Some interesting Sherlockiana is available from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London: neckties, scarves, back issues of The Sherlock Holmes Journal, recent handbooks, and (from this year's "Back to Baker Street" celebration) mugs and coasters; a sales list is available from Mrs. Lynne Godden, Apple Tree Cottage, Smarden, Ashford, Kent, TN27 8QE, England.
216. The Williamstown Theatre Festival (in Williamstown, Mass.) is celebrating its 40th anniversary this summer, and Hugh Leonard's "The Mask of Moriarty" is scheduled for July 6-17. Described as a "wonderful send-up of the Sherlock Holmes legend," the play premiered in Dublin in 1985, with Tom Baker as Holmes, and was done in Leicester in 1987 and Kenilworth in 1993. This is its American premiere (cast not yet announced), and the box-office phone number is 413-597-3400.
217. Gordon E. Kelley has long been interested in Sherlockian films, radio, and television, and his new SHERLOCK HOLMES: SCREEN AND SOUND GUIDE (Metuchen: Scarecrow Press, 1994; 316 pp., $37.50) offers a splendid look at the long history of Sherlock Holmes in all those areas, and on records and tapes and computer disks. The coverage is up-to-date, and the entries often include detailed lists of casts and credits. It can be frustrating to see how much one has missed, not only older material but also recent television programs that have come and gone (but of course many of them may return on all those cable-channels-to-come). The publisher's address is Box 4167, Metuchen, NJ 08840 (800-537-7107); $40.00 postpaid, and they take plastic.
218. May 94 #5: The Sixth International Holmes Games will be held in Vancouver this year, on Sept. 17-18. The events have not been announced, but in years past have included "the pursuit of a chaste yeoman's daughter across the moor," and there will be a dinner, a formal debate, and other festivities; more information is available from Elsa Haffenden, 1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, B.C. V7P 3C6, Canada
219. That very nice copy of the first edition of THE LOST WORLD, inscribed by Conan Doyle to his wife Jean, once owned by Richard Manney, and auctioned at Sotheby's in New York in Oct. 1991, is on the market again, offered by The 19th Century Shop, 1047 Hollins Street, Baltimore, MD 21223 (410-539-2586) for $9,500. The buyer at the auction paid $4,950 for the book.
220. Don Hobbs reports a new (1993) addition to the Canonical series issued by the Reader's Digest Association: THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with excellent illustrations by David Johnson and an Afterword by Philip A. Shreffler (the contents consist of HIS LAST BOW and four of the apocryphal tales). Other volumes in the series are worth looking for in book sales: A STUDY IN SCARLET/THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1986), THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1987), THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1988), and THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1991).

221. Victoria Gill reports: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RAILWAY MANIAC, a pastiche by Barrie Roberts (London: Constable, 1994; £14.00). DR. SHERLOCK HOLMES V CECHACH, by Rudolf Cechura (Prague: Nase Vojsko, 1993; 42 kr); pastiche (in Czech). 2ND CULPRIT, edited by Liza Cody (London: Chatto & Windus, 1993; £12.00); with a reprint of Peter Lovesey's pastiche "The Curious Computer".
222. CREEPERS: BRITISH HORROR AND FANTASY IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY, edited by Clive Bloom (London: Pluto, 1993; £9.00); with Victor Sage's essay on "The Speckled Band".
223. John Aidiniantz is still pursuing his campaign to control 221B Baker Street (according to an article in the Daily Telegraph on May 10). The Sherlock Holmes Museum (at 239) now argues that refusing to allow the Museum to use the 221B address is threatening jobs: a mail-order business, gaining extra credibility from the address, would eventually create 400 jobs, the Museum claims. But the Westminster Council opposes a change, and Abbey National is "determined to hold on" (chairman Lord Tugendhat is a great fan of the detective).
224. The latest catalog from Cerebro (Box 327, East Prospect, PA 17603) is full of cigar-box labels, including the colorful "Sherlock Holmes" outer label (about 4" square) at $18.00. Their telephone number is 800-695-2235, and they take plastic.
225. I've been told that MY DEAREST HOLMES, by Rohase Piercy (London: Gay Men's Press, 1988; 142 pp., £3.95) is still available from Alyson Publications, 40 Plympton Street, Boston, MA 02118 ($7.95). As reviewed earlier (Apr 88 #1), the book is homosexual in its intellectual and emotional approach, but it is neither erotic nor pornographic; it is a two-part pastiche, with the first half presenting Watson's account of a new case in 1887, and the second offering a thoroughly revised report on the events that preceded and followed the fateful journey to the Reichenbach.

226. May 94 #6: Ardent Sherlockians need not be told how important film preservation is. And it's nice indeed that the UCLA Film and Television Archive has assigned priority status to the 12 Sherlock Holmes films made by Universal in the 1940s (the nitrate masters are now on the verge of deterioration). Lab costs are about $15,000 per film (that's $180,000 for the series), and your donations, large or small, are welcome. The development officer is Cornelia Emerson, UCLA Film and Television Archive (FX48), 302 East Melnitz, 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90024-1323.
227. Warren Randall notes that A BOOK OF DAYS FOR THE LITERARY YEAR, edited by Neal T. Jones (published by Thames and Hudson) has entries for Holmes and Watson and Conan Doyle (and it's a perennial, so you don't need to buy one every year). And FODOR'S TORONTO 1993 recommends the Metropolitan Toronto Library as housing "the finest public collection of Holmesiana anywhere."
228. A brief report, extracted from a longer report by Chris Redmond, on events at the end-of-April meeting of The Arthur Conan Doyle Society in Toronto, organized by Christopher and Barbara Roden, with about 80 people on hand, including two members of the Conan Doyle family: Georgina Doyle (widow of the Brig. John Doyle, son of ACD's brother Innes) and Charles Foley (grandson of ACD's sister Ida). Speakers spoke on Doylean subjects, and Michael Coren discussed the 250,000-word biography he is writing about Conan Doyle, with publication planned for the fall of 1995, with a press run of 120,000 copies in eight languages; asked about his opinions of Conan Doyle, Coren called him "the best of Empire" and spoke of his "basic decency".
229. One session, led by the Rodens, traced the Society's history and offered enthusiastic comment on its future. A member of the audience asked whether (and if so, why) there was animosity between the Society and the Sherlockian world; Catherine Cooke (a member of the council of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London) said firmly that she thinks there is no such hostility, apart perhaps from a few misguided individuals, and Christopher Roden spoke of last year's controversy in print over remarks he was said to have made about Sherlockians' preferring for food and drink over scholarship (he said that an intervention into that debate from the head of the Baker Street Irregulars was particularly unfortunate).
230. Three publications were issued at the meeting: WESTERN WANDERINGS (articles by ACD about his trip to Canada in 1914) costs £17.00 (or $29.00); and THE FUTURE OF CANADIAN LITERATURE (a lecture delivered during that trip) costs £8.00 (or $13.00). DR. DOYLE OF UPPER WIMPOLE STREET (presenting evidence that ACD's ophthalmological office was not, after all, in Devonshire Place, but rather in Upper Wimpole Street) may also be available (price unknown). Prices postpaid, from Christopher Roden, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester, Cheshire CH4 0JG, England.
231. "The famous detective solves crimes while concealing her true sexual identity" in Therese Lentz's new play "221 B Baker Street" now playing (through June 19) at the Group Repertory Theatre, 10900 Burbank Blvd., North Hollywood, Calif.; the box-office telephone number is 818-769-7529.
232. Jun 94 #1: Simon & Schuster's audiocassette THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES #24 ($12.00) offers two more of the grand old Rathbone/Bruce radio shows, from scripts by Denis Green and Anthony Boucher, with new introductions by Sarah Marshall (daughter of Herbert Marshall and Edna Best, one of the producers of the series). "The Accidental Murderess" (26 Nov 45) has been available on records and cassettes (with lower fidelity), but "The Blarney Stone" (18 Mar 46) is new to audio.
233. K.C. Berger offers an autograph letter signed by Conan Doyle, written from 15 Buckingham Palace Mansions to a Mr. Bligh Bond (likely his fellow-spiritualist Frederick Bligh Bond), for $1,150. For full details, send her an SASE (1555 Belford Road, Reno, NV 89509-3097).
234. Michael Ross reports that the first edition of the JUBILAUMSBIBLIOGRAPHIE DEUTSCHER SHERLOCKIANA 1894-1994 (Apr 94 #1) sold out quickly; if you have not ordered already, don't. Von Herder Airguns are preparing a supplement, and an expanded second edition for those who missed the first edition.
235. The Brothers Three of Moriarty will convene at the Albuquerque Press Club on July 16, for their traditional Col. Sebastian Moran Memorial Trap Shoot, an event which may or may not mark the end of Moran's extended term in prison. The Parole Board will award a prize for the best letter or speech offered supporting a parole for Col. Moran; John Bennett Shaw is chairman of the parole board, and letters should be sent to C. Bryan Gassner, P.O. Drawer G, Corrales, NM 87048-0178.
236. C. Bryan Gassner also presides over The Shadows of the Elm at the Arroyo del Oso Elementary School in Albuquerque, continuing to help her students in presenting half-hour dramatizations of the Canon. This year's story was "The Copper Beeches", and it was videotaped. A cassette is available (with a selection of out-takes titled "May God Save Us from Colour and Life") for $8.00 postpaid from Mrs. Gassner at the same address.
237. WHO'S WHERE: A HANDY REFERENCE GUIDE TO PERSONS IN THE HOLMESIAN CANON (52 pp., spiral bound) is available for $6.50 postpaid from Benton Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222. Ben also offers $5.00 face value of old commemorative postage stamps to use on your mail, for $5.50 postpaid.
238. The Mini-Tonga Scion Society now has 72 members, and will meet informally on Aug. 3, during the N.A.M.E. national meeting in Anaheim. Calif. Issue #27 of The Tonga Times offers eight pages of news (including instructions on making a miniature dark lantern); membership costs $6.00 a year (with three issues of the newsletter, and back issues are available), and if you would like to have more information about the society, send a #10 SASE to Carol Wenk (Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107).
239. Cleadon Hall Collectibles (31-A Maple Avenue, Barrie, Ont. L4N 1R7, Canada) has sent a sales-list announcing that they are the exclusive distributors for the commemorative Sherlockian plate and the Reichenbach jug designed by Deirdre Keetley at her Studio Gallery in London. Other S'ian collectibles (mugs, thimbles, bells, etc.) are available in quantities of 12 or more.

240. Jun 94 #2: In his new book THE CATS OF THISTLE HILL: A MOSTLY PEACEABLE KINGDOM (New York: Simon and Schuster, 1994; 236 pp., $22.00), Roger A. Caras tells many amusing stories, including one about the late cartoonist Charles Addams. Caras and Addams once were among the judges at a charity pet show for children, where Addams whispered that he wanted "to give first prize to that ugly little boy with the ugly little turtle" because "they look just alike." Caras pointed out that they shouldn't, since the turtle was an Eastern box turtle, a threatened species that was locally endangered, and it was illegal for the ugly little boy to have it. Addams thought for a moment; then his face brightened, passing quickly from contemplation to enlightenment. "If it really is illegal for him to have it, let's give him first prize, and then hang him."
241. Jerry Devine died on May 20. He was an actor-producer whose film career started in silent films, and he played Billy in John Barrymore's Sherlock Holmes (1922). He later turned to writing, and had two plays produced on Broadway, and then wrote for radio, contributing to "Mr. District Attorney" and producing and directing "This Is Your FBI".
242. The 24th running of The Silver Blaze (Southern Division), at Pimlico on May 28, was won easily by the appropriately-named Gotcha Cornered, who finished nine lengths ahead of Every Nuance. Lynda Blankenship, of The Giant Rats of Massillon, awarded the trophy on behalf of the Washington and Baltimore scions; The Silver Blaze was the first race she had attended or bet on, and by nice coincidence she had bet on the winner.
243. Richard Hughes, one of the grand old men of journalism in south-east Asia, and founder of The Baritsu Society in Tokyo in 1948, appeared as two different characters in books by two different authors (as Dikko Henderson in Ian Fleming's YOU ONLY LIVE TWICE and as Bill Crow in John le Carre's THE HONOURABLE SCHOOLBOY). There are many other stories told about him, some by himself in his autobiography FOREIGN DEVIL (London: Andre Deutsch, 1972) and others by Norman McSwan in THE MAN WHO READ THE EAST WIND (Kenthurst: Kangaroo Press, 1988). And there's a new one told by his son Dick Hughes, in his autobiography DON'T YOU SING (just published in Australia, according to a story in the Washington Times on May 27): in the early 1950s Richard Hughes was reporting to The Sunday Times from Tokyo, and was contacted by the Soviets, who asked him to obtain information for them; Hughes reported this to Ian Fleming, who informed MI6 (Britain's foreign intelligence service) and for some time Hughes sold the Soviets misinformation prepared by MI6. And Hughes used the code name "Altamont".
244. The International Stamp Collectors Society (Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408) is offering older Sherlockian postal material, such as the four stamps and one souvenir sheet from Turks & Caicos Islands (1984) for $24.95; and the set of four booklets from Great Britain (1987-88) with S'ian covers designed by Andrew Davidson (who also designed the recent set honoring Sherlock Holmes) for $39.95. Write for their illustrated fliers.
245. Arthur and Joyce Ann Liebman will guide their 14-day tour "In the Footsteps of Sherlock, Dracula, and Agatha" in England on Aug. 6-20, according to a flier forwarded by Gordon Kelley. Their phone number is 516-621-6008, or you can contact Contemporary Tours, 580 Plandome Road, Manhasset, NY 10030.

246. Jun 94 #3: Cliff Goldfarb notes that the Quality Paperback Book Club summer selection is THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, in three volumes at CA$23.95 (members in the U.S. will likely pay about $17.50). The club describes the volumes as "definitive editions" with illustrations by Sidney Paget, and the club's "own guide to Holmes' world." The covers reprint the Frederic Dorr Steele portrait of Holmes that was used in 1904 on the covers of CONAN DOYLE'S BEST BOOKS (D673a) in 1904. The club is for members only, but it's easy to join; the address is: Camp Hill, PA 17011-9902.
247. Sorry about that: the title of Barnes & Noble's reprint of Peter Haining's book (May 94 #2) is A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION (as Don Izban has noted). The book was published as A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPENDIUM in 1980 and 1981, and a different title was used for new reprint, possibly chosen by someone who didn't know or didn't care that A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION also is the title of a book by Michael and Mollie Hardwick. And no, book titles cannot be protected by copyright.
248. Jack Tracy has completed his westward trek, and is now at 2809 Wilmington Way, Las Vegas, NV 89102, will have Gaslight Publications unpacked soon.
249. "Cut out the poetry," Sherlock Holmes once said (severely), and it may well be that modern Sherlockians are heeding his advice, since we don't see that much new S'ian poetry. One recent (and interesting) exception is "Watson", one of six poems in Henry Knight's collection SUSPICIONS (Toronto: Childe Thursday, 1994; 102 pp., US$9.35 postpaid). The publisher's address is 29 Sussex Avenue, Toronto, Ont. M5S 1J6, Canada.
250. Russia now has an active Sherlockian society, and it is active indeed: The Ural Holmesian Society has dinner meetings, and a journal (Elementary, Watson!), and has published two volumes of THE ADVENTURES OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE SHERLOCK HOLMES (not reprints from the Canon, but rather anthologies of S'iana translated into Russian, and Russian scholarship, pastiches, and parodies), and they are now at work on a four-volume edition of the Russian misadventures of Sherlock Holmes. All in Russian, of course, and with fine illustrations, old and new. The society contact is Alexander Shaburov, Ul. Cherepanova 4-334, Ekaterinburg 620034, Russia.
251. "Enter the world of Norbertina Ninja Nanny, a mischievous cow in search of answers to the riddles of her past and Sleuth Sherrloch Sheltie, a budding computer criminology from Loch Sherr, Scotland." That's the blurb for "No. 11 Downing Street", a new CD-ROM disc game published by Silicon Alley and offered for $49.95 by CD-ROM Warehouse, 1720 Oak Street, Lakewood, NJ 08701 (800-237-6623), and reported by Jerry Bangham. They offer a double-speed CD-ROM drive for $199.00, and more CD-ROM discs than you can shake a panic button at.
252. Northstar/Arpad published the two issues of the comic book SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF MYSTERY AND SUSPENSE in 1992 (Aug 92 #3 and Nov 92 #5), and there was a third issue in Mar. 1993 that was unreported along the Sherlockian grapevine. The third issue (with Joe Gentile's story "The Sequestered Spy" and artwork by Eric and Kevin Masi) is available for $5.00 postpaid from Joe Gentile, 47 East Lincoln Highway, Frankfort, IL 60423.
253. Jun 94 #4: Philip Weller (6 Bramham Moor, Hill Head, Fareham, Hants. PO14 3RU, England) offers some new publications: ALPHABETICALLY, MY DEAR WATSON (a pocket reference book listing all the Canonical characters, with brief details and citations), $13.00 (surface)/$15.00 (air); THE COMPANY CANON: THE EMPTY HOUSE (a pocket edition, with the text of the story and almost 200 annotations), $7.00/$10.00; and THE HAMPSHIRE PAPERS (looseleaf reprints of Hampshire newspaper articles by and about Conan Doyle), $8.00/$10.00. Payment in currency, rather than checks, please.
254. John Aidiniantz has not abandoned his campaign to control mail that is sent to Sherlock Holmes at 221B Baker Street, according to an article by Stephen Ellis in the Sunday Times (June 5). Aidiniantz insists that his museum, at 239 Baker Street, is the "real" 221B, and want to sell memorabilia to those who write to Holmes. Abbey National's press spokesman noted that: "We have taken on the role of answering the letters to Sherlock Holmes, and do not plan to give it up without a fight. The people at the museum want to capitalise on them, while we just like the goodwill it creates." And the Post Office continues to agree with Abbey.
255. Jeremy Brett is alive and well and working, according to a report at hand from Melanie Hughes. Stuart Wavell noted in the [London] Sunday Times (May 22) that Brett is working with Joss Ackland and Elizabeth Hurley on a new television film "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" (scheduled to begin shooting in London this month).
256. Victoria Gill notes that Colin Dexter's collection MORSE'S GREATEST MYSTERY AND OTHER STORIES (London: Macmillan, 1993; £15.00) includes a reprint of his amusing pastiche "A Case of Mis-Identity" (first published in WINTER'S CRIMES 21, 1989).

257. Marilou Trask-Curtin is writing a biography of William Gillette, and would like to hear from people who knew him or saw him perform (or, since there aren't that many such people surviving) from people whose family or friends knew him or saw him perform. Her address is: R.D.4, Box 523, Oneonta, NY 13820 (607-432-8145).
258. Reported: MORIARTY'S RETURN: A GAME OF GLOBAL PURSUIT (for people who drive Macintosh computers), available at software stores (price unknown); you get to join the Diogenes Club Irregulars (an organization that was funded by a bequest in Mycroft Holmes' will) and use deductive reasoning while pursuing modern criminals; the game is made by Mysterium Tremendum (909 North Negley Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15206).
259. New sales-list at hand from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219), with summer specials: new Sherlockian sport-shorts, sweat-shirts, golf towels, and sports towels.
260. 3RD CULPRIT: AN ANNUAL OF CRIMES STORIES, edited by Liza Cody, Michael Z. Lewin, and Peter Lovesey (London: Chatto & Windus, 1994; 263 pp., £11.99), is the latest anthology of stories written by members of the Crime Writers Association; with an amusing Sherlockian allusion in H.R.F. Keating's story "Mr. Idd" and a delightful Sherlockian caption for one of the drawings contributed by "Clewsey" to the CWA's monthly newsletter Red Herrings.

261. Jun 94 #5: Further to the reports (Jun 93 #5 and Jul 93 #5) on the retrospective exhibit in Los Angeles of Mark Tansey's paintings, the show is now at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. And this time the show's keynote painting, displayed on a large banner outside the museum and on the exhibition's poster, is "Derrida Queries De Man" (which owes a great deal to Sidney Paget's illustration of Holmes and Moriarty at the Reichenbach). One art critic has suggested that the two figures in Tansey's painting are "locked in eternal combat over the meaning De Man gave to the meaning that Derrida gave to Rousseau." Bruce Parker, who saw the show in Los Angeles, has reported that the figures seem to be dancing, rather than fighting, and that the words dimly seen on the rocks consist of phrases and clauses from deconstructionist critical works by Derrida and De Man.
262. Henry Mancini died on June 14. He called himself simply a composer (and he titled his autobiography "Did They Mention the Music?"), and by the end of a career that began in 1952 he had won four Oscars, twenty Grammys, and many other awards. His Sherlockian films were "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986) and "Without a Clue" (1988), and in an interview that appeared in Holmes for the Holidays (Mar.-Apr. 1993) he recalled growing up with Sherlock Holmes, at the movies in the early 1940s.
263. The film based on Mark Frost's Conan Doyle pastiche THE LIST OF SEVEN isn't in production yet, but an item in Daily Variety (May 24) spotted by Melanie Hughes reports that the Mexican director Guillermo del Toro has been signed by Universal to rewrite Frost's script (and is likely to direct the film). Meanwhile, Frost is completing a sequel to his book, to be set in the U.S. early in this century and called THE SIX MESSIAHS.
264. Here's a smaller (the original is 19 x 40 in.) black-and-white reproduction of Steven Emmons' colorful pencil-ink-and-watercolor tribute to the BSI (in an edition of seven copies at $2,550.00 each). And his catalog (with color photocopies) of other available Sherlockian original art and printed posters costs $12.00. His address is 70-A Greenwich Avenue #206, New York, NY 10011 (212-627-4889).
265. Jun 94 #6: Reported by Peter Calamai: THE CASE OF THE ALL-CONSUMING FIRE, by Andy Lane (London: Virgin Books, 1994); a cross-over novel, in which Doctor Who and Sherlock Holmes investigate the disappearance of books from the most secret library in the world: the Library of Saint John the Beheaded in London. A good source for Virgin's "Doctor Who" series is Who Enterprises, Box 399, Station A, Toronto, Ont. M4G 4C3, Canada; Lane's book costs CA$10.91, or about US$10.20.
266. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner at the Denver Press Club on June 15, honoring (as usual) the world's first forensic geologist, and some of the visitors who were attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists were warmly welcomed by members of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients. Bill Dorn showed slides of the geology of Dartmoor (well, there were rocks in many of his pictures), but did not have any petrological specimens as souvenirs. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet next in Seattle on Oct. 25, and in Houston in March 1995.
267. "Sherlockians who have been President of the United States" is of necessity a limited number. Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman both were members of The Baker Street Irregulars, but otherwise one settles for what one can get, such as memories of childhood reading (and that's how Ronald Reagan made the list). Now Andy Peck reports a letter sent by Bill Clinton in April to a Mystery Writers of America symposium and workshop on "Mystery Writing is Murder". "Mystery novels have been one of my favorite forms of literature since I was a child," President Clinton said. "Sherlock Holmes' brilliant logic inspired me throughout my young adulthood."
268. A splendid collection of Conan Doyle letters and memorabilia was offered at auction at Sotheby's in New York on June 10: over 190 letters and cards to people such as Bram Stoker, Sir Henry Irving, Charles Frohman, and his publishers, and a signed photograph, a prescription that he wrote in 1898, and a signed menu from the Ladies Dinner given by the Authors Club (with Conan Doyle as chairman) in May 1901. Sotheby's estimate was $125,000-175,000; the highest bid was $70,000, and the lot was not sold.
269. The Mystery Writers of America held their annual dinner in New York on Apr. 27, and presented their Ellery Queen Award (for writing teams, editors, and publishers who have made an outstanding contribution to the mystery genre) to Otto Penzler. And the nominees for Edgars included "1994 Baker Street" (for the best mystery feature or mini-series) and Mark Frost's THE LIST OF SEVEN (for the best first mystery novel by an American author); the winners were "Prime Suspect 2" and Laurie King's A GRAVE TALENT (her second novel is THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE).
270. Late-breaking news: Paxton Whitehead will play Sherlock Holmes in "The Mask of Moriarty" at The Williamstown Theatre Festival (in Williamstown, Mass.) on July 6-17 (the box-office telephone number is 413-597-3400). This will be the first American production of Hugh Leonard's play, which premiered in Dublin in 1985; Whitehead has played Holmes before, in Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" in Buffalo and New York in 1978.

271. There wasn't time or space last month to do justice to the Sherlock Holmes conference in Bennington, Vt., on June 23-26. It was arranged by members of The Baker Street Breakfast Club with assistance from Bennington College and the Vermont Council on the Humanities, and had as its theme "Sherlock Holmes: Victorian Sleuth to Modern Hero". There were about 180 people on hand (the farthest-flung travelers being Masamichi Higurashi and his wife, en route from Japan to England); the papers varied from quite academic to thoroughly not (and there were enough papers for multiple sessions); and the sessions were held in the college's Visual and Performing Arts Center (which is grand indeed). And there were dealers, and a dinner and entertainment, and published authors (such as Nicholas Meyer, Edward B. Hanna, and Sena Jeter Naslund). One of the interesting aspects of the conference was what happened before the fun started: the local Sherlockians' outreach efforts, centered around the state's literacy program and working with the state's libraries to develop ways to help children and adults to learn to read. The locals also worked with local schools to encourage students to read and write mysteries (and contest-winners got to attend the conference and had a special session with Hanna). And the weekend was great fun.

272. Ronald B. De Waal's THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES has been published, and shipped to those who ordered it, and it is a truly welcome continuation of Ron's devoted bibliographic efforts. The good news (at least for those who have computers) is that the publisher, George Vanderburgh, has changed his mind since February, when he wrote that he had no plans to release the bibliography in ASCII at any time; now he states in an Editor's Note and elsewhere that he is planning an electronic edition. This is indeed important, because of the bad news: the ink-on-paper edition has no index, and thus is not accessible as a bibliography should be. Collectors and researchers who have found the indexes of personal names and titles in the previous volumes so useful will find nothing of that sort in this one.
273. Vanderburgh instead provides what he calls a "selective concordance" (it is really a selective word-list) that devotes far more attention to the letter "A" than to the other letters (thus there are citation numbers for each and every appearance of "April" and "August" but there are no entries for the other months). And because it is a word-list, the brothers Morley will be found undifferentiated under "Morley", rather than separately as Frank and Felix and Christopher. The word-list also is extremely idiosyncratic: it has "Arthur" and "Adrian", but not "Conan" or "Doyle" or "Denis" or "Jean"; there are entries for "Kiwanis" and "Kodak" but not for "Knox" (and it was Ronald A. Knox, after all, who did so much to launch our grand game); and one finds "Pageboys" but not "Paget".
274. Vanderburgh suggests that the electronic edition will "supersede the need for the compilation of a Title-Author Index"; while this may well be true for those who have computers, it will be of no help whatsoever to the many Sherlockians who do not, and who were expecting indexes similar to those in the first two volumes. Copies of THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES may still be available from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada), but purchasers should be aware that what is offered is essentially only an unindexed print-out of the data-base.

275. Jul 94 #2: Sherlock Crater, still waiting patiently for astronauts to return to the Moon, has not been forgotten. Edward C. Rochette has noted in an article in The Numismatist (July 1994) that the site of the crater is shown (although not identified) on the reverse of the Eisenhower bicentennial dollar issued in 1976. Ed kindly offers to send a copy of the issue to those who write to him at Box 7083, Colorado Spring, CO 80933.
276. More Sherlockian philately: Allan Hauck reports (in the July-Aug. issue of Topical Time) on an item in the British Postmark Bulletin (Mar. 25). The first listing was for a "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" handstamp for 1st April 1994, with a note: "The Manager of the SHC (Special Handstamp Centre) asks that we point out that this first of April postmark is to be applied using a new experimental invisible ink."
277. A series of "Little Brown Notebooks" published by the Indigo Press in London includes one titled SCENES FROM SHERLOCK HOLMES, with quotations from the four long stories and decorative illustrations by Debra Thompson. The notebooks are hardbound and pocket size, with 256 pages and plenty of room for journal-keepers or diary-writers, and cost $6.95. They are available here from the Sterling Publishing Co., 387 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 10016 (800-367-9692).
278. Jim Zunic reports that he is about to marry, and move; his new address is 2739 Kingston Drive, Natrona Heights, PA 15065-1730 (412-226-2082).
279. Jeremy Brett's new film-in-progress "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" has had some coverage in the British press, but most of the coverage tends to focus on the female stars; the film will "study the aristocracy's recreational use of narcotics," and it's a thriller, with location filming in fashionable Knightsbridge's Rutland Gate (a letter to residents warned: "Do not be concerned by muted female screams from the basement of No. 26").
280. Forewarned is forearmed: a short article by Russell Atwood about Sherlock Holmes and the BSI is set to appear in the Oct. 1994 issue of A&E Monthly (the cable channel's monthly magazine).
281. Gaby Goldscheider is "redivivus" (that's the title of her new catalog, with 221B items of Sherlockiana and Doyleana); her address is Deep Dene, Baring Road, Cowes, Isle of Wight PO31 8DB, England.
282. Compliments to Herb Tinning, who seems to have been the first to spot (or at least to report on) something that has been available in Britain since Aug. 1993: a colorful folder prepared by the Royal Mail to tell customers about "upgraded priority services" such as registered, special delivery, and recorded mail, with a nice cover photograph of the usual Sherlockian icons (hat, pipe, and lens).
283. Ben Wood reports that The Pleasant Places of Florida have published their second round-robin pastiche of 1994; A CASE OF HIDE 'N' TEA is available for $3.50 postpaid from Benton Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222. Ben also offers the 1994/5 revised edition of the PPoff HANDBOOK; $5.00 postpaid.
284. Jul 94 #3: Simon & Schuster's audiocassette THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES #25 ($12.00) offers two more of the fine old radio shows from scripts by Denis Green and Anthony Boucher, with new introductions by Glenhall Taylor (who produced and directed the series). "The Night Before Christmas" (24 Dec 45) stars Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce and is already available on records and cassettes (with lower fidelity). The new-to-audio "The Darlington Substitution" (4 Jan 47) has Nigel Bruce and Tom Conway (as Watson and Holmes, with top billing going to Bruce).
285. Noted by Bob Fritsch in the June 20 issue of Coin World: Spain's new 10-pesetas coin honoring Sarasate. It's copper-nickel, so it's a circulating coin; do any other circulating coins show people (other than heads of state) named in the Canon?
286. CREEPERS: BRITISH HORROR AND FANTASY IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY is edited by Clive Bloom (London: Pluto Press, 1993; 190 pp., £30.00 cloth, £9.95 paper) and offers Victor Sage's essay on "Empire Gothic: Explanation and Epiphany in Conan Doyle, Kipling, and Chesterton" (Sage makes an interesting suggestion that "The Speckled Band" can be read as a horror story masquerading as a detective story).
287. Tim O'Connor has reported a comic-book reprint (with new colors) of Marvin Channing's "The Vampire Hunter" in THE COLLECTOR'S DRACULA: BOOK TWO (1994) from Millennium ($3.95). Originally in MAD HOUSE #97 (Jan. 1975) [D5706b], the story has Victorian vampire-hunter Henry Hobson dressed as and behaving like Sherlock Holmes.
288. Tim also notes that Ruth Lake Tepper's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES CROSSWORD PUZZLE BOOK, first published in 1977, has been reprinted by Gramercy Books and is available for $5.99 at B. Dalton stores. And that his summer sales-list of Sherlockiana is available; you can write to Tim O'Connor at 6015 West Route 115, Herscher, IL 60941.
289. The sixth annual Canonical Convocation and Capers in Door County, Wis., will be held on Sept. 16-18. The mailing list is maintained by Jane Richardson, 3456 Exchange Street, Crete, IL 60417.
290. Collectors of foreign translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories who do not yet have anything in Catalan (one of the official languages in Spain) will welcome news of TRES AVENTURAS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES, with illustrations by Javier Aceytuno (Barcelona: Editorial Lumen, 1994); the three stories are "Silver Blaze", "The Blue Carbuncle", and "The Red-Headed League", and the publisher is at: Ramon Miquel i Planas 10, 08034 Barcelona, Spain (no information available yet as to the price).
291. One does indeed hear of Sherlock everywhere, and one of those everywhere is Spike Jones and His City Slickers' legendary 20-minute parody of "The Nutcracker Suite" (first recorded for RCA Victor in 1945). Carey Cummings has forwarded a newspaper review of the new single-CD collection "Spiked! The Music of Spike Jones" (BMG Classics/Catalyst) that includes the parody (at one point a dog howls, and someone exclaims, "I say, Holmes, what was that?"). And the new liner notes are by Thomas Pyncheon.

292. Jul 94 #4: Ralph F. Turner ("Colonel Carruthers") died on May 22. He had a long and distinguished career in forensics, from his founding of the Laboratory of Forensic Science in the Kansas City Police Department (and supervising the lab from 1939 to 1947), and continuing as Professor of Criminalistics at Michigan State University until his retirement in 1981. He was an enthusiastic member of The Greek Interpreters of East Lansing, and received his Irregular Shilling from the BSI in 1983.
293. And here's a new example of Stu Shiffman's fine caricatures. You can expect to see both artist and artwork at Bouchercon 25 in Seattle on Oct. 6-9, as well as Marcia Muller (guest of honor), Tony Hillerman (lifetime achievement award), Art Scott (fan guest of honor), and George Chesbro (toastmaster). More information on registration available from Box 75684, Seattle, WA 98125.
294. Reported by Ruthann Stetak: Mark Walker's CREATIVE COSTUMES FOR CHILDREN (WITHOUT SEWING) (256 pp. $11.95) has a Sherlock Holmes costume on p. 141; the publisher is Cool Hand Communications, 1098 N.W. Boca Raton Boulevard #1, Boca Raton, FL 33432 (800-428-0578); add $2.00 shipping and handling.
295. Galahad Books have published a set of 12 booklets with 25 stories by P. G. Wodehouse (in magazines from 1901 to 1965) that have never been appeared in books in the Britain, and one of the stories is a newly-discovered Sherlock Holmes pastiche. PLUM STONES--THE HIDDEN P. G. WODEHOUSE is available only as a set (£135.00 postpaid to the U.S.); a flier with more information is available from Nigel Williams, 7 Waldeck Grove, London SE27 0BE, England.
296. The fourth issue of The Whitechapel Gazette is at hand from Troy Taylor (805 West North, Decatur, IL 62522), with 60 pages of articles and stories and Troy's fine illustrations; $6.50 postpaid (or $18.00 for three issues).
297. The annual volumes published by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London are always welcome, and this year's BACK TO BAKER STREET is no exception. The focus is on London, in keeping with the Society's celebration of The Return of Sherlock Holmes earlier this year, and Roger Johnson and Jean Upton have edited a splendid collection of scholarship and reminiscences that offer a delightful look at the London to which Sherlock Holmes returned, and at the manuscript which reported that return, and much more. $21.50 postpaid, and you can order from Mrs. Lynne Godden, Apple Tree Cottage, Smarden, Ashford, Kent TN27 8QE, England.
298. Andy Lane's ALL-CONSUMING FIRE (London: Virgin, 1994; 304 pp., £4.99) is one of "The New Doctor Who Adventures" in the series of books that extend the television series; this one is a cross-over novel in which The Doctor and his friends Bernice and Ace encounter Holmes and Watson, and Mycroft and Col. Warburton and Baron Maupertuis, and a bunch of strange creatures and people who are no more strange than one might expect in the worlds of The Doctor, but rather out-of-tune for the world of Sherlock Holmes.
299. Jul 94 #5: In case you missed the auction at Sotheby's in New York on Dec. 10, 1993, which included the manuscripts of Conan Doyle's "The Home Coming" ($3,738) and "The Last of the Legions" ($3,738); Steve Rothman notes that they are now advertised by the Heritage Book Shop (8540 Melrose Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90069) at $12,500 and $8,500.
300. Jim Suszynski spotted a new offer by the Hallmark Keepsake Ornament Collector's Club: $20.00 for a one-year membership, which includes their quarterly newsletter (and opportunities to buy lots of stuff) and two free ornaments, one of which is their Sherlock Holmes bear ("Holiday Pursuit"), shown here full-size. The club's address is Box 412734, Kansas City, MO 64141-2734, and they take plastic.
301. Tim O'Connor reports that a recent catalog from Barnes & Noble (126 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011) includes a close-out offer of the truly hideous Sherlock Holmes nutcracker from Steinbach at $99.00 (catalog key E1AW, item 1893700; that's only a dollar more than the advertised price two years ago in a catalog from the House of Tyrol, Box 909, Alpenland Center, Cleveland, GA 30528 (800-241-5404). And that Dove Audio has issued a discount version of A TREASURY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES with seven stories read by Ben Kingsley on four cassettes (Jun 89 #8), still available at $24.95; the reissues are A TREASURY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with three stories, and MORE SHERLOCK HOLMES, with four stories, at $8.99 each; in stores, or available direct from Dove (800-832-3683).
302. The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn will hold this year's Sherlockian riverboat convention "The Game's Afloat" on Oct. 8-9; additional information is available from Leonard R. Cleavelin, 35 Saint Lawrence Drive, Saint Peters, MO 63376.
303. Reported by Chris Redmond: QUOTATIONS FROM BAKER STREET, edited by Chris Redmond ("memorable and ought-to-be-memorable passages from Sherlockian writings of the past century"); $7.50 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada.
304. Ben Wood's WHO'S WHERE: A HANDY REFERENCE GUIDE TO PERSONS IN THE HOLMESIAN CANON was mentioned earlier (Jun 94 #1), but without a note as to just what it is: 52 pp. and spiral-bound, with the people listed by adventure. $6.50 postpaid from Benton Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222.
305. "There is more violence in an English hedgerow than in the meanest streets of a great city." No, it's not from the Canon, but it's a nice echo, from P. D. James' DEVICES AND DESIRES (spotted by Jack Koelle).
306. Melanie Hughes spotted a story in the [Denver] Rocky Mountain News (June 6) about the newest member of the Douglas County sheriff's K-9 corps, who was named in a contest among local elementary schools. The judges voted 4-1 in favor of "Watson" over the runner-up "Ranger". "It's an appropriate name," said Watson's handler, deputy Troy McCoy. "The dog is very intelligent."
307. Jul 94 #6: "The Many Faces of Sherlock Holmes" is being distributed again in the U.S., according to the current issue of Anglofile; the 60-minute television program was made by Avery Productions in 1985, with Christopher Lee as host of an overview of actors who have played the role. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
308. Sondra Gair died on May 25. Her career in radio began in Chicago in the 1940s, and when she died at the age of 70 she was host of her own "Midday with Sondra Gair" show for WBEZ (Chicago). Early in her career she went to Hollywood with an NBC soap opera, and in 1946 became the star of the CBS west-coast series "Meet Miss Sherlock" (playing private detective Jane Sherlock). Bill Nadel kindly reports that the series aired from July to Sept. 1946, and from Sept. to Oct. 1947.
309. The Duchess of Devonshire was sold at auction this month at Sotheby's in London. Well, her portrait, at any rate: Thomas Gainsborough's portrait of Georgiana, 5th Duchess of Devonshire (1757-1806). She was a grand beauty, and when the portrait first went on public view in 1876, her image became famous (sufficiently famous to have impressed Watson, who described Mary Sutherland's broad-brimmed hat as being "tilted in a coquettish Duchess-of-Devonshire fashion over her ear"). The portrait also impressed Adam Worth: when the portrait was purchased by London art dealer William Agnew and put on display at his gallery, Worth stole it. Worth was as great a criminal genius in real life as Moriarty was in the Canon, and Worth is considered by many to be the model for Moriarty (and not just because Worth's arrest, conviction, and refusal to give up the portrait to avoid seven years imprisonment made headlines in 1893, shortly before "The Final Problem" was written). Worth served five years, and then, seriously ill, delivered the painting to William Pinkerton, who returned it to London, where it was sold to J. Pierpont Morgan. It was Morgan's granddaughter who sent the painting to auction this month. And it sold for £265,500.

310. Leonard M. Friedman died on May 11. He was a violinist and founder of the Scottish Baroque Ensemble, and was described by his friend John Calder as a brilliant performer and one of the great musical eccentrics. You can hear his violin on the cassettes of the current BBC radio series starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams.
311. Tom Stix has sent a reminder about the Watson Fund, founded some years ago to provide financial assistance to Sherlockians who might not otherwise be able to attend the birthday festivities in New York. The Fund is administered by a carefully anonymous Sherlockians, and contributions are welcome (and important); checks can be written to John H. Watson, M.D., and sent to him c/o Thomas L. Stix, 34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648. Requests for assistance can also be sent to Dr. Watson, whose mail is forwarded unopened by Tom.
312. The "Third Occasional Sherlockian Cruise" will sail on June 17, 1995, from Fort Lauderdale on the MV Zenith. The cruise lasts seven days, with stops at Ocho Rios, Grand Cayman Island, Cozumel, and Key West, and there will be Sherlockian seminars during the two days at sea. Holmes at His Zenith (Box 96, Norwood, NJ 07648) is the contact, and enquiries are welcome.

313. Jul 94 #7: The Book-of-the-Month Club has announced it will dissolve its editorial board, whose members have read and recommended the books selected by the Club ever since it was founded in 1926. The Club's first Board of Judges were Henry Seidel Canby, Christopher Morley, William Allen White, Heywood Brown, and Dorothy Canfield Fisher. Morley served as a judge until ill health forced him to resign in 1954, and possibly helped ensure that THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES was a club selection in 1930. In today's publishing world, books are published too fast for monthly review by judges, and the club's staff will be responsible for selections.
314. Spotted by Bernie O'Heir: Sonia R. Hillios contributed 14 original paintings to the SkyBox "Star Trek Master Series" of trading cards, one of which (#52) is "The Case of the Errant Holodeck" showing Data, Geordi, and Moriarty. The card is full-color, and is available matted and framed, and signed by the artist on the mat, for $24.95 postpaid, from Time Line Studio, Box 90, Southampton, MA 01073 (800-659-8463); they take plastic.
315. Cheryl Hurd plans to publish a VICTORIAN YELLOW PAGES early next year: it will be a compendium of modern sources for Victoriana ("antimacassars to zithers"), and she would be happy to hear from people who know about Victorian places, shops, events, resources, books, periodicals, etc. Her deadline is Sept. 30, and her address is: Teapot Press, Box 2048, Scotia, NY 12302.
316. Roger Johnson notes that Groombridge Place, the inspiration for Birlstone Manor, is now officially open to the public. Groombridge is a fine 17th-century house, and well worth a visit; it can also be seen in Peter Greenaway's film "The Draughtsman's Contract" (1983). Visitors are invited to contact The Estate Office, Groombridge Place, Tunbridge Wells, Kent TN3 9QG, England.
317. "Mr. Penzler of mystery fiction" was the clue (23 across) in the N.Y. Times Magazine crossword puzzle on July 3. The puzzle was by A. J. Santora, and may well be the first one in the paper to honor an investitured member of The Baker Street Irregulars (Otto is "The King of Bohemia").
318. The television film "The Hound of London" aired on channel 57 (Toronto) on July 14, with Patrick Macnee (Sherlock Holmes) and John Scott-Paget (Dr. Watson); the film was produced in Vancouver in 1993, and is based on Craig Bowsby's play "The Hound of London" (1987). This is the first broadcast of the film reported; did anyone watch it? And did anyone tape it?
319. The Bimetallic Question will hold a one-day Sherlockian colloquium in Point Claire, Quebec, on Sept. 24. Additional information available from the Bimetallic Question, Box 883, Stock Exchange Tower, Montreal H4Z 1K2, Canada.
320. Jul 94 #8: President Clinton will award the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor, to Herbert Block on Aug. 8. Far better known by his byline "Herblock" and described by his colleagues as "a funny, gentle man who draws pictures in a newspaper," Block has been an editorial cartoonist for the Washington Post since 1946. His first known use of the Sherlockian image came in 1947, in a lampoon of Reps. Rankin and Thomas and their House Committee on Un-American Activities investigation of Hollywood, and he has drawn more than 15 other Sherlockian cartoons over the years.
321. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE FEATHERSTONE POLICEMAN is a short new pastiche by Tony Lumb, who celebrated the centenary of a riot by miners in Yorkshire with a story that brings Holmes to the scene; the 20-page pamphlet is available for $4.00 postpaid (in currency, please) from the author (21 Albert Street, Featherstone, Pontefract, West Yorks. WF7 5EX, England).
322. Ralph Earle II ("Joyce Cummings") has been named the next deputy director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Ralph is now chairman of the board of directors of the Lawyers Alliance for World Security, and was earlier the director of the ACDA (1980-81), serving as chief negotiator of SALT II (1978-80).
323. Bob Payton, the flamboyant American restaurateur and dedicated Anglophile, and the man who brought the Chicago Pizza Pie Factory and the Chicago Rib Shack to Britain, died on July 13. He arrived in England in 1973, opened his first restaurant in 1977, and became thoroughly successful (except to his mother, whom he often quoted as saying, "One son is a lawyer, the other lives in Europe"). And he arranged with Forte to refurbish and restore the historic Criterion restaurant in Piccadilly, which reopened in 1992 (Oct 92 #1), offering Sherlockians a chance to stand where Watson stood when he met young Stamford there.
324. Reported from Britain: Mark Frost's THE LIST OF SEVEN now out in paperback (Arrow, £4.99); Arthur Conan Doyle and special agent Jack Sparks battle a sinister gang of devil-worshippers. The U.S. paperback is due from Avon in Sept. (416 pp., $5.99). Avon also will reprint Kim Newman's ANNO DRACULA in paperback in the U.S. (Mycroft and fellow-members of the Diogenes Club versus Dracula, who is both Prince Consort and Regent, in a well-written novel).
325. Rainer Zahn (45 Monchhofstrasse, 69120 Heidelberg, Germany) is offering (to the highest bidder) two volumes of The Strand Magazine (July-Dec. 1891 and Jan.-June 1892, with all of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), both in publisher's decorated blue cloth, in good condition except for faded spines.
326. Forecast: NEVERMORE, by William Hjortsberg (from Atlantic Monthly Press in October); the novel's three protagonists are Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Harry Houdini, and Opal Fletcher (a.k.a. Isis, a wealthy widow and clairvoyant to the elite). According to Kirkus Review (June 15), "a carefully researched thriller that provides many fascinating details about celebrities of the Jazz Age but fails miserably and completely to provide any suspense."
327. Aug 94 #1: Bert Coules (who has dramatized many of the stories in the current series on BBC Radio 4 starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams) reports that the BBC has released nine double-cassette sets (two programs per cassette), with three sets each from the Adventures, the Memoirs, and the Return; the sets cost £7.99 each, plus shipping; The Radio Collection (overseas sales dept.), BBC Enterprises, Woodlands, 80 Wood Lane, London W12 0TT, England.
328. An exhibition on "Reporting the War: The Journalistic Coverage of World War II" is now on view at the National Portrait Gallery (through Sept. 5), and it provides a grand look at the men and women who were part of that effort, and the excellent work they did. One of those recognized is Elmer Davis, member of The Baker Street Irregulars in the early days, and the author of our Constitution and Buy-Laws. He was the director of the Office of War Information in 1942 and 1943, and was criticized by those who believed that the OWI was not making enough information available, and by those who - were upset that it was making too much information available, and by others who were thoroughly annoyed at the OWI's efforts to publicize the contribution of black Americans to the war effort. He made the cover of Time, and then went back to being a highly-regarded radio journalist. And he was an early member of The Red Circle.

329. The Royal Mail is issuing a series of stamp booklets with covers honoring twentieth-century prime ministers; Gordon Palmer has kindly supplied this illustration of Herbert Brockway's design for the first booklet in the series, which shows Prime Minister Herbert Asquith (1852-1928). And Asquith is indeed mentioned in the Canon. Don't bother looking for "Asquith" (he's not mentioned by name, but he is mentioned).
330. The summer 1994 issue of Scarlet Street offers David Stuart Davies' interesting discussion of the six new one-hour programs from Granada, and a nice article by Richard Valley about the new laserdisc version of Billy Wilder's film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and other odds and ends, including a photograph of Jonathan Freeman as McTague in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in the 1970s (Freeman is better known now as the voice of Jafar in the animation "The Return of Jafar"). $20.00 a year (four issues) from Scarlet Street Inc., Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
331. People who have fond memories of the comic strips created by Austin Briggs, Alex Raymond, V. T. Hamlin, Al Capp, Milton Caniff, and Will Eisner may not know that the strips are being reprinted by the Kitchen Sink Press, and you ask for their catalog, which also has modern material (320 Riverside Drive, Northampton, MA 01060) (800-365-7465). For those who don't know who those people are, the strips were Terry and the Pirates, Alley Oop, Flash Gordon, Steve Canyon, and The Spirit. And if you do know, you'll be able to match the names of the artists with the names of the comic strips.

332. Aug 94 #2: Bob Gellerstedt (1035 Wedgewood Drive, Fayetteville, GA 30214) is offering THE SHERLOCKIAN ANTHOLOGIES INDEX (20 pp., $5.00 postpaid to the U.S. and Canada); it's a useful guide to 15 anthologies (including Marvin Kaye's THE GAME IS AFOOT), and there's an index to the obituaries in The Baker Street Journal, and a list of Conan Doyle's published fiction. And his earlier (Jun 91 #5) Macintosh Hypercard edition of Edgar W. Smith's APPOINTMENT IN BAKER STREET (1938) and BAKER STREET AND BEYOND (1940) still is available on one 800K floppy disk (you'll need version 2.0 or later); $5.00 postpaid (foreign airmail $3.00 extra).
333. Mary Ann Warner (Annmar Enterprises, 2711 Fairlane Place, Chino Hills, CA 91709-1240) offers an illustrated catalog of Sherlockian bookmarks, sweatshirts, T-shirts, doorhangers, totebags, aprons, and magnets.
334. TOUT CE QUE VOUS AVEZ VOULU SAVOIR SUR SHERLOCK HOLMES SANS JAMAIS L'AVOIR RENCONTRE, by Pierre Nordon (Paris: Le Livre de Poche, 1994; 124 pp., 30 francs) is a well-written paperback discussion of Conan Doyle, and Holmes, and the Sherlockian cult. It's all in French, of course (as was the first and best edition of Nordon's 1964 biography of Conan Doyle), and it offers the French an excellent introduction to the world of Sherlock Holmes.
335. Another example of Sherlockiana available in other languages is IN VIAGGIO CON SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Marco Zatterin (Milan: Il Minotauro, 1994; 203 pp., 24,000 lire). The book is a helpful guide (in Italian) for Sherlockians on tour in Britain and elsewhere, with walking tours in London's neighborhoods mentioned in the Canon, and a discussion of the itinerary Holmes and Watson followed across Europe, and much more.
336. The Sherlock Holmes Gazette is back in business, with a 48-page summer 1994 issue edited by Eddie Bissell and published by Peter Harkness (46 Purfield Drive, Wargrave, Berks. RG10 8AR, England). As usual, there is excellent coverage of events in Britain, and an interview with Jeremy Brett about his new film "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" (he plays the villain), and a report on the meeting of the Arthur Conan Doyle Society in Toronto earlier this year. Subscriptions cost £21.00 a year to North America, and you can send $35.00 to Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.
337. The 1994 "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be held on Nov. 4-6. There's a mystery to solve (with prizes for the winner) during a tour of eight Victorian homes, and meals, and other fun and games. Additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204-0340 (609-884-5404).
338. The fourth issue of The Shosho-in Bulletin has arrived from The Men with the Twisted Konjo, with 130 pages (in English) of articles, pastiches, poetry, and illustrations by contributors from Japan and seven other nations. The cost is $10.00 postpaid (in currency, please) from Yuichi Hirayama, 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181, Japan. A few copies of the second and third issues still are available ($5.00 each postpaid). And The Japanese Cabinet publishes The Dispatch Box, also in English; the cost of a one-year subscription (four issues) is $8.00 postpaid (to be sent to Dr. Hirayama at the same address). There is some fine scholarship being done in Japan, and it is nice to have some of it available to those who don't read Japanese.
339. Aug 94 #3: THE PILTDOWN CONFESSION, by Irwin Schwartz (New York: A Wyatt Book for St. Martin's Press, 1994; 210 pp., $20.95), presents yet another solution to the hoax, offering a putative confession by Charles Dawson, who reveals Arthur ("my friends call me Conan") Doyle and Teilhard de Chardin as his accomplices. The complicated story involves two murders by some evangelical Christians, and copious annotations by Schwartz (who is far from knowledgeable about Conan Doyle and his family).
340. Jack Kirby died on Feb. 6. He was one of the great comic-book artists, and began his career in comics in the 1930s. He worked for Marvel Comics and other companies, and helped create Captain America, the Fantastic Four, the Incredible Hulk, Spiderman and many more superheros, including Kamandi. In eight issues of KAMANDI: THE LAST BOY ON EARTH, published in 1977 and 1978, Mylock Bloodstalker (the world's most famous detective) was assisted by his loyal friend Doile in an attempt to hunt down and destroy Kamandi.
341. Iron Crown issued a series of seven "Sherlock Holmes Solo Mysteries" as paperback books in 1987 and 1988; there were to be eight titles, but the eighth (THE LOST HEIR) was never published in English (there may be a translation in Catalan, as yet not confirmed). The eighth of Iron Crown's titles was to have a cover by Jill Bauman, and the original artwork (without lettering, but with a nice portrait of Watson) is now available: 15 x 20 in., in acrylics on canvas, for $1350. Contact: Worlds of Wonder, 3421 M Street #327, Washington, DC 20007.
342. I've mentioned The Shadows of the Elm before: they're the students taught by Carolyn Gassner at the Arroyo Del Oso Elementary School in Albuquerque, and each year they make an imaginative video dramatization of a Sherlock Holmes story. And at the end of July the classroom was torched by some sixteen-year-old members of a local gang (who have been apprehended). And of course the books, and the costumes and scenery used in the videos, are lost, and need to be replaced. The wishlist includes: illustrated unabridged editions of the Canon, Murray Shaw's MATCH WITS WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES series, Eve Titus' BASIL OF BAKER STREET series, Simon Goodenough's SHERLOCK HOLMES MURDER DOSSIER series, August Derleth's SOLAR PONS series, Robert Newman's BAKER STREET IRREGULAR series, back issues of the BSI and other periodicals. And anything else suitable for energetic and intelligent grade-school students who need and deserve assistance; you can mail donations to Richard H. Miller, Box 9902, Santa Fe, NM 87504-9902. And (my additional suggestion) if you can't send stuff, a check (payable to C. Bryan Gassner) would be helpful, because there are all the costumes and scenery to replace as well.
343. "Make memos more mysterious" is the motto of Bartholomew's Ink, who offer a fine assortment of rubber stamps in their current catalog, including a page full of Sherlockian designs. Box 4825, Charlottesville, VA 22905.
344. Aug 94 #4: Peter Cushing died on Aug. 11. He began his acting career on stage in the Connaught Repertory Company in 1936, arrived in Hollywood in 1939 (appearing in small parts in Louis Hayward's "The Man in the Iron Mask" and Laurel and Hardy's "A Chump at Oxford"), and went on to fame and

- fortune and high regard as a star in horror films. And he was a delightful Sherlock Holmes, in the film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959) and in a BBC television series (1968) and in the television film "The Masks of Death" (1984). He also played Conan Doyle in the television film "The Great Houdinis" (1976). And there were interesting might-have-beens: a West End revival of the play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" in 1959 was not produced, and he once reported that he was offered (and turned down) "The Crucifer of Blood" on Broadway. He also was ready to do "The Abbot's Cry" in 1986 (as a sequel to "The Masks of Death"), and said in an interview: "I'm hoping to have one more stab at Holmes. Now he's very old and tottering around with his bees. But it's a good script. If I can only stagger through Holmes -- he never stops talking and moves with such speed. I thought, 'Oh, crikey. Roller skates please, props.'"
345. Roger Johnson has reported that CoverCraft (Box 432, Beckenham, Kent BR3 3SZ, England) issued an attractive "Return of Sherlock Holmes Centenary Souvenir Cover" postmarked at Park Lane on Apr. 1, with a cachet showing Paget's illustration of Watson and the old book-seller (£6.00 postpaid); CoverCraft also designed last year's Sherlock Holmes first day cover for the Sherlock Holmes Society of London.
346. Michael Carreras died on Apr. 19. He was a writer, producer, and director on many of the classic pictures made by Hammer Films, and in the 1950s he was executive producer for the studio, when Peter Cushing starred in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959).
347. "Ronder, of course, was a household word," said Sherlock Holmes to Watson. "He was the rival of Wombwell, and of Sanger, one of the greatest showmen of his day." George Wombwell (1778-1850) launched his traveling menagerie in 1805, and became the nineteenth century's greatest entrepreneur in that field. E. H. Bostock continued the enterprise, and Dramatis Personae (71 Lexington Avenue, New York, NY 10010) offer a colorful poster for Bostock and Wombwell's Menagerie (1905), with large portraits of the Wombwells and the Bostocks, for $150 in their current catalog (their telephone number is 212-679-3705).
348. R. Irving Paxton died on July 10. He was a civil and mechanical engineer, a bibliophile, one of the founding members (and later the Gasogene) of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore, and (as "Mr. Sandeford, of Reading"), a member of The Baker Street Irregulars.
349. The arrest of Illich Ramirez Sanchez this month made the front pages around the world, and provided a reminder of a Sherlockian connection. In 1975 in Paris he was using the name Carlos Martinez Torres when he shot and killed two French counter-intelligence officers, and (as Frederick Forsythe noted) a French headline-writer dubbed Carlos "the Jackal" after the character in THE DAY OF THE JACKAL. Forsythe's book, published in 1971, is excellent, about an attempt to assassinate French president Charles de Gaulle, using a rifle smuggled into the country in an aluminum crutch.

350. Aug 94 #5: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's 1994 Christmas card is now available, with a two-color sketch of troopships (including the "Orontes") at Bombay, waiting to bring home troops from the Afghan War. A packet of ten cards costs $12.00 postpaid (to North America), from Capt. W. R. Michell, 5 Old Farm Place, Hinton St. George, Somerset TA17 8TW, England (checks payable to the Society, please).
351. Cay Van Ash died in April. He was a friend of Sax Rohmer for many years, and collaborated with the author's widow on the biography of Rohmer called MASTER OF VILLAINY. Van Ash's novel TEN YEARS BEYOND BAKER STREET (1984) pitted Sherlock Holmes against Fu Manchu, and was well-received.
352. Gary Thaden reports that this may be the last chance to buy the "Sherlock Holmes Nesting Dolls" (Holmes, Watson, Lestrade, Moriarty, and the Hound); originally $16.95 from Signals, now $7.99 (item 26899). Also THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES (nine hardcover volumes); published at $99.00, now $89.99 (item 30738) (but this set will be issued soon in paperback). Signals is at Box 64428, Saint Paul, MN 55164 (800-669-9696); they take plastic.
353. The nesting dolls mentioned above were made in China. A different (and more expensive) set of nesting dolls, handpainted and lacquered in Russia, was noted by Gertrude Mahoney in the current mail-order catalog from The Cottage Shop Box 4836, Stamford, CT 06907 (800-388-7660); it's item #5304, and the cost is $74.00 postpaid.
354. THE ADVENTURE OF THE PEREMPTORY SPOUSE is the latest book from Pequod, representing the "recrudescence of Turlock Loams," as announced by Dr. Fatso's ever-industrious literary agent, John Ruyle (521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521); $40.00 (cloth) or $18.00 (paper). For newcomers who have not seen John's work, it is amusing, well-designed, hand-set, hand-printed, and (if you are willing to travel to Berkeley) hand-delivered.
355. James O. Duval died on Aug. 22. He was one of the founding members of Cox & Company of New England in 1979, and edited and published its journal, The QuarterLy $tatement, and enthusiastically attended meetings of almost every Sherlockian society that met in or near New England. He also was an eager and educated collector of Sherlockiana, and received his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1984 (quite appropriately as "The Battered Tin Dispatch-Box").
356. Syd Goldberg has forwarded a brief Associated Press report on a new Fortune magazine survey of the world's 500 largest service companies in 1993. The top-ranked retailer was Wal-Mart (with $67.3 billion in sales), the largest commercial bank was Fuji Bank Ltd. (with $538.2 billion in assets), and the largest savings institution (with $123.8 billion in assets) was . . . Abbey National (still happily assigning someone to answer the mail delivered to Sherlock Holmes at 221B Baker Street).
357. Aug 94 #6: Lady Victoria Wemyss, CVO, Extra Woman of the Bedchamber to the Queen Mother, died at Wemyss Castle, Fife, on May 8, aged 104. There's no Sherlockian connection, but it's worth noting that she probably was the last surviving godchild of Queen Victoria. David Rush has kindly forwarded the obituary from The Times, which noted in passing that she was known to the local police, having been fined for speeding at the age of 77, and that she continued to drive herself around her family estate until she was 100.
358. Earlier this year Dame Jean Conan Doyle presided over the installation of a plaque at 2 Upper Wimpole Street, where her father had his ophthalmological office in 1891 (and where he wrote the first of the Sherlock Holmes short stories). For many years it had been thought that his office was in Upper Devonshire Place, as shown by a report in the Sunday Express (spring 1968) that noted that Conan Doyle's ghost was believed to have played pranks with the elevator at his former office in Devonshire Place. "In 1961 the house was shared by seven doctors. And the lift, though serviced monthly, often stopped inexplicably between the second and third floors. This was next to the rooms where Sir Arthur wrote Sherlock Holmes tales while waiting for patients." One wonders whose ghost it might have been. Perhaps it really *was* Conan Doyle, vainly trying to persuade people to stop claiming he had had an office there.
359. Richard Lancelyn Green's CONAN DOYLE OF UPPER WIMPOLE STREET (May 94 #6) is a well-researched 20-page booklet issued earlier this year to commemorate the unveiling of the plaque, and it's still available from The Arthur Conan Doyle Society (Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester, CH4 0JG, England); $7.00 postpaid.
360. Plan ahead: I've seen proofs from the spectacular 1995 calendar that Cadds (the British printers) are preparing with full-color photographs from the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" television series; it will be distributed here by Classic Specialties, and I'll report again when it is ready.
361. Reported: RETURN OF THE WEREWOLF, by Les Martin (New York: Random House, 1993); a Bullseye Chiller for fourth-grade students, with Jonathan Holmes (Sherlock's cousin) called upon to help a beautiful French countess rid her village of the werewolf that is terrorizing it.

362. Reported by Syd Goldberg: THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF GOLDEN AGE DETECTIVE STORIES, edited by Marie Smith (Carroll & Graf); $9.95 at Barnes & Noble (contents include "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "His Last Bow").
363. Reported from Britain: THE SINGULAR CASE OF THE DUPLICATE HOLMES, by Jan Walker ($30.00); "an affectionate, engaging story of a mellowed friendship, of lives touched by a woman's intelligent, unaffected sweetness, and of a man whose depth and warmth are buried under the demands of professionalism and honor" (according to the author). And THE BAKER STREET IRREGULAR: THE UNAUTHORISED BIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Austin Mitchelson ($35.00); "Jack the Ripper has been positively identified ... and he was none other than the famous Victorian detective Sherlock Holmes" (ditto). Published by Ian Henry and distributed here by Players Press, Box 1132, Studio City, CA 91614; shipping costs $4.00 (first book) and $1.50 (each additional book).
364. Aug 94 #7: The Hotel Algonquin still is receiving publicity on the gossip pages, but not, certainly, the way it did in the good old days. Simon & Schuster's hard-cover edition of Howard Stern's PRIVATE PARTS was launched in 1993 at a beer-and-Buttafuoco bash at the Harley Davidson Cafe, according to an item in New York magazine (Aug. 29). And now Pocket Books is considering a book party for the paperback at a more upscale location. "We asked the Algonquin, the Yale and Harvard Clubs, and both the New York and Downtown Athletic Clubs," a Pocket Books spokeswoman said. "They all said yes, which certainly surprised us." But the Algonquin had a restriction. "They asked us not to bring any Playboy Bunnies." No decision has been made yet as to whether and when, let alone where, the party will be.
365. "An illusioned and disillusioned primer for collectors and novices," is the way that Vincent Starrett described John Carter's ABC FOR BOOK-COLLECTORS, adding that "no better guide to the whole subject has appeared in print." John Carter knew his subject, and was famous for far more than merely being one of the leaders of those who exposed the infamous forger Thomas J. Wise. ABC FOR BOOK-COLLECTORS was first published in 1952, and went through five editions over the years, and now there's a sixth edition, lightly revised by Nicolas Barker (an expert in his own right), and available for $28.00 postpaid from Oak Knoll Books, 414 Delaware Street, New Castle, DE 19720; they take plastic. I recommend it to those who don't know the difference between page heads and running heads, or who aren't sure about editions and impressions and issues and states and variants, or who might want to read a description of "the chronological obsession" or "point-maniacs" written by someone who writes well and is convinced that "all extremes are a bore."
366. Oak Knoll also can still supply THE AFFAIR OF THE UNPRINCIPLED PUBLISHER, a pastiche by Lawrence Garland that reports on an encounter between Thomas J. Wise and Sherlock Holmes, published by Oak Knoll in 1983 in an attractive hand-printed 21-page pamphlet ($33.00 postpaid); and Rodney Engen's RICHARD DOYLE (London: Catalpa Press, 1983; 206 pp.), a review of the life and work of Arthur Conan Doyle's uncle, who designed the traditional cover of Punch and as a freelance illustrator and painter contributed art to a long list of books and magazines ($38.00 postpaid).
367. Knock, knock. Who's there? Watson. Watson who? Nothing much; Watson who with you?
368. IN BEDS WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES is The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's new excursion guidebook, edited by Pamela Bruxner, and the title pays a punning tribute to Chris Redmond's IN BED WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES while offering Britreaders a clue as to the area covered: Bedfordshire. The articles focus on "The Three Gables", "The Blanched Soldier", and "The Man with the Watches", and the 52-page booklet costs $13.50 postpaid; checks should be payable to the Society, and sent Mrs. E. M. Godden, Apple Tree Cottage, Smarden, Kent TN27 8QE, England).
369. This year's national meeting of the Sherlockian societies in Australia went very well, Michael J. Farrell reports. And it featured an appearance by an authentic Sherlock Holmes, 83 years old, who resides in Newcastle, and who was born in Holmesville, with a Dr. Watson presiding over his birth (it was the nurse who suggested that the boy be called Sherlock).
370. Aug 94 #8: THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AUDIO GIFT SET #5 will be on sale in September, just in time for Christmas shopping (and offering a less-expensive way of picking up earlier issues): the boxed set with cassettes #17-20 will retail at $25.00 (these are Simon and Schuster's reissues of the Basil Rathbone radio shows, but one of the eight programs has Tom Conway as Holmes).
371. Otto Penzler continues to offer paperback reprints of important classics in his "Sherlock Holmes Library" series, the most recent being SEVENTEEN STEPS TO 221B, edited by James Edward Holroyd (an anthology of excellent British scholarship first published in 1967), and MY DEAR HOLMES: A STUDY IN SHERLOCK, by Gavin Brend (first published in 1951); $8.00 each. The Armchair Detective Library offers a hard-cover reprint of SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MASQUERADE MURDERS, by Frank Thomas (first published in 1986 in an elusive paperback, with an energetic Holmes and a sharp-shooting Watson investigating murder and financial chicanery); $21.00. And Otto Penzler Books has published American editions of June Thomson's THE SECRET FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE SECRET CHRONICLES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (published in Britain in 1990 and 1992, each with seven of the unrecorded cases, told with nice style and imagination); $20.00 each. And Sam Siciliano's new THE ANGEL OF THE OPERA: SHERLOCK HOLMES MEETS THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA ($21.95); Watson, momentarily annoyed at Holmes, has invented Moriarty and Holmes' death at the Reichenbach, so this story is told by Holmes' cousin Dr. Henry Vernier, who accompanies Holmes to Paris, and tells a tale that has romance as well as mystery.
372. Magico has issued a new catalog of Sherlockiana, including a long back-list (some of the material was published as far back as 1980). One of the books offered for the first time is Reginald Johnson's THEY CAME TO BAKER STREET (New York: Magico Magazine, 1992; 174 pp., $25.95); Johnson was born at the turn of the century and discovered the Canon as a teen-ager, and his book is a collection of more than 50 well-written vignettes of those who visited the famous sitting-room, edited and foot-noted by Alan Truscott (who as the bridge editor of the N.Y. Times has shown in his bridge column that he too is an admirer of Sherlock Holmes). HOLMES' RANGE, by Walter P. Armstrong, Jr. (New York: Magico Magazine, 1994; 90 pp., $19.95), is a collection of reprints of S'ian essays, articles, and toasts written by another long-time enthusiast, a member of the The Baker Street Irregulars who for almost half a century has been a contributor to The Baker Street Journal and other periodicals. Shipping costs extra, and Magico's address is Box 156, New York, NY 10002-0156.
373. And, for those who have not yet heard the news, John Bennett Shaw is now recovering nicely from the heart attack he suffered on July 30, while he was visiting the hospital (and that's certainly the best place, if you're going to have one). He is home, and being catered to by various visiting children (some of whom conveniently are nurses), and he gets around a bit using a walker, and is impatiently waiting for the baseball strike to end or college football to start, and isn't answering mail yet (so you can send him anything that doesn't require an answer or an acknowledgement).

374. Sep 94 #1: Fordham University Press may be clearing out its warehouse. Mike Greenberg reports that some of their books are being discounted by Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031-5000): the second (revised) edition of DINING WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Julia Carlson Rosenblatt and Frederic H. Sonnenschmidt (1990), now $12.95; THE STANDARD DOYLE COMPANY: CHRISTOPHER MORLEY ON SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited and introduced by Steven Rothman (1990), now $12.95; and SHERLOCK HOLMES BY GAS-LAMP: HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE FIRST FOUR DECADES OF THE BAKER STREET JOURNAL, edited by Philip A. Shreffler (1989), now $14.95. I recommend all three books highly, and this is a splendid opportunity for those who do not already have them.

375. Thanks to David McCallister for the logo used by Sherlock Home Finders, in business for some ten years in Jupiter, Fla. (that's near Palm Beach). The company is owned by Richard Clegg, and if you're thinking of renting a home or apartment in the area, his number is 800-597-7368.
376. The Walt Disney Co., whose stage version of "Beauty and the Beast" at the Palace Theatre on Times Square is Broadway's top box-office draw, plans to restore the long-abandoned New Amsterdam Theatre, which once was the home of the Ziegfeld Follies and which has many Sherlockian associations. It was at the New Amsterdam that William Gillette performed in his farewell tour of "Sherlock Holmes" in 1929, and it was in NBC's studios above the theater, in 1930, that he broadcast the first Sherlockian radio program in the U.S. ("The Adventure of the Speckled Band"). By 1966 the theater had been converted into a movie house ("A Study in Terror" opened there), and eventually it closed, surrounded by a decaying neighborhood on 42nd Street. Disney has been offered a low-interest $21 million loan from the state, and will spend at least $8 million more on the project. If you want to see the sorry shape the theater was in, Louis Malle's film "Vanya on 42nd Street" (not yet released) was filmed there earlier this year.
377. LADY BRACKENSTALL'S LORD AND MASTER is J. C. Charles' latest contribution to adults-only Sherlockiana, providing details of Brackenstall's cruel and humiliating treatment of his beautiful young wife, and of his attentions to the pretty upstairs maid; the eight-page pamphlet costs $5.00 postpaid from The Filmoods Co. (Box 475, Scarsdale, NY 10583).
378. The list of "Dover Thrift Editions" continues to expand. These are trade paperbacks priced at $1.00, intended to get good literature into the hands of readers as cheaply as possible. SIX GREAT SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES was published in 1992, and Bob Persing now notes THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES New York: Dover Publications, 1994).
379. Last month I noted that Prime Minister Herbert Asquith is mentioned in the Canon, although not by name. For those who have not solved that puzzle, he was the Prime Minister from 1908 until 1916, and thus will be found in "His Last Bow" ("The Foreign Minister alone I could have withstood, but when the Premier also deigned to visit my humble roof---!").
380. Sep 94 #2: "Watson on the case as Sherlock packs bags," was the headline on a story by Antonia Feuchtwanger, spotted by Carey Cummings in the Daily Telegraph on Aug. 27, 1994. James Watson, the chairman of the National Freight Consortium (Britain's largest road-haulage business), led a boardroom coup that forced chief executive Peter Sherlock to resign. "I am quite a hard man," Watson said. "I may seem to be somebody who is quite laid-back, but when I want my way I get it."
381. DAMN YOU JOHN CHRISTIE!: THE PUBLIC LIFE OF AUSTRALIA'S SHERLOCK HOLMES, by John Lahey (Melbourne, State Library of Victoria, 1993; 292 pp., A$19.95), is a splendid biography of John Mitchell Christie, who joined the detective force in Victoria in 1867 as the age of 21, and soon became famous for his talents and his exploits, which involved a lot of disguises, and quite a bit of discretion. The book is only marginally Sherlockian, but it's grand fun; the publisher's address is 328 Swanston Street, Melbourne, Vic. 3000, Australia.
382. SHERLOCKIAN TOAST, edited by Luci Zahray and Mary Erickson, is a 38-page collection of imaginative toasts, poetic and otherwise, given by members and guests at meetings of The South Downers and published by the Homestead Press. Available from Luci Zahray, 685 Marylane Drive, Holland, MI 49423; $6.00 postpaid.
383. Ruth Brandon's THE LIFE AND MANY DEATHS OF HARRY HOUDINI was published last year in London (Mar 94 #3), and the American edition is due in October from Random House (368 pp., $25.00); it's a fine biography of Houdini, with discussion of his complicated relationship with Conan Doyle.
384. Douglas G. Greene reports that his biography of John Dickson Carr will be published by Otto Penzler Books next spring. Doug also has started his own company (Crippen & Landru) to issue trade paperbacks of unpublished (or at least uncollected) work by great detective-story writers. The first volume is SPEAK OF THE DEVIL, an unpublished and non-Sherlockian eight-part radio serial written by Carr ($14.95 post-paid). A flier with information about other titles planned is available from Crippen & Landru (Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505-9315).
385. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will convene on Tuesday, Oct. 25, at the Merchants Cafe in Seattle, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. Geologists and Sherlockians (and any other visitors of either persuasion) are welcome to join in honoring the world's first forensic geologist. The Merchants Cafe is at 109 Yesler Way in Pioneer Square, and the festivities begin with cocktails at 7:00 and continue with dinner at 8:00; reservations are not needed.
386. It's not too late (although there isn't much time left) for societies to follow a trail blazed by The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis in celebrating an important centennial this year: the 100th anniversary of Conan Doyle's visit to the United States. On Oct. 15, the day that he arrived in Indianapolis, members of the Clients will take a walking tour of the sites he visited while he was in the city, dedicate a memorial in the Grand Hall of Union Station, and dine at the Penn Street Bar & Grille (the site of the Denison Hotel, where he dined that evening with J. Whitcomb Riley).
387. Sep 94 #3: It was a long time ago (Aug 92 #2) that Pattie Brunner reported on THE DISNEY AFTERNOON, an audiocassette and CD collection of music from four Disney television shows. Disney Records (500 South Buena Vista Street, Burbank, CA 91521) offered to send people the lyrics, which have now arrived. The "Chip 'N Dale's Rescue Rangers Theme Song" includes a second verse "Fresh prints/Not since Watson and Mr. Holmes/Have two minds /So fine/Looked under every stone/When you need some help to save the day/They're never far away."
388. The U.S. Postal Service honored the 100th birthday of James Thurber with a commemorative issued this month. Credit Ray Betzner with the discovery of a series of somewhat Sherlockian parodies ("The Cases of Blue Ploermell") Thurber wrote for the Columbus Dispatch in 1923; Thurber's "The Gloucester Sympathizer" (1950), sometimes reprinted as "The Case Book of James Thurber", is better known.
389. Melanie Hughes has forwarded an article in the Hartford Courant, about a on-going attempt to restore William Gillette's small-scale railroad train to its rightful place at the Gillette Castle in Hadlyme, Conn. The railroad (which is nicely shown in the Movietone news interview with Gillette) ran along a three-mile route on the estate, and after Gillette's death was sold to a local amusement park. The Department of Environmental Protection is trying to negotiate the purchase or donation of the train, and hopes that it will be possible to restore at least part of the route on the estate.
390. And John Aidiniantz has not yet abandoned his campaign to win the address 221b for his Sherlock Holmes Museum at 239 Baker Street. The [London] Sunday Telegraph reported on Sept. 4 that the Westminster Council has issued a public notice of an application by the museum to re-number the street (the museum claims it will be able to create hundreds of mail-order jobs if it is allowed to use the address 221b and sell memorabilia to those who write to Sherlock Holmes). The paper notes that the word is that the application is "doomed to failure," because it is opposed by the Post Office, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and the Abbey National Building Society.
391. Bert Coules reports that the first six stories in "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" were broadcast weekly beginning Sept. 21 by BBC Radio 4, with Clive Merrison as Holmes and Michael Williams as Watson. The other six stories have not yet been recorded; when they have been, that will leave only "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Valley of Fear" to be done to make the series the first one ever dramatized to offer all 60 stories with the same actors as Holmes and Watson.
392. CRIMINAL CONVICTIONS: ERRANT ESSAYS ON PERPETRATORS OF LITERARY LICENSE, by Nicolas Freeling (Boston: David R. Godine, 1994; 155 pp., $22.95), offers Freeling's thoughts on an interesting selection of authors, some of whom are not usually considered to be crime writers; Conan Doyle is included, of course, and Chandler and Sayers and Simenon, along with Stendhal, Dickens, Conrad, and Kipling. Freeling is himself well-known in the genre (for his series detectives Henri Castang and Inspector Van der Valk); he is a fine writer, and presents imaginative insights into the work of all the authors.

393. Sep 94 #4: SCREAM FOR JEEVES: A PARODY, by P. H. Cannon, illustrated by J. C. Eckhardt (New York: Wodecraft Press, 1994; 86 pp., $20.00 cloth, $7.50 paper), offers three Jeeves-and-Wooster stories involving the worlds of H. P. Lovecraft, with Sherlockian and Doylean allusions, and in one tale an easily-recognizable "Mr. Altamont, of Chicago." The book also has a long essay ("The Adventure of the Three Anglo-American Authors") in which Cannon attempts to find parallels among the authors and their work. The book is available from the Necronomicon Press (Box 1304, West Warwick, RI 02893); postage extra, and they take plastic.
394. The Baker Street Pages offer personalized engraved plastic disks, four inches in diameter (the illustration is shown reduced here); the transparent disk has white highlighting, and a wooden base, and the cost is $14.00 postpaid, from Tim O'Connor, 6015 West Route 115, Herscher, IL 60941.
395. Chris Redmond reports that his QUOTATIONS FROM BAKER STREET (Jul 94 #5) has 48 pages and saddle-stitch binding (not clam-shell plastic); $7.50 postpaid from George Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada.
396. Sherlockians have an excuse to see the new film "Corrina, Corrina" (which has been described as the latest in the "kid finds mate for bumbling single dad" series). Ray Liotta (a widower) hires Whoopi Goldberg to care for his daughter, and there's a neighbor (a widow) with two sons who like to dress in costumes, and at one point they dress up as Holmes and Watson.
397. "Mysteriously Yours" (a mystery dinner-theater company that performs at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto) is now doing "The Mystery of the Maltese Blue Jay" and five other plays from their repertory, and will perform a Sherlock Holmes mystery in November, December, and January. Additional information is available from Mysteriously Yours, at 1927 Yonge Street, Toronto ON M4S 1Z3, Canada (416-486-7469 or 800-668-3323).
398. Bjarne Nielsen's mystery-specialist bookshop Antikvariat Pinkerton has a new address: Holtets Plads 1, DK-4500 Nykobing Sjaelland, Denmark. And that's where he also presides over the new Sherlock Holmes Museum and the library of the Danish Academy of Crime Writers. Visitors are welcome, and it's best to write or call (45/59-93-28-21) to ensure that Bjarne's there when you want to be. His current mail-order catalog includes mystery and science-fiction in Danish and in English, including old (and often rare) Sherlockiana.
399. The current issue of Anglofile reports that the film "The Age of Innocence" (with Daniel Day-Lewis) will air on HBO cable on Oct. 29; Jeremy Brett has suggested that Day-Lewis might well be the next Sherlock Holmes, and you'll see why in the film. And "Shadowlands" (with Edward Hardwicke) will air on Cinemax in January. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
400. Sep 94 #5: The fall issue of The Sherlockian Times (the catalog/newsletter/ journal published by Classic Specialties) is at hand, with a fine assortment of books, prints, shirts, postcards, scarves, pins, news, scarves, a short pastiche by Robert Coffen, and much more. Their address is: Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219. Classic Specialties also offers the spectacular 1995 calendar that Cadds (the British printers) has published with full-color photographs from the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" television series; $16.50 postpaid (Hugh Scullion of Cadds is not able to supply the calendar directly).
401. Lawrence Nepodahl reports that Martin Kosleck died on Jan. 16. He acted with Basil Rathbone in the 1945 film "Pursuit to Algiers" (as Mirko), and played Maurice Gretz in Rathbone's non-Sherlockian "The Mad Doctor" (1941).
402. The latest catalog from What on Earth (2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087) includes a "Sherlock Hound: Master Sleuth" teaset that includes: a Teapot Hound ($28.95); Sugar and Creamer Dogs ($24.95); Salt and Pepper Pups ($12.95). Shipping is extra, and they take plastic.
403. Michael Ross' Baskerville Bucher has reprinted Ferdinand Bonn's SHERLOCK HOLMES: DETEKTIVKOMODIE IN VIER AUFZUGEN (112 pp., $16.00); Bonn wrote and starred in the play in Berlin in 1906 (when the play was first published), and the new edition has the play and annotations in German, a summary and commentary in English, and photographs from the original production. The play is based both on the Gillette play and on the Canon, and Bonn went on to write two more Sherlockian plays (which Michael intends to publish) and to star in S'ian films. Send currency only, please, to Michael Ross Verlag, Bendheide 65, D-47906 Kempen, Germany.
404. Will Walsh reports that the autumn 1994 catalog from the Ben Silver Collection (800-221-4671) uses a Sherlockian silhouette to identify 17 neckties "associated with the master sleuth and his creator." These are regimental or school ties (such as "the Thirty-Fourth Bombay Infantry, of which Major Sholto and Capt. Morstan were officers"); the company's address is 149 King Street, Charleston, SC 29401.
405. Listen for Pleasure (EMI) have added a fourth title to their list of twoaudiocassette sets of Canonical stories. HIS LAST BOW AND OTHER STORIES has four tales (Wist/RedC/Lady/Last) read (and read well) by Martin Jarvis. The other (older) sets are THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Hugh Burden), A STUDY IN SCARLET (Tony Britton), and THE VALLEY OF FEAR (Martin Jarvis); the suggested retail price for each set is £7.49.
406. Sep 94 #6: Nice news for fans of Jeremy Brett: the newly-restored 30-yearold film "My Fair Lady" opened on Sept. 21 at the large-screen Ziegfeld theatre in New York (and it likely will be shown in other cities that are fortunate enough to have houses with big screens and proper sound systems). And Melanie Hughes notes a report that Brett hosted an hour-long documentary about the film, which will be included in a $75.00 anniversary re-issue (probably on laserdisc and videocassettes).
407. Moris H. Goldberg has succeeded the late James Howe as the contact for The Deerstalkers (the Kent, Ohio, branch of The Inverness Capers); his address is 346 East Summit Street #A, Kent, OH 44240-3680.
408. Robert Bloch died on Sept. 23. Best known for his novel "Psycho" (on which Alfred Hitchcock based his classic horror film), Bloch was prolific in the fields of fantasy, mystery, and suspense. He also was a friend of Luther L. Norris, and an admirer of Solar Pons, and the author of an essay on "The Dynamics of an Asteroid" (in the Oct. 1953 issue of the BSJ). Conan Doyle made a cameo appearance in Bloch's novel NIGHT OF THE RIPPER (1984), and he also wrote a screenplay based on H. F. Heard's "Mr. Mycroft" novel A TASTE FOR HONEY, which was released by Paramount in 1967 (as "The Deadly Bees") without an appearance by Mr. Mycroft, who was in Bloch's screenplay, but British writer Anthony Marriott took "some vast liberties" with the script, Bloch later reported (and Bloch said that he never saw the film he called his "deformed offspring").
409. "Baker Street Revisited: A Weekend with Sherlock Holmes" is the 15th annual program of talks, panel discussions, and films presented by The Six Napoleons and the Carlton Club at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore, Nov. 19-20. The Library's at 400 Cathedral Street, events start at 10:00 am on Nov. 19 and at 2:30 pm on Nov. 20, and there is no charge for admission.
410. Tim O'Connor reports that the current catalog from Past Times (280 Summer Street, Boston, MA 02210) (800-621-6020) has a made-in-England wool tweed deerstalker ($59.50).
411. Gertrude Mahoney reports that the current catalog from the House of Tyrol, Box 909, Cleveland, GA 30528 (800-241-5404) offers Holmes and Watson wall masks at $29.95 each (these are the masks made in England by Legend Products and distributed here over the years by Cowin Enterprises). And a

- set of Sherlock Holmes desk accessories in hand-cast English pewter: a letter opener and a magnifying glass at $36.00 each, or $69.00 the set. And they take plastic.
412. Stu Shiffman has reported an item in Comic Shop News (Sept. 28) forecasting a two-issue comic-book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: ADVENTURE OF THE OPERA GHOST, by Steven Jones and Aldin Baroza, due from Caliber Press in Oct. at $2.95 each. Sherlock Holmes vs. the Phantom of the Opera, of course.
413. And: if the end-of-October issue doesn't arrive until the end of the first week of November, the delay will be due to my enjoying my trip to Seattle.
414. Oct 94 #1: John Bennett Shaw died on Oct. 2 of a heart attack. He had the attack at home, and was taken to the hospital, and wasn't in pain, and Dorothy was with him, and they had a chance to talk before he passed away. John was unique in many ways, but I think the most important of all his achievements was that he was such a good friend to so many of us. Some of us have been fortunate enough to have enjoyed that friendship for more than thirty years (as I have), and it's difficult to accept that sort of loss. If you would like to see what some of his friends thought of John, I recommend the Dec. 1990 issue of The Baker Street Journal, which Philip A. Shreffler edited as a surprise tribute to him. And it was a surprise, and if you don't have a copy, you may be able to get that issue from the Fordham University Press, University Box L, Bronx, NY 10458-5172 ($5.00 postpaid if it's still in stock).
415. I think that it was the fun he found in the world of Sherlockians that was most important to John, far more so than the things he collected. But of course he was well-known as a collector, and it was thoroughly appropriate that he received the Investiture "The Hans Sloane of My Age" from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1965. He received a Two-Shilling Award in 1980, and the BSI's Queen Victoria Medal in 1985, and although the awards and honors were fun to receive, it was people he enjoyed the most. He also enjoyed telling stories, about and on himself, and that's the way many of us will remember him: enjoying a good story.
416. Readers of this newsletter should be aware that it is to John Bennett Shaw that you really are indebted for its existence, since it started with great informality in 1971 simply as sheets of paper kept by my typewriter so that I could write paragraphs of minor news to send to John. So you are sharing (and some of you have done so for many years) some of the news that I have enjoyed sending to him.
417. Dorothy Shaw has suggested that contributions in memory of John might be made to the John H. Watson Fund, which provides assistance to Sherlockians who might not otherwise be able to attend the birthday festivities (checks payable to the Fund can be sent to Dr. John H. Watson, c/o Thomas L. Stix, Jr., 34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648).
418. The on-again off-again world premiere of the play "Harry and Arthur" (with Leonard Nimoy as Houdini and William Shatner as Conan Doyle) appears to be definitely off: an item in the Boston Globe (Sept. 22) reports that Ralph Miller, owner of the Bucks County Playhouse, is suing Shatner for $150,000 for breach of something-or-other. The play is based on the novel BELIEVE. (written by Shatner and Michael Tobias), and was first reported in 1992 and scheduled at the Playhouse in Dec. 1993, and postponed (more than once, it would seem).
419. Critic's Choice Video (Box 808, Itasca, IL 60143) (800-367-7765) has some inexpensive Sherlockian video: "Sherlock Holmes and the Incident at Victoria Falls" (GJVES009930) at $14.98; "Sherlock Holmes and the "Leading Lady" (GJAVD051204) at $9.99; and "Without a Clue" (GJORIO18733) at $9.99. These are "EP" recordings, which means low speed and low fidelity.
420. Oct 94 #2: More catalog stuff: the carved wooden head-of-Holmes previously available on a walking stick and an umbrella is now offered on a 21-inch cast-resin shoe horn at $25.00 (item 101E) from the Horchow Collection (800-456-7000). Also: "Sherlock Holmes hung his hat on a hall tree like ours," is the proud (and unlikely, I suspect) boast by Colonial Garden Kitchens (Hanover, PA 17333-0066) (800-245-3399); "this twelve-prong butler will hold your company's hats, coats, scarves" (it's brass-coated, six feet high, on sale at $28.90).
421. Forecast: Carole Nelson Douglas' IRENE'S LAST WALTZ, from Forge in paperback in Nov., $4.99); published earlier this year in hardcover (Feb 94 #5), this is the fourth in the imaginative series about Irene Adler Norton and Penelope Huxleigh, who investigate a murder at the Parisian establishment of king of couture Charles Worth, and then return to Prague for a second encounter with the King of Bohemia.
422. There's a puzzle genre that consists of the first letters of the words in a phrase (such as "emdwe"), and you're supposed to figure out what the phrase is ("Elementary, my dear Watson, elementary"). Chris Redmond recently sent such a list to The Hounds of the Internet, and I'm happy to reprint it here (so that others can have some fun). The phrases all are from the Canon:
- |           |          |           |           |          |            |
|-----------|----------|-----------|-----------|----------|------------|
| achdtht   | ayvyloyr | caoiciats | htsyjio   | iwtbtsb  | tbawmwihek |
| tbftgogsh | tddnitnt | tptlattc  | trhlid    | tshsiatw | twtfogah   |
| wboaboasu | wdydwtb  | yhbiaip   | ywncmammw |          |            |
423. I have in the past assumed that the subscribers to this newsletter also are subscribers to The Baker Street Journal, but that assumption likely is less accurate now, since the newsletter is being posted in bits and bytes to The Hounds of the Internet. The BSI is published quarterly by The Baker Street Irregulars and is edited by William R. Cochran, and I recommend it highly. The Sept. 1994 issue includes a fine article by C. Bryan Gassner and Morrow Hall about Katherine McMahon, who first met Christopher Morley when he made his rounds as a bookseller in the 1930s, and who was one of the successful solvers of the famous crossword puzzle and thus became one of the earliest members of The Baker Street Irregulars, and who in 1991 received her Investiture and Irregular Shilling. The BSI costs $17.50 a year ($20.00 outside the United States); Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
424. Not new, but spotted recently in a Learningsmith shop in a mall: I.Q. Games Culture Classics (Educational Insights EI-2096) is a set of card quizzes on literature and the arts (with Sherlock Holmes on the box and one quiz about "The Hound of the Baskervilles", $6.95; Mystery Authors (Whitehall Line 99-1501) is a set of playing cards with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on the box and some of the cards), $2.95.
425. AUGUST HARVEST: ESSAYS PENNED BY VARIOUS HANDS TO KEEP THE MEMORY OF AUGUST DERLETH GREEN (New York: Magico Magazine, 1994; 172 pp., $25.00) is a fine way to see how varied August Derleth's talents were. Ely Liebow has edited the book, which includes a chapter by Paul B. Smedegaard on the Solar Pons stories, and nine other authors (including Frank Belknap Long, Norman Blei, and Steve Eng) discuss the different genres in which Derleth was so active and entertaining. The publisher's address is: Box 156, New York, NY 10002.
426. Oct 94 #3: Further to last month's mention (Sep 94 #5) of the two-audiocassette sets available from Listen for Pleasure, they offer four titles: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES read by Hugh Burden (LFP 7607), A STUDY IN SCARLET read by Tony Britton (LFP 7613), and THE VALLEY OF FEAR (LFP 7616) and HIS LAST BOW AND OTHER STORIES (LFP 7808) read by Martin Jarvis. The sets cost £7.49 each, shipping is extra, they accept plastic, and the address is MFP/EMI, P.O. Box 33, Hayes, Middlesex UB4 0SY, England.
427. Western Samoa will issue a set of four stamps marking the centenary of the death of Robert Louis Stevenson, showing his yacht Equator, his home Vaillima, and his tomb on Mount Vaea, as well as his portrait. He corresponded with Conan Doyle, complimenting him in 1893 on THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: "That is the class of literature that I like when I have the toothache. As a matter of fact, it was a pleurisy I was enjoying when I took the volume up; and it will interest you as a medical man to know that the cure was for the moment effectual." Later that year he wrote about the - difficulties he encountered telling the story of "The Engineer's Thumb" to a Samoan: "It was necessary, I need hardly say, to go somewhat farther afield than you have done. To explain (for instance) what a railway is, what a steam hammer, what a coach and horse, what coining, what a criminal, and what the police."

428. An alert for variant-hunters. The Oxford University Press catalog shows a color photograph of the boxed set of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES, with the box displaying two color illustrations on the front (rather than the three black-and-white illustrations on the box with my set). It is possible that the photograph shows a preliminary mockup that was not issued (early publicity showed the color artwork printed on the covers of the volumes, rather than on the dust jackets as issued).
429. Jackie Geyer reports that Sherlock Holmes has been on display in New York: an exhibit of 222 film stills at the Museum of Modern Art included two that showed Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes, and an exhibit of poster art at the Museum of Television & Radio featured a poster for the Granada series on "Mystery!"
430. Credit Peter Calamai with having discovered Martin L. Friedland's THE DEATH OF OLD MAN RICE: A TRUE STORY OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN AMERICA (New York: New York University Press, 1994; 423 pp., $29.95). "Old man Rice" was William Marsh Rice, a wealthy Texan who died under suspicious circumstances in New York in 1900, bequeathing a great deal of money to found what was to become Rice University in Houston (depending on which of his wills was accepted as valid), and the book provides a fascinating account of the arrest of Albert T. Patrick for first-degree murder, and his trial and conviction and many appeals. And a demonstration that some aspects of the relationships among money, media, and justice have not changed a bit since then. And there's a connection to Conan Doyle: one of the points at issue during the trial and appeals involved embalming, and one of Patrick's supporters seems to have written to Dr. Joe Bell, who in turn contacted Sir Arthur: Friedland found a letter from Conan Doyle in an embalmers' magazine published in 1907 that said that "there seems to have been a gross miscarriage of justice."

431. Oct 94 #4: Dave Galerstein has reported that the Cecil Higgins Art Gallery offers an opportunity to have your own copy of Joseph Mallord William Turner's fine watercolor of "The Great Falls of the Reichenbach" (1804). The painting, on display at the National Gallery of Art in Washington last year (Jun 93 #8), is now back in Britain. Postcards (75p), color slides (£8.00), black-and-white photographs (£10.00), and color photographs (£32.00) are available; prices include shipping, payment in sterling is required with your order, and the Gallery's address is: Castle Close, Bedford MK40 3NY, England.
432. Don Hobbs reports a source for Icelandic translations, for those who don't yet have one: Books on Iceland, Laugavegi 18, IS-101 Reykjavik, Iceland. The titles available are AFREK SHERLOCK HOLMES 1, AFREK SHERLOCK HOLMES 2, ENDURKOMA SHERLOCK HOLMES 1, ENDURKOMA SHERLOCK HOLMES 2, AND BASKERVILLEHUNDURINN, and the cost is $24.00 postpaid per volume (they take plastic).
433. Steven Cragg's caricature of Conan Doyle, previously used on T-shirts marketed by Largely Literary Designs, has now appeared on bookmarks ($1.29); check your local bookshop. The bookmarks are distributed by Roxbury Twain, 25 Canal Bank Road, Windsor Locks, CT 06096.
434. The 1994 issue of The Musgrave Papers (the annual journal published by The Northern Musgraves) offers 132 pages of scholarship, artwork, reviews and news (the society plans to offer "A Study in Scotland" in Edinburgh on May 6-8, 1995, with papers, dramatics, and gala dinner in the Great Scottish Hall). Membership in the society costs $32.00 a year (airmail to the U.S.), and includes two issues of The Ritual; the society also offers Kathryn White's artwork as prints and on Christmas cards. Write to David Stuart Davies, Overdale, 69 Greenhead Road, Huddersfield, W. Yorks. HD1 4ER, England.
435. Heinz Ruhmann died on Oct. 4. The German actor appeared in more than 100 films, beginning with "The German Mother's Heart" (1926), and on stage and television. And he played an amusing Dr. Watson in "Der Mann, der Sherlock Holmes war" (1937), released on videocassette by Ufa Universum Film in 1992 and shown (subtitled in English) in many cities in the U.S. in 1993 as part of a touring program of German mystery films.
436. The Kenneth W. Rendell Gallery offers Conan Doyle's signed three-page contract with Eveleigh Nash and Grayson for their 1926 edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (the book sold for 2s6d, with a 3d royalty to the author, who received an advance of £100, so they expected to sell more than 8,000 copies); the Gallery's address is 989 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10021 (800-376-1776), and they're asking $15,000 for the contract.
437. "High Technology to Market Hot New MPEG Titles with Jakarta Playback Card" was the headline on a story in Business Wire (Sept. 13), reported by Melanie Hughes. You install the Jakarta MPEG playback card/video accelerator in your computer, and that allows you to play high-quality digitized video from CD-ROM discs. The first titles ($9.95 each) will be three discs of Max Fleischer's "Superman" cartoons from the 1940s, and one disc with two of the Ronald Howard's "Sherlock Holmes" shows from the 1950s.
438. Oct 94 #5: Jack Kerr reports that a videocassette of "Star Trek: The Next Generation: Elementary, Dear Data" (the first of the two Data-as-Holmes episodes) is available for $14.95 at Suncoast Video (and likely at other shops). And that MURDER ON TRIAL, edited by Cynthia Manson (New York: Signet Mystery, 1994; $4.99) includes Conan Doyle's "The Prisoner's Defense".
439. William Hjortsberg's NEVERMORE (New York: Atlantic Monthly Press, 1994; 289 pp., $21.00) brings Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini to New York in 1923, and involves them both with Opal Crosby Fletcher (a provocative and beautiful medium) and with a mysterious serial killer (who is copying the murders described by Edgar Allan Poe and whose targets include Conan Doyle and Houdini). There's lots of skullduggery and derring-do, as well as some serious slighting of the facts with regard to the lives of Conan Doyle and Houdini and their families.
440. Michael J. Gilbert (Box 23094, Ottawa, ON K2A 4E2, Canada) crafts a nice assortment of Sherlockian pewter: figurines ($45.00), plaques ($115.00), keychains ($8.00), and pins ($8.00); prices in Canadian dollars, shipping costs extra, he will send you an illustrated flier is available, and his e-mail address is <mgilbert@fox.nstn.ca>.
441. Debbie Clark reports a find at a Sun Coast video store: 3 ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (a $14.95 videocassette). Two adventures are old Ronald Howard programs ("The Haunted Gainsborough" and "The Exhumed Client"), and one is "At the Movies" (a 48-minute set of clips, trailers, and previews); from Brentwood Home Video, 5740 Corsa Avenue, Westlake Village, CA 91362 (item #30575).
442. The SHERLOCK HOLMES READER is a new "Courage Classics" collection published in cloth by the Running Press, with eight stories (Glor/Scan/RedH/Five/Spec/Fina/Empt/Danc), Christopher Clausen's essay on "Sherlock Holmes, Order, and the Late-Victorian Mind" (first published in the spring 1984 issue of the Georgia Review), and Sir Arthur's "Sidelights on Sherlock Holmes" (from MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES). 224 pp., $5.98; also available from the publisher (shipping is extra): 125 South 22nd Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103-4399 (800-345-5359).
443. Andy Peck reports a Mystery Guild edition (#023432) of Kim Newman's ANNO DRACULA at $9.98; Mycroft and fellow-members of the Diogenes Club versus Dracula, who is both Prince Consort and Regent, in a well-written novel. The Guild's address is: Box 6307, Indianapolis, IN 46206-6307.
444. Mark Alberstat's 1995 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
445. Oct 94 #6: This year's Nobel Prize in Economics was awarded to mathematician John F. Nash (Princeton University) and economists John C. Harsanyi (University of California at Berkeley) and Reinhard Selten (University of Bonn) for their groundbreaking work in integrating "game theory" into the - study of economic behavior. It was just 50 years ago that John von Neumann and Oskar Morgenstern published their treatise on THE THEORY OF GAMES AND ECONOMIC BEHAVIOR (in which Holmes' flight from Moriarty was used as an example to explain the game of Matching Pennies).

446. One of the attractive items commemorating the Third Irregular Sherlockian Seminar at Stanford University in August was a set of five multi-color pins designed by Eugene Stovall. The full set measures 4 x 4.5 in. and weighs 8 oz. (so strong labels will be important), and there are two variants are offered: the original set, with a commemorative plate and with errors on three of the pins ($75.00); and the unofficial set, without a commemorative plate and with the errors corrected ($60.00). The errors are on the pins for Jack McMurdo, Ted Baldwin, and Sherlock Holmes (the illustration here shows the corrected pins), and these pins also are available separately, incorrect and correct, for the completists who want everything ($20.00 for Holmes, and $15.00 each for the other two). Prices are postpaid (add $2.00 per order outside the U.S.), and the address of the company is Olympic Pin Collectors, 5848 Balmoral Drive, Oakland, CA 94619.
447. The Mini-Tonga Scion Society had a mini-meeting during the national meeting of the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts in Anaheim, and issue #28 of The Tonga Times offers eight pages of news and articles and reviews (and instructions on how to make a miniature barometer). Membership costs $7.00 a year (with three issues of the newsletter), and if you would like to have more information about the society, you need only send a #10 SASE to Carol Wenk (Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107).
448. "Matlock" (starring Andy Griffith) has used a Sherlockian plot in one show in the eight seasons it has been on television, and has had S'ian dialogue in some other shows, is now entering its ninth season, with Griffith noting the series' attention to music, in an interview in the N.Y. Daily News on Oct. 12 (at hand from Ted Friedman). "The humor and music has grown over the years, and we feel comfortable doing it: even Sherlock Holmes stopped to play his violin once in a while."
449. Michael Taylor reports that the boxed hard-cover nine-volume edition of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES has been discounted at $49.50 (plus $5.00 for shipping). And while supplies last, the offer includes a set of postcards with the dust-jacket woodcut artwork (they say 90 postcards, but I assume that's a misprint for 9). Oxford University Press (Order Department), 2001 Evans Road, Cary, NC 27513 (800-230-3242); credit-card orders welcome.
450. Oct 94 #7: Sherlock Holmes' 141st birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 6, with the traditional festivities in New York. But the festivities actually will begin on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Allen Mackler and Charlie Shields will lead participants in the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with luncheon at McSorley's. Allen's address is 324 2nd Street NE, Osseo, MN 55369, and from Jan. 3 he will be at the Iroquois Hotel (212-840-3080).
451. Bob Hahn (who claims to be known as the Booming Bittern of Baskerville Bog) will preside over the Aunt Clara Sing (off-hand, off-the-wall, and largely off-key) beginning some time after 8:00 pm at O'Lunney's Steak House. You can reserve a seat by sending a check for $10.00 a person to Hugh O'Lunney (12 West 44th Street, New York, NY 10036); your $10.00 will be applied to your tab for the evening.
452. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast from 8:30 to 10:30 am at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; $18.95 (checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars should be sent to Tom and Ruthann Stetak, 15529 Diagonal Road, LaGrange, OH 44050). The William Gillette Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $30.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). Otto Penzler's open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) also is on Friday, from 11:00 am to 6:00 pm, and it is possible that Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
453. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at 24 Fifth Avenue (at 9th Street), and The Fortescue Symposium (sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, The Priory Scholars, and The Montague Street Lodgers) will convene at 6:30 pm at the Sky Garden of the St. Moritz Hotel at 50 Central Park South at 6th Avenue; $60.00 (Katherine Karlson, 1259 Fowler Place, Binghamton, NY 13903). Early reservations are recommended for the breakfast, the luncheon, and the Fortescue festivities.
454. On Saturday a posse of purveyors will offer a wide variety of S'iana at the Algonquin (also known for the occasion as Covent Garden West) from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; vendor tables are available (Ray Betzner, 107 Tendril Court, Williamsburg, VA 23188). And The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (a Sherlockian chapter of The Wodehouse Society as well as a Wodehousean scion society of the BSI) will hold a Junior Bloodstain in the Blue Bar of the Algonquin at noon. Artist Steven Emmons, whose attractive Sherlockian artwork has been shown in the past, will exhibit again at the Chisholm Gallery, on the 6th floor at 55 West 17th Street (near Sixth Avenue) from noon until 8:00 pm (in case you're wondering what to do before or after the cocktail party).
455. The Baker Street Irregulars will hold their annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30 pm at 24 Fifth Avenue (at 9th Street). There will be an open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the cost is $35.00 a person (checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars should be sent to Donald E. Novorsky, 5182 Mahoning Avenue NW, Warren, OH 44483).
456. Oct 94 #8: The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Tom Stix has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for rooms (single or double) at $145.00 a night (Wednesday through Saturday); this is the total cost, because no tax is due on reservations made through the BSI. But please note that all other charges (such as room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians: your reservations, with full names of all occupants, accompanied by payment (checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) should be sent to Thomas L. Stix, Jr. (34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648) and to arrive no later than Dec. 16.
457. Note: payments to The Baker Street Irregulars for more than one event and for reservations at the Algonquin can be combined and made with one check (in U.S. funds, please) or by international money order to be sent to the BSI, c/o Thomas L. Stix, Jr., 34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648.
458. Mary Ellen Rich has once again kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about non-optional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. If you plan to arrive on Thursday, it is important to confirm that the weekend-package rates include Thursday.
459. Roosevelt (45 East 45th St.): $99 (single/double) (800-223-1870); Jolly dison (22 East 38th St.): $99 (single/double) (800-225-4340); Journey's End (3 East 40th St.): $95 (single/double) (800-668-4200); Wellington (55th St. at 7th Ave.): $94 (single) $104 (double) (800-652-1212); Iroquois (49 West 44th St.): $75 (single) $85 (double) (800-332-7220); Portland (132 West 47th St.): $70 (single) $85 (double) (212-382-0600); Pickwick Arms (250 East 51st St.): $70 (single) $90 (double) (212-355-0300).
460. Baker Street Miscellanea's last issue (#76) has been published, and it is a fine one, offering the usual excellent mix of interesting and well-written Sherlockiana and Doyleana. Copies of issues #61-76 will be available until Dec. 1, for those who may wish to see what they've been missing; $5.00 each postpaid, from the Sciolist Press, Box 225, Winnetka, IL 60093.
461. Benton Wood's new MYCROFT'S PUZZLE BOOK: A COLLECTION OF CONANICAL CRYPTIC & CEREBRAL CHALLENGES offers an intriguing sampling of Sherlockian puzzles Ben has published in his newsletters over the past 20 years; his address is Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222, and the cost is $7.50 postpaid (or $10.00 out-side the United States).

462. Cross-over continues between the worlds of Doctor Who and Sherlock Holmes. Issue #4 of Trenchcoat (a 200-page Doctor Who fanzine) offers "The Captive Sleuth", a 12-page pastiche by Patricia Smith that involves the Doctor in an attempt to rescue Holmes from a pulp publisher who is kidnapping famous detectives. US$15.00 postpaid from James Bow, 99 Krug Street, Kitchener, Ont. N2H 2X8 Canada (or CA$15.00 to addresses in Canada).
463. Christopher Roden reports that THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES will be issued in paperback next month at £3.99 per volume ($5.95 in the U.S.) and with Frederick Dorr Steele artwork on the covers.
464. Nov 94 #1: I mentioned earlier (Sep 94 #1) discounted editions of some of the Fordham University Press' Sherlockian titles now available from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031-5000); I've seen two of them (SHERLOCK HOLMES BY GAS-LAMP, edited by Philip A. Shreffler, and THE STANDARD DOYLE COMPANY, edited by Steven Rothman), and they are variant issues: there are no dust jackets, but the jacket art is now printed on laminated covers (which is sometimes called library or school binding). DINING WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Julia Carlson Rosenblatt and Frederic H. Sonnenschmidt, may also exist in the same new binding, and the three titles likely are available from bookstores as well.
465. Reported by D.C.A. Mulcahy: Raymond Smullyan's THE CHESS MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FIFTY TANTALIZING PROBLEMS OF CHESS DETECTION (Sep 79 #3) has been reprinted in paperback by Times Books/Random House ($11.00).
466. And Tom Bullimore's BAKER STREET PUZZLES, published two years ago in Great Britain (Nov 92 #4), now has an American edition (New York: Sterling Publishing, 1994; 128 pp., $4.95), but with fewer puzzles; it's a collection of logic problems, number puzzles, and the like, with Holmes and Watson as characters and in the illustrations (by Ian Anderson).
467. Thanks to Peter Costello for a copy of a new stamp from a Irish set honoring Ireland's Nobel prizewinners, one of which was George Bernard Shaw. According to Hesketh Pearson, in GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: HIS LIFE AND PERSONALITY (1963), he once said to Shaw, "I am told I am wrong in identifying Doyle with his creation of Dr. Watson. Some seem to think he was Sherlock Holmes to the life." Shaw replied, "What a libel! Sherlock was a drug addict without a single amiable trait, and Watson was a decent fellow." Another nice story about Shaw is told by Edward Hardwicke, who on his 21st birthday was given a bound volume inscribed by many of his father's friends. Shaw was one of those friends, and offered some advice: "Don't go on the stage, Edward, you would only be Cedric Hardwicke's son at best."
468. James Hill died on Oct. 7. He began his long career as a film director in 1937, making documentaries for the British post office, and had his biggest commercial hit with "Born Free" (1965). And his next film was "A Study in Terror" (1965), with John Neville and Donald Houston as Holmes and Watson.
469. Bill Nadel offers news of an end-of-the-birthday-weekend opportunity to see the last film in which Edith Meiser appeared: "The Middle of the Night" is scheduled at 2:40 pm, 6:30 pm, and 10:20 pm on Sunday, Jan. 8, at the Film Forum 2 at 209 West Houston Street (just south of Greenwich Village); their box-office telephone number is 212-727-8110.
470. Skeletons in the Closet (1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033) is run by the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office to raise funds for the local Youthful Drunk Driving Program, and continues to offer imaginative merchandise that includes "Sherlock Bones" (a skeleton in appropriate costume) on T-shirts, tote bags, and mugs, and they have an illustrated sales list.
471. Nov 94 #2: Roger Johnson notes in The District Messenger that Robert Richardson has a new short-story pastiche "The Woman of Goodwill" in CRIME YELLOW: GOLLANZC NEW CRIMES 1, edited by Maxim Jakubowski (London: Victor Gollancz, £14.99), and that Ian Henry (20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England) plans to publish Glen Petrie's new Mycroft Holmes novel THE HAMPSTEAD POISONING and a hardcover reprint of SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HELLBIRDS (1977), by Austin Mitchelson and Nicolas Utechin (the Ian Henry books are distributed in the U.S. by Players Press, Box 1132, Studio City, CA 91604). Roger's newsletter is full of news of what's happening in Great Britain (and sometimes elsewhere), and is published approximately monthly with no guarantee of how many pages or how often. The cost is $10.00 for twelve issues; dollar checks (payable to Jean Upton) can be sent to Roger Johnson, Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford, Essex CM2 6DE, England.
472. Thanks to Christopher Roden for a copy of a new British stamp (part of a set honoring "Summertime") that shows cricket at Lord's. And of course there is a Sherlockian connection, via Dorothy L. Sayers, who said (in the Foreword to her 1946 collection UNPOPULAR OPINIONS "The game of applying the methods of the 'Higher Criticism' to the Sherlock Holmes canon was begun, many years ago, by Monsignor Ronald Knox. . . . Since then, the thing has become a hobby among a select set of jesters here and in America. The rule of the game is that it must be played as solemnly as a county cricket match at Lord's: the slightest touch of extravagance or burlesque ruins the atmosphere."
473. "The Trial of Sherlock Holmes!" is the title of the mystery dinner-theater production that opened at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto on Nov. 11 (and it will play into January). "This hilarious, new, interactive murder mystery has the world's foremost fictional detective defending himself against the charges brought forth by the forces of Scotland Yard," according to the flier received from Mysteriously Yours (1927 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4S 1Z3, Canada) (416-486-7469 or 800-668-3323)
474. More news of plans for the birthday festivities in New York: the location of the Jr. Bloodstain of the Clients of Adrian Mulliner has been changed, and it will be held in the Grill Room of the Penn Club of New York (30 West 44th Street) from noon to 1:00 pm on Saturday, Jan. 7. Jon L. Lellenberg would like to know how many breadroll-throwers he can expect; if you plan to attend the gathering, please let him know (3133 Connecticut Avenue NW #827, Washington, DC 20008).
475. Gibraltar has issued eight one-crown coins honoring "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (six of the designs show Canonical scenes, the seventh shows Watson and Holmes meeting Conan Doyle in Baker Street, and the eighth has the Mary Celeste, described as "Gibraltar's own story of the great detective" in the full-color flier from the Pobjoy Mint, which struck the coins). The coins are offered in cupro-nickel ($6.95 each) and sterling silver ($39.95 each) and gold ($175.00 each) if a complete set is ordered (shipping costs $7.00 extra per order). All three metals (and additional information in an illustrated flier) are available from the Pobjoy Mint (Box 13826, Milwaukee, WI 53213); the full-color flier and the silver coins are available from Pobjoy at Mint House, 92 Oldfields Road, Sutton, Surrey SM1 2NW, England).
476. Nov 94 #3: Simon & Schuster's audiocassette THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES #26 ($12.00) is the last volume in this long and welcome series, with two more of the splendid radio programs written by Denis Green and Anthony Boucher. Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce star in "The Haunting of Sherlock Holmes" (20 May 46) and "The Baconian Cipher" (27 May 46), and there are two new introductions by Mycroft Holmes (played by Elliott Reid). Joe Kearns substituted for Bruce in "The Haunting of Sherlock Holmes", and "The Baconian Cipher" was the last of Rathbone's appearances in the series. Ken Greenwald and his associates at 221A Baker Street deserve our gratitude for having brought us high-quality recordings of 52 of these fine shows.
477. Reports from Bouchercon 25 in Seattle last month indicate that it was a fine event (including the Sherlockian tea sponsored by The Sound of the Baskervilles). Bouchercon 26 will be held at the Royal Centre in Nottingham, Sept. 28-Oct. 1, 1995, with Colin Dexter and James Ellroy as guests of honour; more information is available from the Broadway Media Centre, 14 Broad Street, Nottingham NG1 3AL, England. Bouchercon 27 will be in St.

- Paul on Oct. 9-13, 1996, with Dennis Armstrong and Bruce Southworth as co-chairs, Mary Higgins Clark as guest of honor; information from Box 8296, Minneapolis, MN 55408. Bouchercon 28 will be in San Francisco, with Bruce Taylor and Bryan Barrett as co-chairs; information from Box 6202, Hayward, CA 94540.
478. Robert C. Hess (559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwaters, NY 11718) offers a new sales-list of Sherlockian figurines, chess sets, artwork, posters, medals, pin, badges, pipes, books, and much more.
479. THE NEW GOOD OLD INDEX, by William D. Goodrich (Dubuque: Gasogene Press, 1994; 602 pp., $29.95) is a revised and expanded edition of GOOD OLD INDEX (1988), and it is an invaluable reference guide to the Canon. Indexing is an art as well as a science, and a good index must be far more than merely a word-list; this index is a good one indeed, keyed to the 1960 (and still current) Doubleday edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES. The additions include sections on Biblical and Shakespearean quotations, and if you find that boring, you can explore the citations for what this particular indexer classifies as profanity. Available from the publisher (Box 1041, Dubuque, IA 52004-1041); $32.70 postpaid.
480. Further to the earlier report (Aug 94 #3), with illustration, on the availability of Jill Bauman's original artwork for the cover of the unpublished eighth volume (THE LOST HEIR) in the Iron Crown series of "Sherlock Holmes Solo Mysteries" (issued as paperbacks in 1987 and 1988), I have confirmed, with kind assistance from Joan Proubasta, that the artwork was used on the cover of EL HEREDERO DESAPARECIDO, by Gerald Lientz (Barcelona: Editorial Timun Mas, 1989). As far as I know, the Spanish edition of the series is the only one to include the eighth title.
481. Further to Michael Taylor's report (Oct 94 #6) about the Oxford University Press' discount offer on THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES, Jim Vogelsang reports that the 90 postcards with the dust-jacket woodcut artwork really are 90 postcards: ten sets of the nine cards issued when the set first appeared.
482. Nov 94 #4: "Amusing and profound, and at times repulsive," is John Ruyle's description of the poems in his DIFFICULT OYSTERS: SEVEN MEN IN THE SAME BOAT (TO SAY NOTHING OF THE DOG! (the seven men being Conan Doyle, Barrie, Wells, Poe, Haggard, Wilde, and Larkin). Well-printed (as always) at the Pequod Press; $35.00 (cloth) or $15.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
483. Paula Brown spotted a "Sherlock Holmes Cookie Jar" (from Omnibus, 8"x6.25"x18.5") in a catalog from Potpourri, 120 North Meadows Road, Medfield, MA 02052 (800-388-7798); $44.95 plus shipping, and they take plastic.
484. The summer 1994 issue of the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library News has Bernard Partridge's 1926 caricature of Conan Doyle and Holmes on the cover, and a brief story about a display of material from the library at Niagara-on-the-Lake, and a photo of publisher George Vanderburgh, former curator Cameron Hollyer, and Library CEO Frances Schwenger. A few copies of the newsletter are available (first come, first served) from the Library (attention: Victoria Gill) at 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada).
485. The Jan. 1995 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine celebrates Sherlock Holmes' birthday with a Sherlockian cover by Joyce Patti and two new pastiches: Edward D. Hoch's "A Parcel of Deerstalkers" and Robert Richardson's "The Ghost of Christmas Past".
486. Ben Wood offers a convenient (5.5"x4.5" unopened) 1995 Sherlockian calendar (with notes on some of the Sherlockian red-letter days); $2.50 postpaid, and Ben's address is Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222.
487. Bernie O'Heir reports that Sotheby's will hold a "World of Movie Posters" auction on Dec. 10 in New York, and will offer one-sheets of Wontner's "The Sign of Four" (1932) estimated at $3,500-5,500, and Rathbone's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) estimated at $7,000-10,000; their address is 1334 York Avenue, New York, NY 10021 (212-606-7000).
488. The fall 1994 issue of Scarlet Street has Richard Valley's "Cross-Dressed to Kill: Transvestism and the World of Sherlock Holmes" (discussing some of the occurrences in the Canon and on stage and screen and television), and a report that Carolco Pictures has purchased the film rights to Anne Rice's novel THE MUMMY (1989). Rice is in the news now as the author of INTERVIEW WITH THE VAMPIRE (the film is doing well at the box-office), as well as the book on which the film EXIT TO EDEN is based (but the characters played by Rose O'Donnell and Dan Aykroyd aren't in the book); THE MUMMY is dedicated to Arthur Conan Doyle (among others) "for his great mummy stories 'Lot No. 249' and 'The Ring of Thoth'." Scarlet Street: The Magazine of Mystery and Horror costs $20.00 a year for four issues; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452. Scarlet Street has, by the way, done quite well since its first issue was published in 1991 with a print run of 500 copies (and half of the run was given away, according to publisher Jessie Lillie); the 15th issue (summer 1994) had a print run of 26,000 copies.

489. Nov 94 #5: Keith Oatley has won the Commonwealth Writer's Prize for best first novel, for THE CASE OF EMILY V., published last year in England (Nov 93 #5). The book is an interesting psychological pastiche, based on lecture-notes written by Dr. Sigmund Freud, and an account by Dr. John H. Watson after Sherlock Holmes is retained to investigate a case that involves Freud's patient. The £3,000 prize was presented to Oatley last month in Singapore.
490. Michael Innes died on Nov. 12. He was J.I.M. Stewart, an Oxford don who used a pseudonym for his mysteries, starting with DEATH AT THE PRESIDENT'S LODGING (1936), the first of a long series about Inspector John Appleby. Many of his novels offer pleasant Sherlockian allusions and echoes, with THE MYSTERIOUS COMMISSION (1974) leading the list.
491. Gertrude Mahoney reports a new "Sherlock Bear" in the new catalog from The Scottish Lion Import Shop (North Conway, NH 03860-1700 (item K100, $110.00 plus shipping, and they take plastic).
492. Reported by Ralph Hall: the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers 1995 Calendar has (for October) Billy as Sherlock Holmes (Landmark, $11.99); in stores or from Landmark General Corp. (51 Digital Drive, Novato, CA 94949). "Christmas with Gumby" is a new videocassette Goodtimes Home Video, $10.99), with Gumby in a deerstalker and referring to himself as Sherlock and to Pokey as Watson (Goodtimes is at 16 East 40th Street, New York, NY 10016). "The Adventures of Mary Kate and Ashley: The Case of the Logical i Ranch" is a new musical-mystery videocassette (Dualstar Video, $9.99) with one of the girls briefly trying to play the violin as Sherlock Holmes did. And British Heritage (Oct. 1994) has a three-page article on "Acquiring Minds: Cigarette Cards" and a color photograph of the Sherlock Holmes card in the Turf Cigarettes set ($5.00; Box 1066, Mt. Morris, IL 61054).
493. Reported: FIRST ENCOUNTERS: A BOOK OF MEMORABLE MEETINGS, by Nancy Caldwell Sorel and Edward Sorel (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1994; $24.00); 63 "first encounters" reprinted from the Atlantic Monthly (including Conan Doyle and Houdini), with the stories told by Nancy Caldwell Sorel, and illustrated in color by Edward Sorel.
494. The Baskerville Bucher reprint of the script of Ferdinand Bonn's SHERLOCK HOLMES: DETEKTIVKOMODIE IN VIER AUFZUGEN (1906) is now available (112 pp., $16.00), with the play and annotations in German, a summary and commentary in English, and photographs from the original production, and it offers a nice look at the first and most successful of Bonn's S'ian plays. You can order from Michael Ross Verlag, Bendheide 65, D-47906 Kempen, Germany; payment in currency only, please.

495. Citadel has reissued THE SHERLOCK HOLMES ENCYCLOPEDIA, by Orlando Park (in paper covers at $12.95); the book was first published in 1962 as SHERLOCK HOLMES, ESQ., AND JOHN H. WATSON, M.D.: AN ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THEIR AFFAIRS. It's item B106742 in a catalog from Barnes & Noble (126 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011) and should be on bargain tables in other stores.
496. Nov 94 #6: Chris Caswell (Baker Street Emporium, Box 2324, Seal Beach, CA 90740) has a new illustrated flier offering a new Sherlockian calendar ($11.95 postpaid) and a plaster-cast reproduction of a life mask of Basil Rathbone prepared by the make-up department at Twentieth Century-Fox ($30.00 postpaid in unfinished white, or $40.00 postpaid with bronze patina). These are discount prices offered to readers of this newsletter (so say you are), and credit-card orders are welcome.
497. The new film "Star Trek: Generations" is fun (although one does wonder why they still haven't realized that seat-belts are a good idea on spaceships), and possibly sort-of-Sherlockian, if that really is a deerstalker and cape hanging on a hook in Data's cabin early in the film (it was only a fleeting glimpse, and I'm not sure).
498. Reported: CRIME IN A COLD CLIMATE: AN ANTHOLOGY OF CLASSIC CANADIAN CRIME, edited by David Skene-Melvin (Toronto: Simon & Pierre, 1994; 250 pp., US $16.75); with a reprint of Robert Barr's parody "The Adventure of Sherlaw Kombs". The distributor is the Dundurn Press (Box 100, Niagara Falls, NY 14302); they take plastic.
499. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner on Oct. 25 to honor (as usual) the world's first forensic geologist, at the Merchants Cafe in Seattle, where visitors attending the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America were welcomed by members of The Sound of the Baskervilles. The Merchants Cafe is Seattle's oldest restaurant, located "down on the sawdust" on Skid Road, in a neighborhood now more gentrified than it was a century ago. Seattle also has fine bookshops, splendid seafood, and (for the geologists) a dormant volcano. The Practical, But Limited Geologists will meet next in Houston in March, and in New Orleans in November.
500. PBS-TV and Big Feats! Entertainment have agreed to produce and distribute a new 30-minute television series about Wishbone, a Jack Russell terrier whose active imagination allows him to immerse himself in the storylines of classic books such as "Romeo and Juliet", "Don Quixote", "Oliver Twist", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles". The series' goal is to expose children to great literature, and there will be 40 episodes (including one called "The Slobbery Hound"); the series will be broadcast by PBS-TV beginning in the fall of 1995.
501. An alert for variant-hunters: the latest catalog from Gravesend Books (Box 235, Pocono Pines, PA 18350) offers a copy of the first edition of DETECTIONARY that appears to be a hitherto-unreported later (and likely second) printing; the first printing states on the title page that it was published privately in 1971 by Hammermill Paper Company, and the newly-reported copy, otherwise identical, states 1972. The book's a "biographical dictionary" edited by five experts (Steinbrunner, Shibuk, Penzler, Lachman, and Nevins), and given by Hammermill to publishers as a showcase for its dictionary paper, and difficult to find. There's also a slightly-revised second edition published by the Overlook Press in 1977.

502. Nov 94 #7: Reported: THE INTELLIGENT EYE: LEARNING TO THINK BY LOOKING AT ART, by David N. Perkins (Santa Monica: Getty Center for Education in the Arts, 1994; 80 pp., $10.00); a review published in The College Board Review (summer 1994), notes that Perkins "invents imaginary internal dialogues between Dr. Watson and Sherlock Holmes." Getty's address is 401 Wilshire Boulevard #950, Santa Monica, CA 90401 (800-223-3431).
503. Julian Symons died on Nov. 19. He was a skilled and readable critic and mystery writer, and one of the founders of the Crime Writers Association. He succeeded Agatha Christie as president of the Detection Club, and won an Edgar when the Mystery Writers of America, and was a fellow of the Royal Society of Literature. His Sherlockian pastiches included two novels (A THREE-PIPE PROBLEM and THE KENTISH MANOR MURDERS), and he wrote an interesting biography PORTRAIT OF AN ARTIST: CONAN DOYLE. He also suggested in BLOODY MURDER: FROM THE DETECTIVE STORY TO THE CRIME NOVEL (1972) that "the tone of mock-scholarly facetiousness" in the Writings About the Writings "must make them rank high among the most tedious pieces of their kind ever written," but removed that harsh judgement from later editions. But in all editions of that book he displayed his enthusiasm for the Canon: "Certainly what needs to be stressed today is something that should be a cliché, and unhappily is not: that if one were choosing the best twenty short detective stories ever written, at least half a dozen of them would be about Sherlock Holmes".
504. The Stabur Corp. (11904 Farmington Road, Livonia, MI 48150) (800-346-8940) offers a new catalog with a wide variety of comic-book material, including Sherlockian prints signed by Will Elder, Mort Drucker, and Harvey Kurtzman ($20.00 to $50.00), four issues of the Tome Press "Sherlock Holmes" series illustrated by Dan Day (1992), and reprints of the Caliber Press punk-rock detective series "Baker Street" (1989-1992).
505. Chris Redmond reports with some pride that on Nov. 22 he established the world's first Sherlockian home page on the World Wide Web. In tekkie talk, it is found at URL <http://watserv1.uwaterloo.ca/~credmond/sh.html/>. For the rest of us, that means you find someone who has a computer that has a World Wide Web viewer such as Mosaic or Netscape or Lynx, and watch while the tekkie uses that strange-looking address to let you see the neat stuff that Chris makes available from the computer at the University of Waterloo.
506. Bert Coules, who has dramatized many of the stories for the excellent BBC radio series starring Clive Merrison as Holmes, reports that recording of the last of the short stories was completed on in Nov. (the last six of the short stories will air early in 1995). "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Valley of Fear" likely will be broadcast in late 1995, or perhaps in 1996. And while BBC has no plans at the moment to release the 1989 dramatizations of "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Sign of the Four" on cassettes, it is possible that when the full cycle of 60 stories has aired (the first time this has been done with the same actors as Holmes and Watson), all of the stories will be issued on cassettes. But if you don't want to wait for "Stud" and "Sign" you might write to The Radio Collection (BBC Enterprises, Woodlands, 80 Wood Lane, London W12 0TT, England), suggesting politely that it would be nice to be able to hear more of the fine performances by Clive Merrison and Michael Williams, since you enjoy the later cassettes so much.

507. Nov 94 #8: There's more news in the continuing saga of John Aidiniantz's campaign to win the address 221b for his Sherlock Holmes Museum at 239 Baker Street: a story in the West End Extra (Nov. 4), kindly sent by Catherine Cooke (via Jon Lellenberg), notes that the Westminster City Council have rejected, for the third (and perhaps the last) time Aidiniantz's application to re-number the street. And Aidiniantz, seemingly now unable to employ hundreds of the disabled to make and sell memorabilia to those who write to Sherlock Holmes (as he had said that he intended to do if he got the 221b address), plans to sell the museum to an overseas buyer.
508. And The Guardian reported (Nov. 10) that Aidiniantz had gotten support from Edinburgh M.P. Nigel Griffiths, who said he plans to introduce legislation in the House of Commons to reverse the Council's decision and give the 221b address to Aidiniantz. But: The Guardian has also reported (Nov. 16) that Aidiniantz has been charged with criminal fraud. He is accused of having raised a total of £1.2 million from eight multiple and fraudulent mortgages, from different lenders, on three properties (including the Museum). Much of the money has vanished without trace, according to the Crown Prosecutor. Aidiniantz denies the charges, and will be representing himself in court, according to The Guardian.
509. Virginia Lou Seay (Calhoun Book Store, Box 24552, Edina, MN 55424) offers an 18-page catalog of old and new Sherlockian books, magazines, and recordings. And a 70-page "holiday catalogue" from The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019) has a section for Sherlockiana, new and old and sometimes ephemeral.

510. "Friends from Calcutta . . . had told us that Port Blair, and particularly the Welcomgroup Bay Islands Hotel, is a popular destination for newlyweds." And the Andaman Islands seem to have been discovered by the tourist trade, according to a long article in the N.Y. Times (Oct. 30), forwarded by Syd Goldberg. "Port Blair was the equivalent of Devils Island for the French," the article notes, but makes no mention of "The Sign of the Four". Indian Airlines offers six flights a week from Calcutta and Madras to Port Blair.
511. Jim Suszynski has discovered a small magnifying glass ($0.99) packaged with Sherlockian artwork at his local CVS pharmacy.
512. The fifth issue of Troy Taylor's The Whitechapel Gazette is at hand, with 50 pages of nicely illustrated articles on Holmes, Conan Doyle, Rathbone, Victorian criminals, and some of the mystery writers who followed the trail that Conan Doyle blazed. $6.50 postpaid; Troy's address is 805 West North #1, Decatur, IL 62522.
513. Compliments and congratulations to R. Dixon Smith (formerly of St. Paul) and Paulina M. Smith, on their marriage and on the revival of Rupert Books (the mail-order firm operated for many years by Paulina's first husband, the late David Kirby). They have issued a new 40-page catalog of Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes material, old and new, and the address for Rupert Books is 58/59 Stonefield, Bar Hill, Cambridge CB3 8TE, England.
514. Dec 94 #1: Robert E. Matthews, Jr. ("The Coptic Patriarchs") died on May 20, 1994. He was a member of the end-of-the-1950s generation of Sherlockians, and a real New Yorker (he retired last year after almost 30 years of working for the city). Bob was a member of The Priory Scholars in the long-ago days of the scion's radio broadcasts from WFUV-FM (at Fordham University), and received his Investiture from the BSI in 1958.
515. A new paperback edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES published by Aerie Books for Wal-Mart may well be the cheapest one seen in decades (50c); the 269 pp. include a foreword and afterword by R. L. Fisher.
516. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES IN ORBIT, edited by Mike Resnick and Martin H. Greenberg (from DAW Books in February); a paperback anthology of new science-fiction pastiches.
517. In case you need something other than winter weather as an excuse to visit Florida, the fifth annual running of The Wessex Cup at Tampa Bay Downs will be held on Feb. 11, 1995. Details are available from Dr. Benton Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222.
518. And there's something Sherlockian about the new film "The Pagemaster" (starring Macaulay Culkin and Christopher Lloyd); Culkin plays a boy so afraid of the world that he won't even try out a tree-house his father built for him, and who soon winds up in an animated dream-world that includes some of the classic children's stories, and offers a brief glimpse of the Hound of the Baskervilles. There's a lot of tie-in merchandise, and Jim Vogelsang reports that there are Sherlockian allusions in many of the books.
519. And "Star Trek: Generations" (Nov 94 #6) does have a minor Canonical connection: David Carson, the director of the film, worked in England for many years and directed three of the shows in the Granada series ("The Resident Patient", "The Musgrave Ritual", and "The Six Napoleons").
520. Plan ahead: the 14th annual Sherlock Holmes/Conan Doyle Symposium will be held at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, on Mar. 24-26, 1995. Contact: Greg Sullivan, 2800 North River Road, Yellow Springs, OH 45387.
521. John Baesch reports that Barnes & Noble have reissued the Doubleday edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, beautifully bound, with an oval portrait of Holmes on the spine, and with gilt-edged pages and a permanent book-mark ($16.95).
522. John J. Waldeck died on Nov. 28. He was a lawyer (and an expert in parliamentary law), and for many years a member of Sherlockian societies in Ohio, and in 1981 led a stalwart band of the Inverness Capers to London in a new attempt to identify the location of 221 Baker Street (settling on 113 Baker Street, according to a story that ran on the UPI wire).
523. Dec 94 #2: David L. Hammer's THE 22ND MAN: IN RE SHERLOCK HOLMES: GERMAN AGENT (Jul 89 #5) led to THE QUEST: BEING THE SEARCH FOR THE TREASURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE 22ND MAN, allegedly by Angus Maclaren (Feb 94 #2), and now David offers MY DEAR WATSON: BEING THE ANNALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Gasogene Press, 1995; 104 pp., $12.95). The annals are the treasure sought in the previous book: thirteen accounts of hitherto-unreported cases. $18.70 postpaid from the publisher (Box 1041, Dubuque, IA 52004).
524. This year's Canada Savings Bonds were promoted with a colorful flier showing a Sherlockian squirrel ("take the mystery out of investing" was the motto) (that's "investir n'est pas un mystere!" in Quebec).
525. "Otto Penzler's Sherlock Holmes Library" has extended its series of paperback reprints of classic Sherlockiana (with full-color artwork by Frederic Dorr Steele on the covers); the latest volumes are BAKER STREET BY-WAYS, by James Edward Holroyd, and HOLMES & WATSON: A MISCELLANY, by S. C. Roberts, and they each offer a grand opportunity to see some fine writers at work. The books are distributed by Simon & Schuster, and cost $8.00 each, and a reprint of H. W. Bell's BAKER STREET STUDIES is due soon.
526. And Douglas G. Green's JOHN DICKSON CARR: THE MAN WHO EXPLAINED MIRACLES is scheduled for March in cloth at $35.00; this is a 512-page biography of one of the best of the "golden age" writers. Carr also was the author of THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1949) and some amusing Sherlockian parodies performed at annual dinners of the Mystery Writers of America.
527. Further to the report (Nov 94 #7) about Chris Redmond's Sherlockian home page on the World Wide Web, Willis Frick reports that three files from his Sherlocktron bulletin board (a list of the Sherlockian societies, a list of Sherlockian publications, and a list of Sherlockian purveyors) are available by anonymous FTP from ftp.netcom.com (directory pub/Sh/Sherlocktron). Translation: if you know how to use file-transfer-protocol, you can have your computer get those files for you. The list of Sherlockian societies is the list I maintain and offer as a 71-page print-out for $3.55 postpaid (so you can see that computers and the Internet can make things faster and less expensive).
528. Bookcassette Sales (Box 481, Grand Haven, MI 49417) offers a three-cassette set with Michael Page reading "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Sign of Four" (unabridged, nine hours) for $17.95; you will need a cassette player with balance control, or a $4.95 adapter (they use single-track recording to get three hours on each cassette). Their toll-free number is 800-222-3225, and they welcome credit-card orders, and if you order by Jan. 13, you get a 10% discount and free shipping.
529. One hears of Sherlock Holmes pubs everywhere: Tim Richards reported in the winter 1994 issue of The Western Flyer (a newsletter published by the Sherlock Holmes Society of Western Australia) that a Sherlock Holmes Pub opened this year in the Ramses Hilton Hotel in Cairo.
530. Dec 94 #3: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES' DAUGHTER is an audiocassette (1993) with a Telephone Network Theatre presentation (1991) of "The Adventure of the Golden Key", written by Ian McTavish and with Renee Dennis as Minerva Holmes, the illegitimate daughter of Sherlock Holmes (who needless to say has inherited her father's deductive abilities). There are 17 installments of just under four minutes each (you called a 900 number to hear a new installment each day) (each call cost $1.75, and the number's no longer in service); it's an interesting and hitherto-unreported vehicle for a Sherlockian pastiche. The cassette was produced by Ida Games Audio (516 West 159th Street, New York, NY 10032), and retails at $8.00 in stores, and if you can't find it in your neighborhood audio store, the cassette costs $9.95 postpaid from Ida. A second adventure is forecast for June 1995.

531. The Booker Prize is often described as the most significant literary award in Great Britain, and this year two prizes were awarded, one for 1994 and the other for 1894. The candidates for 1894 were: IN THE YEAR OF JUBILEE, by George Gissing; THE PRISONER OF ZENDA, by Anthony Hope; JUNGLE BOOK, by Rudyard Kipling; TRILBY, by George du Maurier; ESTHER WATERS, by George Moore; and THE EBB TIDE, by Robert Louis Stevenson (sorry, THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES didn't make the list of candidates). And the winner was: George Moore's ESTHER WATERS. Arthur Conan Doyle enjoyed the book, as did Victoria Glendinning, one of this year's judges, who said that it combined "realism and great lyrical beauty." A hundred years ago, however, a review in the Spectator suggested that "a great novel must have both humour and narrative charm. ESTHER WATERS has neither." And Moore's book was sharply criticized by others as immoral, and W. H. Smith and Son refused to sell it or circulate it in their lending libraries. Conan Doyle, in turn, criticized the boycott in two letters in The Daily Chronicle (reprinted in 1986 in the volume of his LETTERS TO THE PRESS edited by John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green). Conan Doyle said that ESTHER WATERS was "a great and a very serious book," and suggested that "if it is to be placed outside the pale of legitimate fiction, it is difficult to see how any true and serious work is to be done within it."
532. Further to the earlier report (May 94 #2) on the Sherlock Holmes figurine in the German "playmobil" series, completists may or may not be delighted to learn that there are variants that seem to be distinguishable only from the box, which displays a number code: FS 062/4501/3092817/xx.xx. One of the boxes received from Germany earlier this year has a code ending 01.94, and a box from a store in the U.S. more recently has 05.94; the difference is of course even more minor than the points that distinguish the variants of that vinyl dog-toy The Hound of the Baskervilles (by A. Collie Dog) that was in pet shops a few years ago. Happy hunting . . .
533. Irving L. Jaffee died on Nov. 19. He was for many years a journalist and a free-lance writer, and the author of Sherlockian articles published in Famous Detective Stories, Double-Action Detective Stories, and Crack Detective and Mystery Stories in the 1950s and 1960s and collected in 1965 in ELEMENTARY MY DEAR WATSON: A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON THE GREAT DETECTIVE AND SOME OTHERS (1965). He and his wife Mary also wrote pastiches, and five of them were collected by Luther Norris in BEYOND BAKER STREET (1973). Irving also was a member of The Old Soldiers of Praed Street, The Trained Cormorants of Long Beach, and many other of the California societies.

534. Dec 94 #4: SHORT STORY CRITICISM: EXCERPTS FROM CRITICISM OF THE WORKS OF SHORT FICTION WRITERS (VOLUME 12), edited by David Segal (Detroit: Gale Research, 1993) has a 44-page section on Conan Doyle, and the critics excerpted are Nordon, Lambert, Higham, Knight, Moskowitz, Slusser, Cox, Wertheim, Jaffe, and Liebow. $88.00 postpaid from Gale Research, Box 71701, Chicago, IL 60694 (800-877-4253); they take plastic.
535. Lots of people get caught doing lots of things, and some of those people, of course, are named Moriarty. Missouri secretary of state Judi Moriarty was forced from office when the Missouri state supreme court ruled unanimously that she committed impeachable conduct when she backdated her son's election paperwork. The backdated papers were intended to show that her son Tim had filed for a seat in the state House before the filing deadline; he withdrew from the race when the fraud was made public.
536. Benton Wood's PHILATELIC AND NUMISMATIC HOLMES, first published five years ago, has been up-dated (through the new commemorative crowns of Gibraltar) and is now illustrated in color; 33 pp., $10.00 postpaid from Benton Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222.
537. The autumn 1994 issue of the Sherlock Holmes Gazette has arrived, with 48 pages and an excellent assortment of articles and illustrations and news (including a report that Jeremy Brett is keeping busy: his latest booking was for voice-overs for some television commercials for Homepride flour). And a new feature: Club Corner, with reports from some of the societies in England, Japan, and Australia (and a suggestion that other societies send in their news). The magazine is edited by Eddie Bissell, from 46 Purfield Drive, Wargrave, Berks. RG10 8AR, England; and the American distributor is Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 (the issue costs $8.00 postpaid).
538. THE SIGN OF FOUR had a complicated publishing history in the United States, a result of the lack of copyright protection for foreign authors in those long-ago days. That lack of protection led to a number of pirated editions here, and it was not until 1893 that J. B. Lippincott published the first authorized cloth-bound separate edition, using stereotypes from the plates used by Spencer Blackett for the first British edition (which explains the use of the British title rather than THE SIGN OF THE FOUR). The Lippincott first edition has now been reprinted in facsimile as the first in a Library of Congress Centennial Bestseller Series (Bedford: Applewood Books, 1994; 283 pp., $24.95), with a foreword by James H. Billington (Librarian of Congress) and an introduction by John Y. Cole (Director of the Center for the Book). Applewood's address is Box 365, Bedford, MA 01730 (800-277-5312); they also offer some other interesting older material, including Tom Swift books, a book on bundling that was banned in Boston in 1871, and Margaret Sanger's HAPPINESS IN MARRIAGE.
539. Craig Bowlsby's entertaining two-act play "The Hound of London" was first performed in Canada in 1987, and then produced for television and broadcast in 1993 with Patrick Macnee as Sherlock Holmes (adding Macnee to the list of actors who have played both Holmes and Watson). Intrepid Productions now offers a 72-minute videocassette for $18.00 postpaid; Box 514, 250 H Street, Blaine, WA 98230), and credit card orders are welcome.

540. Dec 94 #5: And there's news from London about Sherlock Holmes Museum proprietor John Aidiniantz, who was charged with criminal fraud involving eight fraudulent mortgages on three properties (including the Museum) for a total of £1.2 million (Nov 84 #8). The jury deliberated for two hours and then delivered eight verdicts of guilty, and (according to the Daily Mail) was then told that Aidiniantz had previous convictions for mail order and society security frauds stretching back 17 years (he's now 38 years old). The judge warned Aidiniantz that "there is a very serious likelihood of you facing a custodial sentence in due course," according to a report in The Times. Aidiniantz insisted that he is innocent, and said that he plans to appeal, and he is now free on bail pending sentencing in January. According to an Associated Press dispatch, Aidiniantz asked Judge David Martineau if the court could return his passport so he could pay a Christmas visit to his children who live in the United States; he promised to come back for sentencing. "It doesn't take the world's greatest detective," the AP suggested, "to deduce that Martineau turned him down."
541. The third volume of SHERLOCK HOLMES CONSULTING DETECTIVE is one of the top 100 CD-ROM discs, according to the Sept. 13 issue of PC Magazine (forwarded by Ruthann and Tom Stetak). "Use the hour of interactive video--sometimes comically overacted--to interview suspects and witnesses." It is issued by Viacom New Media (Viacom bought ICOM last year) at $70.00 (800-877-4266); it may be discounted in the stores, and I have read that the first two volumes are available at deep discounts. The first volume, in fact, is one of ten CD-ROM discs in a $30.00 "10-Pak" from Sirius Publishing.
542. The annual series of anthologies edited by Maxim Jakubowski has moved to Gollancz, a publisher whose bright yellow jackets have long been a beacon for mystery fans, and CRIME YELLOW: GOLLANCZ NEW CRIMES 1 (London: Victor Gollancz, 1994; 283 pp., £14.99) is a nice anthology indeed. Robert Richardson's Sherlockian pastiche "The Woman of Goodwill" is not entirely new (a shorter version was published in The Independent on Dec. 27-28, 1994), but appears in the book for the first time with the full text.
543. Bernie O'Heir has reported on some of the results in the "World of Movie Posters" auction on Dec. 10 at Sotheby's in New York: a one-sheet of Wontner's "The Sign of Four" (1932) sold for $3,737 (including 15% commission) and a one-sheet of Rathbone's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) for $7,475. A three-sheet for the original "King Kong" went for $48,000, and a three-sheet (described as unique) for "Gone with the Wind" for $71,250.

544. John J. Kehoe, sometimes known as "Black Jack" Kehoe and as the King of the Molly Maguires, and charged with the murder of mine boss Frank Langdon, was acquitted at a trial in Pottsville earlier this month, according to a story in the Philadelphia Inquirer, at hand from Syd Goldberg. Needless to say, the trial was a reenactment, and was of little help to Kehoe, who was found guilty at his real trial, and hanged in Pottsville on Dec. 18, 1878.
545. Videotape alert: the Sci-Fi Channel has acquired the "Twilight Zone" series and will broadcast them all, starting with a 15-hour marathon on New Year's Day. One of the shows is "The Arrival" (1961), which has some minor Sherlockian dialogue that no one seems to have on videotape. So: if you have the channel, and can tape "The Arrival" at SP speed, please let me know.
546. Dec 94 #6: "A Year with Sherlock Holmes" is the title of the 1995 calendar illustrated with interesting black-and-white artwork by Melissa Hellen (aka the Abominable Wife of Ross County), published by Cheryl Hurd's Teapot Press, and offered by Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); $11.85 postpaid.
547. SHERLOCK TAKES A WIFE AND OTHER MODERN TALES, by Ira Bernard Dworkin (Flemington: Creative Writers of Hunterdon, 1994; 92 pp., $10.00), is a reprint of the eight stories in his SHERLOCK HOLMES IN MODERN TIMES (1980), with an additional story ("Sherlock Takes a Wife") in which Holmes marries in the 1980s; the other stories also have him alive and well in WW2 and later decades. The publisher's address is Box 14, Flemington, NJ 08822.
548. Morency R. Dame ("Colonel Lysander Stark") died on Nov. 18. He served in the infantry officer in the Second World War and the Korean War, with many years as an Army Ranger, and retired as a lieutenant colonel, enjoying the appropriateness of his investiture in the BSI, which he received in 1982. He also was the first Chief Surgeon of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients in Denver, and edited their newsletter The Medical Bulletin, and contributed to our literature in The Baker Street Journal.
549. The "Mystery Money" ticket is from one of the games in the Michigan state lottery this summer (Sam Stinson of The Ribston-Pippins notes that one member of the society matched three umbrellas and won $2.00).
550. "Americans, particularly, are very keen" collectors of second-hand pipes, according to Dunhill archivist Howard Smith, who was quoted in The Times (Nov. 5). Of course the pipes aren't necessarily used. Dunhill issued a limited-edition silver-mounted "calabash" pipe in 1987 to honor the centenary of the first Sherlock Holmes story; packaged in a sumptuous red leather "book", it cost £200 (and now is worth about £1,500, according to the article).
551. Mel Hughes has kindly forwarded a report from the San Diego Union-Tribune (July 15), in which Don Freeman reminisced about a long-ago interview with Sir Cedric Hardwicke. During the interview the telephone rang, and before answering it, Hardwicke said, his voice full of drama, "I wonder how that phone call will change my life." Then he merely said two words into the phone: "Thank you." And, asked if the phone call would indeed change his life, he replied, "Well, not exactly. It was the cleaners. My suit is ready."
552. Rhetorical question of the month (from the Dec. 1994 issue of Generation Next: If cats always land on their feet, and toast always lands buttered side down, what happens if you tie a piece of toast buttered-side-up to a cat's back and drop him?

Jan 95 #1:

- The birthday festivities in New York were nicely unwintry, and enjoyable as usual. Thursday offered a variety of informal gatherings, concluding with the Aunt Clara Sing at O'Lunney's Steak House and some Iroquois Hotel room parties that may or may not have ended early Sunday morning.
  - Friday's schedule began with the Mrs. Hudson Breakfast at the Hotel Algonquin, and continued with the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea, where Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague Joffe, and Andrew Joffe performed what may be the world premiere of a play written by William Gillette when he was only 21 years old (it is likely that "The Sorrowful Tragedy of Jimlagaglio" may never be performed again, since many members of the audience found it memorable only for the exploding nuns). And Otto Penzler's open house at the Mysterious Bookshop offered refreshments as well as tempting treasures for collectors.
  - The Baker Street Irregulars gathered at 24 Fifth Avenue, where *The* Woman was Myrtle Robinson, who was toasted by David Hammer during the pre-dinner cocktail party and then dined at the National Arts Club with a dozen other ladies who have received that honor. The BSI's agenda featured the usual toasts and traditions, and some unusual entertainment, including Marina Stajic's put-'em-on-one-at-a-time presentation on Victorian undergarments, Tom Stetak's discussion of Canonical lawn ornaments (which might well have been subtitled "beware the deadly sundial"), Paul Herbert's report on two Sherlockian films that never made it from script to screen (for which Sherlockians can be thankful), and Sherry Rose-Bond's toast to The Second Most Dangerous Man in London (in which she explained why that title really ought to be assigned to Sherlock Holmes).
  - Irregular Shillings and Investitures were given to David Stuart Davies ("Sir Ralph Musgrave"), Thomas J. Francis ("The Imperial Opera of Warsaw"), Theodore Friedman ("The Commonplace Book"), Marina Stajic ("Curare"), Dante M. Torrese ("Von Herder"), Gerald N. Wachs ("Godfrey Emsworth"), Kathryn White ("The Musgrave Ritual"), and Ronald White ("The Cabinet Photograph"). And Robert S. Katz received the BSI's Two-Shilling Award.
  - The Fortescue Symposium also convened on Friday evening, at the St. Moritz Hotel, where the agenda included Cheryl Hurd's paper on Canonical gardens and gardening, and a presentation on Canonical divorce by Aretha Franklin (impersonated by Kate Karlson), and energetic and enthusiastic singing of songs by many people who may still be wondering whether reindeer really are Sherlockian.
  - On Saturday morning the usual suspects gathered at the huckster room at the Algonquin (aka Covent Garden West), and the BSI Saturday-afternoon cocktail party at 24 Fifth Avenue offered food and drink and a bit of entertainment: Al Rosenblatt's poetic report on events at the BSI annual dinner, the usual fast-and-furious auction that raised more than $1,100 for the Dr. John H. Watson Fund. Saturday evening the Chisholm Galley was open for a memorial service for Steve Emmons, who died shortly before the weekend; Steve was a splendid artist whose striking and imaginative Sherlockian poster art, both originals and limited-edition reproductions, was welcomed by collectors.
- Jan 95 #2: The cocktail party included an announcement by William R. Cochran, editor of The Baker Street Journal: the Morley-Montgomery Memorial Award, established by Lew David Feldman in 1958 for the best contribution to the BSJ, has been revived. The author of the best paper published in 1995 will receive a prize of $500. The announcement included a warning that Poul Anderson, winner of the award in 1958, will have a paper in the BSJ in 1995, but the competition is open to all; Bill's address is 517 North Vine Street, DuQuoin, IL 62832.
  - One of the auction items offered a room for two nights at the Beekman Arms and two seats at the Culinary Institute of America on May 13, which is the date of the Grand Gourmet Sherlockian Dinner at the CIA in Hyde Park. The Beekman Arms already is fully booked for the week-end, and the price of the dinner has not yet been set, but I will publish the important information as soon as it is available.
  - The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI or the ASH is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully anonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by checks payable to John H. Watson and mailed (without return any address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, c/o Thomas L. Stix,

- Jr., who will forward the checks unopened. Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity, and Tom's address is 34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648.
10. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES VIDEO is a new 52-minute videocassette that has nicely blended modern views of the cities and towns and countryside where many of the Canonical stories occurred with interviews with Sherlock Holmes' secretary and Stanley MacKenzie. Holmes and Watson provide their own commentary (with style and humor), and the cassette is available for $30.00 postpaid from Countryside TV Productions, Charget Manor, Luxborough, Watchet, Somerset TA23 0SL, England; it's an NTSC cassette, for American machines.
  11. Herman Beerman ("Sir James Saunders") died on Jan. 1. He was an eminent dermatologist and an enthusiastic Sherlockian, and combine his two worlds by founding The Sir James Saunders Society for dermatologist who shared his enjoyment of the Canon. He was a Master Copper-Beech-Smith of The Sons of the Copper Beeches of Philadelphia, and his gentle manner and devilish wit contributed greatly to their meetings.
  12. Gillette Castle has deteriorated to the point where more than $1 million is needed for renovations, and private fund-raising may be the only way to get the money, according to an article by Ward Morehouse III in the N.Y. Post (Dec. 30), at hand from Ted Friedman. The castle leaks and the masonry has weakened, and one worker at the castle joked that "we haven't had a strong wind, so it's still standing." And John Rowland, who just won reelection as governor of Connecticut, campaigned on a platform that included repeal of the state income tax, and may not look kindly on increasing spending on state parks.
  13. Reported: THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES AND OTHER DETECTIVE STORIES, with an introduction by Owen Dudley Edwards (London: HarperCollins, 1994; 1468 pp., £9.99); the Canon and many other stories.
14. Jan 95 #3: Tom Kowols reports that BBD Audio has released MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, VOLUME 3, with four more of the BBC radio program starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams; the two-cassette set costs $15.99, and the stories are "The Greek Interpreter", "The Naval Treaty", "The Final Problem", and "The Second Stain". Apparently some sets shipped with defective second cassettes ("The Second Stain" is missing); Tom Galbo reports that replacements are available from BBD's distribution center at 2451 South Wolf Road, Des Plaines, IL 60018.
  15. One of the most fascinating and frustrating aspects of the world of Sherlockians in the 1980 and 1990s is the increase in Sherlockian scholarship published in languages other than English: fascinating because there is so much excellent work done in other languages, and frustrating because it is not accessible to those who do not speak those other languages. Newly at hand is LA PEQUENA COMPLICACION DOMESTICA DE LAS TRES SEGUNDAS MANCHAS, by Manuel Diez-Alegria (Madrid: The Amateur Mendicant Society, 1994); this is a 124-page monograph dealing with "The Little Domestic Complication of the Three Second Stains", and it is carefully researched. The question of how many cases there actually were has long intrigued Sherlockian scholars who have noted that the case mentioned by Watson in passing seems not to be the one he wrote using that title; Diez-Alegria concludes that there was only one case, which occurred in 1886, and he identifies all the politicians who were involved in it. The monograph costs $10.00 postpaid (currency only, please), from Miguel Gonzalez-Pedel, C/ San Vidal 15 (3-B), 28010 Madrid, Spain; if you want it by airmail the cost is $20.00 postpaid.
  16. The Tortoises of Galapagos is the newest Sherlockian society, founded by Irving and Selma Kamil on the island of Santa Cruz, where they landed from the yacht Cruz del Sur on Nov. 19, 1994. The society is for Sherlockian visitors to the Galapagos (although Irv is normally found at 32 Overlook Avenue, Cliffside Park, NJ 07010).
  17. Nino Erne died on Dec. 11. He was the editor of a uniform edition of the Sherlock Holmes stories translated into German and published in 1959 and later years by Bluchert and many other publishers. The GESAMMELTE WERKE IN EINZELAUSGABEN did much to bring Sherlock Holmes to the attention of German readers, and Erne's excellent forewords and introductions helped in this.
  18. SHERLOCK TAKES A WIFE AND OTHER MODERN TALES, by Ira Bernard Dworkin (Flemington: Creative Writers of Hunterdon, 1994; 92 pp., $10.00), reviewed last month (Dec 94 #6) is available from the publisher (Box 724, Flemington, NJ 08822) for $11.50 postpaid).
  19. Mary Ann Warner (Annmar Enterprises, 2711 Fairlane Place, Chino Hills, CA 91709-1240) offers an illustrated flier for four new Sherlock Holmes mouse pads ($8.95 each plus shipping).
  20. "They Might Be Giants" is alive and well, and getting ready for a new tour, according to an report spotted by Chris Redmond in the Varsity Review (Nov. 3, 1994). That's the rock group, not the film, but the rock group is named for the film. John Linnell and John Flansburgh founded the duo in 1982 and have been touring and recording ever since; their new album is "John Henry" (Elektra), and they have a dial-a-song number in Brooklyn (718-387-6992).
21. Jan 95 #4: Peter Cook died on Jan. 9. Regarded as one of the founders of modern British satire, he performed in the comedy revue "Beyond the Fringe" in the 1960s, launched the satirical magazine Private Eye, and shared the screenplay credit with Dudley Moore for a comedy version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978) and starred in the film; Variety's review described Cook's Holmes as an "absurdly degenerate version of Conan Doyle's master-sleuth." Cook also had an amusing scene in the film "Without a Clue" (1988), as Norman Greenhough, publisher of The Strand Magazine, thoroughly shocked at the news that "The Crime Doctor" intends to succeed Holmes.
  22. The fourth running of the Rache Road Rally, planned by The STUD Sherlockian Society for Mar. 5, will honor the centennial of automobile racing in America, duplicating the original race from Chicago to Waukegan ("but with more Canonical twists than you'll find in one of Mrs. Turner's German pretzels," Don Izban promises). The weekend also includes a meeting of The Solar Pons Breakfast Club on Mar. 3; additional information is available from Donald B. Izban, 5334 Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago, IL 60639-1524.
  23. 1995 marks the 100th anniversary of Buster Keaton's birth, and many of his films are now being released on cassettes and laserdiscs by Kino on Video (800-562-3330) in three boxed sets, according to TV Guide (Jan. 14). One of the films is "Sherlock Jr." (1924), described recently by the American Film Institute as "'The Purple Rose of Cairo' in reverse, as dreaming projectionist Buster jumps right into the screen (amid furious editing from garden bench to city street to cliff to lions) that eventually settles down to Keaton as ace detective Sherlock Jr. outwitting the bad guys, with an electrifying motor-cycle chase ... years later a routine physical revealed he'd unknowingly broken his neck when the water tank spout swept him away."
  24. The "Third Occasional Sherlockian Cruise" will sail on June 17, 1995, from Fort Lauderdale on the MV Zenith. The cruise lasts seven days, with stops at Ocho Rios, Grand Cayman Island, Cozumel, and Key West, and there will be Sherlockian seminars during the two days at sea. Holmes at His Zenith (Box 96, Norwood, NJ 07648) is the contact, and enquiries are welcome.
  25. Jim Suszynski reports a Sherlockian deerstalkered Bugs Bunny on five of the cards in and on a $1.99 box of "34 Tiny Toon Adventures Mystery Valentines" distributed by the Paper Magic Group to CVS drug stores.
  26. ENCYCLOPEDIA SHERLOCKIANA, by Matthew E. Bunson (New York: Macmillan, 1994; 326 pp., $25.00) is a worthy successor to Jack Tracy's out-of-print volume with the same title; subtitled "an a-to-z guide to the world of the great detective," it conforms to the format used by Tracy but extends the focus beyond the Canon itself, with additional entries on actors, artists, films, plays, pastiches, and much more, including many excellent illustrations.

27. The rhetorical question of the month (Dec 94 #6) was: If cats always land on their feet, and toast always lands buttered-side down, what happens if you tie a piece of toast buttered-side-up to a cat's back and drop him? Russ Geoffrey's answer is: it depends on the price of the carpet. Patrick Campbell reports that he has conducted exhaustive tests, with his cats and buttered toast, with and without parsley, and has found that the assembled unit landed on its left side (possibly true only north of the Equator).

28. Jan 95 #5: Last year (May 94 #6) Warren Randall noted entries for Holmes and Watson and Conan Doyle in A BOOK OF DAYS FOR THE LITERARY YEAR. And now Warren reports an entry for Conan Doyle in THE PHYSICIANS' BOOK OF DAYS (May 22) and for Holmes in THE LAWYERS' BOOK OF DAYS (Jan 6.); both published by Hugh Lauter Levin Associates and distributed by Macmillan (New York). Warren also spotted a comment in Richard Zoglin's long article on the Star Trek phenomenon in Time (Nov. 28, 1994): "Star Trek has never won much respect. In the realm of long-running entertainment phenoms, Sherlock Holmes has more history; James Bond, more class; Star Wars and Indiana Jones, more cinematic cachet. And while no one sneers at the Baker Street Irregulars, noninitiates consider Trekkies to be pretty odd."
29. And while it's too late to help voters in New York decide who to vote for in the governor's race, Warren has forwarded an item from Newsday (Oct. 19, 1994) with answers to questions posed to candidates Cuomo and Pataki. One of the questions asked for the candidates' favorite book: Cuomo answered: "Pierre Teilhard de Chardin's The Divine Milieu because it's a wonderful combination of poetry and ultimate truth." And Pataki answered: "Sherlock Holmes". George E. Pataki (Rep.) is now governor of New York.
30. Our new "Happy New Year!" stamp honors the oriental year of the boar. The weather-bitten pillars on either side of the lodge gates were surmounted by the boars' heads the Baskervilles, and there also is mention of a "human wild boar," formidable in its bestiality, in "The Veiled Lodger".
31. Further to the report (Dec 94 #2) of a new Sherlock Holmes Pub in Cairo, Al and Julie Rosenblatt note that a friend has reported a Sherlock Holmes Free House on Collins Street in Melbourne, Australia.
32. The comic-book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: ADVENTURE OF THE OPERA GHOST is now in the shops; two issues, $2.95 each, from the Caliber Press, and it's the Phantom of the Opera again.
33. THE SHAW FESTIVAL'S "SHERLOCK HOLMES", by William Gillette (1994; 208 pp.), offers Christopher Newton's revised version of the Gillette play (performed last year at the Shaw Festival), with additional material that includes an excellent essay by Chris Redmond about the play and about Gillette, and a reprint of Gillette's "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes", and is available in plastic clam-shell binding from George Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, Ont. L0N 1S0, Canada); CA$20.00 plus US$3.00 shipping.
34. Also available from George Vanderburgh is THE UNPUBLISHED SOLAR PONS, by August Derleth (1994; 102 pp.), offering three hitherto unpublished stories and an unfinished fourth story (the latter previously published by Luther Norris in The Pontine Dossier). Derleth created Solar Pons as a tribute to Sherlock Holmes, and the Pontine saga has long been highly regarded for its imagination and style; the unpublished stories are among the first he wrote (in 1929 and 1930), and were not even known to exist until ten years ago, when his college roommate donated them, with other Derleth papers, to the August Derleth Society. The book is bound in paper-covered boards and the cost is CA$20.00 plus US$3.00 shipping.

35. Jan 95 #6: Jack Tracy has issued a new catalog from Gaslight Publications (3888 West Sahara Avenue #221B, Las Vegas, NV 89102), offering W. W. Higgins' OUR BLAZONINGS AND CHARGES (due in March at $18.95) as well as a long list of in-print books from Gaslight and other publishers. The telephone number is 702-221-8495, and credit card orders are welcome.
36. Many of the cable networks have their own monthly magazines, and Arts & Entertainment is no exception. A&E Monthly (Jan. 1995) celebrated Sherlock Holmes' birthday with a nicely Sherlockian "Quiz for the Fiendishly Clever" by Lester Shane, and an article on Sherlockian collectibles by Linda Peterson (with attractive color photography); 235 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017; $2.50.
37. It is frustrating to consider how many really grand shows were broadcast on television in the days before videocassettes. Among them were the programs in the series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (with 26 shows broadcast by ITV in Britain in 1971 and 1973). Some of them were aired here in 1972 and they were delightful. The series was triggered by the anthologies edited by Hugh Greene, of course, and offered (to name only a few) Derek Jacobi as Duckworth Drew, John Neville as Dr. John Thorndyke, Robert Stephens as Max Carrados, Roy Dotrice as Simon Carne, Donald Pleasance as Carnacki, Douglas Wilmer as Prof. S.F.X. Van Dusen, and Charles Gray as Eugene Valmont. And I'm sure they'll never be rebroadcast by PBS-TV on "Mystery!" Another fine series was "The Edwardians" (produced by the BBC and broadcast in 1972); it had eight programs about interesting Edwardians such as Baden-Powell, Lloyd George, Daisy Warwick (a very close friend, as was said in those days, of the Prince of Wales), and Arthur Conan Doyle (played by Nigel Davenport). Only four of the shows were broadcast by PBS-TV here (including the one on Conan Doyle, but unfortunately long before VCRs were widely owned). A year ago I suggested (and I will suggest again) that Arts & Entertainment cable carries a lot of fine British programming, old and new, and it might not be at all amiss to write to A&E (address as above) to ask that they consider broadcasting these fine series.
38. John Aidiniantz, proprietor of The Sherlock Holmes Museum, who was convicted last month on charges of obtaining £1.2 million by deception, was jailed for three years and fined £30,000 in costs, according to a brief report in the Daily Telegraph (Jan. 21), noted by Wayne Swift.
39. Jennie Paton reports WINNIE THE POOH: DETECTIVE TIGGER, a 55-minute commercial videocassette from Walt Disney Home Video with four excerpts from the animated "The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh"; three of them ("Tigger, Private Ear", "Eeyore's Tail Tale", and "Sham Pooh" feature Tigger in Sherlockian costume).
40. Jerry Kegley, John Farrell, and Chuck Kovacic recently created the Curious Tiger Press and from it have published the first issue of Baker Street W1, a new journal intended as a rallying point for Sherlockians who live west of the Mississippi and thus have far fewer opportunities for the proverbial whiskey and sodality than those in the more populous east. The first issue offers a fine article by Steve Hecox on Jefferson Hope's career in Nevada, reports on western society activities, and more; $3.00 postpaid from Jerry Kegley, 110 El Nido #41, Pasadena, CA 91107.

41. Jan 95 #7: The next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be held on Mar. 31-Apr. 2. There will be a mystery to solve (with prizes for the winners) during a tour of eight Victorian homes, and meals, and other fun and games. More information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204-0340 (609-884-5404).
42. I tend not to mention The Baker Street Journal often in this newsletter, on the grounds that those fanatic enough to subscribe to this newsletter also subscribe to the BSJ (and if you don't, I recommend it, and it costs $18.95 a year for four issues). But what's truly worthy of mention here is A CUMULATED INDEX TO THE BAKER STREET JOURNAL 1970-1993, compiled by Donald A. Redmond: it is an invaluable tool for people who want to know what's been published in the BSJ since 1970, because it is a true index (as opposed to a list of authors' names and titles of articles). The authors and titles are there, to be sure, but Don Redmond also has including careful indexing by subject, and that's what makes an index an index. There are 120 pages, and it costs $19.95 postpaid, and the address (both for the BSJ and for the index) is The Baker Street Journal, Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.

43. Debi Pollard notes an attractive Rathbone/Bruce T-shirt, available from Book'em Mysteries, 1118 Mission Street, South Pasadena, CA 91030 (818-799-9600); $21.95 postpaid; credit card orders are welcome. The design is by Pasadena artist/ actor Michael Wilhelm, and the shirts are available in large and extra-large sizes.
44. "London in Children's Literature and the History of Childhood" is the title of the Christopher Newport University summer seminar in London from July 27 to Aug. 9; the seminar can be taken for credit and will be taught by Prof. Kara Keeling, and the Canon is among the children's classics to be studied. University president Anthony R. Santoro, a member of The Cremona Fiddlers, will be on hand to ensure proper attention to Sherlock Holmes. Additional information is available from Prof. Keeling at Christopher Newport University, Newport News, VA 23606-2998.
45. Dana Richards has reported an interesting (and Sherlockian) "Double Cross" puzzle on page 36 of the Jan. 1995 issue of Games World of Puzzles.
46. Arthur and Joyce Ann Liebman will guide their 14-day tour "In the Footsteps of Sherlock, Dracula, and Agatha" in England, starting by air from New York on Aug. 5, 1995. Their phone number is 516-621-6008, or you can write to Contemporary Tours, 580 Plandome Road, Manhasset, NY 11030.
47. One of the interesting things about Sherlockians who are collectors is that quite often they collect something other than Sherlockiana. A fine example of such a non-Sherlockian collection is on exhibit at The Grolier Club in New York through March: Jerry and Glorya Wachs' collection of 19th-century English poetry. And the catalog prepared for the exhibit offers some fine lessons on why and how collectors collect (and they happily pay tribute to A.S.W. Rosenbach, who once suggested that "After love, book collecting is the most exhilarating sport of all").
48. Jan 95 #8: The winter 1995 issue of Scarlet Street has arrived, with David Stuart Davies' interview with Jeremy Brett, who offers some new anecdotes about the Granada series. Asked, "Will you play Sherlock Holmes again?" Brett smiled and said sweetly, "That door is never quite closed." Scarlet Street now has a video department, selling the Granada and Rathbone series and other Sherlockian films. The magazine costs $20.00 a year for four issues; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
49. And Scarlet Street publisher Jessie Lilley notes with pride that a copy of the magazine is on display in an exhibit of "Screams on Screen: 100 Years of the Horror Film" at the N.Y. Public Library for the Performing Arts at Lincoln Center (the exhibit is on through April).
50. Syd Goldberg has reported a knighthood for another Sherlockian actor: the Queen's annual New Year's honours list included Robert Stephens, who starred in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970).
51. The eight one-crown coins issued last year by Gibraltar in honor of "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (Nov 94 #2) are offered by Peter Mosiondz, Jr. (26 Cameron Circle, Laurel Springs, NJ 08021) at prices slightly lower than those asked by the Pobjoy Mint; write for his illustrated flier.
52. According to my not-always-infallible records, subscribers to the ink-onpaper edition of this newsletter all now should have my seasonal souvenir for 1995 ("GORGON'S FATHER"), received during the birthday festivities in New York, or since, or with this mailing. If I managed to forget anyone, please let me know. And it's available to readers of the electronic edition in return for two 32c stamps; it's a modest tribute to the 1940s comic strip "Barnaby" and its creator Crockett Johnson, reprinting an passing but amusing reference to the Canon.
53. And a few commercials: the revised 15-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, *The* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.15 postpaid. The 72-page list of 657 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for the 397 active societies, costs $3.65 postpaid. A run of address labels for 336 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.30 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.
54. For the electronically enabled, the 15-page list of Irregulars and others is available from me as e-mail without charge, and the list of Sherlockian societies is offered by Willis Frick via anonymous ftp from ftp.netcom.com (directory pub/Sh/Sherlocktron).
55. Al and Julie Rosenblatt's splendid 20-page souvenir menu for "An Evening in Scarlet" at the Culinary Institute of America on May 16, 1987, handsomely devised, designed, and produced, with many illustrations, annotations, and explanations, is still available for $18.00 postpaid; checks also payable to Peter E. Blau, please).

56. Feb 95 #1: The ninth volume of Beeman's Christmas Annual offers 32 pages of Sherlockian scholarship from past meetings of The Occupants of the Empty House; the cost is $11.00 postpaid, from the society (105 Wilcox, Zeigler, IL 62999). And for $1.00 more you can receive the annual and a year of the society's monthly newsletter.
57. The Giant Rats of Sumatra have a new necktie (red) with an amusing design (yellow); $25.00 postpaid from Raymond J. Phillip, 2865 Stage Coach Drive, Memphis, TN 38134.
58. Gayle Harris spotted nice news in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 7): a photograph of members of the Greater Philadelphia Search and Rescue Team searching for a cougar reported in Cobbs Creek Park in Yeadon. The search was led by Jim Hosgood and his bloodhound Watson.
59. One of the nice souvenirs distributed during the birthday festivities was Cheryl Hurd's "A Sherlockian Garden" (two pages of helpful hints for people considering a horticultural tribute to the Canon); send a #10 SASE to the Teapot Press, Box 2048, Scotia, NY 12302.
60. Don Hobbs reports that Thomas W. Olson's two-act play "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" has been scheduled by the Dallas Children's Theater on June 2-18, 1995; the box-office address is 2215 Cedar Springs, Dallas, TX 75201 (214-978-0110). The play premiered in Minneapolis in 1989 and was well-received.
61. The latest issue of The Sherlock Holmes Review is largely devoted to the Granada series, with articles by Patricia Ward, Steven T. Doyle, and Mark Allen Gagen, and a long interview with Michael Cox. 64 pp., $6.00 postpaid from Steven T. Doyle, Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077 (a four-issue subscription costs $20.00).
62. Plan ahead: the fifth annual Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair and Convention will be held at the Holiday Inn (Independence Mall) in Philadelphia on Nov. 10-12. Membership is limited to 450, full registration costs $45.00, and the contact is Deen Kogan, Detecto-Mysterioso Books, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147.
63. Norman Houde reports that THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: THIRTEEN BIOGRAPHERS IN SEARCH OF A LIFE, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg (Nov 87 #4) is offered by The Scholar's Bookshelf, 110 Melrich Road, Cranbury, NJ 08512, discounted to $14.95. The book is a fine guide to the many, and frequently unreliable, biographies.
64. Geraldine Beare's anthology CRIME STORIES FROM THE 'STRAND' in 1991 (with "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Dying Detective") was followed by ADVENTURE STORIES FROM THE 'STRAND' in 1992 (with "A Pot of Caviare") and this year by ADVENTURE STORIES FROM THE 'STRAND' (with "How the Brigadier Came to the Castle of Gloom"). The three volumes are illustrated by David Eccles and make a uniform set; the new title costs $37.95 from The Folio Society, 2323 Randolph Avenue, Avenel, NJ 07001 (and the first two are still in print).

65. Feb 95 #2: Otto Penzler's Sherlock Holmes Library continues its series of reprints of classic Sherlockiana: BAKER STREET STUDIES, edited by H. W. Bell (New York: Otto Penzler Books, 1995; 223 pp., $8.00), first appeared in 1934; it was (and still is) a splendid anthology of scholarship written by Dorothy L. Sayers, Helen Simpson, Vernon Rendall, Vincent Starrett, Ronald A. Knox, A. G. Macdonnell, S. C. Roberts, and Bell himself.

66. "I was able to refer him to two parallel cases, the one at Riga in 1857, and the other at St. Louis in 1871, which have suggested to him the true solution," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Sign of the Four"). Union Station in St. Louis is shown on a postal card issued last year, but Charles Lavazzi reports that the station opened on Sept. 1, 1884, far too late for that Canonical reference, or for the one found in "A Study in Scarlet" ("When you see him, ask him if he remembers the Jefferson Hopes of St. Louis"). But Union Station was there when Arthur Conan Doyle arrived in St. Louis by train in 1923. And in OUR SECOND AMERICAN ADVENTURE he told a story he heard in St. Louis, about a drummer selling potted milk. "It came from a contented cow," was his slogan. His fellow-drummer was selling some imitation beer. "I wish I had a slogan like yours," he said. "Well," said the other, "I've seen your stuff and tasted it. You might say it came from a discontented horse."
67. Shall the world, then, be overrun by Sherlock Hound porcelain? The teapot available previously from What on Earth (Sep 94 #5) also is available from The Mind's Eye, Box 1060, Petaluma, CA 94953 (800-949-3333), along with a new matching set of four mugs ($44.95), according to Tim O'Connor.
68. The Sherlock Holmes Journal has long been one of the best of Sherlockian periodicals, and the winter 1994 issue is at hand, with Richard Lancelyn Green's excellent article about the history of The Sherlock Holmes Society, and the S'ian scholarship in the early 1930s that preceded the founding of the Society in 1934. The Sherlock Holmes Society was dissolved in 1938, and was succeeded by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, whose membership secretary is Graeme Jameson (75 Kingsgate Street, Winchester, Hants. SO23 9PE, England); you can write for details (including available back issues and other material).
69. Green quotes from a letter written by Dorothy L. Sayers to H. W. Bell in 1932: "I am also for maintaining the authenticity of the established text wherever possible, because this demands much more complication and perverse ingenuity than iconoclasm. What I like so much about your book was the determined seriousness and majestic parade of scholarship with which it plays the game. It's no fun unless it is played with deadly earnestness."
70. Sayers continued in that belief, and in the introduction to her UNPOPULAR OPINIONS (1946) wrote: "The game of applying the methods of the 'Higher Criticism' to the Sherlock Holmes canon was begun, many years ago, by Monsignor Ronald Knox. . . . Since then, the thing has become a hobby among a select set of jesters here and in America. The rule of the game is that it must be played as solemnly as a county cricket match at Lord's: the slightest touch of extravagance or burlesque ruins the atmosphere."

71. Feb 95 #3: Arthur H. Lewis died on Jan. 25. He grew up in Mahanoy City, and had first-hand experience of the Shenandoah Valley, well demonstrated in his book LAMENT FOR THE MOLLY MAGUIRES (1964), on which the 1970 film "The Molly Maguires" was based. He was a faithful member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches, and he had grand fun libelling his fellow Sherlockians in his murder mystery COPPER BEECHES (1978).
72. "You don't happen to have a Raphael or a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it?" Sherlock Holmes asked (in "The Three Garridebs"). And this year's "Love" stamp has a Raphael cherub (from his "Sistine Madonna"), according to the postal service. Well, not quite, according to Joseph Cafetta Jr., whose letter in the Washington Post (Feb. 2) notes that the stamp actually portrays one of two "putti" (guardian death angels) that Raphael painted resting their elbows on the coffin of Pope Julius II. When the pope, who was Raphael's patron, died in 1513, Raphael made the painting to be carried in the funeral procession, and it is now in the Dresden Gallery in Germany.
73. The 10th World of Drawings and Watercolours Fair was held at the Park Lane Hotel in London last month, and one of the paintings offered (for £24,000) was Charles Altamont Doyle's watercolor "Enjoying the Ice: a Curling Match on Duddingston Loch" (the loch, southeast of Edinburgh, was a favorite for skating and curling matches, according to the report spotted by Wayne and Francine Swift in The Times, and the artist was the father of Arthur Conan Doyle).
74. Joseph A. Coppola reports that the Oxford University Press is considering reprinting the colorful set of postcards that were used as promotion for THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES; if you'd like to be on their mailing list, you can call them at 800-451-7556.
75. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE WHITE LADY OF FEATHERSTONE is Tony Lumb's second pastiche about Holmes' investigations in Yorkshire, again with plenty of local color; the 31-page pamphlet costs $5.00 postpaid (currency, please) from the author (21 Albert Street, Featherstone, Pontefract, West Yorks. WF7 5EX, England).
76. "I shall be the Hans Sloane of my age," said Nathan Garrideb. And SIR HANS SLOANE: COLLECTOR, SCIENTIST, ANTIQUARY, by Arthur MacGregor, has just been published by the British Museum Press (294 pp., £50.00). According to John Baesch, it is available from The Good Book Guide (24 Seward Street, London EC1V 3GB, England); they welcome credit-card orders.
77. Roger Johnson's newsletter The District Messenger continues to provide all sorts of news about what's happening in Great Britain (and sometimes elsewhere); it's published approximately monthly and costs $10.00 for twelve issues (dollar checks payable to Jean Upton can be sent to Roger Johnson, Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford, Essex CM2 6DE, England). His most recent issue has an alert for videotapers here: the series "Biography" (on A&E cable five days a week) filmed a dozen members of The Sherlock Holmes Society dining at The Sherlock Holmes in the company of Dr. John H. Watson (impersonated by David Burke). There's no word yet on a broadcast date.
78. Feb 95 #4: SHERLOCK HOLMES & OTHER DETECTIVE STORIES (London: HarperCollins, 1994; 1468 pp., £9.99) offers all of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and 31 other stories that involve detectives (or detection), from "That Little Square Box" (1881) to "The Lift" (1922), with an introduction and bibliography by Owen Dudley Edwards. The stories are arranged in order of publication, mixing S'ian and non-S'ian stories, and allowing readers to consider Edwards' suggestion that "Conan Doyle worried that the pressure on him to produce series of Sherlock Holmes stories would mean that Holmes was dragged into perfectly good plots which really did not need a great detective." Edwards also notes Conan Doyle's skillful focus on the short-story format, proposing that "he would have thought of one of the greatest of all modern derivations from Holmes and Watson, F. Scott Fitzgerald's 'The Great Gatsby', as a short story."
79. AN ILLUSTRATED MONOGRAPH ON THE USE OF FIREARMS IN THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by E. W. McGinley, offers a knowledgeable exploration of the topic, concentrating on the weapons used by Holmes and Watson (the author concludes that Holmes was more expert than Watson); 47 pp., $19.95 postpaid from Joseph Coppola, 103 Kenny Drive, Fayetteville, NY 103066.
80. Carl and Diana Stix have found a new and interesting use of Sherlock Holmes, in promoting shopping safety at the Eastern Hills Mall in Williamsville, N.Y., where Holmes provides entertainment and safety tips at the mall, poses for pictures with children, and is delighted to meet with school and civic groups. And his portrait appears on the mall's publicity, and on the shoulder patch worn by the mall's security officers. An illustrated flier for the mall's "project awareness" notes that they chose Sherlock Holmes for this role "because he represents the calm, cool, confidence that comes from being in control of the situation." A nicely-illustrated flier is available from the Eastern Hills Mall (attn: John E. Abt), 4545 Transit Road, Williamsville, NY 14221.
81. Michael Meer has sent a brochure from a new establishment called Sherlock's City in Switzerland; the address is Rte de Jura 49, 1700 Fribourg, and it offers a bar, rotisserie, and billiards.

82. Plan ahead: "A Study in Largess" is the title of the memorial conference that will mark the dedication of the John Bennett Shaw Collection at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis on Oct. 13-15, 1995. The schedule will include exhibits, lectures, music, theater, tours, and much more, and a prospectus will be available next month.
83. David Stuart Davies reports that he has heard from Jeremy Brett, who has been in hospital again, for serious heart failure, but is now on the mend. But he's had to suspend all activity for the next three or four months, and thus won't be able to join the festivities at "A Study in Scotland" on May 6-8 in Edinburgh. The weekend gathering is sponsored by the Northern Musgraves, and will include presentations by Owen Dudley Edwards and Michael Cox, a ghost walk, a whisky tasting, and a new drama written by John Cargill Thomson. Additional information is available from David at Overdale, 69 Greenhead Road, Huddersfield, W. Yorks. HD1 4ER, England.

84. Feb 95 #5: IT'S A PRINT!: DETECTIVE FICTION FROM PAGE TO SCREEN, edited by William Reynolds and Elizabeth Trembley (Bowling Green: Bowling Green University Popular Press, 1994; 235 pp., $46.95 cloth, $18.95 paper), is a fascinating anthology of essays on how the printed page is brought to both film and television screens. The coverage extends from "The Thin Man" to "The Silence of the Lambs", and Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" is discussed both by Elizabeth Trembley and by Michael Cox (who produced the first 32 of the Granada shows); Cox's article is noteworthy for its explanations of the reasons for the strengths and weaknesses of the series.
85. A newsletter from the UCLA Film and Television Archive reports that thanks to Hugh Hefner's ongoing support, they are making great progress in preservation (from the original negatives and deteriorating prints) of six of the Sherlock Holmes films made by Universal in the 1940s. The National Endowment for the Arts has suspended its funding for film preservation, and your donations, large or small, are thus more important than ever; the development officer is Cornelia Emerson, UCLA Film and Television Archive (FX48), 302 East Melnitz, 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90024-1323.
86. Richard Lederer has long delighted lovers of the English language with his explorations of that language's oddities, and he and Michael Gilleland have explored LITERARY TRIVIA: FUN AND GAMES FOR BOOK LOVERS (New York: Vintage Books, 1994; 233 pp., $10.00); there's Sherlockiana, of course, and lots of other challenges for those who love literature.
87. George Ault reports that the "top 50 music video countdown" broadcast by VH1 cable on Dec. 17 included (as the #29 video) a song called "Mmm Mmm Mmm" from the Crash Test Dummies album "God Shuffled His Feet", with three kids dressed in Sherlockian costume, in foggy London, investigating spots on another kid's body (like a school play put on for the parents, according to George, and really quite cute).
88. The Trifling Monographers will hold their annual dinner during the annual meeting of the Public Relations Society of America in Seattle on Oct. 29. Laborers in the vineyards of public relations (and local Sherlockians) are invited to contact William Seil (3001 125th Avenue SE #3-D, Bellevue, WA 98005).
89. The next meeting of the Practical, But Limited, Geologists will be at Chesterfield's (1111 Fannin Street) in Houston on Wednesday, Mar. 8; drinks at 7:00 and dinner at 8:00. I think that I've already alerted all the Houston Sherlockians, but if I've missed anyone, I'll be at the Doubletree Hotel at Allen Center (713-759-0202) from Mar. 4; just give me a call if you'd like to attend the festivities in honor of the world's first forensic geologist.
90. The latest Sherlockian scholarship from Spain is ALGUNAS LEGUAS AL NORTE DE OPORTO: LA VERDAD SOBRE EL NORAH CREINA?, by Antonio J. Iriarte (Madrid: The Amateur Mendicant Society, 1995); the 59-page monograph explores "Some Leagues to the North of Oporto: The Truth about the Norah Creina?", offering an intriguing suggestion of a possible connection between the events in "The Resident Patient" and the Irish Republican Brotherhood. The monograph costs $10.00 postpaid (currency only, please), from Miguel Gonzalez-Pedel, C/ San Vidal 15 (3-B), 28010 Madrid, Spain; or $20.00 postpaid by airmail.

91. Feb 95 #6: There are all sorts of imaginative Sherlockian goings-on in the United Kingdom, and if you have scheduled a visit this summer, you might wish to attend the "Appledore Towers Summer Ball" planned by The Poor Folk Upon the Moors, at the Lord Haldon Hotel in Dunchideok, near Exeter, in Devonshire, on June 10. Additional information is available from Mike C. Philipson, 4 Dolvin Road, Tavistock, Devon. PE19 9EA, England.
92. Sorry about that: Ron Fish notes that Connecticut governor John Rowland was elected, rather than reelected (Jan 95 #2), last November.
93. A sales list of books, pins, neckties, socks, and memorabilia offered by The Speckled Band of Boston is available from Richard M. Olken, 200 Hyslop Road, Brookline, MA 02145-5724. There's some fine writing in the anthologies of Sherlockian scholarship and humor perpetrated over the years by the members of the Band.
94. When Sarah Jane Smith decides she would like to meet Rudyard Kipling, the Doctor kindly makes the necessary arrangements, but as so often happens in stories about Doctor Who, his time-setting is slightly off, and they arrive in England to find Kipling still a schoolboy. In Devon, where a thoroughly horrible hound is roaming Dartmoor, and another doctor is on hand: Arthur Conan Doyle, member of the crew of the whaler Hope. John Peel's EVOLUTION (London: Virgin Publishing, 1994; 261 pp., £4.99/$5.95) is a new cross-over novel, and nicely done (with some advice from Bill Vande Water).
95. "On the scene is Sherlock Holmes matching wits with Archy Stillman while Ham Sandwich and Wells Fargo look on," is (part of) the blurb for a recent unabridged recording of Mark Twain's "A Double-Barreled Detective Story", read well by Thomas Becker on two audiocassettes (2:15 hours), with a bit of added value: letters from readers, when the parody of 19th-century mysteries was first published in 1902, wondering about one of Twain's jokes, and his bemused response. The set is available for $16.95 from Commuters Library, Box 3168, Falls Church, VA 22043 (800-643-0295), and credit-card orders are welcome. Other authors in their catalog include Chekhov, Wells, Poe, Carroll, Wharton, Joyce, and Kipling.
96. A reader has asked for an explanation of the derivation of the name of the Spermaceti Press. Many years ago, when I wanted a whimsical name for the imaginary press from which my seasonal souvenirs were published (following in a long Sherlockian tradition of devising interesting names for this sort of thing), it occurred to me that someone whose Investiture in the BSI was "Black Peter" and who lived just down the road from Arrowhead, where Herman Melville wrote MOBY DICK ought to be able to find a name that had something to do with whaling. Of course one wouldn't expect to find printing presses on whaling ships, but I did some research and found that there used to be a spermaceti press, which was used for the final processing of whale oil into the spermaceti from which the finest candles were made. And there still is one surviving spermaceti press, preserved at the Nantucket Whaling Museum in Massachusetts, in the actual building where in the 19th century millions of candles were made and exported throughout the world. Now you know . . .

97. Mar 95 #1: "I have never known my friend to be in better form, both mental and physical, than in the year '95," proclaims the announcement of this year's grand Sherlockian dinner at the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., on May 13. The evening begins at 5:00 pm, with wine, hors d'oeuvres, and a brief film interlude, with dinner at 7:30 pm. Dress is black tie, and the cost is $95.00 per person. Checks (with a limit of four people) with names and addresses for all people, should be sent to Albert M. Rosenblatt (300 Freedom Road, Pleasant Valley, NY 12569); enclose a self-addressed postal card if you want an acknowledgement. Al advises quick action, since space is limited, and that you prepare for the dinner by reading

- the five cases said to have occurred in 1895 (Blac, Bruc, Norw, Soli, and 3Stu). And as in the past, there will be a Firehouse Breakfast in Rhinebeck on Sunday.
98. The Beekman Arms in Rhinebeck is sold out, but a discount rate ($65.00 per room) is available from the Sheraton Hotel (914-486-5300) in Poughkeepsie (about 10 minutes south). Conventional motels in Hyde Park include the Dutch Patrol (914-229-7141), Golden Manor (914-229-2157), Hyde Park (914-229-9616), Roosevelt (914-229-0026), and Super 8 (914-229-0088). Motels in Rhinebeck (about 20 minutes north) include the Rhinebeck (914-876-5900) and Village Inn (914-876-7000).
  99. The current issue of Anglofile reports that Mark Frost's THE SIX MESSIAHS (a sequel to his THE LIST OF SEVEN) will be issued by Dove Audio in July in an audiocassette set, read by David Warner ($24.95). I've not had any word of a book edition (although there surely will be one), nor anything about the long-rumored film based on THE LIST OF SEVEN. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
  100. It was a capital mistake (and it was mine): the new membership secretary of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London (Feb 95 #2) actually is Bob Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England.
  101. Stanley MacKenzie died on Feb. 25. He joined The Sherlock Holmes Society of London soon after it was founded in 1951, became a member of its Council in 1956, and was one of its honorary secretaries from 1980 to 1985. He was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (as "The Man with the Twisted Lip" in 1967), and an enthusiastic and energetic collector (one of the very few to have owned more than one copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual). Stanley's particular interest was in theatrical Sherlockiana, over the years finding many unique posters and playbills for early productions; that special interest was understandable, in view of his own career in the theater, which included the post of deputy stage manager for the Royal Shakespeare Company when it revived William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in 1974 and brought it to Washington and New York.
  102. Nice news for those who have been searching for commercial videocassettes of the first six shows in Granada's Jeremy Brett series (Scan, Spec, Danc, Nava, Soli, and Blue): all 35 shows that have been broadcast in the United States are now available ($19.98 plus shipping) from Scarlet Street Video, Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452; credit card orders welcome.
103. Mar 95 #2: Bert Coules (Fairway, Sandling Road, Saltwood, Hythe, Kent CT21 4QJ, England) offers laser-printed scripts (about 60 pp. each) for his BBC radio adaptations (the current series starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams as Holmes and Watson, except for the 1988 broadcast of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" with Roger Rees and Crawford Logan). The programs are: Stud, Sign, Scan, Bosc, Blue, Nobl, Silv, Croo, Fina, Empt, Norw, Danc, Soli, Chas, SixN, Seco, Houn, Wist, Bruc, Devi, Last, Illu, Maza, Suss, Thor, Lion, and Reti. The postpaid cost (by sterling check or draft) for each short-story script is £12.00 (surface) or £14.00 (airmail), or you can pay with currency ($19.00 or $22.00) or by dollar check ($28.86 or $30.02). The cost is doubled for the three long-story scripts.
  104. Catherine Cooke, who presides over the Sherlock Holmes Collection at the Marylebone Library in London, notes that she now has access to the Internet (and her e-mail address is C.COOKE@BBCNC.ORG.UK).
  105. It was 35 years ago that The Council of Four of Denver published the first anthology of Sherlockian science-fiction, reprinting seven stories by some of the very best writers working in the field. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN ORBIT, edited by Mike Resnick and Martin H. Greenberg (New York: DAW Books, 1995; 374 pp., $5.50), is a somewhat different anthology, with far more stories (26 of them, all published for the first time), and it is interesting that the most successful of the new stories are those that do what the stories in the earlier volume did: they offer new and imaginative approaches to a character that is loved by so many readers, and give readers far more than tales told by authors who merely use Sherlock Holmes.
  106. Ron Fish reports a new comic book: THE REN & STIMPY SHOW #29 (Apr. 1995) in the shops now (from Marvel, $1.95), with Sherlock Hoek and Dr. S. J. Stupid M.D. in "The Casebook of Sherlock Hoek".
  107. Stephen Davies reports that the 100th anniversary of the opening of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" will be marked by the installation of a stained glass window in Poet's Corner in Westminster Abbey. It should be remembered that Conan Doyle met Wilde, at a dinner at which they both were commissioned to write stories for Lippincott. Wilde's story was "The Picture of Dorian Gray" and Conan Doyle's was "The Sign of the Four" (and it is interesting that a character in Conan Doyle's story offers some echoes of Wilde).
  108. Domestic cats are mentioned in four of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and it is nice that the Royal Mail has issued a handsome "cats" set with designs by Elizabeth Blackadder (kindly forwarded by Roger Johnson and Jean Upton). And since black cats are mentioned in two of the four stories ("His Last Bow" and "The Yellow Face"), the black cat (named Sophie) on the 19-pence stamp is nicely appropriate.
109. Mar 95 #3: Sherlockians considering attending the Dartmouth Alumni College on Aug. 6-11 will (one hopes) be happy to hear that the focus will be on crime and mystery fiction, especially the locales of the genre. "Landscapes of Murder" is to be the theme, and the program "will of course explore the landscape of Sherlock Holmes and other consummate masters."
  110. If you've never seen the lion's mane, you might wish to pay a visit to the New England Aquarium in Boston, Mass., where John Baesch reports that it is on display in a new exhibit ("Jellies") that is expected to run through the summer.
  111. Peter Calamai spotted the N.Y. Times obituary for Leonard S. Silk, who died on Feb. 10. He was a distinguished columnist and editorial writer for the paper and, as the obituary noted, a rarity in journalism: a reporter with a Ph.D. in economics. He started his journalism career in 1954 at Business Week, and moved to The Times in 1970 and wrote his farewell column in 1992. One of his stories, published in 1977, focused on Oskar Morgenstern, who with John von Neumann published a landmark treatise on THE THEORY OF GAMES AND ECONOMIC BEHAVIOR in 1944. They used Holmes' flight from Moriarty to explain the game of Matching Pennies, and Silk carefully explained for general readers how (as Morgenstern put it) when Holmes left Waterloo Station he was "already 48 percent dead."
  112. The sixth issue of Troy Taylor's The Whitechapel Gazette has arrived, with 50 pages of nicely illustrated articles on Doyleana, including Groombridge and Crowborough, a tribute to John Bennett Shaw, and some pastiches. $6.50 postpaid; Troy's address is 805 West North #1, Decatur, IL 62522.
  113. Compliments and congratulations to Bjarne Nielsen, who has won first prize in the Scandinavian "Viking Lotto". Jette Randloev has kindly forwarded an article from the Berlingske Tidende (Feb. 26) with a photograph that showed Bjarne in a deerstalker and reported that the first prize was 4.3 million kroner (about $711,000). Bjarne's mystery-specialist bookshop Antikvariat Pinkerton is located in a former jail in Nykobing, Denmark, where he also presides over his Sherlock Holmes Museum; according to the article, Bjarne will now try to buy the building from the Ministry of Justice.
  114. A new and well-illustrated 28-page catalog is at hand from Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219), with a fine mix of books, pamphlets, pins, prints, and other collectibles.
  115. A hitherto unreported copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 has turned up, at auction at Christie's East in New York, where it was sold from the collection of the late Charles J. Liebman to an unidentified buyer on Feb. 22 for $14,375 (including 15% buyer's premium). It was without wrappers

- and advertisements, and was rebound in contemporary cloth, with the name of a previous owner (Claremont) on the Contents leaf and a bookseller's slip with the name Walter Schatzki.
116. There's still time to plan to attend this year's National Sherlock Holmes Meeting in Australia on Apr. 14-17, when The Sydney Passengers will be in charge of the 1995 festivities. More information is available from Phil Cornell, 24 Byron Street, Croydon, N.S.W. 2132, Australia (02-799-3107).

117. Mar 95 #4: "Body Found in Lions' Den at Zoo" was the headline on a story in the Washington Post (Mar. 5), and the story seems to have been followed widely in other papers. The victim was Margaret Davis King, of Little Rock, and the authorities have concluded that she chose a grisly way of committing suicide. The lions involved were a 450-pound male named Tana and a 300-pound female named Asha, and Tana is the son of one of the North African (or Atlas or Barbary) lions that The Red Circle of Washington visited during a "Cat House Picnic" at the National Zoo in June 1977. The Canon's Sahara King (in "The Veiled Lodger") was a North African lion, and they were recorded as extinct in the wild in the 1930s (killed by the likes of Count Negretto Sylvius); in the 1970s a few survivors were found in the King of Morocco's private zoo.
118. This year marks the 150th anniversary of statehood for one of the states mentioned in "The Five Orange Pips" (the colorful design by Laura Smith shows an alligator enjoying himself in a swamp); Texas is due for similar honors later this year.
119. Spradlin & Associates (Box 863, Lapeer, MI 48446) offer an attractive deck of playing cards, with Paget and Steele portraits of principal characters on the court cards (Moriarty's on the jokers), and Canonical quotations on the others. The Game's Afoot Playing Cards cost $12.00 a deck, plus $3.00 per order shipping.
120. Those who remember Nigel Hawthorne from the fine series "Yes, Minister" and "Yes, Prime Minister" broadcast by some PBS-TV stations will find him doing something quite different, and doing it magnificently, in the title role in the film "The Madness of King George", which I recommend highly. Hawthorne is joined by other fine actors, including Ian Holm and Helen Mirren, and if you need a Sherlockian excuse to see the film, two of the characters in it are mentioned in the Canon.
121. Tom Drucker was the first to note, and quite correctly, that the mention of Raphael is in "The Three Gables" rather than in "The Three Garridebs" (Feb 95 #3). My collection of G's is a confused one . . .
122. Jennie Paton spotted SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE CARD GAME, from Gibsons Games (H. P. Gibson & Sons Ltd., London SW19 2B, England) in 1991; 108 playing cards, score pad, and rule book with detailed background notes ($20.00 in a store in Georgia). Gibson also produced 221B BAKER STREET: THE MASTER DETECTIVE GAME and VIDEO BAKER STREET.
123. Joseph A. Coppola's article "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" appears in the Mar.-Apr. issue of Topical Time (published by the American Topical Association). Joe does a nice job of telling about his discovery and pursuit of stamps honoring Sherlock Holmes. Box 630, Johnstown, PA 15907; $3.00.
124. The brochure for "A Study in Largess" will be available from Judy Burton at 499 Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 (e-mail J-BURT@VM1.SPCS.UMN.EDU); that's the memorial conference scheduled for Oct. 13-15 to honor the dedication of the John Bennett Shaw Collection, and the schedule will include exhibits, lectures, music, theater, tours, and more.

125. Mar 95 #5: If your collection extends to romance novels with Sherlockian titles, such as Colin Rafferty's SHERLOCK AND WATSON (Toronto: Harlequin Books, 1991; #363) (Jan 92 #1), you might want to pursue Sharon De Vita's SHERLOCK'S HOME (New York: Silhouette Books, 1988; #593), which John Farrell recently found. According to the blurb: "Willie Walker took her position as head of the Children's Welfare Agency very seriously. Too seriously, according to juvenile detective Michael Ryce. As far as Ryce was concerned, that petite, fire-and-brimstone, by-the-book social worker was the only thing keeping him from adopting T.C. Sherlock, the street-smart orphan he'd grown to love."
126. John Farrell reports that Rosella Frederick, a Cochiti Pueblo Indian, designs and makes porcelain-on-copper ornaments (John uses his on his bolo tie, but brooches also are available). John has BSI in dancing men in his design (the ornament is 3 in. high), and the cost is $50.00 postpaid. More information is available from Charlotte Irons, Box 283, Cerillos, NM 87010.
127. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has issued two delightful audiocassettes with Douglas Wilmer reading "The Speckled Band", "The Devil's Foot", "The Musgrave Ritual", and "Charles Augustus Milverton"; the readings are unabridged, the notes are decorated with Wilmer's self-portrait as Holmes, and Wilmer, who has played Holmes on both television and film, does well indeed. The cost of the set is £13.95 or $23.00 postpaid (the checks should be payable to the Society, please), from Mrs. E. M. Godden, Apple Tree Cottage, Smerden, Ashford, Kent TN27 8QE, England.
128. John Baesch, on holiday in London, reports that the Sherlock Holmes Museum still is open, with John Aidiniantz's mother in charge.
129. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner at Chesterfield's in Houston on Mar. 8 to honor (as usual) the world's first forensic geologist. Visitors attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists were welcomed by members of The John Openshaw Society and The Strollers on the Strand. And we all welcomed Laurie R. King, author of THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE, who by pleasant coincidence was in Houston for a book-signing earlier in the day at Martha Farrington's Murder by the Book (Laurie's second book about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes will be issued this year, and a third book is in the works). The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet next in New Orleans in November (does anyone know of any Sherlockians in New Orleans?) and in San Diego in May.
130. We've lost a lawyer, and gained a judge. Congratulations to Andy Peck, who on Mar. 31 was inducted as United States Magistrate Judge for the Southern District of New York.
131. It's not entirely clear when and where Sherlock Holmes might have heard the Polyphonic Motets of Lassus performed, but I've had my first opportunity to do that, on Mar. 18 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Washington, where the Palestrina Choir performed an all-Lassus program. And it was a delight to hear the songs, in a thoroughly appropriate setting, with fine acoustics.

132. Mar 95 #6: Dave Galerstein reports that the Alumni Federation of Columbia University is planning a Swiss Alumni College, May 30-June 7, and since the alumni college will be based at the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in Meiringen, the brochure includes a photograph of the statue, and mention of Conan Doyle's visit to Meiringen. Alumni Federation, Columbia University, Box 400, New York, NY 10027 (800-323-7373).
133. Jim Hillestad (The Toy Soldier, Paradise Falls, R.R. 1, Box 379, Cresco, PA 18326) offers two new sets of 54mm Sherlockian figurines: "Boscombe Valley" shows Holmes and Watson in a railway train compartment ($130 postpaid), and "Silver Blaze" shows Holmes and Watson with Silver Blaze and his rider ($50 postpaid); color photographs available from Jim in return for an SASE.
134. Tom Stix has spotted an imaginative poster for the French release of the 1963 film "Sherlock Holmes und das Halsband des Todes" (which was dubbed into English and released in 1968 as "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace"). The film starred Christopher Lee and Thorley Walters, and the poster measures 31 x 23.5" and is offered by the Omnibus Gallery (422 East Cooper Avenue, Aspen, CO 81611) at $600.
135. The winter 1995 of The New Baker Street Pillar Box is at hand, with 46 pages of articles by and news of members of The Franco-Midland Hardware Company. The society is led by Philip Weller, and offers a sales-list of other Sherlockian studies and monographs, from Philip at 6 Bramham Moor, Hill Head, Fareham, Hampshire PO14 3RU, England.

136. The fourth annual Watsonian Weekend (celebrating Dr. Watson and the Battle of Maiwand) will be held in and near Des Plaines, Ill., on July 28-29, with a dinner, a speech by Susan Rice, a horse race, and a contest for the best essay on how many wives Watson had. Additional details are available from Fred Levin, 8242 North Ridgeway Avenue, Skokie, IL 60016.
137. A video-taper alert from Jerry Margolin: "VR.5" is a new one-hour series on the Fox television network, with the overall premise that "lonely but likeable computer buff Sydney Bloom (Lori Singer) stumbles onto the previously unattainable fifth level of virtual reality." And the show will be in part Sherlockian on Friday, April 7.
138. Wayne and Francine Swift report that they've been told that Stanley MacKenzie's collection has been sent to auction at Sotheby's in London; the date is not yet known (34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England).
139. Three volumes of the game SHERLOCK HOLMES, CONSULTING DETECTIVE are available on CD-ROM discs, and now there's a book: SHERLOCK HOLMES, CONSULTING DETECTIVE: THE UNAUTHORIZED STRATEGY GUIDE, by Bruce C. Shelley (Rocklin: Prima Publishing, 1994; 369 pp., $19.95); it's a true "everything you ever wanted to know" book, with instructions on how to play, and hints on how to play better, and the stories for all nine cases, and comments on them, and much more. Box 1260-BK, Rocklin, CA 95677-1260 (800-632-8676).

140. Apr 95 #1: Bob Thomalen proudly reports that his grandson Patrick is as observant as every Sherlockian should be: their recent visit to the American Museum of Natural History in New York included an inspection of the museum's cross-section of a huge redwood tree, which is marked with time-lines that show what happened during the life of the tree. And Patrick happily called to Bob's attention the label, which noted that "this tree was cut down in a forest in California in 1891, the year in which Arthur Conan Doyle first published the Adventures of Sherlock Holmes in the Strand Magazine."
141. 20 26 23 2 "Any Englishman who claims high intelligence," said Sherlock Holmes, should be able to identify which of these numbers is
29 3 13 24 the odd one out, within about ten minutes." That is one of the 74 Mensa-type puzzles in THE SHERLOCK HOLMES
27 25 17 10 IQ BOOK, by Eamonn Butler and Madsen Pirie (London: Pan Books, 1994; 193 pp., £3.99); summaries of the Canonical cases are used as 22 12 21 28 introductions to the puzzles, which aren't in themselves Sherlockian (but that doesn't mean that they aren't challenging). And I will publish the solution next month.
142. A new catalog from Art & Artifact, 2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087-8021 (800-950-9540) offers a Sherlockian chess set ($450.00) with board ($185.00); this is the same address used previously by What on Earth.
143. Randy Cox is now editing the venerable Dime Novel Round-Up, a monthly magazine for collectors of the old-time dime and nickel novels, which sometimes had Sherlockian connections: the Feb. 1995 issue (for example) has a cover photograph of one of the old Flashlight Detective Series covers with a fine portrait of Sherlock Holmes. Robert H. Smeltzer's brief article about the Sherlock Holmes stories is in the Nov. 1944 issue, J. Edward Leithead discussed the influence of Holmes on the Nick Carter stories in the June 1968 issue, and there are minor Sherlockian allusions in the Sept. 1950 and Dec. 1981 issues. Fanatic collectors will welcome the news that back issues are available (although some are in short supply), at $3.00 each postpaid (or $7.50 postpaid for all five issues); the address for the magazine is Box 226, Dundas, MN 55019-0226.
144. Michael Ross reports that SCORN, edited by Matthew Parris (London: Hamish Hamilton, 1994), is a collection of unfriendly comments by famous people on other famous people or places, including a quote from the Canon on London: "that great cesspool into which all the loungers and idlers of the Empire are irresistibly drained."
145. More Star Trek: The Next Generation stuff: Joe Coppola spotted a new bookmark showing Data in Sherlockian costume, with the quote "It is deduction, pure and simple ... well, perhaps not *that* simple." Design KBO-10901 from the Antioch Publishing Co., Yellow Springs, OH 45387.
146. The Ben Silver Collection (800-221-4671) continues to use a small Sherlockian silhouette to identify regimental or school neckties "associated with the great detective Sherlock Holmes" in its spring 1995 catalog (but there are no explanations of the associations, as there were in the autumn 1994 catalog); the company's address is 149 King Street, Charleston, SC 29401.
147. Apr 95 #2: The imaginative activities of Les Quincailliers de la Franco-Midland merit some wider publicity: they have departments and branches throughout France, and in other nations, and their publications include the Ironmongers Daily Echo and Franco-Midland Branches Advertiser (in French), which recently offered details of a proposed "Hommage au Brigadier Gerard a Waterloo le 18 juin." The society's headquarters are at 26 avenue de la Republique, 75011 Paris, France.
148. The newest Sherlockian society pin is from The Denizens of the Bar of Gold, who meet on Maryland's eastern shore. The design is by Jeff Decker (his first), and the eightcolor pin is 1" wide and it costs $10.00 postpaid, from Michael F. Whelan, 342 Perry Cabin Drive, St. Michaels, MD 21663.
149. On Mar. 22, 1995, the "American Masters" series on PBS-TV broadcast a one-hour show on "Edgar Allan Poe: Terror of the Soul". And Mary Burke noted that one of the program commentators suggests that "the Sherlock Holmes stories are very much patterned after the Dupin stories." If you missed it you can wait for a repeat, or order a cassette from PBS Video, 1320 Braddock Place, Alexandria, VA 22314 (800-848-4727); $24.95 plus shipping.
150. It was at the third pillar from the left outside the Lyceum Theatre that Mary Morstan was directed to meet her unknown benefactor. And a lengthy argument over preservation of the theater now seems to have ended. Seven years ago (Sep 88 #1) the London Residuary Body (successor to the Greater London Council) sold a 150-year lease on the building to a company that planned to turn the Lyceum into a London version of the Paris Lido (a "tits and bum" cabaret, one angry opponent suggested), but nothing came of that. Now according to an article at hand from Sally Kinsey, work has begun on a true restoration project that will turn the present eyesore back into a proper 2,000-seat theater. That's what's planned by a partnership between Apollo Leisure and American theater-owner James Nederlander, and the £15 million project is targeted for completion in August 1996. Apollo chairman Paul Gregg noted that archeologists have been invited in to make sure that London's history is preserved; "they have not uncovered any corpses yet," he said, "only dead shows."
151. Michael McClure's publications list continues to expand: his newest periodical is THE BAKER STREET NEWS, launched during the birthday festivities in January with color covers and 64 pages of articles and interviews ($10.00 for two issues). Mike also publishes HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, for younger Sherlockian and anyone who has one handy ($7.50 a year for five issues), THE DEVONSHIRE CHRONICLE ($4.00 a year for four issues), and the STIMSON & COMPANY GAZETTE ($1.00 an issue); and his address is 1415 Swanwick Street, Chester, IL 62233.
152. Forecast from Fedogan & Bremer in October: THE RECOLLECTIONS OF SOLAR PONS, by Basil Copper, with three new stories and a revision of an older one, and illustrations by Stephanie Hawks. Copper's THE EXPLOITS OF SOLAR PONS (May 94 #2) is still available at $24.00; the publisher's address is 603 Washington Avenue #77, Minneapolis, MN 55414-2950, and they take plastic.
153. Apr 95 #3: FACT AND FEELING: BACONIAN SCIENCE AND THE NINETEENTH-CENTURY LITERARY IMAGINATION, by Jonathan Smith (Madison: University of Wisconsin Press, 1995; 277 pp., $52.00 cloth, $22.95 paper), is a scholarly discussion of the perceived (misperceived, in Smith's opinion) conflict between the scientific method and the arts. He finds interesting parallels (between Hutton's geological uniformitarianism and Eliot's THE MILL

- ON THE FLOSS, for example), and the book ends with a chapter on Sherlock Holmes as a scientific detective. Smith explores the influence of Huxley, Tyndall, and Darwin on Conan Doyle and Holmes, and notes Albert Einstein's tribute to "the admirable stories of Conan Doyle."
154. The film "The Pagemaster" (1994) arrived in the videoshops this month, with a brief glimpse of an animated Hound of the Baskervilles (Macauley Culkin plays a boy who winds up in an animated dream-world that includes some of the classic children's stories (Dec 94 #1).
155. Tom Biblewski now offers a silhouette of Conan Doyle on a 50-sheet notepad (and the silhouette of Holmes is still available). $2.25 postpaid per notepad, from the Baker Street Dispatch, Box 5503, Toledo, OH 43613.
156. Roger Johnson reported earlier (Feb 95 #3) that the series "Biography" filmed a dozen members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London dining at The Sherlock Holmes in London in the company of Dr. John H. Watson (impersonated by David Burke), and now Richard Wein has learned that the one-hour program "Sherlock Holmes: The Great Detective" will be broadcast on A&E cable on Monday, May 22. According to the A&E press release, the show "has an intriguing twist--it assumes that Holmes is a real person and is still alive, and it traces the publishing history of his stories as if they were still being churned out today."
157. Mike Kean noted in the Dec. 1994 issue of The Baker Street Journal Philip Weller's suggestion that there is good reason to consider that "the only surviving example of a fully-operational version of a Bruce-Partington Submarine" is His Majesty's Submarine Torpedo Boat No. 1, launched on Oct. 2, 1901, as the Royal Navy's first submarine. Renamed H.M. Holland I, it sank off Plymouth in 1913, and was recovered in 1981. And John Baesch has sent a story from the Daily Express (Mar. 27) that reports that "scientists are locked in a £250,000 battle to save her from the rust which has been gouging holes in her once-watertight hull." Restoration of the historic boat is being carried out at the Royal Naval Submarine Museum in Gosport, near Portsmouth.
158. Further to last month's report (Mar 95 #3) that Bjarne Nielsen had won the Scandinavian "Viking Lotto", it should be noted that Bjarne had more than that to celebrate, namely his 50th birthday. And the festivities included publication of DETEKTIV DROMMAR [DETECTIVE DREAMS], an extremely-limited edition of pastiches written about Bjarne by his friends in various styles; the book was edited by Anders Hammarqvist, and of course there was a Sherlockian pastiche: Nils Nordberg's THE ADVENTURE OF THE THIN MAN. A grand time was had by all, including Marina Stajic, who survived both the beer and a visit to jail. Well, to Bjarne's museum, which is in a jail.

159. Apr 95 #4: "Surf Reichenbach!!!" proclaims the cover of the just-published St. Patrick's Day 1993 issue of the Reichenbachian Cliff-Notes, published occasionally (very occasionally) by The Reichenbach Cliff-Divers. This issue's contents include "The Reader's Indigestible Condensed Canon: Fifty-Six Stories and Four Novels Available Now as Eight Brief Tales" and "The Rotherhithe Memorial Get-It-Over-With, Off-the-Deep-End-with-an-Aqualung Sherlockian Monograph Chart", and it's available in return for a #10 SASE from Robert C. Burr, 4010 North Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614-7109.
160. Plan ahead: the next Canonical Convocation and Caper in Door County, Wis., is scheduled for Sept. 15-17, 1995, with talks by Bob Hahn, David Hammer, and Tony Citra, and "surprises" (according to Don Izban); contact Claudine Kastner, 810 Burning Bush Lane, Mount Prospect, IL 60056.
161. "I'd wanted to write about a detective, a Sherlock Holmes or Maigret, to keep me alive in my old age," John Mortimer recalls in the latest installment of his memoirs. "Then I thought of making him a criminal defender, in honour of the Old Bailey hacks I'd known and admired." The book is MURDERERS AND OTHER FRIENDS (New York: Viking, 1995; 260 pp., $23.95), and it's nicely done indeed, with a few other passing Canonical allusions. Mortimer was on tour in the United States last month, lecturing in Washington and Boston and elsewhere, and in fine fettle.
162. Lawrence Nepodahl reports that Court Benson died on Feb. 5. He was a fine actor, and had a long career on radio and television, and played Watson on many of the CBS Radio Mystery Theater dramatizations of the Sherlock Holmes stories from 1977 to 1981.
163. The tradition of home-movie drama survives in the age of video, and perhaps the genre is easier to produce now: "Quintet" is an 86-minute videocassette made in 1993 and available from Quartz Productions, 392 Taylor, Ashland, OR 97520 ($20.00 postpaid); there are five "neo-classic screenplays by living playwrights," including "Watson's Only Case" (26 minutes), a farce written by Robert Spira, with Leland Tanquarary as Holmes and Jon Bernard as Watson.
164. The fourth Sherlock Holmes Review Symposium will be held on Nov. 18-19 in Indianapolis (in the Omni Severn Hotel, a restored classic built in 1913, across the street from the railroad station where Conan Doyle arrived in 1894); contact the SHR, Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077.
165. John Ruyle is celebrating the 25th anniversary of The Pequod Press the same way it began, issuing a book of his poems (his first "serious" collection since 1986); SPLINTERED PARTS will offer about two dozen poems, including full-page tributes to "two men who helped the Press survive" (Holmes and Moriarty). $40.00 cloth, $20.00 paper; 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
166. Jeanne Munson recommends a new CD-ROM game called "Hodj'n'Podj" produced by Boffo Games and marketed by Virgin Interactive Entertainment (800-874-4607) -- it's engineered for MS-DOS computers, and costs $49.99 plus $4.00 shipping, and contains 19 mini-games such as poker, mazes, and battleship (but with a new spin on each game); the games have occasional Sherlockian allusions (perhaps thanks to Jeanne, who gets credit in the testing section).
167. Apr 95 #5: Further to the earlier report on the film-preservation efforts of the UCLA Film and Television Archive, their annual Festival of Preservation featured some of the results: on Apr. 20 the archive showed a new 35mm print of "Paramount on Parade" (1930), in which Sherlock Holmes is shot to death by Fu Manchu (and Clive Brook has a splendid death scene). On Apr. 23 they screened new 35mm prints of Basil Rathbone's "The Pearl of Death" (1944) and "The Woman in Green" (1945). Donations, large or small, are of course welcomed; the development officer is Cornelia Emerson, UCLA Film and Television Archive (FX48), 302 East Melnitz, 405 Hilgard Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90024-1323.
168. Bob Fritsch uses an imaginative Sherlockian wooden shilling as his calling card, and he'll be happy to send you one in return for 50c and an SASE. Or you can get three of them for $1.00 and a #10 SASE with 55c postage. Bob's address is Box 3003, Nashua, NH 03061-3003.
169. Fifteen years ago John le Carre was asked about "writers who mean the most to you," and replied, "P. G. Wodehouse for rhythm and timing. Conan Doyle for thrust and instant atmosphere." And le Carre has included Sherlockian allusions in his books, most recently in his new novel OUR GAME (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1995; 302 pp., $24.00); it's a splendid book about secret service agents involved with and in the current conflict in southern Russia (and with some real insight into the reasons for that conflict).
170. Dave Thomas (one of the stars on ABC-TV's "Grace Under Fire") is reported to be writing a comedy special for Showtime cable about "the final adventure of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson." Thomas and fellow "SCTV" alumnus Joe Flaherty expect to start shooting the show in May.
171. The spring 1995 issue of the Sherlock Holmes Gazette has fine cover art by Tom Rieschick and 48 pages of interesting articles and news, including a report from Philip Weller on the closing of the Conan Doyle Room at The Cross Hotel in Crowborough; the new landlord of the hotel was not able to continue to provide space for the collection, which had been assembled by Malcolm Payne and his society The Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment. The collection is now in storage, until Malcolm finds a new display site. 46 Purfield Drive, Wargrave, Berks. RG10 8AR, England; or Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.

172. And a welcome addendum: Tim O'Connor has received a report from Malcolm Payne that Andrew de Candole, the owner of Groombridge Place, has kindly offered the Victorian dairy and cheese room of the old manor as a new home for the collection, which may be open again by Easter.
173. One of the nicest things about the Internet is how easy it is to send and receive news and information, as was the case immediately after the earthquake in Kobe. And that generated a Sherlockian item in a long story about the growth of computerized communication in Japan, in Time (Mar. 6), kindly forwarded by Dick Lesh: "Shortly after the Kobe quake, Tomoji Ohta, a college student whose parents' home had collapsed, approached Time reporters on the rubble-strewn streets with an urgent request: 'Please get on the Internet and notify the Baker Street Irregulars that all our members in Kobe are all right.' Sherlock Holmes fans around the world were reassured."
174. Apr 95 #6: THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES, issued as a nine-volume set in 1993 (Dec 93 #8) offered delightful scholarship in its introductions and many explanatory notes by Owen Dudley Edwards, Richard Lancelyn Green, Christopher Roden, and W. W. Robson, and a new edition is now available in The World's Classics series of paperbacks (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1994; £3.99 or $5.95 per volume). The new edition has color covers showing Frederic Dorr Steele artwork, and it really is a new edition (rather than a new printing), because some errors and omissions have been corrected.
175. Reported: a two-in-one paperback (Donald I. Fine, $13.95) with reprints of John T. Lescroart's SON OF HOLMES (Mar 86 #2) and RASPUTIN'S REVENGE (May 87 #3). The detective is bon vivant Auguste Lupa, son of Sherlock Holmes and an opera star, who makes his detecting debut in France in 1915 in the first book, and in the second winds up in St. Petersburg in 1916, using a passport in the name of John Hamish Adler Holmes, accused of espionage, and rescued by his father.
176. THE GAME IS AFOOT, a splendid anthology of pastiches, parodies, and scholarship edited by Marvin Kaye, was published last year in cloth (Apr 94 #4) and is now available as a trade paperback (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1995; 512 pp., $13.95). Recommended.
177. Reported by B. J. Rahn: June Thomson's biographical HOLMES AND WATSON, new from Constable in London (this is her fourth Sherlockian book, following her three collections of pastiches).
178. Plan ahead: the seventh International Holmesian Games will be held on Sept. 16-17 in Vancouver, B.C. Details on the "Sherlympiad" are available from Fran Martin, 10662-129 Street, Surrey, BC V3T 3H4, Canada.
179. Roger Johnson reports in the latest issue of The District Messenger that Michael Coren's THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE is due in November from Bloomsbury Publishing (£20.00), and that Ian Henry (20 Park Drive, Romford RM1 4LH, England) have published Ernest Dudley's revised acting edition of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (£5.95), and that Malcolm Payne has reported that THE HISTORY OF THE CROWBOROUGH BEACON GOLF CLUB (with much about Conan Doyle) is available from the Club (Beacon Road, Crowborough, East Sussex, England) (£11.00 postpaid).
180. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will convene on Tuesday, Nov. 7, at Ralph and Kacoo's in New Orleans, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. Geologists and Sherlockians are welcome to join in honoring the world's first forensic geologist; Ralph and Kacoo's is at 519 Toulouse Street, and the festivities will begin with cocktails at 7:00 and continue with dinner at 8:00; reservations are not needed. New Orleans may well be the largest city in the U.S. without an active Sherlockian society; if anyone knows of any Sherlockians down there in the bayous, please let me know their names and addresses.
181. Scott Monty spotted Rathbone as Holmes on the cover of the 1995 Antibodies Catalogue from Transduction Laboratories (2134 Nicholasville Road #18, Lexington, KY 40503-9888), and Canonical quotations scattered through it pages (their motto is "Investigation Made Elementary").

182. Apr 95 #7: ESTUDIOS DEL NATURAL: LOS CASOS QUE SHERLOCK HOLMES NO PUDO RESOLVER Barcelona: Grijalbo Mondadori, 1995; 142 pp., 1,200 pesetas) is a Spanish translation of STRANGE STUDIES FROM LIFE AND OTHER NARRATIVES: THE COMPLETE TRUE CRIME WRITINGS OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Jack Tracy and published by Gaslight in 1988 (Dec 88 #5). The publisher's address is: Arago 385, Barcelona, Spain.
183. Dick Lesh reports that a cassette with Buster Keaton's film "Sherlock Jr." (1924), recently issued by Kino Video (Jan 95 #4), is available from Barnes & Noble (126 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011); item D120162 ($29.95). And that Archie McPhee: Outfitters of Popular Culture (Box 38052, Seattle, WA 98103) offers the colorful 7x8" inner lid label for Sherlock Holmes cigars for $16.95 postpaid.
184. Burl Ives died on April 14. Carl Sandburg dubbed Ives "America's mightiest ballad singer" in the 1940s, and his unique voice and stage presence made him (and the folk songs he sang) world-famous. He also was an actor, and won an Oscar as best supporting actor in 1959 (in "The Big Country"). And he was one of many singers who recorded songs from the 1964 musical "Baker Street" (his LP album "Burl's Broadway" was issued by Decca in 1969 with "A Married Man").
185. "St. Bartholomew's Hospital, founded for the sick and poor of London nearly 900 years ago, had developed a formidable instinct for survival", The Times noted on Apr. 6, but British Health Secretary Virginia Bottomley "has succeeded where Henry VIII, the Great Fire of London, the Blitz, and Margaret Thatcher all failed." The long campaign to keep the hospital open (Apr 93 #4) seems to have failed, and the government now proposes to move most the facilities to Whitechapel (St. Bart's accident and emergency unit closed in January). One hopes that The Sherlock Holmes Society of London is planning to rescue Sherlock Holmes' laboratory chair and the plaque that honors the first meeting between Holmes and Watson.
186. Douglas G. Greene's JOHN DICKSON CARR: THE MAN WHO EXPLAINED MIRACLES (New York: Otto Penzler/Simon & Schuster, 1995; 537 pp., $35.00) is a delightful biography of a splendid writer. "The Man Who Explained Miracles" was the title chosen by Fred Dannay for one of Carr's short stories, but it's also an apt description of the master of the "impossible mystery" genre. Carr is possibly most familiar to Sherlockians for his excellent biography of Conan Doyle, and his work with Adrian Conan Doyle on some of the pastiches that were published as THE EXPLOITS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, but he also wrote radio adaptations of "The Lost World" and "The Speckled Band" for the BBC, and two amusing Sherlockian parody-playlets performed at the annual dinners of the Mystery Writers of America. He succeeded in creating four successful series detectives, and Greene has done a fine job of describing the man who could perform that sort of miracle.
187. The spring 1995 issue of Scarlet Street offers David Stuart Davies' interesting interview with Michael Cox, who tells some fine stories about the Granada series (such as: the studio wanted a well-known name in the title role, and having recently produced "Brideshead Revisited" suggested Jeremy Irons and Anthony Andrews, but Cox insisted on Jeremy Brett). The magazine costs $20.00 a year for four issues; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.

188. Apr 95 #8: "Sherlock Holmes on American Radio" is a new audiocassette prepared by Lawrence Nepodahl, with one hour of comments on and excerpts from the many radio series about the Great Detective. The sound quality is high, and the cassette offers an excellent tour of the American series, and (at the end) Gordon E. Kelley's fine tribute to Basil Rathbone. 1230 Vienna Boulevard, Dekalb, IL 60115; $20.00 postpaid.
189. A new audio dramatization of William Hjortsberg's NEVERMORE from Radio Theater, 150 Martinvale Lane, San Jose, CA 95119 (800-959-7107) offers three hours on two cassettes ($14.95). The novel (Oct 94 #5) brought Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini to New York in 1923, involving them

- with Opal Crosby Fletcher (a provocative and beautiful medium) and with a mysterious serial killer (who copies murders described in Edgar Allan Poe's stories, and whose targets include Conan Doyle and Houdini), and the dramatization is nicely done.
190. It hasn't taken long for Laurie R. King's THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE to be translated: BIAVLERENS LAERLING (Arhus: Klim, 1994) is the Danish version.
191. Forecast: ESCAPEDE, by Walter Satterthwait, from St. Martin's Press in July ($22.95); "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini join forces to solve the murder of their host, killed in a locked room during a seance at his country manor house." And: THE SIX MESSIAHS, by Mark Frost, from William Morrow in July ($23.00); "Arthur Conan Doyle embarks on his first tour of the United States, where six strangers await him--convinced it is Doyle who can lead them to the source of their vision."
192. Reported: Anthony Boucher's delightful mystery novel THE CASE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS (1940) has been reprinted, with an introduction by Otto Penzler, from Carroll & Graf ($4.95).
193. One of the nicest things about being a publisher is that it is not difficult to get one's writings into print. And it is particularly nice for readers when the publisher is a fine writer, as is David L. Hammer, whose new collection THE BEFORE-BREAKFAST PIPE OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES offers a fine assortment of his essays and articles, old and new. 206 pp., $19.50 postpaid, from the Gasogene Press, Box 1041, Dubuque, IA 52001-1041.
194. HAVE A LITTLE PATIENCE: THE SINGULAR ADVENTURES OF AN INDEPENDENT GIRL is Mary L. Jaffee's amusing poetic tribute to Patience Moran, with excellent illustrations by Debra McWilliams, in a 24-page pamphlet published by Vincent Brosnan (1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056); $10.00 postpaid. And his new "Sherlock in L.A." catalogue 11, available from Vinnie on request, offers 782 items of Sherlockiana and Doyleana, and as added value, essays on Edgar W. Smith by Marilyn Ezzell, and on Michael Harrison by Tina Rhea.
195. Audio-taper alert: BBC Radio 4 sent four people to Lidingo for two days to interview Ted Bergman and four of his friends about Swedish girls, Swedish royalty, Swedish sin, and Swedish interest in Sherlock Holmes, for a program in the "Ad Lib" series to be presented by Robert Robinson on June 17.
196. May 95 #1: "Dracula on the Rocks" is a short story by Carole Nelson Douglas scheduled for CELEBRITY VAMPIRES, a horror anthology due from DAW Books in October at $4.99. Irene Adler "has more suitors than the Crown Prince of Bohemia when she plays prima donna at the Warsaw Imperial Opera. Could Count Dracula be lurking behind the arras and the arias?"
197. 20 26 23 2 "Any Englishman who claims high intelligence," said Sherlock Holmes, should be able to identify which of these numbers is 29 3 13 24 the odd one out, within about ten minutes." For those who came in late, that's the puzzle I published last month, from THE
27 25 17 10 SHERLOCK HOLMES IQ BOOK. The answer is 17. Because the names of all the other numbers begin with a T when written in English. The 22 12 21 28 book suggests that anyone in the top 1% of the population, with an IQ of at least 155, should have been able to solve the problem in ten minutes.
198. There are Hebrew translations of Frank Thomas' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MASQUERADE MURDERS, SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SACRED SWORD, and SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GOLDEN BIRD (possibly the first book-length pastiches to appear in Hebrew), and they are offered by the publisher ("Schalgi" Ltd., 23 Levanda Street, 66020 Tel-Aviv, Israel) at $20.00 each postpaid. And Frank reports that the last two titles are due soon in Russian. And Laurie R. King's THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE will be published in a Dutch edition (as DE LEERLING VAN DE BIJENHOUDER) from Het Spectrum in August.
199. Don Hobbs has found an old and artistic Sherlockian bookplate. I remember seeing the design before, but can't recall where, or when, or whose design it was (the name of Robert F. Larson, Jr., is typed rather than printed). Please let me know if you recognize this and can supply more information about artist or purveyor (the dancing men spell "in libris").
200. The 24-page manuscript for Conan Doyle's article on "Life on a Greenland Whaler" (which was published in The Strand Magazine in Jan. 1897, and in McClure's Magazine in Mar. 1897) went to auction at Christie's in New York on Apr. 25, and was sold for $9,200 (including the 15% buyer's premium).
201. The Apr. 1995 issue of Nutshell News has a fine article by Lisa Sullivan on "The Game Is Afoot" (with some excellent color photographs of her miniature of the sitting-room); Box 1612, Waukesha, WI 53187-1612; $3.95.
202. Ginger Rogers died on Apr. 25. Her acting career spanned 65 years, from vaudeville to television, and although she will always be remembered best for her dancing with Fred Astaire, it was as a dramatic actress that she won an Academy Award, as Kitty Foyle in the 1940 film based on Christopher Morley's novel. Her life-long artistic achievement was recognized at the 15th annual Kennedy Center Honors in 1992, when Walter Cronkite confessed that "I wasn't that excited about Fred Astaire or the dancing. But--boy--her performance in 'Kitty Foyle' just knocked me out."
203. May 95 #2: Ed Wallner spotted a new article about the Andaman Islands in the May issue of Scientific American: Madhusree Mukerjee notes that the Great Andamanese have been reduced to a mixed-race group of 37 surviving on South Andaman Island, where the prison once was. The Jawara, also living on the island, still number about 200; the authorities don't know exactly how many, because the tribe still greets visitors with wellaimed arrows.
204. After the British burned the Capitol, and the Library of Congress, during the War of 1812, there was considerable debate about whether Congress would buy Thomas Jefferson's library to replace the lost books. And, according to Librarian of Congress James H. Billington, some members of Congress complained that too much of Jefferson's library "is in languages many cannot read and most ought not to." Billington also reports, in the May/June 1995 issue of Civilization, that the Library now has more than 108 million items in 460 languages. That leaves quite a few languages to be pursued by Sherlockian collectors (Ron De Waal lists 63 foreign languages in THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES). But of course the Canon has not been translated into all those other languages. Yet.
205. In 1972 Nicaragua commemorated the 50th anniversary of Interpol with a set of stamps showing the twelve most famous detectives, with tributes to them printed on the backs of the stamps, and with Sherlock Holmes appearing (of course) on the highest value of the set. I have a small supply of mint copies of the Holmes stamp, which I am offering for $15.00 each postpaid, one to a customer; checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please. And yes, the stamps do say that Interpol's 50th anniversary was in 1973, but Nicaragua obviously wanted to be the first to honor the anniversary. In 1973, at the annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars, a Sherlock Holmes silver medal was awarded (in absentia) to the Hon. Rafael Sevilla-Sacasa, director of the Philatelic Bureau of the Republic of Nicaragua, for his help in arranging for the world's first official Sherlock Holmes stamp.
206. The second issue of Baker Street West 1 has arrived. This "Sherlockian Journal from the Western U.S.A." continues to focus on activities west of the Mississippi, and its highlights include an amusing cover designed by Chuck Kovacic. $3.00 postpaid, from Jerry Kegley, 110 South El Nido #41, Pasadena, CA 91107.
207. Telephone calling cards are a fairly new collectible (some people actually use them to make telephone calls, but the cards are energetically marketed to collectors), and the first sort-of-Sherlockian card has been spotted by Gordon Palmer: TEC Card (800-333-8735) offers a series of Star Trek cards, one of which shows Data in Sherlockian costume. The S'ian card is one of a set of four that costs $40.00, and each of the four cards gives you $5.00 of long-distance calling (at $1.00 a minute) and $5.00 of access to a "Star Trek" entertainment line.

208. The six Sherlockian daily "Fox Trot" comic strips that ran in various newspapers on Mar. 8-13, 1993, were reprinted in Bill Amend's MAY THE FORCE BE WITH US, PLEASE (Kansas City: Andrews and McMeel, 1994; 128 pp., $8.95).
209. May 95 #3: Our new commemorative honors the late President Richard Nixon, whose first known contact with the world of Sherlockians was the telegram of greetings he sent to the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars in 1956, and which was noted with disdain by Rex Stout in The Baker Street Journal in June 1961. The investigation of Watergate launched a flood of Sherlockian allusions in editorials and in editorial cartoons, but Nixon did not know about Sherlock Holmes: Julie Baumgold wrote in New York (June 9, 1980) that he told her, "I don't care for novels, and mysteries bore me except on TV, and since Holmes is off, what is there?" Nixon also found an appropriate context for a reference to "Sherlock Holmes's dog that did not bark" in his book 1999: VICTORY WITHOUT WAR (1988); see page 76.
210. ESTUDIOS DEL NATURAL: LOS CASOS QUE SHERLOCK HOLMES NO PUDO RESOLVER, the Spanish translation of Jack Tracy's 1988 edition of STRANGE STUDIES FROM LIFE AND OTHER NARRATIVES: THE COMPLETE TRUE CRIME WRITINGS OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Apr 95 #7) also is available from Gaslight Publications, 3888 West Sahara Avenue #221-B, Las Vegas, NV 89102; $17.00 postpaid (creditcard orders welcome).
211. Mel Hughes spotted David Lilley's obituary for Douglas Bartlett Gregor in the Apr. 24 issue of The Independent [London]: Gregor was a classicist by training and profession, and was fluent in more than 20 languages and read many others. "He wrote about Byron's knowledge of Armenian, discussed the texts of Greek tragedies, and translated two Sherlock Holmes stories into Dolomitic Latin and its sister languages Friulan and Romontsch."
212. Andy Fusco reports that LEXIS-NEXIS (Box 933, Dayton, OH 45401) has some amusing Sherlockian artwork on its new flier ("The Case of the Bogus Business") promoting the use of LEXIS data bases ("Suppose you need to track the business operations of Moriarity Enterprises, operated by your nemesis, Professor James Moriarity, against whom you are attempting to recover damages in your fraud case"). And there are other S'ian allusions in the text.
213. Edwin Blum died on May 2. He was a playwright and a screenwriter, working with Ernest Pascal and Billy Wilder and others; he shared screenplay credit for Basil Rathbone's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939), and forty years later his script for "The Ghost of Sherlock Holmes" was considered by ABC-TV for a project starring Christopher Lee.
214. A new flier at hand for Bouchercon 26, at the Royal Centre in Nottingham, Sept. 28 through Oct. 1, 1995. The organizers are still anonymous, but the guests of honour are James Elroy and Colin Dexter, and Reginald Hill will be the toastmaster at the awards dinner. Additional information is available from Conference Nottingham, The Business Information Centre, 309 Haydn Road, Nottingham NG5 1DG, England.
215. "Sherlock Sholem: Israeli detective in relentless pursuit of his nemesis, Professor Yom Tirra." That was one of the examples that Mary Ann Madden offered in a competition in New York magazine (May 8), in which competitors were invited "to sully by anagram one familiar name of fact or fiction and provide for it a brief description similarly altered by a one-word jumble."
216. May 95 #4: Donald Girard Jewell has announced the sixth volume in his continuing Sherlock Holmes Natural History Series: THE BOTANICAL HOLMES: A MONOGRAPH ON PLANTS IN THE TIME OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is illustrated with contemporary artwork and is twice as long as previous volumes, and the booklet costs $16.95 postpaid (signed and hand-tinted copies are priced at $24.95 postpaid). You can order from the Pinchin Lane Press, 4685 Geeting Road, Westminster, MD 21158.
217. Video-taper alert: watch for a re-run on "Star Trek: Voyager" (syndicated on Mondays). Gilles Coughlan reports that "Ex Post Facto" (Feb. 27, 1995) had Lt. Tom Paris convicted of murder and sentenced to relive the victim's final moments over and over again, but is cleared of the crime when Tuvok applies some logic straight from the Sherlock Holmes stories.
218. "You have a few sheep in the paddock," said Sherlock Holmes (in "Silver Blaze"). Our new stamped envelope shows a sheep (the envelope is for non-profit organizations, and is undenominated, because many non-profits don't want you to know that they pay only five cents when they mail you requests for donations).
219. News for fans of Jeremy Brett: the British film "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" (also starring Elizabeth Hurley and Joss Ackland) will be released in June in Britain. And "Mystery!" will broadcast the six new (well, new to American television) Granada shows this fall; for those who have forgotten, the shows aired in Britain in March and April 1994 ("The Three Gables", "The Dying Detective", "The Golden Pince-Nez", "The Red Circle", "The Mazarin Stone", and "The Cardboard Box").
220. Rush Limbaugh can be seen in Sherlockian costume on the cover of the May issue of The Limbaugh Letter (Box 420058, Palm Coast, FL 32142-0058) (800-829-5386); $3.00.
221. Debbie Clark reports that the Malice Domestic convention in Bethesda, Md., was enjoyable and well-attended, and the Sherlockian news is that Laurie R. King's next novel about Mary Russell (and Sherlock Holmes) is A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN, due from St. Martin's Press in August.
222. "It is always 1895" was the theme of the irregular quinquennial Sherlockian dinner at the Culinary Institute of America on May 13, and the event was as usual delightful. And the weather, and the scenery in and around Hyde Park for those who arrived early or stayed late for a bit of sight-seeing in upstate New York. There was wine and hors d'oeuvres at the CIA's new Conrad Hilton library, and a video presentation in the new Danny Kaye media center of Jennie Paton's rapid-fire and amusing survey of Canonical dining as portrayed on film and television, and then dinner in the Great Hall with five buffet stations honoring the five cases dated in 1895, and toasts to those cases, and a handsome illustrated souvenir menu based on careful research by Al and Julie Rosenblatt, who shared credit with Fritz Sonnenschmidt for a memorable celebration. And on the next day the Rhinebeck Volunteer Fire Department welcomed visitors to The Great Jonas Oldacre Firehouse Smoke-Out Breakfast. And now back to dieting, preparing for the next gathering . . .
223. May 95 #5: There's occasional Sherlockian artwork by R. Michael Palan in Greg Hunter's NATE THE GREAT LITERATURE NOTES (for students and teachers using the NATE THE GREAT series by Marjorie Weinman Sharmat); item FS-2725 in a catalog from Frank Schaffer Publications (Box 2853, Torrance, CA 90509) (800-421-5565); $2.49 (minimum order $15.00, but there's lots of other things in their catalog).
224. J.B. Fine Arts (420 Central Avenue, Cedarhurst, NY 11516) (800-522-7871) is selling a 37 x 36" multicolored lithograph of Robin Morris' "Sherlock" for $750.00, and they will be happy to send you a fullcolor card showing you how handsome it is. There's a discount if you mention "Scuttlebutt".
225. An old comic book, newly noted for modern collectors: THE THREE STOOGES #28 (May 1966) shows Moe Howard on the cover, with deerstalker and calabash.
226. Tom Kowols notes in the Apr. 1995 issue of The Police Gazette that Geoffrey A. Landis' Sherlockian pastiche "The Singular Habits of Wasps" (in the Apr. 1994 issue of Analog Science Fiction and Fact) was nominated for a Nebula Award (for best novelette) by the Science Fiction Writers of America.
227. "I kind of believe what Sherlock Holmes said to Watson," said Michael Tigar (defense lawyer for Oklahoma bombing-suspect Terry L. Nichols), quoted in a report in the N.Y. Times on May 19. "It's like a stick on the ground. It does point in one direction till you turn it around and look at it from the other side and it points just as equally in the other direction." Well now -- what did Holmes really say? Warning: answer on next page.

228. Sotheby's reports that Stanley MacKenzie's collection of Sherlockiana will be auctioned on July 24. The catalog isn't ready yet, but their address is 34-35 New Bond Street, London, W1A 2AA, England.
229. The June-July issue of British Heritage has a fine article by Steven Eramo about Edward Hardwicke, covering much more than his work as Watson on stage and television; Box 1066, Mount Morris, IL 61054-9946 ($4.95).
230. The 1995 running of The Silver Blaze at Belmont Park (in New York) will be held on Sept. 9. Additional information is available from Stephen L. Stix, 1150 NC 50 & US 117, Faison, NC 28341.
231. Eric Porter died on May 15. He was a splendid actor, and his portrayal of Soames Forsyte brought him widespread notice in the United States when "The Forsyte Saga" aired on public television. And he was an inspired choice for the role of Prof. Moriarty in the Granada series.
232. It should be noted, by the way, that the success of "The Forsyte Saga" was the key to bringing British drama to American television; the next step was when WGBH-TV (Boston) networked "The First Churchills" as the first series broadcast on "Masterpiece Theatre". "The Forsyte Saga" also featured Nyree Dawn Porter as Soames' wife Irene, and offered many American viewers their first chance to hear "Irene" pronounced as a three-syllable name.
233. May 95 #6: The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will hold its annual meeting from 4:00 to 5:30 pm on June 25 at the Harold Washington Library Center in Chicago; there will be reception, and a presentation by Ely M. Liebow, and the cost is $15.00, and the deadline for reservations is June 17. You can send your checks to Marsha L. Pollak, Sunnyvale Public Library, Box 3714, Sunnyvale, CA 94088-3714. And you needn't be a librarian to enjoy the meeting.
234. Jeff Decker (who aptly describes himself as "an artist known for his blend of pawky humor and visual storytelling") welcomes enquiries about original artwork for Sherlockian stationery, greeting cards, and illustrations; R.D. 3, Box 7631, Jonestown, PA 17038.
235. Members of The Hounds of the Internet have offered quotations as sources for what Michael Tigar said Holmes said. Ben Fairbank gets credit for "The Boscombe Valley Mystery" ("Circumstantial evidence ... may seem to point very straight to one thing, but if you shift your own point of view a little, you may find it pointing in an equally uncompromising manner to something entirely different"). And Tom Crammond gets credit for "The Norwood Builder" ("After all, important fresh evidence is a two-edged thing, and may possibly cut in very different direction to that which Lestrade imagines"). It's difficult to figure out how Tigar got from either one of those quotes to his quote; perhaps he was recalling something from a pastiche or a movie or a television show.
236. "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held on Oct. 28-29 at the Tarrytown Hilton in Tarrytown, N.Y. This annual gathering is always well-attended, and the agenda interesting, and additional information is available from Robert E. Thomalen, 69 Glen Road, Eastchester, NY 10709.
237. If your cable system has the Sci-Fi Channel, watch for "Spectre" on June 3 and June 4 on "Pilot Playhouse". "Spectre" was a two-hour television film made from a story by Gene Roddenberry, produced by Norway Productions for Twentieth Century-Fox Television, and broadcast by NBC-TV on May 21, 1977, starring Robert Culp as William Sebastian and Gig Young as Dr. Hamilton. According to reasonably informed sources, Roddenberry wrote the screenplay several years after the original "Star Trek" series went off the air, and involved Holmes and Watson in a story that was dated after Holmes' retirement, and planned as a pilot for a series starring Leonard Nimoy as Holmes. But Nimoy didn't want to do the series, and Roddenberry wasn't able to get permission to use Holmes and Watson as characters, so he just changed the names to Sebastian and Hamilton and turned the project into a non-Sherlockian film.
238. The just-published issue #9 of Murder & Mayhem: The Mystery Reader's Guide has a long and well-illustrated article "Of Matters Sherlockian" by editors Fiske and Elly-Ann Miles, and an interesting interview with Dame Jean Conan Doyle by John C. Tibbetts. Box 415024, Kansas City, MO 64141; $2.95.
239. Jun 95 #1: Faithful viewers of the O. J. Simpson trial will recall the battle between defense attorney Barry Scheck and Los Angeles Police Department criminalists Dennis Fung and Andrea Mazzola, and Scheck brandishing what he called the "fundamental textbook" used by the LAPD. The book was CRIMINALISTICS: AN INTRODUCTION TO FORENSIC SCIENCE, and its author, Richard Saferstein was interviewed by David Ellis for People magazine (May 15); I don't know about the current edition, but in the second edition (1981) the introductory section on the history and development of forensic science features a tribute to Conan Doyle and Holmes. Saferstein expects a hung jury.
240. Reported from Britain: THE SHERLOCK HOLMES ENCYCLOPEDIA, by Matthew Bunson (Pavilion, £19.99); the British edition of his ENCYCLOPEDIA SHERLOCKIANA (Jan 95 #4); and NEVERMORE, by William Hjortsberg (Orion, £9.99); the British edition of his Houdini/Conan Doyle pastiche (Oct 94 #5).
241. "You don't happen to have a Raphael or a first folio Shakespeare without knowing it?" Sherlock Holmes wondered (in "The Three Gables"). A cherub (suggested by some a guardian death angel) from Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" was seen earlier this year on an undenominated "Love" stamps (Feb 95 #3); now there are two of them.
242. "Sherlock Holmes: The Great Detective" (on "Biography" on A&E cable on May 22) was nicely done and well produced for its target general audience. And those who don't get A&E, or who forgot to watch or tape the program and who don't know anyone who did tape it, will be glad to know that it's available on videocassette at $23.90 postpaid; you can call 800-423-1212. "Jack the Ripper: Phantom of Death" (on "Biography" on May 23) had passing mentions of Holmes and Conan Doyle.
243. Bob Burr offers a revised version of the one-page "Some Basic Questions for the Beginning Student of the Canon" (some of the questions might be considered multiple-choice, if Bob gave any choices). Send him a #10 SASE (4010 North Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614).
244. Alas: newly-increased charges by the Postal Service have triggered a rise in the price of this newsletter, which now is $9.00 a year for six or more pages a month of whatever gossip I find appropriate. A box of 500 stamped envelopes with printed return address now costs $184.60 postpaid ($181.60 postpaid if you're satisfied with the Liberty Bell indicia); that's still a bargain, as far as I'm concerned, and the toll-free number is 800-782-6724.
245. And (alas, again) the postal rates for international mail will increase on July 9. The new newsletter price for Canada will be US$11.50 a year, and the new price for other countries will be US$17.50 a year.
246. James R. Webb's three-page article "Sherlock Holmes on Consulting" offers readers of the Journal of Management Consulting (spring 1995) a look at how Sherlock Holmes anticipated the modern management consultant. The address is: 858 Longview Road, Burlingame, CA 94010; $20.00 postpaid.
247. Jun 95 #2: "I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns," said Jack Stapleton (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). There still are bitterns to be found in the United States, at least: Bob Robinson has noted a fine cover story in Smithsonian (May 1995) about the American bittern and the least bittern.

248. Barbara Holmes will be glad to accept commissions for original Sherlockian artwork, and to discuss your ideas. She works in acrylics, and prices range from $38.00 (11 x 14") to $55.00 (20 x 24"); this greatly reduced reproduction of her color portrait of Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwick shows what she can do; her address is Box 446, Scottsville, VA 24590.
249. Oxford University Press began to discount the boxed hard-cover nine-volume edition of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES when the new edition in paper covers was ready (the new edition was edited to correct some of the errors). Last year (Oct 94 #6) the hardcover edition cost $49.50 (plus $5.00 for shipping) from the press (800-230-3242), and Dick Lesh now reports that it's still available from Daedalus Books for $50.00 (plus $4.50 shipping); Box 9132, Hyattsville, MD 20781 (800-395-2665).
250. I don't know if any Sherlockians investigating the Tankerville Club Scandal (mentioned in the "The Five Orange Pips") have ever discussed the case with the Earl of Tankerville, but there is one: the earldom was created in 1714, and the 10th Earl, Peter Grey Bennet, was born in 1956 and succeeded to the title in 1980. And a recent auction at the Swann Galleries in New York included a signed autograph postal card from Conan Doyle to Lady Tankerville, responding to an inquiry and complimenting her on her knowledge of psychic matters.
251. Laurel Kristick reports (from the PBS home page on the World Wide Web) that "Mystery!" will repeat Granada's "The Last Vampyre" on Aug. 10 (two hours) and "The Eligible Bachelor" on Aug. 17 (ditto).
252. The Ellery Queen Award, established by the Mystery Writers of America in 1982, recognizes achievement in the fields in which Ellery Queen (Frederic Dannay and Manfred B. Lee) excelled: anthologies, team writing, and editing. This year the award went to Martin H. Greenberg, of whom Francis M. Nevins, Jr., suggested that "his name seems to be on the dust jacket of every anthology or collection of entertainment fiction published in the last twenty years." Not quite, but Marty Greenberg has edited or co-edited 524 books, including THE BEST SCIENCE FICTION OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1981), THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1987), THE BEST HORROR STORIES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1989), SHERLOCK HOLMES IN ORBIT (1995), and many others that have included one or more Sherlockian or Doylean stories.

253. Jun 95 #3: This isn't a quiz, but: later this year the postal service will honor the 100th anniversary of comic strips by issuing a sheet of 20 stamps showing classic characters (all of them are at least 50 years old), and the honorees will be: the Yellow Kid, Little Nemo in Slumberland, Krazy Kat, Rube Goldberg's Inventions, the Toonerville Folks, the Katzenjammer Kids, Dick Tracy, Popeye, Bringing Up Father, Nancy, Blondie, Brenda Starr, Li'l Abner, Terry and the Pirates, Alley Oop, Barney Google, Prince Valiant, Flash Gordon, Gasoline Alley, and Little Orphan Annie. How many of these strips have had at least one Sherlockian allusion? In newspapers, not comic books or animations. Send me a photocopy of at least one, and I will (eventually) send you a complete set.
254. If you weren't satisfied with the report (May 95 #4) on the grand Sherlockian dinner at the Culinary Institute of America, and would like more detail on what you missed, extra copies of the handsome 16-page menu are available ($18.95 postpaid) from Al and Julie Rosenblatt, 300 Freedom Road, Pleasant Valley, NY 12569. The text is carefully crafted by Julie and Al, with some grand photographs and artwork, and you can see "Black Peter and his wife in happier days."
255. John Keane (who has been in business since 1976 as "Sherlock Bones: Tracer of Missing Pets") now has his own home page on the Internet; if you know how to cruise the Web, the URL is: <http://www.sherlock.com/home/sherlock>. And his e-mail address is <sherlock@sherlock.com> (he says that he would love to hear from "barker street irregulars").
256. "Farintosh," said Sherlock Holmes (in "The Speckled Band"). "I recall the case; it was concerned with an opal tiara." Australia selected the opal as the national gemstone in 1993, and used holographic images of light and black opals on a set of stamps issued this year. Gem-quality opal also is found in South Africa, but one likes to think that the tiara had opals from Australia, if only because of the nice stamps.
257. SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR CHILDREN is now offered both on CD and on cassette; the one-hour recording contains four stories (Maza/Spec/Musg/Blue) told by Jim Weiss, who does an excellent job of combining narration and dialogue. The stories were edited for a younger target-audience, but the adaptations are imaginative and retain the excitement of the Canon. The cassette is $9.95 and the CD is $14.95 (add $2.00 per order for shipping) from Greathall Productions, Box 813, Benicia, CA 94510.
258. Sherlockian artist Cathy Childs (1510 Lake Drive, Grand Island, FL 32735) offers a new illustrated catalog of her artwork, including new 6" busts of Jeremy Brett as Holmes and Edward Hardwicke as Watson.
259. M. J. Trow's LESTRADE AND THE KISS OF HORUS (London: Constable, 1995; 235 pp., £15.99) is the fifteenth in his splendid series about Sholto Lestrade, who in 1923 is an ex-Detective Chief Superintendent, but still involved in the work of Scotland Yard, investigating the death of Lord Carnarvon (which turns out to have been deliberate murder, and only one of many in Egypt and in London). As usual, the book is full of puns and bravado and fun.
260. Jun 95 #4: Cadds (the British printer) will be issuing another colorful calendar for 1996, with color photos from the Granada series, and in the meantime has published two posters (12 x 16") with color photographs of Jeremy Brett; you can order from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); $20.50 postpaid for the two posters.
261. Jennie Paton has reported some nice news from Ken Greenwald and 221A Baker Street Associates: he now is working with the Brilliant Cassettes to make 16 new high-quality cassettes with 32 of the old Sherlock Holmes radio programs with Tom Conway and Nigel Bruce; the introductions will be recorded this summer, and the cassettes likely will be released in 1996. And Ken doesn't have a 200-show backlog, unfortunately. If anyone knows where all those shows are hidden, he'd be delighted to hear who has them.
262. Noted by Dana Richards: a Sherlockian rogue's gallery in "Test Your Private Eye-Q" in Games World of Puzzles (July 1995).
263. Roving Reporter: From the Files of Sarah Jane Smith #4 (one of many Doctor Who fanzines) is now available, and one of the stories is "The Adventure of the Visiting Doctor" (by Joelle Augustine, with artwork by Stefanie Kate Hawks); the Doctor and Sarah Jane help Holmes foil a mass murderer. $13.00 postpaid ($15.00 overseas) from Kevin W. Parker, 3-E Ridge Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770-1900. Brad Keefauver calls Kevin's magazine "one of the world's few perfect fanzines."
264. A Sherlockian first: a Sherlockian screen-saver (for non-tekkies, that's a program that helps you keep from burning something into the screen of your computer, which can happen if you leave something on the screen for hours). The "Abominable Wife" screen-saver cycles through seven of Melissa Hellen's black-and-white portraits of Sherlock Holmes, and you need Windows and 1-MB on a hard disk, and it is available on a 3.5" floppy disk from Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); $23.45 postpaid.
265. The Silver Blaze (Southern Division) at Pimlico on May 27 was won by Banpac and Meccas Boy in a dead heat, first dead heat in the history of The Silver Blaze and possibly all the Silver Blazes. Karen McDonough of Philadelphia presented the trophy (a specially bound copy of one of the Sherlockian volumes of The Strand Magazine), which will, one hopes, be shared in rotation over the years by the two fortunate owners.

266. The spring 1995 issue of The New Baker Street Pillar Box has arrived from The Franco-Midland Hardware Company; the 46 pages of news and articles include Catherine and Alan Saunders' interesting exploration of "Heavy Game in the Western Himalayas" (information about the society and its publications is available from Philip Weller, 6 Bramham Moor, Hill Head, Fareham, Hampshire PO14 3RU, England).
267. Dr. Fatso's latest installment of the continuing saga of Turlock Loams is THE ADVENTURE OF THE FERAL BARONET, involving "theriomorphy, exotic herbs, and the fast-food conspiracy," according to John Ruyle, who is even now at work printing the booklet on his Pequod Press. Available from the author, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
268. Jun 95 #5: The bibliographic research by Richard Lancelyn Green and John Michael Gibson for A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE (1983) uncovered ten stories that had been published anonymously and not previously known to have been Conan Doyle's; they were reprinted in THE UNKNOWN CONAN DOYLE: UNCOLLECTED STORIES (1982), and many admirers of Conan Doyle's work wondered whether there were more such discoveries to be made. The answer is yes: "The Blood-Stone Tragedy: A Druidical Story" in Cassell's Saturday Journal (Feb. 16, 1884) has been identified as Conan Doyle's work, thanks to Michael Halewood's research, inspired by his purchase at auction of a letter from Conan Doyle in Cassell's archives. The story has now been reprinted for the first time by The Arthur Conan Doyle Society in cloth, in a 63-page book that includes a 32-page Afterword by Owen Dudley Edwards, who offers details from contemporary newspapers about the real-life source for the story, and speculation about why it was not reprinted while its author lived. The cost is $26.70 postpaid by surface from the Society (Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester CH4 0JG, England (information on prices for shipping elsewhere is available from the Society)).
269. "If so, it would be good news in the sense that there is no Moriarty out there, no diabolical figure still eluding capture and bent on further mayhem," Joel Achenbach wrote in the Washington Post (June 11), commenting on the investigation of the Oklahoma City bombing. And he obviously assumed that his readers would know who Moriarty is. It is interesting how often one now sees allusions to the dog that did nothing in the night-time, and to the hound of the Baskervilles, and to Moriarty, without any additional identification, made by writers who believe they are writing for readers who don't need help identifying the dog, and the hound, and Moriarty.
270. Our new stamp shows a familiar rose, since the design has been used before (Sep 93 #1), but the rose is pink (rather than red) and the denomination is 32c (rather than 29c). There are lots of roses to be found in the Sherlock Holmes stories, and on our postage stamps (I doubt that any other flower has been featured on our stamps as often as the rose).
271. Reported by Ralph Hall: Mickey Mouse in a Sherlockian scene from "Lonesome Ghosts" on the face of a wristwatch ($65.00) at a Disney store at a mall. THE BERENSTAIN BEARS AND THE GREEN-EYED MONSTER, by Stan and Jan Berenstain (New York, Random House, 1995; $2.50); Grizzlock Holmes in a deerstalker on one page. And a flier from Peterson announcing a new series of pipes (commemorating "The Return of Sherlock Holmes"); the first is "The Rathbone" at $150 to $200 at your local pipe shop.
272. Travelers to Ontario may wish to attend a dinner-theatre production of Dennis Rosa's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" at the Rainbow Theatre in Parry Sound, July 25-Aug. 5. Box 282, Parry Sound, ON P2A 2X4, Canada (705-746-4050).
273. John Baesch reports that The Folio Society still offers their uniform set of the Canon, as a premium for new members: you can get five volumes of the short stories for £9.95 (for the set), and the four volumes with the novels free if you then decide to join; the society advertised in The Sunday Times (June 4), and their address is 44 Eagle Street, London WC1 4BR, England.
274. Jun 95 #6: Hugh Scullion (proprietor of Cadds Printing) reports that he has learned from Grace Riley (John Aidiniantz's mother) that Aidiniantz, who in January was jailed for three years after being convicted of obtaining £1.2 million by deception, has now appealed the sentence, and hopes to be released if he can persuade a judge that the mortgage lenders wouldn't have suffered financially (because property served as security), and that many people who apply for mortgages don't always tell the complete truth. Aidiniantz's company has now gone into liquidation, which may bode ill for The Sherlock Holmes Museum at 239 Baker Street in London.
275. Anyone who might wish to own a Sherlockian landmark will be interested in a classified advertisement noted by Steve Rothman in the Wall Street Journal (June 7): "STEAK HOUSE & REAL ESTATE. Christ Cella, NY's 70 yr old family owner restaurant. Sale incl. business & bldg in midtwn Mnhtn. Excl Agt 212-888-8850." The Baker Street Irregulars held their first formal meeting at Christ Cella's Restaurant on June 5, 1934, and their annual dinners on Dec. 7, 1934, and Jan. 6, 1936. However (Steve notes): it may be the same business, but it's not the same building, since the restaurant has moved since the days of the early BSI meetings.
276. Steve also noted that "P.O.V.: Complaints of a Dutiful Daughter" (on PBS-TV on June 6), made by Deborah Hoffmann and nominated for an Oscar this year, involves the long struggle against Alzheimer's disease by her mother, Doris Hoffmann, who is the widow of the late Banesh Hoffmann, member of The Baker Street Irregulars.
277. The spring 1995 issue of The Ritual is at hand from The Northern Musgraves; it's now a review rather than a newsletter, and offers 60 pages of articles and news, including David Stuart Davies' fine article on the BBC radio series with Clive Merrison and Michael Williams. Information on membership is available from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. BD16 4DN, England.
278. "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" opened this month in Britain, and was not praised by the newspaper critics. Christopher Tookey (Daily Mail) called the film "the most inept condemnation of drug abuse since 'Reefer Madness' in 1936," and said that it "reduced a packed press screening to helpless laughter." And Jeremy Brett "gives us his Anthony Vernon-Smith, an aristocratic drug dealer, pimp, maker of blue films and master criminal -- though, frankly, he behaves more like a Mr. Prig than a Mr. Big." Other critics were a bit more lenient, at least toward the actors, including Elizabeth Hurley, who is the heroine-on-heroin and looks lovely, and Brett (who plays the drug king "in the louche style long copyrighted by Christopher Walken," according to Sean French in the Guardian). No word yet on distribution plans in the United States (the film might go directly to videocassette or to cable television, I suspect).
279. "Try Canadian Pacific Railway," said Sherlock Holmes (in "Black Peter"). But that appears not to be the motto of the Canadian government, according to a Reuters dispatch in the N.Y. Times (Apr. 3). The government, striving to cut chronic fiscal deficits, plans to privatize Canadian National Railways in October, but has refused a $1 billion offer from Canadian Pacific Ltd., which wanted to buy the eastern operations of Canadian National.
280. Jun 95 #7: Julian Symons' CRIMINAL PRACTICES (London: Macmillan, 1994; 229 pp., £7.99) is a collection of some of the best of his critical essays and articles about crime writing. "The fact is that ninety per cent of crime stories, mystery stories, thrillers, are written by people with no feeling for language, place or character," he suggests in his Introduction, but he also finds much to praise, including the Sherlock Holmes stories, in his introductions to THE COMPLETE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1981) and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1987).
281. Roger Johnson reports that Sir Michael Hordern died on May 2. His acting career spanned decades, and he was a splendid character actor as well as a fine Shakespearean; it was his voice we heard narrating as the adult Watson in the film "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985).

282. Raphael Shaberman's IN SEARCH OF LEWIS CARROLL (London: Greenwich Exchange, 1995; 110 pp., £14.95) involves the author, in modern London, in conversation with Sherlock Holmes, discussing the life and work of the Rev. Charles Lutwidge Dodgson. Shaberman notes that both Dodgson and Conan Doyle were members of the Society for Psychical Research in 1894, and he reprints an illustration drawn by Conan Doyle's father Charles Doyle for an imitation "Alice in Wonderland" book published in 1877, but otherwise Sherlock Holmes is used only to help present the author's views. The publisher's address is 50 Langton Way, Blackheath, London SE3 7TJ, England.
283. The Midsommer Actors are mounting an interesting production of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at Newstead Abbey in Linby (Nottinghamshire) on Aug. 2-5 (the box-office telephone number is 0115-948-2626). "This is a promenade performance covering a distance of over 2 miles. Comfortable sturdy footwear is strongly advised and small carrying chairs are permitted. We do not feel this performance is suitable for those with walking difficulties or the very young."
284. Ron De Waal is selling some interesting items from his collection, including a corrected first draft of Ouida Rathbone's play "Sherlock Holmes" and a holograph letter from Basil Rathbone to Adrian and Anna Conan Doyle, and will accept bids until Sept. 1. A seven-page list of material is available from Ron at 638 12th Avenue, Salt Lake City, UT 84013.
285. John Farrell has nice news for people who like Sherlockian sheet music: he has discovered a published score for a piano solo from the Disney film "The Great Mouse Detective" (six pages, with a colorful cover). And I've found a convenient source: Backstage Inc. (attn: Rip Claussen), 2101 P Street NW, Washington, DC 20037. You should give the title and code (HL00356113), and the cost is $5.50 postpaid (two to six weeks for delivery).
286. The Brothers Three of Moriarty will hold their annual Trap/Crap Shoot at the Albuquerque Press Club on July 15, and this year there may actually be some traps shot. The program also will include a radio call-in show with Col. "Bash" Moran as host, and you're invited to submit written versions of phone-call questions or comments about his relations with Moriarty, Holmes, or anyone else that comes to mind. All calls should open with the obligatory "Megadodos, Bash!" (presumably more meaningful to locals than to me), and you can send them to Morrow Hall, Box 288, Estancia, NM 87016.
287. Jun 95 #8: THE ADVENTURES OF KIRSTEN DOWNEY, by Barb Nicolls (New Castle: The Peace Makers, 1995; 242 pp., $19.95), is a collection of twelve stories set in the 1890s, about a young American woman who becomes a detective, and in one story winds up meeting Sherlock Holmes. The stories have many echoes from the Canon (and considerable borrowed dialogue), and some nicely appropriate period illustrations, and the cost of the book is $24.20 postpaid from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219).
288. The Sherlock Holmes Lapel Pin Society has (of course) created a new lapel pin, designed by Jeff Decker and produced in four colors; the pin costs $11.00 postpaid from Ralph Hall, 2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218; $11.00 postpaid.
289. 1ST CULPRIT: A CRIME WRITERS' ASSOCIATION ANNUAL, edited by Liza Cody and Michael Z. Lewin, first published in Britain in 1992, was reprinted by St. Martin's Press, and is now reported by Ted Friedman in paperback (Toronto: Worldwide Library, 1994; $5.99); the contents include amusing Sherlockian captions for three of the drawings contributed by "Clewsey" to the CWA's monthly newsletter Red Herrings.
290. The seventh issue of The Whitechapel Gazette has arrived from Troy Taylor, with 50 pages of nicely illustrated articles on matters Doylean. The cost is $6.50 postpaid; Troy's address is 805 West North #1, Decatur, IL 62522. Troy notes that Malcolm Payne has reported that on July 1, Dame Jean Conan Doyle would unveil a memorial to her father at Groombridge Place, where the collection of the Conan Doyle Establishment is now on display.
291. The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn will hold this year's Sherlockian riverboat convention "The Game's Afloat" on Oct. 7-8; additional information is available from Michael E. Bragg, Box 799, St. Charles, MO 63302.
292. Eugene Edmund Snyder's THE ADVENTURE OF THE MISSING BROTHER (Portland: Binford & Mort, 1994; 159 pp., $12.95) is a pleasant mystery involving members of The 221 Club (a Sherlockian society in New Jersey) who become involved in a minor mystery that soon turns major, and that their amateur detecting helps solve. The publisher's address is 1202 N.W. 17th Avenue, Portland, OR 97209; if you order direct, add $3.50 for shipping.
293. Videotaper alert: the latest issue of Anglofile reports that Granada's last six "Sherlock Holmes" shows will air on "Mystery!" beginning Dec. 21. The monthly newsletter gives detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
294. Sotheby's catalog of Stanley MacKenzie's collection and other material has not arrived (as we go to press), but Gordon Palmer has forwarded a report from the London Observer Service on estimates for the auction on July 24 in London. His copy of Beeton's is estimated at $15,000-$24,000 ("though it could fetch considerably more"), and the entire collection is expected to bring about $105,000. Sotheby's address is 34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England (0171-493-8080); attn: Peter Selley.

Jul 95 #1:

295. Reported: a British edition of THE D. CASE: THE TRUTH ABOUT THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD, by Charles Dickens, Carlo Fruttero, and Franco Lucentini (London: Chatto & Windus, £10.99); first published in Italian in 1989 and then in English (May 92 #5), the book is an account of the events at a Forum on the Completion of Unfinished or Fragmentary Works in Music and Literature, and of the deliberations by participants who include Father Brown, Hercule Poirot, Nero Wolfe, Lew Archer, and Sherlock Holmes.
296. Cathy Childs reports that we'll soon be able to see Edward Hardwicke again: in the new movie "The Scarlet Letter" (also starring Demi Moore and Robert Duvall).
297. Sherlockians have appeared as characters in non-S'ian books: Richard Hughes appeared in books by Ian Fleming and John le Carre, and Jerry Neal Williamson killed off at least one of his Sherlockian acquaintances in one of his horror novels. Luci Zahray, who recently met Terence Faherty at a writers conference in Chicago, reports that Faherty told her that Tom, in Faherty's first novel DEADSTICK (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1991) (Toronto: Worldwide, 1995) based on his college room-mate Peter Crupe (Luci notes that the novel also has some interesting Sherlockian references).
298. "The Wild Geese" was the title of a paper Arthur Conan Doyle presented to the Irish Literary Society in 1897, noting that "I am acquainted with few more interesting incidents in history than those which led to the formation and the existence for a hundred years of the Irish brigades in the service of France." The lineage of these fighting corps began with the Irish Army that fought for King James II: after their defeat in 1691, thousands of soldiers went to exile in France, and Irishmen fought valiantly there. Conan Doyle's fine history of the Wild Geese was first published in The Irish Times in 1954, and it was reprinted in 1993 in ACD: The Journal of the Arthur Conan Doyle Society. This year Ireland issued a set of five stamps honoring the Irish who fought in France and other countries, and one of the stamps shows Irish soldiers in the French Army in 1745.
299. Mike Kean reports a new destination for Sherlockian tourists: The Sherlock Holmes British Pub in Turkey. The address is Calikusu Sok. No: 5, Levent, Istanbul, and the pub's advertising shows a Sherlockian silhouette, and the motto "Visit the Place Where Everybody Knows Your Name."
300. Sky-boxes aren't the only way that area-owners get help paying for arenas. Betty Pierce reports that backers of the proposed $45.9-million World Arena in Colorado Springs have created a "Builders Club" for those who donate $75 (tax deductible) for a six-inch-square decorative clay tile to be placed in the building (for an additional $25 you get a duplicate tile for your home or office). You get to put your name on the tile, or anyone else's name, anyone else, in case you want to honor James Moriarty or John H. Watson or Irene Adler or whomsoever (Betty already has honored Sherlock Holmes on her tile). Additional information is available from the Colorado Springs World Arena, 10 Lake Circle, Colorado Springs, CO 80906.

---

301. Jul 95 #2: Mark Frost's THE SIX MESSIAHS (a sequel to his 1993 Conan Doyle novel THE LIST OF SEVEN) will be published by William Morrow in August, and the publisher is sending him on a publicity tour, and is going to contact local Sherlockian societies. Further to the earlier report (Jun 94 #5) that Universal was planning to make a film of THE LIST OF SEVEN, the latest news is that the book has been optioned by Twentieth Century-Fox for Amblin Entertainment, and is now being cast, with production scheduled to start later this year.
  302. Marian J. A. Jackson's mystery series about Abigail Patience Danforth began with three paperback originals (THE PUNJAT'S RUBY, THE ARABIAN PEARL, and THE CAT'S EYE), and continued in hardcover in DIAMOND HEAD (1992), and THE SUNKEN TREASURE (New York: Walker, 1994; 166 pp., $19.95). Miss Danforth, continues to ignore Conan Doyle's earlier warning that amateur detecting is no career for a young lady, and now is on a millionaire's yacht bound from Panama to New Orleans 1900, and as usual involved in a lively mystery.
  303. "Hound whodunnit 'not written by Sir Arthur'" is the headline on a story in the [Plymouth] Western Morning News (May 27, 1995) at hand from Jon Lellenberg. Rodger Garrick-Steele, a 52-year-old advanced-driving instructor who owns Park Hill House at Ipplepen, says that Conan Doyle stayed at the house when it was owned by the Fletcher Robinson family, and reports that he has found new evidence that someone else wrote "The Hound of the Baskervilles" ("the world has been conned for years," according to Garrick-Steele). He won't say who the "real" author was, but it is obvious he means B. Fletcher Robinson. Garrick-Steele "has been turned down by every publisher he has approached in the U.K., but he has found a publisher in New York who wants to have a look."
  304. Johann Magnus Bjarnason's AN ICELANDIC SHERLOCK HOLMES, a short story first published in Icelandic in 1903, has been translated into English by Jan B. Steffensen; the story isn't a Sherlockian pastiche, but rather involves a young Icelandic immigrant in Nova Scotia, where he solves a minor mystery. The 14-page pamphlet was published by Tidsskriftet Pinkerton in 1994, and is available for $8.00 postpaid (in currency, please), from the translator (Sdr. Transders Bygade 23, DK-9220 Aalborg Ost, Denmark).
  305. Not a politician in sight, nor a trained cormorant, but our new booklet has five lighthouses, all of them on the shores of the Great Lakes. And there is another Canonical connection: Niagara Falls. Do you know (without going to a reference book) which of the Great Lakes are connected by the Niagara River, and which one is upstream?
306. Jul 95 #3: More news from Hugh Scullion (of Cadds Printing): John Aidiniantz now seems likely to spend somewhat less than three years in quod, what with one-third off for good behavior, another one-third on parole, and credit for time in the slammer prior to trial. The Sherlock Holmes Museum seems still to be in business.
  307. The set of four stamp booklets issued by Great Britain in 1987-1988 with covers showing Canonical illustrations by Andrew Davidson, and the "Basil of Baker Street" stamps issue by the Grenadines of St. Vincent in 1993 are still available from the International Stamp Collectors Society (Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408); ask for their Sherlockian fliers.
  308. Donna Griffon reports that The Albuquerque Little Theatre will produce "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (dramatized by Tim Kelly) on week-ends from Oct. 20 through Nov. 4; the opening night will honor John Bennett Shaw, and the theater's address is: San Pascuale and Central, Albuquerque, NM 87104 (the box-office telephone number is 505-242-4750).
  309. The 150th anniversary of statehood for Florida was the occasion for a postage stamp earlier this year (Mar 95 #4), and now similar honors are being paid, colorfully indeed, to Texas, which also is mentioned in the Canon (in "The Five Orange Pips").
  310. FLASHMAN AND THE ANGEL OF THE LORD, by George MacDonald Fraser (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1995), 394 pp., $24.00, is the latest installment in the grand saga of Flashman's exploits (eventually one of the books will reveal what happened when Flashman stalked Col. Sebastian Moran in an empty house in Baker Street); the Angel of the Lord is John Brown, so the time is preCanonical, but Flashman, reminiscing early on for his grandchildren, does mention the prize-fighter Jack Johnson, which allows Fraser to mention Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in an end-note.
  311. The manuscript of "The Three Garridebs" (22 leaves, signed twice by Arthur Conan Doyle) went to auction at the Superior Galleries in Beverly Hills on June 24, and was sold to a private collector for $97,750 (including the 15% buyer's premium).
  312. I wondered (Jun 95 #7) about the obligatory "Megadodos, Bash!" required for call-in messages to Col. "Bash" Moran at the annual Trap/Crap Shoot at the Albuquerque Press Club this month. Obviously I've never listened to Rush Limbaugh's show: David Hobbet notes that Limbaugh's callers-in often start off by saying, "Megadittos, Rush!"
  313. "'Unless I am very much mistaken, said the great detective, 'we are about to have a visitor. A woman of some standing in society who has just enjoyed a prolonged and vigorous bout of sexual congress.'" That's the opening of "The Remarkable Adventures of Porlock Holmes", a story published in the British pornographic magazine The Oyster in the 1890s and reprinted in THE OYSTER V (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1991; 192 pp., $4.50). The pastiche is 107 pp. of the paperback, which is sold in the erotica section at Borders, and (presumably) other bookshops. And you can order direct from Carroll & Graf (260 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10001); $5.50 postpaid.
314. Jul 95 #4: K. C. Brown's two-act play "Sherlock's Veiled Secret" will be produced at the Wayside Theatre in Middletown, Va., from Sept. 20 to Oct. 15. The play was performed in Seattle last year, and has Holmes coming out of retirement to solve a blackmail case. Middletown is about 70 miles west of Washington; the box-office address is Box 260, Middletown, VA 22645 (703-869-1776) (800-951-1776).
  315. Roger Johnson's newsletter The District Messenger continues to provide all sorts of news about what's happening in Great Britain (and sometimes elsewhere); it's published approximately monthly and costs $10.00 for twelve issues (dollar checks payable to Jean Upton can be sent to Roger Johnson, Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford, Essex CM2 6DE, England). His most recent issue reports a British edition of Sam Siciliano's THE ANGEL OF THE OPERA (Robert Hale, £16.99); Glen Petrie's new pastiche THE HAMPSTEAD POISONINGS (Ian Henry, £15.55); a commercial release of Douglas Wilmer reading FOUR GREAT ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Penguin Audiobooks, £7.99), and much more.
  316. Reported from Britain: TRANSFORMING GENRES: NEW APPROACHES TO BRITISH FICTION OF THE 1890'S, edited by Nikki Lee Manos and Meri-Jane Rochelson (London: Macmillan, 1995; 272 pp., £27.00), with an article by Ronald R. Thomas about the racism and sexism he has found in the Canon.
  317. Sherlockians who ignore Conan Doyle's other stories are missing some grand writing as well as some great fun, and both will be found in THE COMPLETE BRIGADIER GERARD (Edinburgh: Canongate, 1995; 387 pp., £4.99). Actually, the volume is more than complete: it also offers the Napoleonic "A Foreign Office Romance" and an excellent Introduction by Owen Dudley Edwards, who also has supplied fine notes for the stories. Canongate's distributor here is Interlink Publishing, 46 Crosby Street, Northampton, MA 01060 (800-238-5465); $15.95 postpaid, and credit-card orders are welcome.

318. A small cloth bundle contained a loaf of bread, a tinned tongue, and two tins of preserved peaches (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Our new stamp preserves two peaches for posterity.
319. Plan ahead: Dick Miller notes that a Sherlock Holmes Conference will be held at Santa Fe Community College, on Apr. 19-20, 1996. Tom Stix will be the keynote speaker, and the event will honor John Bennett Shaw, who starred at similar conferences in Santa Fe in 1991 and 1993. You can enroll on the conference mailing list by writing to Dean Rita Martinez-Purson, Santa Fe Community College, Box 4187, Santa Fe, NM 87502.
320. TALES AT MIDNIGHT: TRUE STORIES FROM PARAPSYCHOLOGY CASEBOOKS AND JOURNALS, by Hans Holzer (Philadelphia: Courage Books/Running Press, 1994; 175 pp., $5.98), gives the some of the results of Holzer's career as a ghost-hunter, and ends with Conan Doyle's essay "The Law of the Ghost" (first published in 1919).
321. Milton A. Silverman ("Barker, My Hated Rival") died on June 15. He was for many years a Professor Law at New York Law School, and a faithful member of The Scandalous Bohemians and Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers, and received his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982.
322. Jul 95 #5: Tourists in Paris have until Aug. 13, Sonia Fetherston notes, to visit the Palais Galliera, Museum of Fashion and Costume, and see an exhibit on "Le Dessin sous toutes ses Coutures" that features costume illustrations drawn by Lagerfeld, Chanel, Dior, Alterio, and ... Horace Vernet (the grand-uncle of Sherlock Holmes).
323. "Sherlock Holmes & John Bennett Shaw: The Detective & the Collector" is the official title for the memorial conference that will be held on Oct. 13-15 to honor the dedication of the John Bennett Shaw Collection, and there's a handsome brochure available, with all the details, from Judy Burton, at 499 Wilson Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 (612-642-8207). Her e-mail address is J-BURT@VM1.SPCS.UMN.EDU. This will be an interesting gathering, and (something that certainly would please John) there will be lots of nice Sherlockian collectibles published to mark the event.
324. Our new sheet of "Civil War" stamps has portraits of three people mentioned by name in the Canon: Abraham Lincoln (in "Thor Bridge") and Robert E. Lee and Thomas J. ("Stonewall") Jackson (in "The Five Orange Pips").
325. Reported by Jim Vogelsang: Les Martin's YOUNG INDIANA JONES AND THE TITANIC ADVENTURE (New York: Random House, 1993; 139 pp., $3.50); #9 in the Young Indiana Jones series. In 1912 Indy has some hair-raising adventures with German saboteurs, Irish revolutionaries, and a fortune-hunter on the ill-fated Titanic, and meets Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
326. Don Hobbs has reported MURDER MOST MEDICAL, an anthology of stories from Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine and Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, edited by Cathleen Jordan and Cynthia Manson (Carroll & Graf, $21.00); contents include "The Resident Patient".
327. Reported: ESCAPE, by Walter Satterthwait (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1995; 336 pp., $22.95); from a review: "can mystery be far behind when Houdini and Arthur Conan Doyle meet? Satterthwait offers up a locked-room caper enlivened by Houdini's ego and Doyle's decency."
328. The latest catalog from Tyrol International (Box 909, Cleveland, GA 30528) (800-241-5404) offers the Legends heads of Holmes and Watson ($29.95 each), the nested set of Sherlockian dolls from Russian ($36.00), and a S'ian letter opener and magnifying glass ($36.00 each).
329. Radio Spirits (Box 2141, Schiller Park, IL 60176) (800-723-4648) has issued a four-cassette set of OLD TIME RADIO DETECTIVES AND CRIME FIGHTERS, with 12 grand old shows (digitally restored and remastered), and with a 52-page booklet about the shows (with a preface by Stacy Keach, Sr., who produced and directed "Tales of the Texas Rangers"). And one of the shows is "The Adventure of the Tolling Bell", with Nigel Bruce as Watson and Tom Conway as Watson (broadcast on Apr. 7, 1947, and hitherto unavailable). The cost is $24.98 (cassette set) or $34.98 (CD set); add $5.00 for shipping.
330. Jul 95 #6: Mary Burke reports that the next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be held on Nov. 3-5. The weekend includes a mystery to solve, tours of atmospheric Victorian homes, meals, and other fun and games. Additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204-0340 (800-275-4279).
331. P. N. Elrod (better known in Sherlockian circles as Patti Nead Elrod, the creator of the "Baker Street Irregulars") began her paperback series THE VAMPIRE FILES for Ace in 1990, featuring Jack Fleming (formerly a reporter and now a vampire) and his private-detective friend Charles Escott (whose name is not the only Sherlockian echo in the six-book series). Patti has other books in print, and a fan club (run by Jackie Black, 1201 South Byrd #39, Tishomingo, OK 73460), and a Jack Fleming short story in the Martin H. Greenberg anthology VAMPIRE DETECTIVES (from DAW in April), and another in the Greenberg anthology CELEBRITY VAMPIRES (due from DAW in October), and she is getting ready to return to THE VAMPIRE FILES with a novel DARK SLEEP that will focus on Charles Escott, who (as it happens) is the natural son of Sherlock Holmes. And she'll be the Horror Guest of Honor at Consanguinity II (a science fiction/horror convention) in Chicago on Nov. 3-5.
332. The Trifling Monographers will hold their annual dinner at the Roosevelt Hotel in Seattle on Oct. 29, during the annual meeting of the Public Relations Society of America. Laborers in the vineyards of public relations (and local Sherlockians) are invited to contact William Seil (3001 125th Avenue SE #3-D, Bellevue, WA 98005) (206-747-3636) <wseil@aol.com>.
333. Ron De Waal's wonderful bibliography THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES was published last year in four volumes (Jul 94 #1), but unfortunately had only a selective word-list rather than an proper index. But after many months THE INDEXES TO THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES BY RONALD B. DE WAAL, compiled by George A. Vanderburgh and Leslie S. Klinger, now is available, as a 382-pp. fifth volume and in hypertext format for MS-DOS computers. There's a title index, and three separate personal-name indexes (for authors and subjects, thespians, and reviewers), and other useful material. $36.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) for either version (and the ink-on-paper version is available as unbound pages or in plastic comb binding), from Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada).
334. But: the hypertext version appears to be defective: the search utility will not find all of the listings in the indexes. This is a serious defect, but the good news is that it is not all that difficult to print the indexes to your hard disk in plain-ASCII and then use a different (and perhaps better) search utility of your own. The hypertext format offers a colorful display on the screen, but many users surely will prefer the less colorful but much more useful plain-ASCII format.
335. Better Holmes & Gardens: The Journal of Canonical Domesticity is requesting submissions, such as "learned speculation on the identity of Mrs. Turner, recipes for dishes mentioned in the Canon, instructions on the proper care of gas mantels or gasogenes, a Canonical study of roses (or Violets), and anything else Canonically domestic, including easily reproducible artwork." The first issue is expected in mid-November, and additional information is available from Cheryl Hurd, Teapot Press, Box 2048, Scotia, NY 12302.
336. Jul 95 #7: One of the more interesting ramifications of the computer age the spread of totally-electronic publishing, and the existence of journals that are not available in ink-on-paper form. One such journal for Sherlockians is available on the Prodigy computer service, but others can see some of what's published there, because a selection of its material appears twice a year as a newsletter. The summer 1995 issue of The Wigmore Street Post Office is a fine one, with 37 pages; $6.00 a year, from Donald H. Meyers, 4757 47th Avenue NE, Seattle, WA 98105.

337. "That's God's truth, gentlemen, every word of it," exclaimed Abe Slaney, I heard no more about it until that lad came riding up with a note which made me walk in here, like a jay, and give myself into your hands." (in "The Dancing Men"). A handsome blue jay appears on our new 20c booklet stamp.
338. The summer 1995 issue of the Sherlock Holmes Gazette has arrived, and has David Stuart Davies' up-to-the minute report on Jeremy Brett's health (he has cardiomyopathy, and won't be able to take on any major acting work), and Wendy Teasdill-Rowe's interesting article about what Tibet was like when Holmes visited (or didn't), and much more. The cover price is £1.95 (48 Purfield Drive, Wargrave, Berks. RG10 8AR, England), and the American distributor is Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.
339. Jeanne Munson reports: THE PAGEMASTER: WHO'S IN THE LIBRARY WITH RICHARD? (Atlanta: Bedrock Press/Turner Publishing, 1994; 28 pp., $9.95); it's like a "Where's Waldo?" book, but based on the recent animated film, and one of the challenges is devoted to "The Land of Mystery: 221B Baker Street" (with readers challenged to find keys to a dozen Sherlock Holmes stories in the picture). Jeanne is not sure, however, whether the purplish hippo in the tree is supposed to be one of the clues.
340. Sherlock's in space again. NASA mission specialist Nancy Sherlock, then an Army captain and a senior aviator, made her first space-shuttle flight two years ago in the crew of STS-57 (Jul 93 #5); now (married last month) she is Nancy Sherlock Currie, and a major, and went into space again on STS-70, which was launched on July 13 and returned on July 22. The launch had been scheduled for June 8, but was postponed when NASA discovered that energetic yellow-shafted flickers (woodpeckers common in the Cape Canaveral area) had pecked 135 holes in the foam insulation that protects the shuttle's external fuel tank. NASA now has a BIRD team (that's Bird Investigation Review and Deterrent) that persuaded the woodpeckers to peck elsewhere.
341. Another Sherlockian chess set, with the pieces "finely carved of stone and resin" (item 09-V8508), offered at $149.95 (discounted from $199.95) in the latest catalog from Bits & Pieces, 1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297)
342. Bouchercon 28 has issued its first announcement, and the world mystery convention is scheduled for Oct. 30-Nov. 2, 1997, in Monterey, Calif. Advance registration costs $50.00 until Aug. 15 (Bouchercon '97, Box 6202, Hayward, CA 94540). Sara Paretsky and Ross Thomas will be the guests of honor, Donald Westlake will receive the lifetime-achievement award, Julie Smith will be toastmaster, and the organizers are Bryan Barrett and Bruce Taylor.

343. Jul 95 #8: And some news from London, thanks to Catherine Cooke and Alan Vickers, who have supplied a few details on the July 24 auction of Stanley MacKenzie's collection. The total realized was £147,522 (which includes a 15% buyer's premium), and there was plenty of action: £20,700 for the Beeton's Christmas Annual, £10,350 for the almost-complete (688 issues) run of The Strand Magazine, £5,800 for lot 187 (ephemera, estimated at £350-500), £5,290 for the cigarette case presented by Conan Doyle to Saintsbury, £4,600 for lot 185 (theatrical posters and programs, estimated at £350-500), and £4,025 for lot 188 (memorabilia, estimated at £350-500).
344. Sumner & Stillman (Box 973, Yarmouth, ME 04096) (207-846-6070) have issued an impressive catalog 59, offering 100 Conan Doyle items, almost all first editions, and some quite spectacular (such as an 1891 Ward Lock edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET presented to Joseph Bell).
345. Kevin Parker has noted Charles Sheffield's "The Phantom of Dunwell Cove" in Asimov's Science Fiction, Aug. 1995; the story features Erasmus Darwin (the grandfather of Charles Darwin) using delightfully Sherlockian deduction to solve a mystery set long before the Sherlockian era. It isn't at all easy for pastichists to devise Sherlockian deduction for Sherlock Holmes, and it is a nice surprise to find in it a story about someone else.
346. The autumn harvest 1995 catalog from Your Exceptional Home (W. M. Green & Co., Box 426, Greenville, NC 27835) (800-482-5050) offers a "mystery cardigan" embroidered with designs that include a small Sherlock Holmes. $152 (misses) or $162 (women) for item #769007 (shipping extra).
347. Peter Spivak reports that the July 24 issue of Sports Illustrated features a six-page story by Merrell Noden about "The Adventure of the Treacherous Traps" (with Sherlock Holmes solving a mystery at the St. Andrews golf club a century ago). That's where the British Open is played, and this year the television coverage included commentary by Brent Musberger, who visited the pro shop and reported that you can buy a Sherlock Holmes golf cap there.
348. Plan well ahead: the steering committee for "A Silver Anniversary Weekend with Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" has selected the Arts and Letters Club in Toronto as the site, and June 26-29, 1997, as the weekend. And The Bootmakers of Toronto are now at work on planning for the event.
349. The STUD Sherlockian Society will celebrate Sherlock Holmes' 141st birthday on Oct. 6-7 at the historic Hutchinson Mansion Inn in Michigan City, Ind., and on Oct. 8 at Lou Malnati's Pizzeria in Lincolnwood, Ill. More information is available from Donald B. Izban, 5334 Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago, IL 60639. Don also will be happy to tell you about future STUD events, which include the Rache Road Rally scheduled on Jan. 13, 1996, in New York.
350. The Seventh International Holmesian Games will be held on Sept. 16-17 in Vancouver, B.C., and the agenda includes sport, jollification, a debate, and a "Lost Special" train ride. More details are available from Len and Elsa Haffenden, 1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada.
351. Aug 95 #1: Paul Chapman and Terrence Harvey will play Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson on television in Britain next year, according to a story in the Lancashire Evening Post (June 13), at hand from Jon Lellenberg. Gillian Whitworth reports that "Book Box" (produced by Granada for Channel Four) involves two young children who disappear into a computer game, only to re-emerge in the Victorian era where they must solve a mystery with the help of Holmes and Watson (the program "aims to promote reading among youngsters by introducing them to fictional characters in an exciting and accessible way").
352. Miklos Rozsa died on July 27. His film music won three Academy Awards, for "Spellbound" (1947), "A Double Life" (1947), and "Ben Hur" (1959), and he often collaborated with producer Billy Wilder, with credits for the music in five of Wilder's films, including "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970). The music in that film was based on Rozsa's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" (which had its first performance in Dallas in 1956 and was recorded by RCA Victor with Jascha Heifitz on violin).
353. The sixth "gift set" of THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is due from Simon & Schuster Audio in October ($25.00 for four cassettes with eight of the old radio shows); the first 24 cassettes are now available in the six "gift set" collections of the radio series that starred Basil Rathbone, Tom Conway, and Nigel Bruce.
354. The Book-of-the-Month Club still may be offering their nine-volume set of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES for $19.95 as a premium to new members (they advertised in the N.Y. Times Book Review on Mar. 19). The set was issued last year at $44.95, and consists of reprints (A STUDY IN SCARLET and THE SIGN OF THE FOUR from editions published by Orange Judd in 1907, and the other seven volumes from first American editions. The club's address is Camp Hill, PA 17012-0001.
355. The summer 1995 issue of Scarlet Street honors "A Study in Terror" (1965), with an appreciation by Richard Valley, and Jessie Lilley's interviews with John Neville and Herman Cohen. And an article about the Philo Vance films has some nice photographs of Basil Rathbone. And there's a photo of

- Roger Perry as Sherlock Holmes at a costume party in "The Return of Count Yorga" (1971). Scarlet Street costs $20.00 a year for four issues; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
356. The Scowrers and Molly Maguires of San Francisco will hold an interesting day of "Sherlockian Intrigues & Adventures on Sept. 30, 1995; registration costs $50 (until Sept. 1) and covers lunch, dinner, all events and related supplies; details are available from the Scowrers (V.V. 341, Mount Eden, CA 94557).
357. The Sherlock Holmes Journal continues to offer a splendid mix of scholarship and news from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and the summer 1995 issue arrived accompanied by a 40-page supplement devoted to the 1994 "Back to Baker Street" festival. The membership secretary is Bob Ellis (13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England), and he will be happy to respond to requests for information on membership and on subscriptions.
358. Aug 95 #2: Catalog 32 from Enola Stewart (Gravesend Books, Box 235, Pocono Pines, PA 18350) offers a great deal of desirable Sherlockiana and Doyleana from Julian Wolff's collection, some interesting material from the Rathbones (both Basil and Ouida), and much more.
359. Tim O'Connor reports that a catalog from Idea Art, Box 291505, Nashville, TN 37229 (800-433-2278), has fullcolor "Get Results" stationery, with one design showing a Sherlockian figure (#742).
360. Roger Johnson reports in The District Messenger that Sherlock Holmes in the Arches has opened at 6 the Arches, under Charing Cross Station; it's a new shop that sells Sherlockian artwork by Deirdre Keetley and others, and it's not far from The Sherlock Holmes.
361. FETLOCKS, FEMURS AND PHALANGES, edited by Pam Bruxner, is the new 60-page guidebook for The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's recent excursion to Berkshire, and it's a fine one, demonstrating once again the fine scholarship that members of the Society can offer (and Bernard Davies does a fine job with identifications); $17.50 postpaid to the United States (£10.00 to Europe, £11.00 to other countries), from Lynne Godden, Apple Tree Cottage, Smarden, Kent TN27 8QE, England.
362. "Me and My Holme Boys" is the subhead on Bill DeAndrea's column in the summer 1995 issue of The Armchair Detective (he was trying for a Sherlockian pun that hadn't been done before, and I think he succeeded). He also notes that he once described Sherlockian pastiche as "the acne on the face of the detective story," and admits that he forgot one very important fact about acne: "in the course of growing up, virtually everybody gets it." And now he has written two of them, one for an anthology of S'ian Christmas stories edited by Martin Harry Greenberg, and the other for an anthology edited by Marvin Kaye for St. Martin's that will offer double-pastiches: Ed Hoch is doing Holmes as written by Ellery Queen, Kaye is doing Holmes as written by Rex Stout, and DeAndrea has done Holmes as written by Mickey Spillane. TAD now costs $31.00 a year for four issues; 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019-3808.
363. Ely Liebow has returned from a trip to Britain, and has reported on his bus tour of the historic city of York, where he was both startled and delighted to discover that the bus had passed by a pub called The Brigadier Gerard. Ely persuaded the driver to stop, so that photographs could be taken of a pub named for Conan Doyle's famous character. Not quite: the pub is named in honor of the famous racehorse ("the only English classic winner of the present century to have lost only one race in 18 or more starts"). Brigadier Gerard was foaled in 1969, Francine and Wayne Swift report.
364. Ida Lupino died on Aug. 3. She had a long and distinguished career in the movies, as actress and director; she had made eight films in England before Paramount brought her to Hollywood in 1933 to play Alice in Wonderland (she didn't get the part, and perhaps it was just as well: "I would have played her as a hooker," she once said, "and danced on the table tops"). But she quickly made her mark, and at the age of 21 had star billing as Ann Brandon in Basil Rathbone's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939).
365. Aug 95 #3: Further to last month's mention (Jul 95 #1) of Sherlockians who have appeared as characters in non-S'ian books, Don Hardenbrook notes that Dean and Shirley Dickensheet also qualify. Ward and Irene Baldwin, the San Francisco agents of T.H.R.U.S.H. in David McDaniel's paperback THE MAN FROM U.N.C.L.E. #4: THE DAGGER AFFAIR (New York: Ace Books, 1965), were based on Dean and Shirley, and the book is dedicated to them. Baldwin also appeared in THE MAN FROM U.N.C.L.E. #17: THE HOLLOW CROWN AFFAIR (New York: Ace Books, 1969).
366. Penguin Audiobooks has issued a three-hour abridged version of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, read with verve and style by Freddie Jones on two audiocassettes (£7.99); Jones has other Sherlockian credits: he played Chester Cragwitch in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985), and has appeared in two of the Granada shows, as Inspector Baynes in "Wisteria Lodge" and as the Pedlar in "The Last Vampyre". Penguin also offers FOUR GREAT ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES with four cases ("The Speckled Band", "The Devil's Foot", "The Musgrave Ritual", and "Charles Augustus Milverton") read by Douglas Wilmer on two cassettes (£7.99); this is the commercial release of the two cassettes offered earlier by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London (Mar 95 #5), and Wilmer (who has played Holmes both on film and on television) offers grand performances on the cassettes.
367. Sherlockian societies continue to find interesting ways in which to commemorate sports and games mentioned in the Canon: the Second Hon. Ronald Adair Memorial Whist Tournament will be held in St. Louis on Nov. 18, when The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn will challenge The Noble Bachelors (although all are welcome to participate). Details are available from Art Schroeder, 3131 Russell Boulevard, St. Louis, MO 63104.
368. Penguin Books is celebrating its 60th anniversary with a book series called "Penguin 60s" (the price is 60p) [95c]; one of the volumes, reported by Will Walsh, contains "The Man with the Twisted Lip" and "The Devil's Foot".
369. THE ADVENTURE OF THE SIX NIXONS is the latest installment in the adventures of Turlock Loams (it's "a grotesque & tangled skein of madness, philately, iconoclasm, & murder," according to its author John Ruyle), and it's finely printed (as is everything published from John's Pequod Press). The cost of the 34-page booklet is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper), and John's address is 521 Vincent Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
370. Further to last month's report (Jul 95 #4) about a Sherlock Holmes Conference scheduled at Santa Fe Community College on Apr. 19-20, 1996: they have issued a "call for presenters" (with a Sept. 29 deadline); more information is available from Ms. Trisha Stanton, Community Services Division, Santa Fe Community College, Box 4187, Santa Fe, NM 87502.
371. Bonnie Bills reports that David Burke, no longer sporting the beard he had when he was filmed as Dr. Watson at dinner at The Sherlock Holmes in London in January (for the biography of Sherlock Holmes recently broadcast on A&E cable), is now on stage at the Fortune Theatre in London, as Arthur Kipps, in "The Woman in Black", a play based on Susan Hill's novel. And he told Bonnie that he has been quite busy the last few years, working in theater in London and Stratford, and guest-starring on television.
372. Aug 95 #4: Mark Frost's THE SIX MESSIAHS (New York: William Morrow, 1995; 404 pp., $23.00) is a sequel to his THE LIST OF SEVEN (Sep 93 #4); the book opens in 1894, with Conan Doyle about to leave England for his tour of the United States, and the story involves him in a struggle to possess the mystical Book of Zohar, and to prevent the end of the world. As with the first book, this is alternate-universe fantasy, with more than a touch of the supernatural. And fantasy: Conan Doyle arrives in New York to be welcomed by three costumed members of "the official New York chapter of the Baker Street Irregulars," and ends his trek in the Arizona desert, helping an old friend win out over evil.

373. Mark Frost joined The Red Circle of Washington for dinner on Aug. 11 during his promotion tour for THE SIX MESSIAHS, and reported that he is considering a third book about Conan Doyle's visit to Egypt in 1895-96. Frost's screenplay for THE LIST OF 7 has been optioned by 20th Century-Fox for Jim Cameron's Lightstorm Productions (Cameron has produced "Terminator", "True Lies", and "Aliens 2").
374. Cheryl A. Hurd's THE VICTORIAN YELLOW PAGES: RESOURCES FOR YOUR VICTORIAN LIFESTYLE (Scotia: Teapot Press, 1995; 100 pp., $12.00) offers guidance to those who want to recapture the nicer aspects of living in Victorian times, providing names and addresses for purveyors of clothing, jewelry, hatpins, furniture, stereoscopes, garden arbors, food and drink, and much more. The book is available from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 ($15.00 postpaid).
375. THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF HISTORICAL DETECTIVES, edited by Mike Ashley (New York: Carroll and Graf, 1995; 532 pp., $9.95), offers reprints of two pastiches: Jack Adrian's Sherlock Holmes story "The Phantom Pistol", and an expanded version of Basil Copper's Solar Pons story "The Adventure of the Frightened Governess". The anthology is a companion volume to Ashley's THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF HISTORICAL WHODUNNITS (Mar 94 #6), and includes some fine stories, one of them being Ashley's candidate for the earliest-ever setting for a locked-room mystery: Australia, about 37,000 years ago.
376. The summer 1995 issue of Friends of the Library (the newsletter published by the University of Minnesota Libraries) has two nice articles about John Bennett Shaw and plans for the memorial conference on Oct. 13-15; it's sent free to those who have contributed to the John Bennett Shaw Fund, and there still is time to do that: checks for $25.00 (or more) payable to the fund can be sent to the University of Minnesota (attn: Judy Burton), 499 Wilson Library, Minneapolis, MN 55455.
377. Miles Elward's SHERLOCK HOLMES IN CANTERBURY has three short stories that bring Holmes to Canterbury, with lots of nice period atmosphere. The 72-page book (paper covers) costs $10.00 postpaid from Wynne Howard Publications, 10 Betula Close, Kenley, Surrey CR8 5ET, England.
378. Societies looking for ideas for souvenirs might take a look through the new catalog from Best Impressions (Box 802, La Salle, IL 61301) (800-635-2378). Their promotional products range from mugs ($40.00 set-up charge, and $2.40 each for 72) to wooden nickels ($15.00 set-up, and $0.10 each for 1,000) to Christmas ornaments ($3.31 each for 96), and there are many other ideas.

379. Aug 95 #5: THE RECOLLECTIONS OF SOLAR PONS, by Basil Copper (Minneapolis: Fedogan & Bremer, 1995; 248 pp., $29.00), has three new tales about Solar Pons, and a much longer version of an earlier one, and striking illustrations by Stefanie Kate Hawks. Copper's continuation of the series that August Derleth conceived as a tribute to Sherlock Holmes is in turn a fine tribute to Derleth. The publisher's address is 603 Washington Avenue #77, Minneapolis, MN 55414-2950; a signed limited edition also is available at $75.00, and they take plastic. Discount prices ($25.00 or $67.00) are available on orders received by Sept. 15.
380. The Proprietor of the Pequot Press is hard at work again, setting type for THE ADVENTURE OF THE ALUMINUM CROTCH, the latest installment in Dr. Fatso's chronicles of the intrepid Turlock Loams. Available from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
381. Ruth Berman published the first issue of THE SHSF FANTHOLOGY in 1967, with 32 pages of contributions by Robert Bloch, Dean Dickensheet, Dick Lupoff, and others, and the second and third issues appeared in 1971 and 1972, and they are great fun and now rare. And recently reprinted, offering modern collectors a chance to read some early cross-over essays and fiction. The reprints cost $3.00 each postpaid (or $8.00 for all three) from Ruth Berman (2809 Drew Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55416).
382. Spotted by Jim Suszynski: SPIDER KANE AND THE MYSTERY UNDER THE MAY-APPLE, by Mary Pope Osborne (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1992; 127 pp., $13.00); an amusing children's book, with detection by "the Sherlock Holmes of the bug world" (the description is the only Sherlockian aspect of the book).
383. Frank Darlington has noted a catalog listing that might interest those who are investigating aspects of "The Musgrave Ritual": THE LATE KING'S GOODS: COLLECTIONS, POSSESSIONS, AND PATRONAGE OF CHARLES I IN THE LIGHT OF THE COMMONWEALTH SALE INVENTORIES, edited by Arthur MacGregor (London: Alistair McAlpine, 1989; 432 pp., $59.95); A115162 from Barnes & Noble, 126 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011).
384. I can't remember who asked me about the cause of death for Raul Julia, so: the newspaper obituaries say that he died on Oct. 24, 1994, at North Shore University Hospital in Manhasset, N.Y., and that hospital spokeswoman Alice Siegel stated that the cause was complications of a stroke on Oct. 16.
385. Mel Hughes reports that Edward Hardwicke is working on a new film: "Richard III" (due for release in Britain in November). Ian McKellen is executive producer, wrote the screenplay, and plays the title role, and other actors include Robert Downey Jr., Maggie Smith, Annette Bening, Nigel Hawthorne, and Edward Hardwicke (as Lord Stanley, played as an Air Vice Marshal who joins Richmond's forces, taking the RAF with him). Oh yes, the play is set in the 1930s, and McKellen is playing Richard as a fascist leader.
386. Spotted by Dick Lesh: a new 80-minute videocassette "Sherlock: Undercover Dog", from Columbia Tristar, $10.96 at Walmart. "The world's first talking police dog on a mission im-paws-ible!" The box shows the dog with pipe and deerstalker, and the story is about a boy and girl, on summer vacation on Catalina, encountering a talking dog.
387. Aug 95 #6: "Dinosaur Named After Conan Doyle" was the headline on a story in The Times on Aug. 19, at hand from Chris Roden. Dr. David Martill of Portsmouth University has described and named "Arthurdactylus conan-doylei" from a fossil found in northeastern Brazil; it's a pterodactyl with a wing-span of six meters. And no, pterodactyls aren't dinosaurs (but the copy-editor at The Times who wrote the headline didn't care).
388. Bob Fritsch has reported finding a Sherlockian POG, with a white silhouette on a metallic blue background. POGs are the size of milk-bottle caps, and were last year's fad for kids, although they're still popular, because kids still are playing with them. You can ask your friendly neighborhood kid to tell you how the game is played. If your friendly neighborhood kid doesn't know what the name means, the first POGs came from Hawaii, where they were used to seal containers of a papaya-orange-guava juice drink.
389. Noted by Jennie Paton: Investigator (an alligator detective in Sherlockian in Sherlockian costume) in Jerry Smath's INVESTI*GATOR* IN CLASSROOM CAPERS (Troll Associates, 1994; $2.25); an illustrated children's book.
390. Further to the report (Jun 95 #6) on the offer to sell Christ Cella's, Syd Goldberg reports that the N.Y. Times has noted that the restaurant has been sold to Ken Aretsky, who until March was the chairman and chief executive of the "21" Club. Aretsky said he had not decided whether to keep the name but will keep the steakhouse genre "with some additions and changes." The Baker Street Irregulars held their first formal meeting at Christ Cella's (which then was not where it is now), on June 5, 1934.
391. Was anyone at the Royal and Ancient Golf Club for the British Open? ABC-TV commentator Brent Musberger visited the pro shop at St. Andrews on July 23, and reported that one could buy a Sherlock Holmes golf cap there.

392. UNEXPLORED POSSIBILITIES, by John Hall (Leeds: Tai Xu Press, 1995) has the apt subtitle "Some Notes on the Life, Habits, and Character of Dr. John H. Watson," and offers a 96-page examination of the man who did so much for so many Sherlockians in bringing the exploits of Sherlock Holmes to the attention of generations of readers. Hall reviews the scholarship that has been devoted to Watson over the years, and offers some of his own, and does it well. Available from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219; $23.20 postpaid.
393. Don Hobbs has forwarded a new catalog from Earlynn Collier (104 Brunswick Drive, Greenwood, IN 46143) that offers hand-painted porcelain with Sherlockian silhouettes: paperclip box ($12.00), thimble ($12.00), lapel pin ($12.00), earrings ($18.00), teapot ($35.00), and other items.
394. There aren't that many banks mentioned by name in the Canon, and they don't make the headlines all that often, but "Despite Tough Competition, Credit Lyonnais May Be the World's Worst Bank" caught Chris Redmond's eye. It was Bernard Levin's column in The Times (Apr. 25, 1995), discussing the bank's loss of six hundred million francs (that's about $33.3 billion).
395. Sep 95 #1: Jeremy Brett died on September 12. He made his stage debut in Manchester in 1954, and played Nicholas Rostov in the film "War and Peace" (1956), and then joined the Old Vic to perform in London and on Broadway. Brett played Dr. Watson in "The Crucifer of Blood" in Los Angeles in 1980 and 1981 (with Charlton Heston as Holmes), and then played Sherlock Holmes in the Granada series, launched in 1984. It was during a break in the Granada series that he commissioned and starred in the play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" in London and on tour in England in 1988, and it is as Holmes that he will be remembered by this generation and many more: the 46 hours of splendid television in the Granada series will be played on cassettes and broadcast over and over again to please old audiences and new. Jeremy Brett was the first actor since Basil Rathbone who truly owned the role of Sherlock Holmes, and he created a legion of fans and friends with his fine work for Granada and in other films and television programs.
396. Meg Moller Martin, who last month launched a campaign to get Jeremy Brett onto the next honours list, heard only a few days before his death from the Prime Minister's office that the nominations unit would "see that Mr. Brett receives full and careful consideration."
397. Try identifying the famous detective's employee who once said: "You mean these Baker Street societies and all that. Grown men being so silly! But there, that's men all over. Like the model railways they go on playing with. I can't say I've ever had time to read any of the stories. When I do get time for reading, which isn't often, I prefer an improving book."
398. Ruthann and Tom Stetak report that the wristwatch showing Mickey Mouse in a Sherlockian scene from "Lonesome Ghosts" ($65.00 at Disney mall stores not too long ago (Jun 95 #5) has been discounted to $38.00 (and they warn those with ageing eyes that even though the dial is large, the watchface is quite small). Also that busts of Napoleon are offered in a catalog from Design Toscano of Chicago, 15 East Campbell, Arlington Heights, IL 60005 (800-525-0733).
399. The Bull-Terrier Club of Boston University visited Newport, R.I., in August to attend a polo match at Glen Farm (possibly the first such occasion that a Sherlockian society has arranged), and commemorated the event with a nice 16-page booklet that explores the history of polo, and the history of polo in Newport, and does not neglect the fact that polo is indeed mentioned in the Canon. Copies of the booklet are available for $4.00 postpaid ($5.50 overseas) from W. Scott Monty, 140 Bay State Road #1137, Boston, MA 02215.
400. The fifth issue of The Shoso-in Bulletin has arrived from The Men with the Twisted Konjo, with 152 pages (in English) of articles, pastiches, poetry, and illustrations by contributors from Japan and eight other nations. The journal is edited by Yuichi Hirayama, and is truly an international effort. $12.00 postpaid (to addresses in the United States and Canada) from Jennie C. Paton, 206 Loblolly Lane, Statesboro, GA 30458; or £7.60 postpaid (to addresses in Britain and on the Continent) from John Hall, 20 Drury Avenue, Horsforth, Leeds, W. Yorks. LS18 4BR, England. Checks in U.S. dollars to Jennie; checks in sterling to John (or any nation's currency, John notes).

401. Sep 95 #2: "During our London years, when I was learning my craft, various famous characters gave me a hand without knowing it. I am indebted, for example, to Sherlock Holmes, who was always complaining that Dr. Watson was often at the scene of the crime but failed to notice the incriminating details. 'You looked but didn't *see*, Watson!' This encouraged me thereafter to notice the little giveaway expressions on presidents' faces and telltale gaps in their arguments." Spotted by Gayle Harris in DEADLINE: A MEMOIR, by James Reston (New York: Times Books, 1992).
402. "You mean these Baker Street societies and all that ..." Spoken by Hercule Poirot's secretary, Miss Lemon, in HICKORY DICKORY DEATH (1955); spotted by Ted Friedman.
403. And here's an interesting discovery made by Jack and Natalie Kerr, while on holiday in Vermont: an impressive memorial at the birthplace of someone who is mentioned by name in the Canon. Who?
404. Further to the report on the new pterosaur "Arthurdactylus conan-doylei" (Aug 95 #6), David M. Martill has kindly sent a copy of the report that he and Eberhard Frey contributed to the Neues Jahrbuch fur Geologie und Palaontologie Abhandlungen (Dec. 1994). Described from a single specimen that was found in laminated limestone of the Crato Formation (Lower Cretaceous) in northeastern Brazil, the fossil flying reptile was named in honor of the author "whose imaginative Lost World story inspired so many children." It had a wing span of 4.6 meters (that's about 15 feet), and the fossil now is at the State Museum of Natural History in Karlsruhe, Germany.
405. Reported by Wally Conger: a reprint of William S. Baring-Gould's classic biography SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET: A LIFE OF THE WORLD'S FIRST CONSULTING DETECTIVE (from Wings Books, at $7.99 on the bargain-books tables). First published in 1962, this was an important milestone on the road to THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES. Recommended.
406. Sherri's Hacienda is now Sherlock's Steak House on Holmes, according to a review in the Kansas City Star (Aug. 18), at hand from Jerry Houchens. The restaurant's address is 9916-A Holmes Road, and the newspaper's restaurant reviewer gave the food high marks but suggested that the new mural "looks more like St. Francis of Assisi than Sherlock Holmes."
407. If you've wandered by 12 West 44th Street in New York and wondered just how bad the delapidated Mansfield Hotel was, it was pretty bad. But no longer: it has been thoroughly restored, hearkening back to its original clubhouse atmosphere (it was built in 1904 as a residence for affluent bachelors). A single room will cost $125 a night, including free parking and a breakfast buffet, and three bedside-reading anthologies (according to a story in the N.Y. Times on Aug. 16): one has essays about New York and the other two are devoted to the fiction of Jack London and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
408. THE IRISH PROFESSOR, by Eddie Maguire (Bridgwater: Big House Books, 1995), is a pleasant pastiche that takes Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson to County Sligo and an encounter with the Gore-Booths in 1897 (well before the time of Sir Paul of S'ian fame). The 23-page pamphlet costs $4.00 postpaid from Ian Henry Publications, 20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England.
409. Sep 95 #3: Christopher and Barbara Roden have launched the Calabash Press as a new Sherlockian imprint, and their first book will be a reprint of David Stuart Davies' Holmes-Dracula pastiche THE TANGLED SKEIN, first published three years ago by Theme Publications (Apr 92 #2); $28.50 postpaid, and their address is: Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester CH4 0JG, England (shipping costs to other countries vary, and you can write to them for details).

410. "An impressive memorial at the birthplace of someone mentioned by name in the Canon." Joseph Smith, founder of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, who was born in Sharon, Vermont, on Dec. 23, 1805.
411. A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1995; 326 pp., $22.95) is Laurie R. King's second novel about Mary Russell, whom we met in THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE (Mar 94 #4), and who is now (at the end of 1920) about to turn 21, and again involved with Sherlock Holmes. She is a strong character in her own right, and the story has power and tension, important in any book that does more than merely offer an imitation Sherlock Holmes in an unimaginative mystery. King's new book has some intriguing insights into Holmes, as well as imagination and style.
412. Michael Hardwick's SHERLOCK HOLMES: MY LIFE AND CRIMES is the latest volume of Sherlockiana to appear in a Japanese translation (by Masamichi Higurashi and Naohiko Kitahara) (Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 1995; 328 pp., ¥2,000); Masamichi reports that he also is translating Randall Collins' THE CASE OF THE PHILOSOPHERS' RING and Edward B. Hanna's THE WHITECHAPEL HORRORS.
413. Ronald A. Knox's "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes" (published in the May 1912 issue of The Blue Book) is a well-known classic, but less far less well-known is the letter that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote to Knox on July 5, 1912, commenting on the paper. The letter has been unpublished until now, and it appears for the first time, translated into German, along with a German translation of Knox's paper, in the summer 1995 issue of The Reichenbach Journal, which is edited for The Reichenbach Irregulars by Marcus Geisser. $10.00 postpaid (in currency, please) from Klaus Worner, Torkelgasse 9, D-97980 Bad Mergentheim, Germany.
414. Norman Houde reports that THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: THIRTEEN BIOGRAPHERS IN SEARCH OF A LIFE, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg (Nov 87 #4) is offered by The Scholar's Bookshelf, 110 Melrich Road, Cranbury, NJ 08512, discounted to $14.95. The book is a fine guide to the many, and frequently unreliable, biographies.
415. If you didn't buy a copy of Maeve Binchy's novel THE COPPER BEECH when it first appeared (Oct 92 #5), and you still want one (there's nothing about it that's Sherlockian except for the almost-exact title match), Dick Lesh reports that it's discounted at $5.95 in the current catalog from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031). And other bargains include the Outlet Books edition of William S. Baring-Gould's THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES ($19.95), Edward B. Hanna's pastiche THE WHITECHAPEL HORRORS ($5.95), and a real bargain: THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: THIRTEEN BIOGRAPHERS IN SEARCH OF A LIFE ($9.95); the last book is an excellent guide, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg, to the many, and frequently unreliable, biographies.
416. Sep 95 #4: Further to the report (Nov 94 #6) about a "Hound of the Baskervilles" episode on the new PBS-TV series "Wishbone" (who is a Jack Russell terrier whose active imagination allows him to immerse himself in the storylines of classic books), the series will debut on Oct. 6. But there's no word yet on when "The Slobbery Hound" will air.
417. This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will be in full color, with an attractive watercolor painted for the Society by Douglas West, showing Holmes and Watson meeting Inspector Lestrade when he arrived from London in "The Hound of the Baskervilles". The cost is $13.50 postpaid for ten cards (checks payable to the Society); you can send orders to Capt. W. R. Michell, 5 Old Farm Place, Hinton St. George, Somerset TA17 8TW, England.
418. I can't remember who asked me recently about the different portraits of Queen Victoria on British coins, but an advertisement at hand from Sherry Rose-Bond provides the answer: the young queen's coins were minted from 1838 to 1887, a more mature queen appeared from 1887 to 1893, and an older queen from 1893 to 1901. The illustration shows gold sovereigns, advertised by the Worldwide Treasure Bureau, Box 5012, Visalia, CA 93278 (800-437-0222) at $225 each (or $650 for the set of three).
419. Sherlockians are not the only ones who enjoyed membership in the many clubs founded by Christopher Morley, but some of those imaginative clubs are not widely known. A recent auction at the Swann Galleries in New York of items in the collection of the late Herman Abromson included a document certifying that R. C. Riminton was "a popular member of the N. & S. C. D. H. & L. R. C." That was the Nassau & Suffolk County Devilled Ham & Lake Ronkonkoma Club, and the certificate was signed by Morley as president, and Ogden Nash as permanent secretary pro-tem.
420. Evelyn Wood died on Aug. 26. She began teaching speed reading in 1957 at the University of Utah, and reportedly could read as many as 15,000 words a minute. She founded the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute in 1959, and in 1961 her Institute published a two-volume speed-reading edition of Conan Doyle's ADVENTURES OF GERARD.
421. Walter Satterthwait's ESCAPE (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1995; 355 pp., $22.95) offers a mystery that is mysterious, and characters that are interesting, and some real fun. Two of the characters are Harry Houdini and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and the setting is an English country house in 1921, and there's a locked-room murder that mystifies Houdini, and there's a Pinkerton man on hand to tell the tale in graceful but hard-boiled style, and there are some nice surprises and inside jokes as well.
422. Sherlockian societies that would like more advance publicity for meetings and other events can now have brief announcements posted on the World Wide Web, on a home page maintained by Nigel J. Hayler for those who can cruise the Web via the Internet. You need only find a member who can send e-mail, and send your announcements to <nhayler@easynet.co.uk>, or you can write to Nigel at 74-A Elm Park Road, London N3 1EB, England.
423. Sep 95 #5: William P. Schweickert ("Cox and Co.") died on Sept. 12. Bill had a long and distinguished career in banking, and he was an enthusiastic historian as well as a dedicated Sherlockian, and his friends and associates benefited from his energy and delightful sense of humor. He was one of the founders of The Three Garridebs of Eastchester, and a member of The Five Orange Pips of Westchester County and The Sacred Six and other societies in the New York area, and received his Investiture from the BSI in 1979, and their Two-Shilling Award in 1986.
424. The postal service continues to issue annual souvenir sheets commemorating the 50th anniversary of World War II, and this year's sheet includes a stamp that shows President Truman announcing Japan's surrender, on Aug. 14, 1945. Truman was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars.
425. "Exotic Creatures Lured to Balmy British Waters" is the headline on a story by Jonathan Leake and John Burns in The Times (Sept. 3), kindly forwarded by John Baesch. Warm weather and changes in ocean currents have resulted in an invasion of seldom seen sealife, including the lion's mane jellyfish. "Health officers in Hartlepool recently had to close the Seaton Carew beach after a swarm of lion's manes were washed up," and three children received hospital treatment for stings.
426. Issue #31 of The Tonga Times, published by The Mini-Tonga Scion Society for Sherlockian miniaturists, offers news and helpful hints, and a report from Yves Charles Fercoq on the genealogy of the Vernet and Holmes families (it seems that Sherlock Holmes' grandmother was Emilie Vernet, who was guillotined in 1794). Membership in the society costs $7.00 a year (with three issues of the newsletter), and if you would like to have more information about the society, you need only send a #10 SASE to Carol Wenk (Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107).
427. Spotted by Jennie Paton: Pat Cummings' JIMMY LEE DID IT (New York: Harper-Trophy, 1995; 30 pp., $4.95); a children's book, first published in 1985: Angel plays detective (wearing a deerstalker).

428. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HOUDINI BIRTHRIGHT, by Val Andrews (London: Breese Books, 1995; 160 pp., £5.99), involves Holmes and Watson with Houdini, and then with Houdini's widow Bess (whose request for help brings them to New York and then to Budapest); the author is a magician, and has some fun with Houdini's contemporaries and rivals. The publisher's address is 164 Kensington Park Road, London W11 2ER, England.
429. Geoff Jeffery notes that the Sherlock Holmes nesting dolls (Sep 93 #4) are offered at $12.95 in a catalog from Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7287)); also Tom Bullimore's BAKER STREET PUZZLES (Nov 94 #1) and another puzzle book by Falcon Travis with S'ian artwork on the cover ($9.95 for the set of two).
430. The Victorian Villa Inn, at 601 North Broadway Street, Union City, MI 49094 (800-348-4552), is a carefully restored 1876 house that offers Sherlockian weekends, and an attractive brochure giving details and a schedule.
431. Sep 95 #6: Not everyone named James Moriarty is a criminous mathematician, Dave Galerstein notes. Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz is on his way to the Mayo Clinic for spinal surgery, according to a story in the N.Y. Times (Sept. 11). The announcement came from university physician James Moriarty, who uses a different spelling for the family name.
432. "Wear the wrong hat out in the midday sun and there is a long-term danger of skin cancer," was the sub-head on a story in The Times (Aug. 22, 1995), kindly forwarded by John F. Baesch. The Garden (the journal of the Royal Horticultural Society) reports that the American National Farm Centre in Wisconsin has cautioned farmers that the American baseball cap will not protect the neck and ears from the sun, and that better protection would be provided by a deerstalker or a solar topi. Well, it has taken the RHS only four years to catch up with the news. It was the National Farm Medicine Center in Marshfield that conducted a test of various hats (Aug 91 #3 and Nov 91 #3): a modified baseball cap with a detachable flap that covers the temples, ears, and neck provided the most protection, and a mesh variation of the deerstalker came in second.
433. The Ben Silver Collection (800-221-4671) continues to offer a grand variety of regimental, university, old school, and other neckties, and many of them can (with a bit of research) be associated with the Canon; the autumn 1995 catalog is now available, and their address is 149 King Street, Charleston, SC 29401.
434. Steven T. Doyle has announced that the Wessex Press (founded two years ago by Steven and his partner Mark Gagen) has purchased the Gasogene Press from David L. Hammer, and Gasogene's books are now in Indianapolis. The Wessex Press will continue as a more general imprint (its next title will be THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Alvin E. Rodin and Roy Pilot), and Gasogene will continue to publish Sherlockian books. The new address for the Gasogene Press is: Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268; a list of available titles is available on request.
435. Carl L. Heifetz reports that The Pleasant Places of Florida have published THE CALENDRIAL CANON WITH HOLIDAYS HOLMESIAN, with a calendar of special occasions in 1996, and narratives by members of the society. The 20-page brochure costs $6.50 postpaid to the U.S. and Canada, $7.10 to Mexico, and $9.20 elsewhere), and Carl's address is 5490 Salem Square Drive South, Palm Harbor, FL 34685.
436. Playboy (Oct. 1995) has reported on the new series of commemorative Sherlockian pipes from Peterson Pipes of Dublin (Jun 95 #5). The "Rathbone" is available now; call 800-247-6653 (that's 800-24-SMOKE) for information on store locations.
437. Chris Redmond has reported that Ronald P. Graham died on June 24. He was one of the three founders of The Canadian Baskervilles (the first Sherlockian society in Canada), and he wrote a paper for The Baker Street Journal (Oct. 1946) suggesting that Sherlock Holmes when retired from detecting he devoted himself to research in organic and analytical chemistry. Graham was, as might be expected, a professor of chemistry, at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, and was dean of science there from 1962 to 1977.
438. Sep 95 #7: "The calculation is a simple one," as Sherlock Holmes once said, but there was some bad arithmetic in the story about the Credit Lyonnais (Aug 95 #6), as spotted by careful calculator Jack Kerr: the six hundred million francs lost by the bank actually is a mere $118 million.
439. Geoff Jeffery reports (found at a Book Warehouse in North Bend, Wash.) THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Wordsworth Classics, $5.00); the book has "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Sign of Four" in addition to the "Adventures" (which is reprinted with the Paget illustrations from The Strand Magazine), and the British publisher (Wordsworth Editions) states that there will be two more volumes and that the set will have all sixty stories; Christopher Roden reports that Wordsworth Classics sell for £3.99 in Britain, and that Wordsworth has published paperback editions (£1.00 each) of SIR NIGEL and THE LOST WORLD AND OTHER STORIES (with all of the Challenger stories).
440. Thanks to Ted Schulz for providing proof that Merrell Noden's pastiche "The Adventure of the Treacherous Traps" (Jul 95 #8) actually was published in the July 24 issue of Sports Illustrated. But it didn't appear all copies: only in some regional editions of the magazine.
441. "Sometimes they call each other 'Watson and Holmes,' wear deerstalkers, and study with a magnifying glass, just as Sherlock Holmes and his sidekick Dr. Watson searched for clues," wrote Dinitia Smith in a long story about Leona Rostenberg and Madeleine Stern in the N.Y. Times on Aug. 29. In 1942 they discovered that Louisa May Alcott, who wrote charming novels about New England domesticity, also wrote "blood and thunder" tales about transvestitism and hashish smoking and feminism and other shocking themes (published anonymously or under a pseudonym). Now in their 80s, the ladies have been in the rare-book business for almost 40 years, and their interest in Sherlock Holmes is not merely a passing fancy: Madeleine Stern has researched and written about Sherlockian (and Doylean) phrenology and about Holmes as a collector of rare books, and Leona Rostenberg included Sherlock Holmes in an article on "Bibliately: A History of Books on Postage Stamps".
442. Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" opens at the Globe Theatre in Regina on Dec. 6, 1995, and runs through Dec. 17 (it may be held over until Dec. 23); the box-office address is 1801 Scarth Street, Regina, Sask. S4P 2G9, Canada (306-525-6400).
443. Thanks to all those who reported on some recent television shows (which can be seen in repeats, if you missed them). On Sept. 9 the season opener of "Animaniacs" (broadcast by the Warner Bros. network) had a segment in which Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson helped Yakko, Wakko, and Dot Warner compete in a scavenger hunt, with the evil Professor Morey Archie making an appearance. On Sept. 17 the season opener of "The Simpsons" (on the Fox network) was "Who Shot Mr. Burns? Part Two" with Sideshow Mel doing a brief Sherlock Holmes impression (with Krusty the Clown as his Watson); Dan Castellaneta is the voice of Sideshow Mel.
444. Mark Alberstat's 1996 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
445. Sep 95 #8: "The Scarlet Letter" opens wide (as they say in the trade) on Oct. 13, starring Demi Moore, Gary Oldman, and Robert Duvall --and Edward Hardwicke in a supporting role (sorry, I don't know which one). And you should warn your kids not to write a book report after seeing the movie (the movie has a different ending than the book did). Someone once suggested to James M. Cain that what Hollywood had done to his books was awful. Cain replied: "Hollywood hasn't done anything at all to my books; they're still right up there on the bookshelf."
446. There are many reasons for the continuing popularity of the Sherlock Holmes stories, including their being used so widely in schools. And THE SHERLOCK HOLMES STUDY GUIDE, by Susan Thurman (Henderson: Class Act, 1995) is a fine example of this sort of use: the package includes the Dover Thrift Edition of SIX GREAT SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES (with Scan/RedH/Spec/Engr/Fina/Empt) and 44 pages of helpful study questions, vocabulary

- tests, ideas for study projects, and ideas for writing assignments. As well as a warning note to teachers about two words and phrases in the tales that today's students may think mean something other than what they meant when the stories were first published. $21.95 postpaid, and the publisher's address is Box 802-P, Henderson, KY 42420.
447. American Express provides those who have its top-of-the-line platinum card with extra benefits that include an opportunity to have questions answered. And someone asked American Express for the address of the nearest Sherlockian society, and someone at American Express apparently called The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and was told to call me, and did, and got the information needed. Maybe they'll do your kids' homework, too.
448. You've all seen "find the what-ever in this picture" puzzles for kids, but the puzzles in Games magazine are far from childish. The October issue has "Up in Smoke" (created by Lars Hokanson and Frances Cichetti), and all you need to do is find 30 pipes in an illustration that shows Holmes and Watson in the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street.
449. And here's a non-Sherlockian puzzle (well, I could have had Sherlock Holmes post the challenge, but I didn't):
- |                             |   |
|-----------------------------|---|
| A H I M O S T U V W X Y     | Which letter is in the wrong line? Why? |
| B C D E F G J K L N P Q R Z | I'll supply the answer next month.      |
450. Judy Burton reported on Sept. 26 that registration for the dedication of the John Bennett Shaw Collection in Minneapolis on Oct. 13-15 had reached 238 -- and that there still was room for late-comers. You can register by phone (and credit-card) by calling 612-625-3850.
451. Further to the request (Jun 95 #3) for Sherlockian panels from the 20 comic strips that will be honored by the U.S. Postal Service on a sheet that will be issued in October, the results so far total seven. And photocopies have been sent to those who responded to the request for help; others who might wish to see the results are invited to send me a #10 SASE.
452. Oct 95 #1: Spencer Schein notes some new bargains offered in a new catalog from Edward Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031): Chris Redmond's WELCOME TO AMERICA, MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES (item 489557; $4.95); IN BED WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES (489506; $6.95), and A SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK (item 489530; $7.95); all three are well-written, interesting, and recommended. And: William S. Baring-Gould's fine biography SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET (490393; $7.95). Postage is $3.00 extra per order.
453. And Dick Lesh reports that Hamilton offers THE ILLUSTRATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, adapted by Nigel Flynn and Richard Widdows (London: Multimedia Books, 1993) for $4.95; the 160-page book has adaptations of three of the long stories (Stud/Sign/Houn) with art-work from the Australian animations made in 1985 with Peter O'Toole's voice as Holmes; the adaptations were first published separately in 1985.
454. Another (possibly) Canonical site is for sale, according to a brief story in the Birmingham Evening Mail (Aug. 17), at hand from Jon Lellenberg. The site is Crowsley Park House, an Oxfordshire estate in Henley-on-Thames, and the story reports that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle lived nearby and is said to have borrowed the name of owner Henry Baskerville. It should be noted that the most widely-accepted source for the family name is Harry M. Baskerville (who was coachman to B. Fletcher Robinson, who was Conan Doyle's host for a visit to Dartmoor and suggested the "West Country legend" to him.
455. Last month's non-Sherlockian puzzle was:
- |                             |  |
|-----------------------------|--|
| A H I M O S T U V W X Y     | Which letter is in the wrong line? Why?  |
| B C D E F G J K L N P Q R Z | I'll supply the answer on the next page. |
456. Further to the report (Sep 95 #4) on Nigel Hayler's "Sherlock Holmes Event Guide" on his home page on the World Wide Web, you don't need to be a webcruiser to see the listing: send an e-mail message to <agora@www.undp.org>, leave the subject-line blank, and state as the text (without the quotation marks): "send <http://194.72.60.96/www/pwf/shevents.htm>".
457. The Dispatch Box is a four-page newsletter published in English by The Japanese Cabinet (a branch office of The Franco-Midland Hardware Company) with news of Sherlockian events in Japan: recent issues have included discussion of The Sherlock Holmes Pub in Osaka, exhibitions at Matsuzakaya department stores of Sherlockiana from the collection of Kiyoshi Tanaka, and the first performance of a Sherlock Holmes play in Japan (apparently Ferdinand Bonn's "Sherlock Holmes" produced by German prisoners of war in 1918). The newsletter costs $8.00 or £5.00 (currency, please) for four issues, from Yuichi Hirayama, 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181, Japan.
458. The October issue of Anglofile has a long tribute to Jeremy Brett, and the usual detailed coverage of British entertainment. "Reilly: Ace of Spies" will air on the History Channel in two-hour installments, Nov. 5-10, with Sam Neill as Reilly and many excellent actors in supporting roles, including David Burke as Stalin. The monthly newsletter gives detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
459. Oct 95 #2: Jennie Paton spotted another Sherlockian chess set in the new catalog from Time Warner's "Sound Exchange" (45 North Industry Court, Deer Park, NY 11729 (800-521-0042)); the catalog says that the pieces are "beautifully hand-decorated in subtle shades of green and grey" and the characters are based on "the original drawings that appeared in the Strand Magazine in 1890." $495.00 painted (#219626); $295.00 unpainted (#219618).
460. And the answer to the non-Sherlockian puzzle is: the letter S should be in the bottom line. All of the other letters in the top line have rotational symmetry around a vertical axis, and none of the letters in the bottom line have that rotational symmetry.
461. Conan Doyle likely was the first author to use THE LOST WORLD for the title of a book, and other authors have used the title since then (copyright laws don't protect titles of books). And THE LOST WORLD is the title of Michael Crichton's sequel to JURASSIC PARK. Reviewers of Crichton's new book (New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1995; $25.95) seem well aware of the borrowing from "the granddaddy of all dinosaur tales" (one reviewer's description). The new book opened at #1 on the best-seller lists, which will surprise no one who read JURASSIC PARK or saw the movie.
462. While the United States Postal Service was honoring classic comic strips in October, Canada Post honored Canadian comicbook superheroes in a booklet that included a stamp showing Superman. One assumes that many readers are wondering why Superman is Canadian: he was created by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, and Joe Shuster was born in Toronto. If you also are wondering why Superman is Sherlockian, Bill Rabe discovered that Jerry Siegel and fellow staffers on the Pacific edition of Stars and Stripes during World War II founded The Baker Street Irregulars of Honolulu (active 1944-46).
463. Roger Johnson reports in The District Messenger that the Croydon Clocktower Museum and Galleries will stage a major exhibition on "The Sherlock Holmes Experience" from Dec. 7 to Mar. 30. Conan Doyle once lived in Norwood, now part of the Borough of Croydon, and the exhibits will explore "the reality of Conan Doyle's Victorian London and the fictional world of the sleuth." The Croydon Clocktower is in Katharine Street, Croydon CR9 1HT, England.
464. Bruce D. Aikin reports in the latest issue of "A Very Irregular Newsletter" Vasily Livanov died earlier this year. He starred as Holmes in a series of dramatizations of Canonical stories on Soviet television from 1979 to 1985, and in 1986 provided the voice of Holmes for a Soviet animated film called "Sherlock Holmes and I". Two of the one-hour television shows are in circulation, dubbed into German and taped off-the-air when they were broadcast from East Germany, and they're fun to watch.

465. For those who don't yet have enough busts of Napoleon: John Baesch reports that the gift catalog from Monticello (800-243-1743) has a copy of the bust of a young Bonaparte that Thomas Jefferson owned ($40.00). John also notes that Robert Harris' new novel ENIGMA (New York: Random House, 1995; $23.00) involves the code-breaking activities at Bletchley; its hero Thomas Jericho carries a copy of the Doubleday THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES with him.
466. Oct 95 #3: Reported by Stu Shiffman: NEIL GAIMAN'S MR. HERO--THE NEWMATIC MAN is a new comic-book series from Tekno-Comix (2255 Glades Road #237W, Boca Raton, FL 33431-7383) (800-448-3566); Mr. Hero is a steampowered robot who once performed at Maskelyne's Egyptian Theatre (deceiving that a doctor in the audience was contemplating writing about a consulting detective) and is now accompanied by a young woman named Jenny Hale and is searching for a site in Sussex where he thinks he was created. Issue #10 (early Dec. 1995) reports on "The Hand of the Baskervilles" and has a Sherlockian cover ($1.95).
467. Jim Vogelsang reports a new Christmas ornament: "Gotta Have a Clue" shows Santa in a deerstalker, with pipe and magnifying glass, examining a "Clue" gameboard. It's item #139653 from the Enesco Corp. ($20.00); check your local card and gift shops. And Andy Peck reports that it's available to members of the Mystery Guild (Box 6325 Indianapolis, IN 46206) at $19.95.
468. "I have some knowledge, however, of ... the Japanese system of wrestling," said Sherlock Holmes (in "The Empty House"). A new Japanese stamp, at hand from Yuichi Hirayama, honors the 1995 World Judo Championships and shows two women contestants.
469. Sorry about that: the translators of the Japanese edition of Michael Hardwick's SHERLOCK HOLMES: MY LIFE AND CRIMES (Sep 95 #3) are Masamichi Higurashi and Naohiko Kitahara.
470. Further to the report (Sep 95 #7) on the Wordsworth Classics editions, Jim Coffin reports that he found all three volumes at Crown Books; $7.00 each. The three volumes (THE ADVENTURES SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and THE CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES) contain all sixty stories in facsimile from The Strand Magazine, except for the first two stories, which are set in similar two-column format. The new volumes apparently use the plates created for THE COMPLETE ILLUSTRATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (Ware: Omega Books, 1986) and then used in THE ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATED 'STRAND' SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Mallard Press, 1990).
471. Reported by Laura Kuhn: PAST IMPERFECT: HISTORY ACCORDING TO THE MOVIES, edited by Mark C. Carnes (New York: Henry Holt, 1995; 308 pp., $30.00); the contents include a four-page essay by David Cannadine on "Murder by Decree" (1979) that compares fact and fiction.
472. The Sept. 1995 issue of Baker Street W1 ("a Sherlockian journal from the western U.S.A.") offers news from west of the Mississippi, including John Farrell's interview with Marilyn Lewis, head of marketing for "Skeletons in the Closet" (which retails Sherlockian merchandise from the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office); $9.00 a year (three issues) from Jerry Kegley, 110 South El Nido #41, Pasadena, CA 91107.
473. H. Paul Jeffers, author of THE ADVENTURE OF THE STALWART COMPANIONS (1979) and MURDER MOST IRREGULAR (1983), also has paid tribute to the Canon in THE RAG DOLL MURDER (1987) and again in A GRAND NIGHT FOR MURDER (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1995), which Ben Wood describes as "a corking-good mystery" with references to the Canon and to the Baker Street Irregulars.
474. Oct 95 #4: Michael Coren's new biography CONAN DOYLE is due in November from Bloomsbury Publishing (£20.00); "the creator of Sherlock Holmes was much more than a populist writer: he was a paradox--a Catholic who rejected religion; a family man who loved another woman throughout his marriage; an atheist who adopted spiritualism."
475. The next volume from the Pequod Press will be LOOSE CANONS, a collection of John Ruyle's verse that includes his tribute to the late Jeremy Brett, and the cost is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper), available from the author at 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707. For those who unfamiliar with the fine Pequod pressings, it's a hand press, and John is an expert printer.
476. "Not a politician in sight, nor a trained cormorant," I wrote earlier (Jul 95 #2), when I reported on the postal service's new booklet of stamps that show five lighthouses. Eagle-eyed Don Hardenbrook notes that the stamp that shows the Spectacle Reef Lighthouse also shows some rare albino cormorants, which often are mistaken for seagulls. And of course it's possible that there's a politician somewhere in the shadows . . .
477. The 1995 issue of The Musgrave Papers (the annual published by The Northern Musgraves has 132 pages of scholarship, news, and reviews, with a great deal of excellent discussion of the humor that is found in the Canon, in the Sherlockian literature, and among Sherlockians everywhere (a well-illustrated interview with cartoonist Gahan Wilson is particularly interesting). Information on membership in the society is available from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. BD16 4DN, England.
478. Further to the amusing comments made by Miss Lemon about the "Baker Street societies and all that" (Sep 95): Chris Redmond spotted the quotation long before I did, and included it in his QUOTATIONS FROM BAKER STREET, which is a delightful 49-page compilation that still is available ($10.00 postpaid) from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
479. Ken Greenwald reports that he and The Baker Street Associates now are at work on a new series of 16 audiocassettes to be called MORE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, which will continue the series issued through Simon & Schuster (who told Ken that the Sherlock Holmes series sold better than all other S&S series other than "Star Trek"); Brilliance Audio (Box 887, Grand Haven, MI 49417) will issue the new series, and Ken would appreciate your writing to Brilliance to tell them you're looking forward to the series, and to ask them to let you know which stores will carry the cassettes. Ken also notes that a few copies remain of the 1987 commemorative record album of Rathbone/Bruce broadcasts that launched the series (the album has two LP records, and please don't ask me what an LP record is); details are available from Ken Greenwald at Box 351453, Los Angeles, CA 90035.
480. "It's a waste of talent and a yawn for Baker Street buffs provided they even catch the show before it closes," Variety's reviewer suggested when Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke opened in "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" at Wyndham's Theatre in Sept. 1988. The play ran for a year in London, and for eleven weeks more on tour in the provinces.

481. Oct 95 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 142nd birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 12, with the traditional festivities in New York. But the festivities actually will begin on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Allen Mackler and Charlie Shields will lead participants in the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with luncheon at McSorley's. Allen's address is 324 2nd Street NE, Osseo, MN 55369, and from Jan. 9 he will be at the Iroquois Hotel (212-840-3080).
482. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast (details are not yet available). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $32.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). Otto Penzler's open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) also is on Friday, from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm, and it is possible that Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
483. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at 24 Fifth Avenue (at 9th Street), and The Fortescue Symposium (sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, The Priory Scholars, and The Montague Street Lodgers) will convene at 6:30 pm at the St. Moritz Hotel at 50 Central Park South at

- 6th Avenue; $60.00 (Katherine Karlson, 1259 Fowler Place, Binghamton, NY 13903-6036). Early reservations are advised for the luncheon and the Fortescue festivities.
484. On Saturday a posse of purveyors will offer a wide variety of S'iana at the Algonquin (also known for the occasion as Covent Garden West) from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; vendor tables are available (Ray Betzner, 1535 South Jefferson Court, Lancaster, PA 17602). The Baker Street Irregulars will hold their annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, on Saturday afternoon (details are not yet available).
485. Mary Ellen Rich has once again kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about non-optional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. If you plan to arrive on Thursday, it is important to confirm the rates, and that the weekend-package rates include Thursday.
486. Dorset (30 West 54th St.): $149 (single/double, including Sunday brunch) (800-227-2348); Mansfield (12 West 44th St.): $145 (single/double, but ask about specials) (212-944-6050); St. Moritz (50 Central Park South): ask for the Fortescue rate: $125 (single) $140 (double) (800-221-4774); Wyndham (42 West 58th St.): $115 (single) $130 (double) $175 (suite) (212-753-3500); Wentworth (59 West 46th St.): $115 (single/double) (800-567-7220); Iroquois (49 West 44th St.): $99 (single) $125 (double) $150 (one-bedroom suite) (800-332-7220); Pickwick Arms (230 East 51st St.): $95 (single/double) $117 (triple) (212-355-0300); Edison (228 West 47th St.): $88 (single/double corporate rate) (212-840-5000); Portland Square (132 West 47th St.): $79 (single) $89 (double) $94 (triple) (212-382-0600).
487. Richard M. Olken (200 Hyslop Road, Brookline, MA 02146) offers a new sales list of books, pins, neckties, and memorabilia available from The Speckled Band of Boston. There's some fine writing in the anthologies of Sherlockian scholarship and humor perpetrated by the members of the Band.
488. Oct 95 #6: Sonia Fetherston reports that A&E cable has removed the "Sherlock Holmes" series from its Monday-evening lineup, effective Oct. 30, and has no plans to bring the series back soon; someone in their viewer-relations department told Sonia: "As you know, the show is out of production, and we felt that we should give it a rest." Cards and letters can be sent to programming director Brooke Baily Johnson, A&E Television Network, 235 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017.
489. The dedication ceremonies for the John Bennett Shaw Collection at the University of Minnesota this month were grand indeed, and great fun. There were more than 300 on hand for the festivities, including Dorothy Shaw and almost all of John and Dorothy's children and grandchildren. The University and the Library and The Norwegian Explorers worked hard to arrange a splendid conference, and made everything look far easier than it really was. And there are some fine collectibles for those who couldn't attend:
490. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE DETECTIVE AND THE COLLECTOR, edited by Lucy M. Brusic; a 188-page anthology of essays about John Bennett Shaw and his collection ($38.00 postpaid). The handsome conference poster is $16.70 postpaid, and the conference brochure (mailed to many before the conference, with lots of information about what went on) is $1.00 postpaid. Checks payable to "University of Minnesota" should be sent to: Shaw Conference Publications, 466 Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455.
491. Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD continues in print, offering a new generation of readers an opportunity to see where Michael Crichton found many of his ideas: a new edition in the Oxford Popular Fiction series (Oxford: Oxford Univ. Press, 1995; 189 pp., $7.95) also has an interesting Introduction by Yale University professor of English Ian Duncan.
492. Reported: an American edition of Colin Dexter's collection MORSE'S GREATEST MYSTERY AND OTHER STORIES (New York: Crown Books, 1995; 272 pp., $23.00); the British edition was published by Macmillan in 1993 (Jun 94 #4), and the contents include his amusing pastiche "A Case of Mis-Identity" (first published in WINTER'S CRIMES 21, 1989).
493. Kingsley Amis died on Oct. 22. He was the author of more than 20 novels, six books of poetry, and a volume of memoirs, beginning his career as one of Britain's "angry young men" achieved his first literary success in 1954 with his first novel, LUCKY JIM, and won the Book Prize in 1986 for THE OLD DEVILS. In an essay on "My Favorite Sleuths" (Playboy, Dec. 1966) he wrote that "Holmes is the memorable figure he is because Conan Doyle grasped the essential truth that the deductive solving of crimes cannot in itself throw much light on the character doing the solving, and therefore that character must be loaded up with quirks, hobbies, eccentricities. It is always these irrelevant qualities that define the figure of the great detective, not his mere powers of reasoning." Amis also wrote an Introduction for the Murray/ Cape edition of THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1974), and the script for a 1974 BBC-1 television program "Dr. Watson and the Darkwater Hall Mystery" (adapted as a short story in Playboy in May 1978).

494. Nov 95 #1: More details about the birthday weekend on Jan. 12-13: Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the Algonquin provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to order from the menu (reservations are not required). The Baker Street Irregulars will hold their annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30 at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (20th Street between Park and Third Avenues). There will be an open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the cost is $35.00 a person until Dec. 29 (checks payable to the Baker Street Irregulars should be sent to Donald E. Novorsky, 5182 Mahoning Avenue NW, Warren, OH 44483); tickets will be available at the door, at $40.00 a person.
495. Rooms at the Hotel Algonquin (single or double) are available at the Hotel Algonquin for $150.00 a night; no tax is due on reservations made through the BSI, and the offer is available to all Sherlockians; reservations with full names of all occupants, accompanied by payment (checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) should be sent to Thomas L. Stix, Jr. (34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648) to arrive no later than Dec. 15.
496. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI or the ASH is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully anonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by checks payable to John H. Watson and mailed (without return any address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, c/o Thomas L. Stix, Jr. (address as above); Tom forwards the checks unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity.
497. SHERLOCK HOLMES, BRIDGE DETECTIVE, by bridge expert (and Sherlockian pastichist) Frank Thomas, was first published in 1973 and now has been reissued by the Devyn Press, 3600 Chamberlain Lane #230, Louisville, KY 40241 (800-274-2221); $12.95 postpaid. Thomas notes that the game of bridge closely resembles a detective story, and has Holmes explain the fine points of the bidding and play of 44 bridge hands.
498. Vincent Starrett was a true bookman, and an essayist and a poet as well as a Sherlockian. And Peter Ruber, long an admirer of Starrett, has edited a new volume of Vincent Starrett's COLLECTED POEMS, with an introduction by Ruber and an afterword by Albert M. Rosenblatt. Starrett delighted in the sonnet, and his famous "221b" is only one of the Sherlockian sonnets in the book (which is the first in a projected 15 volumes in the "Vincent Starrett Memorial Library"). COLLECTED POEMS (194 pp.) is available from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; $27.00 postpaid.
499. Peter Ruber is hard at work trying to find Vincent Starrett's uncollected early work, and would greatly appreciate hearing from anyone who has access to 1917-1937 issues of the magazines Short Stories, Wayside Tales, Real Detective Tales, or Street & Smith's Detective Story Magazine, and 1920-1930 issues of Black Mask or Weird Tales. Peter's address is Box 502, Oakdale, NY 11769.

500. Nov 95 #2: "It is as impossible for man to demonstrate the existence of God as it would be for even Sherlock Holmes to demonstrate the existence of Arthur Conan Doyle." WISHFUL THINKING: A THEOLOGICAL ABC, by Frederick Buechner (New York: Harper & Row, 1973).
501. Richard L. Coe died on Nov. 12. He went to work for the Washington Post in 1938 as radio editor and assistant drama editor, and was the paper's drama editor from 1947 to 1979, and he worked hard over those many years to help his city grow from a one-theater town to a major theatrical center). In an article published on Oct. 6, 1974, he discussed Nicholas Meyer's THE SEVEN PERCENT SOLUTION and William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (then about to open at the Kennedy Center), and asked rhetorically, "How does one account for Sherlock's long-lived appeal?" His answer was: "Doyle created a vivid character, a strong, independent man, but whimsical and unpredictable as well."
502. If you didn't get the "Sherlock Hound Salt and Pepper Pups" offered by What on Earth last year (Sep 94 #5), they're in the new catalog offered by Joan Cook, Box 6038, Peabody, MA 01961 (800-935-0971); $16.75 for the set (50C-6138).
503. THE ADVENTURE OF THE FLABBY GRUNGE is the most recent installment in the saga of Turlock Loams, who now is investigating a murderous plot by Colonel Sebastian Marin against his brother Sebastopol, as reported by Dr. Fatso for the prolific Pequod Press. The cost is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper), from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
504. The manuscript of "The Dancing Men" (53 small quarto pages, plus a special title page, signed by Conan Doyle on the front cover) was offered for sale at a book fair in Fort Worth in October, for $250,000. The owner is Brian Perkins (the proprietor of Barber's Book Store, 215 West 8th Street, Fort Worth, TX 76102 (800-327-5471).
505. Edward Hardwicke needs no introduction to those who have enjoyed his portrayal of Watson in the Granada series and his readings on CSA Telltapes audiocassettes (Jul 93 #1 and Sep 93 #3). Tangled Web Audio now offers two audiocassette sets with new recordings by Hardwicke: SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF INTRIGUE (with Croo/Gree/Nava), and SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF SUSPENSE (with Suss/Cree/Spec); each set has two cassettes and costs $20.45 postpaid ($39.90 for two sets). The address is 3380 Sheridan Drive #167, Amherst, NY 14226 (800-249-2666 operator 616), and credit-card orders are welcome.
506. John Terry Bell died on Aug. 24. He was an actor, writer, and director, beginning his career as a child actor in the Los Angeles production of "The King and I", and in 1983 played the title role in the American Theatre Arts production of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in Hollywood.
507. Steven T. Doyle reports that publication of the ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Al Rodin is "imminent" (and that the book will have 280 pages and cloth covers and a dust jacket). Advance orders are being accepted by the Wessex Press, Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268; $37.70 postpaid.
508. Nov 95 #3: Caroline Gassner presides over The Shadows of the Elm at the Arroyo del Oso Elementary School in Albuquerque, and helps her students present half-hour video dramatizations of the Canon. This year's adventure was "The Boscombe Valley Mystery" Beeches", and a cassette (with a selection of out-takes) is available for $9.00 postpaid from Mrs. Gassner (P.O. Drawer G, Corrales, NM 87048-0178).
509. Al Greengold and Jan Stauber offer three lapel pins showing artwork by Sidney Paget (shown here actual size); $7.00 each postpaid, or $18.00 postpaid for all three (Al's address is 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044).
510. Reported: on Dec. 22 and 29 the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. radio series "Ideas" will repeat its two-part "The Casebook of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" (first broadcast in June 1994). The two one-hour programs have Barry McGregor as Holmes and Nigel Bennett as Watson, and interviews with enthusiasts and experts such as Chris Redmond, Michael Coren, Owen Dudley Edwards, Jon Lellenberg, and Christopher and Barbara Roden.
511. Reported by Jack Kerr: a catalog from Greybeard's Tobacconist & Gifts of Distinction), 211 Rehoboth Avenue, Rehoboth Beach, DE 19971 (800-414-7473) advertises a Sherlock Holmes hand-carved meerschaum pipe (#21A) at $80.00.
512. SHERLOCK HOLMES TRIUMFER (Kobenhavn: Forlaget Sesam, 1995; 287 pp.) is a new Danish translation, with ten stories, illustrations from The Strand Magazine, and a new foreword by Bjarne Nielsen.
513. The Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company (230 Baker Street, London NW1 5RT, England) has a new 12-page full-color catalog with a wide variety of attractive Sherlockiana (many visitors to London have also recommended the shop, which is on the east side of Baker Street, not far from 221B).
514. John Pforr spotted an Associated Press story about the Deerstalker Express, a sleeper train that runs from London to Fort William in the rugged Scottish Highlands: the six-car train has been making the 522-mile run through spectacular scenery and prime hunting grounds since 1894, but now is losing $4 million a year. British Rail had announced plans to shut down the run, but public protests will keep the train rolling.
515. Carol Wenk (Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107) offers sets of miniature books to fill your miniature bookshelves: one set of five books have Watson's name on the spines and titles of five stories on the covers (the pages are blank); the second set has Holmes' name on the spines and cover titles for five of his monographs. $5.00 postpaid per set.
516. The "Sly Fox" necktie (Jun 92 #6) is offered again in a new catalog at hand from Chipp II (9 Ethan Allen Lane, Stamford, CT 06903): the pattern shows a brown fox, wearing a green deerstalker and holding a magnifying glass on a navy (or medium blue) background; $27.25 postpaid, and they take plastic.
517. Nov 95 #4: I've not yet had any reports on anything Sherlockian at Bouchercon 26, held in Nottingham on Sept. 28-Oct. 1. But you can plan ahead for the world's largest mystery-fan convention: Bouchercon 27 will be in St. Paul on Oct. 9-13, 1996; Dennis Armstrong and Bruce Southworth are co-chairs (Box 8296, Minneapolis, MN 55408). Bouchercon 28 will be in Monterey on Oct. 30-Nov. 2, 1997, with Bryan Barrett and Bruce Taylor as organizers (Box 6202, Hayward, CA 94540).
518. Dante Torrese spotted Dudley the Dinosaur in material created by the American Dental Association for dentists to use during National Children's Dental Health Month (February). The stickers cost $4.95 for 100 (#W435), and there's a poster for $5.00 (#W318); non-members of the ADA pay 40% extra. ADA (Department. of Salable Materials, 211 East Chicago Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611 (800-947-4746).
519. Frank Darlington notes another theological quote: "The fact that thousands of people refused to believe that God was real is one side of the coin: the fact that almost as many refused to believe that Sherlock Holmes was fictitious is the other." From Derek Jarrett's THE SLEEP OF REASON: FANTASY AND REALITY FROM THE VICTORIAN AGE TO THE FIRST WORLD WAR (New York: Harper & Row, 1989).
520. British publishers keep Conan Doyle's grand "Brigadier Gerard" stories in print: THE COLLECTED BRIGADIER GERARD STORIES (Munslow: Hearthstone, 1995; 399 pp., £22.00 cloth, £9.50 paper) has an informative introduction by John Whitehead and presents the saga in chronological order; the cloth edition is distributed here by International Specialized Book Services, 5804 N.E. Hassalo Street, Portland, OR 97213 ($35.00). Hearthstone also has THE BEST SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES, CHOSEN BY THE AUTHOR (370 pp., same prices), with the twelve stories that Conan Doyle selected for a competition set by The Strand Magazine in 1927, plus two later stories that he regretted were too recent to qualify, and his explanation of "How I Made My List" (the cloth edition also is available here from I.S.B.S. at $35.00).

521. Modern Maturity (with the largest circulation of any magazine published in English) has an amusing essay by Roger Rosenblatt in the Nov.-Dec. issue, with a mention of the giant rat of Sumatra and an illustration by Guy Billout. Modern Maturity is published by the American Association of Retired Persons (3200 East Carson Street, Lakewood, CA 90712).
522. The latest issue of The Sherlockian Times has arrived from Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); it's their new 28-page catalog of Sherlockian books, pamphlets, cards, audiocassettes, pins, and much more.
523. Robert Stephens died on Nov. 12. He was a grand Shakespearean actor (he won the Olivier Award in 1993 for his performance as Falstaff in "Henry IV" and received a knighthood in the New Year's Honours List in Jan. 1995); he starred as a very human Sherlock Holmes in the film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) and played the title role in the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in Toronto in 1976.
524. Nov 95 #5: The Baker Street Pages offer a weekly pocket diary with a Sherlockian cover design (black, brown, gray, burgundy, or navy); $5.00 postpaid from Tim O'Connor (6015 West Route 115, Herscher, IL 60941). Tim also recommends a visit to the Christmas-gift department at your local Wal-Mart to seek their Sherlockian "bloodhound" plaster statue (the dog is 12" long and is wearing a deerstalker and holding a calabash); $19.98.
525. Foothill Video (Box 547, Tujunga, CA 91043) specializes in public-domain video, David Pearson has noted, and their catalog offers Sherlockian films that include "The Speckled Band" (1931), "Sherlock Holmes" (1932), "A Study in Scarlet" (1933), "The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes" (1935), "Silver Blaze" (1937), "The Woman in Green" (1945), "Terror by Night" (1946), "Dressed to Kill" (1946), and "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace" (1964), all at $7.95 each. And Archival Photography (14845 Anne Street, Allen Park, MI 48101) offers full-color photographic reproductions of posters for all the Rathbone/Bruce films at prices from $4.00 (8 x 10") to $20.00 (16 x 20").
526. Those who missed the Sherlock Bloodhound "country companion" offered by Wild Wings a few years ago (Mar 92 #5) can pursue a similar hand-painted figurine (5.25" high) now offered by The Cottage Shop, Box 4836, Stamford, CT 06907 (800-388-7660); $38.00 plus shipping.
527. Barbara Holmes (Jun 95 #2) reports that she's still accepting commissions for original Sherlockian artwork; she works in acrylics, and prices range from $48.00 (14 x 18") to $68.00 (20 x 24"). A color photocopy and details are available for $1.00 and a #10 SASE; Box 446, Scottsville, VA 24590.
528. J. Ed Newman's pastiche THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA, first published in 1972 as a nicely-printed pamphlet, is now available as a miniature book, from his JEN press, for $75.00 postpaid; 129 South Cory Drive, R.R. 2, Edgewater, FL 32141.
529. Sotheby's (34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England) will have some Conan Doyle material in an auction of "English Literature and History" on Dec. 18, including the twelve-volume Author's Edition (London: John Murray, 1903) inscribed by the illustrator Arthur Twiddle to his wife (estimated at £700-900).
530. Sam Fry reports yet another Sherlockian chess set, with pieces handmade in simulated wood, at $209.00 (the board costs $99.50, and both cost $299.00), offered by Past Times, 280 Summer Street, Boston, MA 02210 (800-242-1020).
531. Plan ahead: Anglofile reports that "To Play the King" (with Ian Richardson as Francis Urquhart) repeats on "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV beginning Jan. 28, followed by his new (and allegedly last) appearance as Urquhart in "Final Cut". And that Nicholas Meyer will direct the movie version of "The Avengers" for Warner Bros., with filming in London as soon as they get a new script (they couldn't get a major male star because the current script has John Steed subservient to his female partner). Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).

532. Nov 95 #6: HORSES OF DIFFERENT COLORS: A MONOGRAPH ON HORSES IN THE TIME OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, illustrated with artwork of the period, is the seventh volume in Donald Girard Jewell's continuing Sherlock Holmes Natural History series; the 34-page pamphlet costs $12.95 postpaid from the Pinchin Lane Press, 4685 Geeting Road, Westminster, MD 21158-1720.
533. Ben Wood offers a convenient (5.5x4.5" unopened) 1995 SHERLOCKIAN CALENDAR (with notes on some of the Sherlockian red-letter days); the cost is $2.50 postpaid ($4.00 or £3.00 in cash for foreign orders). Ben's address is Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222-0740.
534. Dave Galerstein spotted something new from Royal Doulton: a resin "character sculpture" of Sherlock Holmes, designed by Robert Tabbenor. The figurine is 8.5" high and portrays Sherlock Holmes on Dartmoor, watched by one of the ravens that inhabit the area, and costs £99.95 in Britain. Royal Doulton USA, 701 Cottontail Lane, Somerset, NJ 08873 (908-356-7880) will be delighted to tell you where your nearest Royal Doulton Shop is. The catalog number is HN3751.
535. Faithful readers may recall John Aidiniantz's past efforts to require the Royal Mail to deliver letters addressed to Sherlock Holmes at 221B Baker Street to Aidiniantz's Sherlock Holmes Museum rather than to the Abbey Bank (where Sherlock Holmes' secretaries have been handling his mail since the 1930s). The attempts were unsuccessful, but I've now heard that a letter that was sent to Sherlock Holmes at 221B Baker Street in October received an answer from the Museum. Only one report, however, and lots of other letters still are being delivered to Abbey House, so the one letter may have been handled by a new carrier on the route. Has anyone else heard reports of mail going to 239 rather than 221 Baker Street?
536. It's always fun when a Sherlockian brings real expertise to the Canon, and uses that expertise to illuminate the sometimes murky corners of the world of Sherlock Holmes, and Patricia Guy has done exactly that, in her BACCHUS AT BAKER STREET (Romford: Ian Henry, 1995; 136 pp., £9.95). She discusses the wine and beer and spirits found in the Canon, and the brewers and the vintners and the barkeepers and the wine-merchants, with flavor and humor and an occasional surprise. The publisher's address is 20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England; that's a postpaid price in Britain; $25.00 postpaid elsewhere (credit-card orders welcome).
537. Rebecca Anderson has good news for those who liked THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE and A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN: Laurie R. King reports that the next book in the series about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes will be LETTER OF MARY, tentatively scheduled for publication next summer, and there may be a fourth book in the summer of 1997. THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE, by the way, is scheduled in paperback from Bantam in January at $5.50.
538. Congratulations to Hizzoner: Albert M. Rosenblatt was elected to another fourteen-year term as judge in New York, and he won handily, as they say at the track. Of course it helped that he was endorsed by both the Republican and Democratic parties and was listed on both lines on the voting machines.
539. Nov 95 #7: CONAN DOYLE, by Michael Coren (London: Bloomsbury, 1995; 213 pp., £18.99), is a new biography, and it's both entertaining and informative. Authors aren't responsible for publisher's blurbs, so don't be put off by claims that it's a definitive biography, or that Conan Doyle was an atheist, or that Conan Doyle loved another woman throughout his marriage (Coren notes in the text that he did not have access to the family archives, and does not suggest that Conan Doyle was an atheist, and reports that Conan Doyle married Louise Hawkins in 1885 and first met Jean Leckie in 1897). Coren has some new information discovered in G. K. Chesterton's papers, but otherwise depends greatly on previous biographers (but there also is some evidence that Coren wrote more than his publisher was willing to publish, perhaps aiming at a general public more than at Sherlockians and Doyleans, who may be disappointed at finding little material that is truly new).

540. Christopher Roden offers a discount on Coren's book: postpaid prices are £15.99 (U.K.), £16.99 or $27.00 or CA$37.00 (elsewhere by surface mail), $30.50 or CA$42.00 (North America by airmail), and $31.50 (elsewhere by airmail). Checks payable to the Arthur Conan Doyle Society can be sent to him at Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester CH4 0JG, England.
541. The Jan. 1996 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine has an imaginative Sherlockian cover by Richard Parisi, and S'ian stories by Gene DeWeese and Stephen Murray (nicely continuing the magazine's long tradition of celebrating Holmes' birthday with Sherlockiana).
542. Cynthia Wein (65 Briarwood Lane, Plainview, NY 11803) offers a newly-commissioned Sherlockian pen, with a hand-painted ceramic barrel that takes a Bic refill; $16.75 postpaid (U.S.), $18.50 (Europe), $19.50 (Asia and Africa).
543. David McCallister reported to The Pleasant Places of Florida recently on "The Face of the Tiger: A Rogue's Gallery of Latin American Rulers"; his seven-page paper draws upon descriptions in Wm. Eleroy Curtis' THE CAPITALS OF SPANISH AMERICA (1888), and the illustrations show some of the candidates proposed by Sherlockian scholars as the original for Don Murillo of San Pedro. Copies of the paper are available from David (at 8142 Quail Hollow Boulevard, Wesley Chapel, FL 33544) in return for a #10 SASE and 25c (or an IRC).
544. From This Old House (Box 468, Almont, MI 48003) offers a wide variety of "Personality Dollar Bills" with a list of possibilities ranging from Hank Aaron to Robert Young available for substitution as the portrait on U.S. currency. The list includes Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson (impersonated by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce), and the final product is thoroughly realistic. $3.95 each (three for $9.95) plus $0.75 postage.
545. THE DYNAMICS OF A FALLING STAR, by John Hall (Leeds: Tai Xu Press, 1995) is a 32-page monograph on the late Professor Moriarty, examining his history, character, career, family, and associates. The cost is £4.50 postpaid (in Britain) or $10.00 postpaid (elsewhere, in currency, please); his address is: 20 Drury Avenue, Horsforth, Leeds, LS18 4BR, England.
546. Nov 95 #8: The fifth annual Watsonian Weekend (celebrating Dr. Watson and the Battle of Maiwand) will be held in and near Des Plaines, Ill., on July 19-21, with a dinner, an chance to watch Dr. Watson "Meet the Press", a horse race, and other festivities. More information is available from Susan Diamond, 2851 North Pearl Avenue, Melrose Park, IL 60164-1421.
547. Willis Frick has relayed a report from the Crowborough Courier (Nov. 17) on some controversy in Crowborough. The Town Council and Chamber of Commerce have joined to propose a Sherlock Holmes Festival in the fall of 1996, with the aim of revitalizing the town, but Malcolm Payne, curator of The Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment, has written to the festival's steering committee complaining about the title of the festival and suggesting that at least two years should be given to project planning. Chamber president Tony Charlton said that festival proposals include a Sherlock Holmes exhibition and literary, film, and theatrical events.
548. Sonia Fetherston spotted the caricature of Gil the Iguana at the Gilbert House Children's Museum in Salem, Oregon, where there's a "Secret Sleuth" detective exhibit. The museum is a hands-on children's museum that emphasizes creative learning for children aged 2-12, and is housed in two restored Victorian homes, one of which belonged to the family of A. C. Gilbert, who was born and raised in Salem and went on to Erector set and American Flyer train fame. Gil the Iguana is the museum's mascot, and the exhibit is funded by Lightning Powder (a company that makes and sells finger-print dusting powder for law-enforcement agencies).
549. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner at Ralph and Kacoo's in New Orleans on Nov. 7 to honor (as always) the world's first forensic geologist. Visitors attending the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America were welcomed by local Sherlockians led by Robin Leckee, and a special toast was offered to the absent geologists who named a pteranodon in honor of Arthur Conan Doyle. Our peripatetic society will meet next in San Diego in May 1996 and in Denver in October 1996.
550. Further to earlier reports (Dec 91 #2 and Jun 92 #5) about the conversion of the Isle of Dogs into a mixed-use community, the project appears to be alive, though not yet well, and Canadian developer Paul Reichman is part of a consortium that is proposing to buy the project for £800 million. Reichman's family investment company Olympia & York took control of the project in 1987, masterminding construction of the Canary Wharf complex, which has the (among other attractions) a 50-story office building that is the tallest in Europe. The company and project went bankrupt in 1992, but Reichman now has financial backing from CBS-TV chairman Laurence Tisch, Saudi Prince al-Waleed bin Talal, and other rich investors, and his new consortium now controls Canary Wharf again. And yes, there is a Sherlockian connection: Holmes and Watson rounded the Isle of Dogs in pursuit of the dainty Aurora and the Agra Treasure.

551. Dec 95 #1: Dorothy Beverly West died on June 30. She was a young Dorothy Beverly in 1934, when she was working with Gladys Norton and Katherine McMahon at Mrs. Cowlin's Open Bookshop in Elgin, Ill., and carried their completely-correct solution of the famous crossword puzzle to Christopher Morley in New York, thus helping all of the ladies qualify for membership in The Baker Street Irregulars. Morley often stayed with her family when his travels took him through Elgin, but never invited any of the ladies to a BSI annual dinner. She received the BSI's "Queen Victoria Medal" in 1990, and was one of our very few links to the earliest days of The Baker Street Irregulars.
552. It has been a while since I've mentioned Bossons' "wall sculptures": their 1995 mini-folder, at hand from Tim O'Connor, shows all their models, including some attractive Victorians (Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, and, in case you need more, a fireman and a bobby). The company has many distributors, and their address is W. H. Bossons (Sales) Ltd., Brook Mills, Mountbatten Way, Congleton, Cheshire CW12 1DQ, England.
553. Gayle Harris notes that the latest catalog from Fusion Video offers a 92-minute videocassette of "Hands of a Murderer" (the 1990 television film starring Edward Woodward) at $29.95 (item #9635); this is the first report of this program on cassette that I've seen, but it's also likely available elsewhere. The catalog has lots of other Sherlockian video, and "Macbeth" (with Jeremy Brett); 17311 Fusion Way, Country Club Hills, IL 60478-9906 (800-959-0061).
554. Michael Ross has reported that Erich Schellow died on Nov. 25. He was a respected actor on the German stage, and portrayed Sherlock Holmes in six television films broadcast in Germany in 1967 and 1968. Earlier this year Von Herder Airguns Ltd. published Uwe Sommerlad's SCHELLOW HOLMES, a well illustrated 48-page booklet honoring the actor, with text in German and summary in English; $12.00 postpaid (currency, please) from Michael Ross, Bendheide 65, 47906 Kempen, Germany.
555. Bernie O'Heir notes that the new Johnson Smith catalog of "Things You Never Knew Existed" has a 100% woolen deerstalker (item 9762) in sizes M-L-XL for $19.98; Box 25599 (Dept. J9510), Bradenton, FL 34206-5500.
556. The fall 1995 issue of the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library News has a report on Sherlock Holmes' recent visit to Toronto, where he planned to retrieve the Great Mogul diamond for its rightful owner in England, but was foiled by Professor Moriarty, who then hid the gem somewhere in the Bloor-Yorkville area. And that provided the Bloor-Yorkville Business Improvement Area an opportunity to challenge residents of Toronto to help find the gem, and local businesses to create Sherlockian window displays. Copies of the newsletter are available from Victoria Gill, Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada; no charge.

557. Dec 95 #2: The Easton Press published THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES in 1987 in three leather-bound volumes, each with a color frontispiece, reprinting the Heritage Press edition published in 1952 and 1957. The set is handsomely produced, and available again at $41.85 per volume postpaid, and the address is 47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857 (800-367-4534).
558. Peter Calamai has forwarded David J. Brazier's story from The Independent (Nov. 24) about the new 1996 RUPERT ANNUAL (Pedigree Books, £5.50) in which Rupert time-travels to join Sherlock Holmes in the fight against Victorian crime in London. Brazier notes sadly that times have changed, suggesting that in the 1940s Rupert Bear helped parents in the moral education of their children, and laments that in the 1990s "Ruppert is still a winsome enough character, but he has relinquished his grasp on the ethical nettle."
559. Robertson Davies died on Dec. 2. He was a journalist, and an actor and director, and later in his life a novelist, and above all a Canadian who won many admirers for his work. It was as a journalist that he wrote in "A Writer's Diary" in the [Calgary] Herald Magazine in 1961 that he wished he liked detective stories, and described himself as "temperamentally unsuited to this sort of diversion," and confessed that "I have had it in for Great Detectives since boyhood, when I read Sherlock Holmes, and failed utterly to fall under his spell." But you will find Sherlockian allusions in his novels, so he must have remembered what he had read.
560. "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Journey" is the title of an eight-day tour to Switzerland organized by Gemmi Travel next year (five times, in May, June, July, August, and September) with stops in Montreux, Leukerbad, Kandersteg, and Meiringen; additional information and an attractive flier are available from Gemmi Travel (attn: Hilary Jenkins), The Barn Studios, Carters Lane, Old Woking, Surrey GU22 8JG, England.
561. An "anthology of gloriously stodgy essays" is the way an anonymous reviewer in Newsweek (Dec. 4) described Otto Penzler's reprint of H. W. Bell's BAKER STREET STUDIES in Otto Penzler's "Sherlock Holmes Library" (and the review was in the section of books for "for men only").
562. Murray Shaw, author of the fine series of children's books MATCH WITS WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES, has written and illustrated an imaginative new tale: THE CASE OF THE CLEVER KIPPERED HERRING, in which all the characters are cats; 32 pages, with hand-colored artwork, and the cost is $8.50 postpaid (3601 North 5th Avenue #106, Phoenix, AZ 85013-3732).
563. Further to the earlier report (Nov 95 #5): Nicholas Meyer has been replaced by Jeremiah Chechik ("Benny and Joon") as the director of the film version of "The Avengers" (according to Anglofile), and Variety reports that Nicole Kidman is a possibility as Emma Peel. Anglofile also notes that Mobil will stop sponsoring "Mystery!" at the end of the current season (in June 1996), but will continue funding "Masterpiece Theatre".

564. Dec 95 #3: First day covers for the British set of stamps issued in 1993 in honor of Sherlock Holmes are still available here and there: an FDC with the Royal Mail's official cachet and a 221B Baker Street postmark is offered by the International Stamp Collectors Society, Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408; $14.95 postpaid (credit-card orders welcome).
565. James B. Reston died on Dec. 6. He was a splendid journalist, winning two Pulitzer prizes and the respect of both his readers and the people he wrote about in the N.Y. Times for fifty years. The journalists he hired to work in the paper's Washington bureau praised his guidance and support. And in his book DEADLINE: A MEMOIR (New York: Times Books, 1992) he wrote: "During our London years, when I was learning my craft, various famous characters gave me a hand without knowing it. I am indebted, for example, to Sherlock Holmes, who was always complaining that Dr. Watson was often at the scene of the crime but failed to notice the incriminating details. 'You looked but didn't *see*, Watson!' This encouraged me thereafter to notice the little giveaway expressions on presidents' faces and telltale gaps in their arguments."
566. Victoria Gill suggests that those who collect translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories may wish to contact Pannonia Books: The Hungarian Bookstore (Box 716, Station P, Toronto, ON M5S 2Y4, Canada); their latest sales-list has eight Canonical titles in paperback (CA$11.90) and cloth (CA$14.50).
567. The cold-cast porcelain Sherlock Pocket Dragon (3" high) costs $48.00 (item HA510), and the Watson Gargoyle (2.5" high) costs $27.50 (item HA522) in a new catalog received from Dancing Dragon, Box 1106, Arcata, CA 95518-1106 (800-322-6040).
568. Lee Shackelford has reported to The Hounds of the Internet on a letter that Meg Moller Martin received from Linda Pritchard (who was Jeremy Brett's companion during his last years). She wrote that: "Some of my friends and I have had a plaque in memory of Jeremy put up in Wyndham's Theatre, Leicester Square, London [where he acted in the play 'The Secret of Sherlock Holmes']. Edward Hardwicke unveiled the plaque, which is in the bar by the Royal Circle, and bears the inscription 'I have lost a friend whom I regarded as the best and wisest man I have ever known.'"
569. Carol Barnett (3562 N.E. Liberty, Portland, OR 97211-7248) is a bookseller specializing in gardening books from the Victorian and Edwardian eras (for those who want to know more about gardens in Sherlockian times).
570. The fall 1995 issue of Friends of the Library (the newsletter published by the University of Minnesota Libraries) notes that in Jan. 1996 the University of Minnesota will ask the Minnesota State Legislature for $43 million to build the Minnesota Library Access Center; the Center will have space for eight archives and special collections, including the Sherlock Holmes Collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Judy Burton, 499 Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, MN 55455.

571. Dec 95 #4: Plan ahead: the next Canonical Convocation and Caper in Door County, Wis., is scheduled for Sept. 13-15, 1996, with Sherlockian scholarship, fun and games, and many of the usual suspects (because the event is fully booked quite early each year); contact Donald B. Izban, 5334 Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago, IL 60639-1524.
572. David Dunnett died on Sept. 15. He kept the memory green in Fort Worth for many years, founding The Sherlock Holmes Birthday Commission in 1979, and in 1980 The 1st Bangalore Pioneers (in which he served as acting Colonel, succeeding the late Colonel Sebastian Moran), and he was active in Civil War reenactments, his and imaginative Christmas greetings to Sherlockians were envelopes sent each year from Texas cities and towns with Canonical names, from Moran (1977) and Moulton (1978) to Cleveland (1993) and Athens (1994). David's mother has donated his Sherlockian collection to the University of Minnesota.
573. William Hyder's FROM BALTIMORE TO BAKER STREET is a fine collection, with thirteen pieces, four being essays reprinted from The Baker Street Journal and Baker Street Miscellanea, plus other essays and dramatizations from the Sherlockian weekends held annually at the Enoch Pratt Free Library. Philip Shreffler describes Bill's "The Martha Myth" as one of the two best papers published in the BSJ during Philip's editorship, and it is only one of the items that ably demonstrate Bill's style and skill and humor. The 216-page book costs $27.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
574. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES JOKE PORTFOLIO is a new item offered by Cadds Printing (59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, London); there are 32 black-and-white cartoons by Peter Rochford, with captions by Hugh Scullion and Joel Senter, looseleaf in a leatherette cover for $35.00 postpaid, or $9.00 postpaid as a stapled booklet. US dollar checks are welcome, if made payable to Mrs. Ferrara.
575. Jerry Margolin recommends a series of fantasy novels by Brian Lumley called NECROSCOPE, and notes that the latest volume is NECROSCOPE: THE LOST YEARS (New York: Tor Books, 1995; $23.95) (and due in paperback next year); Harry Keogh is the hero, who can talk with the dead and is searching for a serial killer who believes he's a werewolf, and whose name is Arthur Conan Doyle Jamieson.

576. The fall 1995 issue of The Armchair Detective has an excellent tribute to the late John Bennett Shaw in the "Report from 221B Baker Street" by Sherry Rose-Bond and Scott Bond, and an interesting exploration "In the Footsteps of Peculiar Companions: From Doyle to Dexter" by Cushing Strout. $31.00 a year (quarterly); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019-3808.
577. Skeletons in the Closet (1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033) is run by the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office to raise funds for the local Youthful Drunk Driving Program, and continues to offer imaginative merchandise that includes "Sherlock Bones" (a skeleton in appropriate costume) on T-shirts, tote bags, playing cards, and mugs, and they have an illustrated sales list (funds are used to support the Youthful Drunk Driver Visitation Program, which is an alternative sentencing option in the Los Angeles area).
578. Dec 95 #5: As reported earlier, Bouchercon 28 will be in Monterey, Calif., on Oct. 30-Nov. 2, 1997. And Mike Kean reports that The Diogenes Club of the Monterey Peninsula has been asked to put together one or two Sherlockian sessions. If you're planning to attend the convention and would like to participate in the Sherlockian agenda, please get in touch with Mike (3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953).
579. Ramesh C. Madan has reported that Dr. G. Krishnamurthi died in 1993. He was an orthopedist who had "boned up thoroughly on Holmesiana" according to an article in the [Madras] Indian Express (July 11, 1988), and had studied in Edinburgh as Conan Doyle had. Dr. Krishnamurthi established a Sherlock Holmes Museum in Mylapore, and he founded The Sherlock Holmes Society of Madras (which was dissolved when he died).
580. Philip R. Brogdon's SHERLOCK IN BLACK: BEING PROFILES OF PAST AND PRESENT REAL LIFE SHERLOCKIANS covers a wide range: actors from Bert Williams to Marcia Hewitt, entertainers from The Coasters to Wah Wah Watson, namesakes, and many more. The 29-page pamphlet is available for $11.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
581. Catherine Cooke reports that the Criterion Bar in Piccadilly, which closed a few months ago, has now reopened, and looks more Victorian than ever (and the plaque honoring Watson's meeting with Stamford is still there); the new owner is Marco Pierre White, a young and trendy chef who has three Michelin stars, so the restaurant is now even less likely than in the past to be the haunt of impoverished invalidated-out Army doctors.
582. Harlan L. Umansky ("Jonathan Small") died on Nov. 20. He served for many years as a high school principal in New Jersey, and was one of the founders of Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers. He was a scholar and an enthusiastic collector, and received his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1981. His most recent contribution to The Baker Street Journal was an article in the Sept. 1991 issue on echoes from the Bible in our Canon.
583. C. H. Liddiard has forwarded to alt.fan.holmes a report in The Times (Dec. 11) that "A 30-ton granite rock on Hound Tor, Dartmoor, which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle said inspired his story 'The Hound of the Baskervilles', has been toppled and smashed by a gang of youths thought to be trying to start a landslide."
584. Dick Rutter has recommended THE ADVENTURES OF HUXTABLE HOLMES AND SPROCKET WATSON, by Glen Frank (Acworth: Huxtable Press, 1993; 84 pp. $9.95); Huxtable and Sprockett are teddy bears, and solve three cases (for kids aged 8-12). The book is available from Laissez Faire Books, 938 Howard Street, San Francisco, CA 94103 (800-362-0996); $13.20 postpaid.
585. William H. D. Cotrell Jr. died on Dec. 22. He was Walt Disney's right-hand man, beginning his career as a cameraman and in 1952 heading the division that designed and built Disneyland. According to the obituary published in the Los Angeles Times, he was an avid Sherlock Holmes fan, and was credited with suggesting the idea that led to the animated feature "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986); it is more likely, one suspects, that Cotrell suggested that the studio make a film based on Eve Titus' "Basil of Baker Street".
586. Dec 95 #6: Malcolm Payne reports that the Crowborough Town Council plans to include a life-size bronze statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the new Town Centre (and "the best-known and most-reputable sculptors" will be asked to submit drawings); funds for the statue will be raised by donation, and details are available from David Harris, The Town Hall, Crowborough, East Sussex, England.
587. Joe Coppola has spotted "A Very Curious Desk Caddy Indeed" in Wood Magazine (Jan. 1996): the article has full-sized patterns and detailed instructions for making a handsome Sherlockian desk caddy (all you need is some walnut, cedar, maple, mahogany, translucent plastic, tools, and skill). 1912 Grand Avenue, Des Moines, IA 50309-3379; $4.95.
588. Sophisticated Shirts (8712 East 33rd Street, Indianapolis, IN 46226) (800-259-7283) offer a wide variety of "genius" T-shirts and sweatshirts, with one of them showing Watson and Holmes on the front and Moriarty on the back (artwork by Sidney Paget); white-on-black, sizes M/L/XL/XX; postpaid prices are $21.00 (T-shirts) and $34.00 (sweatshirts).
589. Reported: THE WINGED WHEEL, a new pastiche by Peter H. Wood; available from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; $27.00 postpaid.
590. Joan Wood's recipes from Mrs. Hudson's Kitchen have been featured in many issues of the Communications from The Pleasant Places of Florida, and she now offers MRS. HUDSON'S HANDBOOK OF SHERLOCKIAN COOKERY, BOOK NO. 2 (49 pp.) for $10.00 postpaid ($15.00 outside the U.S.); Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222-0740.
591. Bernie O'Heir notes some interesting prices at an auction of old movie posters at Sotheby's in New York on Dec. 7: $6,037 (including the 15% buyer's premium) for a French two-panel poster (94 x 63") for "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939), and $1,380 for a three-sheet poster (41 x 81") for "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" (1942).
592. Tom Galbo reports news from BDD Audio, the American marketer of cassettes with the BBC Radio 4 series starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams: THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, VOL. I was released in April, VOL. II is due this month, and VOL. III in June 1996; each volume has two cassettes and four stories, and the price should be about $16.00 per volume.
593. Some British financial news, with a few familiar names: the Granada Group (which owns Granada Television, which produced the Jeremy Brett series), has launched a £3.4 billion hostile takeover bid for Forte (which owns and operates restaurants and hotels that include the Ritz in Madrid, the George V in Paris, the Hyde Park Grosvenor House in London, and the Travelodge chain in the United States). And Forte, attempting to generate some quick cash now for shareholders, plans to sell its British restaurants and hotels to Whitbread (which owns and operates The Sherlock Holmes pub in London) for £1 billion.

Jan 96 #1:

1. The birthday festivities in New York were a relatively easy commute for all those who arrived on Thursday (the day that people who had been marooned in the city for three days were able at long last to escape), and not quite as easy for those who arrived on Friday (by which time it was snowing again), and it was bright and sunny by Sunday, and presumably everyone made it home safely, except for those who never left home in the first place (and there were a few who decided not to make the trip from Oregon and Minnesota).
2. Thursday evening still is the time for informal gatherings (a few members of The Hounds of the Internet and their friends dined on mutton chops and other delicacies at Keen's Chop House), but there was no Aunt Clara Sing at O'Lunney,s (because there's no longer an O'Lunney,s).

3. Friday began with the Mrs. Hudson Breakfast at the Hotel Algonquin (where sometimes the lobby seemed to be populated entirely by Sherlockians during the weekend), and continued with the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Restaurant, where Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague Joffe, and Paul Singleton presented a new play by Andrew about what really happened when Arthur Conan Doyle first met William Gillette. And Otto Penzler's open house on Friday at the Mysterious Bookshop offered collectors an opportunity to see (and of course to purchase) some of the treasures Otto brought back from the London auction of Stanley MacKenzie's collection.
4. The Baker Street Irregulars gathered at 24 Fifth Avenue, where Mike Whelan toasted Barbara Herbert as *The* Woman during the pre-dinner cocktail party (Barbara then went on to dine at the Algonquin with other ladies who have received that honor), and the evenings' entertainment included the usual traditions, imaginative toasts by Bob Katz to the Second Dr. Watson and by Sherry Rose-Bond to Peter Steiler the Elder, Shirley Purves' tour of the moors (with thoughts on a computerized Sherlock Holmes), and Ev Herzog's rhyming tribute to her fine collection of M's.
5. Irregular Shillings and Investitures were awarded to Steven T. Doyle ("The Western Morning News"), Ralph Hall ("Smack! Smack! Smack!"), Hugh Harrington ("Wisteria Lodge"), Peter Horrocks ("The Inner Temple"), Kate Karlson ("The Evening Standard"), John E. Pforr ("Police-Constable Cook"), Marsha Pollak ("A Small But Select Library"), and Robert J. Stek ("The Mysterious Scientist"). And Bob Thomalen received the BSI's Queen Victoria Medal in recognition for his work as Cartwright (a post from which he has retired). Tom Stix announced that Mike Whelan succeeds Bob as Cartwright, and that Tom and Ruthann Stetak are now the BSI's joint Simpsons, taking over the secretarial duties that the late John Bennett Shaw performed so well for many years.
6. The Fortescue Symposium also convened on Friday evening, at the St. Moritz Hotel, where the entertainment included Jan Stauber's description of what it's like to arrive in the world of Sherlockians, Francine Kitts' report on entries in her contest that sought answers to the question "What would you give for the box?" (Dr. Watson's battered tin dispatch-box), and presentations by Barbara Fleming on bootlaces and (in verse) on "The Tale of the Pinch of Victor Lynch".

7. Jan 96 #2: On Saturday morning the huckster room at the Algonquin (known temporarily known as Covent Garden West) offered a wide variety of Sherlockian wares that included newly-published Sherlockian and Doylean books, as well as the usual assortment of old-and-rare and new-and-artistic material. The BSI Saturday afternoon cocktail party at the National Arts Club offered a pleasant venue and excellent food and drink and conversation that were briefly interrupted by the entertainment: Al Rosenblatt reported poetically and melodiously on both the Sherlockian year and the BSI dinner, a hotly-contested auction for eager collectors raised more than $1,000 for the John H. Watson Fund, and Mike Whelan presented the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article in last year's Baker Street Journal to Margaret K. Nydell (who received an attractive certificate and a check for $500).
8. The Morley-Montgomery Award will be offered again for the best article in the BSJ in 1996, and potential contestants are invited to send submissions to Donald K. Pollock (19 Putnam Street, Buffalo, NY 14213. Don is the new editor of the BSJ, beginning with the March 1996 issue (Tom Stix's message announcing the change, and thanking Bill Cochran for his work over the last three years appeared in the Sept. 1995 issue).
9. Samuel Rosenberg died on Jan. 5. He was a photographer, playwright, stage manager, artist, literary consultant, and the author of NAKED IS THE BEST DISGUISE: THE DEATH AND RESURRECTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1974). Michael Harrison thought that the book "certainly set the deductual cat amongst the Sherlockian pigeons," and Rosenberg did indeed find many critics who were outraged by the analysis and analogy presented in that book and in a essay in Harrison's BEYOND BAKER STREET: A SHERLOCKIAN ANTHOLOGY (1976). But there also were many who enjoyed Rosenberg's new approach to the Canon and to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (his book sold well in cloth and paperback editions), and it was delightful to spend time with him (he was one of the speakers at a Sherlockian symposium at Colorado State University in 1975, and attended at least one annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars). He sometimes genially claimed to be a trivialist, but whether in person or on the printed page he was a guaranteed antidote to boredom.
10. The current issue of Anglofile quotes British press reports that ITV has axed the "Poirot" series (there still are some shows not yet aired here). A decline in the ratings was cited: the latest shows had only half of the 14 million viewers the series had at first (and the shows aren't cheap, at £1.2 million each). But consider: the United States has about four times the population of Britain. There aren't all that many shows on the air in the United States that have more than 28 million viewers. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
11. Something new, and nicely done: "Sherlock Through the Magnifying Glass: A Female Perspective" was dramatized by David Stuart Davies and performed for the first time for The Northern Musgraves in 1992; now Classic Specialties has produced an audiocassette performed by Vanessa Maroney, who also reads an introduction written by Catherine Cooke. There are has some interesting insights into the Canon, and some imaginative surprises, in the 60-minute cassette. $13.45 postpaid to North America from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 ($14.95 to Europe, $16.45 elsewhere).

12. Jan 96 #3: Jack Tracy notes that the new MERRIAM-WEBSTER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA OF LITERATURE (Springfield: Merriam-Webster, 1995) has entries for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and The Hound of the Baskervilles; the anonymous author of the entry on Conan Doyle didn't confirm the titles of all the Sherlock Holmes book, but it's nice to see continuing attention paid to the Canon and its author.
13. Readers who enjoyed Kim Newman's ANNO DRACULA (in which Mycroft Holmes and other members of the Diogenes Club were working to overthrow Vlad Tepes, who had married the Widow of Windsor and was ruling as Prince Consort and Lord Protector) likely will want to read the sequel, THE BLOODY RED BARON (Carroll & Graf, $21.00). According to Tim Sullivan's review in the Washington Post (Dec. 31), the book is a fanciful tale of vampire flying aces: Prof. Ten Brincken and Dr. Mabuse have turned Richtofen and his brethren into huge bat-winged night flyers, and the Germans have hired Edgar Allan Poe (who was vampirized by his child bride Virginia) to write about them.
14. "Every last one of them," said Altamont of the signals he had brought to Von Bork, "semaphore, lamp code, Marconi." Great Britain honored Marconi last year (the centenary of the first wireless message) with a pair of stamps showing him as a young man (with early wireless equipment) and as an older man (using a radiophone). Thanks to John Baesch for spotting this philatelic Sherlockiana and for confirming that the sinking ship in the design of the 60p stamp is the Titanic. That tragedy was not the first use of the S.O.S. signal, but it did result in a public exchange of letters between George Bernard Shaw and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the [London] Daily News in May 1912.
15. The birthday blizzards marooned Ben and Joan Wood in Florida, so they were unable to see their Sherlockian wares at the Algonquin. But a sales list of philatelic and other material is available from Benton Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222-0740.
16. Cheryl Hurd reports that her local public radio station carries a 30-minute weekly series called "NPR Playhouse" and (nice news for listeners where the series airs) that "The Cases of Sherlock Holmes" began on Jan. 14. This is a series recorded in Britain by Independent Radio Drama Productions (with Edward Petherbridge as Holmes and David Peart as Watson), and broadcast in the United States in 1991 and in Britain in 1992. The original series had

- "A Study in Scarlet" (in 6 episodes), "A Scandal in Bohemia" (2 episodes), "The Speckled Band" (2 episodes), "The Valley of Fear" (9 episodes), "The Five Orange Pips" (2 episodes), and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (2 episodes).
17. Robin Leckbee has reported that one of the floats in the Mardi Gras parades in New Orleans will feature Sherlock Holmes. Endymion's parade on Feb. 17 will have "Great Storytellers" as its theme (this won't be the first time that an image of Holmes has been used to honor the man who created him, of course). Mardi Gras now gets national television coverage, but there's no way of knowing whether or when we might see the float on the air.

  18. Jan 96 #4: A GRAND NIGHT FOR MURDER (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1995; 213 pp., $20.95) is the latest novel by H. Paul Jeffers, whose earlier Sherlockian works include THE ADVENTURE OF THE STALWART COMPANIONS (1978) and MURDER MOST IRREGULAR (1983). The new book involves the murder of the Mystery Writers of America's newest grand master, who has a host of enemies (including a book dealer who is an enthusiastic Sherlockian), many Sherlockian allusions, and some nice twists in the plot.
  19. A new catalog at hand from Femmes Fatales (Box 3457, Lakewood, CA 90712-3457) (800-596-3323), with many mystery-related items, decorative and otherwise, including attractive pins (3" high) designed by Glyn Swanson. One of them (as might be expected) is Sherlockian; item J101 ($27.95).
  20. Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" will be produced at the Ted Paul Theatre at Mankato State University, Feb. 1-11, 1996. The box-office address is: MSU Theatre Arts, Box 8400, Mankato, MN 56002 (507-389-6661).
  21. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRUTH ABOUT LUDWIG II, by Zeus Weinstein, is Richard R. Rutter's translation of SHERLOCK HOLMES: DIE WAHRHEIT UBER LUDWIG II, first published by Deutsche Verlagsanstalt in 1978. Zeus Weinstein is the pseudonym of Peter Neugebauer, who has contributed some fine Sherlockian scholarship to the German literature. His pastiche brings Holmes (posing as an American journalist) and Watson (posing as an American millionaire) to Bavaria in 1886, unable to prevent the death of the "mad king" who was responsible for some of Europe's most romantic castles. $27.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
  22. Nellie Brown notes that the Quality Paperback Book Club now offers Loren D. Estleman's SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. DRACULA and DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HOLMES in one volume ($12.95); Camp Hill, PA 17012-0001 (800-348-7128).
  23. William Hjortsberg's NEVERMORE (Oct 94 #5) is now available in paperback (New York: St. Martin's Paperbacks, 1996; 302 pp., $5.99); the novel brings Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Houdini to New York in 1923, where they are involved with Opal Crosby Fletcher (a provocative and beautiful medium) and a mysterious serial killer (who copies murders described in Edgar Allan Poe's stories, and whose targets include Conan Doyle and Houdini).
  24. "Richard III" is now in the theaters: Ian McKellen is executive producer, wrote the screenplay, and plays the title role, and other actors include Maggie Smith, Annette Bening, Nigel Hawthorne, and Edward Hardwicke (as Lord Stanley, played as an Air Vice Marshal who joins Richmond's forces, taking the RAF with him). The play is set in the 1930s, and McKellen is playing Richard as a fascist leader.
  25. The World Wide Web, which now is much more than a hideaway located in stray corners of the Internet, has a growing list of Sherlockian home pages, one of which is maintained by Chris Redmond (and which has links to most if not all of the others). During the first 17 days of 1996 he averaged 93 hits per day; you can see what's available by telling a computerized friend that the URL is <<http://watserv1.uwaterloo.ca/~credmond/sh.html>>.

---

  26. Jan 96 #5: David Healy died on Oct. 25. He was born in Texas, according to information at hand from David Morrill, but found an acting career in Britain, on stage and screen and television. He played a fine Watson to Ian Richardson's Holmes in the television film "The Sign of Four" (1983), and he played Aloysius Moran in "The Noble Bachelor" (1991) in the Clive Merrison series on BBC Radio 4.
  27. Delicate Arch (in Arches National Park) is featured in McRay Magleby's design for our new stamp honoring the centennial of statehood for Utah, and (indirectly) "A Study in Scarlet".
  28. Helen Commodore spotted the announcement of a one-session "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" at the New School in New York City on Apr. 26 (taught by Arthur Liebman, in costume, with Nickelodeon piano accompaniment by Joyce Ann Liebman); course 0537, 8:00-9:30 pm, $10.00 (212-229-5690).
  29. Plan ahead: an International Sherlockian Congress in honor of "The Devil's Foot" will be held at Perth in the Swan River Colony on Oct. 4-6, 1997. If you are considering a journey to Australia and would like more information about the festivities, you can contact Douglas Sutherland-Bruce, P.O. Box 74, Sawyers Valley, W.A. 6074, Australia.
  30. A fine way to listen to the Sherlock Holmes tales is when Dr. Watson tells them himself; Edward Hardwicke does just that, and does it well, in two new audiocassette sets available from Tangled Web Audio: SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF INTRIGUE (with Croo/Gree/Nava) and SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF SUSPENSE (with Suss/Cree/Spec). Each set contains two cassettes and costs $20.45 postpaid ($39.90 for two sets); 3380 Sheridan Drive #167, Amherst, NY 14226 (800-249-2666 operator 616); credit card orders welcome.
  31. Jennie Paton reports a box of "34 Tiny Toon Adventures Mystery Valentines" with 34 cards with Sherlockian motifs on the back (and more cards inside); apparently the similar box last year sold well enough to be repeated (the new box is a minor variant). About $2.00 (check your local drug stores).
  32. "Lasting Impressions" is the newly-chosen title for the celebration by The Bootmakers of Toronto of their silver anniversary, at the Arts and Letters Club in St. George's Hall, on June 26-29, 1997. If you would like to be on the mailing list for news about the gathering, the address is 30 Elm Avenue #210, Toronto, ON M4W 1N5, Canada.
  33. Jon Lellenberg was the first to report John McPhee's "The Gravel Page" in The New Yorker (Jan. 29). McPhee has been explaining geology to non-geologists since 1980, and the magazine's lead-in to his latest article suggests that: "The most frightening crimes have no witnesses except the ground on which they were committed. And from that alone forensic geologists illuminate cases in a way that would impress Sherlock Holmes, the science's first practitioner." McPhee was aware from the very start that "detective work is what geologists do," and his article offers a well-written exploration of how geologists help solve crimes today, and careful acknowledgement of Sherlock Holmes' contributions to the science he invented (and the title "The Gravel Page" is taken from the Canon).

  34. Jan 96 #6: THE THINKING MACHINE: JACQUES FUTRELLE, by Freddie Seymour and Bettina Kyper (Dennisport: Graphic Illusions, 1995) is a fine biography of a mystery writer who was only 37 years old when he died on the Titanic in 1912; his "The Problem of Cell 13" still is widely reprinted in anthologies of mystery stories, and Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen rated two appearances (played by Douglas Wilmer) in the British television series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" in 1971 and 1973. The book also has some of his stories, and is available from Seymour/Kyper Productions, Box 1369, Sandwich, MA 02563; $12.00 postpaid.
  35. Cadds has issued a Sherlock Holmes Diary for 1996: spiral bound, with page size 6 x 8.25" and a page for each week, with small illustrations (mostly by Paget) and Canonical quotes. Available from Cadds Printing (59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England; $11.00 postpaid (checks payable to Hugh Scullion).

36. Sherlockian tourists have long enjoyed visiting Sherlockian sites with the help of David Hammer's series of guidebooks, and now there's an opportunity for a guided tour of one of the Canonical tales, with Brad Keefauver as the almost-always-genial expert in charge of the tour. Readers of Brad's work in the BSI and Plugs & Dottles and The Dangling Prussian APA already know his fine style, humor, and imagination, all on display in his THE ARMCHAIR BASKERVILLE TOUR (New York: Magico Magazine, 1995; 153 pp.). Brad takes a party of tourists through "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and it's a grand tour indeed, at least until some members of the tour group vanish in the midst of the tour (and the story). The tour allows the tour guide to offer some intriguing insights into the story, and to answer some unasked-untilnow questions, and it's an enjoyable excursion. $27.00 postpaid from the publisher (Box 156, New York, NY 10002).
37. Our new booklet showing five winter flowers includes a stamp portraying crocuses, which are mentioned twice in the Canon (in "The Speckled Band" and "The Empty House").
38. A new catalog from 800-Trekker, Box 13131, Reading, PA 19612 (800-873-5537) has collectibles for "Star Trek", "The X-Files", and "Doctor Who", including a videocassette of Tom Baker in "Doctor Who: The Talons of Weng-Chiang" (1977) at $19.95; the Doctor is in Sherlockian costume, in Victorian London, fighting giant rats.
39. Vincent Price did some grand work in a career that lasted 55 years, and he was a splendid Ratigan in "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986). THE COMPLETE FILMS OF VINCENT PRICE, by Lucy Chase Williams (New York: Citadel Press, 1995; 290 pp., $19.95) offers a biography (with interviews with his friends and fellow stars), a filmography, stills, posters, and much more.
40. "In the vaults of Cox was an old tin box, With Watson's name on the lid." Jay Finlay Christ wrote many years ago, asking "What wouldn't we pay for that box today, And the secret notes there hid?" Francine Kitts wonders what modern Sherlockians would give for that old tin box, and will welcome brief and imaginative suggestions; her address is 35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301-4019.

41. Jan 96 #7: Thanks to Janice Fisher and Herb Tinning for forwarding an item in Florence Fabricant's column in the food section of the N.Y. Times (Jan. 24): D. R. Finley, president of the Eerie Establishment restaurant company (which includes the Jekyll and Hyde Club on the Avenue of the Americas near 57th Street), plans to open the Sherlock Holmes this spring, at 176 West 4th Street (near Jones Street).
42. It is a pity that some admirers of Sherlock Holmes are not acquainted with some of the other grand tales told by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. One of the best of those tales is THE LOST WORLD, and a fine way to explore that book is in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin (Indianapolis: Wessex Press, 1996; 264 pp., $34.95). The annotated version offers a wellresearched introduction, and annotations, and appendices that cover topics that include the 1925 silent film and the fascinating archival material to be found with the manuscript of the story in the Berg Collection at the New York Public Library, and the wonderful illustrations from both the British and the American periodical appearances of the stories. And there is THE LOST WORLD itself, of course, still full of romance and fun, and enhanced by excellent contributions from Pilot and Rodin. The publisher's address is Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268; $37.70 postpaid.
43. "Cousins' fairy tale casts a spell over Hollywood film-makers" is the headline on a story in The Times (Jan. 9), kindly forwarded by Pat Ward. The cousins are Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths, and the fairy tale involves the Cottingley fairies that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle thought really had been photographed by the schoolgirls in 1917. And the Hollywood film-makers are Paramount, now planning to make "The Golden Afternoon" at Pinewood studios and on location in Yorkshire this spring.
44. Visitors to London can choose from a variety of guides to London pubs (and they still are wonderful places to see London and Londoners at their best). John Baesch notes that the NICHOLSON LONDON PUB GUIDE (1995) has cover art showing the Peter Cushing side of the sign for The Sherlock Holmes.
45. The Hounds of the Internet (which has almost 500 members who meet out there in the electricity) now have a lapel pin (one inch square) based on artwork by Stu Shiffman, available from David L. Hobbet (816 Hill Street, Shelby, NC 28152; the cost is $3.50 postpaid to U.S. addresses; $5.00 postpaid to other countries (checks in dollars or U.S. currency, please).
46. CELEBRITY VAMPIRES is an anthology edited by Martin H. Greenberg (New York: DAW Books, 1995; 31 pp., $4.99), with stories that include "Dracula on the Rocks" (by Carole Nelson Douglas, starring Irene Adler), "A Singular Event on a Night in 1912" (by Roman A. Ranieri, starring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker), and non-Sherlockian tales by Jerry Neal Williamson and Patti Nead Elrod.
47. The annual meeting of The STUD Sherlockian Society will be held on Mar. 9 at the Ridgemoor Country Club in Chicago, and the weekend also will feature a meeting of The Solar Pons Breakfast Club and a visit to the site of Vincent Starrett's grave on Mar. 10. Additional information is available from Donald B. Izban, 5334 Wrightwood Avenue, Chicago, IL 60639-1524.

48. Jan 96 #8: New York had many attractions in January in addition to all the Sherlockian birthday festivities, including interesting exhibits at the New York Public Library, which is celebrating its centennial with a display of one hundred "Books of the Century" (1895-1995); the books are in various categories, one of which is "Popular Culture & Mass Entertainment". And the eighteen books in that category range from Bram Stoker's DRACULA to Tom Wolfe's THE BONFIRE OF THE VANITIES, and include a copy of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.
49. The fourth installment in the BSI's archival-history series is IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS OF THE MID 'FORTIES, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 1995; 392 pp., $24.95), covering the period from the Trilogy Dinner in March 1994 to Christopher Morley declaration in June 1947 that there would be no more BSI annual dinners. Those were interesting days, and the book includes reports by Ted Schulz (on The Scowrers and Molly Maguires of San Francisco), Ronald Mansbridge (on Basil Davenport), Hugh Harrington (on Clifton T. Andrew), Russell McLaughlin (on The Amateur Mendicant Society of Detroit), and Allen Robertson and Paul S. Clarkson (on The Six Napoleons of Baltimore), and fascinating tales of feuds and foibles and furor, and photographs from the Trilogy Dinner and the annual dinners in 1946 and 1947, and much more. The annual-dinner photographs are welcome indeed, because Bill Vande Water has managed to identify almost everyone in them, so you'll be able to see what people looked like half a century ago. $27.90 postpaid ($28.90 postpaid for international orders) from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
50. The 15th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held at the Holiday Inn Conference Center in Dayton on Mar. 15-17, with papers, a banquet, and readers-theater presentations of "the Solitary Cyclist" and "A Duet: With an Occasional Chorus". Additional information is available from Jean C. Rodin, 3041 Maginn Drive, Beavercreek, OH 45434.
51. Dick Lesh notes that bargain-books catalogs from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031-5000) continue to offer all sort of Sherlockian bargains, Nicholas Meyer's THE CANARY TRAINER ($6.95) and the British edition of Mark Frost's THE LIST OF SEVEN ($4.95).
52. And a few commercials: the revised 15-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, *The* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.15 postpaid. The 74-page list of 682 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for the 413 active societies, costs

- $3.80 postpaid. A run of address labels for 347 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.35 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.
53. For the electronically enabled, the 15-page list of Irregulars and others is available from me as e-mail (no charge), and both lists are offered by Willis Frick via ftp from <ftp://sanar.kaiwan.com/user/Sherlocktron/> or on the Web at <http://www.kaiwan.com/~sherlock/stro1.html>.

  54. Feb 96 #1: David M. Martill continues to find and name new fossils from the Lower Cretaceous formations of Brazil. The pterosaur "Arthurdactylus conan-doylei" (Sep 95 #2) had been joined by the tetrapod "Irrigator challengerii" (which is described in great detail in the Journal of the Geological Society, vol. 153, 1996, pp. 5-8, at hand from Bill Sarjeant). It's the first real dinosaur to be described from the Santana Formation: it was carnivorous, and it had a crested skull up to 840 mm long (that's just under 3 feet). The name "Irrigator" derives from the irritation that Martill and his fellow authors felt when they discovered that the snout had been artificially elongated by the professional fossil-hunter who found and sold the skull, and the name "challengerii" honors Professor George Edward Challenger, of the Lost World.
  55. Martill notes in correspondence that "Irrigator challengerii" is the first fossil named in 1996 (the JGS is published on the first day of the year), and he says that if enough new fossils turn up he hopes to honor everyone else in Challenger's party ("Summerleetator and Youngfellowmeladosaurus are names to get your tongue around").
  56. Two of Britain's best-known landmarks are for sale, at a combined asking price of £5.5 million, according to a story in the Yorkshire Post (Jan. 8), at hand from Jon Lellenberg. They're John o' Groats and Land's End, and both are owned by Gulf Resources Pacific (of New Zealand); John o' Groats consists of 20 acres, and attracts more than 250,000 visitors a year, while Land's End is 100 acres and has 500,000 visitors a year. Sherlockians, of course, will want the one that's mentioned in the Canon: "A draghound will follow aniseed from here to John o' Groat's," said Sherlock Holmes in "The Missing Three-Quarter". John o' Groats (as it's spelled in the guidebooks now) is named for a man named John who built a house there in the 15th century, and it is romantically regarded at the northernmost place in Britain (it's in Caithness, in the northeastern corner of Scotland). It isn't the northernmost place in Britain, actually (that's Dunnet Head, about 12 miles to the west), but the tourists don't care.
  57. Jerry Siegel died on Jan. 28. He was a high-school student in Cleveland in the 1930s when he and classmate Joe Shuster invented Superman, who became a world-famous superhero as well as one of the most popular characters in the history of comic strips, films, and television. During World War II Siegel and others on the staff of the Pacific edition of Stars and Stripes founded The Baker Street Irregulars of Honolulu (active 1944-46).
  58. Reported by Don Hobbs: a colorful poster (18 x 26") showing a very stylized Sherlock Holmes urging "Smart Skin Care: It's Elementary", offered by the American Academy of Dermatology, Box 2289, Carrol Stream, IL 60132 ($5.00).
  59. Kathy Barry-Hippensteel's "Little Sherlock" doll ("a clever little boy who thinks he's the world's greatest sleuth") was heavily promoted in 1989 and 1990 by the Ashton-Drake Galleries at $87.00, and now it's available as an "heirloom ornament" for your Christmas tree a recent catalog, at hand from Jack Kerr. It's in a set of three 3" ornament (the other two aren't Sherlockian) that's item #96909 ($33.79 postpaid). Ashton-Drake Galleries, Box 856, Morton Grove, IL 60053 (800-346-2460); credit-card orders welcome.

  60. Feb 96 #2: THE YOUNG WITCHES is a thoroughly adults-only six-issue comicbook mini-series from Eros Comix; it's a porno Jack the Ripper story, and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson make an appearance in the second issue (Dec. 1995), and may well turn up in the next issue. The cover price The cover price is $3.50, or $4.00 postpaid from the publisher (Box 25070, Seattle, WA 98125).
  61. Norma Schier died on Nov. 17. She was a mystery novelist and short-story writer, and one of the founders of the Rocky Mountain chapter of the Mystery Writers of America; her imaginative collection THE ANAGRAM DETECTIVES (1979) offered pastiches of famous detectives, including Hoskell Chomers and Sandwort in "The Adventure of the Solitary Bride" by Aldon Canoy, and Mooch Sheckls and Tweany in "The Adventure of the Boing! Ritual" by Rif H. Lobster.
  62. Jennie Paton reports that "Wishbone: The Slobbery Hound" is now available on a commercial videocassette from Polygram Video. This is the "Hound of Baskervilles" episode of the 30-minute PBS-TV children's series that has Wishbone (a Jack Russell terrier) encouraging kids to read good books. If your local video shop has never heard of Polygram, the address is 825 8th Avenue, New York, NY 10019 (800-825-7781).
  63. Conan Doyle proposed the principal toast ("The Immortal Memory") at the Edinburgh Burns Club Dinner on Mar. 23, 1901 (the meeting was postponed from January because of the death of Queen Victoria), and on Jan. 25 this year the Royal Mail honored The Immortal Memory on the 200th anniversary of the death of Robert Burns with a set of four stamps designed by Tayburn McIlroy Coates. The 19p stamp is especially nice for Sherlockians, with the "wee sleeket, cowran, tim'rous beastie," made famous in Burns' poem "To a Mouse" (it was in "The Copper Beeches" that Violet Hunter said of Edward Rucastle that he showed "quite remarkable talent in planning the capture of mice"). Thanks to Catherine Cooke for her capture of this philatelic mouse.
  64. CANONICAL CRIME SCENES & INVESTIGATIONS, VOLUME 1, by William H. Conway and Linda L. Conway (Cincinnati: Classic Specialties Books, 1995) offers a new approach to the Canon: summaries of 14 cases done as official crime-scene reports; the 54-page spiral-bound book costs $17.95 postpaid from Classic Specialties (see above), and there are many more books and other Sherlockiana in their new illustrated catalog.
  65. Warren Randall plans to honor the late Bob Brodie in a collection that will be called "The Log of the 'Gloria Scott'" and would like to hear from those who corresponded with Bob about Sherlockian matters or who have reminiscences of Bob that you would like to share. Warren's address is 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720-1346.
  66. If you don't have a local Wal-Mart, their Sherlockian "bloodhound" plaster statue (Nov 95 #5) is described as a coon dog in the Dec. 1995 catalog from Thompson & Co. (Box 30303, Tampa, FL 33630) (800-237-2559) and offered for $29.95 plus shipping. The catalog, kindly forwarded by Laura Kuhn, also has a set of Holmes and Watson meerschaum pipes at $57.50.

---

  67. Feb 96 #3: The winter 1996 issue of The Armchair Detective has arrived, with Daniel Stashower's excellent tribute to and interview with Jeremy Brett. And Scott and Sherry Rose Bond's regular Sherlockian column discusses collecting, with an account of their experience bidding in the auction of Stanley MacKenzie's collection. $31.00 a year (quarterly); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019-3808.
  68. Michael Dibdin's THE LAST SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY (1978) has been reprinted as a trade paperback (New York: Vintage Books, 1996; 190 pp., $10.00); the pastiche pits Sherlock Holmes against Jack the Ripper.
  69. Laurie King reports that the Bantam paperback of THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE will be issued this summer as part of their "read mysteries" promotion, and the book will be prominently featured in a display rack decorated by Edward Gorey (who unfortunately has not drawn a portrait of Mary Russell). A LETTER OF MARY, the third title in the series, is due in November, and Laurie is now working on the fourth book, which involves Mary in a mysterious case on Dartmoor.

70. Don Hobbs spotted a "Barnes & Noble Classics" edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES with an Introduction by Eric Ambler ($5.98); it's a reprint of the volume published by John Murray and Jonathan Cape in London in 1974. They published all nine volumes of the Canon, so Barnes & Noble may reprint all of them eventually.
71. Michael Brady has forwarded the Sherlockian design used by the Background Investigation Unit of the California Youth Authority.
72. The Wigmore Street Post Office is an electronic journal published on the Prodigy computer service, but some of its material can be found in an ink-on-paper journal of the same name; the winter 1995 issue has 40 pages, and subscriptions cost $6.00 a year (two issues) from Donald H. Meyers, 4757 47th Avenue NE, Seattle, WA 98105.
73. The last six shows in Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series are now available on commercial videocassettes from MPI video: all 41 shows are offered by Scarlet Street Video (Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452) at $19.98 each; write for their price list (which has other Sherlockian videos as well).
74. Karl Gunnar Ekblad suggests that visitors to Norway might enjoy a visit to Sherlock's Pub at C.J. Hambros pl. 5 in Oslo (telephone 2241-8218).
75. Ray Betzner reports that autograph dealer Robert F. Batchelder offers some Conan Doyle material: item 161 in catalog 101 consists of 14 items relating to spiritualism, including three autograph letters from Conan Doyle to Mrs. Cadwallader, an American from Chicago whom he apparently met during one of his American visits; there's also a note from Lady Doyle written in 1932, and the price for the lot is $2,200. Item 214 in catalog 102 is a letter from Conan Doyle about spiritualism, and the price is $1,400. The dealer's address is 1 West Butler Avenue, Ambler, PA 19002 (215-643-1430).
76. Feb 96 #4: Diana Ver Nooy, who is editor of Neurology Reviews (a journal for neurologists), has begun a continuing quote-of-the-month feature; the first one (titled "Phrenologically Speaking") is in the Jan.-Feb. 1996 issue, and should be familiar to Sherlockians: "You interest me very much, Mr. Holmes. I had hardly expected so dolichocephalic a skull or such well-marked supra-orbital development. Would you have any objection to my running my finger along your parietal fissure? A cast of your skull, sir, until the original is available, would be an ornament to any anthropological museum. It is not my intention to be fulsome, but I confess that I covet your skull." Suggestions for futures issues can be sent to Diana c/o CPG, 4 Brighton Road, Clifton, NJ 07012.
77. Don Pollock reports O XANGO DE BAKER STREET, by Jo Soares (Sao Paulo: Companhia das Letras, 1995); it's a pastiche that brings Holmes and Watson to Rio de Janeiro to investigate the disappearance of a valuable Stradivarius during Sarah Bernhardt's first visit to the city. And it's available from Luso-Brazilian Books, Box 17028, Brooklyn, NY 11217; $28.95 postpaid (they take plastic, and have an e-mail address <lbooks@aol.com>). And in Portuguese, Don notes, there's a chapeuzinho ("little hat") accent over the O's in XANGO and Jo.
78. Barbara Holmes has designed a set of ten Sherlockian notecards available (with envelopes) for $4.90 postpaid, and a design sheet showing the pencil sketch artwork on the notecards is offered in return for a self-addressed stamped envelope; her address is Box 446, Scottsville, VA 24590.
79. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will convene on Wednesday, May 22, at Luigi's in San Diego, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. Sherlockians and geologists are welcome to join in honoring the world's first forensic geologist; Luigi's is at 861 West Harbor Drive, in Seaport Village (next to the convention center), and the festivities will begin with cocktails at 7:00 and continue with dinner at 8:00; reservations are not needed.
80. The Jan. 1996 issue of Baker Street W1 offers news from Sherlockian societies west of the Mississippi, excellent articles about Sherlockian rooms, both full-size and miniature, and John Farrell's review of the punk rock song "Quick, Watson" on the Stiffs, inc. debut recording "Nix Nought Nothing" (American Records CD 9-43030-2); subscriptions are $9.00 a year (three issues), from Jerry Kegley, 110 South El Nido #41, Pasadena, CA 91107.
81. Peter H. Wood's THE WINGED WHEEL is a new novel-length pastiche that brings Holmes and Watson to the Isle of Man in 1912, investigating a mystery that involves both the "Old Religion" and a German plot, and that offers Watson an opportunity to participate in a Manx motorcycle race. The 180-page book is available from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; $27.00 postpaid.
82. John Ruyle, who occasionally masquerades as ringmaster of the Quaker Street Irregulars, has announced a new collection of poetry from the Pequod Press: WIGGINS & COMPANY deals with Irregulars and other odd characters and will be (as usual) set and printed by the proprietor of the Press. 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
83. Feb 96 #5: Further to the report (Jan 96 #7) on the Sherlock Holmes Pub (which is due to open later this year at 176 West 4th Street in New York), John Baesch has reported that it will be across the street from The Slaughtered Lamb Pub (honoring "An American Werewolf in London") and not far from the Jack the Ripper Pub, all owned by Eerie Entertainment Inc.
84. The Easton Press has published a new "Collector's Edition" of the Canon in three leather-bound volumes that reprint the text of The Limited Editions Club set and, for the first time, all of the fine introductions (as well as Edgar W. Smith's "Note on the Collation" and his "Epilogue"); the previous sets from Easton have been reprints of the Heritage Press version, which did not have all of the additional material. The Limited Editions Club set was warmly welcomed by Sherlockians, not only for its carefully edited text but also for its excellent illustrations and the new introductions (by Vincent Starrett, Elmer Davis, Fletcher Pratt, Rex Stout, Anthony Boucher, and Christopher Morley, all still names to conjure with). Each volume of "The Leather-Bound Complete Sherlock Holmes" has a color frontispiece (Richard Sparks' new portrait of Conan Doyle in the first volume, and illustrations by Frederic Dorr Steele in the other two), and the cost is $41.85 postpaid per volume; the address is 47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857 (800-243-5160), and they accept credit-card orders.
85. Philip Weller reports that The Franco-Midland Hardware Company has issued a new edition of Arthur Conan Doyle's short story "The Winning Shot" (which has been reprinted from the original appearance in Bow Bells in 1883), with a new introduction, illustrations, maps, and more than 300 textual annotations. £7.00 or $14.00 postpaid (£8.00 or $16.00 for airmail) (please send dollar payments in U.S. currency), and the address is 6 Bramham Moor, Hill Head, Fareham, Hampshire PO14 3RU, England.
86. Solar Pons, created by August Derleth almost seventy years ago as a tribute to Sherlock Holmes, starred in a long series of stories popular with Sherlockians, and the saga was continued after Derleth's death by Basil Copper. Copper's THE RECOLLECTIONS OF SOLAR PONTS (Minneapolis: Fedogan & Bremer, 1995; 248 pp., $25.00) contains four stories, three of them new and one a revision from an earlier appearance, with fine illustrations by Stefanie K. Hawks. The book also is available ($27.00 postpaid) from the publisher at 603 Washington Avenue SE #77, Minneapolis, MN 55414 (800-738-2660); creditcard orders welcome.
87. Joseph A. Coppola has reported that The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse will celebrate its 25th anniversary on Apr. 20, and that a special commemorative postmark (with the logo of the society) will be applied by the post office there. The Society will offer a cover with its own cachet and with Sherlockian stamps for $2.00 postpaid (mailed under separate cover); $5.00 postpaid for a set of three covers with different Sherlockian stamps. You can send advance orders to Hodge Hodgskin, 7328 Jamesville Road, Manlius, NY 13104. If you want to have the postmark on your own covers, you should send them to the Main Post Office, 5640 East Taft Road, Syracuse, NY 13200; the postmark will be available from Apr. 20 for 30 days. This may well be the first official commemorative postmark honoring a Sherlockian society; there have been other official postmarks honoring Sherlock Holmes, but I'm not aware of one honoring a Sherlockian society.

88. Feb 96 #6: "The Man Who Disappeared" (a dramatization of "The Man with the Twisted Lip") was produced in Britain in 1950 as a pilot film for American television, with John Longden as Holmes and Campbell Singer as Watson; it never made it onto the air at the time, but it was released to theaters in 1951, and eventually found its way onto videocassette, although very little has been known about the history of the project. Now Richard Lancelyn Green, drawing upon the correspondence files of Denis Conan Doyle, has written THE MISADVENTURE OF THE SHERLOCK HOLMES PILOT, a 36-page monograph published by The Northern Musgraves with illustrations from the film, and it's a delight to have the details. $13.00 postpaid from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219; credit-cards orders welcome.
  89. Issue #13 of the Sherlock Holmes Gazette includes a fine tribute to Jeremy Brett, with articles written by David Stuart Davies, Michael Cox, Elizabeth Wiggins, and Jean Upton, plus reviews and columns and letters about Holmes and Conan Doyle. $9.50 postpaid from Classic Specialties (see above).
  90. Leslie Klinger is scheduled to teach a six-week, Monday-evening, extension course on "Sherlock Holmes and His World" at the University of California in Los Angeles from Apr. 15 to May 20; details are available from the UCLA Extension Writer's Program (310-825-0107). The press contact for the UCLA program is John G. Watson (no relation, he admits).
  91. There are realtors using the name "Sherlock Homes" here and there, but John Baesch spotted an advertisement for a different approach, by Rob Watson, in business in Wilmington, Del., as "Homes & Watson" (800-296-7629).
  92. The Franco-Midland Hardware Company (American Exchange Branch) is planning a "Valley of Fear" weekend in Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania, on March 30 and 31. The focus will of course be on The Molly Maguires, and the plans included tours of Pottsville and vicinity. Details are available from Bob Carter, Box 762, Fort Montgomery, NY 10922.
  93. Herman Herst Jr. (Box 1583, Boca Raton, FL 33429) offers a copy of William S. Baring-Gould's THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (1967): two volumes, dust jackets, second edition (with the added Index of Titles on p. 806); $50.00 postpaid. Also available from Pat (he was born on St. Patrick's Day) is a pamphlet reprint of "Dirty Pool" (a pleasant philatelic pastiche that was published in The Baker Street Journal in June 1966) and a round-robin pastiche to which he contributed; autographed copies of the 24-page pamphlet cost $10.00 postpaid (same address).
  94. Spotted by Tim O'Connor: SHERLOCK HOLMES: SOUL OF THE DRAGON, a comic-book collection published by Northstar Press in Sept. 1995 with three stories written by Joe Gentile and illustrated by different artists (in different styles), and an introduction by Brad Keefauver; $9.95.
  95. Chuck Kovacic (14383-B Nordhoff Street, Panorama City, CA 91402) offers an illustrated sales list of reproductions of Sherlockian cigar-box labels and cigarette cards, postcards, and the 1880 Afghan Campaign medal.
96. Mar 96 #1: J. Adrian Fillmore is back, no longer involved with incredible and amorous umbrellas, but rather as the author of the introduction to Marvin Kaye's new anthology THE RESURRECTED HOLMES (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1996; 337 pp., $24.95). Kaye has posed his authors a double problem: to write a Sherlock Holmes story, and to write it in the style of yet another author. And the results are intriguing: the authors pastiched vary widely, and are as unusual as Jack Kerouac and H. P. Lovecraft and J. Thorne Smith (and I wonder uneasily how many of us there still are who fondly remember Smith's racy novels). You won't find the styles of Watson or Conan Doyle in this anthology, but there's fun to be had reading the stories.
  97. And for those who are wondering about J. Adrian Fillmore: sometimes known as James Phillimore, he was the hero of Marvin Kaye's fantasy novels THE INCREDIBLE UMBRELLA (1979) and THE AMOROUS UMBRELLA (1981).
  98. The United States has marked the Lunar New Year with a stamp honoring the Year of the Rat (that's the first in the twelve-year cycle celebrated by the Chinese). Rats are mentioned in nine Sherlock Holmes stories (and that doesn't count the giant rat of Sumatra, or the dreaded Balla rat of Australia).
  99. Edward D. Hoch writes delightful short stories, and he has had at least one story in each issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine for many years (John Dickson Carr who once wrote about Hoch that "Satan himself would be proud of his ingenuity"). One of his series detectives is Dr. Sam Hawthorne, and a dozen of those stories have been collected in DIAGNOSIS: IMPOSSIBLE (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 1996; 203 pp., $38.00 for a signed edition bound in cloth, or $15.00 for the trade paperback). And one of the stories is "The Problem of the Covered Bridge" (reprinted from EQMM, Dec. 1974), which has an appropriate Sherlockian allusion. The publisher's address is Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505; add $2.25 for shipping.
  100. Plan ahead: the sixth annual Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair and Convention will be held at the Holiday Inn (Independence Mall) in Philadelphia on Nov. 8-10. Membership is limited to 450 and full registration costs $50.00, and the contact is Deen Kogan, Detecto-Mysterioso Books, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147. Plan well ahead: the seventh annual convention is scheduled for Oct. 3-5, 1997.
  101. Forecast: ELEMENTARY, MRS. HUDSON, by Sydney Hosier (from Avon in April at $5.50); "Introducing Emma Hudson, the other sleuth of Baker Street: called in by old friend Vi Warner, who believes her employer has been murdered, a diligent Mrs. Hudson begins an investigation of the snobby upper-crust St. Clair family and uncovers evidence of a second murder."
  102. "Mad Dogs and Englishmen" (Jeremy Brett's last film) opened in Britain last June, and was broadcast on German television (VOX) on Dec. 3, according to Michael Ross, who now edits The Striking Trifles and The Soft-Nosed Bullet-In for Von Herder Airguns Ltd. Details on the society and its publications are available from Michael (Bendheide 65, 47906 Kempen, Germany).
103. Mar 96 #2: Dorothy Stix has reported on the formation of a new Sherlockian society for collectors of foreign-language editions. The name of the new society is thoroughly appropriate ("Sherlock Holmes Around the World"), and membership (including the quarterly newsletter) costs $10.00 a year. There's also a lapel pin designed by Jeff Decker, available only to members, at $10.00 postpaid (or $18.95 for a one-year membership plus the pin). Checks to Ralph Hall, 2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218.
  104. TIMEWANKERS #3 (Mar. 1991) had Jonathan Fegly in Sherlockian costume on the cover, and a non-S'ian pornographic time-travel comic-book story by Stephen Sullivan; now reprinted in TIMEWANKERS #13 (Aug 94), a graphic album from Eros Comic (Box 25070, Seattle, WA 98125) with a small S'ian vignette on the cover.
  105. Thelma Steward is an award-winning doll-maker, and she now has a "Sherlock Holmes Series" that features Holmes, Watson, Mrs. Hudson, and Moriarty. The dolls are handcrafted from Cernit polymer and are about 20" high, and cost from $1,350 to $1,500 each. Mrs. Steward will be happy to provide additional information on request (6720 Happy Valley Road, Somerset, CA 95684).
  106. For the dedicated marginalists: Will Walsh reports that the Eddie Bauer chain is selling a $19.95 stuffed puppy wearing an Eddie Bauer cap, which is a deerstalker.
  107. Eleanor N. Schwartz wrote the text that accompanied a fine photo story on "Hooray for Hollywood" in Life (Mar. 1996); the lead photograph (by Alfred Eisenstadt) shows "Sherlock Holmes and Jessica Fletcher" in the Paramount commissary in 1955, when Basil Rathbone and Angela Lansbury had roles in Danny Kaye's "Court Jester".

108. "A Gathering of Inquiring Minds" is the formal title of the John Bennett Shaw Memorial Conference in Santa Fe on Apr. 19-20, and the agenda includes presentations by Sherlockians local and far-flung, and a live broadcast of Bill Dunning's radio adaptation of "A Scandal in Bohemia". An illustrated flier with all the details is available from Rita Martinez-Purson, Santa Fe Community College, Community Services Office, Box 4187, Santa Fe, NM 87502 <rpurson@santa-fe.cc.nm.us>.
109. The commercial videocassette of "Wishbone: The Slobbery Hound" is in the shops at $9.99 (discounted to $7.95 at Best Buy, according to Laura Kuhn). It's the "Hound of Baskervilles" episode of the 30-minute PBS-TV children's series that has Wishbone (a Jack Russell terrier) encouraging kids to read good books.
110. Congratulations to William A. S. Sarjeant, who has been elected a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, recognizing his long career as a geologist and as editor of an award-winning bibliography of geologists and the history of geology. Bill uses the pseudonym Antony Swithin for his fantasy novels, and his own name for his Sherlockian and Doyleana, which include MS. HOLMES OF BAKER STREET: THE TRUTH ABOUT SHERLOCK HOLMES (1989) articles about the geology of "The Lost World" and "The Terror of Blue John Gap".
111. Mar 96 #3: The Scowrers and Molly Maguires of San Francisco continue to devise interesting events, such as the "day of gala events and fun" scheduled for June 15 at the Scowrers Inn and Gaming Parlor (aka the Holiday Inn-Union Square) in San Francisco; details are available from the Scowrers (V.V. 341, Mount Eden, CA 94557).
112. THE MAN WITH THE FISTED GRIP is the thirtieth narrative of Turlock Loams, to be revealed by Dr. Fatso, who is celebrating the occasion with a glass of cooking sherry (according to his Agent). Finely printed as always at the Pequod Press, the booklet costs $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
113. The Lynn Peavey Co. has a thick mail-order catalog full of things of interest to law-enforcement professionals, such as fingerprint kits, evidence bags, prisoner property bags, gunshot residue kits, and some amusing souvenirs, including "Tracker the Investigator" (a 13" tall plush dog wearing a trenchcoat and deerstalker). $24.95 plus shipping, and their address is Box 14100, Lenexa, KS 66285 (800-255-6499).
114. The new catalog from Bits & Pieces, 1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297) offers (on page 40) two new Sherlock Holmes jigsaw puzzles ("read the mystery story inside, assemble the jigsaw, then try to solve the crime") at $10.95 each or $16.95 for both; shipping extra, and credit-card orders are welcome.
115. Harry Ryba died on Mar. 4. He owned hotels and boarding houses and bicycle rental shops on Mackinac Island (where bicycle rental shops did quite well, since motor vehicles are banned from the island). He opened a fudge shop on the island in 1959, and quickly became known as the "Fudge King", thanks to the late Bill Rabe, whose inspired public-relations campaign for everything there touted Mackinac Island as "the Miami Beach of the North." And of course Bill ensured that those who attended the The Mrs. Hudson Breakfast all those years ago went home with samples of the Fudge King's fudge.
116. "Sherlock Holmes faces a new challenge...perhaps his greatest ever...and while he's singing, yet!" That's the blurb for "Sherlock in Love", a new musical scheduled at the Alleyway Theatre in Buffalo from Apr. 11 to May 5. The box-office address is One Curtain Up Alley, Buffalo, NY 14202, and the telephone number is 716-852-2600.
117. Jim Hillestad (The Toy Soldier, Paradise Falls, R.R. 1, Box 379, Cresco, PA 18326) welcomes visitors to his museum (you can call 717-629-7227 for hours and directions) and mail orders (he offers 54-mm figures of Holmes and Watson, and other Sherlockiana).
118. Further to last month's mention (Feb 96 #6) of the John Longden film "The Man Who Disappeared" (1951), David Pearson sent a reminder that the film is available on videocassette at $19.99 from Movies Unlimited, a firm that is an excellent source of almost all videocassettes; 6736 Castor Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19149 (800-523-0823) <movies@moviesunltd.com>.
119. Mar 96 #4: The winter 1996 issue of Scarlet Street is a fine one, and has more than a dozen pages of well-illustrated tributes to Jeremy Brett, and an interview with Hillary Brooke (who acted with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce in three of their Universal films), and a note that Steven Spielberg will start filming "The Lost World" in September (that's Michael Crichton's book, of course). Scarlet Street is published quarterly ($20.00 a year), and the address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
120. George Burns died on March 9. His career as an entertainer and comedian spanned 90 years, and included four decades as genial straight man to his wife Gracie Allen. His sense of timing was impeccable, and there still are many who fondly remember "The Burns and Allen Show" from radio and television. Basil Rathbone was one of the many guest stars who appeared with them on radio, and you'll find a picture of them on page 83 of Michael B. Druzman's BASIL RATHBONE: HIS LIFE AND FILMS (1975). Rathbone and Allen are in Sherlockian costume, with Burns as the suspect, in a publicity shot from the 1940s.
121. Readers of Playboy surely will recall the magazine's recent pictorial about Bettie Page, whose many fans were delighted to hear that she is alive and well, and the subject of a new biography BETTIE PAGE: THE LIFE OF A PIN-UP LEGEND, by Karen Essex and James L. Swanson (Los Angeles: General Publishing Group, 1996). In 1953 she was working in New York, enrolled in acting classes, going to movies, and reading fiction. "She also loved detective stories, and read Sherlock Holmes, Raymond Chandler and Erle Stanley Gardner," the biography notes (and thanks to John Comstock for the report).
122. Classic Specialties Audio has issued a five-cassette (320 minutes) recording of Ronald C. Weyman's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MARK OF THE BEAST, read by the author, who has an excellent voice and does well with accents. The pastiche was first published by Simon & Pierre in 1990, and brings Holmes to Canada during the Great Hiatus to rescue the Empire from "a diabolical weapon before which nothing could live." $34.05 postpaid (Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); credit-card orders welcome.
123. "Footrot Flats" was a comic strip that ran for many years in newspapers in New Zealand (and it was syndicated elsewhere), about a rancher named Wally Footrot, and his friends, neighbors, family, and pets, and his dog (named Dog). The strip was drawn by Murray Ball, and this excerpt, noted by Linda Anderson, is from the paperback collection "...LET SLIP THE DOGS OF WAR!" (Lower Hutt: Inprint, 1992), kindly forwarded by Alex Mitchell.

124. Mar 96 #5: The fifth annual Watsonian Weekend (celebrating Dr. Watson and the Battle of Maiwand) will begin with a regimental dinner at Knickers Restaurant in Des Plaines, Ill., on July 19 (when Dr. Watson will "Meet the Press"), and continues with the 37th annual running of The Silver Blaze at Arlington Race Course on July 20. More information is available from Fred Levin, 8242 North Ridgeway Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076.
125. Patricia E. Moran ("Patience Moran") died on March 12. Pat was one of the founders of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and one of the Albertus Magnus sextette who picketed the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars on a wintry evening in 1968. She helped edit the Adventuresses' newsletter, and then their more formal The Serpentine Muse, and always was one of the usual suspects whenever the game was afoot or aflight or just cooked and served at the rowdy table.

126. Richard Wein notes that there's a lot of Sherlockiana in the latest catalog from Barnes & Noble (126 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011) (800-843-2665): THE FINAL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Peter Haining (#1884097, $4.98); THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (#1546977, $14.98); A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION (a new title for A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPENDIUM), edited by Peter Haining (#1903251, $7.98); THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ken Greenwald (#E104047, $5.98); and the American edition of THE LIFE & TIMES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Philip Weller (#1933860, $17.98).
127. Richard also reports that the "Barnes & Noble Classics" edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES with an Introduction by Eric Ambler (Feb 96 #3) also is available as a trade paperback at $4.98.
128. The Gleniffer Press has published microbook (7/8" high) editions of THE THREE STUDENTS (1992) and SILVER BLAZE (1993), and now THE EMPTY HOUSE is available, with 109 pages set in readable 2-point type. Gleniffer does excellent work, and the address is 11 Low Road, Castlehead, Paisley, Renfrewshire PA2 6AQ, Scotland, United Kingdom; $26.00 (or £15.00) postpaid (U.S. dollar checks and credit-card orders are welcome).
129. The Northern Musgraves held a memorial luncheon for Jeremy Brett at the Cafe Royal in London on Mar. 16, and it was a splendid gathering indeed, according to a report from Lisa Oldham. There were toasts and tributes by David Stuart Davies, Edward Hardwicke, David Burke, Jeremy Paul, and Myra Fulford (of the Manic Depression Fellowship), and Lisa's detailed report on the festivities (retelling some of the grand stories she heard) is in the latest issue of her electronic newsletter The Brettish Empire. Her e-mail address is <oldham@freenet.columbus.oh.us>.
130. Douglas G. Greene's JOHN DICKSON CARR: THE MAN WHO EXPLAINED MIRACLES is one of the Mystery Writers of America nominees for an Edgar for Best Critical Biographical this year (the annual MWA awards dinner will be held on Apr. 25). T. R. Bowen's "The Eligible Bachelor" is one of the nominees for Best Episode in a Television Series, and Jacques Barzun will receive this year's Ellery Queen Award (for writing teams, editors, and publishers who have made an outstanding contribution to the mystery genre). A CATALOGUE OF CRIME (written by Barzun and Wendell Hertig Taylor) is still a classic inventory of the genre, and he has contributed to our own literature.
131. Mar 96 #6: David Hammer reports on M. F. K. Fisher's LAST HOUSE: REFLECTIONS, DREAMS, AND OBSERVATIONS 1943-1991 (New York: Pantheon Books, 1995; 286 pp., $23.00); it was her last book, and chapter 7 ("A Few of the Men") is her confession about the men she loved, including Brillat-Savarin, Maigret, and Sherlock Holmes (and there's some excellent analysis of our hero, David adds).
132. Frank Darlington notes that THE WORDSWORTH DICTIONARY OF PUB NAMES, by Leslie Dunkling and Gordon Wright (Ware: Wordsworth Reference, 1994; 305 pp., $3.95 on bargain-books tables), contains entries for The Dangling Prussian and for all the other inns and pubs mentioned in the Canon, except for the Alpha (but only The Dangling Prussian is cited as Canonical). The book was first published by Routledge & Kegan Paul in London in 1987.
133. Jerry Bangham spotted an advertisement in Variety (Feb. 26) for "Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Temporal Nexus" with a photograph of Patrick Macnee as Holmes. The film is billed as produced and directed by David L. Stanton for Associated Entertainment Releasing in association with Range of Vision Productions, with the telephone number 310-576-7435, which turns out not to be in service. Nor does the telephone company have a listing for either of the two companies, or for Stanton. Can someone out there on the southern Pacific slope find out how to contact someone associated with the film?
134. SHERLOCK HOLMES' LAST ADVENTURES is a new audiocassette set from K-Tel International/ AudioScope, with George Takei reading five of the stories (Wist /Bruc/Lady/ Dyin/Last) on two cassettes; Takei is well-known in the "Star Trek" world as Mr. Sulu, and has a fine voice (but no British accent). The set is in many bookstores at $11.95; the address for K-Tel International is 2605 Fernbrook Lane North, Minneapolis, MN 55447-4736 (612-509-6418).
135. Walter P. Armstrong, Jr. ("Birdy Edwards") died on Mar. 5. His career as a lawyer spanned more than 50 years, as did his interest in Sherlock Holmes: his first contribution to our literature appeared in the Oct. 1946 issue of The Baker Street Journal, and his last in the Sept. 1992 issue. He was one of the founding members of The Giant Rats of Sumatra of Memphis, and he received his BSI Investiture in 1985. His many essays, articles, and toasts were collected in HOLMES' RANGE (published by Magico in 1994).
136. There are few people who have brought as much laughter to as many people as Chuck Jones has, in the more than 300 hundred animations he has directed in a career that has lasted more than 50 years. His Sherlockian "Deduce, You Say!" (1956) was one of them, and a brief clip from the film was shown when he received a special Oscar for lifetime achievement at the Academy Awards on Mar. 25.
137. Baseball season is almost here, Thom Boykoff notes, and Holmes and Watson are still pitching: Darren Holmes (traded this winter by the Colorado Rockies to the San Francisco Giants) and Allen Watson (St. Louis Cardinals).
138. Thom offers a pair of collectors cards for $2.32 postpaid; his address is 222 Randolph Drive #303, Madison, WI 53717-1647.
139. Apr 96 #1: "Murder, She Wrote" debuted on CBS-TV on Sept. 30, 1984, with a two-hour premiere that starred Angela Lansbury as mystery-writer Jessica Fletcher in "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes" (with Brian Keith playing a man who attends a costume party dressed as Sherlock Holmes and who may or may not have been the intended victim of a murderer. The final episode will be broadcast on May 19, making "Murder, She Wrote" the longest-running detective-drama series in the history of television (it was the highest-rated television drama series for nine consecutive seasons, from 1985 to 1994).
140. Kenneth Ludwig's play "Postmortem" is scheduled by the Oldcastle Theatre Company at the Bennington Center for the Arts in Bennington, Vt., on June 14-29. The play had its premiere (as "Dramatic License") in 1983 and was revised and retitled in 1985, and puts William Gillette to work solving a mystery at his famous home in Hadlyme, Conn. The box-office phone number is 802-447-0564.
141. Simon Callow's ORSON WELLES: THE ROAD TO XANADU was published last year in Britain, and now has an American edition (New York: Viking, 1996; 638 pp., $32.95), and it's an excellent biography of a man known best to many Sherlockians as the answer to a trivia-quiz question (name an actor who played both Sherlock Holmes and Prof. Moriarty). The book covers only the first 26 years of Welles' life and career, and there was plenty to cover (at the age of 18 he played Mercutio to Basil Rathbone's Romeo, and by the time he was 26 he had broadcast his alarming "The War of the Worlds" and launched his film career with "Citizen Kane"). Callow is himself a director and an actor (he played Inspector Lestrade in Charlton Heston's "The Crucifer of Blood" for TNT cable in 1991), and offers splendid insight into what made Welles such a phenomenon.
142. John Baesch notes that Sherlockians may wish to visit the Frick Collection in New York to see a new exhibition called "Greuze: A Portraitist for the 90's" (since Jean-Baptiste Greuze is mentioned in the Canon). The Frick is at Fifth Avenue at East 70th Street, and the exhibition closes on Apr. 14.
143. For those who still know what phonograph records are (and perhaps even have machines that play them), John Burkardt offers a treasure trove of Sherlockian LP records, at reasonable prices; a sales list is available (send a #10 SASE to him at 750 Hethwood Drive #200-D, Blacksburg, VA 24060).
144. The continuing saga of St. Bartholomew's Hospital continues: a year ago The Times suggested that British Health Secretary Virginia Bottomley had "succeeded where Henry VIII, the Great Fire of London, the Blitz, and Margaret Thatcher all failed," and that the long campaign to keep the hospital open seemed to have failed. But a later article in The Times (Dec. 7, 1995), at hand from Chris Redmond, reports that the decision to close Bart's provoked an unprecedented campaign of opposition that culminated in a damaging Tory back-bench rebellion blamed for unseating Bottomley. And a new report from the King's Fund (an independent health-policy think-tank) suggests that the hospital can be kept going with state, charitable, and private funding. So the site of the historic first meeting between Holmes and Watson is safe to the end of the century, and perhaps much longer.

145. Apr 96 #2: Michael J. Farrell died on Mar. 1. He was a doctor in Queensland, and the founder and president of The Resident Patients of Toowoomba. He edited their journal Panacea, and organized both the annual Silver Blaze race day in Toowoomba and the 1994 national meeting of all the Sherlockian societies in Australia, and with his family had great fun helping keep the memory green in the Antipodes.
146. Elizabeth Peters' series of mystery novels about Amelia Peabody Emerson now runs to seven titles, and they're written with style and humor, set in Victorian England and Egypt, and all with direct or indirect Canonical echoes. The latest in the series is THE SNAKE, THE CROCODILE & THE DOG (New York: Warner Books, 1994; 432 pp., $5.99).
147. "It's a very rare bird--practically extinct--in England now, but all things are possible upon the moor," Stapleton said (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). "Yes, I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns." It wasn't the last one, but there may be only 15 breeding males left in Great Britain. The bittern is one of the five threatened birds shown in a set issued there last month to honor the 50th anniversary of the Wildfowl & Wetlands Trust (the others are the Muscovy duck, the lapwing, the white-fronted goose, and the whooper crane); the stamps feature paintings by the late Charles F. Tunnicliffe.
148. David Talbott Cox died on Mar. 15. He was a Chicago producer, director and actor for many years (and he was on the cover of TV Guide in the 1960s as a member of the cast of "The Integrators" when the television play aired was broadcast by WTTW-TV), and a newsletter publisher, and a Sherlockian: David was an energetic member of Hugo's Companions and one of the founders of The Criterion Bar Association.
149. For those who like trivia questions: name two actors who have played Sherlock Holmes who also have played actors who have played Sherlock Holmes. The answer will appear later in this issue.
150. Dominica issued a set of eight stamps in 1991 showing historic trains, and one of them showed "Sherlock Holmes & Dr. Watson watching Brunigline train (built 1888) descending from the Brunig Pass toward Meiringen"; the set of eight mint stamps is available from the International Collectors Society. Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408, for $19.95 postpaid (credit cards welcome).
151. Brook Manor was the home of the infamous Richard Cabell in 1656, and he is believed by many to have provided some of the inspiration for the legend of the Hound of the Baskervilles. And you can now stay at Brook Manor while touring Dartmoor: it is open as a guest house, fully restored with modern conveniences and central heating. A nicely-illustrated flier is available, and the address is: Buckfastleigh, Devon TQ11 0HR, England.
152. William H. "Skip" Boyer has an article "At Holmes with a Good Smoke" (with a Gahan Wilson illustration showing Holmes offering a cigar to Moriarty) in the spring 1996 issue of Smoke, a fancy new quarterly for people who fancy cigars ($3.99); 135 West 41st Street #1050, New York, NY 10036.
153. Apr 96 #3: Michael Ricker Pewter are preparing to ship the detailed pewter reproduction of The Consulting Room (the third element in their Sherlock Holmes Collection); $260.00 postpaid. Dr. Watson and Mrs. Hudson (the first two figures) are still available ($92.00 each postpaid), and the set will be completed by early 1997 with Inspector Lestrade, a Baker Street Irregular, and Sherlock Holmes. An illustrated flier is available from the company (5333 West 88th Avenue #132, Westminster, CO 80030) (800-554-1571); credit-card orders welcome.
154. "George Spelvin, Performing Legend, Takes His Final Bow" was the headline on an article (not included in every edition of the Newspaper of Record, but reprinted in New York magazine on Apr. 8). According to Randall Short, "It is with sadness tinged by a modicum of embarrassment that these pages find themselves called upon to report (somewhat belatedly) the passing of George Spelvin, a giant of the American theater whose legend in that notoriously fickle milieu rivals--it is hardly an exaggeration to say--those of Edwin Forrest, Ethel Barrymore, and warm orange-flavored intermission beverages. The great man appears actually to have departed the sphere of our sorrow--or, at any rate, New York--immediately following his last recorded (1988) appearance in 'The Mystery of Edwin Drood', but it seems to have been a while before anybody noticed." Short also notes that Spelvin was a native New Yorker, and made his stage debut in Charles A. Gardner's 1886 "Karl the Peddler" on 14th Street in a space currently housing Phil's World of Electronics, and that he is survived by a sister, Georgina.
155. George Spelvin also had many Sherlockian credits, according to George Vanderburgh's index to Ron De Waal's THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, including supporting roles in the 1970s and 1980s in productions of Martin Keeley's "Sherlock Holmes and the C.P.R. Murders", Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood", William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes", and Dennis Rosa's "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of Four". The index also has credits for Georgina's children Georgia, Garff, and P. Highley Spelvin.
156. And for those who have not noticed the name of George Spelvin before, it is traditionally used in cast listings when a producer isn't sure which actor will be playing a role, or occasionally (and incorrectly) when a character is another character in disguise.
157. The question was: name two actors who have played Sherlock Holmes who also have played actors who have played Sherlock Holmes. Patrick Horgan, who played Sherlock Holmes on stage in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" and in Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band", played Gillette in Kenneth Ludwig's play "Dramatic License" (now "Postmortem"). And Nicol Williamson, who was Holmes in the film "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution", is playing John Barrymore (who starred in the silent film "Sherlock Holmes") on stage in "Jack" at the Belasco Theatre in New York. "Jack" started previews on Apr. 20, and will have an eight-week run (212-239-6200).
158. William K. Everson died on Apr. 14. He was a film historian and collector, and helped saved hundreds of films from the days when studios didn't bother to. He wrote 16 books on the cinema, and included discussion of Moriarty in THE BAD GUYS: A PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE MOVIE VILLAIN (1964), and had a chapter on Sherlock Holmes in THE DETECTIVE IN FILM (1972).
159. Apr 96 #4: Lots of dramatic items in this issue, so I'll also mention that Bert Coules (Fairway, Sandling Road, Saltwood, Hythe, Kent CT21 4QJ, England) still offers laser-printed scripts (about 60 pp. each) of his adaptations for the BBC radio series that stars Clive Merrison and Michael Williams as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson ("The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 1988 had Roger Rees and Crawford Logan in 1999). The stories are: Stud/Sign/Scan/Bosc/Blue/Nobl/Silv/Croo/Fina/Empt/Norw/Danc/Soli/Chas/SixN/Seco/Houn/Wist/Bruc/Devi/Last/Illu/Maza/Suss/Thor/Lion/Reti. The postpaid cost (sterling check or draft) for each short-story script is £12.00 (surface) or £14.00 (airmail), or you can pay with currency ($19.00 or $22.00) or by dollar check ($28.86 or $30.02). The cost is doubled for the three longstory scripts.
160. One of the nice things about collecting Sherlockiana is that the old can be as interesting as the new, and it can be fun to catch up with something you missed. As is the case with THE NOISELESS TENOR: THE BICYCLE IN LITERATURE (East Brunswick: Cornwall Books, 1982). James E. Starrs is well-known now for forensic investigation of questions such as whether Alferd Packer dined on the party he was supposed to be guiding over the mountains (Starrs dug up the victims, and concluded that they had indeed been murdered, and quite likely butchered). And he enjoys bicycling, and he has edited a delightful anthology that includes "The Priory School" (and some discussion of bicycle tracks), and a splendid Foreword by William Saroyan, and two excerpts from Christopher Morley, and much more.

161. Robert C. Hess (559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwaters, NY 11718) offers a new sales list, with figurines, statues, Mardi Gras doubloons, programs, lobby cards, books, and other Sherlockiana.
162. Lawrence J. Kaplan has been teaching a course on "Chemistry and Crime: From Sherlock Holmes to Modern Forensic Science" at Williams College since 1990, and this month the National Science Foundation awarded him a $234,539 grant to create a CD-ROM version of his course. The disk is intended to make the laboratory portion of his course accessible to colleges that cannot offer forensics laboratory classes, and it will include simulations of equipment used in forensics analysis as well as cases for students to solve using the equipment. Kaplan hopes to have a finished product available in two years.
163. Stuffed Moose Audio has issued an amusing audiocassette with four "classic humorous ghost stories" written by Stephen Leacock, Charles Dickens, Mark Twain, and Arthur Conan Doyle (whose story is "Selecting a Ghost"). George Plumley has dramatized the stories, and they're performed well by a group of talented actors. The Lodestone Catalog offers SPIRITED YARNS: VOLUME 1 for $9.95 plus shipping; the address is 611 Empire Mill Road, Bloomington, IN 47401 (800-411-6463), and credit-card orders are welcome.
164. Heritage Media (Castle Eden Studios, Castle Eden. Durham TS27 4SD, England) offers a catalog of classic audio and video, including radio drama: three double-cassette sets of "The Best of Sherlock Holmes" (each set with four Gielgud/Richardson broadcasts); £7.99 each (or £19.99 for all three in a slip case) plus shipping. The cassettes are available here from National Review Radio Classics (150 East 35th Street, New York, NY 10016); $16.99 each (or $39.99 for all three); $4.50 shipping per order; plastic welcome.

165. Apr 96 #5: The first annual Sherlock Holmes Festival will be held in Crowborough on July 5-7, according to an item in The Times Literary Supplement (Mar. 15). Sir Arthur Conan Doyle lived in Crowborough for many years, but the Chamber of Commerce believes that far too few Sherlockians visit the town. The festival will feature an exhibition, a street party, a concert, and a mystery trail, and the organizers are hoping that Sherlockians "will come to see Crowborough as the Mecca for Sherlock Holmes buffs." Details are available from The Sherlock Holmes Festival, The Town Hall, The Broadway, Crowborough, East Sussex TN6 1DA, England.
166. Francine Kitts notes that a radio-theater production of "The Six Napoleons" will be performed five times at the Snug Harbor Cultural Center in Staten Island, N.Y. on May 2-5; tickets cost $10.00, and the phone number for the box office is 718-979-3190.
167. For anyone who might need another reason to keep away from the moor, Fred Barbash reported in the Washington Post (Apr. 18), that "There's a monster loose that's threatening the cities and the towns of Britain, its national heritage, its animals, its health, and its wealth. It's called traffic." The threat is everywhere, including "the great moors of lore and legend, like Dartmoor, the setting in western England for 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.' Any hound venturing into it today risks life and limb, according to a recent study, which said that some 300 sheep, ponies, and cattle were run down and killed by speeding cars there last year."
168. Jim Suszynski spotted Shaggy in a deerstalker in "The Maltese Mutt" in the comic book SCOOBY-DOO #9 (June 1996) from Archie Comics ($1.50). And Jack Kerr spotted Fred Flintstone in a deerstalker in "Fred Flintstone: Private Eye!" in THE FLINTSTONES #11 (July 1996), also from Archie ($1.50).
169. FROM PRUSSIA WITH LOVE, by John DeChancie (Rocklin: Prima, 1996; 261 pp., $5.99), is a spin-off from the Castle Falkenstein role-playing game created by R. Talsorian Games. The game and the novel are set in a magical Victorian alternate universe that includes fairies, dwarves, steam engines, and dragons, and Prof. Moriarty makes a brief but villainous appearance in the novel. Stu Shiffman, who knows far more than I about this steampunk world, reports that Moriarty also is in a second novel (DeChancie's MASTERMINDS OF FALKENSTEIN), and that a third novel (by George Alec Effinger) will involve both Moriarty and Sherlock Holmes.
170. Richard Olken has reported Alan M. Young's article "C. Auguste Dupin, Alias Holmes" (about Conan Doyle's debt to Poe) in the Feb. 1996 issue of Sextant (Salem State College, 352 Lafayette Street, Salem, MA 01970); the article has some fine illustrations of Dupin and Holmes (and photographs of Poe and Conan Doyle). The e-mail address is <sextant@mecn.mass.edu>.
171. "The Molly Maguires" is a new musical (book by William Strempek, and music and lyrics by Sid Cherry), and it will have its world premiere this year at the Grand Candlelight Theatre in Milton, Pa., Aug. 7-31 (800-355-3099), and at the Media Theatre for the Performing Arts in Media, Pa., Sept. 4-Oct. 6 (800-355-3099). There will be a theater party for Sherlockians on Sept. 28 at 2:00 pm in Media; details are available from Sherry Rose-Bond, 519 East Allens Lane, Philadelphia, PA 19119.

172. Apr 96 #6: Videotaper alert: "Wishbone" is featured in "A Dogged Expose" on PBS-TV on May 3. Wishbone is a Jack Russell terrier who stars in a fine children's series about a dog who finds himself involved in literary classics (this time in "A Scandal in Bohemia"); the series has 40 programs that cycle in repeats, and there is another interesting episode called "The Slobbery Hound" (yes, "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Also: many PBS-TV stations are likely to repeat some of the Granada programs with Jeremy Brett in May: "The Dying Detective" and "The Cardboard Box" will air in Washington on May 16, and "The Three Gables" on May 23.
173. It was in the Sept. 1983 issue of Science 83 that John Hathaway Winslow and Alfred Meyer accused Sir Arthur Conan Doyle of being the perpetrator of the Piltdown hoax, presenting a detailed and thoroughly circumstantial argument that received considerable publicity (mainly because they provided the N.Y. Times with an advance copy of their article). And now Robert B. Anderson has made the same accusation, in the spring 1996 issue of Pacific Discovery (California Academy of Sciences, Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, CA 94118; $5.00 postpaid). Anderson, who is earth science editor at Natural History magazine at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, has drawn heavily upon Winslow's work, but (using Sherlock Holmes to reveal the solution) offers some additional evidence that is just as circumstantial. One is tempted to wonder whether the spring issue of Pacific Discovery was published on April Fool's Day . . .
174. ELEMENTARY, MRS. HUDSON, by Sydney Hosier (New York: Avon, 1996; 206 pp., $5.50), is yet another yellowed manuscript, part of the "Hudson Collection" (that's Emma Hudson, housekeeper to Sherlock Holmes), and the story is set in 1898, when Holmes and Watson are on holiday and Mrs. Hudson answers an old friend's plea for help and solves two mysterious murders (with the help of her old friend's powers of astral projection).
175. R. Dixon Smith and Paulina M. Smith have a new catalog of "Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes" with 592 items old and new: books, pamphlets, magazines, posters, programs, and other ephemera; write to Rupert Books, 58/59 Stonefield, Bar Hill, Cambridge CB3 8TE, England.
176. Societies looking for ideas for souvenirs might take a look through the new catalog from Best Impressions (Box 802, La Salle, IL 61301) (800-635-2378). Their promotional products range from mugs ($35.00 set-up charge, and $2.38 each for 72) to wooden nickels and key fobs and totebags and other items.
177. Apparently I'm not the only one who has had trouble ordering new magazine cases from the Magafile Company in Vandalia, Mo., and it may well be that the company has gone out of business. Please let me know about alternate sources for inexpensive fold-up cardboard cases in various sizes.
178. Is anyone planning a visit to Moscow? Does anyone know anyone who is planning a trip to Moscow? I need a courier who can retrieve some Sherlockian videocassettes that I am reluctant to entrust to the Russian mail system. Please let me know if you can help.

179. May 96 #1: Marlene R. Aig died on Apr. 25. She earned a Master's degree from McGill University (as did Christopher Morley's friend Jane Nightwork), and joined the Associated Press in 1978, becoming their Westchester correspondent in 1983. Marlene was as enthusiastic and energetic as a Sherlockian as she was as a journalist, and she made sure that her AP beat also included the Sherlockian world, filing stories on the birthday festivities and on other important events. Her AP obituary described her as a small, fast-talking, frequently squawking mass of energy, with a mop-top of rusty red hair and a spirit to match: that's the sort of personal touch that journalists like to give their colleagues, and it's the way her friends will remember her.
180. The spring 1996 issue of The Armchair Detective includes excellent articles by Jan B. Steffensen and Kate Derie about the continuing spread of mystery-related material on the Internet, and Scott and Sherry Rose Bond's memorial to Jeremy Brett and Robert Stephens. $31.00 a year (quarterly); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019-3808.
181. Nice news for everyone interested in the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota (now the home of John Bennett Shaw's collection and much more): the state legislature has approved a bill that provides $38.5 million to build the new Minnesota Library Access Center, which will be the new home of the special collections, and the governor has signed the bill into law. That's bricks-and-mortar money, and The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections are always happy to accept tax-deductible contributions to help maintain the collections. And there's an excellent reason to give now: the F. R. Bigelow Foundation in St. Paul will match all contributions (up to a total of $30,000) to the John Bennett Shaw Fund (fund no. 3906). You can send your donations to the Sherlock Holmes Collections, 466 Wilson Library, Minneapolis, MN 55455 (matching gifts from employers also qualify for the for the matching grant). And there's a deadline: the first $15,000 must be raised by June 30.
182. Christopher Roden reports that EMI has issued a "Writers and Poets" set of three CDs (£26.99 in Britain) that includes an excerpt (3:48 minutes) from the longer recording that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made for His Master's Voice in 1930.
183. Further to last month's report (Apr 96 #5) on a paperback spin-off from the Castle Falkenstein role-playing game, the second book in the series is MASTERMINDS OF FALKENSTEIN, by John DeChancie (Rocklin: Prima, 1996; 25 pp., $5.99); Moriarty turns up again in a magical Victorian alternate steampunk universe. The third novel in the series will be THE LEAGUE OF DRAGONS, by George Alec Effinger, due in October ("Tom Olam and the lovely, swashbuckling Marianne meet Sherlock Holmes, the young, not-yet-famous hero of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's series"). If your local bookseller can't find Prima Publishing, their address is Box 1260-BK, Rocklin, CA 95677.
184. John Ruyle is once again perpetrating poetry, and hand-printing it himself at the Pequod Press: SIR ARTHUR AGONISTES "dips into unexpected areas of the Canon and ranges over other Holmesian matters as well." 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 97407-1521; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
185. May 96 #2: Do any "Howdy Doody" fans remember Inspector John J. Fadoozle? Paul Martin spotted mention of the Inspector ("America's number one--boi-i-i-nggg--puh-ivate eye"), and a photograph showing him with a deerstalker, cape, and mustache, in HOWDY AND ME: BUFFALO BOB'S OWN STORY, by Buffalo Bob Smith and Donna McCrohan (New York: Penguin/Plume, 1990).
186. Orville Prescott died on Apr. 28. He was a book critic for the N.Y. Times from 1942 to 1966, and reviewed John Dickson Carr's THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1949) and Adrian Conan Doyle's HEAVEN HAS CLAWS (1953), praising them both but noting that Adrian Conan Doyle "lacks the literary skill to present his material in effective fashion." Prescott also enjoyed the writings of Christopher Morley, and in his review of Morley's THE MAN WHO MADE FRIENDS WITH HIMSELF (1949) suggested that if the book "is a failure as a novel and as a commentary on the neurosis of our time, it at least flashes intermittently with wit and charm. Christopher Morley never wrote anything that didn't do that."
187. Herman Herst Jr. was able to combine his knowledge of philately and his interest in Arthur Conan Doyle in a souvenir he prepared for the 1981 annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars. If you would like learn more about the world's first Christmas envelope (which was designed by Conan Doyle's uncle, Richard Doyle, in 1840) you can send him a #10 SASE (Box 1583, Boca Raton, FL 33429).
188. Malice Domestic VIII (in Bethesda, Md., at the end of April) was an interesting convention, with Peter Lovesey as guest of honor and Josephine Tey as ghost of honor, and a focus on "mysteries of manners," although not exclusively, since this year there were sessions on "The Scientific Sleuth: from Sherlock Holmes to Gideon Oliver" and on "Sherlock Holmes as a Forensic Scientist". The first session offered a panel consisting of Douglas G. Green, Aaron Elkins, Paul Sledzik, and me, and the second session was just me (and questions and comments from the audience). Audio Visual Inc. offers audiocassettes of any of the 50 convention sessions at $10.00 each plus shipping (there's a discount for volume); 4390-B Parliament Place, Lanham, MD 20706 (credit-card orders welcome).
189. Mary Frost-Pierson also was at the convention, offering a demonstration of the "mysteries" division of America Online, which is an excellent reason to try out AOL's free-trial-offer (now 15 hours). You'll need to be driving a Macintosh, or running Windows, with a 256-color card, and then you can take your own tour through Mary's offerings, which include on-line editions of magazines (The Sherlock Holmes Review and Scarlet Street), bulletin boards, discussion groups for kids and teachers, opportunities to browse the stock and buy books and gifts (Sherlockian and otherwise) from Mary's bookshop (Mysteries from the Yard), and much more. The address of Mary's shop is 253-B Xenia Avenue, Yellow Springs, OH 45387 <msteries@aol.com>; ask for AOL's 15-free-hours floppy disk.
190. Glyn Szasz reports from Australia that a Planet Hollywood opened recently in Sydney, packed with movie memorabilia, including the pipe from "Young Sherlock Holmes". Glyn is the first Sherlockian I've heard of who has admitted going to a Planet Hollywood, let alone finding anything Sherlockian there (I have been to a Hard Rock Cafe, but didn't).

191. May 96 #3: Web-cruiser alert: thanks to the energy and expertise of Willis Frick, the three most recent issues of the electronic edition of this newsletter are now available on a home page at his kaiwan.com web site; the URL is: <<http://www.kaiwan.com/~sherlock/SCUTTLE.HTML>>. URLs are case-sensitive, so you need to use the upper-case letters.
192. Stephen Hemming died on Apr. 19. He was an actor in Wisconsin, and one of his fellow actors said that "when he was given a role, he was like Sherlock Holmes, investigating it, diving into learning everything he could about it." And perhaps that was only natural: he played Sherlock Holmes in "The Case of the Lurking Variable" on an audiocassette made for an instructional series on mathematics distributed the University of Wisconsin in 1987.
193. Thanks to all who responded to my request for other sources for inexpensive cardboard magazine cases, what with the Magafile Company having vanished. The good news is that there are alternate sources, and the bad news is that all the different sizes aren't available. The office-supply stores such as Staples and Office Depot offer "regular" (12" x 4" x 9") cut-corner boxes for about $1.60 each. So do mail-order companies such as Quill (800-789-1331) and Highsmith (800-558-2110); Highsmith offers inexpensive boxes at $19.15 for 20. Brodart (800-233-8959) offers "super-budget files" at $0.96 each (cheaper by the dozen), and "economical shelf files" in five different sizes, ranging from 8.5" high ($1.30 each for a dozen) to 14.5" high ($1.95 each for a dozen); Brodart would be best for those who want BSJ-size boxes and for those who want low prices (don't forget that shipping costs extra).

194. Bartholomew's Ink (Box 359, Warner, NH 03278-0359) offers a catalog full of mystery-related rubber stamps (with quite a few Sherlockian designs).
195. Tim Kelly's adaptation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be performed at the Huron Country Playhouse in Grand Bend, Ontario, July 16-27. Their address is R.R. #1, Grand Bend, ON N0M 1T0, Canada (519-238-6000) (800-706-6665).
196. "Holmes lies on the border of fantasy. He has charm and verve, but no one actually knew him. This gives every actor who plays Holmes an unexcelled chance to use his imagination, but also exposes him to criticism from every person with an imagination of his own." According to Basil Rathbone, in an article "On Playing Sherlock Holmes" in Radio Varieties (Mar. 1940). And: "Portrayal of Sherlock Holmes on the screen, I might say, causes me more worry than my portrayal on the radio. The screen leaves little to the imagination, and anyone in the audience may disagree with my idea of how Sherlock Holmes should look and act. Radio leaves every listener free to draw individual mental pictures of Holmes."
197. "A New Pinnacle for Sherlockian Achievement" is the slogan of the Downstate Illinois Sherlockian Invitational, to be held on Sept. 28 in Peoria. The Hansoms of John Clayton have offered a challenge to other societies in a Knowledge Competition, to be followed by The Nineteenth Annual 2704 Banquet of the Hansoms, and anyone interested participating, or merely attending, is invited to communication with Robert C. Burr, 4010 Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614-7109, by Aug. 31. One wonders about those pinnacles in downstate Illinois, which is not known for its mountains.

198. May 96 #4: "While the British Library management makes swingeing cuts to finance its move to St. Pancras, the British Museum is this month seeking planning permission and listed building consent to vandalise the Round Reading Room when, and if, the British Library finally leaves Bloomsbury," is the news from Marysa Demoor, posted to the Gaslight electronic mailing list. "Contrary to its stated policy over many years, the British Museum is now preparing to sacrifice its commitment to keeping the Round Reading Room as a library and work place for scholars. Such a commitment is now deemed to be inconvenient to the realisation of 'The Great Court Scheme' in which the Round Reading Room is redefined as circulation space, with information terminals and, as one British Museum spokesman memorably reported, 'a place for schoolchildren to eat their sandwiches'. The 'library' element is restricted to a small sector, surrounded by low glass walls, providing passing tourists with a glimpse of how things used to be."
199. And there's more, of particular importance to Sherlockians: "The desks, integral to the original design, will have to be largely removed." One would hope that before all those desks are hauled off to a land-fill, they will be carefully inspected to see whose initials might be carved in or on them. If Sherlock Holmes carved his initials on a laboratory stool at Bart's (and that one has been found and preserved), perhaps he did the same at a desk in the British Museum. "When I first came up to London I had rooms in Montague Street, just round the corner from the British Museum," he recalled (in "The Musgrave Ritual"), "and there I waited, filling in my too abundant leisure time by studying all those branches of science which might make me more efficient."
200. Moris H. Goldberg died on Apr. 29. Moris ("that's with one r," as he liked to remind people) was an enthusiastic member of The Giant Rats of Massillon and The Inverness Capers of Akron, and he was the founder of The Deerstalkers of Akron, and a grand story-teller, Sherlockian and otherwise.
201. Tim O'Connor notes that Parade Magazine is offering $100 prizes to ten winners of a contest for funny, clever, or unusual vanity license plates; you need to enter a photograph of the actual license plate of a vehicle registered to the contestant, and the winners will need to prove that they are the registered owners of the vehicles. The complete rules were in the May 12 issue of Parade, and entries must be received by June 16; the address is Vanity License Plate Contest, c/o Parade, Box 4943, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163-4943). In the early 1980s someone had a vanity plate in San Francisco reading BSKRVLS, on a Honda.
202. Tim also reports that Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" will be produced at the Candlelight Dinner Theater from Mar. 5 to May 25, 1997. The address is 5620 South Harlem Avenue, Summit, IL 60501 (15 minutes from downtown Chicago, according to the advertisement), and the box-office phone number is 708-496-3000. It is likely, of course, that one or more of the local Sherlockian societies will arrange for a theater party.
203. Planning continues for Australia's seventh national Sherlockian convention, to be held on Oct. 4-6, 1997, in Perth, with festivities centering on "The Devil's Foot". The organizers are Tim Richards and Narrelle Harris, and their address is Box 896, Fremantle, W.A. 6160, Australia.

204. May 96 #5: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner on May 22 at Luigi's in San Diego to honor (as always) the world's first forensic geologist and to celebrate some local Sherlockian and Doylean connections.
205. We were made welcome by Darlene Nelson, Debi Pollard, and Vinnie Brosnan, who all quite modestly declined personal responsibility for spring weather as delightful as any I've seen anywhere this year, and the visitors included Les Clutter, who has ascended Holmes Peak both as a geologist and as a member of the Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa. Our peripatetic society will meet next in Denver in October 1996 and in Dallas in April 1997.
206. Visitors to San Diego may wish to stay at the Hotel del Coronado, which is the world's largest wooden hotel, carefully preserved and established as a national landmark, and it would be especially appropriate to stay in room 3236, since that's the room where William Gillette stayed in December 1898, when he settled in to write his play "Sherlock Holmes". Visitors also can visit the Spreckels Theater in downtown San Diego: the theater was built in 1912 and seats 1,400 (it was the largest theater of its kind west of New York), and it was still quite new when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle lectured at the theater in May 1923. And it's still in use as a theater, with much of the grand old decorative style.
207. My journey to the Left Coast also included a stop in Long Beach for dinner with some of the Trained Cormorants, and a trip to jail for a visit with the Dartmoor Residents, the latter society being students in classes taught by Michael Brady at the California Youth Authority; Mike uses the Canon to good advantage, and his students are interested and knowledgeable.
208. And I descended briefly on Los Angeles, where I had arranged for a Houdini Seance at the Magic Castle, which is a private club for magicians. There were twelve of us at the seance, and the medium was impressive indeed: he managed many of the manifestations produced by mediums in Houdini's time, and an appearance by Houdini himself.
209. Vinnie Brosnan, I hasten to add, still presides over Sherlock in L.A. (1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056); his new mail-order catalog is as always well-illustrated and has 711 items of Sherlockian and Doylean literature, Vinnie's warm tribute to John Bennett Shaw, and an intriguing "brief look" at Sherlockian scion societies by Bill Vande Water and fellow non-members of A Case of Identifiers.
210. Videotaper alert: "Remember WENN" is an original 30-minute series now seen on Saturdays on American Movie Classics cable, about a fictional Pittsburgh radio station during the golden age of radio; it's written by Rupert Holmes (who is perhaps best known as the author of the musical "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" and whose pen name reflects his enjoyment of Rupert Knickerbocker beer and the Canon), and the episode scheduled for June 22 (titled "Armchair Detective") will be Sherlockian.
211. And: the "Wishbone" series continues to repeat on PBS-TV, and it's a grand way to get kids interested in literature. Wishbone is a Jack Russell terrier who finds himself involved in literary classics, and "A Dogged Expose" (about "A Scandal in Bohemia") will air on June 28. "The Slobbery Hound" (about "The Hound of the Baskervilles") also is well worth watching for.

212. May 96 #6: It was only last month (Apr 96 #6) that there was a report of yet another article identifying Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as the perpetrator of the hoax at Piltdown, but now there's real news: an article by Kings College professor Brian Gardiner in the May 23 issue of Nature suggests that the culprit was Martin A. C. Hinton, a curator at the Natural History Museum in London. And for the first time there's some persuasive physical evidence: a trunk left behind at the museum by Hinton has been found to contain bones, teeth, and fossils stained with the same chemical mixture that was used to deceive those who first examined the Piltdown discoveries. Gardiner also found that Hinton had done some staining work for Charles Dawson (who made the Piltdown discovery), and was an expert on the geology of the area of Sussex where the find was made, and had good reason to bear a grudge against Arthur Smith Woodward (who was thoroughly deceived by the hoax). Hinton, who died in 1961, lived to see the hoax exposed by modern scientists in the early 1950s.
213. "The Incredible Murder of Cardinal Tosca" will be performed at the Thousand Islands Playhouse in Gananoque, Ont., July 25-Aug. 25. That's not far from Kingston; their address is: Thousand Islands Playhouse, Box 241, Gananoque, ON K7G 2T8, Canada (613-382-7020).
214. Lisa Lambert (77 Mendham Avenue, Hastings on Hudson, NY 10706) has designed some attractive Sherlockian wine labels (6.5x4.5") and bordered quotations (7.5" x 3.5"); the artwork is hand-colored and thoroughly artistic, and the prices are about $25.00 postpaid, and complementary matting is available. The wines include varieties such as Silver Blaze Bordeaux, Hound Port, Musgrave Montrachet, Speckled Band Claret, and Holmes Port, and they make for nice displays. If you're interested, Lisa will be glad to send you a photocopy that will show her work to better advantage than I can.
215. The Sub-Librarians Scion of The Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will meet in New York this year during the annual meeting of the ALA, at the Renaissance Hotel at 4:30 pm on July 7. For additional information, you can write to Marsha L. Pollak, 1318 Mildred Avenue, San Jose, CA 95125 (and non-librarians are welcome to attend the festivities, of course).
216. Laura Kuhn reports that the latest catalog from What on Earth is offering a one-third-off discount on its Sherlock Holmes Pub T-shirts (now $9.95) and sweatshirts (now $18.95); 2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087 (800-945-2552). Note: the design is their own, rather than the actual pub sign.
217. David Pearson reports that Critics' Choice Video offers discounts through July 1 on Peter Cushing's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959) at $14.77, and Cushing's "The Masks of Death" (1986) at $14.95; Box 749, Itasca, IL 60143 (800-367-7765).

218. Jun 96 #1: The long series of Rathbone/Bruce radio programs on audiocassettes produced by Ken Greenwald and his 221A Baker Street Associates is expanding into the 1946-47 season with Tom Conway as Sherlock Holmes. There are new introductions by old-time radio actors Elliott Reid and Parley Baer, and there will be 16 cassettes in the new series (and four cassettes will be issued every three months). Eight cassettes are available now, and they are a grand reminder of the wonderful old days of radio, with scripts by Denis Green and Anthony Boucher, nice performances by Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson (he got top billing) and the rest of the cast, and fine high-fidelity engineering. The series title is MORE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES; the cassettes (each with two shows) are distributed by Brilliance Audio and cost $9.95 each; if you can't find them in local stores, Brilliance is at Box 887, Grand Haven, MI 49417 (800-222-3225). The eighth cassette includes "The Singular Affair of The Ancient Egyptian Curse" (1947), in which Ben Wright played Sherlock Holmes while Tom Conway was ill.
219. Minnesota voters will have a chance to vote for a Sherlockian on Sept. 10, in the state's Republican primary: one of the six candidates for the Senate is former Senator Rudy Boschwitz, who lost the seat to Democrat Paul Wellstone in 1990. Boschwitz attended meetings of The Red Circle in the 1980s, and hopes to return (to the Senate, that is, although of course he's always welcome in The Red Circle).
220. Andy Peck reports that eagle-eyed Sherlockians will find two small plaques at Doc Watson's (a bar-style restaurant at 1490 Second Avenue in New York), but nothing else Canonical. And that he and Les Klinger hard at work preparing an up-to-date revised edition of his comparative chronology THE DATE BEING --? (first published in 1970, with an addendum in 1973).
221. Movies, movies, movies. Clint Eastwood received a Life Achievement Award from the American Film Institute (the televised special was broadcast by ABC-TV last month), and his many fans will recall that in "The Dead Pool" (1988) Dirty Harry's boss Captain Donnelly (played by Michael Currie) has a framed portrait of Sherlock Holmes on the wall of his office; it also is of (remotely) Sherlockian interest that Callahan kills the villain by pinning him to a wall with a harpoon through his chest. Entertainment Weekly has a brief report on the film "The Lost World" (due for release in the summer of 1997): co-screenwriter David Koepf's $1.5 salary is the most ever paid for an adapted screenplay; the film is based on the book by Michael Crichton, and will be directed by Steven Spielberg, starring Julianne Moore and Jeff Goldblum. And: Jeremy Brett's last film was "Moll Flanders" (released this month), starring Robin Wright as Moll, Stockard Channing as the evil madam who makes Moll's life miserable, and Morgan Freeman as Hibble (who doesn't appear in Daniel Defoe's book); Brett has a brief appearance as the wealthy father of the artist with whom Moll falls in love.
222. "Sherlock Holmes and the Sticky Wicket" is the title of an interesting and well-illustrated article by Peter N. Street in the Jan.-Feb. 1996 issue of the Journal of Sports Philately, about Holmes and Conan Doyle and cricket. The issue costs $2.50 postpaid from John La Porta, Box 2286, La Grange, IL 60525 (checks payable to Sports Philatelists International, please).
223. Jun 96 #2: Ralph Hall spotted a new paperback edition of Graham Landrum's THE ROTARY CLUB MURDER MYSTERY (New York: St. Martin's, 1996; $4.99); there are two Sherlockian chapters ("The Baker Street Irregulars" and "Second Meeting of the Baker Street Irregulars"), and there was a hardback edition from St. Martin's in 1993. Also: Maurice Horn's 100 YEARS OF AMERICAN NEWSPAPER COMICS (New York: Gramercy Books, 1996; $14.99) will be found on the bargain tables, with sections on Sherlock Holmes, Hawkshaw the Detective, and Sherlocko the Monk.
224. Laurie R. King reports that A LETTER OF MARY (her third mystery novel about Mary Russell) is now set for publication in January 1997, and that THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE is due in England this summer ("at long last").
225. Tamara Toumanova died on May 29. At the age of five she danced with Anna Pavlova in France, and was one of the first of George Balanchine's "baby ballerinas" when she joined his Ballet Russes de Monte Carlo in 1932. She danced on Broadway and in films, and played the ballerina Petrova in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), proposing that Sherlock Holmes father a child with her, so that the child would have his brains and her beauty. Mrs. Patrick Campbell made the same proposal to George Bernard Shaw, who pointed out that the child might have his beauty and her brains, but Holmes managed to find another way to avoid a liaison with Petrova.
226. Al Gregory and Jan Stauber offer three new lapel pins with artwork by Sidney Paget (shown here actual size); $6.00 each postpaid (checks made payable to Al Gregory, please), and Al's address is 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044.
227. Captain Sharkey was one of the more memorable characters created by Arthur Conan Doyle, and he was one of the most vicious villains to be found in literature (if you like tales of pirates and the high seas). There are four stories about Sharkey, and you can find them in THE DOYLE FINA-1 NAVA-1 STORIES and in other collections. "How the Governor of St. Kitt's Came Home" was published in Pearson's Magazine in Jan. 1897, and the 23-page signed manuscript went to auction at Christie's in New York on May 17, estimated at $4,000-6,000. And it sold for $12,650 (including the 15% buyer's premium). BOSC-1

228. "I do believe we're dealing with something we haven't seen before..." was the quote in a full-page advertisement in the May 6 issue of Variety for "Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Temporal Nexus", one of the television projects promoted at the Cannes film festival by Associated Entertainment Releasing. And promoted quite successfully: the project has been pre-sold in European markets, and filming will begin soon in and near Los Angeles, with Patrick Macnee as Holmes, assisted by a young American reporter. The "legendary investigator is immersed in a case of paranormal murders and extra-terrestrials" in the two-hour television film that will be followed by a series of 22 one-hour shows. Work also is underway in England on a one-hour series of television specials called "Sherlock Holmes' Tour of London" with Macnee as host, viewing London through the eyes of Sherlock Holmes.
229. Jun 96 #3: Allen Mackler has spotted some bargains available from Daedalus Books (Box 9132, Hyattsville, MD 20781): the Chronicle Books editions of THE HORROR OF THE HEIGHTS & OTHER TALES OF SUSPENSE (1990) and WHEN THE WORLD SCREAMED AND OTHER STORIES (1992), now discounted at $3.98 each; and Carroll & Graf's 100 GREAT DETECTIVES, edited by Maxim Jakubowsky (1992), with H.F.R. Keating's discussion of Sherlock Holmes, at $2.98. And The Scholar's Bookshelf (100 Melrich Road, Cranbury, NJ 08512) offers the Academy Chicago editions of Conan Doyle's THE BEST HORROR STORIES (1989), THE LOST WORLD (1989), and TALES FOR A WINTER'S NIGHT (1990) at $19.90 for all three.
230. A hot plate: license plate, that is. The culprit most likely is a cruising teen-ager collecting things to display on a wall, but if you discover someone with a Maryland license plate reading BAKERST, it was stolen from a car owned by Wayne and Francine Swift. Just the one plate, which is why it's likely to be on a wall rather than one someone else's car.
231. Marcus Geisser, the editor of The Reichenbach Journal (published in German by The Reichenbach Irregulars, the Sherlockian society in Switzerland), has been publishing German translations of some of the classic writings about the writings, including essays by Ronald Knox and Christopher Morley, (and an essay by Dorothy L. Sayers will be in the next issue). And Marcus would like to hear from anyone who can help with future translation; his address is 40 avenue de la Gare, CH-1003 Lausanne, Switzerland; and or by e-mail at <mgeisser@access.ch>.
232. "The Ku Klux Klan ... rapidly formed local branches in different parts of the country, notably in Tennessee, Louisiana, the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida," according to the American Encyclopaedia consulted by Sherlock Holmes in "The Five Orange Pips". The State Capitol Building is seen in a photograph on a new stamp honoring the 200th anniversary of Tennessee's statehood.
233. "Sitting in a London pub, James O'Brien admits that he contemplated wearing his deerstalker hat, but opted instead for the more conservative blazer and tie of an academic," Alina Tugend noted in her article in The Chronicle of Higher Education (May 24). Jim, usually to be found teaching chemistry at Southwest Missouri State University, taught a two-month weekly course on the science of the Sherlock Holmes stories at the University of London's Imperial College.
234. Percy Edwards died on June 8. "Of Psyche the dog and other noises," is the subhead on The Guardian's obituary for Edwards, who made his show-business debut at the Pier Pavilion in Worthing in 1928, so intriguing the audience with his bird songs and growls that other seaside engagements followed. In 1931 he took his act to London's Windmill Theatre (more famous for its nude tableaux), and in the 1950s and 1960s he starred on BBC radio as Psyche the dog, and as Gregory the chicken (in different series). He also performed in films (producers often found that he was far more reliable and cheaper than real animals). The obituary reports that he once was The Hound of the Baskervilles (most likely with Carlton Hobbs and Norman Shelley in the BBC Radio series in 1958, but full credits for that series aren't available).
235. Jun 96 #4: Paula M. Brown is starting work on planning for a memorial to Jeremy Brett at the Holiday Inn (Union Square) in San Francisco on Sept. 14, and she would be happy to hear from anyone who would like to participate in the program, and to share thoughts and memories of the actor and his career. Paula's address is 40787 Canyon Heights Drive, Fremont, CA 94539; e-mail <vgt52b@prodigy.com>.
236. "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held on Oct. 26-27 at the Tarrytown Hilton in Tarrytown, N.Y. This annual gathering is always well-attended, and the agenda always interesting (this year the speakers will include Wilma Brown, Carey Cummings, Sue Dahlinger, David Houle, Bill Hyder, Dick Kitts, Sandra Kozinn, Linda Spessotti, and Diana Ver Nooy). Details are available from Robert E. Thomalen, Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512 <crwk02a@prodigy.com>.
237. "The Terror of Blue John Gap" continues to delight geologists who admire Conan Doyle's fiction, because the story offers an interesting mineral and a monster that turns out to be a Pleistocene cave bear. In a fine article about the story published in A.C.D. (1994), Dana Martin Batory and William A. S. Sarjeant suggest that the terror was not, in fact, a cave bear, but rather a great scimitar cat (**Homotherium sainzelli**). The dirktooth cat (**Megantereon megantereon**), was a close relative and much better known, since its upper canines were much longer, and thus tends to show up on postage stamps, such as the one just issued by the United States.
238. The Running Press published a semi-miniature edition (2.75 x 3.25 in.) of SHERLOCK HOLMES: TWO COMPLETE ADVENTURES in 1989, and there's a new edition (1994) with a truly handsome jacket and illustrations by Andrew Davidson, the British artist who designed the attractive Sherlockian covers for four stamp booklets issued by Britain in 1987-1988, and the set of five Sherlock Holmes stamps issued by Britain in 1993. The cost is $4.95 in bookstores, or $5.95 from the publisher (125 South 22nd Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103-4399); "But try your bookstore first!" the publisher urges.
239. John Ruyle modestly suggests in the 50th issue of Tantalus that ten years ago he had no idea that The Pequod Press would survive for ten years, but it certainly has, and its latest pressing will be THE ADVENTURE OF THE SECOND BRAIN, another of Dr. Fatso's accounts of the many cases of his friend Turlock Loams. $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) postpaid from John, at 521 Vincent Avenue Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
240. The lion's mane jellyfish seem to be spreading, turning up last year in an exhibit at the New England Aquarium in Boston (Mar 95 #3), and now, according to Peter Calamai, in an exhibit of "Phantoms of the Deep" at the Aquarium in Baltimore.
241. Francine Swift notes that the Carriage Museum at the Ladew Topiary Gardens contains a fine hansom, and a very sporting dog cart, for those who might wish to see what those methods of Canonical transportation look like close up. The Ladew Topiary Gardens are at 3535 Jarrettsville Pike, Monkton, MD 21111 (410-557-9570); that's north of Baltimore, about halfway to the border, and the dates are mid-April through the end of October.
242. Jun 96 #5: THE HERPETOLOGICAL HOLMES: A MONOGRAPH ON REPTILES AND AMPHIBIANS IN THE TIME OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, illustrated with artwork of the period, is the eighth volume in Donald Girard Jewell's continuing Sherlock Holmes Natural History series; the pamphlet costs $12.95 postpaid from the Pinchin Lane Press, 4685 Geeting Road, Westminster, MD 21158. There are many singular Sherlockian societies, of course, and Luther Norris delighted in making The Praed Street Irregulars singular in more ways than one. Vinnie Brosnan has recently found that Luther awarded the Investiture "Meadows" to Basil of Baker Street.
243. The Stage One Theatre Company will launch a tour of Tim Heath's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure at Sir Arthur Sullivan's" in Brighton on Sept. 11, playing for three weeks in Croydon, and will close at Walton-on-Thames on Nov. 30; details of the schedule are available from Stage One at 34 Jasmine Grove, London SE20 8JW, England). Miles Richardson will play Holmes, and he is the son of Ian Richardson, who was Holmes in two television films (and as far as I know this is the only father-and-son to play the role).

244. Jack Tracy ("A Case of Identity") died on May 9. He was an author, editor, and publisher, and a Doylean as well as a Sherlockian. His first article in The Baker Street Journal appeared in 1971, and his investigation of "St. Savior's near King's Cross" earned him the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article in the BSJ in 1977. His ENCYCLOPAEDIA SHERLOCKIANA (1977) and his Conan Doyle collections SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE PUBLISHED APOCRYPHA (1980) and MASTERWORKS OF CRIME & MYSTERY (1982) were widely distributed by trade publishers, and his own Gaslight Publications, founded in 1979, issued many fine Sherlockian books by authors such as Robert L. Fish, David L. Hammer, Michael Harrison, Paul D. Herbert, and Jon L. Lellenberg, as well as seven books by Conan Doyle, each carefully edited and with new Afterwords written by Doylean enthusiasts. The many books he wrote and edited and published are a fine memorial to Jack.
245. Hugh Scullion (Cadds Printing, 59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England) offers an illustrated sales list of Sherlockiana, old and new (the new includes The Norwood Magazine, which is "The Empty House" reset in Strand Magazine format, with color covers, at $5.00 postpaid); his e-mail address is <beetons@aol.com>.
246. Thanks to Debi Rotmil for an item from The Times (May 23): "Mr. Peter William Jeremy Huggins, of London SW4, Jeremy Brett, the actor, known for his portrayal of Sherlock Holmes on television, left estate valued at £634,744 net. He left £3,000 to his fan club known as 'The Regulars', with the wish it be divided equally between those persons who are members at his death." "The Regulars" is a group of fans who met during the run of "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (the group was founded by Linda Pritchard, and they were responsible for placing his memorial plaque at Wyndham's Theatre).
247. Further to the report (May 96 #3) on other sources for magazine file cases, it turns out that The Magafile Company is back in business ("after experiencing some difficulties that we have fortunately been able to overcome"); I have received a shipment of cases from them. They offer a wider range of sizes (heights and widths), and the address is Box 66, Vandalia, MO 63382.
248. Jun 96 #6: Plan ahead: "Sherlock's Secret Life" (a new play written by Ed. Lange) is scheduled at the New York Theatre Institute in Troy, Mar. 13-26, 1997. Lange describes the play as "a good mystery with lots of 'inside' references and plausible speculations," and the box-office address is 155 River Street, Troy, NY 12180 (518-274-3256).
249. SHERLOCK HOLMES: CLASSIC THEMES FROM 221B BAKER STREET is a new "music to read Sherlock Holmes by" compact disk produced by Varese Sarabande (with liner notes by the Scarlet Street's editor Richard Valley), offering music from films and television, from "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) to the Granada series. $18.98 postpaid (or $24.98 to Canada, $27.98 elsewhere); credit card orders welcome, and the Scarlet Street address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452. Note: all of the music is newly recorded, by an orchestra conducted by Larry Meyers.
250. An official Baker Street Irregulars necktie is again available (but only to those who have Investitures in the BSI), in a new edition (a bit wider, and with slightly different shades of the traditional purple, blue, and mouse); $23.00 postpaid ($25.00 outside the U.S.) from Wayne B. Swift, 4622 Morgan Drive, Chevy Chase, MD 20815-5315.
251. The Eighth International Holmesian Games will be held on Sept. 21-22 at an extinct volcano in Mount Tabor Park in Portland, Ore. [warning: the locals may claim that the volcano is extinct, but volcanoes are either active or dormant]. Additional information is available from Karen Bridger (940 S.W. Vincent Place, Portland, OR 97201) or Don MacLachlan <donmac@wimsey.com>.
252. Meg Moller Martin spotted an interesting item in the June issue of Esquire (in the "Reality Check"): some celebrities use pseudonyms when they travel (to avoid publicity and occasionally overeager admirers), and Indiana Pacer guard Reggie Miller checks into hotels as Sherlock Holmes.
253. Carolyn and Joel Senter's latest sales list ("Quick Watson...!" #2) offers some nice Sherlockian books, audio, video, pins, and much more, including some items for admirers of Inspector Morse; Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.
254. A new catalog from MindWare (6142 Olson Memorial Highway, Golden Valley, MN 55422) (800-999-0398) includes an illustration showing the Sherlockian artwork on the cover of Eleanor W. Hoomes' book CREATE-A-SLEUTH: WRITING A DETECTIVE STORY.
255. Jennie Paton spotted some videocassette bargains: Nicol Williamson's "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976) and Peter Cushing's "The Masks of Death" (1984) at $14.99 each from Movies Unlimited, 6736 Castor Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19149 (800-523-0823) <movies@moviesunltd.com>
256. Jennings Lang died on May 29. A veteran MCA-Universal vice-president, he was the producer of "Earthquake" and "Airport", and "They Might Be Giants" (1971) was "a Jennings Lang presentation."

Jul 96 #1:

257. A plaque on all your houses. Members of The Wolfe Pack were on hand at 454 West 35th in New York to watch the installation of a plaque that reads: "On this site stood the elegant brownstone of the corpulent fictional private detective Nero Wolfe. With his able assistant Archie Goodwin, Mr. Wolfe raised orchids and dined well, while solving over seventy cases as recorded by Rex Stout from 1934-1975." Three brownstones at the site were torn down after Wolfe retired to his house in Egypt, and a new building erected. The new building houses formerly homeless adults, and the ceremony was attended by Parks Commissioner Henry Stern and Rex Stout's grandson Reed Maroc.
258. The Wolfe Pack has about 400 members world-wide, and some of them are just as fanatic about Wolfe as some Sherlockians are about Holmes. Membership in The Wolfe Pack costs $25.00 for two years (including four issues of The Gazette); Box 822, Ansonia Station, New York, NY 10023.
259. The Sherlock Holmes Museum (221B Baker Street, London NW1 6XE, England) has a 28-page full-color catalog of Sherlockian souvenirs and mementoes: dolls, deerstalkers, buttons, badges, figurines, plaques, posters, prints, books, and videos. This is the museum founded some years ago by John Aidiniantz at 239 Baker Street; Grace Riley and Linda Riley are the directors now, and the e-mail address is <sherlock@easynet.co.uk>.
260. Albert R. "Cubby" Broccoli died on June 27. He started his film career in 1938 as an assistant directory with 20th Century-Fox, and is best known as the producer of all but one of the James Bond films. Born in New York, he was an agronomist before entering the film business. His obituary in the Washington Post noted that agronomy was in the family: forebears in Italy invented the vegetable that bears their name by crossing the Italian rabe with cauliflower.
261. Caliber has started a new comic-book mini-series called THE SEARCHERS, with a story by Colin Clayton and Chris Dows and artwork by Art Wetherell: issue #1 ($2.95) is in shops now. Real-life descendants of characters created by Wells, Verne, Haggard, Burroughs, and Conan Doyle "must band together in a mutual quest for not only their own survival, but that of reality itself." But the Conan Doyle character isn't a Holmes: she's a Moriarty.
262. Laura Kuhn notes that bargain-books catalogs from Edward R. Hamilton (Falls Village, CT 06031-5000) continue to offer all sort of Sherlockian bargains, and items such as THE BOXTREE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF TV DETECTIVES, by Geoff Tibballs (1992) at $3.95; with brief entries for many of the Sherlockian series from 1951 (with Alan Wheatley) through the Granada series.
263. The Washington Post has a contest each Sunday called "The Style Invitational" (in the Style section), and a recent contest called for tasteless "what is" jokes punning on someone's name. Among the runners-up were "What revolutionary leader led his guerrilla forces while wearing an evening gown and a string of pearls? (Che Edgar Hoover)" and "Who steals from the rich and mismanages the proceeds? (Robin HUD)", and the winning entry was

"Who wrote 'The Hatchback of Notre Dame? (Victor Yugo)." An honorable mention went to "What famous mystery writer had no heirs? (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle)".

264. Jul 96 #2: DINOSAUR TALES is a fine collection of stories by Ray Bradbury, illustrated by Gahan Wilson, Steranko, and others; the book was first published by Byron Preiss in 1983, and is now available in a new edition (New York: Barnes & Noble, 1996; 144 pp., $5.98). Bradbury dedicated the book to Willis O'Brien, "who animated the beasts in 'The Lost World' in 1925, and so changed my life, forever." Ray Harryhausen tells in his foreword of seeing the same film when he was five; he worked with Bradbury on "The Beast from 20,000 Fathoms" (based on the story "The Fog Horn", which is included in the book.
265. And no, there's no real Sherlockian connection for Cubby Broccoli, but the story about the vegetable having been named for an ancestor deserved to be shared. And apparently it's too good to be true; according to the Oxford English Dictionary, the word was first in print in 1699 and the vegetable wasn't named for anyone. But it's pleasant to think of great-grandfather telling his children the story.
266. Luci Zahray has noted Ellis Peters' THE HIPPOPOTAMUS POOL (New York: Warner Books, 1996; 384 pp.); this is the eighth in her series of mystery novels about Amelia Peabody Emerson, set in Victorian England and Egypt, all with direct or indirect Canonical echoes.
267. Hugh S. Scullion's SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES:--POLITICALLY CORRECT? examines the Canon for examples of language and attitudes and actions that would be considered incorrect or offensive by today's standards, and finds a lot of them, and he concludes that the author of the stories was a racist bigot. The paperback book (97 pages) costs $16.00 postpaid from Hugh Scullion at 59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England.
268. There's a new society lapel pin, from Watson's Tin Dispatchers, and the cost is $6.00 postpaid from Francine Kitts, 35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301.
269. For Sherlockian societies tired of the same old lapel pins and mugs and such: Calico Temporary Tattoos (2" x 2") cost $189.00 for 1,000 (and $10.00 for shipping); they use your design, and offer full-color service. And their address is 315 Plantation Way, Vacaville, CA 95687. No reports of a Sherlock Holmes Tattoo Society so far, but I wouldn't be surprised if someone starts one.
270. Further to earlier reports (Jul 95 #1 and Aug 95 #3) on cameo appearances by Sherlockians in non-Sherlockian books, Bill Nadel reports that you will find him (as Chick Nadel, a barkeep with a load of hot radios) on page 44 of James Ellroy's L.A. CONFIDENTIAL (New York: Mysterious Press, 1990).
271. Those who felt the recent film "Moll Flanders" (with Robin Wright, Morgan Freeman, Stockard Channing, and Jeremy Brett) was unfaithful to the book will welcome the news that Granada's version (written by Andrew Davies and starring Alex Kingston as Moll) will open the fall season on "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV in two episodes on Oct. 13 and 14. According to Anglofile, the new version is closely based on Defoe's book, and Dame Diana Rigg is in the cast. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
272. Jul 96 #3: CHINESE BOX MYSTERIES: SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Dan Kilcup (Springfield: Allen Wayne Limited, 1996; 268 pp., $24.00 postpaid), offers two pastiches involving an elderly Sherlock Holmes and a young John S. Watson (son of the doctor), and a third featuring the ghost of Sherlock Holmes. Kilcup reports that his grandmother was the niece of Mrs. Victoria Hampton, successor to Mrs. Hudson as housekeeper to Sherlock Holmes at Hudson Farm in Surrey, and that there are eight more stories in the mysterious Chinese box, to be published in a second volume later this year. The publisher's address is 5404-A Port Royal Road, Springfield, VA 22151 (800-695-8880); credit-card orders welcome.
273. R. Caton Woodville was a fine illustrator and artist, and you can see his illustrations for Arthur Conan Doyle's "An Exciting Christmas Eve; or, My Lecture on Dynamite" in the Boy's Own Paper (Christmas, 1883) and in Every Boy's Magazine (Feb.-Mar. 1905), "Uncle Jeremy's Household" in Boy's Own Paper (Jan. 8-Feb. 19, 1887) and Every Boy's Magazine (Feb.-Aug. 1907), "A Shadow Before" in the Windsor Magazine (Dec. 1898) and "The Pot of Caviare" in The Strand Magazine (Mar. 1908). He is more widely noted as an artist, and one of his classic works is "Saving the Guns at Maiwand" (showing the Royal Horse Artillery withdrawing with the enemy in hot pursuit during the Afghan war of 1879); a reproduction of the painting is available in full color and in two sizes from Cranston Fine Arts (Torwood House, Torwoodhill Road, Rhu Helensburgh, Scotland G84 8LE, Great Britain), and from an American distributor, Scottish Images, Box 160133, Sacramento, CA 95816 (800-700-0334), for $60.00 (30 x 20 in.) or $20.00 (14 x 10 in.). Shipping is $10.00, and credit-card orders are welcome. Scottish Images' catalog also offers a 75-mm metal figurine of Sherlock Holmes at $19.95, and reproductions of Napoleonic paintings by Holmes' grand-uncle, Horace Vernet.
274. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) offers copies of THE HOUNDS COLLECTION, which has 120 pages of stories, cartoons, poems, puzzles, and plays written by members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new, but a few pieces have appeared elsewhere. AU$18.00 (US$15.00 or £9.00) postpaid by air, or AU$11.50 (US$10.00 or £6.00); postpaid by surface mail. Payment in Australian dollars is preferred, but U.S. and British checks and currency are acceptable.
275. Further to the report (May 96 #4) on plans, or lack of plans, for preservation of the Round Reading Room in the British Museum, Catherine Cooke notes that the summer 1996 issue of the British Museum Magazine reports that the original blue, white, and gold interior will be restored and used for a new Information Center that will have terminals connected to a multimedia database, and a growing range of CD-ROM discs which can be consulted on "topics such as the Anglo-Saxons, the history of money, or the Rosetta Stone."
276. Thanks to Didi Johnson for recommending THE BETTER BROWN STORIES, by Allan Ahlberg (New York: Viking, 1995; 97 pp., $12.99); it's a grand existentialist story for children, about "a monstrous dog, a monstrous Milkman, free money, some Mysterious Men, a forgotten baby, baffled police, and a bewildered town." The monstrous dog isn't our Hound, but the author does thank Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the Acknowledgements, and rightfully so. Ahlberg is British, and with his wife Janet has written many other childrens' books that are reported to be just as good, if not as Sherlockian, as this one.
277. Jul 96 #4: Plan well ahead: The Pleasant Places of Florida will mark their 25th anniversary with a "Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium" in or near St. Petersburg on May 2-4, 1997. The contact is Carl L. Heifetz, 5490 Salem Square Drive South, Palm Harbor, FL 34685-11387; e-mail to <72642.3220@compuserve.com>.
278. Thomas F. McGee ("Wilson, the Notorious Canary Trainer") died on June 25. He was an Army cryptographer and a commercial artist before beginning his career as a social worker, and he was a member of many of the Sherlockian societies in Chicago as well as The Baker Street Irregulars, from whom he received his investiture in 1981. He contributed to our literature in the 1970s and 1980s, and in 1976 he designed and manufactured the first Sherlockian chess set.
279. You'll win one of 150 signed and numbered uncorrected proofs of A LETTER TO MARY (to be published later this year), and an acknowledgement in the next book in Laurie R. King's series about Mary Russell, if you submit the best "Sherlockismus" (or possibly "Russellismus") to be uttered (preferably) by Mary. A Sherlockismus, identified by Ronald A. Knox, is an exchange such as: "I followed you." "I saw nobody." "That is what you must expect to see when I am following you." But for the contest, it can also be a witty statement. Entries to Rebecca J. Anderson, 1877 Dumont Street, London, ON N5W 2S3, Canada <rebecca@mercury.execulink.com>; the deadline is Aug. 17.

280. Karen M. Mullen (721 Vashti Drive, Houston, TX 77037-4128) <kmam1@aol.com> offers her graphite print (12 x 20 in.) titled "A Tribute to Jeremy Brett as Sherlock Holmes" ($75.00 postpaid; credit-card orders welcome).
281. Chris Redmond notes that THE ADVENTURES OF SURELOCKED HOMES: MAKING ENTRY LESS ELEMENTARY still is offered by the State Farm Insurance Companies, Box 7661, Westchester, IL 60154; the pleasant 16-page pamphlet was first issued in 1975, with suggestions on how to make your home safer, and there's no charge (although they hope that you'll think of them for home insurance).
282. Ted Friedman made a pleasant discovery in Alan MacKinnon's MURDER, REPEAT MURDER (Garden City: Doubleday & Co., 1952). The dedication reads: "This book is offered to James Keddie Jr. of Boston, Mass. and the Baker Street Irregulars, in some slight return for the friendliest and most encouraging letter a downhearted writer can ever have received."
283. Jim Suszynski's daughter spotted Larry "Sheerluck" Holmes in a deerstalker in "The Barking!" in the comic book SCOOBY-DOO #11 (Aug. 1996) from Archie Comics ($1.50).
284. Priscilla Juvelis (1166 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138; 617-497-7570) offers interesting material in her catalogs, including from time to time some interesting Sherlockian and Doyleana. And her summer miscellany (list 96-3) has a still from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) showing Holmes meeting Sir Henry, signed by Basil Rathbone in blue ink across the margin and a bit of the photograph, in fine condition; $150.00.

285. Jul 96 #5: Reported by Ralph Hall: MYSTERIOUS MENAGERIE, edited by Cynthia Manson (Berkley, 1996, $5.99); with a Sherlockian dog on the front cover. THE BIG BOOK OF BERENSTAIN BEARS BEGINNER BOOKS, by Stan and Jan Berenstain (Random House, 1996, $10.00); with reprints of two stories about the Bear Detectives. THE JEWELLED PEACOCK OF PERSIA, by Jake and Luke Thoene (Moorings/Ballantine, 1996, $5.99); the third in a series of "Baker Street Mysteries". ESCAPADE, by Walter Satterthwait (St. Martin's, 1996, $5.99); a reprint of his Conan Doyle/Houndini pastiche (Sep 95 #4). CLASSIC MYSTERIES: A COLLECTION OF MIND-BENDING MASTERPIECES, edited by Molly Cooper (Lowell House, 1996, $5.95); with "The Veiled Lodger". And: Sherlockian allusions in THE CASE OF THE U.S. SPACE CAMP MISSION, starring Mary Kate and Ashley (a videocassette from Kid Vision/Warner, $9.95), and a Sherlockian Roquefort, the Cheese Detective, in THE ARISTOCATS (from Walt Disney Home Video, $12.99).
286. Our recent set of stamps honoring folk heroes, with designs by David La Fleur, includes a stamp honoring the Mighty Casey (who was launched into legend on June 3, 1888, when Ernest L. Thayer's poem "Casey at the Bat" first was published in the San Francisco Examiner). In a footnote in his THE ANNOTATED CASEY AT THE BAT (New York: Clarkson N. Potter, 1967), Martin Gardner noted that Mudville's civic leaders, in an effort to change its rather forlorn image, had the town's name officially changed to Moorville, but residents of the area refused to use the new name, and the town continued to deteriorate rapidly. By 1907 it had disappeared entirely, explaining why neither Mudville nor Moorville can be found in Kansas today (although, of course, there was a Moorville at the time of "The Three Garridebs"). Gardner's friend John Bennett Shaw often proudly admitted that he had helped with certain aspects of the book.
287. Steve Legenhausen has nice news for those who would like to see just what the Vermissa Valley looked like in the days of the Scowrers: there are many 19th-century photographs, with informative captions, in IMAGES OF AMERICA: POTTSVILLE, by Leo L. Ward and Mark T. Major (Dover: Arcadia Publishing, 1995; 144 pp., $16.99). Pottsville, the county seat of Schuylkill County, is where the real Mollie Maguires were known and feared; the publisher's address is One Washington Center, Dover, NH 03820.
288. I mentioned earlier (Apr 96 #1) an exhibition called "Greuze: A Portraitist for the 90's" at the Frick; the show has closed, but Sonia Fetherston notes that two of his portraits are part of the permanent collection: he painted famous Comedie Francaise actor Baptiste AOene and his young wife in the early 1790s. The Frick is at Fifth Avenue at East 70th Street in New York.
289. Bert Coules has reported on the auction (at Phillip's of London, on July 11) of items from the estate of the late Peter Cushing. One of them was a deerstalker "worn by Cushing in the role of Sherlock Holmes" (estimated at £30) that brought £1,200. A Cox Moore red smoking jacket (also worn in the role) sold for £480, and a Berman green tweed suit (ditto) for £440, and a small collection of pipes and smoking accessories (ditto) for £950. And a collection of film and television scripts annotated by Cushing (including "The Masks of Death" and "The Abbot's Cry") brought £1,250.

290. Jul 96 #6: The Quality Paperback Book Club now offers a ten-volume uniform Sherlock Holmes set for $34.95 (that's the nine volumes of the Canon, plus their 96-page "guide to the lives of the great detective and his creator"); the club is for members only, but it's easy to join: the address is Camp Hill, PA 17011-9902.
291. The summer 1996 issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal has arrived, with the usual fine assortment of interesting material, including Catherine Cooke's enthusiastic evaluation of Michael Harrison's IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1958) as the first of a series on "The Classics Reassessed", and Nicholas Utechin's announcement that next month the BBC will issue a videocassette with two shows ("The Speckled Band" and "The Illustrious Client") from the 1960s television series starring Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock (the cassette will be in the British PAL format, and so far there's no word of plans for a release in the American NTSC format). The SHJ is published two times a year, and a subscription costs $21.00 to the U.S. (different prices for other countries); checks payable to the society, and you should write to Bob Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England.
292. The United States certainly wasn't the only country to honor the Year of the Rat on stamps (Mar 96 #1); there are two rats on a handsome souvenir sheet from Australia (for Christmas Island, which of course is closer to Sumatra).
293. William E. Butler's SHERLOCKIAN BOOKPLATES (Jul 92 #3) still is available from its publisher (Silent Books, Boxworth End, Swavesey, Cambridge CB4 5RA, England) for £9.95 postpaid. The 57-page booklet does a fine job of showing a wide variety of bookplates created for and by many Sherlockians from Vincent Starrett and Edgar W. Smith to more recent times.
294. The South Atlantic Chronicle (The Journal of the St. Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha Philatelic Society), and this year it published Michael D. Mueller's three-part article on "The Saint Helena Hypothesis". He explores the Sherlockian and philatelic connections of four well-known men: Darwin, Napoleon, Halley, and Newton (three of them actually visited the island, and are shown on its stamps, and of course St. Helena is mentioned in the Canon). The set of three issues is available ($10.00 postpaid) from the author at 3201 Wisconsin Avenue NW #401, Washington, DC 20016-3802.
295. Jerry Wachs reports that John English Gifts Ltd. (6 Princes Arcade, Piccadilly, London WS1Y 6DS, England) have a sales list of Sherlockian figures, including the Bossons wall sculptures, Robert Harrop's Country Companions (the Holmes and Watson dogs), Cloudside figures, and chess sets.
296. John W. Chancellor died on July 12. He began his career in journalist in 1948, moving to television in 1950, and gained national attention with his on-the-scene coverage of the school-integration struggle in Little Rock in 1957; he had become one of America's most highly-regarded television journalists when he retired in 1993, and he often referred to the Canon during his broadcasts (during the 1992 presidential campaign he called Bush and Baker "the Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson of the Republican Party")
297. Jul 96 #7: There's still time to register for Bouchercon 27 (in St. Paul, Oct. 10-13); I've not heard about any Sherlockian programming, but Douglas Greene's JOHN DICKSON CARR: THE MAN WHO EXPLAINED MIRACLES has been nominated for an Anthony in the "best critical work" category.

- Bouchercon is the world mystery convention, named in honor of Anthony Boucher; additional information is available from Bouchercon 27, 4400 Upton Avenue South #408, Minneapolis, MN 55410 <bcon27@winternet.com>.
298. What place, mentioned in the Canon, was a city when Conan Doyle was there, but isn't now? I'll give the answer on the next page.
299. Ev Herzog has forwarded an interesting article in the New York Press (Jan. 3) about Richard B. Shull -- well, it's really about lost kingdoms, such as the Kingdom of Araucania and Patagonia, which briefly existed more than a century ago in what is now Chile. But there's still a Prince Phillippe, who lives in France, and a North American Araucania Royalist Society, of which Shull is director; their newsletter is called The Steel Crown (his address is 400 West 43rd Street #33-A, New York, NY 10036-6301) and they have a web site <<http://www.pitt.edu/~figtree/kap.html>>. He also has been knighted by the Sovereign Military Order of the Temple of Jerusalem, and the Orthodox Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and he is a member of the Society of the Colonial Wars, the Veterans Corps of Artillery, the Military Society of the War of 1812, the Colonial Order of the Acorn, the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, the Honorary Order of Kentucky Colonels, Washington Irving's St. Nicholas Society, and the Dutch Treat Club. Not mentioned in the article is the Baker Street Irregulars (in which his Investiture is "An Actor and a Rare One"). When you're in New York you can see him on stage in the musical "Victor/Victoria" at the Marquis Theatre.
300. Russ Geoffrey reports that the latest catalog from What on Earth has handcast stone busts (also useful as bookends) of Holmes and Watson at $54.95 each plus shipping; 2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087-2351 (800-945-2552). And the new catalog from Cash's of Ireland has a painted resin Sherlockian chess set for $295.00 plus shipping; Box 158, Plainview, NY 11803 (800-223-8100).
301. Paul Martin notes that a yet another hand-decorated Sherlockian chess set is available from British Exports Ltd., Box 11240, Merrillville, IN 46411; $450.00. Is anyone keeping count of how many different Sherlockian chess sets there are?
302. Christopher Roden reports that next month the Calabash Press will publish THE CASE FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MUSGRAVE RITUAL, with essays on the story by Sherlockians and Doyleans. The 167-page book will be available in cloth ($33.00 by air, $29.00 by surface) and paper ($22.50 by air, $19.50 by surface) and the address is Ashcroft, 2 Abbottsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester, CH4 0JG, England.
303. The Bull Terrier Club of Boston University is again planning an excursion to a polo match (USA vs. Argentina) at Glen Farm in Portsmouth, R.I., on Sept. 7. Polo is mentioned in the Canon, of course, and details about the event are available from Scott Monty, 1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127-4342 <wsmonty@bu.edu>.
304. Jul 96 #8: Philip J. Attwell reports that Maggie Fox and Sue Ryding will star in "Move Over Moriarty" (they play all the roles, in fact) at The Castle in Wellingborough on Nov. 20. The play is a comedy, and the duo has had high praise from The Independent. The Castle's address is Castle Way, Wellingborough, Northants. NN8 1XA, England (01933-270-007).
305. The Commonwealth of Dominica has just issued a sheetlet of nine stamps honoring "Legendary Sleuths of the Silver Screen", and one of those legendary sleuths is Sherlock Holmes, as portrayed by Basil Rathbone. The others are Sam Spade (Humphrey Bogart), James Bond (Sean Connery), Dick Tracy (Warren Beatty), Charlie Chan (Sidney Toler), The Thin Man (William Powell), Inspector Clouseau (Peter Sellers), Philip Marlowe (Robert Mitchum), and Inspector Poirot (Peter Ustinov); there's also a separate souvenir sheet for Miss Marple (Margaret Rutherford). And there is no need to travel to the Windward Islands to get the Sherlock Holmes stamp: Benton Wood has a limited supply of the nine-stamp sheetlets, priced at $7.50 postpaid. Ben's address is Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222-0740. And (for those who are not philatelists) Ben also offers a fine sales list for the Pleasant Places of Florida's "Super Sherlockian Sale" of books, videocassettes, and other Sherlockiana.
306. Gary Thaden has passed on a copy of the summer issue America Brews News, a newsletter for people who brew their own beer. The company offers recipe kits (with ingredients and instructions) for Sherlock's Bitter ($20.95) and Watson's Cream Stout ($21.65); shipping extra. The address is 9925 Lyndale Avenue South, Bloomington, MN 55438 (800-200-3647) <abrews@aol.com>.
307. What place, mentioned in the Canon, was a city when Conan Doyle was there, but isn't now? Brooklyn (mentioned in "The Red Circle") was a city when he was there during his lecture tour in 1894; it was annexed into the city of New York in 1898, and now is a borough. If you want to try the question on non-Sherlockians: name a city in the United States that once had a population more than a million, and no longer exists.
308. The latest issue of the Reichenbachian Cliff-Notes, edited by Kendall Pagan and published occasionally by The Reichenbach Cliff-Divers, has the usual assortment of skewed Sherlockiana, including a report on Juan Melondirge's plans for IRREGULAR MEMORIES OF 1996 and its supplements JOE BOB'S IRREGULAR MAMMIES OF 1996 and IRREGULAR MUMMERIES OF 1996. A few copies still are available from the Lascarian Press, 4010 North Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614 ($1.00 postpaid).
309. Paula M. Brown has more information on the memorial to Jeremy Brett at the Holiday Inn (Union Square) in San Francisco on Sept. 14-15; she has blocked rooms at the Holiday Inn and at the nearby (and less expensive) Hotel Rex, and is lining up speakers and other items for the agenda. Her address is 40787 Canyon Heights Drive, Fremont, CA 94539 <vgtd52b@prodigy.com>.

310. Aug 96 #1: Claudette Colbert died on July 30. She started her film career in "Love O' Mike" (1927), and won an Academy Award as best actress in "It Happened One Night" (1934), and became one of the most-admired stars in Hollywood; when she was awarded a Kennedy Center Honor in 1989, Gregory Peck introduced her as the "best thing we've gotten from France since the Statue of Liberty." She also acted on stage (including an appearance with Rex Harrison and Jeremy Brett in "Aren't We All" in 1985). And if you have a chance to see her with James Stewart in the splendid comedy "It's a Wonderful World" (1939), don't miss it: in one scene Colbert asks Stewart, "Couldn't you just think of me as if I were Sherlock Holmes?" And he replies, "OK, have it your own way. You're Sherlock Holmes. Here's your pipe."
311. Sorry about that: the author of the fine Amelia Peabody Emerson mysteries (Jul 96 #2) is Elizabeth Peters (a pseudonym used by Barbara Mertz). Ellis Peters (a pseudonym used by Edith Pargeter) wrote about Brother Cadfael and others. And of course there is Ludovic Peters (a pseudonym used by Peter Ludwig Brent), who wrote about Ian Firth. It may well be that there are no mysteries written by someone who really is named Peters. Or perhaps someone named Peters is writing mysteries, but has wisely chosen a pseudonym.
312. "A Japanese museum has launched a bizarre search for bricks from buildings featured in the adventures of Sherlock Holmes," according to a story in The Guardian (July 5, 1996), at hand from Jon Lellenberg. Not so bizarre, in fact: the World Brick Museum in Maizaru is preparing for an exhibition of British building bricks, and has targeted New Scotland Yard, Covent Garden, the Royal Albert Hall, and St. Pancras Station. The Guardian also reports that Sherlock Holmes was created when Arthur Conan Doyle lived in Portsmouth, "where there is concern at the methods that may be used by Japanese tourists to obtain the bricks."
313. Also at hand from Jon are articles from Yorkshire about the start of filming on "The Golden Afternoon" (Jan 96 #7), the film about the two girls who created the Cottingley fairies and fooled Conan Doyle and many others. The film is budgeted at £9 million, and will star Peter O'Toole as Conan Doyle and Harvey Keitel as Houdini. The film has a new title ("Illumination"), and is scheduled for release next spring. Houdini? Well, according to the film-

- makers, Houdini and Conan Doyle "were friends who famously fell out over the authenticity of the pictures" of the fairies. Not true, but of course two big names are better than one.
314. Is anyone planning a visit to Moscow? Does anyone know anyone who is planning a trip to Moscow? I still need to find someone who can retrieve some Sherlockian videocassettes that I am reluctant to entrust to the Russian mail system. Please let me know if you can help.
315. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has arrived, with the last installment of Jeremy Brett's conversations with David Stuart Davies and Jessie Lilley. a fine discussion of film and television versions of "Laura" (it's not all that easy to discuss a television program when neither script nor tape have survived), and much more. Scarlet Street is published quarterly ($20.00 a year), and the address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
316. Aug 96 #2: Herman Herst Jr. (Box 1583, Boca Raton, FL 33429) distributed copies of his illustrated report on the world's first Christmas card at the annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars in 1981, and it is available from him again for $2.00 and a #10 55c SASE. Why would the story of an 1840 Christmas card be of interest to Sherlockian? It was designed by Richard Doyle, uncle of Arthur Conan Doyle.
317. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will convene on Tuesday, Oct. 29, at the Cadillac Ranch in Denver, during the annual meeting of the Geological Association of America. Sherlockians and geologists are welcome to join in honoring the world's first forensic geologist; the restaurant is in Larimer Square (1400 Larimer Street), and the festivities will begin with cocktails at 7:00 and continue with dinner at 8:00; the dinner will cost $28.95 (with tax and tip included), and a choice of three entrees (prime rib, salmon, or chicken). It would be helpful (although it's not absolutely necessary) if you let me know in advance if you will attend the gathering.
318. The current issue of Anglofile reports that Raymond Benson will be the new author of additions to the James Bond saga, following in the footsteps of John Gardner (who "has tired of the 007 writing chores after 14 novels and two novelizations of Bond movies"); this may mean that Gardner will at long last have time to write the third novel in his "Moriarty" trilogy. And we will see some Sherlockian actors in non-Sherlockian roles: Christopher Lee will play Lucas De Beaumanoir in a BBC/A&E six-hour mini-series based on Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe", and Michael Caine will star as Capt. Nemo in an ABC-TV mini-series "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea". Anglofile (a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment) costs $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
319. Two of Val Andrews' British pastiches were on the shelves at a local Barnes & Noble, and presumably are available elsewhere; Andrews is a knowledgeable magician, and it shows. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE EGYPTIAN HALL ADVENTURE (London: Breese Books, 1993, 112 pp., $9.00) has Holmes and Watson involved with J. N. Maskelyne in 1898; SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HOUDINI BIRTHRIGHT was published in 1995 and also costs $9.00 (Sep 95 #5).
320. "The Sherlock Holmes Museum (221B Baker Street, London NW1 6XE, England)" is what I gave as the address last month (Jul 96 #1), and of course some readers were quick to wonder whether the Museum had moved from 239 to 221 (or had persuaded the Royal Mail to give the 221 address to the Museum). No. But: as far as I know, a letter addressed to the Museum at 221b will be delivered to the Museum at 239, and a letter sent to Sherlock Holmes at 221b will be delivered to his secretary at Abbey House (since the carriers in England pay attention, which cannot always be said of carriers here).
321. A correspondent in England reports that John Aidiniantz is now allowed out of jail each day, but must return to the nick in Richmond for the night. Aidiniantz, formerly the proprietor of The Sherlock Holmes Museum, was convicted on charges of obtaining £1.2 million by deception (in this case it multiple mortgages on the same properties), and was fined £30,000 in costs and jailed for three years in Jan. 1995; the British legal system allows one-third off for good behavior, so he's likely to be paroled soon. Mrs. Grace Riley, currently the Museum's proprietor, is his mother.
322. Aug 96 #3: Don't delay too long: Malice Domestic IX will be held at the Hyatt Regency in Bethesda on May 2-4, 1997, but registration is likely to close in October (attendance is limited to 700); Malice Domestic is a convention for fans of mysteries of manners, and this year's gathering was nicely done. Details are available from Malice Domestic, Box 31137, Bethesda, MD 20824-1137 <malice@erols.com> <<http://www.erols.com/malice>>.
323. The Patchwork Playhouse performed Catherine Baker's dramatizations of four Sherlock Holmes stories in 1994-95, and two more plays have been scheduled: "The Noble Bridegroom" (Oct. 3-19, 1996) and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (Mar. 13-Apr. 5, 1997). The box-office address is: 711 East Main Street, Lexington, SC 29072 (800-477-7252).
324. Most if not all of the volumes in the "Franklin Library of Mystery Masterpieces" are now on the bargain tables at Barnes & Noble at $4.98 each, and one of them is the handsome GREAT CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published in 1987 (at $19.95); it has 19 stories, and five excellent illustrations by Mitchell Hooks, and a rear section reprinting many of Julian Wolff's fine Sherlockian maps. You can identify the discount variant on the title-page verso, which no longer states that Magico Magazine owns the copyright for the maps (which apparently were taken from the Magico reprint of Julian's THE SHERLOCKIAN ATLAS).
325. The Pequot Press presses on, with Dr. Fatso's report on Turlock Loams's encounter with the Rat Girl, Bulldog Drumstick, three sinister rodents, and their mysterious bonny blue eggs. THE ADVENTURE OF THE THREE RODENTS is available (hand-crafted as always) from Fatso's literary agent John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707: $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
326. Mark Frost's Conan Doyle pastiche THE SIX MESSIAHS was issued on audiocassettes last year (Mar 95 #1); the six-hour audio version (abridged with the approval of the author) is read on four cassettes by David Warner with fine voice and style (Dove Audio, $24.95).
327. Syd Goldberg forwarded an item from the July 7 issue of the N.Y. Post: Otto Penzler, proprietor of the Mysterious Bookshop in New York, was in London scouting for a location for the British sister bookstore he hopes to open later this year. And in September he will spend a month as "the Alistair Cooke of mystery" when he does the introductions for 59 mystery classics on the Turner Classic Movie channel.
328. An Orthodox rabbi is found shot to death in his study in the synagogue, in Batya Swift Yasgur's nice short story "Kaddish" in EQMM (Sept.-Oct. 1996); there's a copy of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES among the books on his desk, and there's good reason for that.
329. Further to the earlier review of the eight audiocassettes from Brilliance Audio starring Tom Conway and Nigel Bruce (Jun 96 #1), Ken Greenwald notes that he has just finished recording the introductions for the next four cassettes (the introductions include a dramatic encounter between Mycroft and Moriarty). There will be two more cassettes, for a series total of 16, and there's a possibility of a new series of 20 cassettes with 40 programs from 1947-1949, starring John Stanley as Sherlock Holmes.
330. Aug 96 #4: Jessica Mitford died on July 23. Time magazine dubbed her the "Queen of Muckrakers" when she wrote her expose of the funeral industry in THE AMERICAN WAY OF DEATH (1963), and in her long career as a writer she also attacked the Famous Writers School, overpriced restaurants, and the American prison system. And when her how-I-did-it book POISON PENMANSHIP was published in 1979, she happily posed in deerstalker and cape in advertisements in the N.Y. Times and other papers.

331. Eddie Maguire's A DEATH AT THE CRICKET (Bridgwater: Big House Books, 1996) follows in the footsteps of last year's THE IRISH PROFESSOR (Sep 95 #2); the new pastiche takes Holmes and Watson to Sussex for a cricket match and a murder mystery. The 30-page pamphlet costs $6.50 postpaid from Ian Henry Publications, 20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England.
332. The sixth issue of The Shoso-in Bulletin has arrived from The Men with the Twisted Konjo, with 162 pages (in English) of articles, pastiches, poetry, and illustrations by contributors from Japan and eight other nations. The journal is edited by Yuichi Hirayama, and is truly an international effort (don't neglect the delightful Japanese cover artwork, which isn't). $12.00 postpaid (to United States and Canada) from Jennie C. Paton, 206 Loblolly Lane, Statesboro, GA 30458; or £7.50 postpaid (to Britain and Europe) from John Hall, 20 Drury Avenue, Horsforth, Leeds, W. Yorks. LS18 4BR, England. Checks in U.S. dollars to Jennie; checks in sterling to John (or any other nation's currency, John notes).
333. One of the nice things about modern technology is that it allows Sherlockian (and other) authors access to broader audiences than is possible with ink-on-paper publication. John Hall's monograph 140 DIFFERENT VARIETIES (on the use of tobacco in the Canon) was published as pamphlet in 1994 by the Northern Musgraves, and can now be read on the World Wide Web at the Pipe Digest home page at <<http://www.pipes.org>>.
334. Luci Zahray kindly forwarded an excerpt from the list of items available at Mark Hime's booth at the New York International Antiquarian Book Fair last April: a fine, bright copy of the first edition of THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($2,250); one of the 147 sets of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (1953) with Conan Doyle's signature ($2,750); and the almost-complete manuscript of "The Valley of Fear" ($525,000). They may still be available; you can write to Bibliotopus, 2142 Century Park Lane, Century City, CA 90067.
335. Pepper & Stern are offering books from the library of Nigel Bruce, including his copies of the first editions of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1892) and THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1894), at $6,500 for the set. More reasonable, perhaps, is his wife Bunny's signed copy of THE BEDSIDE BOOK OF FAMOUS BRITISH STORIES (1940), with "The Speckled Band", at $150. Pepper & Stern's address is 1980 Cliff Drive #224, Santa Barbara, CA 93109 <psbookwest@aol.com>.
336. THE KINGS' TALES, by Phillip and Robert King (London: B. T. Batsford, 1994; 142 pp.), is a collection of bridge-problem pastiches, done in the styles of authors such as Chandler, Runyon, Wodehouse, Asimov, Kafka, and Coward, and one of them is "A Study in Sherlock". $20.95 postpaid from Trafalgar Square, Howe Hill Road, North Pomfret, VT 05053 (800-423-4525).

337. Aug 96 #5: The BBC has ended its educational daytime programs on Radio 3 FM, but continues to broadcast School Radio programs at night (when teachers can make off-the-air recordings for later use). And "Music Workshop" will offer "Sherlock Holmes and the Rogues Gallery" at 3:00-3:20 am Fridays from Sept. 20 to Nov. 29 ("Holmes and Watson unravel a mystery, set in Victorian London, as we do a spot of musical detection; the musical focus is pitch and structure"). BBC Educational Publishing (P.O. Box 234, Wetherby, West Yorks. LS23 7EU, England) mentions teacher's notes, radio tapes, pupils' booklets, and music workshop cassettes in the catalog covering this series and many others on BBC radio and television.
338. The Conan Doyles liked Mercedes-Benz cars: Sir Arthur owned one, and his sons Denis and Adrian owned and raced four of them. One of the sons' cars is preserved in the collection at the Mercedes-Benz Museum in Stuttgart, and that's where another one was sold in April at an auction conducted by Brooks of London. Their 1934-35 7.1-litre supercharged Mercedes-Benz type 'SSK' two-seat competition Spyder rated four full pages in the auction catalog, with photographs of the car as it looks now, and when they raced it in England and Ireland. And there is some evidence that when the car was built for Denis and Adrian, Mercedes-Benz used the engine from Sir Arthur's older and more sedate car. Adrian sold the car in 1948, and it has been in the hands of collectors ever since; it was fully restored in 1990, and then was driven in rallies in England and Europe. The catalog described the car as "an immediately usable, reliable, and spectacular thoroughbred mount, ideal for a full programme of vintage motor sporting events of all kinds." And it sold for 1.2 million deutschmarks (about $813,600).
339. The Montague Street Lodgers of Brooklyn celebrated their tenth anniversary last year, and commemorated the event with a souvenir magnifying glass (5.25" long) $7.00 postpaid from Peter Crupe (checks payable to him, please), at 1533 64th Street, Brooklyn, NY 11219-5709.
340. Masamichi Higurashi has helped to make some American pastiches available in Japan, providing translations for Edward B. Hanna's THE WHITECHAPEL HORRORS in two volumes (Tokyo: Fusosha, 1996; 336/312 pp., Y560/Y540), and Randall Collins' THE CASE OF THE PHILOSOPHER'S RING (Tokyo: Kawade Shobo Shinsha, 1996); 272 pp., Y700). Masamichi also has translated four stories [RedH/Twis/Blue/Silv] for HOLMES THE GREAT DETECTIVE (Tokyo: Kodansha, 1996; 224 pp., Y560) in a children's series; the book has attractive illustrations by Hitoshi Wakana and "Ki".
341. For Jeremy Brett fans: Ashley Lynn Decker reports that the episode of "The Incredible Hulk" on the Sci-Fi Channel on Sept. 16 will be "Of Guilt, Models and Murders" (with Brett in the cast).
342. Collectors seeking specific old, used, and rare books have long relied on book-search firms, and now there's an electronic equivalent on the World Wide Web at <<http://www.bibliofind>>. Dealers post what they have in the data base, and you can run a search on-line (and if you don't find what you're looking for, you can put a want-list on file).

343. Aug 96 #6: CSA Telltapes has issued another set of Sherlockian audiocassettes: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, EPISODE TWO has two cassettes with three stories ("The Cardboard Box", "The Man with the Twisted Lip", and "The Bruce-Partington Plans") read by Edward Hardwicke, who as always does a splendid job with the text and voices; £9.00 postpaid, from CSA Telltapes, 101 Chamberlayne Road, London NW10 3ND, England. SIX GREAT ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES has the earlier and the current cassettes, at £14.00 postpaid. The cassettes also are available in stores in the United States at $12.00/$19.95; the distributor is Cimino Publishing, Box 174, Carle Place, NY 11514; $14.00/$22.95 postpaid.
344. Robert C. Hess (559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwaters, NY 11718) offers a new sales list, with figurines, statues, programs, posters, lobby cards, books, magazines, and other Sherlockiana.
345. Sonia Fetherston reports that the new film "A Very Brady Sequel" has Jesse Lee (Bobby Brady) with deerstalker and magnifying glass while he searches for Cindy's missing Kitty Carry-All doll (which also wears a deerstalker). The film is a sequel to "The Brady Bunch Movie" (1995), which of course was a sequel to the television sit-com series "The Brady Bunch" (1969-1974). I've not yet heard any rumors of a television series sequel to the films.
346. And Susan Dahlinger reports that in the new film "The Island of Dr. Moreau" Val Kilmer (Douglas) explains the "dog in the night-time" Sherlockism to a group of Moreau's genetic "children".
347. William Seil has reported that his pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TITANIC TRAGEDY is available for $14.95 (postage extra) from Breese Books, 164 Kensington Park Road, London W11 2ER, England (credit-card orders accepted). According to Bill, the 256-page book also is carried by some of the mystery and other bookshops in the United States.
348. Enola Stewart (Gravesend Books, Box 235 Pocono Pines, PA 18350) has issued a new catalog offering lots of rare, unusual, and interesting Sherlockiana and other material, much of it from the collection of Julian Wolff, who was for many years the leader of The Baker Street Irregulars, and editor of The Baker Street Journal.

349. John Farrell has discovered an intriguing CD issued by Channel Classics in 1995: "Modern Times: Dutch Jewish Composers 1928-1943" (CCS 7995); the contents include "Deux Homages" for solo piano by Leo Smit, and one of them is "a Sherlock Holmes" (a Charleston written in 1928).
350. Forecast for September: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (a new pastiche by Larry Millett) from Viking/Penguin, $22.95; THE LOST WORLD (the sequel to Michael Crichton's JURASSIC PARK) in paperback from Ballantine, $7.99; THE LIST OF 7 (the Conan Doyle pastiche by Mark Frost) reissued in paperback from Avon, $5.99. And David Stuart Davies' BENDING THE WILLOW: JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES (Calabash Press, 192 pp., £19.99) will have its launch party at Crime in Store in London on Oct. 23.

351. Sep 96 #1: "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" has returned. Leslie Bricusse was hired by MGM to write a new score for a film version of the musical "Baker Street" (1964), but the film was never produced, and Bricusse eventually used his songs in "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (1988), which received lukewarm reviews in London and the provinces. And "The Revenge of Sherlock Holmes" appears from the program to be a restaging of the musical; the new version was produced at the Bristol Old Vic in Mar. 1993 (but not reported by any local Sherlockians), and then in May 1996 at the Little Theatre in Gateshead (noted in a newspaper article recently forwarded by Jon Lellenberg). Samuel French Ltd., is handling licensing for amateur productions.
352. The August Derleth Society commemorated the 25th anniversary of Derleth's death last June in Sauk City, with a tour of his home "Place of Hawks" and a visit to his grave, according to an article in the local paper, at hand from George Vanderburgh. Peter Ruber, one of Derleth's editors, noted that "Derleth's genius was in storytelling, whether he wrote about the people of his home town or detective stories or stories of the macabre and the supernatural." Some of those detective stories will be found in the Solar Pons saga, of course. Membership in the society (including the quarterly newsletter) costs $10.00 a year; Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583.
353. Plan ahead: Theatre Aquarius will present 19 performances of Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Hamilton, Ont., on Feb. 12-Mar. 1, 1997; the box-office address is 190 King William Street, Hamilton, ON L8R 1A8, Canada (800-465-7529).
354. The summer 1996 issue of the Amherst alumni magazine has an amusing item about Henry Ward Beecher, who in addition to being admired by Watson was an Amherst graduate (1834) and author of the novel NORWOOD, "of which he characteristically remarked, 'People used to say that I had had a hand in [my sister's] writing of UNCLE TOM'S CABIN, but when NORWOOD was published I heard no more talk of this kind.'"
355. The Friends of Bogie's (Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague, and Paul Singleton) have been delighting Sherlockian audiences for a dozen years with inspired pastiches and parodies (such as a retelling of some of the Canonical tales in the styles of Shakespeare, Pinter, Joyce, Chandler, and Milne), and you can hear and enjoy their humor on five audiocassettes (THE FOB'S ON BAKER STREET, THE FOB'S RETURN TO BAKER STREET, THE ADVENTURES OF THE FOB'S ON BAKER STREET, THE MEMOIRS OF THE FOB'S ON BAKER STREET, and THE CASEBOOK OF THE FOB'S ON BAKER STREET), each also with a poetic account of one of the cases by Baker Street bard Henry W. Enberg. The cassettes cost $8.95 each (or $35.00 for all five) plus $2.00 shipping per order, from Andrew Joffe, 340 East 63rd Street, New York, NY 10021.
356. Christopher Morley turns up in unexpected places: USAir had "Kitty Foyle" (1940) as one of the in-flight movies (well, they're in-flight television now) on trans-Atlantic and trans-continental flights in July. And in the N.Y. Times Magazine (Aug. 4): Charles Harrington Elster reports in his "On Language" column that Morley minted the word "infracraninophile" (a champion of the underdog) in his preface to THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (1930).

357. Sep 96 #2: One of the most delightful of the Sherlockian bibliohoxes is THE PRACTICAL HANDBOOK OF BEE CULTURE: WITH SOME OBSERVATIONS UPON THE SEGREGATION OF THE QUEEN, by Sherlock Holmes (London: Methuen & Co., 1911), actually published by Remsen Ten Eyck Schenck in an edition so limited that the few fortunate recipients were warned never to reveal the source of the rarity. And the book was real: the title page was reproduced in the Sept. 1966 issue of The Baker Street Journal, and the book is cited in THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, and Julian Wolff's copy was advertised by Enola Stewart in 1993. Enola, with help from British bee-books specialists Betty and Karl Showler, eventually was able to find the source of Schenck's clever forgery: Kenneth K. Clark's handbook on BEEKEEPING (Harmondsworth: Penguin Books, 1951), a post-war paperback that Schenck had bound in cloth after substituting a new title-page. Copies of Clark's book turn up from time to time, and the Showlers now offer THE CASE OF THE HOLMES BEE BOOK: a carefully crafted box containing Clark's BEEKEEPING and a 28-page pamphlet with a detailed discussion of the affair. $60.00 postpaid (checks payable to Karl Showler, please) from B & K Books, Riverside, Newport Street, Hayon-Wye, via Hereford HR3 5BG, England. But note: there's a waiting list, with orders filled as more copies of Clark's book turn up.
358. SHERLOCK HOLMES: VICTORIAN SLEUTH TO MODERN HERO was the title of a fine conference held at Bennington College in Vermont in June 1994, and it is the title of a collection of papers presented at the conference, edited by Charles A. Putney, Sally Sugarman, and Joseph A. Cutshall King, members of The Baker Street Breakfast Club (Lanham: Scarecrow Press, 1996; 356 pp., $34.50); $37.50 postpaid from the publisher, 4720 Boston Way, Lanham, MD 20706 (800-462-6420).
359. Video-taper alert: the latest issue of Anglofile reports that "Nightmare! The Birth of Victorian Horror" will air on A&E cable on Oct. 28-31 (and on BBC-1, probably); this is a four-part mini-series with Christopher Frayling as host, examining Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein", Bram Stoker's "Dracula", Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde", and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (actors impersonating Conan Doyle and Fletcher Robinson were filmed in Sept. 1995 at the Links Hotel in West Runton, and John Nettles plays Sherlock Holmes). Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
360. The Gainesville Children's Theatre will perform Suzan L. Zeder's play "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1987) at the Pearce Auditorium on the Brenau University Campus in Gainesville, Ga. on Oct. 11-12 (six school performances on Oct. 8-10 have already been sold out). The box-office address is Box 2267, Gainesville, GA 30503 (770-503-1118).
361. Further to the mention of IMAGES OF AMERICA: POTTSVILLE (Jul 96 #5), Bruce Aikin notes that IMAGES OF AMERICA: NIAGARA FALLS, by Daniel M. Dumych (Dover: Arcadia Publishing, 1996; $16.99) also has fine period photographs of a place mentioned in two Sherlock Holmes stories ("A Study in Scarlet" and "The Cardboard Box"); the publisher's address is One Washington Center, Dover, NH 03820. There is a person named in Canon who visited Niagara Falls many times, and was famous for what he did there. Who was he? and what did he do there? I'll give the answer on the next page.
362. Sep 96 #3: Victoria Gill has forwarded an item from the Toronto Globe and Mail (Aug. 20): filming has started in Winnipeg on a 13-episode children's mystery series "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" (with Meredith Henderson as Shirley Holmes, the 12-year-old great grandniece of Sherlock Holmes); like her ancestor, Shirley is brilliant and eccentric and wants to become the world's greatest detective. The 30-minute series will air next year on YTV cable in Canada.
363. Queen Victoria was discussing the Diamond Jubilee with the Bishop of Winchester, and she asked him, "From what point did you see the procession?" And then, recollecting, she said, "Oh! you were on the steps of St. Paul's. I was unfortunate -- I had a very bad place and saw nothing." That's only one of the stories in THE JUBILEE YEARS 1887-1897, compiled by Roger Hudson and published by The Folio Society to celebrate its own 50th anniversary.

- It's lavishly illustrated, and costs $57.00, and available only to members of the Society (Box 694, Holmes, PA 19043) (800-353-0700), but it will be found in used-book shops eventually, and it looks like a grand view of the world of Sherlock Holmes.
364. Christopher Roden reports that the Calabash Press will publish collections of fine articles from Baker Street Miscellanea, Canadian Holmes, and Wheelwrightings within the next eighteen months, and that all major articles in the journals will be reprinted in the book. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London also is preparing to publish a similar volume of articles reprinted from The Sherlock Holmes Journal, so the next two years will be banner ones for "best of" books.
365. Sorry about that: I gave an incorrect World Wide Web address for the electronic equivalent of a book-search firm (Aug 96 #6). The correct address is <<http://www.bibliofind.com>>.
366. Thomas M. McDade ("The Dancing Men") died on Mar. 2. He was an FBI agent in the 1930s, in the days when the G-Men battled Public Enemies, and then became an attorney and a writer. He won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for his book THE ANNALS OF MURDER, and his article on "Sherlock Holmes and the F.B.I." appeared in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine in 1957 (the same year in which he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars).
367. The Bull-Terrier Club of Boston University returned to Newport, R.I., on Sept. 7 for its second annual polo outing, and enjoyed a thoroughly rainy afternoon (thanks to Hurricane Fran) rather than a polo match. A revised edition of their (now 20-page) booklet that explores the history of this Canonical sport is available for $2.50 postpaid from W. Scott Monty, 1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127-4342.
368. Who visited Niagara Falls many times, and was famous for what he did there? Blondin (mentioned in "The Sign of the Four"). Jean Francois Gravelet was a French acrobat who performed as Blondin and won the title "Hero of Niagara" when he crossed the Falls on a tightrope many times in 1859 and 1860. If you would like to know more about him, I recommend "Blondin, Prince of Manila" in Vincent Starrett's BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY: THE PRIVATE SATISFACTIONS OF AN INCURABLE COLLECTOR (New York: Random House, 1942).
369. Sep 96 #4: Planning continues for the "Devil's Foot Congress" in Guildford (near Perth) in Western Australia on Oct. 4-6, 1997, should you need a good excuse for a trip to the Antipodes. Douglas Sutherland-Bruce (P.O. Box 74, Sawyers Valley, W.A. 6074, Australia) will be happy to send more information about plans for the festivities.
370. Cadds Printing has issued THE SHERLOCK HOLMES DIARY 1997, with page size 6 x 8.25". and a page for each week, with small illustrations (most by Paget) and Canonical dates and quotes. Available from the publisher (59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England) for $14.00 postpaid (checks payable to Hugh Scullion, please); the Filofax version is $13.00 postpaid.
371. Kathleen Zacharias (Tribute Portrait Studio, Box 1153, Lawrence, KS 66044) offers an attractive full-color tribute to Jeremy Brett on a hockey shirt (XL); $18.00 postpaid.
372. "Mr. Milne pooh-poohs my fears...." is an unexpected bit of wordplay noted by Mary Lee Herrick in a posting to the Gaslight electronic mailing list -- and the wordplay certainly is unexpected from an author who hadn't had a chance to read A. A. Milne's WINNIE THE POOH. The author was Arthur Conan Doyle, in "The Captain of the Pole-Star" (1883).
373. The current catalog from Seventh Avenue (1112 Seventh Avenue, Monroe, WI 53566-1364) has a Sherlockian photograph on the front cover (but nothing Sherlockian in the catalog).
374. David Pearson notes that Far-Out Flix (404 Cooper Road, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) offers John Neville's "A Study in Terror" (1965) on a cassette for $20.00 plus $4.00 shipping (much less than the $69.99 asked by other companies). Far-Out Flix also offers "The Deadly Bees" (1967), with screenplay by Robert Bloch based on H. F. Heard's novel A TASTE FOR HONEY; the only problem is that Mr. Mycroft doesn't appear in the film (but he was in Bloch's script -- Anthony Marriott was brought in to "juice up" the script and Bloch once told me that he had never seen his "deformed offspring"). And Movies Unlimited (6736 Castor Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19149; 800-523-0823) offers "Movie Madness Mystery" at $19.99; this is the L.A. Connection version of Basil Rathbone's "The Woman in Green" with new dialogue supplied by parodists.
375. Richard Lancelyn Green's CONAN DOYLE OF UPPER WIMPOLE STREET (Aug 94 #6) is a well-researched 20-page booklet issued to commemorate the unveiling of a plaque at Conan Doyle's surgery in London, and it's still available ($7.00 postpaid) from The Arthur Conan Doyle Society, at Ashcroft, 2 Abbotsford Drive, Penyffordd, Chester, CH4 0JG, England); $7.00 postpaid.
376. "Currently on a tour of South America, the Foreign Secretary, Malcolm Rifkind, thought of an apt gift for one of his hosts, the Argentinian Foreign Minister. The pair went to visit the Iguazu Falls on the border between Argentina and Brazil on Saturday, and afterwards Rifkind handed over a copy of THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, carefully marking the famous fight scene between the detective and Moriarty at the Reichenbach Fall in Switzerland." From the [London] Times, Apr. 15, 1996.
377. Sep 96 #5: Jim Vogelsang reports that the "Wishbone: A Classic Hero!" wall calendar for 1997 has Wishbone (the star of the imaginative PBS children's television series) in Sherlockian costume at Sept. 1997 (Landmark Calendars, $10.99); and a new stuffed-toy Wishbone in Sherlockian costume, in a box designed as a stage, from Equity Toys ($19.99 at Toys R Us, and likely at other toy stores). And Jennie Paton reports that Wishbone is a Wendy's (that's the fast-food chain), as part of their kid's meal motif, with one of the prizes being a little "photo book" with one page for "The Slobbery Hound" and a stick-on Sherlockian costume for Wishbone.
378. Reported by Ralph Hall: a Sherlockian Word Search in the Oct. 1996 issue of Games. Michael Mallory's pastiche "The Adventure of the Damsel in Grey" (told by Watson's wife Amelia) in the summer 1996 issue of Murderous Intent (Box 5947, Vancouver, WA 98668; $5.00). STAR IN YOUR OWN ADVENTURE: THE HAUNTED SCHOOL, written by Caroline Rose, illustrations by Mike Dorey (Barron's, $14.95); a children's book that comes in a plastic kit with a 35mm camera (and a Sherlockian illustration on the cover). The NATE THE GREAT series by Marjorie Weinman Sharmat and Rosalind Weinman have been reissued by Bantam Doubleday Dell ($3.99) in new printings with covers that differ from the earlier printings.
379. Vincent Bugliosi won 105 of 106 felony jury trials will at the Los Angeles district attorney's office (Charles Manson was one of the many criminals he helped to convict), and wrote the recent best-seller OUTRAGE: THE FIVE REAO SONS WHY O.J. SIMPSON GOT AWAY WITH MURDER, and (according to the Sept. 16 issue of People), his inquisitive part-Siamese cat is named Sherlock.
380. Larry Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (New York: Viking, 1996; 318 pp., $22.95) is yet another long-lost manuscript, found in a safe hidden in the wall of the James J. Hill mansion in St. Paul; Hill was a 19th-century railroad magnate who brought Holmes and Watson to Minnesota to help save the Great North Railway from an insane arsonist. Holmes becomes an expert on American railroads, and on the logging industry, and faces dire perils, and manages to save the railroad.
381. 221B BAKER STREET: THE MASTER DETECTIVE GAME is now available in a pocket-size version from by Gibsons Games (£14.95 in the catalog from The Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company, 230 Baker Street, London NW1 5RT, England); the board game was designed by Antler Productions for the John N. Hansen Co. in 1977, and appeared in a video version in 1987, and was issued full-size in England in 1992.

382. Further to earlier reports (Jan 96 #7 and Aug 96 #1) on the new film "Illumination" (also known as "One Golden Afternoon"), now in production with Peter O'Toole as Conan Doyle and Harvey Keitel, Mel Gibson has been added to the cast in a small role as the father of the two girls who created the Cottingley fairies and fooled Conan Doyle and many others. And articles at hand from Mel Hughes report that shooting has started in Britain on "Photographing Fairies" (adapted from Steve Szilagyi's book); Conan Doyle and his daughter Mary are incidental characters in the book, which is well-written fantasy rather than a fictionalized account (Aug 92 #6). Toby Stephens, Emily Woof, Ben Kingsley, Frances Barber, and Phil Davies will star in the film (there's no word yet on whether the Conan Doyles will be characters).
383. Sep 96 #6: Brenda Forbes died on Sept. 11. She began her acting career in 1927, and made her Broadway debut as a loyal maid in Katharine Cornell's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" (1931); she was Madge Larrabee in Orson Welles' radio adaptation of "Sherlock Holmes" (1938), and appeared in "Aren't We All" on Broadway with Rex Harrison, Claudette Colbert, and Jeremy Brett in 1985.
384. Filming is now underway on a new version of "The Day of the Jackal" (1973), which centered on a plot to assassinate French president Charles de Gaulle. The new film will star Bruce Willis as the assassin, Sidney Poitier as the FBI deputy director, and Richard Gere as the former Irish Republican Army commando who helps Poitier track down the assassin. There's no word yet on the target of the assassin, but it would appear to be someone other than de Gaulle. Nor is there any word on whether the new film will follow the book written by Frederick Forsythe (1971), in which the Jackal's rifle is smuggled in the country in an aluminum crutch.
385. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES IQ BOOK, by Eamonn Butler and Madsen Pirie, previously published in England (Apr 95 #1), now has an American edition (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1996; 193 pp., $9.95); the book used summaries of Canonical cases as introductions to 74 Mensa-type puzzles.
386. THE BOURBON BULLION BAFFLEMENT is the latest round-robin pastiche written by six members of The Pleasant Places of Florida; $6.00 postpaid from Ben Wood, Box 740, Ellenton, FL 24222. Ben also offers SHERLOCK ON STAMPS (a presentation folder with color reproductions of all the stamps that honor Sherlock Holmes); $2.50 postpaid. And he still has a few copies of the new Commonwealth of Dominica sheetlet with the stamp showing Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes; $7.50 postpaid.
387. "You're Sherlock Holmes, and the game is afoot, but you're not in 19th-century London any more. Thanks to H. G. Wells' time machine, you're in 20th-century America, tackling 20 true unsolved crimes," according to the blurb for 221B BAKER ST.: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TIME MACHINE, a new version of the board game first marketed 20 years ago by John N. Hansen Co. $34.95 in stores, and the current catalog from Bits & Pieces, 1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297).
388. This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will again be in full color, with another attractive watercolor by Douglas West, showing Holmes and Watson arriving to question Breckinridge about his geese (in "The Blue Carbuncle"). The cost is $13.50 postpaid for ten cards (or £5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks payable to the Society, please, and orders should be sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 3 Outram Road, Southsea, Hants. PO5 1QP, England.
389. Sherlock Holmes appeared in one of the new programs that debuted on Sept. 14 in the one-hour "Great Books" television series on The Learning Channel. Not because the Canon made the list of Great Books, but rather in the program devoted to "Plato's Republic": narrator Donald Sutherland noted (over a clip showing Rathbone and Bruce) that "Even Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, pays tribute when Dr. Watson quotes Plato to describe his detective friend as 'the best and wisest man I have ever known.'"
390. Sep 96 #7: Former Senator Rudy Boschwitz won easily in the Republican primary on Sept. 10 in Minnesota, winning 80 percent of the vote against four challengers. He will now face Democratic Sen. Paul Wellstone in November, hoping to regain his Senate seat as well as his status as the highest-ranking elected politician who's a Sherlockian (Boschwitz attended meetings of The Red Circle when he was in the Senate in the 1980s).
391. "Dangermouse, the world's greatest detective, and his faithful assistant, Penfold, the world's most obvious coward, operate from a letterbox on Baker Street, helping their boss, Colonel K, solve crises that range from exploding custard that is taking over the world to a weather machine run amok." Dangermouse was created by Brian Cosgrove and Mark Hall in 1981, and was the star of a ten-minute animated cartoon series that aired in Britain, and later on Nickelodeon cable in the United States. And he is one of five children's television characters on a set of stamps issued this year in Britain.
392. Mark Frost's THE 6 MESSIAHS (a sequel to his THE LIST OF SEVEN) is now out in paperback (New York: Avon, 1996; 423 pp., $6.99); the book is alternateuniverse fantasy, opening in 1894, with Conan Doyle about to leave England for his tour of the United States, and the story involves him in a struggle to possess the mystical Book of Zohar, and to prevent the end of the world. The title-page verso mentions an Avon Book special printing in Feb. 1996; does anyone know what this was?
393. George A. Vanderburgh has published a 32-page Fall Price List with details on publications available from The Battered Silicon Dispatch Box; Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada <gav@gbd.com>.
394. Robert S. Gellerstedt, Jr., (1035 Wedgewood Drive, Fayetteville, GA 30214) has tucked away in his computer some nice indexes to various Sherlockian anthologies, and to the obituaries published in The Baker Street Journal, and to the recorded cases, all included in an updated version of his earlier THE SHERLOCKIAN ANTHOLOGIES INDEX (Aug 94 #2); $5.00 postpaid (in the United States) for a print-out.
395. Takahiko Endo reports that the World Brick Museum (Aug 96 #1) is in Maizuru (in case you're planning to visit Japan, and have been wondering about The Guardian's misspelling of the town's name). Maizuru is about 100 minutes by train from Kyoto.
396. Canadians have been enjoying CBC Radio's "The Mystery Project" on Saturdays at 6:30 pm: the series started Sept. 7, and offers rebroadcasts of the 1954 1954 BBC radio programs with John Gielgud as Holmes and Ralph Richardson as Watson.
397. Reports of his death were greatly exaggerated: Vasily Livanov did not die in 1995 (Oct 95 #2), but is in fact alive and well. According to Peter A. Kartsev, reporting from Moscow, Livanov was interviewed on television there on Sept. 11, discussing his latest project (a Russian-Bulgarian co-production of "Don Quixote"). He starred as Holmes in a series of dramatizations of Canonical stories on Soviet television from 1979 to 1985.

398. Sep 96 #8: SUPERNATURAL SLEUTHS, edited by Charles G. Waugh and Martin H. Greenberg (New York: Roc, 1996; 348 pp., $5.99), has "14 mysterious cases of uncanny crimes," including a reprint of "The Adventure of the Ball of Nostradamus" (a 1955 science-fiction Solar Pons story written by August Derleth and Mack Reynolds). MURDER BY THE BOOK, an anthology edited by Cynthia Manson (New York: Berkley, 1996; 326 pp., $5.99), includes Penelope Wallace's "The World of Uncle Albert" (which starts "My uncle was mad about Sherlock Holmes").
399. "We all know that the year 1891 was Holmes' worst year," Caroline Gassner suggests, "having to do all that running from Moriarty, baritsu fighting at the edge of a cliff, and faking his death. We would like to know what you think is the *second* worst year of Holmes's life, and why." That will be the theme of this year's "Unhappy Birthday You Bastard Celebration" by The Brothers Three of Moriarty, in Moriarty (of course), in November. You all are invited to send your papers/diatribes/poems/songs/rants to C. B. Gassner (P.O. Drawer G, Corrales, N.M. 87048), to arrive by Nov. 1. The Brothers Three, founded by the late John Bennett Shaw, continue to dishonor Moriarty on or near his birthday (deduced by John to have been Halloween), and all those attending wear name-tags reading "James".

400. Billy Childish and Thee Headcoats made an appearance at Bimbo's 365 Club in San Francisco on Aug. 8, according to a "nightlife" item noted by Mike Kean in the San Francisco Chronicle. According to the paper, they have made their mark "in the world of alternative music on the strength of Childish's offbeat obsessions (Native Americans, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) and the driving force of their post-punk sound, influenced by such diverse types as Link Wray, Leadbelly, and the Cure."
401. The University of Iowa Press still offers two excellent books: LETTERS TO THE PRESS (1986), edited by John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green (a 383-page collection of Conan Doyle's letters to newspapers and magazines on non-Sherlockian topics), $37.95; and THE SHERLOCK HOLMES LETTERS (1987), edited by Richard Lancelyn Green (a 272-page collection of Sherlockian letters to the press by others), $32.95. Shipping is $3.50 for one book, and $4.00 for two; the address of the press is 119 West Park Road, Iowa City, IA 52242 <kate-capps@uiowa.edu>.
402. Further to the mention (May 96 #2) of Mary Frost-Pierson's demonstration at Malice Domestic of the nice things that Mysteries from the Yard was making available America Online, Mary notes that "AOL cancelled MFTY Online after nine months of operation, due to our inability to attract a large enough audience quickly enough." But Mary hopes to be able to open her own online mystery site if she can find a corporate sponsor.

403. Oct 96 #1: "A Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" will be the 17th annual program of talks and panel discussions presented by The Six Napoleons and The Carlton Club at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 16. This year's theme will be "50 Years with the Master" (honoring the 50th anniversary of The Six Napoleons); the program begins at 10:00 am with a coffee hour in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at the Library (at 400 Cathedral Street), and there's no admission charge for the festivities.
404. Australia issued two attractive stamps showing opals last year (Jun 95 #3), and now the series has continued with stamps showing a pearl and a diamond. There are many mentions of pearls and diamonds in the Canon, and it's nice to think that some of the Canonical gems might have been Australian.
405. Further to the mention (Jul 96 #2) of temporary tattoos, David McCallister has reported (someone else's) real Sherlockian tattoo: a photograph of a rather Brettish Holmes, with Watson, shown on p. 96 in Chris Wroblewski's SKIN SHOWS III (London: Virgin, 1993); the endnotes state that the artist was "Ian of Reading", and that the tattoo is owned by Jim Laird, address unknown.
406. EXITS & ENTRANCES is the latest volume of verse from the Pequod Press, and consists mostly of Canonical examples of such, save when the author's protean skills lead him astray, and the obligatory homage to Poe." The author also sets type and prints and binds the books. $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) postpaid from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
407. The new BBC "Sherlock Holmes" videocassette provides a fine opportunity to see two of their 50-minute programs ("The Speckled Band" and "The Illustrious Client") broadcast in 1964, with Douglas Wilmer as Sherlock Holmes and Nigel as Dr. Watson. It is nice to be reminded of what television was like in the 1960s (black-and-white, and slower-paced, and lower-budgeted), and to be able to compare the scripts, direction, production, and acting in the BBC programs with the same stories in the Granada series. The BBC cassette costs £14.99 (shipping extra) from BBC Video, Box 44, Leatherhead, Surrey KT22 7AE, England (credit-card orders welcome). But (alas): the cassette is available only in the British PAL system (rather than the American NTSC format); the BBC apparently has no plans to distribute the cassette to the American market.
408. I should note that the Douglas Wilmer programs (and lots of other Sherlockian video) can be borrowed on American-format NTSC cassettes from the lending library maintained by Jennie C. Paton (206 Loblolly Lane, Statesboro, GA 30458-4247). There's a charge of $5.50 for shipping, and you get to keep a cassette for a day or two, and then you pay the return postage. But there may well be a waiting list for something that's in high demand (such as the Douglas Wilmer cassette, right now).
409. Oct 96 #2: Basil Rathbone on the Baker Street Irregulars: "They are bores. Why, those fellows do not even recognise Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as the creator of Holmes. They say that Watson, Watson, mind you, was his creator. I'm a life member, you know. But I haven't attended one of their ridiculous meetings." Quoted in an interview with Jim Keep in the Australalasian Post, Oct. 6, 1960.
410. Gertrude Mahoney reports that a new catalog from Expressions from Potpourri offers a Limoges porcelain deerstalker, 2.5 in. long, with a magnifying-glass clasp and an even smaller pipe. Item 172882, $225.00; the address is 120 North Meadows Road, Medfield, MA 02052 (800-338-2699).
411. Dick Lesh reports that the new catalog from Signals (Box 64428, Saint Paul, MN 55164) (800-669-9696) now offers the cupro-nickel version of the eight one-crown Sherlock Holmes coins issued by Gibraltar (Nov 94 #3), for $89.90 postpaid.
412. Walter Kerr died on Oct. 9. In 1939 he began his theatrical career teaching speech and drama at Catholic University, and in 1951 joined the staff of the N.Y. Herald Tribune as a theater critic; when the Herald Tribune stopped publishing in 1966, he moved to the N.Y. Times, retiring in 1983. His body of work won him the Pulitzer Prize for criticism in 1978, and the Walter Kerr Theater in Manhattan was named in his honor in 1990. "He was a man who loved the theater," his friend, theater-caricaturist Al Hirschfeld, once said. "Even if you didn't agree with what he said, you wanted to see the show, because the review was so well written." And some of those wellwritten reviews were devoted to Rathbone's "Sherlock Holmes" (1953), the musical "Baker Street" (1964), the Royal Shakespeare Company's "Sherlock Holmes" (1974 and 1975), and "The Crucifer of Blood (1978). In 1978 Kerr noted that "Sherlock Holmes is a legendary figure of fiction, so powerful a legend that we take him as almost real: the pretense that he *is* real has spurred countless reincarnations at other hands, has gleefully supported a society devoted to continuing admiration and the further recording of his activities."
413. The latest issue of Anglofile reports that MYSTERY! A CELEBRATION, by Ron Miller (KQED Books, $24.95) will be in book stores in November (one would of course assume that Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" will be one of the many programs celebrated). The book also will be available from WGBH (Boston) by mail order (800-255-9424), but it isn't available yet. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
414. The Credit Lyonnaise (one of the few banks mentioned by name in the Canon) still has problems. The Times [London] suggested earlier that it might be "the world's worst bank" (Aug 95 #8 and Sep 95 #7), and now the Washington Post has reported (Oct. 5) that the chairman of the state-owned bank has called for more government funds to bail out the bank, which flourished in the late 1980s and then ran into collapsing property values in the 1990s. The bank has $17.4 billion in "dud assets" amassed during its expansion.
415. Oct 96 #3: Michael Atkinson's THE SECRET MARRIAGE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND OTHER ECCENTRIC READINGS (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1996; 192 pp., $29.95) uses the tools of modern literary theory in (according to the publisher) "a series of flirtations" with nine of the Sherlock Holmes stories.
416. The Eurotunnel opened in 1994, 81 years after Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote in The Times that a Channel Tunnel "seems to me to be of such importance that I grudge every day that passes without something having been done to bring it to realization," and the tunnel has now captured 45 percent of the freight and passenger traffic between England and France. The tunnel also still is deeply in debt, and last year suspended interest

- payments to its creditor banks (the Washington Post reported on Oct. 12 that the banks have accepted a deal that swaps debt for equity, and now own 45 percent of the Eurotunnel company).
417. Milt Halpert spotted an interesting design on a Turkish semi-postal stamp issued in February to raise funds to assist the people of Bosnia-Herzegovina. I've not been able to find out just what the symbolism of the design is, but they don't seem to be *our* dancing men . . .
418. Mary Burke found Holmes and Watson (a photograph of Rathbone and Bruce) in one of the collages on display in Hanne Darboven's "Kulturgeschichte 1880-1983" at the Dia Center for the Arts; the collages are arranged chronologically and Holmes and Watson are among the 1940s cinema subjects. The Dia Center is at 548 West 22nd Street in New York, and the exhibit runs through June 29, 1997.
419. Femmes Fatales has issued a new catalog of gifts to please any mystery fan (including Sherlockians); their address is (Box 3457, Lakewood, CA 90712) (800-596-3323) <bytocrime@aol.com> <<http://register.com/femfatal>>.
420. Further to the earlier mention (Sep 96 #5) of the new film based on Steve Szilagy's book PHOTOGRAPHING FAIRIES, Christopher Roden has reported that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will appear in the film, played by Edward Hardwicke in a cameo appearance. Clive Merrison, who plays Holmes on BBC Radio, will be in the film as well, playing the theosophist Edward Gardner. There are actors who have played both Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes, and both Conan Doyle and Inspector Lestrade, but Edward Hardwicke may well be the first to play both Conan Doyle and Dr. Watson.
421. There are lots of plans afoot for "Lasting Impressions" (the Bootmakers of Toronto Silver Anniversary Weekend on June 26-29, 1997), and a flier now is available with a detailed schedule. The address is Lasting Impressions, 30 Elm Avenue #210, Toronto, ON M4W 1N5, Canada <lasting@syndesis.com> <<http://www.edu.yorku.ca/~li>>.
422. Tim O'Connor (6015 West Route 115, Herscher, IL 60941) offers a 1997 Baker Street Pages International weekly pocket calendar and pen gift-set. The calendar is 3.5 x 6 in. with a black cover decorated in metallic green (or medium blue or purple) with a Sherlockian collage and coat or arms. $6.00 each, plus $1.50 shipping per order.
423. Oct 96 #4: John Baesch, recently in London, reported from the Ritz that he discovered an excellent pizza shop at 197 Baker Street. The pizzas include Marinara, Portafino, and Margherita, but no Sherlock. One does wonder what toppings might be suitable for a Sherlock pizza . . .
424. Mark Alberstat's 1997 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
425. Luci Zahray reports a six-inch Sherlock Holmes ornament for your Christmas tree in a catalog from Bronner's Christmas Wonderland, Box 176, Frankenmuth, MI 48734 (800-361-6736); $27.00 plus shipping.
426. Luci also offers some of the Cadds items from Hugh Scullion: THE SHERLOCK HOLMES JOKE BOOK, by Peter V. Rochford and Hugh S. Scullion [Dec 95 #4] ($7.00 postpaid); SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES: --POLITICALLY CORRECT?, by Hugh S. Scullion [Jul 96 #2] ($16.00 postpaid); and Sherlockian silhouette stickers ($2.50 per sheet postpaid) (small size shown here, 81 per sheet; or a larger size, 42 per sheet). Her address is 685 Marylane Drive, Holland, MI 49423.
427. Kay Sturm notes that Laurie R. King's THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE (the first in her series about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes) now is available in a large-print edition (New York: G. K. Hall Large Print Books; $24.95).
428. The Commonwealth of Dominica's sheetlet of nine stamps honoring "Legendary Sleuths of the Silver Screen" (Jul 96 #8), with one stamp showing Sherlock Holmes as portrayed by Basil Rathbone, is available from Bick International (Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408) for $9.95; first day covers cost $12.95.
429. "Reading a Sherlock Holmes story and wondering how long a hansom cab ride is from Baker Street to Kensington?" asked the page-a-day calendar for computer buffs on Oct. 15. The University College of London offers a web page called "The London Guide" at <<http://www.cs.ucl.ac.uk/misc.uk/london.html>>.
430. Don Pendleton died on Oct. 23. Best known as the author of 38 books in the Mack Bolan "Executioner" series, he also wrote an excellent introduction for the Ballantine paperback of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1975).
431. Forecast: RIVALS OF DRACULA, edited by Stefan R. Dziemianowicz, Robert E. Weinberg, and Martin Harry Greenberg (from Barnes & Noble in Oct.); with Carole Nelson Douglas' Irene Adler story "Dracula on the Rocks" (reprinted from the 1995 anthology CELEBRITY VAMPIRES).
432. The first eight audiocassettes in the series MORE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 96 #1) from the fine old 1946-47 radio series that starred Tom Conway and Nigel Bruce still are available ($9.95 each) from Brilliance Audio at Box 481, Grand Haven, MI 49417 (800-222-3225); and more cassettes are due in the shops in November.
433. Oct 96 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 143rd birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 10, with the traditional festivities in New York. But the festivities actually will begin on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Allen Mackler and Charlie Shields will lead participants in the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with luncheon at McSorley's. Allen's address is 324 2nd Street NE, Osseo, MN 55369, and from Jan. 7 he will be at the Iroquois Hotel (212-840-3080).
434. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the Algonquin provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to order from the menu (reservations are not required). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $35.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler's open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) is on Friday, from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; it is possible that Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
435. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at 24 Fifth Avenue (at 9th Street), and The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will convene for drinks, dinner, and entertainment at 6:30 pm at Bill's Gay Nineties at 57 East 54th Street between Park and Madison Avenues; $40.00 (Maribeau Briggs, 46 East 29th Street, 2nd floor, New York, NY 10016). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
436. On Saturday a posse of purveyors will offer a wide variety of S'iana in a room on the second floor of the Algonquin (also known for the occasion as Covent Garden West) from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; vendor tables are available (Donald B. Izban, 213 Ivy Court, Streamwood, IL 60107). The Baker Street Irregulars will hold their annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30 at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the cost is $35.00 a person until Dec. 28 (checks payable to the Baker Street Irregulars should be sent to Donald E. Novorsky, 5182 Mahoning Avenue NW, Warren, OH 44483); tickets also will be available at the door, at $40.00 a person.
437. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Tom Stix arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for rooms (single or double) at $155.00 a night (Wednesday through Saturday); this is the total cost, because no tax is due on reservations made through the BSI. Other charges (such as room

- service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians: your reservations, accompanied by payment (to The Baker Street Irregulars) should be sent to Thomas L. Stix, Jr. (see below) to arrive no later than Dec. 16. Please include names, addresses, and phone numbers of occupants, and the type of room (single, double, or twin) desired.
438. Note: payments to The Baker Street Irregulars for the Algonquin, the annual dinner, and the cocktail party, can be combined and made with one check (in U.S. funds, please) or by international money order, to be sent to the BSI, c/o Thomas L. Stix, Jr., 34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648.
439. Oct 96 #6: Mary Ellen Rich has once again kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about non-optional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. If you plan to arrive on Thursday, you should confirm the rates, and that the weekend rates include Thursday.
440. Lexington (511 Lexington Ave. at East 48th St.): $99 (single-double) (800-448-4471); Radio City Suites (142 West 49th St.: $97 (studio) $127 (one bedroom) (212-730-0728); Portland Square (132 West 47th St.): $89 (single/ double) (212-382-0600); Iroquois (49 West 44th St.): $85 (single) $99 (double) $135 (suite) (800-332-7220) [they anticipate some construction at the beginning of January, and wish to warn guests that there may be some disruption]; Edison (228 West 47th St.): $81 (single) $95 (double) (212-840-5000); Pickwick Arms (230 East 51st St.): $80 (single) $99 (double) (800-742-5945).
441. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI or the ASH is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully anonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by checks payable to John H. Watson and mailed (without return any address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, c/o Thomas L. Stix, Jr. (address as above); Tom forwards the checks unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity.
442. A single page of the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" sold at auction at Sotheby's in New York on Oct. 29 for $14,950 (including the 15% buyer's premium); the page was owned by Victor Jacobs, and is from Chapter VI (pages 107-109 in the first British book edition).
443. And there's more auction news: two Conan Doyle manuscripts will be sold at auction at Sotheby's on Dec. 4. "The White Company" (estimated at $60,000-90,000) and "The Sign of the Four" ($250,000-$300,000) are from the collection of the late Redmond A. Burke, and came to him from the 1973 auction of the David Gage Joyce collection; "The Sign of the Four" is complete in 160 pages (the first page is a "fair copy" in Conan Doyle's handwriting), and it is accompanied by four letters from Conan Doyle to J. M. Stoddart (who commissioned the story for Lippincott's). The catalog for the Dec. 4 sale will be available soon, and interested bidders can contact Sotheby's (attn: Paul Needham), 1334 York Avenue, New York, NY 10021 (212-606-7385).
444. I hope you all wished the Earth a happy birthday on Oct. 25, which was its 6000th birthday, according to Bishop Ussher, who calculated that the Creation occurred on that date in 4004 BC. It also was on Oct. 25 that members of the Geological Society of America began assembling in Denver for their annual meeting, which of course including a dinner for The Practical, But Limited, Geologists on Oct. 29, when the visitors were welcomed by Doctor Watson's Neglected Patients at the Cadillac Ranch in Larimer Square, and we all toasted the world's first forensic geologist. Our next dinner meetings will be in Dallas in Apr. 1997 and in Salt Lake City in Oct. 1997.

445. Nov 96 #1: Further to the report (Oct 96 #6) of the sale of a page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", I've now seen the catalog illustration of the page: it's from Chapter VI (from "said to be a young lady . . ." to ". . . hours of darkness when the"), and it's interesting to note that as first written, Holmes directly addressed Sir Henry as "Mr. Baskerville" and as "Baskerville" -- both corrected by the author to read "Sir Henry".
446. And, still on the subject of manuscripts, J. M. Stoddart dined with Arthur Conan Doyle and Oscar Wilde in London, and commissioned stories from both of them; both stories were published in Lippincott's, and both manuscripts were sold at auction in 1909. "The Sign of the Four" sold for $105, and "The Picture of Dorian Gray" brought $1,000; what might the prices be today if both manuscripts went to auction in the same sale?
447. St. Vincent issued five stamps this year honoring the 100th anniversary of wireless transmission, with portraits of some radio personalities: Fred Allen, Eve Arden, Major Bowes, Walter Winchell, and Hedda Hopper; Hedda Hopper also was a movie actress: she played Madge Larrabee in the John Barrymore film "Sherlock Holmes" (1922).
448. Plan ahead: The STUD Sherlockian Society's annual meeting and dinner will be held March 7 at the Starlight Inn in Schiller Park (near Chicago), and Brad Keefauver will be the guest speaker; there will be a Solar Pons Brunch on Mar. 8, and a visit to Vincent Starrett's grave at Graceland Cemetery. Additional information is available from F. Dennis France, 8546 North Ked-vale Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076.
449. Nice news from Minnesota: after a bit of delay, James F. Hubbs has now been reappointed as collection specialist for the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota. Carol Johnson is acting assistant curator and Carol Urness is the acting head of the Special Collections and Rare Books department until they appoint a successor to the late Clarence Carter (who spoke at the dedication of the John Bennett Shaw Collection in Oct. 1995). Planning also is under way for construction of the new Minnesota Library Access Center (May 96 #1), where the special collections will be housed.
450. Kemp R. Niver died on Oct. 15. He had been a private detective, a police officer, and a veteran cameraman when he was hired in the early 1950s by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as an archivist and film historian; he used equipment he built himself to transfer some 3,600 movies made between 1894 and 1912 from copyright-deposit frame-by-frame paper photographs to film. All those who have enjoyed the amusing "Sherlock Holmes Baffled" (1900) on film or video owe thanks to Kemp Niver.
451. Jim Weiss does an excellent job of combining narration and dialogue on his recordings for younger audiences in SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR CHILDREN (Maza/Spec/Musg/Blue) and MYSTERY! MYSTERY! (RedH, plus tales by Poe and Chesterton); cassettes are $9.95 each, and CDs are $14.95 each, and other non-Sherlockian recordings are available (shipping is $2.50 per order). Greathall Productions, Box 813, Benicia, CA 94510 (800-477-6234).
452. Nov 96 #2: John Baesch reports some new evidence in the continuing debate about which university Sherlock Holmes attended: Oxford or Cambridge. John notes that the new British film "True Blue" (to be released this year) tells the story of the annual Oxford-Cambridge Boat Race, one of the oarsmen in the Oxford boat is played by Nicholas Rowe, who some years ago was Young Sherlock Holmes.
453. AT&T has chosen John R. Walter as its new president. Walter is chairman and chief executive of R. R. Donnelley & Sons (the world's largest commercial printer), and the Washington Post (Oct. 24) reports that his favorite books are "mysteries, particularly Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
454. The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis celebrated their 50th anniversary last month, with an anniversary dinner and an interesting 38-page pamphlet recording the history of the society: Steven T. Doyle's THE ADVENTURES OF THE ILLUSTRIOUS CLIENTS costs $4.50 postpaid, from Mark Gagen, 3625-B Glen Arm Road, Indianapolis, IN 46224.
455. Warren Randall is preparing a new lapel pin called "The Gas Lamp" that will be sold during the January birthday festivities in New York for $10.00 (the pin is 1.25 in. in diameter, with the design in red, gold, and black on white); the pin also will be available by mail ($11.50 postpaid); his address is 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720-1346.

456. Tangled Web Audio has extended its series of excellent recordings of the Canon, read by Edward Hardwicke, who does his usual fine job with the stories in SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF BETRAYAL (with Scan/Silv/Copp) and SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF AVARICE (with Prio/RedH/Blue); each set has two cassettes, and costs $20.00 postpaid ($37.00 for two sets); Tangled Web Audio, 3380 Sheridan Drive #167, Amherst, NY 14226 <tangled@bis.on.ca>. For those want to use credit cards, the cassettes also are available (same prices) from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.
457. HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Carol-Lynn Waugh (New York: Berkley, 1996; 304 pp., $21.95), offers 14 new pastiches, all with a seasonal theme, written by Anne Perry, Barbara Paul, Carolyn Wheat, Carole Nelson Douglas, Edward D. Hoch, and others.
458. Phil Attwell has noted a "Sherlock Holmes Celebration Cakes" (suitable for all occasions): a luxury two-pound Victorian fruit cake, with brandy, marzipan, and icing featuring a plaque with a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes, delivered to your door anywhere in the country (Great Britain), for £19.50; overseas prices are available on request. Good Food and Cakes, 21-A Market Street, Wellingborough, Northants., England (or you can call Sue or Enid at 01933-227100 to discuss the details).
459. Further to the report (Oct 96 #2) on the availability of the cupro-nickel version of the eight one-crown Sherlock Holmes coins issued by Gibraltar (Nov 94 #3), Peter Mosiondz, Jr. (Box 1483, Bellmawr, NJ 08099) notes that you can get them from him at a far better price ($60.00 postpaid); he also offers the silver and gold versions, and you can write to him for details.

460. Nov 96 #3: "I shall be the Hans Sloane of my age," said a hopeful Nathan Garrideb. The Sept.-Oct. issue of Preservation (the magazine of the National Trust for Historic Preservation) has Roland Flamini's fine article about the Chelsea Physic Garden, founded in 1673 by the Worshipful Society of Apothecaries. It's the second oldest botanic garden in England (Oxford's was founded in 1621), and when it was threatened with closure in the early 18th century it was rescued by Sir Hans Sloane, whose statue now stands guard over the medicinal herb beds; in 1722 he leased it back to the Apothecaries in perpetuity, for £5 a year, and it was from the Physic Garden that cotton seeds were shipped to the new American colony of Georgia to start the plantations there. In 1977, Sloane's heirs, the Cadogan Estate, hoping to build on the site, challenged the lease, but lost in court. And it is thanks to Sir Hans that each year Sue Minter, the garden's curator, writes a check for £5 to the Cadogan Estate as rent, for three and a half acres of prime land that is now worth millions.
461. Ben Wood offers a flier for his close-out sale of Sherlockian books, pamphlets, and other material; his address is Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222.
462. Platinum Press has published THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in facsimile from The Strand Magazine (with Sidney Paget's fine illustrations), separately and as a boxed set. These are reissues of the four volumes published by Schocken Books in 1975 and 1976, but now without the introductions by Steven Marcus, Leslie Fiedler, and Samuel Rosenberg. $9.98 each or $40.00 for the boxed set, and if you can't find them locally, there's a toll-free telephone number (800-284-3580).
463. Megan Follows does a fine job with her audiocassette readings of Laurie R. King's THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE and A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN; each (abridged) audiobook is on two cassettes (issued by Durkin Hayes) and costs $16.99. And Megan Follows' reading of the third book in the Mary Russell series, A LETTER OF MARY, will be issued by Durkin Hayes in January when the book is published. If you can't find the cassettes in your shops, the address for Durkin Hayes Audio is 1 Colomba Drive, Niagara Falls, NY 14305.
464. Al Rosenblatt reports that the "Sly Fox" necktie (Jun 92 #6) is available again in a catalog from Chipp II (9 Ethan Allen Lane, Stamford, CT 06903): the pattern shows a brown fox, wearing a green deerstalker and holding a magnifying glass, on a navy (or medium blue) background; $27.25 postpaid, and they take plastic.
465. First roses were red, and then roses were pink, and now roses are yellow. The postage stamps have the same design as in the past, but with a new color. And there still are more mentions of roses in the Canon than we have stamps showing roses. Perhaps this one could honor all of the Texans in the Canon.
466. John McGowan spotted a report from London about a grand resource for those who have access to the World Wide Web: <<http://www.victoriana.com/>> is the URL for the Resources for Victorian Living web-site, and it's packed with articles and archives and pictures and information, as well as lists of and links to many companies that offer Victoriana for sale.
467. Nov 96 #4: Sorry about that: Oct. 25, 1996, was not the 6,000th birthday of the Earth (Oct 96 #6). Chris Redmond points out that 4004 BC was only 5,999 years ago. There was no year 0, of course. You'll hear a lot more about that when we get closer to celebrating the beginning of the next millennium, on Jan. 1, 2000. Or perhaps 2001. Or perhaps both.
468. Jerry Margolin reports that Caliber Comics has published THE SUSSEX VAMPIRE as a one-shot comic-book, with adaptation by Warren Ellis and art by Craig Gilmore; $2.95. Caliber is at 225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170.
469. Brilliance Audio is continuing its series of audiocassettes produced by Ken Greenwald and his 221A Baker Street Associates with radio programs from the 1946-47 season with Tom Conway as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Watson; Elliott Reid provides fine new introductions about the old days of radio, and it's grand to be able to hear these hitherto-unavailable programs. Cassettes #9 through #12 are now available; they cost $9.95 each (with two shows on each cassette). The series title is MORE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and if you can't find them in your local shops, Brilliance is at Box 887, Grand Haven, MI 49417 (800-222-3225).
470. James Pepper Rare Books have an intriguing new catalog of Peter Cushing's personal copies of his scripts, for films and television shows, produced and unproduced, heavily annotated and sometimes illustrated (alas, there's no Sherlockian material); 2026 Cliff Drive #224, Santa Barbara, CA 93109 <pepbooks@aol.com>.
471. I wondered (Oct 96 #4) what toppings might be suitable for a Sherlock pizza -- and Alan Saunders offered an excellent suggestion: the plugs and dottles from the previous day's pizzas, carefully collected and dried out on the end of the mantelpiece. And John Baesch, who bears some responsibility for all this, has responded to various suggestions by exclaiming "What inedible twaddle!"
472. Our new endangered-species sheet shows 15 different animals, and eight of the animals are mentioned in the Canon: the butterfly, caribou, crocodile, ferret, plover, seal, snake, and trout. But which of the eight endangered species is the most likely match to the animal mentioned in the Canon?
473. Nov 96 #5: PBS-TV broadcast a excellent mini-series on "The Great War" in November (it also is airing in Britain), with some discussion of Conan Doyle in the final episode, which dealt with the increased interest in Spiritualism after the war. And it is a pleasant coincidence that Stephen Davies recently discovered Rudyard Kipling's book SEA WARFARE (Garden City: Doubleday, Page & Co., 1917), which includes "Tools of the Trade" (written in 1916 about the Submarine Service). Kipling tells the story of how the E 14, on patrol in Turkish waters, encountered an enemy ship: "When the crew of the Turkish brigantine full of stores got into their boats by request, and then 'all stood up and cursed us,' E 14 did not lose her temper, even though

- it was too rough to lie alongside the abandoned ship. She told Acting Lieutenant R. W. Lawrence, of the Royal Naval Reserve, to swim off to her, which he did, and after a 'cursory search'--Who can be expected to Sherlock Holmes for hours with nothing on?--set fire to her 'with the aid of her own matches and paraffin oil.'"
474. Which of the eight endangered species is the most likely match to the animal mentioned in the Canon? The woodland caribou, which is mentioned in "The Valley of Fear" ("It was the worst enemy I had among them all--one who has been after me like a hungry wolf after a caribou all these years.")
475. Paul Martin reports that "Sherlock Holmes Revisited" is available on a 57-minute videocassette from PBS Home Video, Box 751089, Charlotte, NC 28275 (800-645-4727); item A2093, and the cost is $19.95 plus shipping. This is a reissue of "The Sherlock Holmes Video" (Jan 95 #2), written and directed by Martin Hesp (who also plays Sherlock Holmes in a tour of Canonical locations); the video also offers interviews with Stanley MacKenzie and one of Sherlock Holmes' secretaries.
476. Former Senator Rudy Boschwitz, a Sherlockian who attended meetings of The Red Circle when he was in the Senate in the 1980s, lost to Democratic Sen. Paul Wellstone, who was elected to a second term on Nov. 5.
477. Ferdinand "Ferd" Johnson died on Oct. 14. He was only 17 when he enrolled at the Chicago Art Institute, and met cartoonist and teacher Frank Willard, who had just begun drawing his cartoon strip "Moon Mullins". Willard hired Johnson as an assistant at the Chicago Tribune, and they worked together for 35 years; when Willard died in 1958, Johnson took over "Moon Mullins" and drew the strip until he retired in 1991. This cartoon is from Feb. 20, 1979.
478. Nov 96 #6: He's probably only a distant relative of the Musgraves in the Canon, but: 61-year-old astronaut F. Story Musgrave began his sixth and final shuttle flight on Nov. 19, becoming the oldest human to fly in space. He joined the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in 1967, and made his first flight in 1983, taking part in the first shuttleprogram space-walk; he's an accomplished pilot, with more than 17,000 hours of flying time in 160 different aircraft types, and has made more than 500 parachute jumps. In his spare time he's studying for two master's degrees (to add to the three master's degrees and one doctorate he already has).
479. The Hounds of the Internet discuss (well, they're invited to discuss) a different story each week, and Chris Redmond has been providing "delicate questions" each week intended "to stimulate discussion, research, controversy, delight and flights of fancy as devotees of Sherlock Holmes explore the stories." For example, his question for "The Illustrious Client" was: "Baron Gruner is, by general consent, among the worst of the villains whom Sherlock Holmes encounters; is it only the whiff of kinky sex in this story that makes him so, or is there something else about him -- his nationality, perhaps -- that makes him the man Sherlockians love to hate?" And, since he now has a question for each of the cases, he offers them all in booklet form, for $2.00 (US or CA) postpaid; his address is 523 Westfield Drive, Waterloo, ON N2T 2E1, Canada. The questions make fine discussion topics for societies seeking things to do at their meetings.
480. THE FLOOR PLANS OF BAKER STREET, by Edward S. Smith, Jr., offers a survey of what was where at 221 Baker Street, on all of the floors, with plans and citations; the 38-page booklet is available from the author (Box 353, Williston Park, NY 11596); $7.50 postpaid to the U.S. and Canada, and $9.50 to other countries.
481. It was at the third pillar from the left outside the Lyceum Theatre that Mary Morstan was directed to meet her unknown benefactor. And, further to the report (Apr 95 #2) on plans to restore the long-neglected theater, the Daily Telegraph has reported that the Prince of Wales formally reopened the Lyceum on Oct. 30. The first production at the theater in half a century is a revival of "Jesus Christ Superstar", which opened on Nov. 19. Apollo Leisure, a chain that owns 22 theaters in Britain, spent £14.5 million on the restoration project.
482. Bill Hyder reports that the first edition of his excellent collection FROM BALTIMORE TO BAKER STREET (Dec 95 #4) has sold out, and that a revised second edition is now available ($27.00 postpaid) from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada. The revisions are some corrections of errata; those who already have the first edition and would like to have an errata sheet can send an SASE (self-addressed stamped envelope) to William J. Hyder, 5488 Cedar Lane #C-3, Columbia, MD 21044-1220.
483. Collectors of foreign Sherlockiana will be happy to learn about the first known item of Sherlockiana to have been published in Liechtenstein: Marcus Geisser reports that 5 NEUE SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES contains stories (in German) written by 11-year-old Martin K. Hasler; the 30-page booklet costs $8.00 or £5.00 postpaid (in currency only, please) from the author, whose address is: Dorfstrasse 59, FL-9495 Triesen, Furstentum Liechtenstein.
484. Nov 96 #7: Jerry Margolin reports that Caliber's comic-book mini-series THE SEARCHERS (Jul 96 #1) has ended with issue #4 ($2.95 each). Real-life descendants of various characters created by Haggard, Burroughs, Wells, Verne, and Conan Doyle "band together in a mutual quest for not only their own survival, but that of reality itself." But Conan Doyle's character isn't a Holmes: she's a Moriarty.
485. William L. DeAndrea died on Oct. 9. He was a fine mystery writer, and his ENCYCLOPEDIA MYSTERIOSA (1994) is a splendid reference work. He also was a long-time contributor to The Armchair Detective, and noted last year that he had once described Sherlockian pastiche as "the acne on the face of the detective story," admitting that he forgot one very important fact about acne: "in the course of growing up, virtually everybody gets it." And Bill wrote two Sherlockian pastiches, one (in the style of Mickey Spillane) in Marvin Kaye's anthology RESURRECTED HOLMES (1996) and the other in Martin H. Greenberg's anthology HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS (1996).
486. David Stuart Davies' one-act play "Fixed Point: The Life and Death of Sherlock Holmes" was first performed for The Northern Musgraves in 1991, with Davies himself as Holmes, and it now has been adapted for audio by Meredith Granger and issued on a single cassette by Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); $9.45 postpaid to the U.S. and Canada, $10.50 to Europe, $11.00 elsewhere, and credit-cards are accepted (wholesale inquiries welcome). The voices are excellent, as is the play, which offers Watson's reminiscences of his life with Holmes.
487. Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720) also offers a new lapel pin ("hot off the Prescott presses"); it's silver on gray, 1" wide, and costs $8.50 postpaid.
488. Alexander Lebed, formerly the National Security Advisor in Russia (until he was summarily dismissed by President Boris Yeltsin a few months ago), and now regarded by some as the person most likely to be the next President of Russia, was asked at a recent meeting in Washington about his critical comments about various religious groups, including the Mormons. Lebed replied that he had thought the Mormons were a cult or sect that practiced polygamy "because I learned about them from reading Conan Doyle in my youth," and he has since apologized to the Mormons.
489. If you missed the Sherlock Bloodhound "country companion" offered by Wild Wings a few years ago (Mar 92 #5) you can still buy a similar hand-painted figurine (5.5 in. high) offered in a recent catalog from The Cottage Shop, Box 4836, Stamford, CT 06907 (800-388-7660); $35.00 plus shipping.
490. Further to the report (Aug 95 #6) that on the purchase of Christ Cella's restaurant by Ken Aretsky, who had not then yet decided whether to keep the name, but intended to keep the steakhouse genre "with some additions and changes," Tom Stix has forwarded a report from the N.Y. Times (Nov. 8) that reveals that there have indeed been some changes: the restaurant is now the Patron, the hamburger costs $23.00, and a porterhouse steak for two costs $75.00 (without side dishes, which cost $9.00). The first formal meeting of The Baker Street Irregulars took place at Christ Cella's original location, but not at 160 East 46th Street, where the Patroon is now.

491. Nov 96 #8: Ken Koftan reports that "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Adventure of the Clockwork Prince" (a one-act "Victorian romp" by Cleve Haubold, with music by James Alfred Hill, published by Samuel French in 1980) is being produced at the Empire House Restaurant and Theatre in Wichita through December 22. This probably is a dinner theater, and the address is 1817 West Sim Park Drive, Wichita, KS 67203 (316-269-0900).
492. Antonio Iriarte reports that Jo Soares' O XANGO DE BAKER STREET, a pastiche published last year in Brazilian Portuguese (Feb 96 #4) is now available in Spanish as EL XANGO DE BAKER STREET (Madrid: Ediciones Siruela, 1996; 272 pp., 1,900 ptas.); copies are available from Antonio (Barbara de Braganza 4 (5), 28004 Madrid, Spain) by surface post for $20.00 (in currency, please). Holmes and Watson investigate the disappearance of a valuable Stradivarius during Sarah Bernhardt's first visit to Rio de Janeiro.
493. Basil Rathbone was one of six actors featured on a sheet of "official stamps of the stars and studios" issued in 1947; Israel I. Bick (Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408) offers a fullcolor reprint of the entire sheet (5 x 8.5 in.) for $9.95 postpaid.
494. The shoe horn with a bust of Sherlock Holmes on the handle (Oct 94 #2) is offered at $23.95 in the current catalog from the Finck Cigar Company, Box 831007, San Antonio, TX 78283 (800-221-0638) <www.finckcigarcompany.com>.
495. The Mysterious Bookshop has a new Holiday Catalogue, with a nice selection of Sherlockian books, new and old (and lots of other books, of course); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840).
496. Takahiko Endo has kindly forwarded a copy of the catalog prepared for the special exhibit on "Sherlock Holmes and English Bricks" at the World Brick Museum in Maizuru, and the museum must be a wonderful place to visit, even without a Sherlockian display (the special exhibit closes on Nov. 30, so there's still time to see it); much of the Sherlockian material on display is from the collection of Yumiko Shigaki. Maizuru is near Kyoto, and it is a seaport, with many brick buildings, reminiscent of Portsmouth. Also well worth a visit is the Shoso-in, which contains some wonderful Japanese art ("What do you know of the Emperor Shomu and how do you associate him with the Shoso-in near Nara?" Baron Gruner asked during his interview with Dr. Watson); Emperor Shomu who founded this great repository of Japanese art in the 8th century. And the Shoso-in has a home page with some fine pictures at <<http://www.bekkoame.or.jp/~joykun>>.
497. Don Hobbs notes a Canonical excerpt in THE BOOK OF VICES: A COLLECTION OF CLASSIC IMMORAL TALES, edited by Robert J. Hutchinson (New York: Riverhead Books, 1996; 280 pp., $9.00); the excerpt (from "A Study in Scarlet") runs from "Well, I have a trade of my own," to the departure of the commissionaire, and is described by Hutchinson as "a character study in pride."
498. Dec 96 #1: Further to the report (Jun 94 #6) of the auction sale of the Gainsborough portrait of Georgiana, 5th Duchess of Devonshire (of rather more than passing interest to Sherlockians), Bob Robinson has kindly forwarded a report from London that Ben Macintyre, whose stories about the painting were published in The Times and The N.Y. Times, has now written a book about Adam Worth, the master thief who once stole the painting, and the book has been purchased by Steven Spielberg's production company DreamWorks. The book's title is THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME, which is what some called Adam Worth (whose arrest, conviction, and refusal to surrender the portrait to avoid his sentence of seven years imprisonment made headlines in 1893, shortly before "The Final Problem" was written).
499. Adam Worth has, by the way, appeared in one film, as noted by Bob: "Harry and Walter Go to New York" (1976); Harry and Walter were con-men, played by James Caan and Elliott Gould, and Adam Worth was played by Michael Caine. We'll have to wait to read Ben Macintyre's book, which is due in May 1997 from HarperCollins in Britain.
500. Arsene Lupin, the hero of many novels and stories by Maurice Leblanc, was honored by France in a recent set of semi-postal stamps celebrating great characters in French mystery stories. And Lupin succeeded in defeating Sherlock Holmes (or Herlock Sholmes, after Sir Arthur complained). Thanks to Jean-Pierre Cagnat for supplying the stamp.
501. Noted by Don Hobbs: MURDEROUS SCHEMES: AN ANTHOLOGY OF CLASSIC DETECTIVE STORIES, edified by Donald E. Westlake (New York: Oxford University Press, 1996; 519 pp., $25.00); "The Dying Detective" is included in section devoted to the "I Confess" genre.
502. From the N.Y. Times News Service, via Paul Martin: "the state of euphoria a historian experiences when unearthing a long-forgotten manuscript may be chemically induced, according to Linga Franca magazine. It cites a report in the Lancet, a British medical journal. A fungus that grows on moldy books apparently releases spores when disturbed, and the airborne spores can induce hallucinations. Dermatologist R. J. Hay of London suggests that 'It is not inconceivable that intoxication might follow the inhalation of spores from suitable mold fungi in libraries.'" Bibliophiles do sometimes act strangely, and it's nice to know why . . .
503. Tom Huntington's article about his travel "On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes" in the Feb. 1997 issue of Historic Traveler focuses on Sherlockian sites in London, with lots of fine color photographs; the magazine's address is 741 Miller Drive SE #D-2, Leesburg, VA 22075 ($3.99).
504. The Dispatch Box is an interesting newsletter published in English by The Japanese Cabinet (a branch office of The Franco-Midland Hardware Company) with news of Sherlockian events in Japan, and articles such as a report on a new "Sherlock Holmes" cocktail bar in Naha on Okinawa. A subscription costs $8.00 or £5.00 (currency only, please) for four issues, from Yuichi Hirayama, 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181, Japan.
505. Dec 96 #2: Bouchercon 27 in St. Paul included a Sunday-morning panel on "The Bottomless Battered Tin Dispatch Box", moderated by Bruce Southworth and with panelists Jon L. Breen, Carole Nelson Douglas, Edward D. Hoch, and Larry Millett, discussing "what makes writing a Sherlockian parody or pastiche so attractive for both new and established writers?" An audiocassette (session 41) is available ($8.75 postpaid) from Bouchercon St. Paul Program, On Site Taping, 29318 Quail Run, Agoura Hills, CA 91301; $8.75 postpaid (note: the recording is not complete, and occasionally the sound is defective).
506. Bouchercon 28 will be held in Monterey on Oct. 30-Nov. 2, 1997 (Box 6202, Hayward, CA 94540); Mike Kean is working on arranging a Sherlockian agenda. Bouchercon 29 will be in Philadelphia in 1998 (dates not yet set); the organizer is Deen Kogan, who has run successful local conventions each fall in Philadelphia.
507. "A Grand Design: The Art of the Victoria and Albert Museum" is the title of the exhibit, ten years in the planning, that will open at the Baltimore Museum of Art in Oct. 1997 at the start of a five-city tour of North America. Museum directors and sponsors hope that the show will be a blockbuster that rivals the "Treasure Houses of Britain" exhibit at the National Gallery of Art in Washington in 1985-86, and it may well do that: the Victoria and Albert was founded in 1852, and it is the first and largest decorative-arts museum in the world. But the "Treasure Houses of Britain" had enough items with Sherlockian connections on display to warrant a six-page mini-catalog prepared by The Red Circle.
508. Carolyn and Joel Senter (aka Classic Specialties) have a new issue of The Sherlockian Times (their illustrated catalog of Sherlockian books, pamphlets, screen savers, mouse pads, banners, prints, and et ceteras. So new that it didn't get into the catalog is an amusing lapel pin, inspired by Ashley Lynn Decker and executed by Stu Shiffman. It's shown here actual size, with a white background and (of course) the happy face in yellow; the cost is $11.00

- postpaid to North American, or $11.75 to Europe, or $12.50 elsewhere. Credit-card orders welcome; their address is Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>.
509. The "fossil apostle of poetic Sherlockism" has prepared another volume of verse "with all the Canonical verve and whimsical jiggery-pokery you have come to expect," finely-printed as always on his Pequod Press. That's John Ruyle (521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521); the price is $40.00 postpaid in cloth, $20.00 in paper.
510. Syd Goldberg spotted a 72-minute videocassette called "The Diary of Jack the Ripper: Beyond Reasonable Doubt?" (1993), with an interesting account of the discovery of and debate about the diary of James Maybrick. Michael Winner presents the story, which is narrated by Tom Baker, and at the end of the video Winner suggests that "Perhaps another celebrated Victorian, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, was right: when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." The video is available from Consumer Video Marketing, 60 Cutter Mill Road, Great Neck, NY 10021 (800-530-8035); $19.95 plus shipping.
511. Dec 96 #3: Auction news: the manuscript of "The Sign of the Four" sold for $519,500 (including the premium paid by the buyer) at Sotheby's in New York on Dec. 4; the price was well above the catalog estimate, possibly because of increased interest fueled by a nice article about the manuscript in the N.Y. Times the day before the auction. And the manuscript of "The White Company" sold for $85,000 (also including the buyer's premium). Both manuscripts were owned by Father Redmond A. Burke, C.S.V., Ph.D., who died on May 14 (the 57th anniversary of his Ordination to Priesthood); "The White Company" is now owned by Fred Kittle of Chicago, but the new owner of "The Sign of the Four" has not yet been identified.
512. Scott Monty reports that there's a floating restaurant called the "Aurora" in Boston, rather larger than Mordecai Smith's steam launch. It's an old harbor-cruise ship moored at 310 Congress Street (right next to the Boston Tea Party exhibit); The Bull-Terriers are planning a dinner meeting there.
513. Al Gregory notes that the Early Holiday 1996 catalog from Design Toscano, 17 East Campbell Street, Arlington Heights, IL 60005 (800-525-0733) has a Sherlockian chess set in natural bone and mahogany ($228) or hand-painted ($448), and a Sherlock Holmes walking stick ($68.95). The company specializes in "historical European reproductions for home and garden," with armor and tapestries and gargoyles and other delights for those who are thinking of redecorating their homes as the Manor House of Hurlstone, or Baskerville Hall, or Holderness Hall, or some other "picturesque pile" in the Canon.
514. That sheet of "official stamps of the stars and studio" that included Basil Rathbone (Nov 96 #8) wasn't the only one issued in 1947; another sheet showed twelve actors, including Nigel Bruce, and a full-color reprint of that entire sheet (4.25x8.25") is available ($9.95 postpaid) from Israel I. Bick (Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408).
515. Russ Geoffrey notes some interesting Sherlockian references in Kinky Friedman's new mystery novel THE LOVE SONG OF J. EDGAR HOOVER (New York: Simon and Schuster, 1996).
516. Fans of "Mystery!" on PBS-TV may recall the BBC Television series "Campion" (based on the stories written by Margery Allingham), and remember that the two-hour program "Police at the Funeral" (1988), in which Inspector Oates finds Albert Campion (played by Peter Davison) dressed in Sherlockian costume. And the solution to the murder of John Franklyn-Robbins had a nice echo from the Canon. There may be more Sherlockian discoveries to be made in Allingham's books, but I'll leave that to members of The Margery Allingham Society, which twice a year publishes an interesting journal called The Bottle Street Gazette. Membership in the society costs £7.00 (or $10.00) a year; the society's contact is Pamela Bruxner, St. Cuthbert's Cottage, 23 North Street, Barming, Maidstone, Kent ME16 9HE, England.
517. Lisa Oldham's electronic newsletter The Brettish Empire continues to offer interesting material about Jeremy Brett, with the latest issue reporting on the launch party for David Stuart Davies' new biography of Brett, BENDING THE WILLOW. Lisa's e-mail address is <oldham@freenet.columbus.oh.us>, and back issues are posted on the Web at <<http://www.infinet.com/~jwolfe/tbe>>.

518. Dec 96 #4: Further to the item (Nov 96 #6) on astronaut F. Story Musgrave, who started his sixth and final shuttle flight on Nov. 19, the shuttle Columbia returned safely to Cape Canaveral on Dec. 7. Musgrave, 61 years old, is the oldest active astronaut, and now also shares the record for the longest-lasting shuttle mission.
519. Ben Wolf ("Vernet, the French Artist") died on Dec. 5. Ben was an artist, writer, teacher, biographer, editor, poet, and bookman, and a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (he received his Investiture in 1964) and a Master Copper Beechsmith of The Sons of the Copper Beeches of Philadelphia (whose dinner menus have for many years been decorated with his amusing Sherlockian artwork). He also was an admirer of Conan Doyle, and during a visit to England in the early 1970s discovered Constance Holland, Sir Arthur's last secretary (he called her "Tiny" and that's how she still signed her letters in the 1970s), and brought her to the United States for a tour of Philadelphia and Washington.
520. Tom Rieschick offers an illustrated flier for his attractive prints of Sherlock Holmes (as portrayed by Rathbone and Brett), and Watson and Moriarty, and Hercule Poirot, and others, and he accepts commissions; his address is 179 Gold Kettle Drive, Gaithersburg, MD 20878. Holmes by Hall offers an illustrated flier for their hand-crafted porcelain Sherlockian mugs and teapots; Box 221-B, Flushing, MI 48433.
521. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has arrived, with a good article about what went into assembling the music for the Varese Sarabande CD "Sherlock Holmes: Classic Themes from 221B Baker Street" and a report by David Stuart Davies on British television, including notes on what David Burke, Edward Hardwicke, and Jeremy Paul are up to (unfortunately, nothing Sherlockian). Scarlet Street is published quarterly ($20.00 a year), and the address is Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452. The CD is available from Varese Sarabande, 11846 Ventura Boulevard #130, Studio City, CA 91604 (800-827-3734); $15.98 plus $4.50 shipping.
522. Jerry Bangham spotted an advertisement in Variety (Sept. 30) for "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century: The Future Files" (an animated television series with 26 30-minute episodes) planned by DIC Entertainment in Burbank, in cooperation with Scottish Television. DIC hopes to start production during 1997, aiming for availability on-the-air in the fall 1998 season; you may already have seen DIC's animations on television: they've done "Where in the World is Carmen Sandiego?", "Slimer! and the Real Ghostbusters", "Sonic the Hedgehog", and "Madeline" (based on Ludwig Bemelmans' book).
523. "Underneath it all, those Victorian Violets were women of steel," suggests Sonia Fetherston, who recommends an exhibit of Victorian underwear (hoops, corsettes, drawers, pantalettes, petticoats, cage crinolines, chemises, and other assorted hard and soft wear from 1840 to 1900) at the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, Conn., through Mar. 2; the Atheneum's address is 600 Main Street, and their textile curator is Carol Dean Krute (860-278-2670).

524. Dec 95 #5: The latest issue of Anglofile reports that the final episodes of Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series will repeat on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV beginning May 8, 1997. And MPI Home Video has reported "healthy sales" of its videocassettes "with a surprising number of people buying the entire set" of 41 "Sherlock Holmes" programs. "The Thin Blue Line" (a BBC TV sitcom starring Rowan Atkinson as police inspector in suburban London) will air on PBS-TV stations at the end of the year; Alan Saunders has noted that Atkinson's character has a rather nice bust of Holmes on the desk in his office,

- and in one episode waxes lyrical about the pleasures of spending his lunch break reading a few chapters of Sherlock Holmes. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; $12.00 a year (Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033).
525. John Semper offers Frank Giacoia's original black-and-white artwork for the "Sherlock Holmes" newspaper comic strip that appeared on Apr. 15, 1956; the artwork (from "Silver Blaze") shows Fitzroy Simpson being charged with the murder of John Straker, and Holmes and Watson leaving 221B Baker Street to travel to King's Pyland. It's framed and in excellent condition, and costs $3,000; 10153-1/2 Riverside Drive #392, Toluca Lake, CA 91602 (818-993-6859) <johnsemper@aol.com>.
526. Marina Stajic has found the Gillette Tavern at the Hale-N-Hearty (381 Town Street, East Haddam, Conn.), quite convenient for visitors to nearby Gillette Castle; the menu notes that the owner, Mary Ellen Klinck, is a justice of the peace, and will be happy to perform weddings at the restaurant.
527. Walter R. Brooks wrote 26 children's books about Freddy the Pig, with nice illustrations by Kurt Wiese, who appropriately showed Freddy in Sherlockian costume in FREDDY THE DETECTIVE. The Friends of Freddy, founded in 1984, hold conventions, and publish the quarterly Bean Home Newsletter, and show Freddy the Detective on the flier you get if you request information about the society (5-A Laurel Hill Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770); please include a #10 SASE (stamped self-addressed envelope).
528. I hope you all enjoyed Stephen Davies' nice discovery of Rudyard Kipling's use of "Sherlock Holmes" as a verb (Nov 96 #5). It's an earlier use of the two words as a verb than the earliest citation in the second (1989) edition of the OXFORD ENGLISH DICTIONARY, which notes James Joyce's ULYSSES (1922) for "He had been meantime taking stock of the individual in front of him and Sherlock-holmesing him up."
529. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine wishes Sherlock Holmes a happy 143rd birthday with the Feb. 1997 issue, with a note on the birthday festivities, the late Harlan L. Umansky's poem "Watson's Mournful Reveries", and reviews by Jon L. Breen of recent Sherlockian books.
530. Willie Rushton died on Dec. 11. He was a British comedian, satirist, writer, and artist, and a major figure in the anti-establishment comic movement that flowered in the 1960s. He appeared on television with David Frost in "That Was the Week That Was", and was a co-founder of the magazine Private Eye, and in 1973 he played Watson to John Cleese's Holmes in the BBC television comedy "Elementary, My Dear Watson" comedy; he also wrote and illustrated the Watsonian pastiche novel W. G. GRACE'S LAST CASE (1984).
531. Dec 96 #6: Charles Hamilton Jr. died on Dec. 11. He was a handwriting expert and autograph dealer, and brought the manuscript of "Black Peter" to auction in 1972, when it was happily purchased by Norm Nolan. In 1983, Hamilton was one of the first to describe the alleged Hitler diaries as obvious forgeries; he also wrote about his work in books such as SCRIBBLERS & SCOUNDRELS (1968), and he always had grand tales to tell.
532. John Bennett Shaw had great fun compiling his list of "the basic 100 books" for Sherlockians, despite understandable frustration in deciding what books to include and exclude from his list, but his list always was just that: a list, rather than a discussion of the books themselves. Carl William Thiel now offers the list, and describes and discusses the books, and offers some suggestions of his own, in THE BASIC 100: AN ANNOTATED COLLECTOR'S GUIDE. It's nicely done, and there's an excellent foreword by Ray Betzner, and the 56-page pamphlet costs $13.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
533. The next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be held on Mar. 14-16. There will be a mystery to solve (with prizes for the winners) during a tour of six Victorian homes, and meals, and other fun and games. For more information, contact the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts at: Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204-0340 (609-884-5404).
534. Ben Fairbank reports that the Oxford University Press is again offering the nine cloth-bound volumes of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES at a discount. The sale price is $65.00 for the set, and you also get the nine color postcards showing the cover art; it's item 725 in their catalog (credit cards only), and the toll-free number is 800-230-3242.
535. "Part of you think it's in poor taste," the Los Angeles County Coroner's Department suggests in their latest mail-order catalog, adding that "part of you wants an XL." Their artwork includes the old skeleton Sherlock, and a new Sherlock-and-magnifying-glass, on T-shirts, mugs, playing cards, and lapel pins. Profits support that department's Youthful Drunk Driver Visitation Program, and the catalog is available from Skeletons in the Closet, 1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033.
536. Plan ahead: the next Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium will be held in Dayton on Mar. 14-16, 1997. If you'd like to be on their mailing list, contact Mary Frost-Pierson, 101 Cemetery Street, Yellow Springs, OH 45387 <msteries@aol.com>.
537. Jon Lellenberg has forwarded an article from the British press about a proposal to open a "Sherlock Holmes Experience" in the basement and first two floors at 231-237 Baker Street; architects' plans include moving models of Victorian street urchins, bobbies on the beat, and hansom cabs. A spokesman for the project refused to identify who's behind it, but it's not Grace Riley, director of the Sherlock Holmes Museum at 239 Baker Street; she said that "to have two museums on the same street is ludicrous." She fears that the new museum would be a "state of the art, hi-tech entertainment complex or something. Can you imagine that sort of freak show here?" The property at 231-237, now vacant, is owned by the Abbey National, and the Westminster Council had decided to visit the site before making a decision.

538. Dec 96 #7: AUGUST W. DERLETH (1909-1971): A BIBLIOGRAPHICAL CHECKLIST OF HIS WORKS, edited by William Dutch and others, offers a checklist of his novels, some additions to an earlier bibliography by Alison M. Wilson, a list of some of the contents of the August Derleth Society Newsletter, and other material. The 76-page pamphlet is available from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada); $13.00 postpaid.
539. W. Scott Monty (1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127) offers a wrist watch (male or female style) with the emblem of The Bull-Terrier Club on the watch-face (writing in red, the bull terrier in gray and black); $26.00 postpaid (or $28.00 if you want your name on the watch face).
540. A LETTER OF MARY (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1996; 276 pp., $23.95) is Laurie R. King's third novel about Mary Russell, and it's a fine one. The time is 1923, and Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes now are married (yes, to each other), and involved in solving a mystery that's really a mystery, and Mary is more mature, and she's very much a character in her own right. There are some subtleties to amuse mystery fans, and some new insights into the lives of both Russell and Holmes, and a good story, told well.
541. Rebecca Anderson has kindly provided a list of dates and cities for Laurie R. King's tour promoting her new Mary Russell book A LETTER OF MARY (names of bookstores and times of book-signings are not yet available): Jan. 20-21 (New York), 22 (Boston), 23 (Washington), 24 (Baltimore), 25-26 (Minneapolis), 27-28 (Chicago); Feb. 2-3 (Phoenix), 4 (Tucson), 5-6 (Los Angeles), 7-8 (Portland), 9-10 (Seattle). Attenta: the list is not necessarily accurate; she will be signing at MysteryBooks (at 1715 Connecticut Avenue NW in Washington) from noon to 1:00 pm on January 24.
542. And Laurie's second Mary Russell novel A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN now is available in paperback (New York: Bantam Books, 1997; 336 pp., $5.99); this is a collectible, because it contains a teaser at the end: 13 pages from A LETTER OF MARY. Some paperback publishers are doing this for some of their series (they need to have the next book in hand, of course, or perhaps only the opening pages); if the paperback teaser beats the actual first edition into the shops, then there's a partial first edition for the completists.

543. Chris Caswell (Baker Street Emporium, Box 2324, Seal Beach, CA 90740) has a new sales list of Sherlockiana, including a life mask of Basil Rathbone, a doormat with a Sherlockian profile in two sizes, and much more.
544. Edward F. Clark, Jr. ("The Matter of the French Government") died on Dec. 13. He was a Wall Street lawyer, and a fine Sherlockian; his first contribution to our literature won the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best piece in the BSI in 1963, and his scholarship and humor were a continuing delight both in print and at society meetings. He received his BSI Investiture in 1963, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1986; he once described himself as "one of the dwindling array of Edwardians who report for duty in Baker Street," and he was a wonderful link to the days of lamplighters and many other things that we can now only read about.
545. Dec 96 #8: Michael Atkinson's THE SECRET MARRIAGE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND OTHER ECCENTRIC READINGS (Ann Arbor: Univ. of Michigan Press, 1996; 198 pp., $29.95) easily refutes the widely-held belief that pop-cult lit-crit must be deadly dull and packed with academic jargon. The eccentric aspect of his approaches to nine Canonical stories is that he offers an intriguing starting-point for his discussion of each story, such as the kundalini-yoga serpent for "The Speckled Band" and Nietzschean iconoclasm for "The Six Napoleons". Atkinson explains what he's doing, in critical appendices and readable end-notes; three of the chapters are revised and expanded from earlier articles, and six are new, and all are interesting.
546. It seems quite appropriate that a Sherlockian society in California has produced its own wine glasses, and that's just what The Scowrers and Mollie Maguires of San Francisco had done: the design is in 22 kt. gold, kiln-fired on a clear 8-oz. bowl, with a black twisted stem. $13.50 postpaid for one, $26.00 for two, $44.00 for four, $86.00 for eight; Charlotte Erickson, Sherlock's Corner, 1029 Judson Drive, Mountain View, CA 94040.
547. And if you would like some Sherlockian wine in your Sherlockian wine glass, you might consider a Canonically-appropriate French claret, a 1995 Bordeaux produced by Chateau Plain-Point in Saint Aignan, in a 750-ml. bottle with a comemorative Sherlockian label and a Sherlockian profile on the wax seal. $34.95 postpaid from Chris Caswell, Baker Street Emporium, Box 2324, Seal Beach, CA 90740.
548. Forecast for February: MURDER, MRS. HUDSON, by Sydney Hosier (Avon); Emma Hudson, housekeeper to Sherlock Holmes, is the detective in this sequel to ELEMENTARY, MRS. HUDSON (Apr 96 #6).
549. Perhaps the ONLY real problem for those who attend Sherlockian symposiums and workshops and weekends is that all too often one goes home without the papers presented at the gatherings, because the sessions generally aren't recorded and the papers generally aren't published, and it's even worse if there are multiple sessions, and one can't attend all of them. A pleasant exception is the conference organized by The Baker Street Breakfast Club at Bennington College in June 1994. SHERLOCK HOLMES: VICTORIAN SLEUTH TO MODERN HERO (Lanham: Scarecrow Press, 1996; 396 pp., $34.50) is a thoroughly welcome collection, and the editors (Charles R. Putney, Joseph A. Cutshall King, and Sally Sugarman) have done an excellent job of offering 24 of the papers from the conference, including Nicholas Meyer's fine keynote address on "Sherlock Holmes on Film: A Personal View" (he has never seen a Sherlock Holmes film he didn't dislike, and explains why, with considerable insight and humor).
550. Robert C. Hess has a new sales list of Sherlockiana, and a nicely-illustrated flier of British souvenirs, gifts, and collectibles; his address is 559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwaters, NY 11718.

Jan 97 #1:

- The birthday festivities in New York were pleasantly free from rain, sleet, hail, ice, and snow, and they started as usual on Thursday with informal events, but without an Aunt Clara Sing at O'Lunney's (because by the time that Hugh O'Lunney's new premises were located it was too late to publicize a Thursday gathering, but it's likely that there will be one next year).
  - Friday's celebrations began with the Mrs. Hudson Breakfast in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin, and continued at the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Restaurant, where Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague Joffe, and Paul Singleton presented a new play by Andrew about what really happened when Edith Meiser persuaded William Gillette to play Sherlock Holmes on the radio in 1930. And Otto Penzler's open house at the Mysterious Bookshop was a nice opportunity for collectors to browse and buy.
  - The Baker Street Irregulars gathered at 24 Fifth Avenue, where Ray Betzner toasted Bev Wolov as *The* Woman during the pre-dinner cocktail party (Bev then went on to dine at the Algonquin with other ladies who have received that honor), and the evenings' entertainment included the usual traditions (Bob Katz's toast to the Second Mrs. Watson may or may not have proved that there weren't any Mrs. Watsons), and a carefully orchestrated roast of Tom Stix by family, friends, and former friends (roastees are not allowed to disown family).
  - Tom then awarded Irregular Shillings and Investitures to William J. Hyder ("A Most Valuable Institution"), Richard J. Kitts ("The Battered Tin Dispatch-Box"), Kenneth C. Lanza ("His Last Bow"), Theodora Niver ("Carina"), Roy E. Pilot ("Chemical Laboratory of St. Barts"), Paul G. Singleton ("Covent Garden"), Margaret Smedegaard ("Criterion Bar"), and Dorothy K. Stix ("Martha"). And then Tom announced that after serving as head of the BSI for eleven years, one more than he had planned, he was resigning the post and handing over the gavel to Mike Whelan.
  - The Baskerville Bash also took place on Friday evening, at Bill's Gay 90's, in a sold-out private room and with an agenda that included papers by Linda Anderson re-telling of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from the perspective of the curly-haired spaniel and by Peter McIntyre on substance abuse in the Canon, busking by assorted pearlie kings and queens, and an all-in performance of a new dance called the Barcarena (led by Francine Kitts to the tune of "Bad Dog, No Biscuit")
  - On Saturday morning the huckster room at the Algonquin was as usual packed with dealers who happily offered a wide variety of Sherlockian wares to a large crown of collectors who just as happily added to their collections. And Saturday afternoon's cocktail party at the National Arts Club offered attractive surroundings, fine food and drink and conversation, and brief entertainment that included David Stuart Davies' one-man reenactment of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (in only seven minutes) and a hard-fought auction that raised $2,250 for the John H. Watson Fund. And Mike Whelan presented the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best article in last year's Baker Street Journal to Philip K. Shreffler (who received an attractive certificate and a check for $500).
- Jan 97 #2: The festivities continued into the evening, of course, but on a more informal basis, and the Aunt Clara Sing at O'Lunney's, was devoted to raucous singing, drinks and cigars, and the usual honors to the late Bill Rabe and others uncounted (or at least unreported). And the Canonical Capricorns toasted Sherlock Holmes and others born under that sign. And some still were partying on Sunday, here and there. And why not?
  - Mike Whelan will use the title "Wiggins" as head of The Baker Street Irregulars (as did Tom Stix); he received his Investiture ("Vincent Spaulding") in 1974, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1992, and has lived in Chicago and San Francisco and Cleveland and Indianapolis, and been active in Sherlockian societies in all those cities, and he's been an able business manager of The Baker Street Journal. Mike has asked that mail concerning the BSI be sent to him at his post-office box address: Michael F. Whelan, Box 2189, Easton, MD 21601.

9. Plan ahead: the next "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held at the Tarrytown Hillton in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Nov. 1-2. Additional details are available from Robert E. Thomalen, Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512 <crwk02a@prodigy.com>. And if you want to plan even farther ahead, "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held on Oct. 31-Nov. 1, 1998 (Bob reports with justified pride that the 1998 program lacks only two speakers to be complete).
10. Cornelis Helling ("The Reigning Family of Holland") died on Mar. 10, 1995. He liked to explain that he had first found Sherlock Holmes in the back room of the shop of a pork-butcher, where at the age of ten or eleven he and a friend read the Canon in Dutch (and surely there could be no better place to first read "The Adventure of Black Peter"). He was an advocate, a fervent admirer of Jules Verne, and an energetic Sherlockian; he founded The Crew of the S.S. Friesland in 1952, and was a member of many other societies (he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1961), and he contributed to our literature from the 1940s to the 1970s on both sides of the Atlantic.
11. Some European countries will be issuing stamps this year tied to the theme "tales of horror" (since 1997 is the bicentenary of the birth of Mary Godwin, wife of Percy Bysshe Shelley and the author of FRANKENSTEIN, and the centenary of the publication of Bram Stoker's DRACULA), and Great Britain will issue a set of four stamps in May honoring (by nice coincidence) the four books featured in last year's television mini-series "Nightmare: The Birth of Victorian Horror" (the other two books being DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES). Nicola Davies kindly forwarded the report by James Mackay in The Times (Jan. 7).
12. PRIVATE EYE: DETEKTIV-ROLLENSPIEL IM VIKTORIANISCHEN ENGLAND is a German role-playing game created by Thilo Bayer and published by B&B Productions (Postfach 12, 74386 Talheim, Germany); the 96-page rule-book (DM 22.00) is illustrated with Sherlockian artwork, with two pages about Sherlock Holmes, and there are five adventures (#5 is "Auge um Auge" and costs DM 12.00). Okay: "Auge um Auge" is "An Eye for an Eye" and you (and your friends) will need to know German to play the games. Christian Swoboda will be happy to supply the rule-book and adventure #5 for $27.00 postpaid (currency only, please); his address is Birkengasse 68/6/19, 3100 St. Poelten, Austria.

13. Jan 97 #3: Reported by Lisa Oldham: Laurence Jarvik's PBS (Rocklin: Forum/Prima, 1997; 376 pp., $25.00) offers a history of the Public Broadcasting System, with a chapter on "Mobil's Masterpiece" that covers both "Masterpiece Theatre" and "Mystery!" and includes lots of behind-the-scenes gossip, some of it about Joan Wilson (who produced both series, and was Jeremy Brett's second wife, and apparently got "Mystery!" started by pirating mystery programming away from Alistair Cooke).
14. A Sherlockian silhouette has long been used by Crime Solvers on its posters and fliers, and now it can be seen on the World Wide Web, where there's a "most wanted" site with pictures of perps and felons and such. The site URL is <<http://www.mostwanted.org>>, and the S'ian silhouette will be found at <<http://www.mostwanted.org/va/FairfaxCoPD/>>.
15. The trivia question was: name two actors who have played Sherlock Holmes who also have played actors who have played Sherlock Holmes (Apr 96 #2). And the answer was: Patrick Horgan (who has played Holmes and William Gillette) and Nicol Williamson (who has played Holmes and John Barrymore). And there is a third: Christopher Plummer, who has played Holmes and is now on tour in the one-man show "Barrymore" (written by William Luce). The play premiered at Stratford, Ontario last fall, and will be at the Mechanic Theatre in Baltimore Feb. 10 through Mar. 2, and is due on Broadway in March.
16. "The man must have gone down like a pole-axed ox before that terrible blow." That's from "Black Peter" (other mentions of oxen, or more accurately, parts of oxen, can be found in "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Lion's Mane"). And here's our newest Lunar New Year stamp, honoring the Year of the Ox.
17. President Clinton welcomed this year's recipients of National Medal of Arts (the government's highest honor for individual artists, writers, and scholars) at a White House dinner on Jan. 9, and one of the honorees was Stephen Sondheim, creator of many of the most memorable of modern musicals, and the author of the song "I Never Do Anything Twice" featured in the movie "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976).
18. Further to the mention of the upcoming exhibit "A Grand Design: The Art of the Victoria and Albert Museum" at the Baltimore Museum of Art in October (Dec 96 #2), there will be a different exhibit on "The Victorians: British Painting in the Reign of Queen Victoria (1837-1901)" at the National Gallery of Art in Washington from Feb. 16 through May 11. The latter exhibit will be the first survey of Victorian art ever mounted in the U.S., and it will be on display only in Washington.
19. Jim Suszynski reports some things to look for: a work shirt with Scooby Doo and Shaggy in Sherlockian costume on the pocket ($38.00 at Warner Brothers stores); a British short-hair calico cat sculpted by Priscilla Hillman in Sherlockian costume made by ENESCO ($17.50); a "101 Dalmatians" Timex watch showing a dalmatian with deerstalker and magnifying glass ($39.95); and a coaster for Sherlock Holmes Best Bitter in a set of 25 British Pub Coasters from Pub World Collectibles ($7.95) (there's a Pub World Collectibles Club, The Old Coach House, 92 Lodge Road, Feltwell, Norfolk PI26 4DN, England).

20. Jan 97 #4: FAREWELL, MY DUMMY, by Phillip and Robert King (London: B. T. Batsford, 1996; 128 pp.) is a new collection of bridge-problem pastiches similar to their earlier THE KINGS' TALES (Aug 96 #4); Holmes and Watson appear in "The London Bridge Mystery" (Jeffrey Archer, Jane Austen, and Raymond Chandler are among the authors whose styles are used in other stories). Available from Trafalgar Square, Howe Hill Road, North Pomfret, VT 05053 (800-423-4525); $20.95 postpaid.
21. J. D. Salinger's HAPWORTH 16, 1924 will be published next month by Orchises Press (a small press owned by an English professor at George Mason University), and it will be Salinger's fifth book, and first new one since 1962. Actually, the story has been published once before in The New Yorker (June 19, 1965), but the reclusive author refused to allow a reprint until now. The 20,000-word story is a letter from seven-year-old Seymour Glass to his family; he's at summer camp, and young Glass writes that "my love for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle ... is an absolute certainty!"
22. For those who can cruise the web with a graphics browser: Andy Solberg has reported a web page touting the current exhibition on sea nettles at the National Aquarium in Baltimore, with a picture of the Lion's Mane; the URL is <<http://www.cris.com/~Stocksda/naib/jelly.htm>>. And Willis Frick notes a home page displaying pictures of various recreations of the sitting room at 221B Baker Street, at <http://www.thehistorynet.com/HistoricTraveler/articles/1997/0297\_text.htm>.
23. Karl Showler reports that he has been able to clear the waiting list for THE CASE OF THE HOLMES BEE BOOK (Sep 96 #2); this is a boxed set of Kenneth K. Clark's BEEKEEPING (1951) and a 28-page pamphlet explaining how Remsen Ten Eyck Schenck used Clark's book to create one of the most delightful of the Sherlockian bibliohoxes. The set is available from B & K Books, Riverside, Newport Street, Hay-on-Wye, via Hereford HR3 5BG, England; $60.00 postpaid (checks payable to Karl Showler, please).
24. The Emperor Napoleon III ordered the construction of the Hotel du Louvre in 1855 to accommodate visitors to the World Fair, and it was the first Grand Hotel in France; it was mentioned in "The Bruce-Partington Plans" and it is the official rendezvous for Holmesians in Paris, and it will be the focus of "L'affaire de l'Hotel du Louvre" planned by The Societe Sherlock Holmes de France for May 8-11. Details of the celebration (and it will be a grand affair indeed) are available from the society (26 avenue de la Republique, 75011 Paris. France).

25. Slylock Fox appears in Sherlockian costume on all 90 cards (presumably reprinted from Bob Weber Jr.'s comic strip) in the box of SLYLOCK FOX BRAIN BOGGLERS (Great American Puzzle Factory #784), issued in 1996 and available in toy stores now.
26. John McGowan notes that the Nando Times has reported that PBS has ordered eight new episodes of "Wishbone" (which may get a try-out in prime time), but there's no word on whether one of the new shows will be Sherlockian. In the meantime, fans of "The Original Cracker Jack" can check supermarket shelves for packages proclaiming that there is a "Wishbone" prize inside: there are 24 different prizes, but I don't know if one of them is S'ian).

27. Jan 97 #5: H. R. F. Keating's CRIME & MYSTERY: THE 100 BEST BOOKS, first published in 1987 (Feb 88 #1) has been reissued in paperback (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1996; 219 pp., $9.95); Keating comments on his selections, from Edgar Allan Poe to P. D. James, and Conan Doyle is noted for THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.
28. Brenda White and her husband Jesse Rhodes started creating Disney collectibles in 1989, and have done (very) limited editions of charger plates, pull-toys, tile table-tops, and one-of-a-kind vases. And her full-color 16" charger plate showing Ratigan (from "The Great Mouse Detective") is #7 of an edition of 10, and is available for $2,000 at The Walt Disney Gallery (attn: Antonio), 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10022 (212-702-0702).
29. THE BOOK OF FICTIONAL DAYS: 1997 ENGAGEMENT CALENDAR is a new project, and an intriguing one, restricted to honoring fictional events and characters rather than authors (Sherlockians may be familiar with that, of course). The calendar notes, for example, that Dec. 27 is when Commissionaire Peterson's goose coughed up the Blue Carbuncle. $12.45 postpaid from Bob Gordon (6224 Bury Drive, Eden Prairie, MN 55436); Bob will also be happy to hear from anyone who wants to nominate other fictional events, at that address or at <bgordon@fona.com>.
30. Bernard J. O'Heir died on Jan. 25. It was just over twenty years ago, when Bernie was a sergeant in the Air Force, that he began to focus his interest in old movies into an enthusiastic admiration of Basil Rathbone, and when he was stationed in California he interviewed many people who had known and acted with Rathbone. Bernie collected, naturally, and he pursued anything and everything related to Rathbone's stage, screen, radio, and television career. He was able to find and preserve many unique items, and he gladly shared both his discoveries and his enthusiasm with his friends and fellow admirers of an actor who was far more than just Sherlock Holmes.
31. Tom Rieschick's attractive Sherlockian artwork is now available on greeting cards as well as prints, and you can request his illustrated flier; his new address is 4549 Windsor Lane, Bethesda, MD 20814 <trieschick@aol.com>.
32. "Sherlock's Secret Life" is a new play, written by Ed. Lange and scheduled at the New York State Theatre Institute in Troy, N.Y. There will be preview performances on Mar. 14 and 15, and the play will open on Mar. 16 and close on Mar. 26; the address of the box-office is 155 River Street, Troy, NY 12180 (518-274-3256). And there are plans for a limited run in Queens, N.Y. in April, and for a longer run at the Fulton Opera House in Lancaster, Pa., in the 1997-1998 season. Altamont's Agents have made arrangements for a theater party on Mar. 15; more information is available from Cheryl Hurd, Box 2048, Scotia, NY 12302 <hurdc@sage.edu>.
33. David A. Bankes and Anthony R. Santoro of Christopher Newport University are guiding another tour through "Gardens, Country Houses, and Museums in England" on May 19-30, with "adventures custom-tailored for Sherlock Holmes buff" as an option; details are available from TravelMates (attn: Ginger Shriver), 12482 Warwick Boulevard, Newport News, VA 23606

34. Jan 97 #6: "20-100" is the cryptic title chosen for the celebration of the 20th anniversary of the founding of The Blustering Gales from the South-West and the 100th anniversary of their favorite story (which of course is "The Devil's Foot"); the celebration will be held on Mar. 22 in Burbank, and additional details are available from Paula Salo, 4421 Pacific Coast Highway, Torrance, CA 90505.
35. Guernsey has issued a set of stamps that honors "100 Years of Cinema" and portrays five famous detectives: Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes, Margaret Rutherford as Miss Marple, Warner Oland as Charlie Chan, Humphrey Bogart as Philip Marlow, and Peter Sellers as Inspector Clouseau. The mint set is offered here by Israel I. Bick (Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408) for $9.95; there also is a first day cover ($14.95), presentation pack ($12.95), and prestige booklet containing a competition pastiche ($29.95); plus $3.00 for shipping (credit card orders welcome). Maurice Tanner (180 Whitehorse Road, West Croydon, Surrey CR0 2LA, England) offers his own color-cachet first day cover of the Rathbone stamp (£9.99 postpaid in U.K. or £10.99 overseas) and a set of two different maximum cards (£6.99 or £7.99); sterling checks or money orders only, or credit cards with a 30p surcharge (an illustrated flier is available in return two IRC or a $1.00 bill).
36. Doug Elliott reports that the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library will celebrate the 25th anniversary of The Bootmakers of Toronto with a special exhibit of original Sherlockian art by Sidney Paget, Frederic Dorr Steele, Gahan Wilson, and others, from the collections of Dr. Peter Lemiski and the Library; the exhibit will be open from June 26 to Aug. 2.
37. THE BAKER STREET COMPANION, by Paul Lipari (Kansas City: Ariel Books, 1996; 128 pp., $3.95), is an interesting mini-book (1.9 x 2.3 inches), with brief chapters on the Canon, and Sherlockians, and Basil Rathbone; distributed by Andrew and McMeel, 4900 Main Street, Kansas City, MO 64112.
38. Best wishes to all on George Washington's Birthday (which of course we now celebrate on President's Day). A repeat question from six years back: on what date and in what year was George Washington actually born?
39. And a few commercials: the revised 16-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, *The* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.15 postpaid. The 76-page list of 704 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for the 413 active societies, costs $3.80 postpaid. A run of address labels for 345 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.35 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.
40. For the electronically enabled, the 16-page list of Irregulars and others is available from me as e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis Frick's web site at <<http://www.kaiwan.com/~sherlock/stron1.html>>.

41. Feb 97 #1: The question was: on what date and in what year was George Washington born? And the answer is: Feb. 11, 1731. Well, yes, his official birthday now is Feb. 22, but that's because Britain in 1752, adopted the Gregorian calendar in all of their possessions, including the American colonies, and there was a loss of eleven days, and Feb. 11 became Feb. 22. And yes, we celebrated the bicentennial of his birth in 1932, and you might think that means that he was born in 1732, but the change to the Gregorian calendar also involved shifting the start of the new year from Mar. 25 back to Jan. 1. And why is this of significance to Sherlockians? "What was the month? The sixth from the first." So the first month when the Musgrave ritual was created wasn't January, and the sixth from the first wasn't July.
42. Mollie Panter-Downes died on Jan. 22. She wrote a "Letter from London" for The New Yorker for 45 years, discussing British society and politics and culture, and her report on the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House (in the July 7, 1951, issue) offered both splendid reporting and delightful reading.
43. For those who enjoyed Derek Jacobi as Alan Turing in "Breaking the Code" on "Mobil Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV on Feb. 2 (and for those who may want to watch it when it repeats): Richard Johnson played Dillwyn Knox, the second of the four Knox brothers (Ronald, the founder of our grand

- Sherlockian game, was the youngest). Dilly Knox was recruited by Naval Intelligence as a cryptographer in 1915, and continued that work in the Foreign Office, and was Turing's superior at Bletchley Park when the British broke the Enigma cipher. Penelope Fitzgerald's THE KNOX BROTHERS (London: Macmillan, 1977) is a fine biography of all four brothers.
44. I had a bit of fun during the birthday festivities in January presenting people with a cultural-literacy test, showing them a ring that video shops are giving to customers who buy a new film. And about half (but only half) of those tested recognized the Phantom's death's-head ring, and the symbol feared by evildoers everywhere, all those years in the comic strip, and now in the movie. But that wasn't the cultural-literacy test; try your hand at the real question: what was the symbol on the Phantom's other ring?
  45. Leonard Nimoy played Sherlock Holmes on educational television in "The Interior Motive" in 1975, long before VCRs were as widely owned and used as they are now; I would appreciate hearing from anyone who has a recording of this show.
  46. WHICH WAY DID THE BICYCLE GO? is an imaginative collection of mathematical mysteries by Joseph D. E. Konhauser, Dan Velleman, and Stan Wagon (Washington: Mathematical Association of America, 1996; 235 pp., $24.95). And the first problem in the book is a discussion of a real Canonical mystery (from "The Priory School"): how do you tell from a set of bicycle tracks which way the bicycle was going? It turns out that there is a mathematical answer to the question, and it's explained neatly in the book (which also has some nice Sherlockian cover art by Max Carl Winkler). $29.50 postpaid from the MAA, Box 91112, Washington DC 20090 (800-331-1162).

  47. Feb 97 #2: Herb Caen died on Feb. 1. He was in many ways the ultimate San Franciscan (although he was born in Sacramento), and began his journalism career as a columnist on his high-school newspaper; he started his six-days-a-week column in the San Francisco Chronicle in 1938, and when he retired last year, 75,000 people attended a farewell party arranged by the city. He loved to write about his city and its people, and once in a while about the local Sherlockians: on Jan. 4, 1996, he tipped his hat to Ray de Groat ("exiled to Seattle") and praised his Christmas toast, "Geese on earth, goosewill to all."
  48. And the answer is: the symbol on the Phantom's other ring was the symbol of his protection, which was a nice thing to have, whether in the jungle or elsewhere. Chrys Kegley knew, and knew as well that Maggie Schpak, of the Curious Collectors of Baker Street, designed both rings worn by the Phantom in the film.
  49. Henry Irving claimed credit for suggesting that William Gillette bring his play "Sherlock Holmes" to London in 1901, and earlier achieved considerable success playing Corporal Brewster in "Waterloo" (dramatized by Conan Doyle from his short story "A Straggler of '15"); the Lyceum (well known to those who have read "The Sign of the Four" was his theater, and the restaurant in the newly renovated theater is named in his honor. And British enthusiasts have founded The Irving Society, there are four meetings planned for 1997, and a twice-a-year newsletter; membership costs £15.00 a year (in sterling only, please) to the society, c/o Brien Chitty, 69 Harcourt Street, Newark-on-Trent, Notts. NG24 1RG, England.
  50. The current issue of Anglofile reports that Britain's year-end honors list included a baronetcy for composer Andrew Lloyd Webber; his musical "Cats" (1981), was adapted from T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS and features the song "Macavity". Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($12.00 a year).
  51. "Time Exposures" is an interesting Canadian television series (with 26 30-minute episodes) about a modern family who wind up time-traveling through history; it first aired in 1989 on CTV, and it's now running on WAM! cable (a children's network owned by Encore), and in three episodes they have an encounter with Sherlock Holmes (played by Philip Linfield); watch for the three S'ian episodes on Mar. 15, 22, and 29. If any of you get WAM! cable, please record the shows off-the-air.
  52. Plan ahead: the seventh annual Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair and Convention will be held at the Holiday Inn (Independence Mall) in Philadelphia on Oct. 3-5. Membership is limited to 400 and full registration costs $50.00, and you can write to Deen Kogan, Detecto-Mysterioso Books, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147. You can also plan well ahead: Bouchercon 29 will be held in Philadelphia on Oct. 1-4, 1998, with Deen in charge of arrangements (she has done it before and done it well); Bouchercon is the world mystery convention and it's a grand affair indeed, and it will be at the Wyndham Franklin Plaza in Philadelphia, and full registration is $100 (checks payable to Bouchercon 29, same address).

  53. Feb 97 #3: "The hospital's head pediatric nurse is also an ex-prostitute whose former madam turns up dead after revealing that she's going to publish a tell-all book" was the TV Guide synopsis for "Diagnosis Murder" on CBS-TV on Jan. 9, and it's well worth watching for when it runs again: Dick Van Dyke takes a cue from a Sherlock Holmes story in solving a mystery, and says, "I only steal from the best."
  54. A bibliographic query about the first American edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Harper & Brothers, 1892): is there a copy of the first edition (with the date 1892 on the title page) that does not have the misprint "if had" (rather than "if I had") on page 65, line 4? The mistake was corrected in later editions (which have an undated title page), but one sometimes sees the misprint cited as distinguishing the first issue of the first edition. But if the mistake wasn't corrected in the first edition of the book, there would be only one issue. Does anyone have a second issue?
  55. The Torists International are celebrating their tenth anniversary this year and they have an imaginative schedule for those in or near Chicago: visits to the Chicago Stock Exchange in March, Sportsman's Park in June, the Adler Planetarium in September, and the Chicago Athletic Association in December. Information about the society and its meetings is available from Claudine Kastner, 810 Burning Bush Lane, Mount Prospect, IL 60056.
  56. Sheldon Wesson died on Dec. 12. He was for many years director of press relations for the American Iron and Steel Institute in Washington, and the poet laureate of The Silver Blaze (Southern Division), and an enthusiastic printer with a basement full of hand presses and type. His scholarship and wit were a mainstay of The Red Circle, and some fine examples of both will be found in the pages of The Baker Street Journal.
  57. NIGHTMARE: THE BIRTH OF HORROR, by Christopher Fraying (London: BBC Books, 1996; 224 pp., £17.99), was published to accompany the BBC mini-series that was broadcast here in Oct. 1996, and it's far more than merely a repeat of the material in the television shows: Fraying explores FRANKENSTEIN, DRACULA, DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE, and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and offers new information on the genesis of the Dartmoor tale, and some splendid illustrations, including (for the first time) the first page of Chapter XI of the manuscript, and B. Fletcher Robinson's inscription in the copy of the first edition of the book he presented to coachman Harry Baskerville "with apologies for using the name!"
  58. Forecast: THE FINAL ADVENTURES OF SOLAR PONS, from Arkham House in July, edited and introduced by Peter Ruber, including some of Derleth's own unpublished Solar Pons stories; and THE SOLAR PONS ENCYCLOPEDIA, by Robert Brooks, from Arkham House in November.
  59. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTED EDITION was first published by John Murray and Jonathan Cape in 1974 in nine volumes, with introductions by authors such as Eric Ambler and Kingsley Amis, and it has been reissued by Leopard in Britain at £2.99 or £3.99 per volume; Geoff Jeffrey has noted that all nine volumes are available here ($7.95 each) from Edward R. Hamilton, Falls Village, CT 06031-5000 (and the Hamilton catalog of discount and bargain books has many other Sherlockian titles).

60. Feb 97 #4: New from the Folio Society: SHERLOCK HOLMES: SELECTED STORIES, selected by Joe Whitlock Blundell and with an introduction by Richard Lancelyn Green, with 11 of the stories and illustrations by Francis Mosley (reprinted from the set of the complete short stories published by the Society in 1993). Available to members of the Society for $34.95; if you'd like to join, the address is: 2323 Randolph Avenue, Avenel, NJ 07001 (800-353-0700).
61. There also is an exhibition honoring "Folio Society Fifty Years 1947-1997" at the King's Library (at the British Library in Great Russell Street), and an attractive poster designed by John Lawrence that shows many of the characters in the Society's book, including (of course) Sherlock Holmes.
62. Washington Post columnist Bill Gold died on January 26th. It was on Sept. 13, 1949, that he noted in his column "The District Line" that Karen Kruse was hoping to find some fellow-Sherlockians in Washington ("for the benefit of the younger set," he noted, "it might be well to explain that Holmes was a sort of script writer for Basil Rathbone"); three people responded to her call, and the four of them founded The Red Circle of Washington.
63. Cerebro (Box 327, East Prospect, PA 17317 (800-695-2235) continues to offer a wide variety of attractive cigar box labels; their new catalog includes a pictorial Sherlock Holmes outer label ($30.00) and a Sherlock Holmes inner label top sheet ($8.00).
64. The proprietor of the Pequod Press reports that THE ADVENTURE OF THE WOODEN NEZ PERCE embroils Sherlock Loams in a mystery surrounding an effigy of the legendary Chief Joseph (and that no animals were harmed in its writing or production; hand-set and printed, as always, and available for $40 (cloth) or $20 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
65. Richard J. Sveum, who is president of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University in Minnesota, was in New York for the birthday festivities and for a discussion of the status of and plans for their John Bennett Shaw and other collections. Many Sherlockians have donated to the Library, but continued support is always welcome; the Friends plan to publish a quarterly newsletter, with reports on the collection and on some of its interesting material, and the first issue is due this spring. If you are not already on their mailing list, you are invited to write to him at: 466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
66. Jack Kerr spotted a second pastiche by Michael Mallory, "The Adventure of the Glass House" (told by Watson's wife Amelia), in the fall 1996 issue of Murderous Intent (Box 5947, Vancouver, WA 98668); $5.00. Another story, by Richard A. Lupoff, is illustrated by Stu Shiffman, who has drawn a Sherlock Holmes PEZ dispenser (and perhaps there will be a real one, some day).
67. Megan Follows has recorded Laurie R. King's A LETTER OF MARY on two audiocassettes in a set now available from Durkin Hayes ($16.95), and the reading is a fine one (THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE and A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN are also available); if you can't find them at your local shop, the address for Durkin Hayes Audio is 1 Colomba Drive, Niagara Falls, NY 14305.

68. Feb 97 #5: This year's program for University Vacations includes "Light upon the Moor" at Brasenose College (Oxford), Devon, and Cornwall on Aug. 17-27, with a week of lectures and a stay at the Manor House Hotel, with due attention to Arthur Conan Doyle. 10461 N.W. 26th Street, Miami, FL 33172 (800-792-0100) <univac@icanect.net>.
69. George B. Koelle died on Feb. 1. He was a distinguished scientist, and an inventor of electron-microscope methods that became a standard in the field of pharmacology, and served as chairman of the department at the University of Pennsylvania from 1957 to 1981; he was elected to the National Academy of Science in 1972. George also was a Master Copper Beechsmith of The Sons of the Copper Beeches, and used his medical expertise in writing his essay on poisons in the Canon for the society's LEAVES FROM THE COPPER BEECHES.
70. The Pleasant Places of Florida will celebrate their 25th anniversary with a "Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium" at the Dolphin Beach Resort in St. Pete Beach on May 2-4. Write to Carl L. Heifetz, 3693 Siena Lane, Palm Harbor, FL 34685 <72642.3220@compuserve.com> for more information.
71. Spotted by Victoria Robinson: a German hand-painted porcelain Sherlock Holmes stein (with full-relief calabash pipe, pipe pewter thumbblift, flat pewter lid under the deerstalker hat), 6.75" high, $130.00 plus $6.00 shipping, in the new catalog from The Cottage Shop, 11 Largo Drive South, Stamford, CT 06907 (800-965-7467).
72. If your local pipe shop stocks Dr. Grabow pipes and accessories, you can ask for a copy of the small booklet (with nice Sherlockian artwork) called "The Case of the New Pipe Smoker" (noted recently by eagle-eyed Siobhan McElduff).
73. Richard M. Caplan's "DR. WATSON, MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES" (Shelburne: Battered Silicon Dispatch Box, 1996; 171 pp., $24.00) offers a fine demonstration of how much fun a Sherlockian can have mixing the Canon with an area of expertise: Caplan's area of expertise is dermatology, and he has over the years discussed that aspect of the Sherlock Holmes stories in articles in medical journals and in The Baker Street Journal, all reprinted here. But there is much more in this book: a series of letters from written by Young Stamford to his wife, from 1882 to 1913, and tells some fine stories about his travels and the people he meets (including Holmes and Watson, more than once). The publisher's address is Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; $27.00 postpaid.
74. Reported: Martin Gardner's essay on "The Irrelevance of Conan Doyle" (first published in 1976 in BEYOND BAKER STREET: A SHERLOCKIAN ANTHOLOGY) has been reprinted in his THE NIGHT IS LARGE: COLLECTED ESSAYS, 1938-1995 (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1996).
75. Mary Beth Myles spotted a Russ Teddy Town "Sherlock" plastic bear in S'ian costume, 5" high, holding a pipe and a magnifying glass, it's item 13739 from Russ Berrie and Co. (Oakland, N.J.), and it cost $10.50 at her local Hallmark shop (but note that it's not a Hallmark item).
76. Feb 97 #6: TERCER ANUARIO DE LA SOCIEDAD DE MENDIGOS AFICIONADOS is the third casebook of The Amateur Mendicant Society of Madrid, and nicely done, with 296 pages of Sherlockian scholarship and pastiches by members of the society, with an interesting exploration of "El Sultan de Turquia" and a section of studies devoted to "La Finca "Copper Beeches"" and much more. It's all in Spanish; $20.00 postpaid (in currency only, please) from Miguel Gonzales-Pedel, San Vidal 15, 28017 Madrid, Spain.
77. Further to the earlier mention of Ed. Lange's new play "Sherlock's Secret Life" (Jan 97 #5): if you can't get to Troy in March, there will be one performance of the play at Christ the King Regional High School in Middle Village, Queens, N.Y., on Apr. 11; the box-office telephone number is 718-366-7400 ext 246.
78. Leo Rosten died on Feb. 19. He was teaching English to immigrants when he met the man who inspired a 1935 series of New Yorker stories called "The Education of H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N" (which later became a series of books and a Broadway musical). His classic THE JOYS OF YIDDISH (1689) still is a standard reference work, and in HOORAY FOR YIDDISH! (1982) he discussed the used of the word "bread" as a substitute for "money" (also noting the more straightforward English, "as in Conan Doyle, say: A blackmailer tells Sherlock Holmes, 'Here's how I make my humble bread.'"). And his novels SILKY! (1979) and KING SILKY! (1980) starred private investigators Sidney Pincus and Michael X. Clancy, operating as Watson and Holmes, Inc.
79. CSA Telltapes (101 Camberlayne Road, London NW10 3ND, England) has issued a two-audiocassette set VINTAGE MURDER STORIES (available earlier as CLASSIC TALES OF MURDER) with five stories (including Conan Doyle's "B.24") read by Brian Cox; £9.49 postpaid (credit-card orders welcome).

80. Cynthia Wein (65 Briarwood Lane, Plainview, NY 11803) offers an artistic hand-painted Sherlockian design (in black on a 7.5 in. red circle) on short-sleeved white T-shirts ($26.00), long-sleeved white or gray T-shirts ($29.00), and white or gray sweatshirts ($34.00), in sizes M/L/XL (add $3.00 for XXL); all prices postpaid.
81. If you're considering a summer holiday in England: The Sherlock Holmes of London's East Coast Expedition is scheduled for July 4-6, with a tour of the countryside where the German spy-master Von Bork lived in the years before the outbreak of war in 1914. Additional information is available from Margaret Bird, 193 Richmond Road, Kingston upon Thames, Surrey KT2 5DD, England.
82. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist on Apr. 9, at Tony's Wine Warehouse, 1111 Oak Lawn Avenue, in Dallas, for a five-course ten-wine dinner and the usual toasts, and the price is $50.00 a person; if you would like to join us for the festivities, please contact Don Hobbs at: Box 36329, Dallas, TX 75235 <dhhobbs@zluh.org>. And if you'd like an excuse for a visit to Oklahoma, I will lead the first-ever geological expedition to the summit of Holmes Peak (near Tulsa) on Apr. 12; Staff Davis (2144 North Elwood Avenue, Tulsa, OK 74106) is the ring-leader of The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa.

83. Feb 97 #7: And are you wondering where Leo Rosten found that quote in the Canon? He didn't; it's his humorous (but plausible) invention.
84. Some invented quotes are more plausible than others: William Safire, in his column "On Language" in the N.Y. Times Magazine (Feb. 16), notes a comment made by Neil Simon on one of the many meanings of "Aha!" as "when you know something but find it unnecessary to share, as for example, Sherlock Holmes picking up an object and exclaiming, 'Aha!' to which Watson asks, 'What is it Holmes?' 'I'll let you know when we get to Blenheim Castle. Quickly, Watson. To Victoria Station.'"
85. And yes, Neil Simon got "Blenheim Castle" wrong, too; it's Blenheim Palace, built by Sherlock Holmes/John Neville/John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough (and trivia experts know that the first "Masterpiece Theatre" series was "The First Churchills", not "The Forsyte Saga").
86. The Mycroft Holmes Society celebrated their 25th anniversary last year, and have now celebrated that celebration with A SILVER JUBILEE: 25 YEARS OF THE MYCROFT HOLMES SOCIETY OF SYRACUSE, edited by Joseph A. Coppola, and offering a collection of announcements, articles, papers, reminiscences, poetry, and puzzles from the society's archives. 195 pages (cloth-bound); $27.24 postpaid to U.S. addresses ($31.00 elsewhere), from Joseph A. Coppola, 103 Kenny Street, Fayetteville, NY 13066. Joe also reports that sets of three commemorative covers with the official USPS postmark are available; $5.00 postpaid.
87. Michael Atkinson's THE SECRET MARRIAGE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Dec 96 #8) has been nominated for a Mystery Writers of America "Edgar" for Best Critical/Biographical Work.
88. The Beeman's Christmas Annual for 1996 offers 40 pages of scholarship (and a few advertisements), including William R. Cochran's interesting reminiscences on society history, and Brad Keefauver's imaginative explanation of why the empty house was so conveniently vacant. $10.00 postpaid from The Occupants of the Empty House (105 Wilcox, Ziegler, IL 62999).
89. MURDER, MRS. HUDSON, by Sydney Hosier (New York: Avon Books, 1997; 210 pp., $5.50) is a sequel to his ELEMENTARY, MRS. HUDSON (Apr 96 #6); this time Emma is hired by journalist-and-would-be-politician Winston Churchill to find, follow, and thwart an international terrorist and assassin. Emma is again assisted by a friend's powers of astral projection, and by Holmes' apparent willingness to do without a housekeeper.
90. Jim Suszynski notes that the May issue of Cracked has a small illustration of Sherlock Holmes by John Severin (in the last panel of the spoof "Goosedumps").
91. COMMANDING VIEWS FROM THE EMPTY HOUSE: COLLECTED WRITINGS BY THE OCCUPANTS OF THE EMPTY HOUSE, edited by William R. Cochran and Gordon R. Speck (Indianapolis: Gasogene Book, 1996; 192 pp., $18.75), is just what the subtitle states; the best papers from the society's 16 years of monthly meetings are scholarly, unscholarly, and occasionally scandalous, and there's a reprint of the script for Lee Eric Shackelford's two-act play "Holmes and Watson". $21.70 postpaid from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268).
92. Feb 97 #8: Angela Lansbury received a special life achievement award from the Screen Actors Guild on Feb. 22, and a tribute narrated by Glenn Close, who recalled that she was acting on Broadway in "The Crucifer of Blood" when she first met Lansbury, who in 1979 was starring in "Sweeney Todd" (and each night Close was able to get to the other theater in time to watch the end of "Sweeney Todd"). Close had an added incentive, of course: she was dating Lansbury's co-star Len Cariou.
93. Reported by Jack Kerr: SCI-FI PRIVATE EYE, edited by Charles G. Waugh and Martin H. Greenberg (New York: Roc, 1997; $5.99), with reprints of Poul Anderson's "The Martian Crown Jewels" and Philip Jose Farmer's "A Scarlet Study".
94. Scott Monty finds imaginative venues for meetings of The Bull-Terriers: the Apr. 20 dinner will be held at The Castle at Boston University; details on the meetings are available from Scott (1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127) <wsmonty@bu.edu>.
95. Luci Zahray has found an amusing Sherlockian poster and bookmarks in a new catalog from Upstart, Box 800, Fort Atkinson, WI 53538 (800-448-4887); the bookmarks cost $6.25 for a package of 200, but if you want just one, send a #10 SASE to Luci (685 Marylane Drive, Holland, MI 49423).
96. Luci also reports a new catalog from Dale Seymour Publications, Box 5026, White Plains, NY 10602 (800-872-1100), with Sherlockian artwork on the covers of two books by Wade H. Sherard III: LOGIC NUMBER PROBLEMS (for grades 7-12) and LOGIC GEOMETRY PROBLEMS (for grades 9-12); $10.50 each.
97. C. Frederick Kittle's "There's More to Doyle Than Holmes!" in the winter 1997 issue of The Pharos offers a fine overview of ACD's life and career; spotted by Bob Katz. The magazine is published by the Alpha Omega Alpha Honor Medical Society (525 Middlefield Road #130, Menlo Park, CA 94025).
98. Carolyn Hoehn reports that the Public Domain Players are performing William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in Austin, closing on Apr. 5. The box-office address is 807 Congress Avenue, Austin, TX 78701 (512-474-6202).
99. More and more people are hearing about the Irregulars; Tom and Dorothy Stix report that they had a phone call recently from someone who wanted to know if they would like to buy some irregular jeans.
100. Further to the item about the set of stamps issued by Guernsey (Jul 97 #6), Gordon Palmer notes that the stamp that shows Warner Oland as Charlie Chan actually shows Warner Oland as Fu Manchu (in "Daughter of the Dragon").
101. THE JEWELLED PEACOCK OF PERSIA, by Jake and Luke Thoene (Nashville: Moorings/ Ballantine, 1996; 155 pp., $5.95), is a nicely-written juvenile, about three of Sherlock Holmes' young street-urchin assistants pursuing a case of their own; it's the third in a "Baker Street Mysteries" series (the others are THE MYSTERY OF THE YELLOW HANDS and THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA).
102. Mar 97 #1: Kathleen A. Shiel notes that there will be Sherlockian programming at the Fantasticon U.K. convention in Harrowgate on May 24-26, 1997. Two Watsons will be participating: Edward Hardwicke (from the Granada television series) and Michael Williams (from the BBC radio series).

- Additional details are available from Catherine Richardson (38 Planetree Avenue, Fenham, Newcastle upon Tyne NE4 9TH, England); the convention's web-site is at <<http://www.aber.ac.uk/~mlr95/>>.
103. A moment of silence, please, for Sherlock H. Lincoln, who died aged 77 (of cancer of the stomach and liver) in Pittsfield, Mass., on Feb. 5, 1895. He was a farmer from Plainfield, Mass.
  104. It's unlikely that Brad Keefeauver wrote all of the material in the 32 pages of the first issue of The Holmes & Watson Report, since one of the putative authors is known to be armed and dangerous, but it isn't at all surprising that he includes a staff guitarist on the masthead. And a voice of sanity, but no one familiar with Brad's work would take that seriously. $14.00 in North America for six issues a year, or $20.00 elsewhere; Brad's address is 1421 West Shenandoah Drive, Peoria, IL 61614.
  105. Simon Callow's excellent biography ORSON WELLES: THE ROAD TO XANADU (Apr 96 #1) has been reissued as a paperback (New York: Penguin USA, 1997; 680 pp., $14.95).
  106. Reported: HOUDINI!!!: THE CAREER OF EHRICH WEISS, by Kenneth Silverman (New York: HarperCollins, 1996; 465 pp., $35.00); a new biography (and the three exclamation points really do appear in the title), with some discussion of the relationship between Houdini and Conan Doyle.
  107. Thanks to all who reported portraits of Holmes and Watson on the cover of the Mar. 1997 issue of the TV Guide Crossword Puzzle Book (devoted to TV detective puzzles, and with some Sherlockian clues in the puzzles).
  108. Fans of Christopher Lee's will want to watch him as the sinister Grand Master of the Templars in a new BBC/A&E six-hour dramatization of Sir Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe" on A&E cable on Apr. 20-22 (with a repeat on Apr. 25-26). Reported by Anglofile (a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment); Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($12.00 a year).
  109. Edward Hardwicke is splendid as always reading four CLASSIC DETECTIVE STORIES ("The Dying Detective" and tales by Sapper, G. K. Chesterton, and Edgar Wallace) on two audiocassettes in a boxed set issued in 1992, and Patrick Malahyde does an excellent job with four CLASSIC RAILWAY MURDERS (by Baroness Orczy, Maurice Leblanc, Victor Whitechurch and E. Conway, and Freeman Wills Crofts) on two audiocassettes, and Brian Cox also performs well on VINTAGE MURDER STORIES [issued earlier as CLASSIC TALES OF MURDER] (Conan Doyle's "B.24" and stories by P. C. Wren, Arnold Bennett, Jack London, Robert Barr, and Sapper). Each set is £9.49 postpaid from CSA Telltapes (101 Camberlayne Road, London NW10 3ND, England); credit-card orders accepted. And Tangled Web Audio offers CLASSIC RAILWAY MURDERS for $20.45 postpaid; 3380 Sheridan Drive #167, Amherst, NY 14226 (800-336-5746).
110. Mar 97 #2: Irene Mikhlin has uncovered a Russian parody SHERLOCK HOLMES I VCE-VCE-VCE, by Jack Kent, illustrated by Nikolai Lebedev (Moscow: MIK, 1994); the title is translated (roughly) as "Sherlock Holmes and Practically Everybody" and Holmes and Watson (and Miss Marple, Nero Wolfe, Inspector Maigret, Perry Mason, Father Brown, and others) find themselves in a castle out on the moors, defending themselves against a murderer who is killing them off, one by one.
  111. Elizabeth Kastor reported in the Washington Post (Mar. 1) on a new series of "Smelly Old History" books written by Oxford University history professor Mary Dobson and due next month in Great Britain from the Oxford University Press. They are scratch-and-sniff books intended to make history more interesting to kids. ROMAN AROMAS, TUDOR ODORS, and VICTORIAN VAPORS will each have five scratch-and-sniff panels (head-on-a-stake, presumably one of the Tudor odors, is described by Kastor as part overripe meat, part glue), and two of the Victorian vapors will be: machine oil and urine.
  112. David Stuart Davies' BENDING THE WILLOW: JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES (Chester: Calabash Press, 1996; 192 pp., £19.99) is a splendid tribute to the actor and to the Granada series and the people who worked on it; there are many grand stories about how the series was conceived and brought to the screen, about problems and resolutions, about successes and occasional failures, all told by an author who is a fine writer and who talked often with those who worked on the series. Available from the publisher (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <cashtree@mail.netshop.net>; US $35.75 postpaid (credit-card orders welcome).
  113. Connie Steffan reports a new Sherlock Holmes hand-painted pewter thimble (with a lift-off hat) in a new catalog from Gimbel & Sons Country Store (Box 56, Boothbay Harbor, ME 04538); $19.95.
  114. Karl and Betty Showler, whose interest in all things related to bees and beekeeping led to their THE CASE OF THE HOLMES BEE BOOK (Jan 97 #4), have also laid in a supply of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES volume of HIS LAST BOW (in which Holmes' apiculture is mentioned); if you need only the one volume (in cloth), it costs $15.00 postpaid (checks payable to Karl Showler, please) from B & K Books, Riverside, Newport Street, Hay-on-Wye, via Hereford HR3 5BG, England.
  115. Hugh Leonard's play "The Mask of Moriarty" premiered in Dublin in 1985 with Tom Baker as Holmes, and Paxton Whitehead starred in the play in Williamstown, Mass. in 1994. And Al JaCoby reports that Whitehead will do the role again at the Globe Theater in San Diego from Sept. 14 to Oct. 25. The boxoffice address is Box 2171, San Diego, CA 92112 (619-239-2255).
  116. The exhibition of "The Victorians: British Painting in the Reign of Queen Victoria (1837-1901)" at the National Gallery of Art in Washington is fine indeed; it's the first major survey of Victorian art ever mounted in the U.S. and it will be on display only in Washington (through May 11). It is interesting to see the best artists of the era, from Turner to Whistler, and the way they reflected the culture that surrounded them. And there a bit of minor Sherlockiana: a mention of Conan Doyle and "A Study in Scarlet" in the chronology of Victorian Britain in the exhibition brochure.
117. Mar 97 #3: The first issue of "Le registre de l'hotel Dulong" has arrived from Sylvain Policard, with four pages of Sherlockian news from the Lyonnaise branch of La Quincaillerie Franco-Midland (including an article about the meeting between Lyon notable Dr. Edmond Locard and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle); you need to read French, but free copies are available from Sylvain Policard (2 rue Jean-Noel, Lyon VIe, France).
  118. David L. Hammer is a stamp collector as well as a Sherlockian cicerone, and two of his pastiches have been reprinted from MY DEAR WATSON: BEING THE ANNALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1995) in The American Philatelist, Nov. 1996 and Mar. 1997; Box 8000, State College, PA 16803 ($2.25 each).
  119. Sorry about that: there was a typo in my (Feb 97 #3) query about the first issue of the first American edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES). The first issue (dated 1892 on the title page) has a misprint "if had" on page 65, line 4; and later issues (without the date 1892 on the title page) have "if he had" on page 65, line 4. And so far no one has reported a copy with the date 1892 on the title page and "if he had" on page 65, line 4 (so the date on the title page will suffice to identify the first edition).
  120. Great Britain has issued a booklet of stamps showing ten flowers drawn by the best of the nation's classic botanical illustrators, including an iris drawn by G. D. Ehret (who was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1757); it's an English Iris (*Iris latifolia*) not the Duke of Balmoral's Iris, but it will do until someone issues a stamp showing a horse named Iris.
  121. Brian Stableford's THE HUNGER AND ECSTASY OF VAMPIRES (Shingletown: Mark V. Ziesing Books, 1996; 207 pp., $25.00) is an imaginative tale of time travel and vampires, involving Count Dracula, H. G. Wells, Nikola Tesla, Sir William Crookes, M. P. Shiel, and others (who include an unnamed detective

- who lives in Baker Street, and his unnamed doctor friend). Available from the publisher (Box 76, Shingletown, CA 96088); $29.00 postpaid (a limited and signed edition costs $64.00 postpaid).
122. Further to the review of Richard M. Caplan's new book (Feb 97 #5), an article about him and his chronic condition ("Sherlockianism") written by Lynda Leidiger appears in the spring 1997 issue of the Iowa Alumni Quarterly (100 Alumni Center, Iowa City, IA 52242).
  123. "The Holmes Brothers are one of my favorite bands!" someone posted recently to the newsgroup alt.fan.holmes. And the Holmes Brothers have been playing blues and gospel for more than 30 years, in New York and on tour; they are Sherman and Wendell Holmes, and they've been recording since 1989, and they wrote the soundtrack for the film "Lotto Land" (1995), and their new album is "Promised Land" (Rounders 2142), reviewed recently in People magazine as being "the real article: rugged, honest and undeniably soulful."
  124. BBC Radio/BDD Audio now have eight two-cassette sets of the Merrison/Williams radio series in the shops: three volumes of MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($15.99 each), three vols. of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($16.99 each), and two vols. of ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($16.99 each).
125. Mar 97 #4: Kiwi Carlisle notes that the St. Louis Art Museum is celebrating Italian art, and that an exhibit on "In the Light of Italy: Corot and Early Plein-Air Painting" includes the "View at Tivoli" by Claude Joseph Vernet [grand-father of Sherlock Holmes' granduncle Horace Vernet]; the exhibit closes on May 18.
  126. Alfred Sheinwold died on Mar. 8. He began playing bridge "to escape dull philosophy lectures" while a student at City College of New York, and went on to become one of the best players in the world. He wrote 13 best-selling books on the game, and his syndicated column "Sheinwold on Bridge" ran in more than 200 newspapers (and for more than 25 years he enjoyed including Sherlock Holmes in occasional bridge columns).
  127. The Reichenbach Irregulars will convene the first Sherlock Holmes Symposium ever held in Switzerland, at Wartensee Castle near Rorschach, on Lake Constance, on Sept. 12-14. This will be an international affair, and details are available from Marcus Geisser, 40 avenue de la Gare, CH 1003 Lausanne, Switzerland <mgeisser@access.ch>.
  128. The Northern Musgraves will celebrate their tenth anniversary at Stonyhurst College in Lancashire on Aug. 22-24. Arthur Conan Doyle was at the school 1870 to 1875, and there are echoes of the school to be found in the Canon. The weekend will include talks and a dramatic presentation, and additional details are available from Christine Fell, 13 Greavestown Lane, Lea, Preston, Lancs. PR2 1PD, England.
  129. Dave Galerstein reports that anyone who missed the Feb. 1997 issue of Historic Traveler with the article on Sherlockian sites in England (Dec 96 #1) can order it using their toll-free number (800-829-9555); $5.00.
  130. Some statistics from the U.S. Postal Service, which in 1996 handled 43% of the world's mail; Japan, the second largest carrier of cards and letters, handled 6%. In 1966 the U.S.P.S. processed 182.7 billion pieces of mail; our 32c first-class rate is among the lowest in the industrial world (in Japan the rate is 70c, and in Germany it's 64c).
  131. Stan Drake died on Mar. 10. He created the award-winning comic strip "The Heart of Juliet Jones" in 1953, and in 1989 switched to drawing "Blondie" (created by Chic Young in 1930), which is syndicated in thousands of newspapers worldwide in 55 languages. This strip appeared on Oct. 8, 1994.
132. Mar 97 #5: Howard Einbinder reports that 221B BAKER ST.: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TIME MACHINE (Sep 96 #6) has been discounted to $29.95 in the latest catalog from Bits & Pieces, 1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297); this is a new version of the board game first marketed by the John N. Hansen Co.
  133. Connie Steffan reports a sheet of Wishbone Stickers (including Wishbone in Sherlockian costume) at a Hallmark shop ($1.95 for 8 sheets). But so far no one has reported a Sherlockian toy in the specially-marked packages of Crackerjack.
  134. The agenda at the Mar. 14 meeting of The Red Circle of Washington included a demonstration by Frank Young of a new CD-ROM disk that has the "Complete Works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" (including his novels, essays, short-story collections, histories of the Boer War and World War I, and much more). It has the text in eight-bit ASCII (so it will run on any computer, regardless of the operating system), and it includes a program that will enlarge the text (helpful for those whose vision isn't the best), and another program that will read the text aloud, and it allows a universal text search (so it takes only a minute to determine that Conan Doyle mentioned "Vernet" in a non-Sherlockian work). There are 311+ text files (more than 32 megabytes); a bit of final proof-reading and engineering will complete the project, and the disk should be ready to ship at the end of July, with a likely price of $95.00 postpaid. If you would like to be informed when it's ready, you can write (but don't send any money yet) to E-CODEX, Box 10785, Franconia, VA 22310. E-CODEX has already produced similar disks for Herman Melville and James Joyce ($45.00 each postpaid), and if you're wondering why the Conan Doyle disk will cost more, it's because he wrote a lot more than either Melville or Joyce.
  135. Marvin Lachman will receive a Raven award from the Mystery Writers of America on May 1 (the Raven is a special award for outstanding achievement in the mystery field outside the realm of creative writing). Marv is a fine editor, critic, and reviewer; he worked with Chris Steinbrunner's on the DETECTIONARY (1971) and the ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION (1976), and has written about Arthur B. Reeve and Craig Kennedy in "The American Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Scarlet Impersonation" in the Mystery Reader's Newsletter (Dec. 1969).
  136. David Kahn's THE CODEBREAKERS: THE STORY OF SECRET WRITING (1967) is widely and wisely regarded as the best book ever written about codes and ciphers, and those who deal with them (including Sherlock Holmes and the dancing men cipher); there's now a 30th-anniversary edition, revised and expanded (New York: Scribner, 1997; 1,181 pp., $65.00).
  137. Eleanor Wolff died on Mar. 7. She was Julian Wolff's wife, and a gracious hostess in those long-ago days when the January cocktail party in New York was held in their apartment on West Side Drive. She genially allowed her dining room to serve as Julian's editorial and business office, and she had a kind smile that served as a welcoming beacon to more than one generation of Sherlockians. She was honored The Woman in 1965, and in 1987 received The Baker Street Irregulars' unique gilded Queen Victoria Medal, recognizing her "long service as the BSI's most devoted camp-follower."
138. Mar 97 #6: The amusing Italian/Japanese "Sherlock Hound" animations first appeared in 1984, and they have been reissued by Just for Kids (Celebrity Home Entertainment) with two 24-minute stories on each cassette (and there are at least four cassettes); $2.88 each in toy stores. And Jim Vogelsang reports that there also are at least two single-story cassettes; $1.50 each.
  139. Carol Wenk continues to preside over The Mini-Tonga Scion Society for Sherlockian miniaturists; membership (including three issues of the newsletter) costs $7.00 a year ($8.00 to Canada, $11.00 elsewhere), and if you'd like to have more information, send a #10 SASE to Carol at Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107.
  140. Patrick Kirkby, historian at the Royal Victoria Country Park at Netley, has written of plans for a special "Netley Veterans Reunion and Display" on May 14, 1998; they expect that many medical and nursing veterans to attend, and there are expectations that Dr. John H. Watson will be among them (since it was at Netley Hospital that he took the course prescribed for surgeons in the Army). Admission will be by ticket only, but arrangements can - be made for visiting Sherlockians; if you think that you might be able to join the festivities, please write to Patrick W. Kirkby, 2 Colson Road, Winnal, Winchester, Hants. SO23 0EX, England.

141. Jerry Margolin spotted Mr. Mxyzptk (the imp from the 5th dimension) wearing Sherlockian costume in one panel of Superman Adventures #6 (Apr. 1997); $1.75 in the comic-book shops. This is a new comic book, based on the new animated television series.
  142. Tom Galbo reports that the graphic books (comic-book series reprints) of A CASE OF BLIND FEAR and SCARLET IN GASLIGHT, written by Martin Powell and illustrated by Seppo Mäkinen, have been reissued by Caliber Comics with new covers. $12.50 each in the stores; $16.00 each postpaid from the publisher (225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170).
  143. Baskerville Holmes and his girlfriend Tanya Franklin died on Mar. 18 in an apparent murder-suicide, according to police in Memphis. He was 6'7" and the star forward for the Memphis State Tigers, and played in the Final Four in 1985; he was picked by Milwaukee in the second round of the NBA draft in 1986, but didn't succeed in professional basketball. He was named by his mother, who liked the Basil Rathbone film, and saw it again not long before he was born.
  144. Ralph E. Vaughan's PROFESSOR CHALLENGER IN SECRETS OF THE DREAMLANDS brings Professor Challenger into a science-fantasy dreamworld of H. P. Lovecraft; the 63-page pamphlet is illustrated by Earl Geier and costs $10.95 postpaid from Gryphon Publications, Box 209, Brooklyn, NY 11228.
  145. Ronald Howard died on Feb. 16. He began his film career as a child, acting with his father Leslie Howard in "Pimpernel Smith" (1941), and he was only 36 years old when he starred as a younger-than-usual Sherlock Holmes in the first Sheldon Reynolds television series broadcast in 1954 and 1955; one of the 39 half-hour episodes includes the seldom-filmed first meeting between Holmes and Watson, and they're still grand fun to watch.

---

  146. Mar 97 #7: Murray Shaw, author of the excellent series of children's books MATCH WITS WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES, wrote and illustrated an imaginative new Sherlockian story two years ago (Dec 95 #2); all the characters are cats, and the tale now is available again in a revised edition with a new title: THE CASE OF THE MISSING KIPPERED HERRING; the booklet has 31 pp. and hand-colored artwork, and costs $11.24 postpaid (3601 North 5th Avenue #106, Phoenix, AZ 85013).
  147. Tom Stix has forwarded an item from the N.Y. Times (Mar. 13) about the impending sale of the Algonquin Hotel to Olympus Real Estate of Dallas and the Camberley Hotel Co. of Atlanta. Aoki, a Japanese company, bought the hotel ten years ago for $29 million (Jun 87 #4) and then spent $22 million on renovations; the new owners will pay about $30 million for the hotel and plan to spend $4 million to renovate its 165 rooms and to extend the lobby back into what now is the Rose Room. And they hope to revive the hotel's literary heritage, in part by creating a Round Table Foundation to offer scholarships for young writers (the Algonquin's famous Round Table was in the Rose Room, of course, and there won't be a Rose Room any more). The new owners also expect to raise the rates, and to keep the hotel for only five to seven years.
  148. Reported by Stu Shiffman: Beaten's Christmas Annual, "chock full of goodies [by Stu Shiffman], British Grub, nifty stuff" (64 pages for $12.00 postpaid from David Haugen, 1244 107th Place NE, Kirkland, WA 98034); checks payable to Sound of the Baskervilles, please.
  149. The Piltdown hoax was in the news again this month in England, and so was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: on Mar. 20 the Linnean Society celebrated National Science Week by staging a debate between Richard Milner (who believes that Conan Doyle was the culprit) and Brian Gardiner (who doesn't). Milner, a historian of science at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, provided evidence for Robert B. Anderson's article in the spring 1996 issue of Pacific Discovery (Apr 96 #6), and Gardiner, a professor at King's College and president of the Linnean Society, wrote the article in Nature (May 23, 1996) that identified Martin A. C. Hinton as the prime suspect (May 96 #6). Articles in the Daily Telegraph and The Times did not indicate who won the debate.
  150. Penelope Wallace died on Jan. 13. She was the daughter of Edgar Wallace, and the first woman to become chairman of the Press Club (a post her father had held the year she was born), and chairman of Crime Writer's Association and organizer of the first Crime Writers' International Congress; she wrote novels and short stories, including one with pleasant Sherlockian allusions ("The World According to Uncle Albert"), and she was the founder and president of the Edgar Wallace Society, which has just published the 113th issue of its newsletter The Crimson Circle. If you'd like more information about the society, write to Kai Jorg Hinz, Kohlbergsgracht 40, 6463 CD Kerkrade, The Netherlands.
  151. It's not quite the Order of the Legion of Honour that Holmes received, but Charlton Heston (who has played Holmes on stage and television in "The Crucifer of Blood") now is a Commander in the Order of the Arts and Letters, the highest civilian decoration awarded by the French Ministry of Culture.

  152. Mar 97 #8: John McAleer's REX STOUT, first published in 1977, is a splendid biography of a fine writer and a fascinating men (and Stout was an important figure in the early years of The Baker Street Irregulars); the book won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 1978, and it's still available in a reprint (San Bernardino: Brownstone Books/Borgo Press, 1994; 622 pp., $57.00 cloth, $47.00 paper).
  153. Plan ahead: The "Fourth Occasional Sherlockian Cruise" has been scheduled for June 1998, from New York to Bermuda (and back), and the organizers are Irving Kamil, Susan Rice, Mary Ellen Rich, and Dorothy Stix; if you'd like to be on the mailing list, you can write to the Cruise Committee, Box 96, Norwood, NJ 07648. The cruise will feature Sherlockian events at sea, and pink sand beaches and shopping ashore.
  154. The Crime Writers of Scandinavia's annual Scandinavian Mystery Conference will be held in Aalborg on May 9-11; additional details are available from Jan B. Steffensen, Sdr. Tranders Bygade 23, DK-9220 Aalborg Oest, Denmark <jbs@db.dk>.
  155. Tim O'Connor has spotted a new edition of SHERLOCK HOLMES IN ORBIT, edited by Mike Resnick and Martin H. Greenberg, published in paperback in 1995 by DAW Books (Mar 95 #2), and now by MJF Books (seen so far only at Barnes & Noble, where it's available at a "special value" price of $8.98); 26 new science-fiction stories.
  156. Auction news: the manuscript of "How the Brigadier took the field against the Marshal Millefleurs" (22 leaves, bound in red morocco gilt) is lot 44 in the Apr. 17 sale at the Swann Galleries, 104 East 25th Street, New York, NY 10010 (212-254-4710); the estimate is $4,000-6,000.
  157. David Stuart Davies is the new editor of the Sherlock Holmes Gazette (which actually is the Sherlock Holmes Gazette & Classic Detective Magazine but is focused firmly on the Sherlockian world), and the latest issue is #18, with 48 pages of articles, columns, reviews, and letters. The contents include part 4 of Michael Cox's continuing series on the behind-the-scenes story of the Granada series, Catherine Cooke's discussion of the Sherlockian aspects of T. S. Eliot, part 1 of David Stuart Davies' well-illustrated series on Sherlock Holmes in silent films, a report by Barbara Roden on Conan Doyle's western wanderings in Canada in 1914, and much more. $7.50 postpaid from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219); £3.50 postpaid from the Sherlock Holmes Gazette (49 Purfield Drive, Wargrave, Berks. RG10 8AR, England); credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
  158. William Schley-Ulrich's "Sherlock Holmes and the Lizzie Borden Connection" ran in three installments in The Lizzie Borden Quarterly (July 1996, Oct. 1996, Jan. 1997); Holmes was in Vermont rather than southern France during the Great Hiatus, and was asked by a cousin to come to Fall River to look into the case. $9.00 for the three issues (Bristol Community College, 777 Elsbree Street, Fall River, MA 02720-7391).

159. Apr 97 #1: Christopher and Barbara Roden have acquired the unsold copies of the splendid facsimiles of the manuscripts of "The Dying Detective" and "The Lion's Mane" (Sep 91 #7 and Sep 92 #6) and the reprint of Lord Donegall's "Baker Street and Beyond" columns from The New Strand (Nov 93 #4). The manuscript facsimiles are available in both the deluxe and standard editions, and all of the books are offered at bargain prices; more information is available from the Calabash Press, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <ashtree@mail.netshop.net>.
160. Calabash also reports THE CASE FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE SPECKLED BAND (188 pp.), with new essays on the story and on Conan Doyle's dramatization. $30.00 cloth or $21.00 paper; shipping charges vary (same address).
161. Douglas G. Greene continues to issue excellent collections of mystery short stories from his aptly-named publishing house, Crippen & Landru. The only Sherlockian item published so far is Edward D. Hoch's DIAGNOSIS IMPOSSIBLE (Mar 96 #1), which has a nicely appropriate allusion in a story about Dr. Sam Hawthorne, but there are many other fine authors in his catalog; write to Crippen & Landru at Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 <crippenl@norfolk.info.net> <<http://www.avalon.net/~scott/cl/>>.
162. Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" will be produced by the Actors' Repertory Company at the Courtyard Playhouse in Rolling Hills Estates (in southern Calif.) from Apr. 25 through May 31; the box-office address is Box 2512, Palos Verdes Peninsula, CA 90274 (310-544-6555).
163. Irving Kamil (32 Overlook Avenue, Cliffside Park, NJ 07010) offers self-adhesive silhouettes of Sherlock Holmes (4" x 6") in black or white; $5.00 postpaid.
164. Non-Sherlockian, but: try your hand at listing the U.S. states whose names contain only four letters.
165. Nate the Great continues his sleuthing, deerstalkered and assisted by his dog Sludge, in an amusing children's series that now offers 17 titles, of which the most recent is NATE THE GREAT AND THE TARDY TORTOISE, by Marjorie Weinman Sharmat and Craig Sharmat, illustrated by Marc Simont (New York: Delacorte Press, 1995; 42 pp., $13.95); nicely done, as usual.
166. John McPhee's essay "The Gravel Page" (the title was taken from the Canon) appeared in The New Yorker last year (Jan 96 #5), with a fine explanation of forensic geology, and acknowledgement of Sherlock Holmes' contributions to the science he invented; and it's included in his IRONS IN THE FIRE (New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1997; 216 pp., $22.00).
167. Baron Barclay Bridge Supplies (3600 Chamberlain Lane #230, Louisville, KY 40241) (800-2740-2221) <baronbarclay@baronbarclay.com> have a new catalog with just about anything a bridge player might want, including books such as Philip and Robert King's THE KINGS' TALES (Aug 96 #5) and FAREWELL, MY DUMMY (Jan 97 #4), and a reprint of RIGHT THROUGH THE PACK, by Robert Darvas and Norman de V. Hart (1947), all with Sherlockian bridge pastiches.
168. Apr 97 #2: Baker Street W1 offers prizes for pastiches: "In 2,000 words or less, recreate the master detective as he and Dr. Watson solve yet another baffling mystery." All authors will win a postcard portrait of William Gillette, and the grand prize is a framed original Gillette signature dated 1906 (and the pastiche will be published in the Jan. 1998 issue of the journal); entries will not be returned, and someone needs to write a good pastiche, because if none of the entries is deemed suitable, no prize will be awarded. The deadline is Oct. 15, 1997, the journal's address is 110 South El Nido Avenue #41, Pasadena, CA 91107; entries should be typed and double-spaced, and please don't forget to include your name, address, and telephone number.
169. "Pinky and the Brain" is an animated television series, and a comic book, and the May issue (#11) of the comic book includes a Sherlockian tale ("The Final Narf"); $1.75.
170. For those who have access to the World Wide Web, there are three URL's that will be helpful: <<http://www.amazon.com>> is an American company, and it can supply just about any American book in print; the home page includes a fine search engine. <<http://www.bookpages.co.uk>> is a British company, and can supply just about any British book in print; the home page includes a fine search engine. <<http://www.bibliofind.com>> offers access to dealers in used and rare books; you can post your want-list, and wait for offers.
171. U.S. states whose names have only four letters are: Iowa, Ohio, and Utah. But: are there any more U.S. states whose names contain only four letters?
172. The Crew of the Barque Lone Star arranged a fine welcome in Dallas for The Practical, But Limited, Geologists and some other travelers from afar (both in Texas and other states), and an excellent dinner (with five courses and ten wines) at Tony's Wine Warehouse on Apr. 9, when the usual toasts were offered to the world's first forensic geologist. And it was nice indeed to be escorted by Don Hobbs and Jim Webb to Fort Worth (visitors from Dallas no longer are required to carry passports) to see the original manuscript of "The Dancing Men" at Barber's Book Store (both owned by Brian Perkins).
173. Additional honors were paid to Sherlock Holmes on Apr. 12, when a stalwart dozen geologists and Sherlockians participated in the first-ever geological expedition to the summit of Holmes Peak, in Osage County on the outskirts of Tulsa. A threatened blizzard failed to materialize, but the temperature was about eight degrees above freezing, so the time actually spent at the summit (elev. 1032 ft.) was as brief as possible; the climbers then quickly retreated to a sheltered slope to toast both Sherlock Holmes and Richard S. Warner (Head Sherpa of the Holmes Peak Preservation Society), who was present to accept plaudits for all the work that in 1984 resulted in official government approval for the naming of the peak in honor of the great detective. Also participating in the expedition were Nellie Brown (expedition entomologist), Charles J. Mankin (Oklahoma's state geologist), M. Charles Gilbert (director of the school of geology and geophysics at Oklahoma University), and Vic Lahti (who manages to be both a geologist and a member of The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa). It also is nice to report that the U.S. Geological Survey recently reprinted the topographic map of the Sand Springs quadrangle, and that Holmes Peak's name is now shown on the map.
174. Apr 97 #3: The Sub-Librarians Scion of The Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will meet in San Francisco this year, for afternoon tea and Sherlockian entertainment, at the Holiday Inn (Union Square) on June 29 at 4:00 pm, and it will be as always a nice gathering for Sherlockians and librarians and anyone else who wants to join the festivities. The cost is $17.00 (checks payable to Marsha L. Pollak, and please enclose an SASE); Marsha's address is Sunnyvale Public Library, Box 3714, Sunnyvale, CA 94088-3714.
175. More U.S. states whose names have only four letters are: Alabama, Alaska, Hawaii, Indiana, Kansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee.
176. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has arrived, with David Stuart Davies' interesting interview with Christopher Lee (about Peter Cushing), the news that Steven Spielberg's "The Lost World: Jurassic Park" will be released by Universal on Memorial Day weekend, and Forrest J Ackerman's note on plans for a film of Robert A. Heinlein's THE MOON IS A HARSH MISTRESS (the book features a computer named Mycroft). And there's an advertisement for Haunted Hollywood's "Monster Bash" convention honoring Forry Ackerman's 80th birthday, with guests who include Sara Karloff (daughter), Bela Lugosi Jr. (son), and Ron Chaney (grandson), on July 18-20 in Ligonier (just east of Pittsburgh); Haunted Hollywood, Box 213, Ligonier, PA 15658 <bat@b4futures.net>. Scarlet Street is published quarterly ($20.00 a year); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
177. There's more news about the set of stamps due from Great Britain on May 13 honoring Tales of Terror: the Hound will appear on the 43p stamp, which will be nice for those who get airmail from Britain, and "the grisly hound is shown head-on with huge jaws baring the fearsome fangs" in the ink-and-watercolor design by Ian Pollock (the image will be highlighted with fluorescent ink which glows under ultraviolet light). There will be a

- postcard showing the stamp (25p), and a presentation pack (£1.70) that has a brief history of the four classic tales, by Christopher Frayling (who produced the four-part "Nightmare" television series broadcast here on Arts & Entertainment cable last October); the other stamps in the set will show Dracula, Frankenstein, and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Many other countries will be issuing stamps honoring Tales of Terror this year, but so far only Great Britain is reported to be paying tribute to The Hound of the Baskervilles.
178. There will be at least one fancy first day cover for the set: Roger Johnson has sent an illustrated flier from A. G. Bradbury (3 Link Road, Stoneygate, Leicester LE2 3RA, England): £10.00 for a full-cover cachet, with a special Princetown postmark; £12.50 signed by Edward Hardwicke or Tom Baker; £5.00 for a full-cover cachet with only the Hound stamp (add £1.00 per order for shipping).
179. Tom Huntington reports that his article "On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes" in the Feb. 1997 issue of Historic Traveler (Dec 96 #1) will be reprinted in the May issue of the Japanese edition of Playboy. This may well be the first Sherlockian item ever to appear in the Japanese edition.
180. Apr 97 #4: "Gun" is a new six-part one-hour anthology series that debuted on ABC-TV on Apr. 11, produced by Robert Altman and following a pistol as it passes from hand to hand. Sherlockians should look for a repeat of the second program, which starred Martin Sheen as a cop whose last case involved the death of a Japanese businessman.
181. David McCord died on Apr. 13. He was a poet and an author, and received the first honorary doctor of humane letters degree ever granted by Harvard University. His collection ONE AT A TIME (1977) won the first national award for excellence in poetry for children from the National Council of Teachers of English; an earlier anthology WHAT CHEER (1945), reprinted as THE POCKET BOOK OF HUMOROUS VERSE (1946), included Philip H. Rhinelander's "It's Very Unwise to Kill the Goose (Sherlock Holmes)" (the poem was reprinted in the Oct. 1955 issue of The Baker Street Journal).
182. Kevin Reed's THE ADVENTURES OF COCKROACH BONES offers three of his parodies about Cockroach Bones and Dr. Waspon, including their encounter with Arachne Adder and the King of Bulimia; the 20-page pamphlet costs $8.00 postpaid from the author (191 North Ridgeway Street, Anaheim, CA 92801).
183. Auction news: the manuscript of "How the Brigadier took the field against the Marshal Millefleurs" (22 leaves, bound in red morocco gilt) sold for $8,500 (plus 15% buyer's premium) on Apr. 17 at the Swann Galleries in New York. It was purchased by C. Frederick Kittle, who owns other Conan Doyle manuscripts, and a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual, and whose collection will eventually be given to the Newberry Library in Chicago.
184. For those who would like to make their own Sherlockian costumes, THE CUT OF MEN'S CLOTHES, 1600-1900, by Norah Waugh (London: Faber and Faber, 1964) (New York: Theatre Arts Books, 1964), is reported to be a fine source, and includes a pattern for a Sherlock Holmes coat.
185. Nice news from the August Derleth Society: the latest issue of their newsletter includes Peter Ruber's report that April Derleth has found a lot of unpublished material, including an early (1938-43) Solar Pons novel (missing the first chapter), an unfinished Solar Pons short story, and two Solar Pons science-fiction stories written jointly with Mack Reynolds; Peter is editing the material for publication by George A. Vanderburgh. Membership in the society costs $20.00 a year (Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583).
186. Ben Macintyre's THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ADAM WORTH, THE REAL MORIARTY is now due from HarperCollins in June (£18.00); this is an expanded version of his stories in The Times and the N.Y. Times when the famous Gainsborough portrait of the Duchess of Devonshire, once stolen by Worth, went to auction three years ago (Jul 94 #6).
187. Connie and Jeff Gay, directors of Dreamland Productions, report that their MurderWatch Mystery Theatre performs twice a night on Saturdays at Baskervilles Restaurant (adjacent to Moriarty's Pub) at the Grosvenor Resort at Walt Disney World; the restaurant has a replica of the sitting-room, and the shows often allude to Holmes and Watson, and sometimes their detective is Shirley Holmes. And you get a $4.00 discount on dinner if you reserve in advance: Box 1114 Goldenrod, FL 33273 (407-827-6534) <mwmw@aol.com>.
188. Apr 97 #5: Nice news from the sport of kings: Neil Travis Honaker reports that My Dear Watson won the fourth race at Keenland (in Lexington, Kentucky) on Apr. 20, paying $11.40 to win, $5.80 to place, and $3.60 to show. It would be nice indeed if there were horses so aptly named when Sherlockians go to the track to attend runnings of The Silver Blaze.
189. Unexpected casting: Ernest Dudley's play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (in which Eille Norwood starred in 1923) was recently produced in Newcastle upon Tyne, with Michael Cashman as Holmes and Frederick Pyne as Watson, and Nicholas Smith as Milverton. Nicholas Smith has been seen here for many years on some PBS-TV stations as the bald, jug-eared, store manager in the British series "Are You Being Served?" (and if you've seen the series you will know how unexpected he is a Milverton).
190. Mel Gibson's film "Braveheart" (1995) aired on cable not too long ago, and likely has been seen by many of you, in theaters and on television. What's the connection between the film and something mentioned often in the Canon?
191. Well, those plans to make a film of Heinlein's THE MOON IS A HARSH MISTRESS may not be real plans: it turns out that the magazine Locus had a report in Jan. 1996 that Steven Spielberg's Dreamworks SKG had bought the film rights to the novel. A film certainly would need some interesting special effects (since much of the story takes place on the Moon at one-sixth gravity).
192. Laurie R. King is on the cover of the winter 1997 issue of The Armchair Detective; the contents include Charles L. P. Silet's interview with Laurie (and her essay on "The Mystery of God Talk"), and an excellent discussion of Sherlockian miniatures by Scott and Sherry Rose Bond. Subscriptions are $31.00 a year (four issues); 459 Park Avenue #252, Scotch Plains, NJ 07076.
193. Novel Explorations ("where fiction and travel merge") offer an interesting assortment of literary tours, including "The Great Detectives" on July 3-12 with due attention to Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle. And there will be "Suspense, Mystery, and Intrigue on the High Seas" on the Norwegian Cruise Line's "Norway" on Jan. 31-Feb. 7, 1998 (with stops at St. Thomas and St. Maarten, and Carole Nelson Douglas as one of the workshopppers). Details on these and other tours are available in their fliers; their address is 10590 Twin Rivers Road, Columbia, MD 21044 (800-432-6659) <novelexp@erols.com> <<http://www.erols.com/novelexp/>>.
194. Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE FALL RIVER TRAGEDY, by Owen Haskell; with a reprint of Lizzie Borden's inquest testimony. Available for $20.00 postpaid from Murder by the Book, 1281 North Main Street, Providence, RI 02905 <kbbooks@aol.com>; credit-card orders welcome.
195. The prolific Pequod poet presses on, and John Ruyle promises that his new SHERLOCK UNBOUND will contain verses both whimsical and tragic, all handwritten, hand-set, and hand-printed; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper), and his address is 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
196. Sorry about that: it was Frank Darlington who proposed the Christmas toast "Geese on earth, goosewill to all!" (Feb 97 #2), reported by Ray de Groat to Herb Caen.
197. Apr 97 #6: Tickets still are available for The Red Circle of Washington's theater party for "The Case of the Purloined Patience" at the Folger Elizabethan Theatre on Aug. 2 and 2:00 pm. Our discount price is $26.50 per ticket (checks payable to Mary V. Burke); Mary's address is 2515 South First Place, Arlington, VA 22204.

198. What's the connection between "Braveheart" and something mentioned often in the Canon? Well, William Wallace's arch-enemy (played by Patrick McGoohan) was the English king, Edward Longshanks, who is better known now as Edward I. Edward's first wife was Eleanor of Castile, and when she died in 1290 he erected beautiful memorial crosses wherever her bier rested on its trip from Nottinghamshire to Westminster; one of those memorials was at Charing Cross (where a replica can be seen today), and Charing Cross is mentioned often in the Canon. As is Eleanor, for that matter, although not by name: Sherlock Holmes alluded to her when he asked (in "The Sussex Vampire") "Was there not a queen in English history who sucked such a wound to draw poison from it?" (Eleanor is said to have sucked poison from her husband's wounded arm, in 1272).
199. "These stunning beauties have cast a spell over millions," according to an advertisement by the National Aquarium in Baltimore for its exhibition of "Jellies: Phantoms of the Deep" (Jun 96 #4); if you'd like to see a lion's mane, you've got until January 1998, when the exhibition closes.
200. And further to the discussion of Holmes Peak, there's Sherlock Crater on the Moon, also named in honor of Holmes, and asteroids have been named in honor of Holmes and Watson and Moriarty. But I'm not aware of any other feature on Earth, either natural (mountain, river, lake, or whatever) or man-made (street or avenue, perhaps) actually named in honor of Holmes or anyone else in the Canon. Does anyone have a friend who's naming streets in a new sub-division somewhere?
201. N. C. Wyeth illustrated three of Conan Doyle's short stories for Scribner's Magazine in 1910 and 1911, and THE WHITE COMPANY for the Cosmopolitan Publishing Co. in 1922. And THE WHITE COMPANY is one of fourteen volumes in a series of leather-bound "Classics of Adventure Illustrated by N. C. Wyeth" now available from the Easton Press, 47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857 (800-367-4535); $48.25 per volume for the series.
202. Baker Street W1 is published three times a year, reporting on Sherlockian activities west of the Mississippi, and costs $9.00 a year. The Sept. 1996 issue has 44 pages, and focuses on pastiches, with a fine tribute to August Derleth by William A. S. Sarjeant.
203. Sam Moskowitz died on Apr. 15. He was tireless researcher in the fields of science fiction, fantasy, and horror, and a fine editor as well; in 1939 he organized the first World Science Fiction Convention (now a major event in the sf world), and his "Studies in Science Fiction" series in the magazine Science Fantasy in 1959 included a warm tribute to Conan Doyle.
204. May 97 #1: The first issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has arrived, with a fine description of the collections, and a look at some of its material, and a nice tribute to John Bennett Shaw. If you would like to be on the mailing list, you should write to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>).
205. Why are dinosaurs so popular with kids? Well, they're big, and they're bad, and they're dead (so they can't hurt you). And the U.S. Postal Service knows they're popular, and our new souvenir sheet honors "The World of Dinosaurs" with 15 different stamps (and some scenery); one of them shows a Stegosaurus, in Colorado 150 million years ago (a stegosaur is one of the dinosaurs mentioned in Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD).
206. Pat Ward reports that the Indianapolis Civic Theater will offer "The Crucifer of Blood" on Nov. 7-23, 1997; the theater is in the Indianapolis Museum of Art, at 1200 West 38th Street #1-X, Indianapolis, IN 46208, and the boxoffice telephone number is (317-923-4597).
207. Eve Titus, author of the "Basil of Baker Street" series, offers inscribed copies of the out-of-print hardcover editions, and the almost-out-of-print paperback editions, and other Sherlockian material. If you would like to have a copy of her sales list, send Eve a #10 self-addressed stamped envelope (Mayfair Towers #10-H, 9195 Collins Avenue, Surfside, FL 33154).
208. Sherlockian change-ringers interested in joining a special-interest Sherlockian society are invited to write to Pam Verrey (408 Koko Isle Circle, Honolulu, HI 96825 <verrey@kestrok.com>).
209. Jon Lellenberg spotted Adam Hochschild's interesting article "Mr. Kurtz, I Presume" in The New Yorker (Apr. 14); Hochschild wonders why "most scholars think there was no real Kurtz," and notes that "Zaire's history is full of them." The campaign against mistreatment of the natives in the Congo was launched in 1903 by Edward Morel and Roger Casement (who was then British Consul at Kinshasa), and in 1904 Casement returned to London and contacted several writers, including Arthur Conan Doyle, who wrote THE CRIME OF THE CONGO (1909) and later tried to save Casement from execution after the 1916 rebellion against the British in Dublin, and Joseph Conrad, who had written HEART OF DARKNESS (1899). You'll know about Kurtz if you've read Conrad's book or seen the television film (1994), or seen the film "Apocalypse Now" (1979) that was based on Conrad's book but set in Vietnam. Hochschild has identified some of the Belgian colonial administrators Conrad may have met in the Congo in 1890, and who may well have contributed to his portrayal of his character Kurtz.
210. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COOKBOOK, by Charles A. Mills (Alexandria: Apple Cheeks Press, 1990; 49 pp., $5.00 postpaid), is still available, offering a brief culinary tour of the Canon, with discussion of food, drink, and clubs, as well as recipes (Aug 90 #3); Box 217, Alexandria, VA 22307.
211. May 97 #2: Further to earlier reviews of abridged readings of Laurie R. King's novels about Mary Russell, Debbie Clark notes that unabridged readings by Jenny Sterlin also are available, from Recorded Books Audio, 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-638-1304). The cassettes play on normal machines; THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE costs $17.50 (rental)/$85.00 (purchase); A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN is $16.50/$67.00; and A LETTER OF MARY is $13.50/$49.00.
212. Mike Royko died on Apr. 29. He went to work for the Chicago Daily News in 1959 as a police reporter, and became a columnist in 1963, eventually working for almost all of Chicago's major papers (when he quit the Sun-Times in 1984 he announced that "no self-respecting fish" would want to be wrapped in a newspaper owned by Rupert Murdoch); he became a Chicago institution, championing the common man and the Chicago Cubs, and in 1986 he used Holmes and Watson in a column about the mugging of TV anchor Dan Rather, admitting that "I'm more of a bumbling Watson than a cerebral Holmes."
213. The Caliber comic-book mini-series THE SEARCHERS (Jul 96 #1 and Nov 96 #7) has picked up again: Jerry Margolin spotted THE SEARCHERS: APOSTLE OF MERCY #1 ($2.95) with one Sherlockian panel reprinted from the earlier series (if the new series continues, a descendant of Moriarty may turn up again, too).
214. Bunny Yeager was a model and a beauty queen before becoming a photographer herself, and her work has been seen in Playboy for decades; she now offers a series of collector's cards, and one of models in "The Girl in the Hat" (set no. 1) is "Sherlock Holmes' Apprentice" (it's a lot larger and more colorful than shown here. The set of twelve cards costs $19.95 postpaid, and you need to say that you're more than 18 years old (Bunny Yeager, 9301 N.E. 6th Avenue #C-311, Miami, FL 33138).
215. Congratulations to Ben Wood, on his Two-Shilling Award, which he received during the Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium held this month in St. Pete Beach. The award is made by The Baker Street Irregulars "for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty," and Ben has certainly earned it; he received his Investiture ("A Scandal in Bohemia") in 1979, and served for many years as the BSI's Chaplain, and as sparkingplug for The Pleasant Places or Florida.

216. The Mysterious Bookshop has a new 88-page spring-summer catalog, with three pages of Sherlockiana; 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840) <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net> <<http://www.mysteriousbookshop.com>>.
217. The continuing saga of St. Bartholomew's Hospital (the site of the historic first meeting between Holmes and Watson) has taken a welcome turn for the better: the Conservative government's campaign to close the hospital (Apr 96 #1) ended with the recent Labour election victory. According to a story in The Times on May 9 (at hand from Christopher Roden), Tony Blair made a pre-election promise to halt planned hospital closures, and the new government has begun a full-scale review of London's health needs. Frank Dobson (the new Health Secretary) said: "This government will not end up endorsing the previous government's policy. I am not dealing with individual cases at present, but I will make my decisions at the end of the review."
218. May 97 #3: Admirers of August Derleth's work will enjoy RETURN TO DERLETH: SELECTED ESSAYS, VOLUME TWO, edited by James P. Roberts and illustrated by Eugene Gryniwicz; 96 pp., with Basil Copper's six-page "The Game's Afoot: August Derleth and Solar Pons" (about Derleth's stories and Copper's continuation of the saga) and essays by other enthusiasts on Derleth's life and work in other genres. Available from the White Hawk Press, 950 Jenifer Street, Madison, WI 53703; $8.00 postpaid.
219. Bill Serow suggests that visitors to Paris may enjoy an exhibition of "The World of Sherlock Holmes" at the Louvre des Antiquaires (an antique-dealers cooperative) at 2 place Palais-Royale through Sept. 15; eight displays (including the sitting-room) have been arranged with the help of the Sherlock Holmes Society of France.
220. I've now had a chance to hear (and meet) Billy Childish and Thee Headcoats (Sep 96 #8), at the Black Cat in Washington during the band's recent eastcoast tour, but on this occasion only the drummer wore a deerstalker. The band's music is mainly punk rock, played well and highly regarded by fans, and record titles include "Sound of the Baskervilles" and "My Dear Watson" and other Sherlockian allusions, although Billy Childish seemed rather intrigued, or perhaps merely amused, to meet a Sherlockian after the show. He explained that it was Don Crane, leader of the British rhythm-and-blues band Downliner Sect, who first wore a deerstalker (which he called a headcoat) while performing, and influenced Billy Childish, who was born in 1959 in Chatham, Kent, and now has many songs and records to his credit (as well as paintings and poems). Billy's band was formed in 1979, and records for Damaged Goods (P.O. Box 671, London E17, England); album jackets often have S'ian artwork. The band has a home page at <<http://www.psychogarage.demon.co.uk/childish/>>, and there's a discography at <http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/Patrick\_Davies/headcoat.htm>.
221. Steven Spielberg's "The Lost World" is doing well at the box office, but it remains to be seen whether it will do as well as "Jurassic Park" (which has grossed more than $900 million since 1993 and is the highest-grossing film in history). A colorful poster for the 1925 film based on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's book led into the story about this year's film in the May 23 issue of Entertainment Weekly.
222. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE FALL RIVER TRAGEDY, by Owen Haskell (North Providence: Lazarus Press, 1997; 174 pp., $15.00), brings Holmes to Fall River in 1893 to investigate the murders of Lizzie Borden's parents, and to meet Lizzie after the trial at which she was acquitted, and to reveal his solution to the mystery. The book includes 69 pages of Lizzie's testimony at the coroner's inquest (she didn't testify at the trial), and it's easy to see why she wasn't convicted, after such a confused and confusing investigation. $17.00 postpaid from the author (1 Homes Street, North Providence, RI 02904).
223. Congratulations to Michael Atkinson, whose THE SECRET MARRIAGE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES has won a Mystery Writer of America "Edgar" for Best Critical/Biographical Work. The book is a fine refutation of the widely-held belief that pop-cult lit-crit must be deadly dull and packed with academic jargon (Ann Arbor: Univ. of Michigan Press, 1996; 198 pp., $29.95).
224. May 97 #4: Robert F. Fleissner's "The Old English Mr. Holmes: A Study in Critical Method" notes some parallels between "Beowulf" and the Canon in the 1996 annual volume of the academic journal In Geardagum (published by the Society for New Language Study); $5.00 postpaid from Ray Tripp, Box 100596, Denver, CO 80210.
225. Forecast from Signet in August ($5.99): FIRST CASES 2: FIRST APPEARANCES OF CLASSIC AMATEUR SLEUTHS, edited by Robert Randisi; with a reprint of Carole Nelson Douglas' "Parris Green" (in which Irene Adler and Penelope Huxleigh meet Oscar Wilde in 1886), reprinted from MALICE DOMESTIC 2 (Aug 93 #3). Midnight Louie's Scratching Post-Intelligencer also notes that Carole had edited MARILYN: SHADES OF BLONDE (forecast from Forge in July, $23.95); Carole has written a dramatic monologue for the book, portraying what Marilyn would be doing were she alive and well today at age 70, and plans to present the monologue, with costume and props during a panel at Bouchercon in Monterey at the end of October. The newsletter is available from Carole (Box 331555, Fort Worth, TX 76163) <cdouglas@catwriter.com>; she also has a home page at <<http://www.catwriter.com/cdouglas>>.
226. Michael J. Smigowski has executed a striking lithograph that shows a young Sherlock Holmes, working on a chemical experiment in 1878, waiting patiently to become an unofficial consulting detective; the signed prints (17 x 23 in.) are available from the artist (One Melissa Drive, Pembroke, NH 03275), and they cost $50.00 postpaid (he also offers a nicely illustrated free flier).
227. "Only the stupidest of intellectuals wouldn't realize that Alice in Wonderland and Sherlock Holmes are among the blessings that English writing in its many forms has given to the world." C. P. Snow, on England's literary legacy, in the Saturday Review (June 11, 1977).
228. The set of four British stamps honoring "Tales of Terror" (Apr 97 #3) are available from the U.S. Postal Service: the presentation pack (805719) is $2.95, a block of four of the "Hound" stamp (805712) is $2.90, and a full pane of 100 "Hound" stamps (805714) is $71.40; add $1.00 for shipping. The address is: Philatelic Fulfillment Service Center, Box 7247, Philadelphia, PA 19101-9014 (800-782-6724); credit-card orders welcome.
229. Pat Ward reports that Paul Giovanni's play "The Crucifer of Blood" will be preformed at the Indianapolis Civic Theater (at the Indianapolis Museum of Art) on Nov. 7-23. The box-office address is 1200 West 38th Street #1-X, Indianapolis, IN 46208 (317-923-4597).
230. Stafford G. Davis ("Horace Harker") died on May 10. He had a long career in corporate communications, and was the founder and the True Perceiver of The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa, and received his Investiture from the BSI in 1980. He worked hard to keep the memory green in Oklahoma, where he even managed to persuade the residents of Watson that their town had been named for Sherlock Holmes' friend and chronicler.
231. May 97 #5: Maggie Fox and Sue Ryding starred in "Move Over Moriarty" in England last year (Jul 96 #8), playing all the roles (including Holmes and Watson) and winning praise from the critics; now they're in the United States, at the Santa Fe Stages, where the comedy will have its North American premiere on June 4-14. The box-office address is 105 East Marcy Street #107, Santa Fe, NM 87501 (505-982-6683).
232. Carolyn and Joel Senter's latest sales list ("Quick Watson...!" #3) offers some nice Sherlockian books, audio, video, pins, a new Sherlockian map of England drawn by Jan Walker, and much more; Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219.
233. HENRY IRVING'S WATERLOO, by W. D. King (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1993; 303 pp., $40.00), is a fascinating and rewarding book. Arthur Conan Doyle adapted his story "A Straggler of '15" (1891) into the one-act play "A Story of Waterloo" and sent it to Henry Irving, who quickly bought the rights to the play and made it famous, performing it hundreds of times in London and on tour from 1894 until his death in 1905. But today it is - best known (and often remembered only) for the scathing review that George Bernard Shaw gave Irving's performance when the play opened in London in 1895. One of the reasons why King's book is so fascinating and rewarding is that King stresses the fundamental change from the "actor's theater" that Irving represented so well to the "author's theater" that Shaw was about to launch and lead. And the book is full of real people, including Ellen Terry and Bram Stoker and Edward Gordon Craig and Napoleon, and King tells his and their story well, offering a fine look at what drama was like a century ago.

234. A video-taper alert: "The X-Files" starts in reruns on the fX cable channel on Aug. 19, five nights a week. The first season's 12th episode ("Fire") had Muldur's old flame, now a Scotland Yard detective, enlisting his aid in tracking down an arsonist who is able to ignite things simply by touching them. And there are Sherlockian allusions in the episode, which should be broadcast on Sept. 3, if the schedule is correct.
235. It was many years ago that John Bennett Shaw prepared calling cards for Mr. Sherlock Holmes and Professor James Moriarty (long enough ago that Richard M. Nixon was president of the United States, accounting for John giving the White House telephone number as the Washington contact for Moriarty). But whose were the London numbers he gave for Holmes (01-486-5555) and Moriarty (01-236-5555)? Does anyone remember? Or were they non-working even then?

236. May 97 #6: John Ruyle, preferring to believe that Sherlock Holmes shares the birthday of Arthur Conan Doyle rather than Felix Morley, has celebrated May 22 with BEEING THERE, a new collection of Sherlockian verse, handset and printed at the Pequod Press; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John (521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707).
237. The weather was delightful for the 27th running of The Silver Blaze (Southern Division) at Pimlico on May 24, when it was nice indeed to find a horse named Dr. Doyle entered in the seventh race (we also learned that Dr. Doyle had been scheduled to run the day before, but had been scratched so that he could run the next day). It was even nicer when Dr. Doyle won handily, but he was an odds-on favorite and paid only $3.40/$2.60/$2.20. Unfortunately, The Silver Blaze was the fourth race, in which many Sherlockians had backed Lulu's Boy, who had won the same race in 1991 and missed a chance to be our only double-winner by finishing sixth. Screen Star was an easy winner, and the traditional trophy was presented by Gwen Knight, of Philadelphia.
238. The sixth annual Watsonian Weekend (celebrating Dr. Watson and the Battle of Maiwand) begins with a regimental dinner at Knickers Restaurant in Des Plains, Ill., on July 18, and continues with the 38th annual running of The Silver Blaze at Arlington Race Course on July 19, and concludes with brunch at the Destiny restaurant in Des Plaines. More details are available from Fred Levin, 8242 North Ridgeway Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076.
239. Edward Mulhare died on May 24. He began his acting career in Ireland in 1942, moving to London and then to New York, where in 1957 he succeeded Rex Harrison at Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady". He had starring roles in the television series "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" and "Knight Rider", and in 1977 was to star as Holmes (with Ben Wright as Watson) in "The Sherlock Holmes Radio Theatre", a radio series planned by KIIS (Los Angeles); Glenhall Taylor wrote twelve scripts for the series, and seven were recorded, but the series never made it onto the air.
240. Lisa Oldham's electronic newsletter "The Brettish Empire" continues to run installments of her excellent survey of Jeremy Brett's stage career. Her address is <oldham@freenet.columbus.oh.us>; back issues can be read on the web at <<http://www.infinet.com/~jwolfe/tbe>>.
241. John Hillen has kindly forwarded news of a new production by the California Artists Repertory Theatre: "Alice in Wonderland" will be performed at the Hollywood Entertainment Museum at 10:00 and 7:00 on June 14. The play is adapted and directed by Peggy Webber, and stars Samantha Eggar (Alice) and David Warner (Lewis Carroll, John Astin (the White Knight), Louis Nye (the Mock Turtle), Parley Baer, Elliott Reid, and others; the Museum's address is 7021 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, CA 90028 (213-960-4806). CART was founded 48 years ago by Peggy Webber, who has had a long career on stage, screen, radio, and television; she worked on the "Sherlock Holmes" radio series in the 1940s, and she and Parley Baer and Elliott Reed have contributed to the audio reissues produced by Ken Greenwald at 221A Baker Street Associates (and distributed by Simon and Schuster and Brilliance Audio).

242. Jun 97 #1: David L. Hammer's A DANGEROUS GAME: BEING A TRAVEL GUIDE TO THE EUROPE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 1997; 277 pp., $19.95) is as delightful as his four earlier travel books (three devoted to Britain, and one to North America), and like the others it is a reasonable substitute for having the author himself as one's guide. But only reasonable, since he so obviously enjoys his journeys and his research, and it is easy enough to imagine how much fun it would be to join one of his expeditions. The book is written with style and humor, and recommended; $22.70 postpaid from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256).
243. Leslie Klinger will repeat his six-week, Monday-evening, extension course on "Sherlock Holmes and His World" at the University of California in Los Angeles from Oct. 6 through Nov. 10; details are available from the UCLA Extension (310-825-9971) <<http://www.unex.ucla.edu>>. "A serious course," Les notes, with "lots of reading!"
244. A new postage stamp honors Bugs, the world's most famous Bunny, and he's famous enough that the postal service didn't even need to put his name on the stamp. And yes, there is a mention of a bunny in the Canon (revealed on the next page).
245. Further to the item about the sale of the Algonquin Hotel (Mar 97 #7), John Baesch has kindly forwarded a flier for the newly renovated landmark (which for many years has been the informal headquarters for the January birthday weekend) is run now as a Camberley Hotel); the Algonquin's Camberley Club Suites feature "a personal library of significant works, current periodicals, fresh fruit, a decanter of American sherry, complimentary soft drinks and special Algonquin Beer."
246. Malcolm Payne died on May 30. He was the founder of The Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment, and had a close association with Windlesham (since his father, aunt, and uncle had worked for Sir Arthur); he put together an interesting museum collection of Conan Doyle material, now shown at Groombridge, and in 1993 edited and published RECOLLECTIONS OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE BY RESIDENTS OF CROWBOROUGH, with reminiscences by his relatives and others who were employed by the family.
247. Jo Soares' pastiche O XANGO DE BAKER STREET has been published in Brazilian Portuguese (Feb 96 #4), and in Spanish (Nov 96 #8), and Olaf Maurer reports that there now is a German translation: SHERLOCK HOLMES IN RIO (Frankfurt: Insel Verlag, 1997; 320 pp., DM 39.80); this may well set a record for modern Sherlockiana in languages other than English before there's an English translation (which is forecast from Pantheon in paperback in November as A SAMBA FOR SHERLOCK).
248. The Canadian television series "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" (Sep 96 #3) began airing on YTV cable on Feb. 24, with thirteen 30-minute episodes starring Meredith Henderson as the 12-year-old great grandniece of Sherlock Holmes., but there's no news about possible broadcast in the United States. In the meantime, Jamie Hubbs notes, the electronically enabled can visit an Internet web site at <<http://www.ytv.com/shows/shirley/index.asp>>.
249. Jun 97 #2: FRITZ SPIEGL'S BOOK OF MUSICAL BLUNDERS AND OTHER MUSICAL CURIOSITIES (London: Robson Books, 1996; £16.95) includes a 8-page discussion titled "Sherlock Holmes mistreats his mahogany violin" in which Spiegl concludes that Holmes was far less a musician than Watson made

- him out to be. Spiegl also notes that Holmes' violin must have been the most remarkable instrument ever to come out of the Cremona workshops: when (in "The Norwood Builder"), "during a fit of exasperation, Holmes 'flung down the instrument' into a corner, it came to no harm. It was 'made of mahogany'. Solid, no doubt." But there's no mention of a mahogany violin in my copy of the Canon.
250. The Wigmore Street Post Office is a nicely imaginative electronic journal published on the Prodigy computer service, and some of the best of its fun and games and scholarship now is available ink-on-paper in MELANGE DE WSPPO, edited and published by Mel Hughes; the 100-page anthology is available for $23.45 postpaid from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 (credit-card orders welcome).
251. Yes, there is indeed a Canonical mention of a bunny. Two bunnies, in fact, in "Shoscombe Old Place" ("me and Stephens, quaking in the bushes like two bunny-rabbits").
252. Hal Prince produced the play "They Might Be Giants" in London in 1961, and directed the Broadway musical "Baker Street" (1965), and tells tales about both shows (and many others) in CONTRADICTIONS: NOTES ON TWENTY-SIX YEARS IN THE THEATRE (New York: Dodd, Mead & Co., 1974. It's an interesting and amusing book, and of course Prince has had many more years in the theater: his production of the musical "Candide" is the last show he covers in the book, and his revival of "Candide" is running now at the Gershwin Theatre in New York.
253. "I was once janitor and sweeper-out of the laboratory at York College," said Jefferson Hope (in "A Study in Scarlet"). And the City College of New York (founded in 1847 and honored on a recent postal card) is a reasonable candidate; all of the actual York Colleges in America were founded in 1890 or later.
254. Phillip Gold (221Books) has sent a nice mail-order catalog of Sherlockian books, and it's available for the asking; 760 Carlisle Canyon Road, Westlake Village, CA 91361 <221books@interloc.com>. One item not included in the catalog is the Sherlock Holmes Presskit distributed by Leo Gutman in the 1970s when he was marketing the Rathbone/Bruce films: there are more than 120 loose pages, mostly reprints of articles, photographs, and period advertisements, and a letter from Gutman; $150 postpaid.
255. Michael Phillips, manager of The Sherlock Holmes Public House & Restaurant, has provided a copy of their sales list of souvenirs and other Sherlockiana (and of course they welcome tourists who want to dine or drink or view the recreation of the sitting-room); 10-11 Northumberland Street, London WC2N 5DA, England <sherlock@popmail.dircon.co.uk>, and they have a home page on the World Wide Web <<http://users.dircon.co.uk/~sherlock/>>.
256. Jun 97 #3: "Movie Studios Pursue Elusive Girls Segment" was the headline on a story by Jeff Jensen in the June 2 issue of Advertising Age about Hollywood plans for marketing film properties this fall: Disney will release "The Little Mermaid" for the second time, Twentieth Century-Fox will have its first animated musical "Anastasia", and Paramount will release "Fairy Tale: A True Story" (which you have heard about before as "Illumination" and before that as "The Golden Afternoon", starring Peter O'Toole as Conan Doyle and Harvey Keitel as Houdini). Viacom hopes it can do for fairies what Universal has done with dinosaurs, and the brand name "Fairies of Cottingley Glen" has been licensed to Playmates Toys, Gibson Greeting Cards, and Random House. "It's a brand that can outlive a single movie and create a distinct world that can produce future line extensions," said Viacom's vice president for strategic property development. Tom Huntington, who spotted the story, also reports that the film is scheduled for release in October.
257. Marsha Pollak spotted a forecast in Publishers Weekly (Apr. 14): AGAINST THE BROTHERHOOD, by Quinn Fawcett, due from Forge in October, is the first in a new series featuring Mycroft Holmes.
258. The University of Minnesota held an Official Ground Breaking Celebration on May 9 to celebrate the start of work on the new Minnesota Library Access Center that will house the university's special collections (including the Sherlock Holmes Collections). Dick Sveum reports that university president Nils Hasslmo and university librarian Tom Shaughnessy described the center and its collections, and politicians discussed their battles with the governor and the state legislature, and then shovels moved dirt, and pictures were taken. Serious construction begins this summer, and the collections will move to the new center in 1999. If you'd like to be on a mailing list for the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, write to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
259. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON, by Larry Millett, in paperback from Penguin in July ($9.95); a reprint of last year's pastiche (Sep 96 #5) in Holmes and Watson travel to Minnesota to help save the Great North Railway from an insane arsonist.
260. Congratulations to Christopher Plummer, who on June 1 won a Tony Award for best actor in a play, for his performance in "Barrymore" (he is one of the very few actors who have played Sherlock Holmes and an actor who has played Sherlock Holmes). The Tony Awards are given by The American Theatre Wing and the League of American Theatres and Producers.
261. Jerry Margolin is offering to sell some of his animation cels. Additional information is available from Jerry at 10007 S.W. Quail Post Road, Portland OR 97219 (503-293-7274) <jerrym@bidtek.com>.
262. At hand from John Pforr is a flier for the next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Oct. 31-Nov. 2. There will be a Sherlockian mystery to solve, a tour of eight Victorian homes, meal, and other fun and games. Additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204-0340 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278).
263. Jun 97 #4: Cracker Jack fans now have more than one Sherlockian "Wishbone" prize to look for: the first one reported was a small portrait of Wishbone as Sherlock Holmes (one of a 12 different character portraits), and Don Hobbs' son now has found a fancier "dog tag" with two portraits of Wishbone (one in Sherlockian costume) under a piece of ridged plastic that allows you to see one or the other depending on the viewing angle (again, this is one of a dozen different prizes, so you get to eat lots of Cracker Jack before you get to the Sherlockian prize). There seems to be no official name for the process; some have suggested "switch cards" or "flickers" (or one can just say "what they had before holograms").
264. Brilliance Audio's continuing series of cassettes produced by Ken Greenwald and his 221A Baker Street Associates offers more of the splendid old radio shows from the 1946-47 season with Nigel Bruce as Watson and Tom Conway as Holmes; Elliott Reid introduces one of the cassettes with discussion of the Baker Street Irregulars and modern Sherlockian societies, and other introductions offer a nice round-table discussion by Holmes, Mycroft, Moriarty, Irene Adler, and Conan Doyle (played by Hank Garrett). Cassettes #13-#16 are now available, at $9.95 each (with two shows on each cassette). MORE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is the series title and if you can't find them in your local shops, Brilliance is at Box 887, Grand Haven, MI 49417 (800-222-3225).
265. THE STRANGE CASE OF MRS. HUDSON'S CAT: AND OTHER SCIENCE MYSTERIES SOLVED BY SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Colin Bruce (Reading: Addison-Wesley, 1997; 254 pp., $23.00), offers explanations of the more important paradoxes of classical and modern physics (and resolutions for most of them), with a cast of characters that includes Holmes, Watson, Mycroft, Prof. Challenger, Summerlee, Mrs. Hudson, and her cat; this is serious science, presented with style and imagination.
266. Ben Wood offers a sales list for Sherlockian stamps (From Great Britain and Guernsey) and Sherlockiana (needlework, booklets and other souvenirs); his address is Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222.

267. Stan and Jan Berenstain continue to include Sherlockian allusions in their Berenstain Bears series: David McCallister has spotted THE BERENSTAIN BEARS AND THE GALLOPING GHOST (New York: Random House, 1994; $2.99); Brother and Sister are enjoying the adventures of the great bear detective, Grizzlock Holmes, and his faithful assistance, Dr. Bearson.
268. David also noted an article by John de Lancie in the July issue of Starlog, about the audiobook series "Alien Voices" (distributed by Simon and Schuster): the first show is "The Time Machine" with Leonard Nimoy as the Time Traveller; "Journey to the Center of the Earth" is due in July, starring Nimoy and de Lancie; and "The Lost World" comes next, with Armin Shimerman as Challenger and Dwight Schultz as Malone.
269. Plan well ahead: the next STUD Sherlockian Society annual banquet will be held on Mar. 6, 1998, at the Starlight Inn in Schiller Park (near Chicago), with David L. Hammer as featured speaker, followed as usual by a Solar Pons Breakfast in Oak Park on Mar. 7; if you'd like to be on their mailing list, write to Dennis France, 8546 North Kedvale Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076-2113.
270. Jun 97 #5: Andrew Joffe's fine one-act chamber opera "Tobermory" (based on the story by Saki) was produced in Washington and New York last year (with Andrew as the director and a Giant Rat of Sumatra lurking on the set). It will be performed again (with a different director and cast) at the Lake George Opera Festival on Aug. 9, 11, and 13; the box office is at Box 2172, Glens Falls, NY 12801 (518-793-3859).
271. Maurice Tanner (180 Whitehorse Road, West Croydon, Surrey CR0 2LA, England) offers his own color-cachet first day cover of the recent British "Hound of the Baskervilles" stamp with two different pictorial postmarks (£7.99 each postpaid in U.K. or £8.99 overseas), and combination FDCs with the Guernsey Rathbone stamp also with two different pictorial postmarks (£10.99/£11.99), and maximum cards for the four "Tales of Terror" stamps (£9.99/£10.99); you can pay with sterling checks or money orders, or with credit cards with a 30p surcharge (an illustrated flier is available in return for two IRCs or a $1.00 bill).
272. Susan Cohen has forwarded a flier from the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, which will sponsor a workshop they call "The Skeptic's Toolbox '97" at the University of Oregon at Eugene on Aug. 21-25; the workshop topics will include Houdini and Conan Doyle, Piltown Man, dowsing, and the Oregon Vortex. The flier (with Sherlockian artwork) is available from CSICOP (Box 703, Amherst, NY 14226).
273. Auction news: an auction of "English Literature and History" at Sotheby's on July 17 will include a copy of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (estimated at £500-700), and a lot with eleven signed letters and cards (ten by Arthur Conan Doyle and one by his widow) to Lord Gorrell (mostly about publishing and the Psychic Bookshop (estimated at £800-1000); the sale will be in the Aeolian Hall in London, and Sotheby's address is: 34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England).
274. The Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment offers a lapel pin as part of its ongoing effort to raise money for a lifesize statue of Sir Arthur in Clokes Corner in Crowborough Close. The pin is in antique pewter and 1" high, available from Brian Pugh (20 Clare Road, Lewes BN7 1PN England; £6.00 postpaid in the U.K. or £7.00/$14.00 elsewhere (dollars in currency only, please).
275. Gary Thaden has forwarded David Thompson's article on "Sherlock Holmes and the Ghost Hunter" in the July issue of Biblio: The Magazine for Collectors of Books, Manuscripts and Ephemera; the article deals with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Harry Price and their books about spiritualism. The magazine is found in many used-book stores ($4.95), and published from 845 Willamette Street, Eugene, OR 97401.
276. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) offers copies of THE HOUNDS COLLECTION: VOLUME 2, with 100 pages of stories, cartoons, poems, and plays written by members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new, but a few pieces have appeared elsewhere. $13.00 or CA$18.00 or £9.00 postpaid by airmail; $9.00/$12.00/£6.00 postpaid by surface mail. Payment by personal checks or currency is welcome.
277. Jun 97 #6: Sherlockians planning to attend Bouchercon 28 in Monterey on Oct. 30-Nov. 2 will be happy to know that the convention will include two Sherlockian symposia, on "Sherlock Holmes and the Golden State" and "Victorian Gentlemen's Clubs and the Sherlockian Canon (including a Woman's Point of View)". And the Diogenes Club of the Monterey Peninsula will host a reception for visiting Sherlockians on Oct. 31 (5:00 to 7:00 pm); if you plan to attend the reception, please contact Michael H. Kean, 3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953.
278. Plan ahead: 221Beach ("a fun-filled Sherlockian spring break of canonical games, contests and camaraderie at the Jersey shore"), is planned for Apr. 17-19, 1998, in Spring Lake, N.J.; if you would like to be on the mailing list, write to Dick Kitts, 35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301 <rkitts@aol.com>.
279. Congratulations to Al Rosenblatt, who has been selected as a member of the 1997 U.S. Maccabiah Masters Squash Team. The Maccabiah Games, sanctioned by the International Olympic Committee, have been held in Israel every four years since 1932, and more than 5,600 athletes from more than 56 countries will participate in this year's Games in July.
280. Hugh S. Scullion's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE MANUAL offers indexes to Canonical murderers, smoking and tobacco, ships, wrongful arrests, characters and places mentioned, and other topics; the 28-page pamphlet is $13.00 postpaid (checks payable to Hugh Scullion, please) from Cadds Printing, 59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England.
281. Tom Huntington's "On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes" (Apr 97 #3) ran in the June issue of the Japanese edition of Playboy; he's very fluent in Japanese (the article first ran in the Feb. 1997 issue of Historic Traveler).
282. The house at 12 Tennyson Road, South Norwood, is again available, sporting a "for sale" sign, according to a message posted to the Internet news group alt.fan.holmes. It was the home of Arthur Conan Doyle from 1891 to 1893, and four years ago (Sep 92 #4) was offered for £350,000.
283. Ian Henry Publications (20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England) has sent its summer 1997 catalog of Sherlock Holmes material, with a long list of in-print pastiches, scripts, and Doyleana (most also are available from Empire Publishing Services, Box 1344, Studio City, CA 91614).
284. Carolyn and Joel Senter describe THE FORMIDABLE SCRAP-BOOK OF BAKER STREET as "being a compendium of creations, contributions, and offerings from, of, and about Sherlockians everywhere," and that's a fine description indeed: the book includes photographs and program and reports from events they have attended, and material submitted by others, and it offers an interesting view of the world of today's Sherlockians in 292 pages. $35.50 postpaid (US $38.50 to Canada) from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>; credit-card orders are welcome, and orders from outside North America will be charged actual shipping costs.

Jul 97 #1:

285. I've long sought to identify an actor or artist earlier than Basil Rathbone who portrayed Sherlock Holmes with a calabash pipe. William Gillette used a curved or "bent" wooden pipe rather than the straight pipe shown in the illustrations by Paget and Steele, most likely because he realized (as any actor would) that lighting and smoking a straight pipe puts the hand right in front of the actor's face, whereas a bent pipe doesn't. And Robert S. Ennis has located just such an earlier calabash, and has reported on it in a fine article in the June issue of The Baker Street Journal: the calabash and a deerstalker are shown in a photograph of Robert Woolsey in an advertisement for the film "The Nitwits" (1935), which also had Bert Wheeler and

- Betty Grable in the cast. Alas, the film seems not to be available on videocassette, although it may be found on a now-withdrawn laserdisc, and it's certainly something to watch for in the television listings.
286. And as always I am happy to recommend The Baker Street Journal, published quarterly at $18.95 a year ($21.50 a year outside the U.S.); you can subscribe for up to three years, subscribers outside the U.S. can use Visa or Mastercard, and the address is: Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
287. Venezuela's giant sandstone mesas (called tepuis) were featured in a onehour program "Islands in the Sky" in the PBS-TV series "Nature" in 1989, (with mention of their having inspired Conan Doyle's "The Lost World").
288. And John Hillen spotted an Associated Press story by Bart Jones (June 26) about the campaign by Indians and environmentalists against a government plan to run a high-voltage power line through Canaima National Park, which is the home of Angel Falls (the world's tallest waterfall) and many tepuis. Canaima, the sixth largest national park in the world, was declared a World Heritage Site by the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization in 1994. The power line will serve gold mines in the state of Roraima, across the border in Brazil, and there are plans to expand mining into the Imataca forest reserve near Canaima.
289. THE FINAL PROBLEMS: SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERY TRIVIA, by Cort Reynolds, is a 78-page booklet with more than 800 Canonical questions that can be used for a four-player board game or by those who just want to test their expertise; $11.25 postpaid from Cort Reynolds, 108 West Lima Avenue, Ada, OH 45810.
290. Brian Keith died on June 24. He launched his acting career in 1924 (at the age of 3) in the silent film "Piper Malone" and went on to star in the television series "Family Affair" (1966-1971) and "Hardcastle & McCormick" (1983-1986). He also guest-starred on the premiere of Angela Lansbury's television series "Murder, She Wrote" in 1984; the episode was "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes" and he played Capt. Caleb McCallum, who attended a costume party dressed as Sherlock Holmes and who may or may not have been the intended victim of a murderer (Jessica Fletcher figured it out, of course).
291. The Book-of-the-Month Club still offers members its SHERLOCK HOLMES SET of nine hardcover volumes of the Canon (Mar 94 #3) at $44.95; the set consists of reprints (A STUDY IN SCARLET and THE SIGN OF THE FOUR from editions published by Orange Judd in 1907, and the other seven volumes from first American editions). The club's address is Camp Hill, PA 17012-0001.

292. Jul 97 #2: The "Lasting Impressions" symposium in Toronto on June 26-29 was thoroughly enjoyable, and a fine way to celebrate the 25th anniversary of The Bootmakers of Toronto, who planned and publicized the festivities for two and a half years and offered an instructive example of how much fun this sort of gathering can be both for those who do the work and those who benefit from it. There were interesting papers, and plenty of entertainment, and one of the nicest aspects of the schedule was the "down time" when there were no speeches and papers, and when participants could visit the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library, chat with friends old and new, or play tourist in an interesting city. And there were pleasant surprises, such as a chance to hear from Zora Buchanan, who as a World War II refugee from Glasgow wound up on Long Island, sitting on Christopher Morley's knee, and growing up with his children.
293. The Arts & Letters Club was graced by an impressive Commissionaire: Sahni Singh, a veteran of the British and Indian armies, who manned the door and was just as martial as one could expect any Sikh to be. The Bootmakers also arranged for Lasting Impressions vintages: an Estate Reisling 1995 and a Gamay Noir 1996 from Stoney Ridge Cellars in Winona (Ontario), available throughout the weekend. And the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library's exhibition of "Images of Sherlock Holmes" was truly impressive, offering a chance to see original art by Paget, Steele, and others from the collection of Peter A. Lemiski, as well as the manuscript of Arthur Conan Doyle's play "Angels of Darkness" from the Library's own collection.
294. And there was an active huckster's room, for browsers and buyers. One nice item, mentioned before (Nov 96 #6) is REDMOND'S DELICATE QUESTIONS, a booklet with thought-provoking questions, one for each case in the Canon, that make splendid discussion topics for societies seeking things to do at meetings. The booklet costs $2.00 (US or CA) postpaid from Chris Redmond, 523 Westfield Drive, Waterloo, ON N2T 2E1, Canada.
295. Clifford S. Goldfarb's THE GREAT SHADOW: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, BRIGADIER GERARD, AND NAPOLEON (Ashcroft: Calabash Press, 1997; 232 pp.) is a detailed and interesting examination of all of Conan Doyle's writings about the man who terrified and ruled most of Europe in the early years of the 19th century, and who was still both hated and admired at the end of the century, when he appeared in or influenced many of Conan Doyle's short stories, novels, and plays. Goldfarb discusses both the writings and their author, and his research and sources, and does it well. Available from the publisher (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V8K 1A0, Canada) <ashtree@mail.netshop.net>; $27.75 postpaid (air) or $26.00 (surface); CA$32.75 to Canada; $34.40/$24.00 elsewhere (credit-card orders welcome). The trade edition is in wrappers, but there's also a limited and signed edition in cloth; ask Calabash about cost and availability.
296. L'UNIVERS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES is an attractive 99-page booklet published to accompany the exhibition (which closes on Sept. 15) at the Louvre des Antiquaires in Paris (May 97 #3); it's an excellent anthology of scholarship by members of the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France (all in French), with caricatures by Jean-Pierre Cagnat, and an intriguing Sherlockian discovery in one of Camille Pissarro's paintings. Available from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada; $30.00 postpaid.
297. Jul 97 #3: The Japan Sherlock Holmes Club (they're the largest Sherlockian society in the world) will celebrate its 21st anniversary with an international convention next year, on Mar. 21 in Kamakura and Mar. 22 in Tokyo. There will be presentations and exhibitions and sightseeing, and speeches by foreign guests from the United States and Great Britain, and it will be an excellent opportunity to meet Japanese Sherlockians; details are available from Mitch Higurashi, 3-13-7-305 Nishikubo, Musashino, Tokyo 180, Japan (fax 81-422-55-3356) <hgd02506@niftyserve.or.jp>.
298. The 1997 running of The Silver Blaze at Meadowlands (that's the new venue for the New York event) will be held on Sept. 20. Additional information is available from Stephen L. Stix, 1150 NC 50 US 117, Faison, NC 28341.
299. Robert Mitchum died on July 1. His film career began in the 1940s, in a Hopalong Cassidy western, and he went on to star in films that ranged from the thriller "Cape Fear" to the warm-hearted "Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison". Deborah Kerr once told him, "You know you can't act, and if you hadn't been good-looking, you would never have gotten a picture," and he never denied it ("Taking acting lessons," he said, "is like going to school to learn to be tall"). In the television film "Jake Spanner, Private Eye" (1989) he played a retired private detective, and in one scene tried to get information from a car-rental clerk, who asked his name; Mitchum replied, "Holmes, Mycroft Holmes."
300. The American Chemical Society's "peg" poster (16" x 22") with the Sherlockian maxim about it being a capital mistake, etc.) was first produced in 1977, and Jennie Paton notes that it's still available (item H507) from ACS Education Products, Dept. 1195, Box 2537, Kearneysville, WV 25430 (800-209-0423); $3.00 each (plus $4.00 shipping per order).
301. An alert for Sherlockian miniaturists: Miniature Collector magazine will showcase Sherlockian miniatures in an issue to be published next spring, and has asked readers to submit photographs or transparencies by Sept. 1; there was an announcement in the July-Aug. issue, and clues to a Sherlock

- Holmes quiz in the Sept. issue (now on the newsstands). You can send your material to the editor, Barbara J. Aardema, 1060 West Norton Avenue, Muskegon, MI 49441.
302. Ted Friedman's nicely-illustrated two-page article on Jean Baptiste Greuze and stamps showing his paintings appeared in Topical Time (July-Aug. 1997); the issue costs $5.00 postpaid from the American Topical Association, Box 65749, Tucson, AZ 85728.
303. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE IN EDINBURGH, by Charles Hall and Peter Blythe, offers interesting discussions of Sherlockian and Doylean plays performed in Edinburgh (mostly during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe), Conan Doyle's speeches and lectures in Edinburgh, and memorials to him in Edinburgh, with amusing artwork by Hall. The 48-page booklet (published in 1995) costs £4.95 postpaid to Britain (or £5.95 by surface post elsewhere) from Charles Hall, 12 Paisley Terrace, Edinburgh EH8 7JW, Scotland, Great Britain; dollar payments in currency only, please.
304. Jul 97 #4: Charles Kuralt died on July 4. He worked as a journalist and columnist for the Charlotte News and joined CBS News in 1957, becoming host of "CBS News Sunday Morning" and the highly popular "On the Road with Charles Kuralt", winning three Peabody awards, ten Emmys, and the George Polk Memorial Award for national television reporting. "I try to avoid anything that's relevant or significant or newsworthy," he once said, and he made a career of showing that anything interesting can be important. He recorded a "Newsnote" for CBS radio in 1984 noting that "Tomorrow is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's birthday, and lucky for us too," and he ended his warm tribute by suggesting that "Sherlock Holmes is an inspiration, a triumph of the mind in art, and we continue to follow his trail--always in admiration, always a dozen paces behind."
305. The Bootmakers also celebrated their 25th anniversary with LASTING IMPRESSIONS, which includes a revised version of Cameron Hollyer's splendid "The Curator's Egg" (a delightfully personal history of Cameron's work at the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection), Christopher Redmond's "Sherlock Holmes from Sea to Sea" (an annotated list that ranges from Adventuresses to Yukon), a chronology of what happened at all the meetings of the Bootmakers), and a bibliography of papers presented at the meetings. 413 pp., $35.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
306. Articles in the Edinburgh press, at hand from Jon Lellenberg, report a new summer-long exhibition on "Arthur Conan Doyle: The Edinburgh Connection" at the Writers Museum in Lady Stair's Close in Edinburgh.
307. Katherine McMahon, the last known survivor of those who solved the famous Sherlock Holmes crossword puzzle in the Saturday Review of Literature in 1934 (she's "Lucy Ferrier" in the Baker Street Irregulars), will celebrate her 90th birthday on Aug. 8, recovering from hip-replacement surgery. You can send birthday greetings to her at 516 Solano Drive NE, Albuquerque, NM 87108; birthday cards would be welcome, and audio greetings even more so, since she can't see, but can play cassettes (if you have any extra commercial Sherlockian cassettes, she can play those, too).
308. The Home Office (Large) Major Enquiry System [HOLMES] was created more than a dozen years ago (Apr 85 #6), and is now widely used, but needs updating. According to a story in The Times (July 2), at hand from John R. Clark, six police forces in the United Kingdom are now testing HOLMES 2, which is both more sophisticated and easier to learn and use. HOLMES 2 is expected to go online throughout the U.K. next spring.
309. The Norwegian Explorers will hold a "Founders Footprints" 50th-anniversary conference at the Holiday Inn Metrodome in Minneapolis on Aug. 7-9, 1998. Additional information is available from Bruce Southworth, 1621 Lafond Avenue, Saint Paul, MN 55104 <bruce1@mindspring.com>.
310. Conan Doyle praised Wilkie Collins' "fine stories of mystery" (in MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES), and we'll have a chance to see a new BBC dramatization of his "The Moonstone" on "Masterpiece Theatre" on PBS-TV on Nov. 2; the stars are Patricia Hodge, Greg Wise, Keeley Hawes, and Antony Sher. The advance warning comes from Anglofile, a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($12.00 a year).
311. Jul 97 #5: A reminder: the seventh annual Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair and Convention will be held at the Holiday Inn (Independence Mall) in Philadelphia on Oct. 3-5. Membership is limited to 400 and full registration costs $50.00; write to Deen Kogan, Detecto-Mysterioso Books, 507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147.
312. Orval C. Graves ("Whitaker's Almanac") died on June 18. He earned degrees in English and Religion, and enjoyed the works of Christopher Morley and Vincent Starrett, and his special interests in the Canon included air guns and sundials. He was executive director of the YMCA in Sequoia, Calif., in the 1970s, and after teaching a seven-week Sherlock Holmes course at a community college in Redwood City he founded The Knights of the Gnomon there. He received his investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982.
313. Marisa Babjak-Wiggins continues to offer interesting Sherlockiana in her femmes fatales mail-order catalog (Box 4457, Lakewood, CA 90712) (800-596-3323) <byteocrime@aol.com> <<http://register.com/femfatal>>. And her new catalog, ready by the end of August, will offer a boxed set of Christmas tree ornaments (Watson, Holmes, and an English Bobby); $139.00 plus shipping; Marisa kindly offers a 10% discount to newsletter readers who mention the magic word (Scuttlebutt). Not in the catalog, but shown in a separate flier available on request, are some expensive Sherlockian statues, steins, jars, bottle openers, and chess sets.
314. The trivia-question list of actors who have played Sherlock Holmes who also have played actors who have played Sherlock Holmes continues to lengthen: there were Patrick Horgan (who has played both Holmes and William Gillette) and Nicol Williamson and Christopher Plummer (who have played both Holmes and John Barrymore), and now there's a fourth, noted by Bill Nadel: Kevin McCarthy, who played both Holmes and William Gillette in programs on the CBS Radio Mystery Theater (1977-1982).
315. Donald Girard Jewell's THE METEOROLOGICAL HOLMES: A MONOGRAPH ON WEATHER AND FORECASTING IN THE TIME OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, illustrated with artwork of the period, is the ninth volume in his interesting Sherlock Holmes Natural History Series; you can order the pamphlet from the Pinchin Lane Press, 4685 Geeting Road, Westminster, MD 21158 ($16.95 postpaid).
316. An interesting "Third Ear Radio Theatre" dramatization of THE LOST WORLD is available on two cassettes from Ziggurat Productions (Box 292, Topanga, CA 90290); $20.50 postpaid.
317. Peter Calamai reports that Charles Marowitz's play "Sherlock's Last Case" will be produced by the Sunshine Festival Theatre Company in Orilla on Aug. 14-30; the box-office address is 20 Mississaga Street West, Orilla, ON L3V 6K8, Canada (705-326-8011). Peter also notes that Orilla has other attractions, including the home of Stephen Leacock, the Canadian humorist whose parodies included some nice Sherlockiana.
318. Jul 97 #6: When in the Berkshires: the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown, Mass., has a fine exhibition "Uncanny Spectacle: The Public Career of the Young John Singer Sargent" on display through Sept. 7, showing paintings from the first decade of his career (a decade that ended in 1887 when he had moved from Paris to London, and was already painting striking portraits).
319. Rolf J. Canton has contributed often to the newsletter of The Norwegian Explorers, and his essays and poems have been collected in THE MORIARTY PRINCIPLE: AN IRREGULAR LOOK AT SHERLOCK HOLMES (Lakeville: Galde Press, 1997; 264 pp., $19.95), along with new material that includes the scripts for two radio plays and a fine assortment of photographs taken at Explorers' meetings and conferences. $23.95 postpaid from the publisher, Box 460, Lakesville, MN 55044 (800-777-3454) <pgalde@minn.net>.

320. The summer-fall issue of Mary Higgins Clark Mystery (now on the stands and in grocery stores) has John T. Lescroart's pastiche "The Adventure of the Giant Rat of Sumatra".
321. Brad Keefauver proudly promises "the best day you'll ever spend in Peoria, Illinois" on Sept. 27, when locals (and visitors) can shop the Central Illinois Book and Paper Fair in the morning and then proceed to the Downstate Illinois Sherlockian Invitational, which will involve a Knowledge Competition in the afternoon, and the 20th annual 2704 Banquet of The Hansoms of John Clayton in the evening. The festivities also will include a Literary Competition and a Sherlockian Scion Sing-Off, and additional information is available from Robert C. Burr (4010 Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 60614) <rcburr@hrn.bradley.edu>.
322. CRIME THROUGH TIME: ORIGINAL TALES OF HISTORICAL MYSTERY, edited by Miriam Grace Monfredo and Sharan Newman (New York: Berkley Prime Crime, 1997; 373 pp., $6.9), is an anthology offering 21 new short stories, including Laurie R. King's "Mrs. Hudson's Case" (with Mary Russell) and M. J. Trow's "Exit Centre Stage" (with Inspector Sholto Lestrade).
323. Nice news indeed for fans of "The Lost World" (the 1925 film, not the movie made from Michael Crichton's book): a long article by Scott MacQueen in the June issue of Cinefex (at hand from Roy Pilot) reports on the discovery of a copy of the film at Filmovy Archiv in Prague. Work on a 35mm black-and-white preservation negative is now underway at the Haghefilm laboratory in the Netherlands; the Czech print was edited by local censors, but MacQueen believes that the new preservation negative will contain 90 percent of the full footage (the Lumivision laserdisc issued in 1991 has only 65 percent of the footage). Hugh Hefner, who earlier helped preserve the films Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce made for Universal, has contributed funds for the new project, but additional donations are requested by Ed Summer, editor of Dinosaur Interplanetary Gazette <<http://www.users.interport.net/~dinosaur>>. The address for Cinefex is Box 20027, Riverside, CA 92516; $8.50. And for those who might be in or near Rochester, N.Y., on Aug. 8, that's when the George Eastman House is planning a preview screening of the new version.
324. Aug 97 #1: The second issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has an excellent tribute to E. W. McDiarmid (who continues to work with the collection), and a look at hansoms, Canonical and otherwise. If you would like to be on the mailing list, write to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
325. Scott Monty has noted that Massachusetts police have recovered a blackened clump of beeswax bearing the crest of King Charles I, which was affixed to the first page of the charter of Massachusetts Bay Colony, which was stolen from the state archives in 1984; the page was recovered in 1985 but without the seal, which has now been reunited with the charter. It's unlikely that the police motto was "we may find something else of Charles the First," but it certainly turned out that way.
326. Steven T. Doyle, editor and publisher of The Sherlock Holmes Review, has decided to stop publishing the magazine at the end of 1997 (the two final issues will be mailed later this year). And the fifth Sherlock Holmes Review Symposium in Indianapolis on Nov. 21-23, will be the last one. But he'll continue his work with Mark Gagen on the Wessex Press and the Gasogene Press. Details are available from Steven at Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077 <73551.3254@compuserve.com>.
327. Jack Kerr notes a discovery at his local Royal Doulton outlet: a series of "Pigtails" from Holland Studio Craft Ltd. (King Street, Fenton, Stoke-on-Trent, Staffs. ST4 3EP, England) that includes a "Detective" with magnifying glass and deerstalker; item PT262, product code 31-580-195, $8.50.
328. Jack also has seen SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON, by Larry Millett, in paperback from Penguin ($9.95); a reprint of last year's pastiche (Sep 96 #5) in which Holmes and Watson travel to Minnesota to help save the Great North Railway from an insane arsonist.
329. "Triumphs and Misfortunes: The Life of Sherlock Holmes" (a new play by Lynn C. Miller) is scheduled at the Heller Theater (5328 South Wheeling, Tulsa, OK 74105) on Oct. 16-18 and 23-25, 1997; the box-office telephone number is 918-746-5065.
330. Doctor Who Magazine is running a continuing series on the influences on and sources for the television series, and Stephen Cartwright's discussion of the Sherlockian echoes (and there are a lot of them) is in issue #253 (July 2, 1997); I don't know if there's an American distributor, but the cover price is $5.99, and the magazine is published from Box 503, Leicester LE94 0AD, England.
331. LESTRADE AND THE DEVIL'S OWN, by M. J. Trow (London: Constable, 1996; 190 pp., £15.99), has a grabber of an opening: it's 1913, and Superintendent Sholto Lestrade is being sentenced to hang for the crime of murder. Well, of course he didn't do it, and the novel (Trow's sixteenth in his series about Lestrade) explains how he got to be framed, and exonerated, and the book has the all the broad humor that one expects from Trow.
332. Aug 97 #2: It's nice to think of it as a memorial to the late John Bennett Shaw (whose Baker Street Irregulars investiture was "The Hans Sloane of My Age"), but of course it's a memorial to the original Sir Hans Sloane: according to an article at hand from John Baesch, a statue of Sir Hans has been returned to Sloane Square in Chelsea.
333. The Conclave of Richmond Pipe Smokers will hold its 13th Annual Pipe Smokers' Exposition & Celebration at the Holiday Inn in Richmond, Va., on Oct. 10-12, and this year will honor Sherlock Holmes (as "the master pipe smoker and the world's foremost consulting detective"). There will be Sherlockian exhibits, and a "Mystery of the Pipe"; details are available from the Conclave (Box 34023, Richmond, VA 23234) <corpipemsk@aol.com>. And there is Sherlockian artwork on the cover of the exposition flier.
334. If you've been trying to order THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COOKBOOK (May 97 #1) and have gotten post-office rejects, the new address for Apple Cheeks Press is: Box 7134, Alexandria, VA 22307. The Alexandria post office seems unable to forward mail from the old box to the new box.
335. Ralph Cosham (who is playing Dr. Watson in the Interact Theatre Company's "The Case of the Purloined 'Patience'" at the Folger Elizabethan Theatre in Washington) also does a fine job reading five stories (Musg/RedH/Houn/Spec/Fina) on the new boxed set of six audiocassettes SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES. If it's not available in a local store (Richard Wein found it at Price Club /Costco for $19.95), it's offered by the publisher (Entertainment Software, 300 Madison Avenue South #203, Bainbridge Island, WA 98110) (800-688-7406) priced at $34.95.
336. And for those who've not yet seen the amusing show at the Folger, the run has been extended through Sept. 7, and the box-office telephone number is 703-760-9863; Sherlock Holmes is excellent as "the very model of a crack Victorian supersleuth," and The Red Circle had a fine time at our theater party this month.
337. Richard Wein also notes that the new catalog from What on East, 2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087 (800-945-2552) has a brew kit with the makings of a gallon of Sherlock Holmes Porter (G570); $15.95. The box design also is available on T-shirts (P300T) and sweatshirts (P300S) for $16.95 to $28.95.
338. The new issue of Scarlet Street has arrived, with David Stuart Davies' warm tribute to the late Ronald Howard, a series of fine articles about the film "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951), and the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. Scarlet Street published quarterly costs $20.00 a year; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.

339. A reminder: Hugh Leonard's play "The Mask of Moriarty" premiered in Dublin in 1985 with Tom Baker as Holmes, and Paxton Whitehead starred in the play in Williamstown, Mass. in 1994. Whitehead will be doing the play again at the Globe Theater in San Diego from Sept. 14 to Oct. 25; the box-office address is 1363 Old Globe Way, San Diego, CA 92101 (619-239-2255).
340. Aug 97 #3: The seventh issue of The Shosho-in Bulletin has arrived from The Men with the Twisted Konjo, with 200 pages (in English) of articles, poetry, pastiches, and illustrations by contributors from Japan and nine other countries (one of the new contributors is Margarline Lau, from Hong Kong, with translations of prefaces in Chinese editions of the Canon published in 1903 and 1916). Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes are the editors, and the cost is $12.00 postpaid (to U.S. or Canada) from Mel Hughes, 2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32240; and £5.50 postpaid (to Britain and Europe) from John Hall, 20 Drury Avenue, Horsforth, Leeds, West Yorkshire, LS18 4BR, England; please send checks in U.S. dollars to Mel, or checks in sterling to John (or currency from any country).
341. Carl Heifetz reports that Ben Wood (Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222) offers a new sales-list of his interesting Sherlockiana (a self-addressed stamped envelope would be welcome); the list also is available by e-mail from Carl <microdoc@gte.net>.
342. Raymond Jackson died on July 27. He was the London Evening Standard's political cartoonist for more than 30 years (signing his cartoons "Jak"). In 1968 he caricatured Sir Paul Gore-Booth, then highest-ranking civil servant in the Foreign Office, when The Sherlock Holmes Society made its first pilgrimage to Switzerland, and Sir Paul, dressed as Holmes, was photographed wrestling with Moriarty at the edge of the Reichenbach, and made headlines in most British (and many other) newspapers.
343. Aug 97 #4: Bill Dorn's A SHERLOCK HOLMES CALENDAR FOR 1998 is illustrated with varied Canonical artwork, and relies primarily on Ernest B. Zeisler's dates. $8.95 postpaid (or $9.45 to Canada, $11.45 elsewhere), from William S. Dorn, 2120 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210. Bill also offers an illustrated sales list of Sherlockian note cards and Christmas cards in color and in black-and-white.
344. Mark Alberstat's 1988 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US $12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
345. The poster for the "Images of Sherlock Holmes" exhibition at the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library is handsome indeed, showing (in full color) Sidney Paget's artwork for "The Three Students" ("with his neck craned, he looked into the room"), and it's a fine opportunity indeed to see how much better the originals are than the illustrations in the Strand. The poster is available for CA$15.00 to Canada, or US$15.00 to other countries, mailed unfolded, and you can send your orders to Sarah Visser, Communications and Development Department, Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada; checks payable to the MTRL, please.
346. The July-Aug. 1997 issue of the Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library News has a one-page story on the exhibit, and on the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection (with a nice photograph of ACD and his family at a picnic in Canada in 1923). If you'd like your own copy of the newsletter (free), write to Victoria Gill <vgill@gwmail.mtrl.toronto.on.ca> or at the MTRL address above.
347. Audio Editions Books on Cassette, Box 6930, Auburn, CA 95604 (800-231-4261) <info@audioeditions.com> offers Ralph Cosham's SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES (Aug 97 #2) at $34.95; three two-cassette sets (four shows each) from the Merrison BBC series "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" at $16.99 each; six four-cassette gift sets (eight shows each) from the Rathbone/Bruce radio series at $25.00 each; and 16 volumes of the Conway/Bruce radio series at $9.95 each. And lots of non-Sherlockian material as well.
348. A videotaper alert: the Fox television series "The X-Files" is in syndication on fX cable now, so you'll have a chance at the episode "Fire" due to air on Sept. 3 ("Mulder must overcome his fear of fire to take on the hotheaded pyrokinetic serial killer"); there are a few Sherlockian and Doylean allusions.
349. Reported by Paul Martin: a picture of the Sherlock Holmes Pub on the cover of CHEAP EATS IN LONDON, by Sandra A. Gustafson (San Francisco: Chronicle Books, 1997; 3rd edition; 240 pp., $12.95).
350. "Sherlockian Wisdom and Ventricular Ectopy" is the name of 48-minute educational documentary film released in 1987, according to the All-Movie Guide (a web-site where Warren Randall found it listed). "Learn the symptoms and diagnosis of ventricular ectopy. Treatment, particularly therapy, is also discussed." Does anyone know anything else about the film? The name and address of the company that made it? There's no record at the Copyright Office at the Library of Congress, nor in the Internet Movie Data Base.

351. Aug 97 #5: The Patchwork Playhouse (711 East Main Street, Lexington, SC 29072) has occasionally been performing original two-act Sherlockian plays since 1994; their current schedule includes "The Adventure of the Dancing Men" (Oct. 2-18, 1997) and "The Case of the Crooked Man" (Feb. 5-21, 1998), and their box-office telephone number is 803-951-2100.
352. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle appears as a character in the Dark Horse comic book TARZAN #13 ($2.95); it's a to-be-continued story, so he may turn up in the next installments.
353. Francine Kitts has noted the New School's fall 1997 catalog, which includes Irving Kamil's 13-session Thursday-morning course on "The World of Mystery Fiction" (starting Sept. 18), and Arthur Liebman's evening presentation on "Dracula: The Count's 100th Birthday" (on Sept. 19). Additional information is available from the New School, 66 West 12th Street, New York, NY 10011 (212-229-5690).
354. The board game 221B BAKER ST.: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TIME MACHINE, issued last year at $34.95 (Sep 96 #6), is now offered at $14.99 (item 50578) in the summer catalog from Smart Shopper, Box 64494, St. Paul, MN 55164 (800-736-3055).
355. Dave Scott is coordinating reservations for a murder-mystery dinner at Baskerville's Restaurant in The Grosvenor Hotel in Orlando on Sept. 27 -- and by special arrangement the group will be allowed inside the hotel's replica of the sitting room at 221B Baker Street. Details are available from Dave (Box 463, De Land, FL 32721) (904-740-9559) <davescot@ix.netcom.com>.
356. Phil Swiggum is selling his Holmesian collection, which includes the Crowborough edition of Conan Doyle's works, bound Strands, a run of Norwegian Explorers publications, and much more. His asking price is $6,000 and his address is 8500 Parrish Avenue, Otsego, MN 55330.
357. The Goose Club of the Alpha Inn, The Tigers of San Pedro, other local Sherlockian societies will present "HolmesWest 97: Three Days with the Master" at the Occidental College Library in Los Angeles on Sept. 26-28. Details are available from John Farrell, 25314 Woodward Avenue, Lomita, CA 90717 (818-703-8708) <holmeswest@bigfoot.com>.
358. "Back in my younger days, it kept me out of some speeding tickets," said a 70-year-old retired businessman in Marion, Ill. "They would say, 'I can't give a ticket to Sherlock Holmes.'" And that is indeed his name, according to a story in the Decatur Herald and Review (July 27), kindly forwarded by David M. Rush.
359. THE CURSE OF THE BRONZE LAMP, by Carter Dickson [John Dickson Carr], has been reported in a reprint from Carroll & Graf ($4.95); the book is dedicated to Ellery Queen, with a cryptic reference to Mr. James Phillimore and his umbrella.

360. Forecast: THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME, Ben Macintyre's biography of Adam Worth (Dec 96 #1), published earlier in Britain (HarperCollins, £18,00), is due soon in the United States (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $24.00).

361. Aug 97 #6: There were many things that made the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" series such a great success, and one of the most important was careful preparation and attention to detail on the part of producer Michael Cox. Part of that preliminary work was the creation by Cox, associate producer Stuart Doughty, and researcher Nicky Cooney, of an 80-page detailed production guide, extracted from the Canon and issued as a stapled handbook to those who worked on the series. And now that background bible is available to those who would like to see their work, with a new foreword by Cox, in the Calabash Press' THE BAKER STREET FILE: A GUIDE TO THE APPEARANCE AND HABITS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DR. WATSON (105 pp., $18.70 postpaid); different prices to other countries, and by air; the publisher's address is Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <ashtree@mail.netshop.net> (credit card orders welcome).
362. Calabash also has published CANADIAN HOLMES: THE FIRST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, edited by Chris Redmond (306 pp., $42.70 postpaid); Trevor Raymond recalls in his afterword that the first constitution of the Bootmakers of Toronto stated that "The purpose of this Society shall be to keep Sherlock Holmes alive and well in Canada, and to assist police in locating missing boots and other footwear," and the Bootmakers have done that (well, part of that) splendidly in the journal Canadian Holmes, as this anthology demonstrates.
363. Also available from Calabash: CANONICAL QUIZZES FROM THE BOOTBOX, compiled by Dave Sanders and Brian Gibson and edited by Barbara Roden, with a selection of quizzes and puzzles from meetings of The Bootmakers of Toronto (80 pp., $9.00 postpaid).
364. Brad Hicks is holding a mail-auction of nearly 300 books and journals from his Sherlockian collection; the deadline for bids is Nov. 1, and a detailed list is available from Brad: (5349 Amesbury Drive #2515, Dallas, TX 75206) (972-718-5764) <bhicks@gte.net>.
365. The Wigmore Street Post Office is an electronic journal published on the Prodigy computer service, but some of the best of its material can be found in its ink-on-paper version; the summer 1997 issue has 40 pages, and costs $4.50 postpaid. Or you can subscribe: $6.50 (two issues) from Mel Hughes, 2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32246.
366. The BBC Radio/BDD Audio cassettes of the Merrison/Williams radio series are nicely done, and it's fascinating to see what Bert Coules and others have done to adapt the stories for radio; there are three volumes of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (each with four stories) in the shops ($16.99 each).
367. It happened ten years ago, but the memory lingers, and you can still read all about the event: Al and Julie Rosenblatt's fine 20-page souvenir menu for "An Evening in Scarlet" at the Culinary Institute of America on May 16, 1987, handsomely devised, designed, and produced, with many illustrations, annotations, and explanations, is still available; $19.00 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).

368. Sep 97 #1: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist at 7:00 pm on Oct. 21 at The Chart House, 340 West South Temple, in Salt Lake City; if you would like to join us for the event, please let us know. The local contact is Ronald B. De Waal, 638 Twelfth Avenue, Salt Lake City, UT 84103 (801-533-0523); or you can tell me (see the end of the newsletter). From Oct. 19 I'll be staying at the Peery Hotel (801-521-4300).
369. Al and Julie Rosenblatt would greatly appreciate hearing from whoever it was in California who earlier this year acquired Richard W. Clarke's papers concerning The Five Orange Pips of Westchester County; their address is 300 Freedom Road, Pleasant Valley, NY 12569 <jurosenblatt@vassar.edu>.
370. The fourth issue of The Holmes & Watson Report has arrived, and it likely that rumors that Brad Keefauver writes all of the articles under pseudonyms are unfounded: the current issue has Jim Vogelsang's tale of the lengths to which a collector will go to add to his collection, Rosemary Michaud's report on how much fun librarians have when they escape from their libraries, and other odd ends. $14.00 a year (six issues) from Brad Keefauver, 4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.
371. James Cuthbertson died in August. He was a major in the Royal Army Service Corps on D-Day, and won a Military Cross for organizing and leading convoys carrying supplies under fire supporting the 6th Airborne Division. He was a banker before the war, and returned to the profession afterward, retiring in 1979. He was a member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and in 1989 wrote and published A STUDY IN BANKING: AN INVESTIGATION OF THE RELATIONSHIP OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES WITH HIS BANK, discussing the detective's dealings with the Hampshire Banking Company from 1871 until 1914 (by which time it had been renamed the Capital and Counties Bank).
372. Tom Huntington's article in the Sept. issue of Smithsonian magazine on "The Man Who Believed in Fairies" discusses Conan Doyle's campaign on behalf of spiritualism, and includes a photograph from the soon-to-be-released film "Fairytale: A True Story" showing Peter O'Toole as Sir Arthur.
373. The Sept. issue of Smithsonian also has Michael Kernan's fine article about the National Museum of Natural History's new Janet Annenberg Hooker Hall of Geology, Gems and Minerals, with a photograph (on p. 60) of the spectacular 75-carat Hooker Emerald, which has a Sherlockian connection, via a previous owner, Abdul-Hamid II (also known as Abdul the Damned): it was on the night of Apr. 23, 1909, his last as Sultan of the Ottoman Empire (he was deposed the next day), that his Chamberlain read to him a translation of the latest Sherlock Holmes story from The Strand Magazine.
374. The Basic Program of Liberal Education for Adults at the University of Chicago has scheduled a "Sherlock Holmes" weekend at the Alpine Valley Resort in East Troy, Wis., on Oct. 31-Nov. 2; the list of speakers includes Robert Mangler (Master of the Hounds of the Baskerville). Additional details are available from the Graham School of General Studies, 5835 Kimbark Avenue, Chicago, IL 60637 <bp@uchicago.edu> <www.cygneis.com/holmes>.

375. Sep 97 #2: One does indeed hear of Sherlock everywhere, and sometimes in strange ways. Tomoji Ohta noted that BBC radio's dramatization of "The Final Problem" has been "sampled" on the CD "Lionrock: An Instinct for Detection", and Bert Coules reported that "everyone concerned with the show was amazed" when they found that several tracks on the CD include extracts from the BBC shows, without acknowledgement, permission, or payment. "I believe that lawyers are now involved," Bert said. The double CD from BMG Entertainment International/Deconstruction Ltd. is distributed by Time Bomb Recordings ($16.99 in a shop here), and the box notes show a Frederic Dorr Steele portrait of Sherlock Holmes. "The brainchild of dj Justin Robertson, Lionrock is a blend of chaos and control. Equal parts techno and traditional rock."
376. There's a new edition of Robert Barr's THE TRIUMPHS OF EUGENE VALMONT (New York: Oxford University Press, 1997; 220 pp., $9.95), with an introduction by Stephen Knight and as a bonus, two of Barr's Sherlockian parodies: "The Adventures of Sherlaw Kombs" and "The Adventure of the Second Swag" (first published in The Idler in May 1892 and Dec. 1904, as by Luke Sharp).
377. Our new postal card shows a view of the Golden Gate and San Francisco, from a photograph by Carol Simowitz. But (alas) it is a view that "Hatty Doran, the only daughter of Aloysius Doran, Esq., of San Francisco, Cal., U.S.A." never saw (the bridge was decades after she left the Pacific slope).
378. The Northern Musgraves continue to offer excellent Sherlockian and Doylean scholarship in their annual Musgrave Monographs, and the most recent is SHERLOCK HOLMES, CONAN DOYLE, AND THE BRITISH EMPIRE, a 40-page pamphlet by Jeffrey Richards in which he examines the Empire of a hundred years ago, when it was celebrating Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee; £4.50 postpaid to the U.K. and Europe ($10.00 postpaid elsewhere) from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorkshire BD16 4DN, England (please make checks payable to The Northern Musgraves). The - Ritual (the society's semi-annual journal) continues to offer a fine mix of articles, essays, and reviews; the latest issue has 72 pages, and information on membership also is available from Anne Jordan.

379. "Wishbone" fans will welcome the news that there are new episodes due soon; unfortunately none of them are Sherlockian (there's always hope for a future season, of course); a one-hour version of "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" is being networked to PBS-TV stations on Oct. 15, and eight new 30-minute shows will air weekly beginning Oct. 19.
380. Leon Edel died on Sept. 5. Famous for his biographies of Henry James, he stressed the need to use psychological analysis in writing literary biography. In an essay on "The Art of Biography: The Figure Under the Carpet" in The New Republic (Feb. 10, 1979) he proposed that it is important to try to "glimpse the myths within and behind the individual," and to search for an individual's hidden dreams of himself, and then discover how they have been acted out . . . in a series of fantasy conversions or metamorphoses as in Stout and Conan Doyle." The essay was reprinted in Edel's STUFF OF SLEEP AND DREAMS: EXPERIMENTS IN LITERARY PSYCHOLOGY (1982).
381. Sep 97 #3: Richard Lancelyn Green (chairman of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London) notes in The Sherlock Holmes Journal (summer 1997) that it was in 1901 that the question "Should a Public Monument be Erected to Sherlock Holmes?" first appeared in print. G. K. Chesterton and Dorothy L. Sayers were among those who favored the project in later years, and now something is being done about it: plans call for a statue by sculptor John Doubleday to be in place outside the Baker Street Station in London by the millennium. The project will cost an estimated £100,000, and The Sherlock Holmes Statue Company Ltd. (which Nicholas Utechin reports is separate from the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, "though its board includes a number of familiar names") now welcomes donations; the treasurer is Elaine Hamill (16 Kirton Close, Chiswick, London W4 5VV, England).
382. The Holmes and Watson glass Christmas tree ornaments (Jul 97 #5) are available individually ($29.95 each) in the new catalog from What on Earth (2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087 (800-945-2552).
383. "A Grand Design: The Art of the Victoria and Albert Museum" opens at the Baltimore Museum of Art on Oct. 12, and it ought to be quite a show (it arrives in Boston in February, and then goes to Toronto, Houston, and San Francisco). Tickets for the show in Baltimore are marketed by Vista (888-262-4278 is the toll-free number) and cost $8.00 (or $6.00 for seniors), plus $2.00 for Vista (you can avoid the surcharge by buying tickets at the museum).
384. The movie "Fairytale: A True Story" (with Peter O'Toole as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Harvey Keitel as Harry Houdini) will be released in the U.S. on Oct. 24, rated PG (for "brief mild language"). The movie was released in Great Britain on Sept. 19 and is scheduled for release in Australia on Dec. 18. This is the film about the Cottingley fairies, and there's an official web-site at <www.fairytalemovie.com/>.
385. Sherlock Hemlock isn't seen as often as he used to be, but Jo Pitesky notes that he's in "The Mysterious Zero Cookie Case" in the Sept. issue of Sesame Street Magazine ($1.95); Box 55518, Boulder, CO 80328-5518
386. "Moll Flanders" (1996) was broadcast on Showtime cable on Sept. 26 (and it will repeat), starring Robin Wright as Moll, Stockard Channing as the evil madam who makes Moll's life miserable, and Morgan Freeman as Hibble (who doesn't appear in Daniel Defoe's book); it was Jeremy Brett's last film, in which he had one scene as the wealthy father of the artist with whom Moll falls in love.
387. The new catalog from Bits & Pieces, 1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297) offers four Sherlock Holmes Mystery Jigsaw Puzzles, two old (Mar 96 #3) and two new (the puzzle pictures help solve the crimes); $10.95 each (cheaper if you order more than one).
388. The three Chesterton societies in the United States and Canada have joined forces to publish the new magazine Gilbert! with coverage of all aspects of his writings. Membership in the American Chesterton Society costs $25.00 a year, including 10 issues of Gilbert! (only 5c more than the subscription price); 1377 Goodrich Avenue, Saint Paul, MN 55105.
389. Sep 97 #4: The winners of this year's Kennedy Center Honors include Charlton Heston and Bob Dylan. Heston began his acting career in 1941, and has played Marc Anthony, Buffalo Bill Cody, Michaelangelo, Andrew Jackson, General Charles Gordon, El Cid, King Henry VIII, Brigham Young, Cardinal Richelieu, John the Baptist, God -- and Sherlock Holmes (on stage and television, in "The Crucifer of Blood"). Dylan has been world-famous since the 1960s for songs such as "Blowin' in the Wind" and "Like a Rolling Stone". In May 1963 he was scheduled to sing "Talkin' John Birch Society Blues" on "The Ed Sullivan Show", but CBS-TV refused to allow the song on the air, and Dylan refused to perform. The song soon appeared on bootleg recordings, and it was released officially in 1991; one verse is: "Well I quit my job so I could work all alone,/ And I changed my name to Sherlock Holmes./ Found some clues in my detective bag;/ I discovered there was red stripes in the American flag." The awards will be presented at a dinner at the State Department on Dec. 6, followed by a White House reception and a tribute at the Kennedy Center on Dec. 7.
390. Information needed: this panel was the only Sherlockian bit in an issue of a BATMAN comic book published in 1996; Can anyone supply the issue number and date?
391. N. C. Wyeth was one of America's great illustrators: he studied with Howard Pyle, and there are many who grew up with and fondly remember his editions of TREASURE ISLAND, ROBIN HOOD, THE YEARLING, THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS, and other children's classics. He also illustrated some of Conan Doyle's stories, and you'll find a splendid fullcolor collection of his art (including two of his Doylean paintings) in Kate F. Jennings' N. C. WYETH (Secaucus: Book Sales, 1995; 48 pp., $6.98).
392. Bob Gellerstedt offers a helpful four-page index to Carl William Thiel's THE BASIC 100: AN ANNOTATED COLLECTOR'S GUIDE (Dec 96 #6); his address is 1035 Wedgewood Drive, Fayetteville, GA 30214, and the cost (postpaid) to North America is two 32c US stamps.
393. The contents of the latest issue of The Serpentine Muse include an interesting report by Nora Myers on "Our Future Sherlockians" (including the eighth-grade students she taught in Baltimore County). At the beginning of the class, she asked her students to write a paragraph to her what they already knew about Sherlock Holmes, and one young lady wrote, "The best thing about Sherlock Holmes are the sluts in the stories." Not until the end of the paragraph did Nora realized that the student had misspelled "sleuths". The Muse is published quarterly by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; $10.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog, 360 West 21st Street, New York, NY 10011.
394. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Purlained 'Patience'" was delightful (Aug 97 #2), and it's unfortunate that there are no current plans to revive or tour the show (nor was it videotaped). But at least you have a chance read the script, which is available for $30.00 (postpaid in the U.S.) from the Interact Theatre Company, 1221 Mottrom Drive, McLean, VA 22101.
395. Sep 97 #5: Plan ahead: Bill Dunning reports that the Fourth Biennial John Bennett Shaw Memorial Conference for Sherlockian Studies will be held at Santa Fe Community College on Sept. 25-27, 1998. Jon L. Lellenberg will be the keynote speaker, and Richard H. Miller will be the master of ceremonies. To be on the conference mailing list, you should write to Elizabeth Gutierrez, Santa Fe Community College, 6401 South Richards Avenue, Santa Fe, NM 87505 <egutierrez@santa-fe.cc.nm.us>.

396. Alderney has issued a set of stamps honoring the 150th anniversary of cricket (introduced by soldiers garrisoned there), and one stamp shows the great British cricketer W. G. Grace. Conan wrote an appreciation of Grace for The Times (Oct. 17, 1915), later revised and expanded for the Strand (July 1927), and he discussed Grace in "Some Recollections of Sport" in the Strand (Sept. 1909 and June 1924) and in MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES.
397. The fall issue of the Upton Tea Quarterly has many items for the pleasure of fanciers of fine tea, including their new "Baker Street Afternoon Blend" ("a bit of Lapsang Souchong is blended with Keemun and Darjeeling, yielding a mildly smoky tea"); prices range from $1.00 for a sample up to $36.30 for a kilogram. Upton Tea Imports, 231 South Street, Hopkinton, MA 01748 (800-234-8327).
398. Laurie R. King is doing a bit of building in Santa Cruz County, California, and applied for a building permit for a guest house, which was described by someone in the planning department as "a habitable accessory structure (no kitchen/bathroom) to include a bedroom, living room, with future kitchen and bathroom areas, on site with a single-family dwelling (retirement home for S. Holmes)." It would appear that someone in the planning department is an admirer of the Mary Russell series. And Laurie reports that A LETTER OF MARY is due in paperback in December, and that THE MOOR is due in cloth in January. Her next (non-series) book will be BIRTH OF THE NEW MOON, due in November 1998.
399. Olaf Maurer notes that Sena Jeter Naslund's pastiche SHERLOCK IN LOVE (Sep 93 #6) has been translated into German as SHERLOCK VERLIEBT (Hildesheim: Claasen Verlag, 1997; 256 pp., DM 32.00).
400. "Sherlock Holmes: The Changing Face of a Modern Hero" is the title of the Shadok-Fackenthal Library's exhibition "tracing the 110-year public life of the world's most famous private detective," and "Adventures in Criticism: Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes" is the title of a lecture by Ray Betzner scheduled at the Library on Oct. 15 (reception at 4:00 pm, and talk at 4:30 pm). The Library is at Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster, Penn.
401. If you have a copy of the first edition of John T. Lescroart's RASPUTIN'S REVENGE (New York: Donald I. Fine, 1987), you can check to see if you have the first issue, which has a jumbled paragraph two-thirds of the way down page 137 (starting "No, he said at last, as if to myself). Jerry Margolin recently met Lescroart, and was told that "only about 300 copies got out before they were recalled and a corrected page was tipped in." This is Lescroart's second novel about "Auguste Lupa" (the son of Sherlock Holmes).
402. Sep 97 #6: "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1937) has been issued on videocassette, at long last, by International Historic Films (Box 29035, Chicago, IL 60629; priced at $39.95 plus $6.00 shipping). The film stars Bruno Guttner as Holmes and Fritz Odemar as Watson; there is a report that a copy of the film was found in Hitler's private film library at Berchtesgaden in 1945. It's in German, and there are no subtitles, and the sound is not as good as it ought to be. But: film buffs may wish to wait a bit, since it is possible that a better videocassette may be available in a few months from Germany, where a print of the film was located recently.
403. Jennie Paton has asked me to report that she has arrived in Florida, but is not quite settled in yet, nor even close to unpacked or plugged in or wired up (so the video lending library is not yet up and running again), but you can write to her at P.O. Box 17197, Tampa, FL 33682-7197.
404. If you're planning trip to Hawaii: Ken Lanza has forwarded a report on the Honolulu Police Department's annual Sherlock Holmes Night, scheduled this year on Oct. 3 in the Hawaii Room at the Blaisdell Center, at 7:00 pm. It is "a lighthearted, interactive event" at which the public can learn what it takes to solve a crime by using "forensic science, interrogation techniques, and good old common sense and ingenuity, and have fun doing it."
405. Chuck Kovacic has created three new Sherlockian metal sculptures: Sherlock Holmes, William Gillette as Sherlock Holmes, and a Holmes/Moriarty headed walking stick. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope for his illustrated flier; Chuck's address is 14383-B Nordhoff Street, Panorama City, CA 91402.
406. Dave Galerstein, learning to use Windows 95, which comes with the Windows Encarta 96 Encyclopedia, notes that the encyclopedia entry for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle notes that "A Holmes cult arose and still flourishes, notable through clubs of devotees such as the Baker Street Irregulars."
407. The Greek Interpreters of East Lansing celebrated their 50th anniversary in 1995 by publishing a "trifling brochure" with highlights of the history of the scion; the 32-page pamphlet is available for $6.00 postpaid from Shari Conway, 4440 Beeman Road, Williamston, MI 48895.
408. John Tracey is selling his Sherlockian collection, and offers a sales-list (without prices, since he "will only consider fair offers for any of the titles"); his address is 10-1121 Bavlle Avenue, Ottawa, ON K1H 8P3, Canada <johntracey@pigeon.carleton.ca>.
409. Sotheby's auctioned a collection of film posters in London on Sept. 18, and the sale included (add 15% for the buyer's premium): a lobby card showing John Barrymore in "Sherlock Holmes" (1922) (£900), lobby cards of Bruce and Rathbone in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) (£450) and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) (£450), a half-sheet poster of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) (not sold at £650), and a three-sheet poster for the same film (not sold at £5,200); the three-sheet measures 81 by 41 in., and was described as the only one known to exist from the film.
410. Oct 97 #1: It's been the season for world premieres of movies about fairies, it would seem: "Photographing Fairies" (based on Steve Szilagyi's book, with Edward Hardwicke as Conan Doyle) premiered at the Edinburgh Film Festival on Aug. 13, and "FairyTale: A True Story" (starring Peter O'Toole as Conan Doyle) premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival on Sept. 11. According to a press release, Szilagyi's book has been translated into Japanese, German, Danish, French, and Hebrew); there's no word yet on when this film will be released in the United States (both films have been released in the United Kingdom).
411. Many of you will have seen "FairyTale: A True Story" by now (it opened in the U.S. on Oct. 24), and if you haven't, I recommend it: it's a delightful film, warm and sympathetic, about people who wanted to believe, and about two young girls and what they did and didn't do. It's well-directed (by Charles Sturridge), and well-acted, and the story is interesting. There will be no spoilers here, but the girls did fake the photographs (as they admitted, years later), and there really were fairies (you'll see them, and they're fun, too). Harvey Keitel is fine indeed as Harry Houdini (who was not involved the real Cottingley story, but is important to the story in the film), and Bill Nighy is excellent as the theosophist Edward Gardner, and Peter O'Toole does well as Conan Doyle. And when you see the film, pay attention to the opening scenes: you'll see Lara Morgan as Jean Conan Doyle in 1917, with her brothers and father, in London to see Houdini perform his upside-down escape from a straitjacket.
412. If you want to know what Conan Doyle had to say about the photographs, and about the girls, Priscilla Juvelis, 1166 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 01238 (617-497-7570) <pjbooks@tiac.net>, is offering two copies of the first edition of his THE COMING OF THE FAIRIES (1922), one inscribed by the author ($2,500) and the other unsigned ($350).
413. Brad Keefauver notes that Playmates has some "FairyTale: A True Story" tie-ins in toy stores: "The Fairies of Cottingley Glen" (about 6" tall, $7.99 each, with leaf stands, mirror, and comb). There are six of them in "The Fairy Collection" and four in "The Royal Fairy Collection".
414. Andrew Cahan offers a set of first British editions of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES that have an interesting association: both volumes have been signed by Frederic Dannay as "Barnaby Ross" and as "Ellery Queen"; the cost is $2,600, and details are available Cahan (3000 Blueberry Lane, Chapel Hill, NC 27516) <acahan@cahanbooks.com> <www.cahanbooks.com>.

415. West-coast Sherlockians were able to see Paxton Whitehead in Hugh Leonard's play "The Mask of Moriarty" at the Globe Theater in San Diego, and it won't be too long before he'll be starring in the play on the east coast: it will be performed at the Paper Mill Playhouse in Millburn, N.J., Jan. 7 to Feb. 15. Millburn is a 35-minute drive from New York City, and the box-office address is Brookside Drive, Millburn, NJ 07041 (973-376-4343) (973-379-3636 ext 2438 for groups of 20 or more). Perhaps someone will set up a theater party for the evening of Jan. 10, after the BSI cocktail party . . .

416. Oct 97 #2: Eve Titus is selling many of her own books and newspaper and magazine articles and letters related to Basil of Baker Street and other Sherlockian matters, and you can have a copy of her sales-list in return for a self-addressed stamped envelope. Her address is 17094 Collins Avenue #A-405, Sunny Isles, FL 33160.
417. A mail-order catalog from Hammacher Schlemmer (9180 Le Saint Drive, Fairfield, OH 45014-5475) (800-543-3366) offers an "English locking tantalus" with two crystal decanters ($279.95), a "traditional English deerstalker hat" ($69.95), and a 6.5 ft. "Baskerville bear" in Sherlockian costume ($1,500). The miniature 3-foot version of the bear costs only $299.95.
418. Mark Stickney is asking $1,500 for his original onesheet poster (28" x 39") for "Sherlock Holmes Contra Moriarty" (the Spanish title for the 1939 "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes"); the linen-backed poster has stone-lithograph artwork by Soligo with a large portrait of Basil Rathbone and a smaller one of Ida Lupino. His address is 9636 Orion Drive, Windsor, CA 95492-8288 (707-573-2979) <upship@msn.com>.
419. Owen Phairis bought many books from Gaslight's stock when Jack Tracy's effects were auctioned in Las Vegas recently, and now offers them for sale; many are Gaslight's own titles, with some from other publishers. A sales-list is available; Box 3400, Big Bear Lake, CA 92315.
420. Doc Watson was one of those selected this year to receive a National Medal of Arts (one of the country's highest honors for cultural achievement); recipients of the National Medals of Arts and National Humanities Medals were honored at a White House presentation and dinner on Sept. 29. Doc Watson is the renowned guitarist and bluegrass virtuoso, who has never recorded a Sherlockian piece, but his record "Elementary Doctor Watson!" was issued in 1972. Bill Clinton said at the presentation ceremony that "There may not be a serious, committed baby boomer alive who didn't at some point in his or her youth try to spend a few minutes at least trying to learn to pick a guitar like Doc Watson," adding that "he still lives on the land his great-great-granddaddy homesteaded, and he's still making that old-time mountain music."
421. Dave Galerstein notes that the current mail-order catalog from The Daily Planet (Box 64411, Saint Paul, MN 55164) (800-324-5950) offers a Sherlockian chess set ($484), a deerstalker ($32), a London bobby's whistle ($14), a Sherlockian walking stick ($72), and a Manchester police helmet ($198).
422. John Ruyle has fired a two-gun salute from the deck of the Pequod: BEES IN MY BONNET contains 20 of his Sherlockian verses, and THE ADVENTURE OF THE ABBEY MANGE is the latest in the Turlock Loams saga, and both volumes are as usual hand-set and hand-printed. $20.00 each postpaid in wrappers, or $40.00 each in cloth; 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
423. Oct 97 #3: The fifth Sherlock Holmes Review Symposium in Indianapolis on Nov. 21-23 is nearing the deadline for reservations (Nov. 10); the speakers will include Michael Atkinson, Roy Pilot, Philip Shreffler, and Pat Ward, and there will be a chance to attend a local production of "The Crucifer of Blood" (additional information is available from Steven T. Doyle, Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077) <73551.3254@compuserve.com>.
424. The Metropolitan Toronto Reference Library News (Sept. 1997) has a one-page story on its "Images of Sherlock Holmes" exhibit in June; if you'd like a free copy of the newsletter, contact Victoria Gill, MTRL, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada <vgill@gwmail.mtrl.toronto.on.ca>.
425. FORTY YEARS OF THE SHERLOCK HOLMES is an attractive 16-page pamphlet, with text by Roger Johnson and Jean Upton, and artwork by Jean-Pierre Cagnat, available from The Sherlock Holmes Public House & Restaurant; £3.45 postpaid to the U.K. (£3.95 postpaid to the U.S.), from The Sherlock Holmes, 10-11 Northumberland Street, London WC2N 5DA, England <sherlock@popmail.dircon.co.uk> <www.users.dircon.co.uk/~sherlock/>. The pub also offers a sales-list of Sherlockian memorabilia, and credit-card orders are welcome.
426. Boris Karloff was honored twice in our new set of "Classic Movie Monsters" stamps (the other actors honored were Bela Lugosi, Lon Chaney, and Lon Chaney, Jr.). Karloff played Mr. Mycroft in "The Sting of Death" (adapted by Alvin Sapinsley from H. F. Heard's novel A TASTE FOR HONEY) on ABC-TV's "The Elgin Hour" on Feb. 22, 1955 (in an era before fans were quick to tape off-the-air, alas).
427. Tim Heath's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure at Sir Arthur Sullivan's" was performed on tour in Britain in 1996, with Miles Richardson as Holmes (he is the son of Ian Richardson, and as far as I know this still is the only father-and-son team to have played the role). The play is imaginative and interesting (Holmes and Watson are invited to perform for a select audience at Sullivan's house, and there are some intriguing complications), and the 40-page script is now offered by Ian Henry Publications (20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England); £6.25 or $18.00 postpaid.
428. Robert G. Harris ("The Creeping Man") died on Sept. 25, 1997. A patent attorney who spent most of his career with the Ford Motor Co., he also was a firm link to the long-ago days when the Baker Street Irregulars met at the Murray Hill Hotel, and in 1946 was one of the founders of The Amateur Mendicant Society of Detroit. He was a witty and irreverent scholar, boasting of being a Board-Certified Curmudgeon, and received his BSI Investiture in 1952, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1984.
429. John McGowan reports that the WISHBONE: 1998 16-MONTH CALENDAR (Sept. 1997 through Dec. 1998) is now in bookstores ($9.95) with two Wishbone in Sherlockian costume in the photographs for February ("The Slobbery Hound") and October 1998 ("A Dogged Expose"). The graphics-enabled can visit the Web at <www.wwwishbone.com/WWWishbone/MyFunStuff/Glossies/glossies.html> to see other Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian photographs of Wishbone.
430. Oct 97 #4: Tyke Niver has forwarded an article from the Hartford Courant, reporting on what's new at the Gillette Castle State Park in Hadlyme: $1 million spent on repairs in the past year, and plans to spend an additional $3 million on renovations over the next few years. The state also proposes to increase the admission prices, to $3.00 for ages 6 through 12 and $6.00 for ages 13 and up (300,410 tickets were sold last year). The Castle is William Gillette's home (built largely with profits from his play "Sherlock Holmes"), and it's a delightful place to visit.
431. Further to the report (Mar 97 #5) about the CD-ROM disk with the "Complete Works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" (including his novels, essays, short-story collections, histories, and much more), the latest news from John Thibeu is that the disk will be ready to ship in November, and it will have some graphics (such as the manuscript of the first chapter of THE WHITE COMPANY) and additional text material that includes an updated and expanded edition of THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (edited by Jon L. Lellenberg) and an extensive bibliography by Frank A. Young. $95.00 postpaid from Insight Engineering (Box 10785, Franconia, VA 22310); US dollar checks or money orders only, please. John (same address) <thibeu@erols.com> will be happy to answer questions.
432. "Sherlock Bones to the Rescue" is the headline on Rick Boling's article in Animals (Sept.-Oct. 1997) about John Keane, who's still in business helping people find lost pets. Among those he has helped is Jim Carrey, who lost a Jack Russell terrier just before "Ace Ventura, Pet Detective" was released; The article (at hand from Geoff Jeffery) has a photo of Keane with his dog Clouseau. If you need help, you can call Sherlock Bones at 800-942-6647 or visit his web site at <www.sherlockbones.com>.

433. Geoff also reports MAD ABOUT THE FIFTIES: THE BEST OF THE DECADE (Boston: Little, Brown, 1997; 288 pp., $19.95); contents include a reprint of Bill Elder's "Sherlock Shomes!" (from the Oct.-Nov. 1953 issue of Mad).
434. Further to the item (Sep 97 #6) about the availability of a videocassette of "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1937), Michael Ross reports that a print of the film has indeed been found in Germany, and it will soon be available on cassette, in German (without subtitles), in PAL (European) format only, and in an edition limited to 100 copies. Cost: DM 49.90 (add DM 3.00 shipping) to Germany; £19.00 (add £4.50 shipping) to Europe; $29.50 (add $9.00 shipping to the rest of the world. Shipping is the same for one to four copies, so you'll save a bit on multiple orders. Prepayment required (sterling and dollar checks should be made payable to Anke van Hasenhorst), and Michael's e-mail address is <baskerville-buecher@bigfoot.de> or URL <www.sis-online.com/cgi-com/cgi-local/hp/Baskerville>; his postal address is: Bendheide 65, D-47906 Kempen, Germany.
435. "The Mis-Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" was a 30-minute radio series that parodied old-time radio, produced by Joe Bevilacqua and broadcast by WBAIFM (New York) in the early 1980s (Oct 85 #3); there were ten episodes, and if you're really electronically enabled you can hear RealAudio excerpts at <www.cybergraphix-anim.com/Comedy-O-Rama/holmes.htm>. All ten episodes are available on cassettes $9.00 each postpaid, or $75.00 for all ten); 10749 Lawler Street, Unit 2, Los Angeles, CA 90034 <comedyorama@ibm.net>.
436. Oct 97 #5: Those who have lamented that a trip to Hyde Park, N.Y., is too far to travel for a good meal surely will welcome the news that the Culinary Institute of America now has a western branch in Saint Helena, Calif., where the Graystone Restaurant is located in the grand stone building that once housed the Christian Brothers winery. And Don Yates reports that that's where the next grand gourmet Sherlockian dinner will be held, on Mar. 4, 1998, with Fritz Sonnenschmidt on hand from Hyde Park to coordinate the evening and to supervise the menu. If you'd like more information about the event, send a #10 SASE to Donald A. Yates (555 Canon Park Drive, Saint Helena, CA 94574) <shsirene@aol.com>.
437. If you're one of those who read the articles in Playboy, the November issue has an article by Michael Angeli ("Inside the Extreme Machine") that gives due attention to Biker Sherlock's excellent performance in the X Games that were held in Mission Bay Park in San Diego in June. Biker Sherlock won two gold medals and one silver medal (more than anyone else in the Games); his specialty is the street luge, and he was one of the stars when ESPN broadcast the Games. His real name is Michael Sherlock.
438. The same issue of Playboy quotes Laura Lyons in the Playmate News: "People still ask me about Hef. He's a wonderful, caring man, and I think that's what people should know about him." That's not her real name, but it's the name she chose when she was Playmate of the Month in Feb. 1976 (and she was in the magazine again in Jan. 1977).
439. Plan well ahead: The Long Island Cave Dwellers have scheduled a three-day celebration on Aug. 6-8, 1999, to honor the 60th anniversary of Basil Rathbone's first portrayal of the great detective. "Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Shadow and Light" will focus on the celluloid Canon, and will be part of the Annual Film Festival at the Staller Fine Arts Center at the University at Stony Brook, Long Island, N.Y. If you would like to participate in the program, or be on the mailing list, contact Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720-1346) <whirdy@aol.com>.
440. Jessie Lilley, formerly with Scarlet Street, now is the managing editor and designer of the new magazine RetroVision; the premiere issue focuses on the making of "Jurassic Park", with other interesting articles about "1941" and "The Questor Tapes" and other films and television shows that launched series. $5.95 on newsstands; $7.95 postpaid (from 1036-A Park Boulevard #103, Massapequa Park, NY 11762).
441. The "Sherlock Holmes Festival" on Nov. 8 in Tryon, N.C., will be a tribute to William Gillette; they'll have a film festival, a radio-players performance ("The Red-Headed League"), and other events; additional information is available from the Polk County Travel & Tourism Council (800-440-7848).
442. THE BAKER STREET REGULARS is a delightful collection of cartoon stories by Sachiko Ueyama, who has a fine artistic hand and brings an attractive sense of humor to her versions of three of the Canonical tales; Richard Pugh and Masamichi Higurashi have supplied helpful English translations, and the 64-page booklet costs $10.00 or £5.00 postpaid (currency only, please, unless you order more than five copies and want to pay by check), from Masamichi Higurashi, 3-13-7-305 Nishikubo, Musashino, Tokyo 180, Japan.
443. Oct 97 #6: Douglas G. Greene has announced that he will publish Ed Hoch's THE RIPPER OF STORYVILLE AND OTHER BEN SNOW MYSTERIES in Nov.; Ben Snow is a 19th-century gunslinger-sleuth in the American west. $16.00 in wrappers, or $40.00 in cloth in a signed and limited edition that will include a separate pamphlet with a reprint of "Five Rings in Reno" (as by R. L. Stevens, from Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, July 1976, in which Conan Doyle accepts the invitation to referee the Johnson/Jeffries fight, and winds up doing some detecting). Crippen & Landru, Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 <crippenl@norfolk.infi.net> <www.avalon.net/~scott/cl/>; shipping extra, and credit-card orders welcome.
444. Rudy Faist reports that "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959, with Peter Cushing) now is available on laserdisc from MGM/UA Home Video ($39.98) in wide-screen format and with a black-and-white theatrical trailer.
445. This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will again be in full color, with another attractive watercolor by Douglas West, showing Holmes and Watson strolling in Baker Street on a wintry day. The cost is $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks made payable to the Society, please, and orders can be sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 3 Outram Road, Southsea, Hants. PO5 1QP, England.
446. Carolyn and Joel Senter offer the 1997-1998 issue of The Sherlockian Times (their 28-page catalog/journal/newsletter); Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. The catalog has lots of new (and interesting) Sherlockiana.
447. The Mysterious Bookshop has a new holiday catalog with three pages of new Sherlockiana (and additional rare and collectable material), and three addresses: 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840); 8763 Beverly Boulevard, West Hollywood, CA 90048 (800-821-9017); and 82 Marylebone High Street, London W1M 3DE, England. A separate (and larger) S'ian list also is available <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net> <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
448. John Farrell advises fanatics to check your local Sears stores for the new collectible underwear: red silk boxer shorts ($20.00) showing Mickey Mouse in Sherlockian costume.
449. The eastern New England societies will honor Basil Rathbone on Nov. 8 at the Algonquin Club in Boston, starting at 6:00 pm, with cocktails, dinner, and a commemorative program; there may still be room at the event, and you should contact Scott Monty (800-253-4417 ext 6981) <smonty@phcs.com>.
450. Further to the report (Sep 97 #5) of the two variants of the first edition of John T. Lescroart's RASPUTIN'S REVENGE (New York: Donald I. Fine, 1987), it's quite unlikely that only 300 copies of the misprinted first issue got out with the jumbled paragraph on page 137 (starting "No, he said at last, as if to myself"): I've had too many reports of misprinted copies from too many places. Nor was the description of the second issue correct: in fact it has the corrected pages 137-138 pasted onto the stub of the misprinted leaf. And there's at least one second-issue review copy.
451. Oct 97 #7: Sherlock Holmes' 144th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 9, with the traditional festivities in New York. But the festivities actually will begin on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Allen Mackler and Charlie Shields will lead participants in the

- annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with lunch at McSorley's; Allen's address is 324 2nd Street NE, Osseo, MN 55369 <psarasate@aol.com>, and from Jan. 7 he will be at the Iroquois Hotel (212-840-3080).
452. And there's something new on Thursday afternoon: The Morley-Montgomery Reception (by invitation only, honoring recipients of the award for the best paper published in The Baker Street Journal each year, and recent contributors to the BSJ). This will be followed by The BSI Distinguished Speaker Lecture at 6:15 pm at the Penn Club at 30 West 44th Street; the speaker will be Sherlockian author Nicholas Meyer ($10.00; seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early; details below). Then there's time for supper and theater, or perhaps the Aunt Clara-Sing Along (off-hand, off-the-wall, and largely off-key) begins at 8:00 pm at O'Lunney's Pub at 204 West 43rd Street; John Farrell reports that reservations are not required.
453. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00, in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the Algonquin provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend ($15.00; details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $35.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler's open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) is on Friday, from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; it is possible that Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
454. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at 24 Fifth Avenue (at 9th Street), and The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will convene for drinks, dinner, and entertainment at 6:30 pm at La Belle Epoque at 827 Broadway (at 12th Street); $43.00 (Maribeau Briggs, 46 East 29th Street #2-R, New York, NY 10016). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
455. On Saturday a posse of purveyors will offer a wide variety of Sherlockiana in a spacious room at the Princeton Club at 15 West 43rd Street, from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; information about vendor tables is available from Donald B. Izban, 213 Ivy Court, Streamwood, IL 60107 (630-483-3497). The BSI annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the cost is $35.00 (details below) or $45.00 at the door.
456. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for rooms (single or double) at $139.00 a night (Wednesday through Saturday); this is the total cost, because no tax is due on reservations made through the BSI. Other charges (such as room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians (details below).
457. Oct 97 #8: And here are the details: you should request a reservation form for the BSI events (including the Thursday lecture, the Martha Hudson breakfast, and the Saturday reception), and for rooms at the Hotel Algonquin, from Michael F. Whelan, Box 2189, Easton, MD 21601. The forms will be mailed to you by mid-November.
458. For those who hope to save money on hotel rooms, the pickings are slimmer this time round (the rates at the Iroquois, for example, now are $125 (single) $135 (double), and that's before the non-optional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. A few less-expensive alternatives: Portland Square (132 West 47th St.): $80 (single) $105 (double) (212-382-0600); Pickwick Arms (230 East 51st St.): $85 (single) $105 (double) (800-742-5945). You should confirm the rates, and (if you arriving on Thursday) make sure that the weekend rates include Thursday.
459. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without any return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 2189, Easton, MD 21601; the checks will be forwarded unopened and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.
460. Geoff Jeffery reports that the new catalog from the Britannia Collection (Box 64413, St. Paul, MN 55164 (800-778-7007) offers a Comoy's of London Sherlock Holmes walking stick ($165.00), a pair of Holmes and Watson bookend ($85.00), and the Town & Country Companion bloodhound in Sherlockian costume ($59.95), and other Sherlockiana.
461. Russ Geoffrey plans to sell his Sherlockian collection (including some nice pipes): to find out if he has anything you might want, call him at 617-753 4343 (8-4 EST) or leave a message for him at 401-245-6452.
462. Luci Zahray notes that Expressions from Potpourri still offers the Limoges porcelain deerstalker, 2.5 in. long, with a magnifying-glass clasp and an even smaller pipe (Oct 96 #2). Item 172886, $225.00; their address is 120 North Meadows Road, Medfield, MA 02052 (800-338-2699).
463. Vinnie Brosnan (Sherlock in L.A., 1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056) has a new catalog, with almost 850 items of Sherlockiana, many from the collection of Cecil Ryder, and a nice article by Deborah Benson, about her father Ben Abramson and the early days of the BSJ and the BSI (Christopher Morley was her godfather).
464. Jack Earley's expressionistic portraits include one of Sherlock Holmes, and he offers the painting itself as well as photographic posters. You can ask for a copy of his illustrated flier (5881 Mindy Drive, Indian Springs, OH 45011) <jlearley@aol.com>, or view the painting at <www.earleyart.com>.
465. Nov 97 #1: The exhibit "A Grand Design: The Art of the Victoria and Albert Museum" at the Baltimore Museum of Art is delightful, despite having very little that is directly Sherlockian other than Landseer's painting "Lion: A Newfoundland Dog" and the Lucretia Borgia Mirror (unfortunately without any black pearls). But there are many other interesting things to see (especially in the room devoted to "The Idea of 'Englishness'").
466. The Crystal Palace Exhibition was open from May 1 to Oct. 11, 1851, and had 6,039,193 visitors in less than six months (at a time when the railroad was the only convenient mass transit); the building was taken down and rebuilt in Sydenham (southeast of London), and was open from 1854 until it burned in 1936. The exhibition led to the founding of the South Kensington Museum (which opened in 1857), and that's where Holmes and Watson might have seen such things as the full-scale plaster cast of Michelangelo's "David" (represented in the show here by a large photograph and the full-scale fig leaf that was added to the statue when Queen Victoria visited the museum). The practice was continued to avoid offending later royal ladies, and was last used for a visit by Queen Mary. The museum was renamed by Queen Victoria at her last official function, and its focus on the decorative arts continues (you'll also see a pair of Doc Martens "Air Wair" vegetarian shoes).
467. It will close in Baltimore on Jan. 18, and then travel to Boston, Toronto, Houston, and San Francisco; tickets for the show in Baltimore are marketed by Vista (888-262-4278 is the toll-free number) and cost $8.00 (or $6.00 for seniors), plus $2.00 for Vista (you can avoid the surcharge by buying tickets at the museum).
468. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has arrived, with David Stuart Davies' discussion of BBC Radio's Merrison-Williams series (only "The Hound of the Baskervilles" remains to be done to complete the Canon, for the first time ever, with the same actors as Holmes and Watson). And there's a photograph of Jeremy Brett as Dracula (on stage in San Francisco in 1978), as well as the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. Scarlet Street is published quarterly and costs $20.00 a year; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.

469. "The Lost World: Jurassic Park" (1997) was issued this month on videocassette; that's the Steven Spielberg film, of course, in two versions (one is letter-boxed). Available in video shops everywhere, one assumes, and from Movies Unlimited (3015 Darnell Road, Philadelphia, PA 19154) (800-466-8437) for $19.99.
470. It has been quite a while since I mentioned the Dangling Prussian Amateur Press Association (Apr 93 #4). It's an essentially Sherlockian gathering place (the Dangling Prussian being an extremely peculiar pub with some extremely peculiar patrons), and there are a few vacancies. The rules of an APA are simple: contributors write something every two months (at least two pages would be nice) and send copies to part-time bartender Brad A. Keefauer, and he sorts them out and sends them back; you can write fiction about events at the pub, or non-fiction, and those who don't contribute don't get the mailing. Additional information, and perhaps a sample, are available from Brad at 4009 Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.

471. Nov 97 #2: "When I first came up to London I had rooms in Montague Street, just round the corner from the British Museum," Sherlock Holmes told Watson (in "The Musgrave Ritual"), "and there I waited, filling in my too abundant leisure time by studying all those branches of science which might make me more efficient." The British Museum's Round Reading Room is where he did that studying; it opened 140 years ago, and it was officially closed on Oct. 25. The new British Library, near St. Pancras Station, will have its own humanities reading room.
472. Our new set of "Classic Movie Monsters" stamps honored Boris Karloff twice, and Bela Lugosi once. "What do we know about vampires?" asked Sherlock Holmes; we seem to know a lot now, exactly a hundred years since Bram Stoker's DRACULA appeared in print. The centenary was celebrated with a wonderful exhibit at the Rosenbach Museum & Library in Philadelphia that included Stoker's notes for the novel, and a typescript (it would appear that there never was a manuscript), which were displayed together for the first time ever. The exhibition catalog quoted from a letter that Conan Doyle wrote to Stoker in 1897, saying that the novel "is the very best story of *diablerie* which I have read for many years. It is really wonderful how with so much exciting interest over so long a book there is never an anticlimax."
473. William Safire's column "On Language" in the N.Y. Times Magazine is always interesting, and on Nov. 2 he discussed the word "presentism" (first used in print in 1950): it's a word that should be of more than passing interest to Sherlockians who examine and comment on the attitudes and customs seen in the Canonical world of Sherlock Holmes. Safire quotes from a recent article by Prof. Annette Gordon-Reed of the New York Law School: presentism is "when a historian sees events in the past through the prism of presentday standards. For example, Thomas Jefferson is often judged harshly as a sexist even though the notion of complete equality between the sexes was almost unthinkable in his era." Gordon-Reed calls it the "why wasn't Jefferson like Alan Alda" question.
474. And Sherlockians who yearn for the long-ago Victorian and Edwardian era we see in the Canon may be amused by Safire's reminder of the title of a 1978 book by Simone Signoret: "Nostalgia Isn't What It Used to Be."
475. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES VICTORIAN COOKBOOK: FAVOURITE RECIPES OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE & DR. WATSON, by William Bonnell (Toronto: Macmillan Canada, 1997; 196 pp., CA $24.95), offers an interesting look at Victorian cookery, with accompany discussion of the its history. The focus is more on British than on Canonical food, and it sounds tasty indeed.
476. The new catalog from femmes fatales has arrived, nicely timed for Christmas shopping, with some intriguing new Sherlockiana, including a S'ian candle snuffer ($9.95), a S'ian P.I. kitten ($18.95), an a S'ian flip-top thimble ($29.95); Box 4457, Lakewood, CA 90712) (800-596-3323) <byteocrime@aol.com> <<http://register.com/femfatal>>. Readers of this newsletter qualify for a 10% discount (the magic word is "Scuttlebutt") and news of an item not in the catalog: an inexpensive miniature edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES with a removable jacket ($7.95).
477. Nov 97 #3: Francine Kitts notes that the new catalog from Worldwide Games offers the 221B BAKER STREET: THE TIME MACHINE board game for $29.95, the WEST END ADVENTURES GAME discounted at $19.95, and the QUEEN'S PARK AFFAIR SUPPLEMENT discounted at $14.95 (the latter two games are from the old Sleuth Publications SHERLOCK HOLMES CONSULTING DETECTIVE); Box 517, Colchester, CT 06415) (800-888-0987) <www.worldwidegames.com>.
478. Willis G. Frick has moved his Sherlocktron home pages to a new web-site at <<http://members.home.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron/html>>. The other URL will work for a while, but you can change your bookmarks now. And there's a new URL for the electronic edition (the three most recent issues) of this newsletter at <<http://members.home.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>>.
479. Slylock Fox appears in Sherlockian costume on all 90 cards (presumably reprinted from Bob Weber Jr.'s comic strip) in the box of SLYLOCK FOX BRAIN BOGGERS, issued in 1996 (Jan 97 #4) and available now from the Spilsbury Puzzle Co., Box 8922, Madison, WI 53708 (800-772-1760) <www.spilsbury.com>; $11.95.
480. What really happened to Birdy Edwards after he escaped from the Valley of Fear? Well, more precisely, what happened to the real Birdy Edwards? The real Birdy Edwards was the real Pinkerton agent James McParland, who helped bring an end to the Molly Maguires, and he continued his Pinkerton career, in the western United States, where he was once again involved in a battle with miners, and the International Workers of the World, after the assassination of a former governor of Idaho. That story is told in considerable detail in BIG TROUBLE: A MURDER IN A SMALL WESTERN TOWN SETS OFF A STRUGGLE FOR THE SOUL OF AMERICA, by J. Anthony Lukas (New York: Simon & Schuster, 1997; 875 pp., $32.50).
481. This is one of a hundred designs on a "Have a Night" poster spotted by Jim Suszynski. It's item HAN01, $7.00 postpaid from Mantis Designs, 513 Main Street, Stroudsburg, PA 18360 (800-567-3778) <<http://www.mantisd.com>>.
482. MR. DOYLE & DR. BELL: A VICTORIAN MYSTERY (Toronto: Viking/Penguin, 1997; 212 pp., CA $19.99) is a fiction-based-on-fact pastiche from Howard Engel, the Canadian author of the Benny Cooperman mysteries; Conan Doyle is still a medical student in Edinburgh, in 1879, involved with Joe Bell in solving a mystery full of echoes from the decades-later Oscar Slater case. It's a bit of a surprise to see both Robert Louis Stevenson and Bell addressing their friend "Conan" (Stevenson, as late as 1894, wrote letters to "My dear Conan Doyle").
483. Scott and Sherry Rose Bond are planning an 11-day tour "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" in London and the Sherlockian countryside next July; write to them to ask for details (519 East Allens Lane, Philadelphia, PA 19119).
484. The November issue of Smithsonian magazine has an interesting article about collectors of autographs and manuscripts, with a photograph of David Karpeles, who is one of the fortunate few who own more than one Sherlock Holmes manuscript, although that's not mentioned in the article (his Sherlockian manuscripts are "The Greek Interpreter" and "Thor Bridge").
485. Nov 97 #4: Michael Whelan is one of the very best artists in the world of fantasy and science fiction, and his THE ART OF MICHAEL WHELAN (New York: Bantam Books, 1993) offers a fine display of his work, including the full-color and previously-unpublished portraits of "Sherlock Hoka" and "Moriarty Hoka" that were painted in 1983 for a "Hoka" movie project based on the stories by Poul Anderson and Gordon R. Dickson. Alas, the movie was never produced, but their delightful short story "The Adventure of the Mislplaced Hound" was published in Universe Science Fiction (Dec. 1953) and in EARTHMAN'S BURDEN (New York: Gnome Press, 1957). THE ART OF MICHAEL WHELAN costs $55.00 postpaid from his company Glass Onion

- Graphics (Box 88, Brookfield, CT 06804) <productinfo@glassonion.com> <www.glassonion.com>. Note: the artist is not the "Wiggins" of The Baker Street Irregulars.
486. Beryl and Tom Cooper's SHERLOCKIAN JUMBLES offers 25 word puzzles in honor of the silver anniversary of The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse. The postpaid cost of the 30-page pamphlet is $4.00, from Joseph A. Coppola, 103 Kenny Street, Fayetteville, NY 13066.
487. The Sept. issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has fine articles about the Czarina Alexandra's volumes of the Canon, and (by Bill Vande Water) on some of the interesting material in the collections photographic archives. If you would like to be on their mailing list, write to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>).
488. And there's more "Wishbone" merchandise (spotted by Debbie Clark): a Wishbone Magnetic Dress-Up Kit that includes his Sherlockian costume; $12.95 in the current mail-order catalog of public-television tie-ins from the Store of Knowledge, Box 10, Long Beach, CA 90801 (800-241-5858).
489. If you missed Northstar's comic-book version of "The Speckled Band" (illustrated by Dan Day) in their series CHRONICLES OF CRIME & MYSTERY (Feb 92 #4), it has been reprinted as CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1997) from Avalon/American Comics Group ($2.95). SHERLOCK HOLMES: RETURN OF THE DEVIL (story by Martin Powell and illustrations by Seppo Makinen) from Adventure/Malibu Oct 92 #1 and Dec 92 #3) has been reprinted by Tome/Caliber as a one-shot comic book ($3.95).
490. "Sherlock Holmes: The Great Detective" aired on "Biography" on A&E cable on May 22, 1995, and it may well never repeat; if you missed it the first time out, it's available on videocassette ($19.98) from Adventures in Cassettes, 5353 Nathan Lane North, Plymouth, MN 55442-1978 (800-328-0108) <aic4radio@aol.com> <www.aic-radio.com>. Edward Hardwicke stars as Watson, at dinner with members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and reminiscing about his friend. The company also offers 48 Sherlockian radio-series audiocassettes starring Rathbone, Conway, and Gielgud.
491. David A. Banks and Anthony R. Santoro of Christopher Newport University will guide a "Gardens & Museum Trip to London" in June or July 1998; Prof. Santoro is a member of The Cremona Fiddlers, and will ensure that there is some Sherlockian content to the tour, and details are available from him (Smith Annex 164, Christopher Newport University, Newport News, VA 23606).

492. Nov 97 #5: Dame Jean Conan Doyle ("A Certain Gracious Lady") died on Nov. 18. She was known as "Billy" in her youth. and you can read about her in her father's delightful collection THREE OF THEM (1923). She joined the Auxiliary Territorial Service in 1938, and was commissioned in the WAAF in 1940, eventually serving as commandant of the Women's Royal Air Force; awarded an OBE in 1948, she received a DBE in 1963. When a revision of the U.S. copyright law in the 1970s allowed her to regain control of the copyright, she was able to do a great deal to protect her father's characters from misuse and abuse, and unlike her brothers she was amused by the humor with which Sherlockians pretend the world of the Canon is a real one. She received her Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1991, and she was indeed a gracious lady, both to those who had the good fortune to know her, and to countless others who enjoyed all her father's work.
493. Douglas Wilmer now has been impersonating Sherlock Holmes for more than 30 years, and doing it well, most recently for Penguin Audiobooks, in THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME 1. There are two cassettes, with four stories (Scan/RedH/Iden/Bosc), and Wilmer is splendid as Holmes, and as the other characters, male and female. £7.99 in Britain (0181-899-4036), and $16.95 in the United States (800-253-6476).
494. Boss McGinty's Bird Watchers (of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.) have scheduled a Sherlockian tour of England in mid-July; the contact is Cathy Lalko (Universal Odyssey, 1500 Quail Street #550, Newport Beach, CA 92660).
495. There's nothing directly Sherlockian in the exhibit "Cultural Curios: Literary and Historical Witnesses" at the Pierpont Morgan Library in New York, but it's a delightful display of the odd things that wind up in libraries, such as Sir Arthur Sullivan's first piece of clothing (his baby shirt) and a lock of hair from the tail of Gen. Lee's horse Traveller. The exhibit is curated by George Fletcher (of the BSI), and his informative labels are as enjoyable as the items shown (he's particularly proud of the inkpot used at the historic surrender at Appomattox). The address is 29 East 36th Street (212-685-0008), and the exhibit closes on Jan. 4.
496. The six-inch Sherlock Holmes Christmas-tree ornament issued last year (Oct 96 #4) by Bronner's Christmas Wonderland is still available in their mailorder catalog for #26.99 (item 18132); Box 176, Frankenmuth, MI 48734 (800-361-6736).
497. There's good news for electronically-enabled fans of Mary Russell: Rebecca J. Anderson has made available (with permission from Laurie R. King) an exclusive sneak-preview chapter from THE MOOR, the fourth book in the series, not due in the bookstores until December; <<http://www.golden.net/~rebeccaaj/docs/moor/htm>>.
498. THE AMERICAN FIRM CHALLENGES, by Edward S. Smith, Jr., offers more than 450 questions about individual stories, and about the Canon in general (in case your society has run out of questions for your quizzes); the 41-page pamphlet costs $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. and Canada ($12.00 elsewhere) from Ed (his address is Box 353, Williston Park, NY 11596). Ed also will be happy to tell you about The American Firm, which raises money to purchase largeprint editions of the Canon for adult homes and nursing homes.
499. Nov 97 #6: The Northern Musgraves are celebrating their tenth anniversary, and the tenth issue of their annual journal The Musgrave Papers has 142 pages of scholarship, spoofery, and art, both Sherlockian and Doylean. Fans of the Rathbone/Bruce radio series will appreciate David Stuart Davies' send-up tribute in his script "The Adventure of the Spotted Dick", and David Hammer offers an interesting look at "The Victorian Prospective". £7.00 (to the U.K.), £9.00 (to Europe), and $35.00 (elsewhere), from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. DB16 4DN, England (checks payable to the society, please). Information on the society and its other publications also is available, and the society's tenth birthday party will be held on Jan. 31, honoring Sherlock Holmes' knowledge of politics.
500. Nice news for anyone who has been seeking Michael B. Druxman's long out-ofprint book BASIL RATHBONE: HIS LIFE AND HIS FILMS (1975): he's now offering plastic-bound autographed photocopies (reduced to 93% and with some loss of quality in the photographs) of his own copy of the book; the cost is $30.00 plus shipping (information on shipping costs and payment methods is available from him); Box 8086, Calabasas, CA 91372 (fax 818-876-0069) <druxy@ix.netcom.com> <pw1.netcom.com/~druxy/basil/index.html>.
501. ALIEN VOICES: THE LOST WORLD (New York: Simon & Schuster Audio, 1997; two cassettes, $18.00) is a splendid dramatization, directed by Leonard Nimoy and starring Armin Shimerman as Challenger and Dwight Schultz as Malone in a script by Nat Segaloff and John de Lancie. It's an impressive production and shows just how much fun old-time radio was, and still is, although now on audiocassettes rather than the airwaves.
502. "FairyTale: A True Story" opened "wide" (on 1,058 screens) in the U.S., and had a modest box-office gross: $12.2 million after 24 days (just for comparison, "Starship Troopers" did $22.1 million its first weekend); there were good reviews in many newspapers, but the movie was promoted poorly by Paramount. Theatrical release in Britain isn't planned until February, but in the meantime the Royal Academy in London has an exhibit on "Victorian Fairy Painting" that includes work by Dadd, Doyle, and Dulac (that's Arthur Conan Doyle's uncle Richard Doyle); the exhibit closes on Feb. 8, and goes next to the University of Iowa and to Toronto.

503. It may well be that Viacom (the company that owns Paramount) will do better from product licensing than at the box office: in addition to the Playmates action figures (Jun 97 #3 and Oct 97 #1), three 2.5-in. pewter fairies from the film ($21.00 each) and a demin shirt ($44.00) are offered in a new catalog from the Red Rose Collection, 826 Burlway, Burlingame, CA 94010 (800-220-7673).
504. FATAL HABITS: AN APPRECIATION OF THE LITERARY SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Jeffery F. Dow, is the latest publication from The Pleasant Places of Florida, examining the literary aspects of the Canon, with examples of humor, irony, character, peripeteia, plot, atmosphere, and much more; the 120-page monograph costs $10.00 postpaid to any address ($14.00 overseas if airmail is wanted) from the author, 1737 Santa Anna Drive, Dunedin, FL 34698.
505. Dec 97 #1: There's more "FairyTale: A True Story" tie-in merchandise in the shops, including a CD-ROM disk "Activity Center" that offers a fine demonstration of just how much can be done with modern computers. It has puzzles and games, and things to explore, for children aged 7-11, and six clips from the film (one of which shows Houdini performing for five-year-old Jean Conan Doyle), and it's all nicely done indeed. The cost is $30.00, and there's a $10.00 rebate coupon inside the box; if you can't find it in your local shops, you can order from Knowledge Adventure (1311 Grand Central Avenue, Glendale, CA 91201) (800-542-4240) <sales@adventure.com> <www.adventure.com>.
506. Blackstone Audio (Box 969, Ashland, OR 97520) (800-729-2665) offers a 146-page catalog of unabridged books on cassette, that includes six Canonical titles read by Walter Covell and Frederick Davidson (3 to 8 cassettes each; $23.95 to $56.95); Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" read by Fred Williams (6 cassettes; $44.95); and T. S. Eliot reading his own poems, one of them being "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" (1 cassette, $11.95). The sets can also be rented, and used cassettes are available at a discount.
507. An update of "The Lost World" is planned for pay-per-view television, as part of an agreement between the Action Adventure Network and DIRECTV, according to a November press release spotted by Sean Catherall. John Landis and Leslie Belzberg (as St. Clare Entertainment) will produce a "first-run action-adventure" two-hour episode of "The Lost World" followed by one-hour episodes based on the pilot. Other projects include a contemporary version of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" set in Hong Kong, from Francis Ford Coppola's American Zoetrope, and a new version of "Gulliver's Travels" from Steven de Souza. The initial episodes are budgeted at an average of $3 million each, for broadcast next summer by Direct Ticket pay-per-view.
508. Plan ahead: Patrick Kirkby reports that Dr. Watson is expected to attend a "Netley Veterans Reunion and Display" on May 14, 1998, celebrating the centenary of Queen Victoria's visit to Netley Hospital; Dr. Watson is expected to be there to meet Her Majesty's nursing sisters. The event will be open to the public, and members of The Sherlock Holmes Society are likely to be on hand in costume; the Society's annual general meeting will held on May 12 in London, in case you want to attend both events. Patrick's address is 2 Colson Road, Winnal, Winchester, Hants. SO23 0EX, England.
509. Kingsley Amis' "Dr. Watson and the Darkwater Hall Mystery" was broadcast by BBC-1 in 1974 (before the VCR era, alas) with Edward Fox as Dr. Watson (who does the detecting); the story was published in Playboy (May 1978) and it's now included (read well by Michael Page) in the Playboy Audio two-cassette set THE DARKWATER HALL MYSTERY BY KINGSLEY AMIS AND OTHER STORIES ($16.95) from Brilliance Audio (Box 481, Grand Haven, MI 49417) (800-222-3225).
510. The pop/rock quartet "Fathouse" turned to the Canon to find a title for its first CD "A Pin, a Cork, and a Card" (but only the title is Sherlockian); if you can't find it in stores, you can order directly from the group (216 Freeman Street #2, Brookline, MA 02146 (888-328-4687) <virgilg@acs.bu.edu> <www.geocities.com/SunsetStrip/Palms/1549/fathouse.html>. $12.95 postpaid; checks only, please.
511. Dec 97 #2: Arthur Conan Doyle's "Waterloo" will be performed from Aug. 6 to Sept. 19 at the Shaw Festival in Ontario. Conan Doyle submitted the play to Henry Irving, who wisely bought the rights and performed it to great acclaim (although George Bernard Shaw had some mean things to say about it); it was the first of Conan Doyle's plays to be performed in North America (when Irving came to Montreal on tour). The season brochure won't be ready until January, but the box-office address is: Box 774, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont. L0S 1J0, Canada (800-267-4759).
512. The Filmoods Co. (Box 475, Scarsdale, NY 10583) specializes in Sherlockian adults-only stories, and offers a sales-list flier with information about its J. C. Charles pastiches published in recent years and still available.
513. Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720) offers two new (and colorful) lapel pins, one for The Long Island Cave Dwellers, and another for next spring's 221 Beach gathering in Spring Lake, N.J.; $8.00 each (plus $2.00 shipping per order).
514. SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES #1 is a new comic book from Moonstone, with two new stories by Joe Gentile and artwork by Rich Gulick and Mike Bianco. $2.95 in the shops; Moonstone's address is 582 Torrance Avenue, Calumet City, IL 60409 <http://members.aol.com/mnstone>.
515. Ralph Hall has spotted Parker C. Hinter's THE CASE OF THE SECRET MESSAGE (New York: Scholastic, Inc., 1994; 84 pp., $2.95); it's #1 in a "Clue Jr." in a series of children's puzzle-story books, and has Wendy White reporting briefly on Conan Doyle as the greatest mystery writer of all time.
516. Wanda Dow noted some new items of interest in DEMCO's fall 1997 catalog of library supplies: "Sherlock Bones" posters, book bags, buttons, certificates, and stickers (p. 185), and bookmarks with S'ian motifs (p. 184); the address is Box 7488 Madison, WI 53707 (800-356-1200).
517. The International Stamp Collectors Society is advertising a new set of two first day covers for the "Hound of the Baskervilles" stamp issued by Great Britain on May 13, 1997, with different postmarks and full-color cachets; $19.95 for the set. An illustrated flier is available; Box 854, Van Nuys, CA 91408 <iibick@aol.com>.
518. George Overlie's colorful illustrations can be seen in the eight volumes of Murray Shaw's MATCH WITS WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES (1990-1993), and Overlie now offers an attractive wood engraving of a scene from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" ($225.00); an illustrated flier is available from the artist at 201 Main Street NE, Minneapolis, MN 55413.
519. Jo Elyn Clarey is proposing a session on "Seeking Sherlock's Sisters: Issues in Feminist History-Mystery" at the Modern Language Association in San Francisco in Dec. 1998; the focus is women-centered detective fiction using historical settings of any period, and if you'd like to submit a paper, her address is 326 Norwood SE, Grand Rapids, MI 49506 <francior@gvsu.edu>.

520. Dec 97 #3: The world of technology uses the phrase "killer application" to describe something that's so desirable that it sells a product: it was pornography, for example that drove the rapid expansion of VCR ownership (since people could watch X-rated films at home rather than in seedy movie theaters). And THE WORKS OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE on a CD-ROM disk may well help many Sherlockians decide to add a CD-ROM reader to their computers. It has almost all of Conan Doyle's published works, an extensive bibliography, and an updated and expanded second edition of THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (edited by Jon L. Lellenberg), in plain-ASCII that's platform-independent (you can run it on any computer, possibly even including an IBM 650, which is the first computer I ever wrote programs for, back in 1960). And there's more, including useful software, and the manuscript of the first chapter of THE WHITE COMPANY. John Thibeau and Frank A. Young have created a splendid resource for Sherlockians and Doyleans and anyone interested in good literature: there's material on this disk that has been out of print for decades and almost impossible to find in original appearances, and it's grand indeed that so many more people will be able to read it now. $95.00 postpaid from Insight Engineering (Box 10785, Franconia, VA 22310), and there's a Zip disk for those who have Zip drives ($100.00 postpaid); US dollar checks or money orders only, please.

521. Kel Richards has written three Sherlock Holmes pastiches (THE CURSE OF THE PHAROAHS, THE HEADLESS MONK, and THE VAMPIRE SERPENT) in a SHERLOCK HOLMES' TALES OF TERROR series for children aged 10-15, with about 120 pp. each and cover art by Philip Cornell; they're available from Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) at $7.00/CA$10.00/£4.00 each or $20.00/ CA$28.00/£12.00 for the set (surface mail), and you can pay with checks or currency.
522. "What ineffable twaddle!" Watson cried. "Ineffable" would appear to be one of those words without an antonym: what, one wonders, might effable twaddle be? An answer may be found in EFFABLE TWADDLE, John Ruyle's latest book of Sherlockian verse, produced as usual by and on the Pequod Press. Available from the author (521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707), and the postpaid cost is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
523. Jon Lellenberg reports that the memorial service for Dame Jean Conan Doyle will be held at noon on Jan. 29, 1998, at St. Clement Danes in the Strand (it's the official church of the Royal Air Force, and the principal speaker will be retired Chief Air Marshal Lewis). The service will be open to all, and those wishing to attend are requested to call the R.A.F. Office at the Defence Ministry (0171-218-2524). Her family has asked that no flowers or wreaths be sent, but for those who want to do something in her memory, her executors have suggested donations to the Royal National Institute for the Blind (224 Great Portland Street, London W1N 6AA, England) (0717-388-1266); Dame Jean had weak eyesight from childhood, and considerable trouble in her final years, and felt strongly that she would like to help other people in a similar situation.
524. Donald P. Musgrave ("Reginald Musgrave") died on Mar. 27. He was a doctor, specializing in dermatology, and one of the old Sherlockian hands in southern California. He became a member of The Baker Street Irregulars in 1976, and of course enjoyed representing one of his fictional ancestors.
525. Dec 97 #4: The Trained Cormorants of Long Beach are celebrating their 50th anniversary, and the December issue of The Cormorant's Ring has interesting articles about the society's past and present (Don Hardenbrook, one of the founders, reminisces about the early days); 44 pp., $5.00 postpaid from Jim Coffin, 6570 East Paseo Alcazaa, Anaheim Hills, CA 92807.
526. Jo Soares is a multi-talented Brazilian (he has his own nightly television show, a weekly column in a news magazine, and a radio jazz program), and A SAMBA FOR SHERLOCK (New York: Pantheon Books, 1997; 271 pp., $23.00) is his first novel, about Sherlock Holmes' trip to Brazil in 1886, and his encounter with Sarah Bernhardt and a thoroughly nasty serial killer. The book is a thriller, and a parody of Holmes and Brazil and Brazilians, and its humor is broad, often vulgar, and sometimes quite dark. And already published in Brazil, France, Italy, and Germany, it appears to hold a Sherlockian record for the greatest number of translations before an English version.
527. "I shall stand behind this holly-bush and see what I can see," Sherlock Holmes said (in "Shoscombe Old Place"); American holly is shown on one of this year's Christmas stamps.
528. Gary F. Boothe's THE SECRET OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is a new pastiche that brings Holmes out of retirement in 1907 to help forestall a threat to the economic security of the United States; he's assisted by his daughter Alice rather than by Watson. 145 pp., paperback; $13.00 postpaid from the author (3909 Meadow Beauty Drive, Pasco, WA 99301).
529. Sorry about that: "Sherlock Holmes: The Great Detective" on "Biography" on A&E cable (Nov 97 #4) featured David Burke as Dr. Watson. Thanks to David F. Morrill for the correction.
530. Brendan Gill died on Dec. 27. He went to work for The New Yorker in 1936 and never left (his last piece appears in the magazine's Jan. 5 issue), and his best-seller HERE AT THE NEW YORKER (1975) is a delightfully opinionated history of a magazine that was a literary landmark. Gill had seen William Gillette on stage, and reported in the New Yorker on the failed auction of Gillette's estate (Nov. 26, 1938), and he wrote about Gillette Castle many years later for the Architectural Digest (Nov. 1993). Gill also was a fine raconteur, and told some splendid stories at the William Gillette Luncheon during the birthday festivities in 1978.
531. Matthew Bunson's ENCYCLOPEDIA SHERLOCKIANA (Jan 95 #4) is the latest addition to the extensive list of Sherlockiana available in Japanese, in a new translation by Masamichi Higurashi and others (Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 1997; 505 pp., ¥3,800).
532. Anglofile reports that the three-part miniseries "Rhodes" will air on PBSTV on Jan. 4-6, starring Martin Shaw as Cecil Rhodes, and Neil Pearson as Dr. Leander Starr Jameson, who led an armed incursion into the Transvaal at the end of 1895; the "Jameson Raid" was one of the first overt acts of the Boer War, and his name has echoes in two Canonical pseudonyms: Colonel Lysander Stark and Dr. Lysander Starr (as noted in the June 1968 issue of The Baker Street Journal). Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with details on British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($12.00 a year).
533. Dec 97 #5: Plan ahead: Paul Singleton reports that Douglas Wilmer (who has impersonated Sherlock Holmes for more than 30 years on television and film and audiocassettes) is planning an American tour this spring, and is tentatively scheduled to arrive in Boston on Apr. 20 and (with stops also in New York and Philadelphia) to leave from Washington on Mar 4. Paul hopes that details on appearances in each of the four cities will be available during the birthday festivities in January (and I will report on those details in the next issue of this newsletter).
534. Penguin Audiobooks has issued two more sets of audiocassettes with Douglas Wilmer's excellent readings from the Canon. Each set has two cassettes and four tales: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME 2 has Five/Twice/Blue/Spec; BLACK PETER AND OTHER SHERLOCK HOLMES CASES has Blac/Lady/Blue/Resi; and they're all nicely done indeed. £7.99 each in Britain (0181-899-4036); the first set is scheduled for release here in May ($16.95), and the second one is not yet scheduled for release in the United States.
535. "Triple Threat" proclaims the N.Y. Times: Frank Langella has three jobs in The Roundabout Theater Company's production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" at the Laura Pels Theater in New York. Langella has adapted Edmond Rostand's play and directs and stars in it.
536. There are twelve "Let's Play Dolls" in the Madame Alexander series from the Alexander Doll Company, all 14" tall, with fully-rooted hair, vinyl heads and fully-jointed vinyl bodies and painted faces; "Belinda and Bobby" is the one for Sherlockians. =20 The company says the line has been discontinued, but the doll is still in stock in some specialist doll shops ($100+).
537. A detailed flier and registration form are now available for 221Beach, the Sherlockian springbreak weekend on Apr. 17-19, 1998, in Spring Lake, N.J.; write to Dick Kitts, 35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301 (718-981-5097) <rkitts@aol.com>.
538. Plan ahead: the next Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium will be held in Dayton on Mar. 6-8, 1998. If you'd like to be on their mailing list, contact Mary Frost-Pierson, 101 Cemetery Street, Yellow Springs, OH 45387 <msteries@aol.com>.
539. Plan farther ahead: the Sherlock Holmes Festival at Crowborough will be on July 3-10, 1998. Additional information is available from The Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment (Brian Pugh, 20 Clare Road, Lewes, Sussex BN7 1PN, England).
540. DETECTIVE DUOS: THE BEST ADVENTURES OF TWENTY-FIVE CRIME-SOLVING TWOSOMES, edited by Marcia Muller and Bill Pronzini (New York: Oxford Univ. Press, 1997; 444 pp., $30.00), ranges from Edgar Allan Poe (1844) to Julie Smith (1997), and includes "The Empty House" as well as an interesting introduction and an intriguing selection of authors and stories, old and new.
541. Dec 97 #6: "After the controversy surrounding the publication in 1907 of her famous fairy photograph in The Regular magazine, Angelica Cottington retired into a life of seclusion. Never having married, she became Lady Cottington upon the death of her father and lived as a recluse on the family estate until her death in 1991. Her pressed fairy journal was brought to light when the estate was sold to developers and the house was scheduled to be demolished." LADY COTTINGTON'S PRESSED FAIRY BOOK was published in 1994 (by Pavilion Books in Britain and by Andrews McMeel in the United States), and highly esteemed by those who enjoyed the inventive text by Terry Jones (of Monty Python's Flying Circus) and the splendid artwork by Brian Froud.

542. And Lady Cottington's pressed fairies definitely are not the fairies that were photographed at Cottingley in 1917, nor those seen in either of the films released this year. Nor are they in any way Doylean, let alone Sherlockian, but they're truly delightful. The book is out of print, but you can perhaps still find a 1998 LADY COTTINGTON PRESSED FAIRY CALENDAR (from Andrew McMeel, $10.95); it has twelve of the illustrations from the book, and strange calendar annotations, and it's great fun.
543. Oh: how did Lady Cottington compile her pressed fairy book? She sat there with her journal open to a blank page, and waiting until one of the fairies landed on the page, and then . . .
544. Douglas Moreton's THE PAPERS IN THE CASE offers five pastiches (one of them a short puzzle in logic and geometry, and another a discussion of the Jack the Ripper mystery); 96 pp., paper covers, £9.50 postpaid from Cadds Printing Ltd. (59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England), or $18.00 (dollar checks payable to Hugh Scullion, please). Cadds also offers a catalog of its other products, including a 1998 diary.
545. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine celebrates Sherlock Holmes' 144th birthday in the Feb. 1998 issue with Len Moffatt's amusing "The Raving: A Poetic Version of the Baskerville Legend" (and a nice Sherlockian cover by Richard Parisi).
546. The dates for the Bonds' summer tour "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" are July 13-23, 1998, and the itinerary includes Manchester, York, London, Stratford, Bath, Ashford, and Canterbury. Additional information is available from Sherry Rose-Bond, 519 East Allens Lane, Philadelphia, PA 19119 (215-247-2962) or Cathy Lalko, Universal Odyssey, 1500 Quail Street #550, Newport Beach, CA 92660 (714-263-5979).
547. Bert Coules reports that BBC Radio's "The Valley of Fear" (starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams) will be released on audiocassette in England in March, followed by "The Sign of Four" in June, and "A Study in Scarlet" in August. He hopes that "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be recorded and broadcast some time next year. BDD Audio (the distributor of the cassette series in the United States) lags well behind BBC Audio, but of course the fanatic and the impatient can order from Britain.

Jan 98 #1:

1. The birthday festivities in New York were once again graced with delightful weather (no guarantees for next year, of course), and a rather empty lobby at the Hotel Algonquin (which is being renovated by the new owners, who are hoping to have almost everything back the way it was, or perhaps better, in a few months). The BSI's Distinguished Speaker Lecture, on Thursday afternoon, featured Nicholas Meyer, who selected as his topic "Sherlock Holmes, Wine Bottles, and the Catholic Mass" (and told some splendid stories about the casting of the film "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution"). And the Aunt Clara Sing at O'Lunney's was well attended on Thursday evening.
  2. The Mrs. Hudson Breakfast on Friday morning was rather informal, since the Algonquin had no dining room (and far fewer people than usual were able to stay at the Algonquin), but the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant was as always a splendid event, with Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague Joffe, and Paul Singleton presenting a new playlet by Andrew about "Sherlock Holmes in Hell". And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop was a nice opportunity for collectors to browse and buy.
  3. The Baker Street Irregulars gathered at 24 Fifth Avenue, where Paul Martin toasted Mary Schulz as *The* Woman during the pre-dinner cocktail party (Mary then went on to dine at the Harvard Club with many of the other ladies who have received that honor). The evening's entertainment included the usual traditions (Steve Rothman's toast to the Second Mrs. Watson turned out to honor the Second Dr. Watson's Mrs.), and a lively program that ranged from selections from the late Harvey Officer's Sherlockian songbook presented by Bruce Montgomery and members of the Penn Glee Club, to an astounding cooking demonstration by Fritz Sonnenschmidt, assisted by a bewildered George Fletcher, of just how a master chef prepares pheasant livers with orange on toast points (or, for this one occasion, on bagels).
  4. And Mike Whelan (our "Wiggins") announced two official appointments: Peter E. Blau as the BSI's secretary ("Simpson"), and Jon L. Lellenberg the historian ("Thucydides"), and awarded Irregular Shillings and Investitures to James E. Smith II ("Winner of the Jackson Prize"), Susan Z. Diamond ("The Great Mogul"), Lou Lewis ("William Whyte"), Thierry Saint-Joanis ("Monsieur Bertillon"), and John F. Baesch ("State and Merton County Railroad"). Pamela Bruxner ("The British Government") received her membership in the BSI from Mike eight days later in London.
  5. The Baskerville Bash also took place on Friday evening, at La Belle Epoque, with a capacity crowd of 110 (reserve early next year), souvenirs for all (including Jane Hinckley's imaginative "Do-It-Yourself Baskerville Threatening Letter Kit"), toasts and scholarly papers (Tom Cynkin proposed that Sherlock Holmes was a Fakir), and other fun and frivolity, with The Grimpen Mire Choir transformed at one point into the Sherlettes, recalling the 60s with red sashes, gold glitter, and Canonical doo-wop.
  6. On Saturday morning the huckster room (at the Princeton Club this year) was as usual packed with dealers who offered a wide variety of Sherlockiana to eager browsers and collectors. And (yes, there's more) . . .
7. Jan 98 #2: Saturday afternoon's cocktail party at the National Arts Club honored the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes with Bill Vande Water's display of photographs from the BSI's 1968 annual dinner (the one they picketed) and the 1992 annual dinner (the first one to which ladies were invited); some of the people in both pictures were remarkably recognizable in the earlier one. Susan Rice accepted the plaudits of the crowd as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best article in last year's Baker Street Journal, and energetic bidders helped the Dr. John H. Watson Fund in the traditional auction (the Fund also benefited from auctions at the BSI annual dinner and the Baskerville Bash).
  8. The festivities continued into the evening, but on a more informal basis, with The Canonical Capricorns celebrating Sherlock Holmes and others born under that sign, and with some going off to theaters or getting into other mischief. And for the hardy souls who stayed on, or perhaps up, until Sunday noon, there was a Sherlockian brunch at Le Max, where the decorations honored recent newlyweds Mary Ellen Rich and Philip A. Shreffler.
  9. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than fit into print here, it is quite likely that there will be much longer reports in the March issue of The Baker Street Journal (quarterly, $18.95 a year, and the address is Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331).
  10. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities, and contributions of interesting and unique items for the auction are always welcome. If you have something you would like to donate to this worthy cause, you are cordially invited to write to Michael F. Whelan, Box 2189, Easton, MD 21601.
  11. Paul Martin offers a nicely coincidental excuse to see the musical "Cats" at the Winter Garden Theater in New York: the actor playing Macavity (the Mystery Cat in Eliot's poem) is Philip Michael Baskerville.

12. CapAccess (the Internet service provider managed by WETA, the local public broadcasting service) celebrated the New Year by crashing, and was off-line for more than a week, in case anyone still hasn't received responses to any e-mail messages that are lost out there in the electricity, somewhere. My new e-mail address at Digital Gateway Systems is <pblau@dgs.dgsys.com>.
13. The Beeman's Christmas Annual for 1997 is dedicated to Dr. John H. Watson, with contributions from eight members of The Occupants of the Empty House, including Brad Keefauver's imaginative explanation of why everyone likes Watson. The 24-page pamphlet costs $10.00 postpaid from the society (Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999).
14. Constance P. Montgomery died on May 21, 1997. Connie was just as musical as her husband Jim and her son Bruce, both members of the BSI, and proud to be called "Hot Rod Nanny" from her prowess at the wheel: she drove without an accident from the age of 16 until she "grounded" herself four years ago at the age of 94. In 1961 she was the first lady invited to the cocktail hour preceding the BSI's annual dinner and toasted formally as *The* Woman.

15. Jan 98 #3: Musical adaptations of the Canon are quite rare, and one of the best of them will be found on JON DEAK: MUSICAL FANTASIES, a CD (CRC 2296) issued by Centaur Records in 1996. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (commissioned by Richard Hartshorne of the Apple Hill Chamber Players in 1983) is an adaptation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for double bass and six voices (all provided by Hartshorne), and it's delightful. The CD also offers Deak's "Eeyore Has a Birthday" and "Lady Chatterly's Dream" (all performed by the Apple Hill Chamber Players), and if you can't find it in a record store, it's available from Centaur Records, 8856 Highland Road #206, Baton Rouge, LA 70808; $15.00 postpaid (credit-card orders welcome).
16. Frederick D. Bryan-Brown died in Nov. 1997. He was one of the most senior members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, which he joined in Sept. 1951, and was for many years Head of Classics at Bishop's Stortford School, which surely helped with his choice of topic for his first published paper (about "Sherlockian Schools and Schoolmasters") in the summer 1956 issue of The Sherlock Holmes Journal.
17. Movies Unlimited (3015 Darnell Road, Philadelphia, PA 19154) (800-466-8437) <www.moviesunlimited.com> offers just about anything you can imagine might be on videocassettes, and some you might not think of, such as the 12-chapter 211-minute serial "Daredevils of the Red Circle" (1939): "three circus stuntmen join forces to track down a cunning madman bent on catastrophic revenge" ($19.99). Absolutely non-Sherlockian, except for the title, and a cast that includes Miles Mander.
18. It's the Year of the Tiger . . . of San Pedro, perhaps . . . in the twelve-year Lunar New Year cycle celebrated by the Chinese, and by our postal service. And if "Wisteria Lodge" doesn't have your favorite tiger, there are plenty of tigers (and tiger cubs and tiger-skin rugs) in other stories.
19. Bill Dunning suggests that it's time to request reservation forms for the Fourth Biennial John Bennett Shaw Memorial Conference for Sherlockian Studies at Santa Fe Community College on Sept. 25-27; Jon L. Lellenberg will be the keynote speaker. You can write to: Santa Fe Community College, Center for Continuing Education, 6401 South Richards Avenue, Santa Fe, NM 87505 <sherlock@santa-fe.cc.nm.us>.
20. For new readers (and those who don't remember the question from a couple of years ago): name a city, mentioned in the Canon, that had more than a million inhabitants when Conan Doyle visited it, but no longer exists?
21. ON STAGE: SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Charles Hall and Peter Blythe, is a guide to 70 Sherlockian plays and musicals from 1899 to 1993, with synopses and commentary, and it's well done indeed, ranging from the major productions to scripts written for school performances, and from serious dramas to broad farce, offering a splendid look at the wide variety of Sherlockian theater. There are two booklets with a total of 105 pp., and the cost is £6.60 postpaid, from Charles Hall, 12 Paisley Terrace, Edinburgh EH8 7JW, Scotland, Great Britain (sterling checks are welcome, but otherwise please send only currency or add £5.00 for bank charges on foreign-currency checks).

---

22. Jan 98 #4: The current issue of Anglofile reports that Britain's year-end honors list included a knighthood for science-fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke (who has discussed Arthur Conan Doyle and the Cottingley fairies in his television series "Arthur C. Clarke's World of Strange Powers"), and CBEs for Deborah Kerr, who had three roles in the film "The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp" (1943), and Alan Howard, who played the Duke of Holderness in Granada's version of "The Priory School" (1986). Anglofile is a monthly newsletter that offers detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($15.00 a year).
23. William C. Thomas (9507 East 65th Street #407, Tulsa, OK 74133) publishes The Jack-Knife for his fellow-members of Holmes in Scales, an informal correspondence society for those who like to make (or read about) Sherlockian models (a subject that includes more than miniatures).
24. Glenhall Taylor died on Dec. 28. He produced or directed hundreds of radio programs in the days when Hollywood was a broadcasting center, and he wrote for radio and television. He produced the Rathbone/Bruce "Sherlock Holmes" radio series from 1943 to 1945, and in 1977 he wrote scripts for a proposed series (unfortunately not broadcast) that was to star Edwin Mulhare and Ben Wright. He was a delightful raconteur, and his memoirs BEFORE TELEVISION: THE RADIO YEARS (1979) offer some grand tales about Rathbone and Bruce and many others from those long-ago days.
25. Ron Fish has begun work on a directory that will list Sherlockian societies and the dates of their meetings, to be published in 1999 and then updated annually. If your society would like to be included, contact Ron at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919-0004 <ronf404@aol.com>.
26. Carolyn Gassner is asking for photographs (or .gif or .jpg graphic files) of "Ugly or Bizarre Sherlockian Collectibles" so that she can hold a contest on the World Wide Web: visitors to her "Sherlockian humor" home page will be able to vote for the "Epitome of Sherlockian Bizarritude" (and if you are wondering how to define bizarritude, she suggests that "bizarritude is as bizarritude does"). There's no URL yet, but you can send photographs to her at P.O. Drawer G, Corrales, NM 87048; and e-mail and graphic files to her at <carina@pipeline.com>.
27. When in New York: Leslie Tonkonow Artworks+Projects (601 West 26th Street) has a show on "The Cottingley Fairies and Other Apparitions" (with photographs of otherworldly phenomena from the 19th century to the present) until Feb. 21 (212-255-8450).
28. The Times has reported briefly on some of the provisions of Dame Jean Conan Doyle's will: she left three Sherlock Holmes manuscripts to the British Library, a museum in Edinburgh, and a museum in Portsmouth or Southsea (to be chosen by her trustees); six other Conan Doyle manuscripts are to be sold and the proceeds shared among the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund, the Not Forgotten Association, the Royal Air Force Association, Help the Hospices, the Distressed Gentlefolks' Aid Association, and the Royal Star and Garter Home; other original papers and letters written by her father to the British Library; her copyrights to the Royal National Institute for the Blind; and £1,000 to Minstead Church. The total estate was valued at £1,867,361.

29. Jan 98 #5: John Stephenson wonders whether anyone knows anything about a souvenir he found recently: a small deerstalker imprinted for "Empress Coffee" (it appears to be an advertising handout from the 1950s); any recollections of Empress Coffee or their advertising? John's address is 6807 East Briarwood Drive, Englewood, CO 80112).
30. Frank Muir died on Jan. 2. Best known here for his decades as a punning panelist on the radio quiz shows "My Word!" and "My Music" (still heard in re-runs on public radio), he was also credited with inventing the television situation comedy, and he was an inspired wit, described by Marc Fisher in

- the Washington Post as a man who could "wink on radio." His specialty was a complicated story that ended in a startling pun, and one of them was Sherlockian, published in his collection OH, MY WORD! (1980) and reprinted (with permission) by Douglas Sutherland-Bruce in The Western Flyer (winter 1986); it's well worth tracking down.
31. Thom Boykoff reports a set of "Facts & Feats" Guinness Records collector's cards issued in 1992 by Pro Set; card #38 has Sherlockian artwork by Frank Wiles, and notes that Holmes is the most-portrayed character on the screen.
  32. Travelers from afar (San Francisco) report that S. Holmes, Esq., atop the Holiday Inn, Union Square, has been closed. The top floor of the hotel is being renovated, and when it opens again there won't be space for the fine recreation of the sitting-room at 221B. But everything is being carefully preserved, in hopes of finding a new location for the sitting-room.
  33. What city, mentioned in the Canon, had more than a million inhabitants when Conan Doyle visited it, but no longer exists? Brooklyn (mentioned in "The Red Circle") was a city when he was there during his lecture tour in 1894; it was annexed into the city of New York in 1898, and now is a borough, and that's why New York City is celebrating its centennial this year.
  34. Cliff Goldfarb reports that The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library have arranged a special performance of Arthur Conan Doyle's play "Waterloo" at the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., on Aug. 15; there will also be a buffet lunch afterward at the Prince of Wales Hotel. Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwig@netover.com> is the contact for more information about the event.
  35. "I hesitated for a moment, searching for the proper phraseology. 'There was something I did *not* observe that was highly significant.' The blood rushed into Emerson's lean cheeks. 'Curse it, Peabody,' he shouted, 'You have been reading those damnable detective stories again!'" Reported by Melissa Ennis in SEEING A LARGE SNAKE, by Elizabeth Peters (New York: Warner Books, 1997); the latest in the fine series of mystery novels starring Amelia Peabody Emerson.
  36. "A Study in Scarlet" (produced by Jennifer and Robert Spahr, and directed and adapted by Bart Lovins), will be performed by Expanded Arts on Feb. 5-7, 12-14, 19-21 at 7:00 pm. Tickets cost $12.00, and the theater is at 85 Ludlow Street, New York, NY 10002 (212-253-1813); that's between Broome and Delancey Streets. You can also reserve on-line at <www.expandedarts.com>.
37. Jan 98 #6: The STUD Sherlockian Society's annual banquet on Mar. 6 (at the Starlight Inn in Schiller Park near Chicago) will feature David L. Hammer as the featured speaker (on "A Study in Scarlet: A Triumph of the Geography of the Imagination"). There will also be a Solar Pons Breakfast on Mar. 7, and a Rache Road Rally on Mar. 8, and additional information is available from Dennis France, 8546 North Kedvale Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076.
  38. Laurie R. King's THE MOOR (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1998; 307 pp., $23.95) brings Mary Russell and her husband to Dartmoor in 1923, summoned by the Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould to solve a new mystery that echoes the one that Sherlock Holmes solved there decades earlier. The moor is as wet and cold as ever, in the book, at any rate (the first time Laurie was there to do research the weather was so pleasant that she had to make another trip), and she has done a fine job with the time and place and characters, as well as with the mystery. She also has discovered a delightful echo of the reverend in his grandson's biography of Sherlock Holmes (no spoiler here).
  39. Laurie will be visiting bookshops in the west, and of course will be happy to sign copies of THE MOOR: Feb. 8 at Black Oak Books (Berkeley, Calif.), Feb. 12 at Clues Unlimited and Feb. 13 at Antigone Books (Tucson, Ariz.), Feb. 15 at the Poisoned Pen (Scottsdale, Ariz.), Mar. 1 at the Left Coast Crime convention (San Diego), Mar. 8 at Book Passages (Corte Madera, Calif.), Mar. 15 at Trinity Cathedral (San Jose, Calif.), and Apr. 25 at the Pleasant Hill Literary Women conference (Pleasant Hill, Calif.).
  40. And Laurie's A LETTER OF MARY (Dec 96 #7) is now in the stores in paperback (New York: Bantam Books, 1998; 318 pp., $5.99); set just before the events in THE MOOR, it's also a good read, with a fine mystery. Bantam will issue THE MOOR in paperback in the spring of 1999.
  41. Rebecca J. Anderson reports an announcement that the June-July issue of British Heritage will include an article about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and how Dartmoor became "the major character his "Hound of the Baskervilles." Rebecca also presides over The Beekeeper's Holmes Page for fans of Laurie King's books about Mary Russell <www.golden.net/~rebeccaj/beekeepr.html>, as well as the RUSS-L electronic mailing list; Rebecca's e-mail address is <rebeccaj@pobox.com>.
  42. Plan ahead: The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn are considering celebrating the turn of the century and the new millennium by spending Christmas and New Year's 1999-2000 in England; more information is available from Michael E. Bragg (Box 256, St. Charles, MO 63302. One assumes that those who want to celebrate the turn of the century and the new millennium one year later will be planning their own tour.
  43. Lawrence Treat died on Jan. 7. He began his writing career in the 1930s, and was a pioneer in the police-procedural genre and a founding member of the Mystery Writers of America. "Once upon a time there was no TV," he wrote in an essay published in MURDER INK (1977). "People walked to the movies and used their cars to neck in, but when they stayed home there was nothing much to do except listen to the radio and play games." So in 1935 he invented a game called BRINGING SHERLOCK HOLMES that was so popular that it's a rare collectible now (you'll find one of the puzzles in MURDER INK).
44. Jan 98 #7: Milestone Films & Video now offers a videocassette version of the laserdisc edition of "The Lost World" (1925) issued by Lumivision in 1991 (it has 65 percent of the original footage, a trailer, a promotional short, and a demonstration of the stop-motion special effects devised by Willis O'Brien; it's the most complete version of the film now available. A much longer version of the film was found in the Czech Republic recently (Jul 97 #6), but is unlikely to be issued on videocassette for some years. Milestone's address is: 275 West 96th Street #28-C, New York, NY 10025 <milefilms@aol.com>; the cassette costs $29.95 postpaid (creditcard orders welcome).
  45. Alfred Thelin died on Jan. 15. Carolyn Gassner reports that he was a dentist and a member of The Brothers Three, and enjoyed their Trap Shoots in Tesuque. He was an easy-going man known for his quiet humor, and he will be missed by the Sherlockians in New Mexico.
  46. The Wigmore Street Post Office is an electronic journal that appears on the Prodigy computer service, but some of the best of its material can be found in its ink-on-paper version; the winter 1997 issue, dedicated to Jephro Rucastle, has 40 pages, and a subscription costs $10.00 (three issues), from Mel Hughes, 2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32246. The next issue will include the entries in an on-going contest for the worst opening paragraph of a Sherlockian pastiche (contestants must write the paragraphs themselves).
  47. Russ Geoffrey, still selling his Sherlockian collection (Oct 97 #8), offers an illustrated sales-list of statues, audiocassettes, videocassettes, etc.; send him a #10 SASE (21 Baker Street, Warren, RI 02885).
  48. Christie's South Kensington will have some interesting material in an auction on Mar. 19: the Midg and Cameo cameras used by Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths to take the photographs of the Cottingley fairies; six original photographs on contemporary mounts; a first edition of Conan Doyle's THE COMING OF THE FAIRIES (1922); three later watercolors of fairies made by Elsie; and a 1983 holograph letter by Elsie giving her version of events.

- And (perhaps) two of the original glass negative. An illustrated catalog will be ready in mid-February; their address (attn: Michael Pritchard) is 85 Old Brompton Road, London SW7 3LD, England (0171-321-3279) <mpritchard@cix.compulink.co.uk>.
49. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle appeared as a character in comic books TARZAN #13 and #14 (from Dark Horse), and there are mentions of "Sir Arthur's detective" in #15 ($2.95).
  50. Carole Bugge wrote the Dashiell Hammett pastiche in Marvin Kaye's anthology RESURRECTED HOLMES (Mar 96 #1), and now wields Watson's own pen in THE STAR THE STAR OF INDIA (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1998; 197 pp., $21.95); it is 1894, and Holmes and returned from the Reichenbach to find that Moriarty also survived the battle there, and is plotting revenge.
  51. Jennie C. Paton's video lending library is up and running again, and you can ask her for more information (please enclose a #10 SASE): Box 17197, Tampa, FL 33682-7198; her e-mail address is <jpaton514@aol.com>.

  52. Jan 98 #8: It's not often that one can attend a concert that includes the Polyphonic Motets of Lassus (the most recent I know of being a performance by the Palestrina Choir at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Washington three years ago (Mar 95 #5), but Catherine Cooke has reported that the Renaissance Singers will offer music by Lassus, Willaert, de Rore, and Manchicourt in "The Legacy of an Archbishop" at St. Pancras Church, Euston Road, London NW1 at 7:30 pm on Feb. 14 (telephone 0171-923-2182).
  53. Robert M. George (14441 S.W. 124th Place, Miami, FL 33186) offers copies of death certificates for William Sherlock Scott Holmes (b. 6 Jan. 1854, d. 6 Jan. 1957) and John Hamish Watson (b. 7 Aug 1852, d. 24 July 1929); $10.00 postpaid (with a bonus color portrait of Holmes). William S. Baring-Gould supplied the dates and other details.
  54. The digital video disk (DVD) is starting to find a market. According to an article in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 16), spotted by Syd Goldberg, 200,000 players ($600 each) and five million disks ($25) were sold in 1997. And Warner has announced that "My Fair Lady" (1964), with Jeremy Brett in a supporting role, will be released on DVD later this year.
  55. Texas offers the newest venue for a running of The Silver Blaze, which will be held at Lone Star Park at Grand Prairie (near Dallas), on Apr. 26; additional details are available from Don Hobbs, 2100 Elm Creek, Flower Mound, TX 75028 (972-335-2746) <djhobbs@hcs-is.com>.
  56. The Sir James Saunders Society (for Sherlockian dermatologists) will gather for luncheon in Orlando, Fla., this year, on Mar. 2, and local Sherlockians are welcome at the event; details are available from Don Hazelrigg, 15 Victoria Drive, Newburgh, IN 47630.
  57. One of the more interesting discoveries during the birthday festivities was that the package of copies of my new seasonal souvenir ("WHERE THE BODY WAS FOUND") intended for the BSI annual dinner seems to have vanished en route to New York, perhaps demolished by the massive package-sorting machine that is rumored to be bedeviling postal workers and postal customers somewhere in the wilds of New Jersey; subscribers to this newsletter who have not received the souvenir previously, or with this mailing, please let me know.
  58. And a few commercials: the revised 15-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, *The* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.20 postpaid. The 79-page list of 733 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for the 432 active societies, costs $4.00 postpaid. A run of address labels for 362 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.40 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.
  59. The list of irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <<http://members.home.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>>.

  60. Feb 98 #1: Jerry Margolin reports that the poster promoting the video of the film "The Line King" (about famed N.Y. Times theater artist Al Hirschfeld) has as its border some of his portraits of celebrities, including Rathbone and Bruce as Holmes and Watson (that artwork is also briefly seen in the film). The Rathbone/Bruce lithograph sold some years ago for $500 (Mar 92 #1); the new poster's available from the Margo Feiden Galleries (669 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10021) for $75. Or you may be able to get one for much less when your local video shop is finished with their copy.
  61. Allen J. Hubin launched The Armchair Detective in October 1967 for people who shared his enjoyment of the mystery genre, and it still does an excellent job of covering the field. The latest issue has an interesting article by Laurie R. King on what it's like to chair an Edgar Awards committee (for Best First Novel, an award she has won herself), and Scott and Sherry Rose Bond's discussion of Sherlockian pastiches and parodies. $31.00 a year for four issues; Box 929, Bound Brook, NJ 08805.
  62. And The Armchair Detective reports the Michael Bond received an OBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours List last summer. Bond is the creator of Paddington Bear, who uses Sherlockian methods and dialogue in "Paddington Turns Detective" in MORE ABOUT PADDINGTON (1959) and PADDINGTON ON STAGE (1977).
  63. Our new commemorative honors Winter Sports, showing an Alpine skier who looks far more stylish than Arthur Conan Doyle did when he helped popularize the sport with his article "An Alpine Pass on 'Ski'" in The Strand Magazine (Dec. 1894).
  64. Laura Kuhn reports that a new mail-order catalog from Carey's Smoke Shop offers their "Vintage Holmes" pipe-tobacco blend (Flake/Cavendish Cut), plus cigars and pipes and such. 7835 Freedom Avenue NW #3, North Canton, OH 44720 (800-992-7427).
  65. "In the Bay of Bengal Some Tribes Still Greet Visitors with Bows and Arrows" is the title of an article by Tom Huth in the Nov.-Dec. 1997 issue of Islands magazine, spotted by John Baesch; Huth visited the Andamans, but missed seeing the fiercest of the Andamanese ("there might be some pretty beaches," he notes, but "the program is that the government restricts tourists from setting foot on most of them").
  66. The season brochure is available for the Shaw Festival in Ontario (it will include 15 performances of Arthur Conan Doyle's "Waterloo" from Aug. 6 to Sept. 19). The box-office address is: Box 774, Niagara-on-the-Lake, ON L0S 1J0, Canada (800-267-4759) <<http://shawfest.sympatico.ca>>.
  67. Rebecca J. Anderson reports that there are more dates for locations where Laurie R. King will be signing her books (including THE MOOR): Mar. 8 at Book Passages (Corte Madera, Calif.), Mar. 10 at Kepler's (San Mateo), Mar. 16 at A Clean Well-Lighted Place (San Francisco), Apr. 5 at Trinity Cathedral (San Jose), Apr. 16-19 at the Palm Springs Writers Conference (Palm Springs), Apr. 25 at the Pleasant Hill Literary Women's Conference (Pleasant Hill), and Apr. 27-30 at various shops in New York during Edgars Week.

  68. Feb 98 #2: TALES OF WRYKYN AND ELSEWHERE, by P. G. Wodehouse (Maidenhead: Porpoise Books, 1997; 323 pp.), offers 25 stories published in British magazines from 1901 to 1910, more than half of them reprinted for the first time. They are "school stories" (published in boys' magazines), and they're great fun, and two of them are Sherlockian parodies featuring Burdock Rose and Wotsing; another story ("Pillington Detective") has nice Sherlockian echoes. And in other stories Wodehouse's characters show that they have read "The White Company" and "Rodney Stone". $45.00 postpaid in the United States and Canada from Frederik Menschaar, 140 Cabrini Boulevard #132, New York, NY 10033; or £27.50 postpaid in Britain and Europe (creditcard orders welcome) from Book Systems Plus, 2-B Priors Hall Farm, Widdington, Essex CB11 3SB, England <bsp2b@aol.com>.
  69. "We are very rich in orchids on the moor," said Beryl Stapleton (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). And a lady's slipper orchid (*Cypripedium calceolus*) is shown on one of the stamps in a new "Endangered Species" set from Britain.

70. Thanks to Sandy Kozinn for spotting my mistake (Jan 98 #5): SEEING A LARGE CAT is the correct title of the latest addition to Elizabeth Peters' fine series of mystery novels that star Amelia Peabody Emerson.
71. Miniature Collector magazine offered clues to a Sherlock Holmes quiz in its Sept. 1997 issue (Paul D. Herbert won the first prize, and other Sherlockians were among the runners-up); the answers, and some color photographs of some spectacular Sherlockian miniatures (including Dorothy Rowe Shaw's twostory replica of the entire house in Baker Street), have been published in the March issue ($3.95; 30595 Eight Mile, Livonia, MI 48152).
72. For the completists: Andy Peck reports that the Mystery Guild has their own editions of Laurie R. King's A LETTER OF MARY and THE MOOR ($11.98 each or $21.98 the pair) as well as Martin H. Greenberg's anthology HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS ($10.98); Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.mysteryguild.com>.
73. Adam Worth's arrest, conviction, and refusal to avoid seven years imprisonment by surrendering the stolen Gainsborough portrait of Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire was headline news in London in July 1893, shortly before "The Final Problem" was written, and many echoes of the man can be found in the Sherlock Holmes stories. Ben Macintyre's THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ADAM WORTH, MASTER THIEF (New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1997; 336 pp., $24.00) is a fine account of what happened to the painting, and to Worth, who was indeed called "the Napoleon of Crime" by some of his contemporaries. The connection between Worth and Moriarty appears first to have been reported by Vincent Starrett, in his THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in 1933: "this was revealed by Sir Arthur in conversation with Dr. Gray Chandler Briggs, some years ago."
74. St. Bartholomew's Hospital (the site of the historic first meeting between Holmes and Watson) has been saved: the full-scale review of London's health needs ordered by Labor prime minister Tony Blair (May 97 #2) has concluded that Bart's, scheduled for closure by the previous Conservative government, should instead be turned into a specialized cancer and heart unit.
75. Feb 98 #3: "An Evening of Musical Mystery and Other Noteworthy Adventures" at Elizabethtown College in Mt. Gretna, Pa., on Jan 31 included the world premiere of "The Cryptic Composition of Sherlock Bach" (composed by Allen Krantz, with story written and performed by Cary Burkett). Based on the characters "Sherlock Bach and Dr. Witless" (created by Burkett for WITF-FM), the work "follows the famous detective as he explores the mystery of musical composition in a fun musical odyssey for violin, cello, piano, oboe, and french horn."
76. Former RAF Air Commandant Dame Jean Conan Doyle's memorial service at St. Clement Danes in the Strand on Jan. 29 was a very military ceremony, Jon Lellenberg reports, with Royal Air Force officers and aircraftwomen serving as ushers, senior RAF officers reading the Lessons, and Air Chief Marshal Lewis Hodges, giving the eulogy, in which both her father's literary heritage and Dame Jean's work defending it were remembered. The service was followed by a reception at the RAF Club in Piccadilly. Dame Jean's ashes had been interred a week before beside those of her husband Air Vice Marshal Sir Geoffrey Bromet at the Minstead cemetery near her parents' graves; she was cremated on Nov. 27 with her body wrapped (as she had requested in her will) in the Union Flag.
77. Her father's copyrights, to published works and unpublished material, are now part of the Estate of Dame Jean Conan Doyle, with the income from the U.S. copyrights and ancillary rights to go to the Royal National Institute for the Blind. Jon L. Lellenberg and Saul Cohen continue to represent the Estate as agent and copyright lawyer, as they had represented Dame Jean for the last twenty years.
78. The "Sherlock Holmes Festival" held in Tryon, N.C., last year (Oct 97 #5) included performances of Hendrik Booraem's 30-minute adaptations of "The Red-Headed League" and "The Sign of Four" by the Blue Ridge Radio Players. They're nicely done, and audiocassettes are available for $4.00 each (plus $1.50 shipping per order) from the Blue Ridge Players, Box 933, Hendersonville, NC 28793-0933.
79. If you're interested in "Titanic" incunabula: Ben Wood (Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222) has long been a member of the Titanic Historical Society (as well as a Sherlockian), and he offers a sales-list of Titanic-related items that includes books, magazines, and artwork (and a sales-list of Sherlockiana).
80. Roger L. Stevens died on Feb. 2. He was the founding chairman of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, and helped persuade Congress to provide $150 million for the Center's construction, operation, and endowment, and to pass legislation establishing the National Endowment for the Arts, serving as the NEA's first chairman. He had produced many plays and musicals before he came to Washington, and he ensured that the Center continued that function, co-producing (in a long list of other shows) the American tour of the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of "Sherlock Holmes" in 1974.
81. In case you're planning a trip to Scotland: "Move Over Moriarty" stars Maggie Fox and Sue Ryding playing all the roles (including Holmes and Watson); they toured in the comedy in England in 1996 and to Santa Fe last year, and they will be performing at the Edinburgh Festival on Aug. 10-28.
82. Feb 98 #4: The fourth issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota reports on the late Bill Rabe's exploits, and the donation by his family of Bill's Sherlockian collection to the university, with articles about Bill and other matters. You can join the mailing list by writing to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
83. Henry W. Enberg ("John Garrideb") died on Feb. 9. He was a senior editor with the Practising Law Institute, and the poet laureate of The Friends of Bogie's, contributing to many of their performances as well as to meetings of the Sherlockian societies in New York, and he received his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1991.
84. Walter R. Brooks' delightful books about "Freddy the Pig" have amused children for more than 65 years, and his FREDDY THE DETECTIVE is once again in print, with the original Sherlockian illustrations by Kurt Wiese (New York: Overlook Press, 1997; 256 pp., $23.95). And the Friends of Freddy, founded in 1984, have nearly 500 members, an irregular quarterly, and a home page <www.outermost.com/freddy/>. Membership is $15.00, and the contact is Connie Arnold, 5-A Laurel Hill Road, Greenbelt, MD 20770.
85. Reported: DINOSAUR SUMMER, by Greg Bear (from Aspect/Warner in February at $23.00): Conan Doyle's "Lost World" was a factual account of the Challenger expedition, but by 1947 nobody cares about dinosaurs any more, and the last dinosaur circus in America is closing, and there's an attempt to return the dinosaurs to the Lost World, filmed for National Geographic by John Ford.
86. Dover Thrift Editions offer spectacular value-for-money with their inexpensive reprints (SIX GREAT SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES are among the many titles available at $1.00 each), and now there is DETECTION BY GASLIGHT: 14 VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES, edited by Douglas G. Greene (258 pp., $2.00); Greene notes in his introduction that the opening of the first Golden Age of the Detective Story can be precisely dated: it began when The Strand Magazine published "A Scandal in Bohemia" in July 1891 (Greene's fine anthology contains "The Copper Beeches").
87. Sigurdur Gustavsson offers a sales list of Icelandic translations of Conan Doyle's stories, Sherlockian and otherwise, published from 1898 to 1914 and priced from $95 to $365; his address is Vidihlid 33, 105 Reykjavik, Iceland <gussi@vortex.is>.

88. Susan Conant has extended her Dog Lover's Mystery series into the world of the Canon: THE BARKER STREET REGULARS (New York: Doubleday, 1998; 262 pp., $21.95) involves amateur sleuth Holly Winter and her malamutes Rowdy and Kimi with some Boston Sherlockians, an animal psychic, and a murder; it's an amusing story: Conant knows and loves dogs, and had Sherlockian assistance from Bruce Southworth.
89. New York magazine reports (Feb. 2) that New York restaurateur Nello will be in England in March to film a role in David Mamet's new period drama "The Winslow Boy", playing a "Sherlock Holmes type" who investigates the movie's central mystery (it's a new adaptation of Terence Rattigan's 1946 play).

90. Feb 98 #5: I noted last year (Jul 97 #1) Robert S. Ennis' article in The Baker Street Journal in which he reported an early Sherlockian calabash in the film "The Nitwits" (1935); since then others have turned up even earlier calabashes in newspaper cartoons and comic strips. But all of the calabashes are used by characters who are not Sherlock Holmes. Who was the first artist or actor to portray Sherlock Holmes with a calabash? I'll provide the answer next month (if, that is, someone supplies the answer).
91. Brian Pugh has more information about the Sherlock Holmes Festival in Crowborough on July 3-10: Philip Weller will deliver a slide and video talk on "The World of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" on July 3, and a memorial service on July 5, followed by a five-mile "Walk with Sir Arthur" in and around Crowborough. Details on bed-and-breakfast accommodations, a map of the town, and a brochure about Groombridge Place are available from Brian (20 Clare Road, Lewes, Sussex BN7 1PN, England); $5.00 (in currency, please).
92. Ed Wiltse reports that he will discuss his article on "'So Constant an Expectation': Sherlock Holmes and Seriality" during a seminar on Victorian Literature and Culture at Harvard's Barker Center (12 Quincy Street, Cambridge, Mass.) at 7:00 pm on Mar. 9; there's no charge to attend.
93. The long series of "Doctor Who" novels (there have been more than 50) has had appearances by Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson in Andy Lane's ALL-CONSUMING FIRE (Jul 94 #4) and by Arthur Conan Doyle in John Peel's EVOLUTION (Feb 95 #6). Paul Cornell's HAPPY ENDINGS (London: Doctor Who Books/Virgin Publishing, 1996; 291 pp., £4.99/$5.95) has guest appearances by scores of characters from earlier books in the series, including Holmes and Watson; there's romance and mystery and a wedding, and various dire threats, and a lot of humor (as is always the case in the Doctor Who books).
94. I suggested (Jan 98 #8) that the package of copies of my seasonal souvenir intended for the BSI annual dinner might have been demolished by the postal service; it turns out I was correct: I have received some of the souvenirs, kindly forwarded by the Most Holy Trinity Church in Mamaroneck, N.Y., with a note saying, "these were enclosed with our package which was re-packed by the post office."
95. David Stuart Davies has a long review of John Barrymore's "Sherlock Holmes" (1922) in the latest issue of Scarlet Street (a 16mm flash-titles print was shown to The Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 1997); there's also a review of the laserdisc of Peter Cushing's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), and Paxton Whitehead in the play "The Mask of Moriarty", and an advertisement for a $165 "Basil Rathbone as the Great Detective" casting kit from Supporting Castings (Box 1061, Whittier, CA 90609), and other coverage of the mystery/horror genre. The magazine now is published bimonthly, for $35.00 a year (Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452).
96. Scott Monty reports an interesting course for people who want to pursue the interests that Sherlock Holmes pursued: The Massachusetts Audubon Society will offer a four-Saturday course beginning Mar. 28 on beekeeping; veteran beekeeper Tom Sisson will preside, and participants are asked to bring bee veils, hive tools, and (optional) gloves. $50 for Audubon members, $58 for others (Drumlin Farm Programs, South Great Road, Lincoln, MA 01773).

97. Feb 98 #6: Some book catalogs are a delight to read, if they offer interesting books and describe them with imagination and enthusiasm; that certainly was true of Ben Abramson's catalogs from The Argus Bookshop, and it is what one finds in catalogs from A Common Reader, a company that concentrates on current books at reasonable prices (sometimes in its own reprint editions), with titles such as Brendan Gill's HERE AT THE NEW YORKER ($15.95), Berton Roueche's THE MEDICAL DETECTIVES ($14.95), and a long list of George MacDonald Fraser's FLASHMAN books ($11.95 or $12.95). And COOKING WITH THE TWO FAT LADIES, by Jennifer Paterson and Clarissa Dickson Wright ($25.00); "there's no substitute for lard or beef dripping," they say of bubble and squeak. "If you object, eat something else." A Common Reader's address is 141 Tompkins Avenue, Pleasantville, NY 10570 (800-832-7323) <www.commonreader.com>.
98. "The Bibliophile's Book Shelf & Miscellanea" is the new mail-order catalog from Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 <www.sherlock-holmes.com>; mostly books, but some et ceteras.
99. The Reichenbach Irregulars and the Societe Sherlock Holmes de France are preparing for their Sherlock Holmes Worldwide Congress on Apr. 30-May 4 in Meiringen, Switzerland. Additional information is available from Michael A. Meer (Morgenstrasse 70, 3018 Bern, Switzerland) <mycrofts@classic.msn.com> <www.chez.com/mycroft>.
100. The Sherlockian chess set offered by The Daily Planet for $484.00 (Oct 97 #2) has been discounted to $249.99 in the spring catalog from Smart Shopper (which also offers discounts on items from the Signals and Wireless catalogs); Box 64494, St. Paul, MN 55164 (800-736-3055).
101. David Pearson notes that some attractive 54mm Sherlockian figures in mailorder catalogs from Valley Plaza Hobbies (2211 Mouton Drive, Carson City, NV 89706), The Saratoga Soldier Shop (Box 89, Burnt Hills, NY 12027), and The Toy Soldier Co. (100 Riverside Drive, New York, NY 10024).
102. The Pequod's poet laureate is at it again, celebrating the 28th anniversary of the Press with a new collection of verse: WATSON FURIOSO (which "pulls no punches and spares no one") costs $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
103. THE DIARIES OF MRS. JOHN H. WATSON, NEE MORSTAN was written and privately published by the late Fraser Smyth in 1995 for his own pleasure, according to his wife Anna, and to interest and amuse his friends and others who love the Sherlock Holmes stories. "Mary Morstan was an elusive creature," Smyth noted in his introduction, and her diaries demonstrate she was quite modern (and quite unconventional) in her behavior and outlook. The book (112 pp., nicely bound in cloth) is not for sale, but Mrs. Smyth has kindly agreed to make it available for only the cost of shipping (from Great Britain to the United States and onward); that's $4.00 postpaid in the U.S. and $4.30 by surface post elsewhere; checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please, sent to the address below.

104. Mar 98 #1: "FairyTale: A True Story" will be released on videocassette in the U.S. and Canada on Mar. 31, for the video rental market; you will be able to buy the cassette for $102.00, but you'll be wise to wait a month or two, when there will be a sell-through price of $16.00 or so. It's an excellent film, with some fine acting, about Conan Doyle and Houdini and the Cottingley fairies and the two girls who photographed them (the fairies were real and the photographs faked, according to the film). The film was dumped into theaters last year by Paramount, and essentially abandoned; the videocassette will make it available to many who were unable to see it during its brief visit to the big screen.
105. Conan Doyle's own account of the Cottingley photographs also is available, in a new edition of his THE COMING OF THE FAIRIES (London: Pavilion Books, 1997; 111 pp., £9.99); it shows very well how sincere a believer he was, in the reality of the photographs and in the honesty of the girls.

106. The Sherlock Holmes Museum at 239 Baker Street in London has a vacancy, according to a report in the Daily Mirror (Jan. 29): they're advertising for a Sherlock Holmes look-alike ("superb take Holmes pay," the paper punned). And the Museum has a new 36-page full-color mail-order catalog of souvenirs and mementos, plus a flier for their solid silver heraldic badge (£60) for their new Sherlock Holmes Worldwide Friendship Society. The office address of the Museum is 1 Parkgate Road, London, SW11 4NL, England.
107. Jim Suszynski found a "Mickey Detective" snow-globe (3.5 in. high) that has Mickey Mouse in Sherlockian costume; $20.00 at local Hallmark shop. Made by Westland Giftware (Mickey & Co. #6407).
108. Donna Goldthwaite reports that THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES (nine volumes) is available for $50.00 postpaid in the winter sale catalog she has received from the Oxford University Press (Order Department: 2001 Evans Road, Cary, NC 27513 (800-230-3242). Owen Dudley Edwards was the general editor of the set, which was first published in 1993; individual volumes were edited and annotated by Edwards, Richard Lancelyn Green, Christopher Roden, and W. W. Robson; the set is cloth-bound (item #0192123297).
109. "There's a bunch of detective stories that have been important to me," Jake Kasdan told an interviewer, "and Sherlock Holmes is certainly among them." Kasdan wrote and directed the new film "Zero Effect" with Bill Pullman as a dysfunctional and emotionally-handicapped detective named Daryl Zero, and Ben Stiller as his sidekick Steve Arlo.
110. I noted last month (Feb 98 #5) that all the Sherlockian calabashes seen in comic strips and films in the mid-1930s belong to characters who are not Sherlock Holmes, and I asked who the first artist or actor to show Sherlock Holmes with a calabash might have been, and promised to provide the answer this month, if someone supplied the answer. And the answer is: sorry, no one has supplied an answer supported by evidence. A few readers suggested William Gillette, who used a curved wooden pipe rather than a calabash. I will still be happy to hear from anyone who has a reasonable answer to the question. Or perhaps even an unreasonable answer.
111. Mar 98 #2: Bert Coules reports that the BBC has released a two-audiocassette set of the 1997 radio broadcast of "The Valley of Fear" (with Clive Merrison as Sherlock Holmes); £8.99 in shops in Britain. The BBC also entered into an agreement with a greeting-card company that plans to issue a series of cards containing CDs with BBC programs; the price is expected to be £4.99 each. The first batch (release date not yet known) will include the Merrison/Williams "A Scandal in Bohemia" and the second batch (expected for Christmas) will have "The Blue Carbuncle".
112. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets have 15 different stamps for each decade, so it should be easy to find at least one Sherlockian connection for each decade. Such as the Model T Ford (1900s) and Charlie Chaplin (1910s); it was in a little Ford that Altamont arrived for his meeting with Von Bork (in "His Last Bow"), and Chaplin played "Billy" on stage with William Gillette.
113. The seventh annual Watsonian Weekend (celebrating Dr. Watson and the Battle of Maiwand) begins with a regimental dinner in Bensonville, Ill., on June 26; continues with the annual running of The Silver Blaze at Sportsman's Park on June 27; and concludes with a Fortescue brunch in Des Plaines on June 28. Additional details are available from Fred Levin, 8242 North Ridgeway Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076.
114. Laurie R. King was online in the Barnes & Noble chat room recently, answering questions about Mary Russell and other things, including the next book in the series; the electronically-enabled can see the questions and answers at <www.barnesandnoble.com/community/archive/archive> or in a more coherent transcript provided by Jennifer Chance at Rebecca J. Anderson's home page at <www.golden.net/~rebeccaaj/docs/lrkchat.txt>.
115. Ben Macintyre's THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ADAM WORTH has been nominated for Mystery Writers of America Edgar (best fact crime); the Edgar winners will be announced at the MWA banquet in New York on Apr. 30.
116. The Northern Musgraves are planning "The Return of the Mini Tonga Cruise" on May 16 in York (where the society was founded, and where the society had a similar event on the river Ouse some years earlier). The event includes lunch at York's Pizza Express, formerly a gentlemen's club, and additional information is available from Mark Hunter-Purvis, 6 Deer Park Way, Axwell Park, Blaydon-on-Tyne NE21 5PD, England.
117. Scott Price (The World of Sherlock Holmes Mystery Shop, 3957-A Grahamdale Circle, Memphis, TN 38122) (toll-free 888-355-6877 2:00pm-10:00pm CST) has a new illustrated mail-order catalog with a wide variety of Sherlockiana.
118. A STUDY IN SILVER, by David Silver (Toronto: Master Point Press, 1998; 128 pp., US$9.95/CA$12.95/UK£6.99), is a collection of amusing bridge stories that echo authors such as Melville, Conrad, Bierce, and (four of the tales) Conan Doyle. Silver modestly claims that he has "partnered all the leading Canadian bridge players of his generation, once." The publisher's address is 22 Lower Village Gate, Toronto, ON M5P 3L7, Canada <rraylee@pathcom.com>.

119. Mar 98 #3: An article from The Baker Street Journal has been reprinted on the World Wide Web, on a San Diego Natural History Museum webpage honoring Laurence M. Klauber, an amateur naturalist whose specialty was herpetology. "The Truth About the Speckled Band" (Apr. 1948), can be read at <www.sdnhm.org/research/klauber/sherlock.html>.
120. "I had been through a Florence Nightingale phase and I was getting sick and tired of being a nanny and a nurse to men," Andrea Reynolds said (quoted in a report in The Times this month). "Instead I became Zorro. I decided to fight injustice." The men who benefited from her nannying and nursing were Sheldon Reynolds and Claus von Bulow, and a six-year battle over royalties from a 1979 Sherlock Holmes television series that starred Geoffrey Whitehead has ended with New York state supreme court judge ruling (according to the newspaper story) that Andrea, rather than Sheldon, controls the newlyrevived European copyright on the Sherlock Holmes stories. Andrea also announced that a competition will be held for new writers of Sherlock Holmes stories, "with possible publication of the winning entries."
121. "Read the book that inspired Michael Crichton's dinosaur bestsellers" urges the Book-of-the-Month Club in its monthly offers to members, noted by John Baesch. It's Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD, of course, in a BOMC exclusive edition ($19.95 to members). Item 45-7799, and their address is Camp Hill, PA 17012-0001 (800-348-7128).
122. More verse from the Pequod: BRICKS WITHOUT CLAY "leans heavily on the untold adventures and other Holmesian topics on which we have little data," John Ruyle reports. Hand-set and hand-printed as usual; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John, at 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707-1521.
123. John also keeps an eye on the obituaries, and casts his net widely when it comes to Sherlockian connections. The actor Lloyd Bridges died on Mar. 10 after a long career that seems not to have included any Sherlockian roles. But his full name was Lloyd Vernet Bridges II, and perhaps a distant relative of someone else who had art in the blood . . .
124. Sydney Hosier's MOST BAFFLING, MRS. HUDSON (New York: Avon Books, 1998; 246 pp., $5.50) is his third book about "the other sleuth of Baker Street," who solves another murder mystery, with the assistance of her friend Vi Warner (who performs no astral projection this time), but without any input from her famous lodger except one of his cast-off suits.

125. Gary Hildebrandt notes a report in Lee's Action Figure News & Review (Mar.) that a "Star Trek" figure of Data in Sherlockian costume will be released this fall. Credit Brad Keefauver for the additional news that it will be one of the 9-inch deluxe collector series figures (with two outfits) from Playmates (who likely will sell a lot more "Star Trek" action figures than they did "FairyTale: A True Story" figures last year).
126. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection offer a handsome flier by way of an invitation to join them in supporting the collection at the Toronto Reference Library (789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada); if you aren't on their mailing list already, you can write to the Friends, or send an e-mail request to Doug Wrigglesworth <dougwrig@netrover.com>.

127. Mar 98 #4: I've been telling people that it has been forty-two years since I was in Japan, and I figured it was time to go back to see if anything had changed, since my visit in 1956 when the USS Mullany operated out of Yokosuka and Sasebo. The occasion for my second visit was the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club's special spring convention, in Kamakura and Kawasaki, and both the convention and the sightseeing (afterward, in Kyoto and Nara and Tokyo) were delightful.
128. Japan has changed, of course: it's not as Japanese as it used to be: almost everyone wears western clothes (rather than traditional costume), and western food and drink is everywhere (although it was much more fun to avoid it), and many more Japanese speak English (six years of it are required in schools now), and their bullet trains are absolutely astounding. And there are a lot more Sherlockians now: the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club, founded in 1977, has more than 1,300 members and is the largest Sherlockian society in the world.
129. There were about 150 people at the convention, with ages ranging from six to eighty-four, and the foreign visitors included Mike and Mary Ann Whelan and Jim Webb from the United States, Catherine Cooke and Philip and Jane Weller from Britain, and Mike Berdan from Hong Kong. It was wonderful to see old friends again, and to meet new ones, and to enjoy the scholarship and fun and games. It also was nice to be reminded of the Japan I remembered from forty-two years ago, since some of the ladies were kind enough to wear kimonos.
130. Tsukasa Kobayashi and Akane Higashiyama were the organizers of the convention, with Shigeru Koike as chairman and Masamichi Higurashi as secretary general, and many others helped with the festivities, which included papers and presentations and dinners and parties and exhibits and auctions from a welcoming dinner on Friday evening to a memorial reception on Sunday evening (the convention combined the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club's 10th annual seminar in Kamakura and its 40th semi-annual general meeting). It was at the Sunday-evening reception that Mike Whelan told some stories about the early history of the Baker Street Irregulars, and awarded membership in the BSI to Masamichi Higurashi ("Baron Adelbert Gruner").
131. The convention also featured sightseeing tours for the foreign visitors in Kamakura: Yuichi Hirayama led us on a visit to the battleship Mikasa, which was Admiral Togo's flagship during the attack on the Russian fleet at Port Arthur in 1904 (which you may recall from the 1983 television mini-series "Reilly: Ace of Spies"), and Kiyoshi Tanaka took us to the Engaku-ji Temple and the bronze statue of the Great Buddha (both 13th century treasures).
132. There was other sightseeing after the convention, including the Nijo Castle (in Kyoto), which was built in 1603 by Tokugawa Ieyasu (who was the Shogun in the 1980 television mini-series "Shogun"), and the Shoso-in (in Nara), which is a treasure repository created in 752 and which is mentioned in the Canon (in "The Illustrious Client"). And accidental discoveries such as a Sherlockian poster for the Gakusei Jutaku real-estate company in Kyoto.
133. Well, one page isn't anywhere near enough to cover everything, but one page is all you get. Except for the flier on the next page (Mar 98 #5).
134. Mar 98 #6: "So the bibliophile steals pleasure from a catalogue, the lover from his fantasies," A. J. Liebling wrote in BETWEEN MEALS, and that's one of the appropriate quotes in a recent catalog from Bibliophile Books (5 Thomas Road, London E14 7BN, England). Their offers include Jack Tracy's THE ULTIMATE SHERLOCK HOLMES ENCYCLOPEDIA (£7.00), Michael Coren's CONAN DOYLE (discounted to £7.00), and William S. Baring-Gould's SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET (discounted to £4.00).
135. There we were, in a nice Chinese restaurant in Chinatown in Yokohama, discussing whether Sherlock Holmes is a "tiger" (which is nice if you're also a "tiger"), and Tokie Miyoshi noted that all twelve of the animals in the lunar cycle are mentioned in the Canon. Name the animals, and one story in which each is mentioned. For extra credit: it's now the year of the tiger (Jan 98 #3); what is Sherlock Holmes? A modest prize is offered for the first correct answers by e-mail and by mail.
136. Ted Friedman continues to discuss Sherlockian philately in Topical Time: his two-page article on "Sherlockian Postmarks" is in the Mar.-Apr. issue ($5.00 postpaid from the American Topical Association, Box 65749, Tucson, AZ 85728).
137. TALES CALCULATED TO DRIVE YOU MAD is a new series, reprinting the earlier issues of Mad; Jack Kerr spotted #3 (spring 1998) with full-color reprints of original issues #7-9, including the classic "Shermlock Shomes!" from the Oct.-Nov. 1953 issue; $3.99.
138. Daniel Massey died on Mar. 25. He was a distinguished actor, as were his father Raymond Massey and his mother Adrienne Allen, and as is his younger sister Anna Massey (who was Jeremy Brett's first wife). Daniel Massey was a fine J. Neil Gibson in Granada's "The Problem of Thor Bridge" (1991) and the casting was imaginative, what with Watson suggesting that Gibson resembled Abraham Lincoln, a role that made Raymond Massey a star in Hollywood.
139. Here's the schedule for Douglas Wilmer's public appearances during his tour of the U.S.: in Boston at a dinner at The Algonquin Club at 6:30 pm on Apr. 22 (contact: W. Scott Monty, 1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127; office: 800-253-4417 ext 6981); in New York at The Penn Club at 6:30 pm on Apr. 27 (Paul Singleton, 104 Second Avenue #3, New York, NY 10003; office: 212-236-1756/home: 212-533-9093); in Philadelphia at the Community College of Philadelphia at 6:30 pm on Apr. 30 (contact: Scott Bond, 519 East Allens Lane, Philadelphia, PA 19119; home: 215-247-2962); and in Washington at The National Press Club at 2:00 pm on May 2 (contact: Peter E. Blau (see below for address and phone number). In Washington there will be a $5.00 charge at the door to hear Mr. Wilmer, and lunch will be available at the National Press Club from 11:30.
140. Joe Eckrich offers his new six-page sales-list of books, comics, menus, and other Sherlockiana, by e-mail on request to <jeckrich@aol.com>, or you can send a #10 SASE to him at 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026 (outside the U.S. please send two IRCs or $1.00 in currency).
141. Apr 98 #1: The movie "Titanic" has been getting a lot of publicity, and making a lot of money at the box office, and of course it was nice to learn that there's a Sherlockian connection: the passengers on the ship included Harry Widener and his father and mother; only his mother survived, and she gave his book collection to Harvard University, as well as the money to build the Widener Library. And Dan Posnansky reports that one of the books in Widener's collection (at the Houghton Library) is his copy of MY FIRST BOOK (1894), with a letter from each contributor to the anthology laid in; Conan Doyle is not represented by a letter, but instead by a page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the start of Chapter II: The Curse of the Baskervilles); it is nice news indeed that a hitherto-unreported page from the manuscript has turned up.
142. A reminder that Jennie C. Paton's video lending library is available again, with all sorts of major and minor Sherlockian material. She charges $5.50 per cassette for shipping and handling (borrowers pay return postage), and her address is Box 17197, Tampa, FL 33682-7198 (please enclose a #10 SASE) or <jpaton514@aol.com> if you'd like the list of what's in the library.
143. "What do you get when you cross a French dictator with a bucket of dirt?"

144. The Harpooners of the Sea Unicorn will celebrate Halloween with their Sherlockian convention "The Game's Afloat 1998" at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel in West Port, on Oct. 30-Nov. 1; additional information is available from Barbara Roscoe, 7101 Mardel Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63109 <fivepips@aol.com>.
145. The fine recreation of the sitting-room at 221B that delighted both Sherlockians and tourists for many years at S. Holmes, Esq. in San Francisco closed earlier this year (Jan 98 #5). Willy Werby reports that she would prefer to find a new home for the sitting-room in the Bay area, but will consider another city; if you have any suggestions, you can send let her know at 2700 19th Street, San Francisco, CA 94110 <mycroft813@aol.com>.
146. Michael Ross offers a commercial videocassette with the 1979 Soviet television dramatization of "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Speckled Band" starring Vasily Livanov and Vitaly Solomin as Holmes and Watson (134 minutes) in PAL format (with dialogue in Russian). The videocassette of "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1937) with Bruno Guttner and Fritz Odemar is still available, too, also in PAL format (dialogue in German). Note: PAL cassettes can't be played on American NTSC-format VCRs. The cassettes cost DM49.90 or £17.00 or $28.00 each; postage costs DM4.40 in Germany or £4.00 in Europe or $8.50 elsewhere for one to four cassettes (so you save money on multiple orders). Pay with Eurocheques or currency only, please; Michael's address is: Postfach 83-01-25, 51034 Koln, Germany.
147. The argument about whether the Molly Maguires were terrorist anarchists or heroic defenders of the working man probably will continue forever, both in Pennsylvania and in print; Kevin Kenny's MAKING SENSE OF THE MOLLY MAGUIRES (New York: Oxford University Press, 1998; 368 pp., $39.95 cloth, $18.95 paper), reviewed in the Los Angeles Times (Apr. 5) (reported by Les Klinger), appears to be even-handed, criticizing almost everyone involved.
148. Apr 98 #2: "What do you get when you cross a French dictator with a bucket of dirt?" Jeff Dow asked recently, and his answer is "The Napoleon of Grime." Cribbed from Communication (the newsletter of The Pleasant Places of Florida, where this sort of thing is not at all unusual); $10.00 a year from Carl L. Heifetz, 3693 Siena Lane, Palm Harbor, FL 34685.
149. The Pleasant Places of Florida are continuing their tradition of publishing round-robin pastiches, and the latest is THE ADVENTURE OF THE YULE LANTERN LOST; the 16-page pamphlet costs $3.00 postpaid (or $4.00 outside the U.S.) from Carl Heifetz (address above). Also available (ditto) is HAPPY 144TH SHERLOCK!, a 20-page pamphlet that reports in detail on the society's first annual Sherlock's Sunshine Celebration, on Jan. 17, 1998, with texts of the presentations and toasts ($2.50/$3.50).
150. Caliber Comics offers a sales-list of Sherlockian graphic novels and comic books by Martin Powell & Seppo Makinen and others. Their address is (225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170) <caliber@calibercomics.com> <www.calibercomics.com>.
151. Nice news from Gillette Castle in Hadlyme, Connecticut: Tyke Niver reports that at long last visitors will be able to see the old miniature train that Gillette used to run on three miles of track on his estate. The train was sold to the Lake Compounce Amusement Park in 1943, but modernization of the park left no room for the "quaint ride" around the lake, and the owners decided to donate the train to the state park at the Castle. The state will refurbish the train for display at the Castle, but at the moment there are no plans to lay track on the old roadbed.
152. Tyke also reports that a mail-order catalog from What on Earth, 2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087 (800-945-2552) has a T-shirt (item V143T, $18.95) with a small publicity still that shows the Three Stooges in Sherlockian costume.
153. "Sheer Luck" is the slogan (or possibly the warning) on a new series of Minnesota state lottery tickets reported by Julie McKuras. Alas, there has been no report of a winning sheerlucky Sherlockian, but perhaps they're just modest.
154. Susan Conant's THE BARKER STREET REGULARS (Feb 98 #4) is only one of a long shelf of dog-lovers' mysteries: Patricia Guiver's DELILAH DOOLITTLE AND THE PURLOINED POOCH (New York: Berkley Prime Crime, 1997; 196 pp., $5.99) stars a pet detective in southern California whose own Doberman pinscher is named Watson, which generates a bit of occasional Canonical dialogue during their pursuit of missing animals and assorted criminals. "No animals were harmed in the writing of this book," the acknowledgements promise.
155. Turlock Loams and Dr. Fatso are drawn into a spectral vortex of evil (and pawky humor) in THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEVIL'S YARD in a new Pequod pressing, hand-set and hand-printed as usual. $40.00 (in allusive cloth) [which does seem to call for an explanation, but I'm afraid to ask] or $20.00 (in paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
156. Apr 98 #3: Bibliophile Books (5 Thomas Road, London E14 7BN, England) is offering more interesting books in its mail-order catalogs, including Peter Haining's A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPENDIUM (discounted to £3.50) and Judy Williams' THE MODERN SHERLOCK HOLMES: AN INTRODUCTION INTO FORENSIC SCIENCE TODAY (discounted to £5.00); the latter book is based on a BBC World Service radio series that brought up to date "the meticulous detection methods set down by Sherlock Holmes 100 years ago."
157. Tokio Miyoshi noted that all twelve of the animals in the lunar cycle are mentioned in the Canon, I noted (Mar 98 #6), asking for the names of the animals, and one story in which each is mentioned. Tom Cynkin won a prize for being the first to respond correctly by mail (no one has responded by e-mail). So far, everyone responding has identified Sherlock Holmes as a tiger, but he was an ox (Jan. 6 comes before the Lunar New Year).
158. "There is not a great deal to celebrate in the sleepy southern English town of Woking," Trevor Datson wrote in a Reuters dispatch (Apr. 13) spotted by Scott Monty. "It does have the headquarters of the McLaren grand prix motor racing team, and the Spice Girls once recorded here, but otherwise there is little to set it apart from any other commuter town." But the item does not go on to say that Woking is mentioned in a Sherlock Holmes. Woking has something else to brag about: The Martian. It was 100 years ago in Woking that a vast metal cylinder containing the first extra-terrestrial invaders landed on Horsell Common, as recorded in H. W. Wells' classic science-fiction story, and Woking has honored the event with a 23-foot-high sculpture of one of the invaders. Sherlockians know, of course, that Holmes was involved in the battle against the Martians, reported by Manley Wade Wellman and Wade Wellman in their SHERLOCK HOLMES' WAR OF THE WORLDS (1975).
159. THE SIGN OF 4 is a three-CD set from Knitting Factory Works (KFW197) offering contemporary jazz by Derek Bailey and Pat Metheny (guitars) and Gregg Bendian and Paul Wertico (percussion); the CDs and some of the tracks have Sherlockian titles, and the music is thoroughly avant-garde. The set costs $20.00 in the shops, and from the company (74 Leonard Street, New York, NY 10013) <kfw@knittingfactory.com> <www.knittingfactory.com>.
160. The Norwegian Explorers will celebrate their 50th anniversary this year, at a "Founders' Footprints Conference" on Aug. 7-9 in Minneapolis, and a flier about the fun and games and other events is available from Julie A. McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124) <mike9750@aol.com>.
161. David Pearson notes that the current catalog from The Toy Soldier Co. (100 Riverside Drive, New York, NY 10024) (201-792-6665) <www.toysoldierco.com> offers 54mm figures and models that include as "Sherlock Holmes on Bicycle, with Dr. Watson" ($75.00), sets of the 66th Foot and some Afghan soldiers ($159.00 each), a set of the Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers ($91.00), and a steam launch that might pass for the Aurora ($75.00).

162. British police are to "use bloodhounds for the first time in 60 years in their fight against crime," according to an article in the International Express (Mar. 24), at hand from John Baesch; Essex police have bought two pedigreed 14-week-old puppies that are now being trained and are expected to be at work by year's end. The dogs are named "Sherlock" and "Morse".
163. Apr 98 #4: Penguin Audiobooks has issued a new set of audiocassettes with Douglas Wilmer's fine readings from the Canon. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME 3 has four stories (Engr/Nobl/Bery/Copp) and it costs £7.99 in England (Penguin USA lags far behind Penguin UK, alas, and the set won't be in the shops here for some time).
164. "Sherlock Holmes and the Lost Rose of India" is a new play, which opened on Mar. 26 at the Gaslight Theatre in Tucson, and will run through May 30; the address is 7010 East Broadway Boulevard, Tucson, AZ 85710 (520-886-9428).
165. Elaine Hamill reports that the prospectus for the Sherlock Holmes Statue commissioned by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London for installation in Baker Street to celebrate the millennium is available to donors. A sevenpage brochure with original artwork by Alan Keeler and a photograph of the maquette by John Doubleday (who designed the statue of Sherlock Holmes at Meiringen) will be sent to those who contribute £25.00 ($40.00), and copies signed by the artist and sculptor to those who contribute £50.00 ($80.00). Checks (payable to The Sherlock Holmes Statue Company Ltd.) can be sent to the Appeal Fund (16 Kirton Close, Chiswick, London, W4 5UU, England).
166. R & M George (14441 S.W. 124th Place, Miami, FL 33186) <rgeorge2@bellsouth.net> offered death certificates for William Sherlock Scott Holmes and John Hamish Watson (Jan 98 #8), and there are many other fictional certificates available, from Cleopatra to Rick Blaine to King Kong to Arthur Conan Doyle (ask for a list).
167. Jim Suszynski found a Book Essentials Promotions paperback edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES published in 1994 with atmospheric cover art by Jim Seward; priced at $4.95 on the cover, but discounted to $1.00 at a local shop. And his daughter, visiting Disney World, found a $40.00 clock showing the Whitbread pub sign for The Sherlock Holmes (from the British Pub Collectables Club, The Old Coach House, 92 Lodge Road, Feltwell, Norfolk IP26 4DN, England)
168. Robert C. Hess (559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwater, NY 11718) offers a new sales-list of Sherlockian posters, prints, dolls, puzzles, artwork, cards, and much more.
169. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota reports on the search for foreign translations of the Canon, and other news; you can join the mailing list by writing to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
170. Ev Herzog spotted a colorful beaver in Sherlockian costume on the cover of Sarah Benjamin's SPELLING Golden Books "Step-Ahead Workbook" (grades 2-3); $2.39 in magazine shops and elsewhere.
171. Doug Wrigglesworth spotted Massimo Polidoro's article on "Houdini and Conan Doyle: The Story of a Strange Friendship" in Skeptical Inquirer (Mar.-Apr. 1998); the issue also has an excellent interview with Martin Gardner, now 83 years old (he doesn't feel a day over 75), and still having fun debunking pseudoscience. $4.95; Box 703, Amherst, NY 14226 (800-634-1610).
172. Apr 98 #5: Michael Bourne visited Rex Stout at his home in 1973, and some of their discussion was published in 1977 in CORSAGE: A BOUQUET OF REX STOUT & NERO WOLFE. And now the entire interview is available on a 90-minute audiocassette; AN INFORMAL INTERVIEW WITH REX STOUT costs $20.00 postpaid from James A. Rock & Co., 113 North Washington Street, Rockville, MD 20850. There are only a few comments on Sherlock Holmes, but it's grand to hear Stout's thoughts about everything, including his own writing.
173. Jim Rock also offers SUBCUTANEOUSLY, MY DEAR WATSON, by Jack Tracy with Jim Berkey (1978); it's a detailed and careful examination of Sherlock Holmes' use of cocaine, and what that involved at the end of the nineteenth century (91 pp.). The postpaid price is $25.00 (cloth) or $15.00 (paper).
174. William Gillette wrote twenty full-length plays, and he starred in nine of them. And the play in which he performed most often (more than 1,800 performances) was not "Sherlock Holmes" but rather "Secret Service: A Romance of the Southern Confederacy". STAGING THE NATION: PLAYS FROM THE AMERICAN THEATER 1787-1909, by Don B. Wilmeth (Boston: Bedford Books, 1998; 574 pp., $17.99), is intended as a textbook, with the texts of nine plays (including "Secret Service"), and it offers a good chance to see what Gillette could do when he wasn't writing about Sherlock Holmes.
175. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE STUDY OF DEATH is Tony Lumb's third pastiche about Holmes' adventures in Yorkshire (where Tony lives, so he handles the local color well indeed); it's a locked-room murder mystery, and the 46-page pamphlet costs $6.00 postpaid (in currency, please) from the author (21 Albert Street, Featherstone, Pontefract, West Yorks. WF7 5EX, England).
176. The Calabash Press has issued its spring 1998 catalog, with information on the new and older books; Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <ashtree@netshop.net> <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>.
177. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist at 7:00 pm on May 20 at The Chart House at 340 West South Temple in Salt Lake City. If you would like to join us for the event, please let us know; my address is at the end of the newsletter, and from May 16 I'll be staying at the Peery Hotel (801-521-4300).
178. The Baker Street Dispatch is an interesting eight-page newsletter edited by Thomas and Janet Biblewski ($8.50 a year for six issues; Box 5503, Toledo, OH 43613); the March issue includes articles by Donald A. Redmond on how he came to be a Sherlockian indexer, and by Don Hobbs (who proudly calls himself a maniac collector) on "What Is a Completist?"
179. George Schwartz (Another Fine Mess, R.D. 1, Box 1419, Freeland, PA 19224) offers full-color laser-print reproductions of posters and lobby cards from Basil Rathbone's "Sherlock Holmes" films ($5.00 to $7.00 each); send $1.00 for his illustrated list.
180. A flier at hand for The Sherlock Holmes Festival scheduled in Crowborough on July 3-10; the festival will include events both Doylean and Sherlockian, and additional information is available from P.O. Box 17, Crowborough, East Sussex TN6 1WU, England.
181. Apr 98 #6: "The ship is magnificent, the program engrossing, and the company superb," Dorothy Stix writes, about the Fourth Occasional Sherlockian Cruise, which sails from New York on June 20 to Bermuda; there will be two days at sea, and four days in Bermuda, and the Sherlockian entertainers include Philip Shreffler, Marilynne McKay, Irving Kamil, Joanne Zahorsky, Kate Karlson, and Mary Ellen Rich. Cabins are still available ($998 to $1370 per person) and more information is available from Dorothy at Box 96, Norwood, NJ 07648 (201-768-2241)
182. Rebecca Anderson received a report from Laurie R. King that you can order signed or inscribed copies of her "Mary Russell" series from Laurie's local bookstore: Crossroads Books (attn: Jan Van Wardenburg), 1935 Main Street, Watsonville, CA 95076 (408-728-4139); credit-card orders welcome. Laurie also reports that O JERUSALEM, the next book in the series, may be in the bookstores before the end of 1999.
183. Colin R. Grimes' new play "Exit Sherlock Holmes" will have its world premiere in Florida next month at the Chapters Bookshop dinner-theater: part 1 ("Autumn of Terror") on May 8 and 15 cost $24.95, and part 2 ("The Master's Word") on May 9 and 16 costs $29.95 (or $49.95 for both parts). This is a Jack-the-Ripper play, and the Chapters Bookshop & Cafe is at 717 West Smith Street, Orlando, FL 32804 (407-246-1546).

184. The WISHBONE JUMBO FUN BOOK (New York: Modern Publishing, 1998; $3.99) includes eight pages on Wishbone's investigation of the Hound of the Baskervilles; it's a coloring book with puzzles and mazes and other fun for fans of the television series.
185. Emory Lee kindly sent this cartoon by T. O. Sylvester from the San Francisco Chronicle (Feb. 1); the caption says: "How come the Cat of the Baskervilles never gets blamed for anything?"
186. The summer mail-order catalog from The Daily Planet (Box 64411, St. Paul, MN 55164) (800-324-5950) offers their Sherlockian deerstalker (sizes M/L/XL) for $22.00 (discounted from $32.00); item 52184.
187. Paul Martin reports that the summer-preview catalog from Signals (Box 1029, Des Moines, IA 50336) (800-669-9696) offers a "Holmes Bloodhound" figurine for $69.95 (item 62360); this one is different from similar figures available elsewhere, and comes in a gift box/display stand.
188. Keith E. Webb has lived in Japan since 1991, and he is one of the founders of The Japanese Cabinet and editor of The Dispatch Box (the only Englishlanguage newsletter about Sherlockians in Japan). His SHERLOCK HOLMES IN JAPAN was one of the items available at last month's convention there; the 52-page pamphlet has thirteen interesting articles on Japanese Sherlockians and Sherlockiana and it costs $10.00 postpaid. Your checks or currency can be sent to Keith at 15104 SE 22nd Street, Bellevue, WA 98007.

189. May 98 #1: The Sons of the Copper Beeches celebrated their 50th anniversary this month in Philadelphia, with a reception at the Athenaeum and a dinner at the Down Town Club, and it was a grand affair, marking the first time in the history of the society when ladies have been welcomed to dinner with the Sons. It did seem a bit strange, however, that the historic event was held at a club that had no functioning ladies room.
190. And Douglas Wilmer had a fine time on his tour, entertaining Sherlockians in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Washington with readings from the Sherlock Holmes stories and fascinating tales about his long career as an actor. He hopes to be able to record all of the stories for Penguin (which has issued five four-story sets so far), but it seems quite unlikely that the BBC can be persuaded to release any more episodes from his 1960s "Sherlock Holmes" television series.
191. The fourth volume in the BSI's archival-history series was IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS OF THE MID 'FORTIES, edited by Jon L. Lellenberg (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 1995; 392 pp., $24.95) and covering the period from the Trilogy Dinner in March 1994 to Christopher Morley's June 1947 declaration that there would be no more BSI annual dinners; copies are still available with photographs of those at the Trilogy Dinner and at the 1946 and 1947 annual dinners, and with almost everyone identified. $27.90 postpaid (or ($28.90 for international orders) from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
192. Dave Galerstein reports that Ely Liebow's JOE BELL still is available from the publisher (item 197-9, $18.95 postpaid); it's excellent biography of the man who impressed Arthur Conan Doyle so highly. Popular Press, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, OH 43403 (800-515-5118).
193. Thomas F. Grady ("Mr. Hilton Soames, of the College of St. Luke's") died on Mar. 24, 1998. He was a stalwart member of The Speckled Band of Boston for decades, and proud that his grandfather had heard Sir Arthur Conan Doyle lecture about spiritualism in Boston in 1922 ("his presentations were well constructed, but unconvincing," Tom's grandfather noted in his diary). He had a long and distinguished career as a professor and dean, reflected in his Investiture, which he received in 1962.
194. Plan ahead: Bouchercon (the world mystery convention) will be held in Philadelphia on Oct. 3-5, 1998 (507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147). and in Milwaukee on Sept. 30-Oct 3, 1999 (Box 341218, Milwaukee, WI 53234), and in Denver on Sept. 7-10, 2000 (Box 17910, Boulder, CO 90308).
195. It's not all that often one gets to see an 85-year-old Sherlockian film for the first time, and even though only the title of "Piu forte che Sherlock Holmes" is Sherlockian, it was nice to discover that the film has survived, and to see it at the National Gallery of Art (in a program on "Italian Studio Production: The Early Years"). Made by the Itala Film Co. in Turin in 1913, the seven-minute short involves a man who falls asleep and dreams he is a policeman chasing a criminal (with a lot of trick photography). The title translates as "Stronger Than Sherlock Holmes".
196. May 98 #2: Sherlockians have held elected political office over the years, but they've been few and far between in law enforcement. Jim De Stefano ("The St. Pancras Case" in the Baker Street Irregulars) was appointed Police Commissioner of Hudson, New York, in 1996 and he will serve until the end of 1999; he presides over 21 officers and 8 civilian personnel, and proudly reports there no longer are any Moriarty's in Hudson.
197. Here a Sherlock, there a Sherlock: further to the mention (Mar 97 #1) of Sherlock H. Lincoln, who died aged 77 in Pittsfield, Mass., in 1895, Gayle Harris has found Edwin and Caroline Kiln Lincoln, who named their first son (born in Philadelphia in 1863) Sherlock Harvey Lincoln. He and his wife Alice Loretta Ashenfelter named their first son (born in Burns, Kans., in 1901) Sherlock Edwin Lincoln. And Sherlock Harvey (died in 1933) isn't the Sherlock H. who died in 1895. Apparently genealogical records can't yet be searched by first name only, but one assumes that there must be other pre-Holmesian Sherlocks to be found.
198. Rosemary Michaud asked, on one of the electronic mailing lists: "why were the children of the Scowrers such insufferable brats?"
199. Jacques Futrelle was only 37 years old when he died on the Titanic in 1912; Freddie Seymour and Bettina Kyper wrote about his life and his career as a mystery writer in 1995 in THE THINKING MACHINE: JACQUES FUTRELLE (Jan 96 #6), and now they have reprinted his THE GREAT SUIT CASE MYSTERY from the front pages of the Boston American (Oct. 5-8, 1905). The story is a Sherlockian pastiche in which Futrelle offered a fictional solution to a murder mystery then baffling the Boston police; the 58-page pamphlet costs $5.00 postpaid ($8.00 outside the United States) from Seymour/Kyper Productions, Box 1369, Sandwich, MA 02563.
200. The latest stamp in our series honoring "Great Americans" shows Henry R. Luce (1898-1967); he was an editor and publisher, and the founder of Time, Fortune, Life, and Sports Illustrated (and all those magazines have published Sherlockiana).
201. "Mysteriously Yours" (a mystery dinner-theater company appearing at the Royal York Hotel and at the Old Mill Restaurant Toronto) is now performing "The Love Boat Mystery!" (which features Hercule Poirot); their repertoire includes a Sherlockian event and they will be glad to perform for groups. Additional information is available from the company at 1927 Yonge Street, Toronto ON M4S 1Z3, Canada (416-486-7469) (800-668-3323) <mystery@interlog.com> <www.mysteriouslyyours.com>.
202. Carole Nelson Douglas has reported that her new Irene Adler story "Mesmerizing Bertie" will be published in CRIME THROUGH TIME II, edited by Miriam Grace Monfredo and Sharan Newman, due in September from Berkley ($6.99).
203. Roberta Davies notes a report in The Bookseller (Apr. 17) that Virgin Books has celebrated Spike Milligan's 80th birthday with a special edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES ACCORDING TO SPIKE MILLIGAN (£15.99). Milligan has some familiarity with the story, having played a Policeman in the Peter Cook/Dudley Moore film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978); he also has played Sherlock Holmes in a skit broadcast in the BBC-TV "Q" series.
204. May 98 #3: The Gleniffer Press has published its fourth microbook (2.3 x 1.9 cm) edition of one of the Sherlock Holmes stories: THE ENGINEER'S THUMB (101 pp. set in readable 2-point type) costs £15.00 (to the U.K.) or $26.00 (elsewhere) postpaid; they do excellent work, and their new address is Benvoir, Wigtown, Newton Stewart, Galloway DG8 9EE, Scotland, U.K. <benvoir@aol.com> <members.aol.com/benvoir> (U.S. dollar checks and

- credit-card orders are welcome). If your taste for miniature books extends beyond the Canon, The Lord Advocate for Scotland, on behalf of Her Majesty, has granted a Royal License to Gleniffer to print and publish a miniature edition of the King James New Testament on the first day of January 2000.
205. Rosemary Michaud asked: "why were the children of the Scowrers such insufferable brats?" Because their parents were too Vermissive.
206. It was a Sherlockian silhouette on the flier that caught my eye, and then the two-track programing at the Virginia Romance Writers Conference that's scheduled for Mar. 26-28, 1999, in Williamsburg. The second track offers criminology workshops on crime scenes and FBI role playing (most romance novels have subplots that involve more than love and sex, I was told). If you'd like to be on their mailing list, write to Virginia Romance Writers, 13 Woodlawn Terrace, Fredericksburg, VA 22405 <spgreenman@aol.com>.
207. The Mysterious Bookshop's spring-summer catalog with two pages of new Sherlockiana (and additional rare and collectable material), and lots of other books, of course. And three addresses: 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840); and 8763 Beverly Boulevard, West Hollywood, CA 90048 (800-821-9017); and 82 Marylebone High Street, London W1M 3DE, England. A separate (and larger) S'ian list also is available <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net> <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
208. The colorful beaver in Sherlockian costume (Apr 98 #4) also appears on the cover of Jeanie Ahrens' ADDITION AND SUBTRACTION Golden Books "Step-Ahead Workbook" ($2.39 in magazine shops and elsewhere).
209. Sherlock Holmes said he had bought his Stradivarius for only 55 shillings, and told Watson that it was worth 500 guineas. It would be worth more now: according to a report in the Wilmington News Journal (Apr. 2), at hand from Jack Kerr, a London dealer has paid a record $1.58 million for a Stradivarius that once was owned by Rudolphe Kreutzer (to whom Beethoven dedicated the "Kreutzer" sonata).
210. Alexandra Haropulos spotted Victor Lewis-Smith's review (in the April issue of Harpers & Queen) of the Sherlock Holmes Restaurant in the Victoria & Albert Hotel in Manchester (which is owned by the Granada Group): "dinner was one of the most perfect, and most expensive, I have ever had in this country" (£170 for two, with wine).
211. The Holmes & Watson Report continues to offer an interesting mix of sense and nonsense, and the May issue will be of special interest to film buffs and television fans, with Jennie Paton's report on the Russian television series that starred Vasily Livanov, and Dave Morrill's take on Christopher Lee's "Sherlock Holmes and the Deadly Necklace" (1962). $14.00 a year (six issues), from Brad Keefauver, 4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.
212. May 98 #4: A VOICE FROM THE ETHER (Bridgewater: Big House Books, 1998) is Eddie Maguire's third pastiche; an Edison phonograph presents a mystery to Sherlock Holmes in 1891, and he solves it in Essex. The 39-page pamphlet costs $11.00 postpaid from Ian Henry Publications, 20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England. Also available (same address) is a packet of ten note-cards (with envelopes) with two different illustrations by Sidney Paget ($12.00 postpaid).
213. McCranie's Pipe and Tobacco Shop offers their Sherlock Holmes ceramic tobacco jar (in green, burgundy, or tan) for $70.00; 4143 Park Road, Charlotte, NC 28209 <704-523-8554> (888-523-8554) <www.mccranies.com>.
214. The HBO mini-series "From the Earth to the Moon" was delightful, and if you missed it this time, it likely will repeat in this fall. Episodes 10 (about the Apollo 15 mission) and 12 (about the Apollo 17 mission) offer a chance to see the actors portray astronaut-geologist Jack Schmitt (who named Sherlock Crater on the Moon in honor of Sherlock Holmes), astronaut Joe Allen (who while Capcom in Houston held a Sherlockian conversation with Schmitt on the Moon), and geologist Farouk El-Baz (who persuaded the International Astronomical Union to give official approval for the name Sherlock Crater). You don't see any of the Sherlockian stuff, but the mini-series tells a grand story and tells it well indeed.
215. Dave Galerstein reports that his daughter lives in Morristown, N.J., just down the road from Baker Street, a name that dates from when Edgar W. Smith lived in Morristown; his was the only house on the lane, and he was able to persuade the local authorities to approve the name. And the latest news is that a builder is putting up a new development of expensive homes called: Holmes Court.
216. An inflationary note: the "illustrated classic edition" of SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, adapted by Malvina G. Vogel, first published by Moby Books in 1977 at 95c, is still in print, but it now costs $2.50.
217. Planning already is under way for the next Baskerville Bash on in New York on Jan. 8, 1999. If you'd like to be on the mailing list, contact Maribeau Briggs (46 East 29th Street #2R, New York, NY 10016) or Susan E. Dahlinger <sebd@aol.com>. The program committee will be happy to hear from anyone who would like to offer short (and humorous) skits, plays, poems, readings, papers, acts, or other performances (Spessoti and Russo, 164 Concord Avenue, Hartsdale, NY 10530).
218. Quinn Fawcett's AGAINST THE BROTHERHOOD: A MYCROFT HOLMES NOVEL (New York: Forge/Tom Doherty, 1997; 319 pp., $23.95) is set in 1887, when Mycroft's newly-hired personal secretary is sent under cover into a thoroughly malevolent scheme that threatens (of course) the security of Europe; Mycroft also is on hand and in action, in various disguises and in European cities far from Pall Mall, and saves almost everyone worth saving. Chelsea Quinn Yarbro and William Fawcett are the actual authors of the book, which carefully leaves plenty of room for a sequel, or even sequels.
219. May 98 #5: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met at The Chart House in Salt Lake City on May 20, for a dinner honoring the world's first forensic geologist, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. Heidi-Marie Mason welcomed the visitors on behalf of the locals, and Sarah Andrews reported that she plans to murder a vertebrate paleontologist in her next book, which will be her fifth in her series about Emily Hansen, a petroleum geologist who doubles as a detective (the first four are still in print, and recommended: TENSLEEP, A FALL IN DENVER, MOTHER NATURE, and ONLY FLESH & BONES). Our next dinner is scheduled for Oct. 20, when the Geological Society of America meets in Toronto.
220. The Shadows of the Elm, a society of elementary-school students in New Mexico, are once again out and about, Carolyn Gassner notes, and their latest theatrical production was a radio-play version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", which now is available on audiocassette; $5.00 postpaid (or $7.00 outside the U.S.) from Carolyn (P.O. Drawer G, Corrales, NJ 87048).
221. Barbara Roscoe has a new e-mail address (in case you received no response to your request for information about "The Game's Afloat 1998" at the Sheraton Plaza Hotel in West Port on Oct. 30-Nov. 1); 7101 Mardel Avenue, Saint Louis, MO 63109 <gameafloat@aol.com>.
222. Ken Lanza has spotted a report in the Old Time Radio digest that the Sci-Fi channel will air an "Alien Voices" radio-drama telecast of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" on July 12, from a Los Angeles theater; this would appear to have been taped when the company recorded the audiocassettes that were released last year (Nov 97 #6). Leonard Nimoy directed, from a script by Nat Segaloff and John de Lancie, with Armin Shimerman as Challenger and Dwight Schultz as Malone, and the recording was nicely done indeed.
223. Joe Eckrich offers a second sales-list of Sherlockiana from his collection, by e-mail on request to <jeckrich@aol.com>, or you can send a #10 SASE to him at 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026 (if outside the United States, please send two IRCs or $1.00 in currency).
224. Ben Wood (Box 740, Ellenton, FL 34222) offers the twelve stamps issued by Nicaragua in 1972 to honor Interpol (Sherlock Holmes is on the high value); $15.00 postpaid (to the United States only). Also in Florida, The Pleasant Places are planning a visit to the Cassadaga Spiritualist Camp on July

- 11; there will be discussions of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and spiritualism, and additional information is available from David Scott (Box 463, De Land, FL 32721 <davescot@ix.netcom.com>.
225. Sorry about that: I had the address wrong (Apr 98 #5). A flier at hand for The Sherlock Holmes Festival in Crowborough on July 3-10; the festival will include events both Doylean and Sherlockian, and additional information is available from P.O. Box 117, Crowborough, East Sussex TN6 1WU, England.
226. It isn't often that you can look at a book that looks back at you, but that certainly is true of MYSTERIES IN BUGTOWN, written by William Boniface and illustrated by Jim Harris (Denver: Accord, 1997; $15.95); spotted by Jennie Paton, it's a children's book that is imaginative and amusing. And one of the inhabitants of Bugtown is an Inspector Cricket in Sherlockian costume.
227. May 98 #6: TEDDY & ARTHUR is the latest collection of John Ruyle's poems, honoring Ted Schulz, who was born on June 2, 1923, when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was lecturing in San Francisco; hand-set and hand-printed at the Pequod Press, as always, and the postpaid cost is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John, at 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
228. The "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" was an award-winning one-hour series that ran from 1974 to 1983, produced and directed by Himan Brown, with more than a dozen Sherlock Holmes stories starring Kevin McCarthy (Sherlock Holmes) and Court Benson (Dr. Watson). And the good news is: the series is back on the air, syndicated by Westwood One as "Mystery Theater" (since it's available to any local station). But the bad news is: Westwood One isn't able to tell you which of your local stations will be airing the series. But it has been rumored that in Chicago it's WMAQ-AM (670).
229. Prof. Larry Meinert (Washington State University) teaches an honors seminar on "Mysteries of the Earth: If Sherlock Holmes Had Been a Geologist", and his syllabus demonstrates how well the Sherlock Holmes stories can be used to interest and educate students. The electronically enabled can check his web-site at <www.wsu.edu:8080/~meinert/SH.html>.
230. Plan ahead: the STUD Sherlockian Society will hold its Sixth Annual Anglican Holiday Getaway Weekend on Oct. 16-18 at the Stagecoach Inn in Cedarburg, Wis. The Eighth Annual STUD Dinner is scheduled for Mar. 5, 1998, in Schiller Park, Ill., followed by a Solar Pons Breakfast on Mar. 6. Details are available from Allan Devitt (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106).
231. Thomas Pitner's one-page article "Taking Tea with Sherlock Holmes" (which discusses tea in the Canon) appeared in the May-June issue of Tea: A Magazine; $4.95 in stores such as Borders or Barnes & Noble, or $5.45 postpaid (Box 348, Scotland, CT 06264) (888-456-8651).
232. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) offers copies of THE HOUNDS COLLECTION: VOLUME 3, with 116 pages of pastiche, poems, and serious writing by members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new, but a few pieces have appeared elsewhere. $13.00 or CA$18.00 or £9.00 postpaid by airmail; $9.00/$12.00/£6.00 postpaid by surface mail. Payment by personal checks or currency is welcome.
233. The Apr.-May issue of British Heritage mentions Conan Doyle in Anita Frullani's article on "The Piltown Man Forgery", and the June-July issue has Jim Hargan's well-illustrated article on "Dartmoor of the Baskervilles". $4.99 on newsstands, or $6.00 postpaid (6405 Flank Drive, Harrisburg, PA 17112 (800-358-6327). And there's a web-site at <www.thehistorynet.com>.
234. THE DIARIES OF MRS. JOHN H. WATSON, NEE MORSTAN (Feb 98 #6) is still available, but not for much longer (from me, at any rate); the late Fraser Smyth wrote the diaries in 1995, and they show a Mary Morstan who was both modern and unconventional. $4.00 postpaid in the U.S., and $4.30 by surface post elsewhere; checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please, at the address below.
235. Jun 98 #1: Mike Whelan and Mary Ann Bradley have moved to Indianapolis, and their new address is 414 North Park Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46202-3642. That's the address to use for official (or unofficial) letters to the "Wiggins" of The Baker Street Irregulars, and for journals, newsletters, and meeting notices that societies are sending to Mike.
236. Frank Darlington reports that a recent catalog from the Worldwide Treasure Bureau (Box 5012, Visalia, CA 93278) (800-437-0222) offers Victorian gold sovereigns ($295.00), Victorian and Edwardian pennies ($9.95 for ten), and gold Napoleons ($215.00-350.00). And for Doyleans, U.S. "gold back" bills (series of 1922) that he would have seen when he visited here ($375.00 for the $10 bill and $450.00 for the $20 bill).
237. There are (at least) three connections between the actors Eille Norwood and Jeremy Brett. They have both played Sherlock Holmes. And Eille Norwood's real name was Brett. What's the third (Kevin Baconish) connection?
238. The American Association of Petroleum Geologists' annual meeting in Salt Lake City last month had an official postalservice postmark, arranged by the AAPG with the aid of Highland Stamp and Commemorative Design (4835 South Highland Drive #1346, Salt Lake City, UT 84117). The company will be happy to assist in designing and arranging for a commemorative postmark for any sort of convention (including Sherlockian gatherings), and can produce cacheted covers that can be canceled at the convention (which need not be in Utah). And as an added attraction, the Salt Lake City post office arranged for two clerks to sell stamps that showed attractive dinosaurs and Martian geology.
239. The summer issue of The Serpentine Muse (published quarterly by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes) offers an assortment of amusing winning essays from the competitions during the "Holmes at His Zenith" cruise to the Caribbean in 1995; $10.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog, 360 West 21st Street, New York, NY 10011.
240. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has David Stuart Davies' interview with Ian Richardson (with discussion of his work on the 1980s television films), and an interview with Adrienne Corri (who played Angela Osborne in "A Study in Terror" in 1965), as well as the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. Scarlet Street now is published bimonthly, and costs $35.00 a year; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
241. I had a chance last month to thank Jim Lehrer last month, for a delightful quote I've often repeated. So I will repeat it again: it was in the Smithsonian magazine (Mar. 1990, when he was an associate editor of the MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour"); he wrote about the pleasures of collecting, describing himself as a world-class collector of depot signs and other memorabilia). Collectors, Lehrer suggested, are not odd. "We are merely possessed with a need to collect certain things that some people might consider odd."
242. Jun 98 #2: Gypsies appear to be no more welcome in Great Britain now than they were at the time of "The Speckled Band" (according to an item in the April 10 issue of the Boston Globe, kindly forwarded by Scott Monty): Interior Minister Jack Straw said that he had received reports of an exodus of gypsies from the Czech Republic and Slovakia and warned they they would not be welcome if they sought asylum in Britain.
243. Les Klingler reports that "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish" (1916) is available on videocassette from Foothill Video (Box 900367, Palmdale, CA 93590) for $7.95 plus $3.50 shipping. This is the two-reel silent film starring Douglas Fairbanks as the detective Coke Enneyday (in Sherlockian costume) and Bessie Love as The Little Fish Blower. From a story by D. W. Griffith (as Granville Warwick), just to drop another name.
244. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets (with 15 different stamps for each decade) have now reached the 1920s. The first known Sherlockian radio program was broadcast on Dec. 4, 1929 (by the BBC, actually, and it was a biography of Dr. Watson, by Desmond MacCarthy). Doyleans might prefer stamps that recall baseball, prohibition, or the 19th amendment, as Sir Arthur had something to say about all three of them.
245. Further to the report (Jan 98 #7) that Christie's South Kensington planned an auction of the Midg and Cameo cameras used by Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths to take the photographs of the Cottingley fairies, six original photographs on contemporary mounts, a first edition of Conan Doyle's

- THE COMING OF THE FAIRIES (1922), three later watercolors of fairies made by Elsie, and a 1983 holograph letter by Elsie giving her version of events, the owner of the material, collector Geoffrey Crawley, rejected a £20,000 bid from Mel Gibson (whose company made the film "FairyTale: A True Story") and accepted instead £14,000 from a fund-raising campaign that will keep the archive at the National Museum of Film, Photography and Television in Bradford. "Dash it all, this is Britain!" Crawley told the Bradford Telegraph and Argus, "I bought them originally to prevent them going to the U.S. so wasn't about to risk them going abroad again."
246. Alfred Kazin died on June 5. He was an important scholar and teacher of American literature, and his book ON NATIVE GROUNDS: AN INTERPRETATION OF MODERN AMERICAN PROSE LITERATURE (1942) was a standard text in college courses for decades. It was on a freighter crossing the Atlantic in a World War Two convoy that he "compulsively reread" the Sherlock Holmes stories, he wrote in NEW YORK JEW (1978). "In Conan Doyle there was just one crime at a time, and everything else was suspended, all England held its, breath, until the Great Brain, outwardly asleep like Buddha in his total concentration on this one case, came through with a solution satisfying and *loveable*."
247. The 30-minute television series "Muppets Tonight!" (now in repeats on the Disney channel has (at least) two episodes with Sherlockians skits, one of the shows guest-starring Heather Locklear and the other Paula Abdul. And John Stephenson spotted a Golden Books coloring book GONZO'S SILLY SKITS & CLASSIC BITS (1997) with Nate Butler's two-page illustration of "Classic Theater of Whales Presents Sherlock Holmes" ($1.29).
248. Jun 98 #3: Marsha Pollak reports that Bruce Taylor has purchased the late Dean Dickensheet's collection; it's still in boxes, but worth checking out if you're in the neighborhood of San Francisco Mystery Books, at 4175 24th Street, San Francisco, CA 94114) (415-282-7444). The shop is open Wed-Sun, 11:30-5:30.
249. Sherlockian material continues to turn up on laserdisc: "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985, with Nicholas Rowe and Alan Cox) has been released by Pioneer ($39.95), and the "Ship in a Bottle" episode of "Star Trek: The Next Generation" (1993, with Daniel Davis as Moriarty) is available from Paramount/Pioneer ($34.98).
250. According to Philip Jose Farmer, the Wold Newton family originated when a radioactive meteor landed in Wold Newton, England, in the year 1795. The radiation caused a genetic mutation in those present, which endowed many of their descendants with extremely high intelligence and strength, as well as an exceptional capacity and drive to perform good (or evil) deeds. And two of his literary biographies give the details: TARZAN ALIVE (1972) and DOC SAVAGE: HIS APOCALYPTIC LIFE (1973). The books still are fun to read; both Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty, needless to say, are among the Wold Newton descendants, and, thanks to energetic fans who keep track of crossovers, there is a long list of other fictional heroes and villains in the Wold Newton universe. The electronically enabled can see the results at a web-site at <members.aol.com/ufpsfwin/Pulp.htm>.
251. What's the third (Kevin Baconish) connection between actors Eille Norwood and Jeremy Brett? Thanks to Carol Elaine Cyr, who noted that Isobel Elsom who played Mary Morstan in Eille Norwood's "The Sign of Four" (1923) and Jeremy Brett's mother Mrs. Eynsford-Hill in "My Fair Lady" (1964).
252. Dame Catherine Cookson died on June 11. She wrote 100 books, and they have sold more than 100 million copies in 18 languages, and she is the most-read author in British libraries. The Public Lending Right Office, which tracks library borrowing and pays authors, reported that she headed their list in 1992 (Feb 93 #2), and she still does: in 1997 nine of the ten most-borrowed books were hers. She began writing in 1955, and insisted that "I am not a romantic writer. Those sloppy, silly stories. A strong, storytelling novelist is what I am."
253. Paul Martin reports that a new catalog from the Britannia Collection (Box 64413, St. Paul, MN 55164) (800-778-7007) offers a Comoy's of London Sherlock Holmes walking stick ($165.00), and a framed first day cover of last year's British stamp honoring the Hound of the Baskervilles, with a Jeremy Brett cachet, mounted and framed ($59.95).
254. Greg Bear's DINOSAUR SUMMER (New York: Warner Books, 1998; 325 pp., $23.00) is delightful alternate history: Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" was a factual account of the Challenger expedition, but in 1947 nobody cares about dinosaurs; the last dinosaur circus in America is closing, and the National Geographic funds an expedition to return the surviving dinosaurs to their home in Venezuela. Willis O'Brien and Ray Harryhausen are along for the fun and games, and the expedition is stranded on the plateau (of course), and there are some nice illustrations by Tony DiTerlizzi.

255. Jun 98 #4: "Algonquin, at Wits' End, Retrofits" is the headline on a story in the Metro edition of the N.Y. Times (May 28), forwarded by Francine Kitts: renovation of the hotel has been completed, and Ian Lloyd-Jones, president of the Camberley Hotel Co. (which purchased the Algonquin last year for about $30 million and has spent $5.5 on renovating it), said that "We've created a palette for people when they come in their tweeds and brogues and Sherlock Holmes hats."
256. Michael Kimmelman's review in the N.Y. Times (May 22) of the exhibition of "Police Pictures: The Photograph as Evidence" (at the Grey Art Gallery and Study Center at New York University in New York through July 18) notes that the show includes a copy of Cesare Lombroso's book CRIMINAL MEN. "Lombroso is one of those once-famous and immensely influential figures who flourish in Darwin's wake and are now mostly forgotten," Kimmelman writes. "A pioneer of so-called criminal anthropology, he said that criminal behavior was biological, a hereditary trait identifiable in tell-tale physical features, which he called stigmata. They might include big jaws, long arms, dark skin or low brows." And, he continues, "Arthur Conan Doyle's criminals in the Holmes stories came straight out of Lombroso." Some of the Canonical criminals certainly looked criminal, but a study of how many did or didn't might make for an interesting paper, if someone's looking for something to write about.
257. An alert for collectors of foreign translations: Don Hobbs notes that Pannonia Books (Box 716, Station P, Toronto, ON M5S 2Y4, Canada) offers copies of A BRIXTONI REJTELY, a Hungarian translation of A STUDY IN SCARLET (234 pp., paperback, with a photograph of Brett and Hardwicke on the cover) for US$13.57 postpaid. There's a web-site at <www.panbooks.com>.
258. Dick Lesh spotted a Sherlock Ink fingerprint pad at a Denver supermarket (such pads are increasingly common at banks and other places that tend to get a lot of bogus checks); if you would like to have one of your own, the pads cost $6.00 each plus shipping. Their address is 43039 London Drive, Parker, CO 80138 <sher_ink@ix.netcom.com> <www.sherlock.org>.
259. This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will again be in full color, with another attractive watercolor by Douglas West that shows Holmes, Watson, and Mrs. Hudson in the sittingroom at 221B. $13.50 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks payable to the Society, please, and orders should be sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 3 Outram Road, Southsea, Hants. PO5 1AP, England.
260. "Imagination Theatre" is the title of a weekly radio series written by Jim French: it's a one-hour show, with two mysteries each week, and two of them have been Sherlockian ("The Poet of Death" and "The Sealed Room"), and Jim has a third one ("The Blind Man") in the works. The series is syndicated by TransMedia in San Francisco, and you can ask them if a local station is carrying the series in your area (800-229-7234), or check their web-site at <www.transmediasf.com> (where you can also hear some of the shows, if your tech is high enough). You can, of course, also encourage a local station to carry the series: it's always nice to be able to hear radio drama.

261. Jun 98 #5: "Fallen angels, satanic manuals, and a passion for the works of Raphael Sabatini and Alexandre Dumas, among others--this is the stuff of Spanish author Arturo Perez-Reverte's engrossing novel," according to one review of THE CLUB DUMAS (New York: Harcourt Brace, 1997; 362 pp.,

- $23.00) (New York: Vintage Books, 1998; 368 pp., $13.00). And one of the characters is named Irene Adler, who lives at 223 Baker Street, Pam Russell reports, but this is a minor homage, and a passing one at that. And there is a movie based on the book: "The Ninth Gate" now in pre-production, with Roman Polanski as director and starring Johnny Depp and Lena Olin.
262. Well, it turns out that "Elementary, my dear Watson" was indeed spoken by Sherlock Holmes in one of A. Conan Doyle's stories. It really was. Which story is it?
263. There are many reasons why the Sherlock Holmes stories continue to be so widely read and enjoyed, including the many things that Sherlockians do to ensure that children learn how enjoyable they are. Jim Webb goes to his local public elementary schools to read to students and answer their questions, and there's no need to guess which stories he reads. It's the sort of thing that anyone can do anywhere: check with your local schools.
264. Stella Luuk spotted a Sherlockian hamster on a flier for the Habitrail Fun Club at a pet show; there's a newsletter and other neat hamster stuff, and you can write to Habitrail at Rolf C. Hagen Inc., 3225 Sartelon, St. Laurent, QC H4R 1E8, Canada. Or visit the web-site at <www.rchagen.com>.
265. Rolf J. Canton reports that his new video "The Pipe Dream Continues...." will be available at the end of June; the one-hour documentary (with dramatized segments) salutes the 50th anniversary of The Norwegian Explorers. $62.95 postpaid from Rolf at 5562 Oak Glen Road, Edina, MN 55439.
266. Otto Penzler is editing a series of "Sounds Like Murder" audiocassettes for Random House Audio ("short stories for short commutes" is their motto); one of them is THE CASE OF THE SCOTTISH TRAGEDY, a new story by June Thomson, read by Simon Jones ($12.95). Available in stores, or from the Mysterious Bookshop (800-352-2840) <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
267. Henry J. Arbour died on Apr. 29. He was an enthusiastic miniaturist, one of the few brave enough to take on the task of recreating the entire house at 221 Baker Street at his home in North Adams, Mass., and it was grand to be able to see some of his work on display at the Sherlockian conference in Bennington, Vt. in 1994.
268. At last: a Sherlockian connection to Kenneth Starr's attempt to persuade the Supreme Court that the attorney/client privilege ends with the client's death. If, that is, you believe (as some pasticheurs have postulated) that Sherlock Holmes investigated the murder of Lizzie Borden's parents. Well, the law firm that represented Lizzie still has notes on the interviews that her lawyers had with Lizzie in the summer of 1892, guarded all these years, but now possibly (if the Supreme Court rules in Starr's favor) available to the local district attorney. Perhaps she mentioned a British investigator.

269. Jun 98 #6: The Morgan Library (at 29 East 36th Street in New York) always is worth a visit, and now you can see a fascinating exhibition titled "a.k.a. Lewis Carroll" (though Aug. 30). The library has all sorts of material by and about Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, including a pamphlet he wrote about Oxford politics in 1865: there's no evidence that Arthur Conan Doyle ever saw the pamphlet ("The Dynamics of a Parti-cle, with an Excursus on the New Method of Evaluation, as Applied to pi"), but perhaps a mathematician who appears in the Canon was amused by the title. Anna Lou Ashby curated the exhibit, which also includes a photograph of Dodgson taken by Elliott & Fry in the 1860s in their studio at 55 Baker Street (where Conan Doyle also once had his picture taken).
270. And the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes (and their guests) had a fine time at their annual spring dinner on June 19, when Priscilla Ridgway ("One of Poe's Sketches") became the newest member of the Adventuresses, and there were toasts and other festivities at St. Maggie's Cafe far down the island on Wall Street at South Street (which seemed appropriate for those who were Bermuda-bound the next day on the Fourth Occasional Sherlockian Cruise).
271. Charles Dodgson and Arthur Conan Doyle do meet, however, in Roberta Rogow's THE PROBLEM OF THE MISSING MISS (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1998; 261 pp, $22.95); it's August 1885, and Conan Doyle and his bride Touie are on their honeymoon in Brighton, where a liberal MP's daughter on her way for a holiday with Dodgson is kidnapped and in peril. Conan Doyle and Dodgson do manage to solve the mystery, of course, and rescue the girl, and foil all the villains and villainesses.
272. Yes, Sherlock Holmes really did say "Elementary, my dear Watson" in one of A. Conan Doyle's stories, and you can credit (or blame) Jim Vogelsang for the discovery. The story is "The Adventure of the Red Widow" -- by Adrian Conan Doyle.
273. Sherlock Homes has filed for bankruptcy in Buffalo, according to a report spotted by Ken Lanza in the June 2 issue of Business First. "The attorney general may initiate his own investigation into the matter independent of any complaints that may or may not have been received by this office," said Michael Zabel, area spokesman for Attorney General Dennis Vacco. But there is no need to worry: it's one of the many real estate firms using the name Sherlock Homes.
274. David Scott's HOLMES REDUX: NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Vaughn: Red Apple Publishing, 1997; 90 pp., $9.95), offers four short-story pastiches; Holmes helps Mycroft, and Irene, and others. If you can't find it in your local bookstore, the publisher's address is Box 568, Vaughn, WA 98394 (800-245-6595) <redapple@aol.com>.
275. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist at 7:00 pm on Oct. 28 at The Old Spaghetti Factory, 54 The Esplanade, in Toronto; the gathering will offer an opportunity for visitors attending the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America to mingle with local Sherlockians. More information will be available (for the locals) from Philip Elliott (120 Perth Avenue #608, Toronto, ON M6OP 4E1, Canada (416-537-8936) <pelliot@city.toronto.on.ca>.
276. Jun 98 #7: Brad Keefauver's column "The Dissecting Room" has long graced the pages of Bob Burr's monthly Plugs & Dotties; Brad's latest (July) column notes (with credit to Janet Bensley) that Chemical & Engineering News has reported that the Rhone-Poulenc Foundation and the Archeological Survey of India have begun work on a three-year restoration of two of India's major monuments: the Taj Mahal and the Agra Fort (where the red sandstone and lime and plaster will be treated with stone renovation techniques). Brad wonders whether they'll be putting the treasure back, too.
277. HOLY SMOKE, by Guillermo Cabrera Infante's (1985) has been reprinted (Woodstock: Overlook Press, 1997; 329 pp., $24.95); it's a fascinating, expert, and humorous discussion of the history of cigars (and cigarettes and pipes) with occasional references to the Canon.
278. There are two versions of The Wigmore Street Post Office: electronic, on the Prodigy computer service, and ink-on-paper offering a selection of the best of the bits and bytes: issue #11 (spring 1998) has 44 pages that focus (subversively and otherwise) on "The Sign of the Four" and the cost $5.25 is postpaid, or you can subscribe for $10.00 a year (three issues). Write to Mel Hughes, 2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32246 (back issues also are available).
279. Phil Hartman died on May 27. He was a graphic designer who became a comedian in the 1970s, spending eight years on "Saturday Night Live" and starred on the series "NewsRadio". He was Dr. Watson in a six-minute skit on "Saturday Night Live" on Mar. 23, 1991, with Jeremy Irons as Holmes.
280. Vinnie Brosnan's latest catalog is a "Special Ted Schulz Issue" and it's a delight. Vinnie is selling Ted's collection, and there more than 900 items in the 164-page catalog, which also offers reminiscences by and photographs of Ted, and tributes from many of his friends, and a chance to see some of the many byways Ted has explored as a collector and as a Sherlockian. It's a collectible in itself, and it costs $3.00 postpaid from Sherlock in L.A., 1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056.

281. Reg Smythe died on June 13. He served in the British army and later worked as a clerk, sketching cartoons in his spare time. He created "Andy Capp" for the Daily Mirror's northern editions in 1957, and the strip eventually was syndicated to 1,700 newspapers in 48 countries. This one appeared in American papers on Apr. 13, 1974:

282. Jun 98 #8: If you missed the earlier offer (Sep 96 #2), it's not too late. One of the most delightful of Sherlockian bibliohoxes is THE PRACTICAL HANDBOOK OF BEE CULTURE: WITH SOME OBSERVATIONS UPON THE SEGREGATION OF THE QUEEN, by Sherlock Holmes (London: Methuen & Co., 1911), which actually was published by Remsen Ten Eyck Schenck in an edition so limited that the few fortunate recipients were warned never to reveal the source of the rarity. And it's real: the title page was reproduced in the Sept. 1966 issue of The Baker Street Journal, the book is cited in THE UNIVERSAL SHERHOLMES, and Julian Wolff's copy was sold by Enola Stewart in 1993. Enola, assisted by British bee-books specialists Betty and Karl Showler, was able to identify the source of Schenck's ingenious forgery: Kenneth K. Clark's handbook on BEEKEEPING (Harmondsworth: Penguin Books, 1951), a post-war paperback that Schenck had bound in cloth after substituting a new titlepage. Copies of Clark's book still turn up, and the Showlers now offer THE CASE OF THE HOLMES BEE BOOK: a carefully crafted box containing Clark's BEEKEEPING and a 28-page pamphlet with a detailed discussion of the affair. $60.00 postpaid (checks payable to Karl Showler, please) from B & K Books, Riverside, Newport Street, Hay-on-Wye, via Hereford HR3 5BG, England. And you'll receive a bonus: a copy of "His Last Bow" in the current Oxford University Press edition.
283. Warren Randall reports that he will be selling a lapel pin (red and black on white) and other ephemera at the convention in Minneapolis in August; additional information is available from Warren (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720) <whirdy@aol.com>.
284. The Hound of the Baskervilles isn't the only phantom dog found in England, and England isn't the only country that has phantom dogs (there's even one on the eastern shore of Maryland), and there are blue dogs and white dogs and fairy hounds as well. And you can read about them in the spring 1998 issue of Strange Magazine ($5.95); Box 2246, Rockville, MD 20847 <strange1@strangemag.com> <www.strangemag.com>.
285. Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine (formerly The Sherlock Holmes Gazette) continues to offer an interesting mix of articles, reports, reviews, and essays, with an occasional look at other detectives. The editor is David Stuart Davies (who also provides a look at "Holmes of the Movies"), and other regular contributors include Michael Cox (on the Granada series) and Barbara Roden (on Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian works). An annual subscription (six issues) costs £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (U.S.) and the address is 49 Purfield Drive, Wargrave, Berks. RG10 8AR, England <overdale@btinternet.com>; their U.S. representative is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. Creditcard orders are welcome at both addresses, and back issues are available.
286. Many of you have seen my Sherlockian tie-tack: a black-on-silver version of my calling card (1.1" wide). Well, I need a new one, and I can't remember the name and address of the company that made my old one, and I've not been able to find a company that does that sort of thing. Suggestions welcome.

Jul 98 #1:

287. John McPhee's books are excellent, no matter what they're about, and he has written four of the very best books about geology. And you can read all of them now, reprinted in ANNALS OF THE FORMER WORLD (New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1998; 695 pp.); it's in the first of the four (BASIN AND RANGE) that he notes that Sherlock Holmes was the first forensic geologist. IRONS IN THE FIRE (Apr 97 #1) includes McPhee's essay "The Gravel Page" in which he has much more to say about forensic geology.
288. Martin Gardner's THE ANNOTATED INNOCENCE OF FATHER BROWN first appeared in 1987 (Jul 87 #4), and it is available again in a trade paperback reprint (New York: Dover, 1998; 274 pp., $9.95); Gardner notes that G. K. Chesterton "was as careless with his details as Dr. Watson, and as many curious questions can be asked about the priest as about Holmes." Many of those questions are answered in Gardner's annotations, which do not neglect the Sherlockian aspects of the stories.
289. The "In Memoriam" section of the Mystery Writers Annual distributed at the 1998 MWA awards dinner reported that Donald R. Bensen died in 1997. He was an editor and author, and three of his Sherlockian "criminalimericks" were published in issues of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine honoring the birthday festivities; he wrote the novel based on the television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976), and his amusing IRENE, GOOD NIGHT was published by Targ Editions in 1982.
290. W. O. G. Lofts also died in 1997. He was a splendid bibliographer, and his interests focused on stories for boys (of all ages), including Leslie Charteris' stories about The Saint and Charles Hamilton's series about Herlock Sholmes; he collaborated with Jon L. Lellenberg on articles about Hamilton in the BJS (June 1984) and about Dr. Patrick H. Watson (June 1980), who may have been a namesake for Dr. John H. Watson.
291. John Stephenson and Jack Kerr each spotted a WISHBONE COLORING AND ACTIVITY BOOK: CANINE CLASSICS (New York: Modern Publishing, 1997; $1.30) with six pages devoted to Wishbone's investigation of the Hound of the Baskervilles.
292. Carole Nelson Douglas will be one of the guest stars on a seven-day Murder Mystery Cruise sailing from Houston on the Norwegian Star Oct. 4 with stops in Calica, Cozumel, and Roatan. Dean James will lecture on the history of mystery fiction, and Mary Katherine Marion will stage a mystery murder, and more details are available from Cruises Cruises (800-245-9806) <netropolis.net/antoine>.
293. Joseph A. Kestner's SHERLOCK'S MEN: MASCULINITY, CONAN DOYLE, AND CULTURE HISTORY (Brookfield: Ashgate, 1997; 250 pp., $72.95) is an academic examination of the Canon's reflections of the sociology of Britain during the reigns of Victoria, Edward VII, and George V; Kestner concludes that "for readers of the *Strand* and above all for male readers, these nine volumes constructed, interrogated, debated and critiqued the construction of male gender in culture for 40 years, from 1887 to 1927." Ashgate Publishing, Old Post Road, Brookfield, VT 05036 (800-535-9544); or Gower House, Croft Road, Aldershot, Hants. GU11 3HR, England.

294. Jul 98 #2: Nice news for old-time radio fans: Ken Greenwald reports that the Baker Street Associates will have a new series of Sherlock Holmes ready for release later this year; there will be at least six cassettes (more if sales go well), each with two programs from the 1947 season that starred John Stanley and Alfred Shirley, with Clipper Craft Clothes as the sponsor. The distributor will be Radio Spirits.
295. Biker Sherlock competed in the X Games again this year in Mission Bay Park in San Diego. In 1997 he won three medals (two gold and one silver), more than anyone else in the Games, in the street luge, but this year won only one medal (gold, in the dual luge). His real name is Michael Sherlock.
296. George Ault spotted a large (31 oz.) box of Kellogg's Frosted Flakes with Sherlockian artwork for a "Breakfast Detective Game" on the box (the original is in full color, of course, and seven inches wide, and is on the back of the box, but similar artwork will be found on the front, if your local store has this promotion).
297. The 711 issues of The Strand Magazine published from Jan. 1891 to Mar. 1950 offer a wonderful picture of six decades of life and literature in Britain, and it's neither easy nor cheap to put together a complete run. An almost-complete run of 703 issues (87 bound six-issue volumes and the remainder in single issues) was sold at the Pacific Book Auction Galleries on Apr. 9 for $6,325 (including the 15% buyer's premium).

298. "Murder, They Write: The Times 100 Masters of Crime" was the title of a 20-page supplement to the Apr. 18 issue of The Times, and it was nice indeed to find two masters were noted for their Sherlockian work: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Laurie King.
299. Luci Zahray notes a new catalog from Cuisenaire/Dale Seymour Publications, Box 5026, White Plains, NY 10602 (800-237-0338) <www.aw.com/dsp> with Sherlockian artwork on the covers of two books: Wade Hampton Sherard's LOGIC NUMBER PROBLEMS (for grades 4-8) and Kylie Dunn's THE SOUND SLEUTH (grades K-2); $10.95 each.
300. Roy Rogers died on July 6. He was the singing "king of the cowboys" whose straight-shooting exploits in more than 90 movies and on radio and television made him a hero to generations of young fans. His films offer a fascinating look at how much tastes have changed; if you're going to watch only one of them, you might as well choose "San Fernando Valley" (1944); a herd of horses is rustled one dark evening, and Roy deduces that it must have been an inside job, because of the ranch dog: "If they'd a been strangers, he would've barked, and there wasn't a peep out of him."
301. Will Walsh notes that the summer catalog from the Britannia Collection (Box 64413, St. Paul, MN 55164) (800-778-7007) has older Sherlockian items (Jun 98 #3), Holmes Bloodhound and Watson Beagle figurines ($69.95 each), and gold sovereigns from the reigns of Victoria ($269.00) and Edward ($289.00).
-
302. Jul 98 #3: The May/June issue of the Toronto Reference Library News has a nice article about the new Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection and its activities. The Library had an exhibition from Mar. 1 to May 30 celebrating "A Grand Tradition: 150 Years of Giving to the Toronto Public Library" showing items that have been given to the collections, including the manuscript of Conan Doyle's play "Angels of Darkness" and a drawing of Watson by Frederic Dorr Steele, and the catalog has a small reproduction of the Steele artwork. Both are available from Victoria Gill, Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada (the newsletter is free, but please send $1.00 if you want the catalog).
303. Ed Lear spotted the Sherlockian "symbol of excellence" artwork on the shipping carton for grade A quality eggs at his local Kroger supermarket.
304. The sixteenth annual "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held at the Tarrytown Hilton in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Oct. 31-Nov. 1, and the program will include the world premiere of "The H.M.S. Sign o' Four" (by Gilbert & Sullivan & Randall); more information is available from Robert E. Thomalen, Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512 <crwk02a@prodigy.com>.
305. Further to the report (Oct 97 #4) about plans to renovate Gillette Castle (William Gillette's home, built largely with profits from his play "Sherlock Holmes") in Hadlyme, Conn., the Castle will remain open seven days a week through Labor Day, but then it will be closed for 18 months while the roof and parapets are repaired. The state bought the castle and grounds from Gillette's estate in 1943 for $35,000; overall renovation costs will be about $4,000,000.
306. Caleb Sampson died on June 8. He was a composer, and leader of an unusual three-man band called the Alloy Orchestra that used metallic junk such as bedpans and truck springs for percussion, and keyboard and synthesizer, and provided original music for silent films at international festivals. Scott Monty recalls a showing of "The Lost World" (1925) at the Coolidge Theatre in Brookline, Mass., in 1993, accompanied by the Alloy Orchestra playing a new score by Sampson.
307. Joseph A. Coppola reports that The Mycroft Holmes Society Press plans to publish an anthology of items about Mycroft: papers, pastiches, cartoons, or anything else; if the material is previously published and not your own, please him know the name and address of the copyright owner. Joe's address is: 103 Kenny Street, Fayetteville, NY 13066 <coppolja@morrisville.edu>.
308. Further to my query (Feb 98 #5) about the first actor to portray Sherlock Holmes with a calabash, Sean Wright notes that John Neville is seen with a calabash in the film "A Study in Terror" (1965). It's in the first scene with Sherlock Holmes, in which he deduces where his pipe is hidden: Watson must be sitting on it. The pipe certainly is a calabash, although with a silver rim rather than the now-traditional lipped meerschaum bowl. Holmes takes the pipe from Watson, and holds it. But he doesn't smoke it. You're welcome, of course, to track down an earlier actor than John Neville.

309. Jul 98 #4: Thomas Narcejac died on June 7. His treatise on the detective novel (ESTHETIQUE DU ROMAN POLICIER) appeared in 1947, and he then collaborated with Pierre Boileau on a long series of short stories, novel, and plays, including the novels on which the films "Les Diaboliques" and "Vertigo" were based. Their Sherlockian pastiche "Le mystère de Nightingale mansion" was collected in USUPATION D'IDENTITE (1980), and his UNE MACHINE A LIRE: LE ROMAN POLICIER (1975) has many references to the Canon.
310. George Kreuzberger ("Archie Stamford, the Forger") died on Dec. 27, 1997. He was a partner with the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrandt, specializing as a consultant to health-care facilities. He was one of the founders of The Sons of the Copper Beeches, serving for many years as their Controller of the Kennel and assisting Bill Starr in arranging the Sons' meetings. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1956.
311. Some books cost more than others. A first edition of Chaucer's CANTERBURY TALES printed by William Caxton, the only one of a dozen surviving copies in private hands, was sold at auction at Christie's in London on July 8 for £4.6 million, making it the world's most expensive printed book. Printed around 1476, it was bought by the first Earl Fitzwilliam for £6 in 1776 and was sold this month by Lady Juliet Tadgell, daughter of the last Earl (she plans to use the money to create a trust that will protect the rest of the family's art collection); the book was bought by the London dealer Maggs Bros. acting for J. Paul Getty, Jr. The previous record sale was a Gutenberg Bible that brought £3.2 million at Christie's in New York in 1987.
312. The June issue of The Baker Street Journal has much of interest, as always, including news of two new Baker Street Irregulars publishing projects: THE BSI/LIBRARY SERIES and THE BSI INTERNATIONAL SERIES, and (after many years) a BSJ Christmas annual that will focus on the BSI's annual dinner in 1940. The BSJ costs $18.95 a year (four issues) from Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331; the annual costs $6.00 and orders will be accepted until Sept. 30.
313. The summer catalog from Mysteries by Mail (Box 8515, Ukiah, CA 95482 (800-722-0726) <www.mysteriesbymail.com> has a wide selection of in-print books and audio, including a new (at least I don't recall seeing it before) Sherlock Holmes stoneware coffee mug (item 936028, $14.95).
314. The exhibition of "The Jewels of Lalique" at the Smithsonian Institution's International Gallery (through Aug. 16) is a spectacular show, offering a wonderful look at just how modern the late Victorians and Edwardians could be. Rene Lalique was born in 1860; he was apprenticed to a Parisian jeweler and spent two years studying in London, and then opened his own workshop in 1886. He invented the Art Nouveau jewel, creating spectacular designs for patrons such as Sarah Bernhardt and Calouste Gulbenkian, and then went on to help define the Art Deco style. The exhibition will be at the Dallas Museum of Art from Sept. 13 to Jan. 10, and it's well worth a visit.
315. Further to the report (Jun 98 #3) on the sale of Dean Dickensheet's collection, Steven A. Stilwell reports that he participated in the purchase, and that a lot of material is in Steve's shop: Once Upon a Crime, at 604 West 26th Street, Minneapolis, MN 55405 (612-870-3785). Steve also offers lists of some of the better material available in Minneapolis and San Francisco.

316. Jul 98 #5: The British four-part mini-series "Nightmare: The Birth of Victorian Horror" aired in Oct. 1996, and included an excellent program on "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the other novels covered were "Frankenstein", "Dracula", and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"). Lee Shackelford notes that the series (200 minutes) is offered on two videocassettes (item AAE-61076) for $39.95, from A&E Home Video, Box 2284, South Burlington, VT 06407 (800-625-9000).

317. WORMHOLES, by John Fowles (New York: Henry Holt, 1998; 404 pp., $25.00) is a collection of essays and other works, including a reprint of his Foreword and Afterword from the John Murray/Jonathan Cape edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1974).
318. Robert A. W. Lowndes ("Langdale Pike") died on July 14. He was best-known as a science-fiction writer and editor (and once ranked fourth on a list of the Ten Most Prodigious Science Fiction Magazine Editors), but he enjoyed the world of Sherlock Holmes as well, as a member of The Scandalous Bohemians of New Jersey and The Praed Street Irregulars, and The Baker Street Irregulars, from whom he received his Investiture in 1973.
319. Stephanie Plum is an unemployed discount-lingerie buyer in Trenton, N.J., who becomes an apprehension agent (bounty hunter) and stars in "delightfully funny" (says Bill Vande Water) mysteries written by Janet Evanovich, who has a web site at <www.evanovich.com> and a daughter (Alex), who has a pet hamster (Angus) who appears in a comic strip and in Sherlockian costume on a watch (men's and women's sizes) sold for $23.00 by Creative Promotions, 344 Cedar Avenue, Ridgewood, NJ 07450 (800-253-9861) <cpromo@aol.com>.
320. There were some interesting items at auction at Sotheby's in London on July 16, and there were some interesting prices paid: an inscribed copy of THE GREAT SHADOW (£520); the manuscript and corrected typescript of a 1927 article by Conan Doyle on "Some Strange Psychic Experiences" (£1,700); a copy of THE COMING OF THE FAIRIES inscribed to Frances Griffiths, also signed by Elsie Wright (£7,800); Frances Griffiths' own prints of five of the fairy photographs (£7,000); and a copy of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in dust jacket (£72,000). A portrait of Holmes and Watson in Art Deco style by John Bulloch Souter failed to sell at £4,400. You should add 15% for the buyer's premium to see what the purchasers paid.
321. "The Lost World" (1960) now is available on videocassette from Fox Video at $15.00 (this is the version starring Claude Rains, Fernando Lamas, Jill St. John, and Frosty the Poodle).
322. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has the conclusion of David Stuart Davies' interview with Ian Richardson, with some interesting background on his two Sherlockian films in the 1980s: there were plans for a third film "The Napoleon of Crime" (which eventually was made as "Hands of a Murderer" with Edward Woodward as Holmes. There's also a possibility that Richardson will star in a film of the play "Sherlock's Last Case". Scarlet Street is published bimonthly, covering the mystery-and-horror genre, and costs $35.00 a year; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
323. Jul 98 #6: The one-hour Sci-Fi channel television broadcast of "The Lost World" (by the "Alien Voices" company) on July 12 was thoroughly enjoyable, and it's available on videocassette for $12.95 plus shipping from Rhino Direct, Box 60062, Tampa, FL 33660 (800-432-0020). Nat Segaloff and John de Lancie wrote the script; Armin Shimerman played Challenger and Dwight Schultz played Malone.
324. Simon Jones does a nice job reading June Thomson's new pastiche THE CASE OF THE SCOTTISH TRAGEDY on a two-hour cassette from Random House; Holmes and Watson visit the Grice Patersons in Uffa. $12.95 in stores, and from the Mysterious Bookshop (800-352-2840) <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
325. Willis G. Frick reports an advertisement of interest to those who might be seeking an Inverness cape: Antony M. Mistofsky offers Inverness capes in two fabrics: waterproof (£30 plus shipping) and wool (£349 plus shipping). His address is 15 Cheviot Drive, Newton Mearns, Glasgow G77 5AT, Scotland <mister.antony@cableol.co.uk>.
326. Antonio Iriarte discovered ENQUETE SUR SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Bernard Oudin (Paris: Decouvertes Gallimard, 1997; 96 pp., 64 FF); all in French, and an excellent survey of the Sherlockian world, with many interesting illustrations from the collection of Richard Lancelyn Green and other archives.
327. Forecast: THE GAME'S AFOOT, MRS. HUDSON, by Sydney Hosier (from Avon Books in August, $5.99); the fourth in his series about Mrs. Hudson's detecting.
328. BELLS, BUTLERS, & OTHERS (modestly subtitled as "Frolics by John Ruyle") is a new collection of Sherlockian poetry, hand-set and hand-printed as usual at the Pequod Press; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
329. Oliver Sacks, in his New Yorker article "An Anthropologist on Mars" (and in his book with the same title) noted that Sherlock Holmes showed some of the symptoms of autism. And there may be something about this in the four-part mini-series "Oliver Sacks: The Mind Traveller" that will start on PBS-TV on Aug. 25; the segment on autism likely will air on Sept. 8.
330. The Cottage Shop (Box 4836, Stamford, CT 06907) (800-695-7467) still offers their German hand-painted porcelain Sherlock Holmes stein (Feb 97 #5); item K1507, $130.00 plus $7.00 shipping.
331. VICTORIAN FAIRY PAINTING, by Jeremy Maas and others (1997) offers an excellent view of the exhibition at the Royal Academy of Arts last year (Nov 97 #6), with art by Richard and Charles Doyle (Arthur Conan Doyle's uncle and father); the exhibition's at the Art Gallery of Ontario in Toronto now (until Sept. 13). The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection have made arrangements for a guided tour (and a talk by Barbara Rusch) on the evening of Sept. 9; $20.00, and details are available from the Friends at the Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada).
332. Aug 98 #1: The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Jon Lellenberg's fine (and well illustrated) tribute to Norman Schatell, and an article by Andrew Malec about Frederic Dorr Steele (both artists are well represents in the collections). You can join the mailing list by writing to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
333. And the "Founders' Footprints" conference in Minneapolis this month was an excellent celebration of a half-century of Sherlockian goings-on in Minneapolis. E. W. McDiarmid, one of the founders, was able to attend the Saturday-evening banquet, and there were fine talks by visitors and locals, and a reception at the Wilson Library, and time for a bit of sightseeing (Minneapolis proudly boasts the tallest waterfall on the Mississippi River).
334. The conference also offered an chance to see Rolf J. Canton's one-hour videocassette "The Pipe Dream Continues...." (a documentary saluting the 50th anniversary of The Norwegian Explorers). There are interviews with some of the founders, and those who have followed in their footsteps, and appearances by Holmes and Watson. $62.95 postpaid from Rolf at 5562 Oak Glen Road, Edina, MN 55439.
335. Bill Sawisch reports an amusing discovery in Naperville, Ill.: a hair salon called Shearlock Combs. He didn't need a haircut at the time, but plans to give it a try eventually.
336. Phil Attwell reports that the Royal Theatre will tour Northamptonshire with Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (originally commissioned by Jeremy Brett) from Sept. 15 through Oct. 10. Information about the tour is available from the Royal Theatre, Guildhall Road, Northampton NN1 1EA, England (01604-632533).
337. We hear of Conan Doyle everywhere: the caption on a splendid center-spread photograph of the wild lands of California's White Mountains, in the August issue of Sports Afield (spotted by George Ault), is "Our ideas must be as broad as Nature if they are to interpret Nature," credited to ACD but without identification as to the source.

338. Audio Book Contractors (Box 40115, Washington, DC 20016) continue to offer a nice assortment of Sherlockian readings on audiocassettes, for rental or purchase. As well as some Arthur Conan Doyle ("The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard"), and Christopher Morley ("The Haunted Bookshop" and "Parnassus on Wheels"), and there's a lot more classic literature in their catalog.
339. "The World of Sherlock Holmes" is the title of an illustrated evening lecture at the Smithsonian Institution on Oct. 27 by social historian Virginia W. Newmyer, focusing on the world of late-Victorian England; $10.00 to resident Smithsonian Associates, and $13.00 to others (Smithsonian Associates, Smithsonian Institution, Dept. 0603, Washington, DC 20073) (202-357-3030) <www.si.edu/tsa/rap>. Virginia Newmyer was one of the lecturers in a Sherlockian lecture series in 1994, and is both interesting and expert.
340. Aug 98 #2: The next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be on Nov. 6-8; there will be a Sherlockian mystery to solve, a tour of eight Victorian homes, meals, and other fun and games. Additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <www.capemayac.org>.
341. The Canadian television series "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" began on YTV cable in Feb. 1997, and the nice news for viewers south of the border is that the series started on the Family channel on Aug. 15 and 16 (and it surely will repeat); Meredith Henderson stars as a 12-year-old great grandniece of Sherlock Holmes, the great grandniece of Sherlock Holmes (and like him, she is brilliant and eccentric and wants to become the world's greatest detective). There have been two seasons (13 episodes each) broadcast in Canada, with a third season in the works. The electronically enabled can visit a web-site at <<http://www.ytv.com/shows/shirley/index.asp>>.
342. Stephen Vincent Benet (1898-1943) has been honored in our series of "Literary Arts" stamps. He was a delightful writer and poet (and perhaps is best known now for his poem "John Brown's Body"); writing on "My Favorite Fiction Character" for The Bookman (Feb. 1926), he chose Dr. Watson: "As far as professional skill goes, one cannot rank him with the leaders, I fear--his practice was too subject to continual interruption," Benet suggested. "But his bedside manner must have been ideal. I would rather die some pleasantly fictional death with Watson in attendance than recover under the aseptic hands of a modern practitioner."
343. The three-page manuscript of Conan Doyle's poem "A Forgotten Tale" (which first appeared in Scribner's Magazine in Jan. 1895, reprinted in Current Literature in Mar. 1895, and in SONGS OF ACTION in 1898) is available for $4,500 from The History Store (Box 1829, Wells, ME 04090) (207-967-9790) <historystore@cybertours.com>.
344. The latest issue of The Tonga Times is at hand from Carol Wenk (Box 770554, Lakewood, OH 44107), with ideas, recommendations, instructions, and news of interest to Sherlockian miniaturists. Membership in the Mini-Tonga Scion Society costs $7.00 a year ($8.00 to Canada, $12.00 elsewhere).
345. And there's still another version of "The Lost World" in the works, according to an item in the Daily Telegraph (July 24) kindly forwarded by Wilfrid de Freitas. "Brian Blessed Survives Swamp Crash" was the headline, and the swamp was in Venezuela, where he was filming "The Lost World" for BBC television. "It was the worst experience of my life, an horrific experience," Blessed said when he returned to England. "I am still in shock and cannot stop shaking." The actor has become known as an explorer, the paper noted, and made an abortive attempt to climb Everest eight years ago.
346. Forecast for November: Larry Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ICE PALACE MURDERS, from Viking ($23.95) and as a Penguin Audiobook ($24.95); Holmes returns to Minnesota to solve a mystery during Saint Paul's annual Winter Carnival in 1896. See Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (1996) for details of Holmes' first visit to Minnesota.
347. Aug 98 #3: Barbara Holmes has designed a set of ten Sherlockian notecards with pencil sketches of Jeremy Brett; a packet of ten cards and envelopes costs $3.95 postpaid. A sample card and a flier showing the artwork is offered in return for a self-addressed stamped envelope; Barbara's address is Box 446, Scottsville, VA 24590.
348. And where in Conan Doyle's works do we find "Our ideas must be as broad as Nature if they are to interpret Nature"? For those of you who haven't yet found the source, it's in "A Study in Scarlet", spoken by Sherlock Holmes.
349. Brad Keefauver has reported finding the "FairyTale: A True Story" film tie-in "Activity Center" CD-ROM disk discounted to $9.99 at a Target store. It was issued last year at $30.00 (Dec 97 #1), and it offers a fine demonstration of just how much can be done with modern computers. There are puzzles and games, and things to explore, for children aged 7-11, as well as clips from the film (one of which shows Houdini performing for five-year-old Jean Conan Doyle), and it's all nicely done indeed. One hopes that this means that the film will soon be in the videoshops at a lower sell-through price.
350. The latest stamp in our series honoring "Great Americans" shows Lila and DeWitt Wallace, founders of the Reader's Digest. Their magazine published Sherlockian articles by Vincent Starrett and Fletcher Pratt in the 1930s, a condensed version of "The Speckled Band" in 1942, and many other Sherlockian items since then. The company also published a condensed GREAT CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in 1966 in a series of "Best Loved Books for Young Readers" and five volumes of uncondensed (and well-illustrated) Canonical tales from 1886 to 1993 in a series of "The World's Best Reading".
351. Fans of Laurie King's books about Mary Russell who aren't electronically enabled may not know about the T-shirts: white, with a yellow honeycomb on the front and "After 1914 Holmes is ours" on the back (in sizes XXL/XL/L). $10.00 postpaid from Lianne E. Hanson (101 Broadway, Pembroke, NH 03275).
352. Howard Engel, author of MR. DOYLE & DR. BELL: A VICTORIAN MYSTERY (Nov 97 #3), was interviewed on Canadian television, according to a report in the summer 1998 issue of Canadian Holmes, and said he plans to write another novel featuring Arthur Conan Doyle as the sleuth.
353. The July-August issue of the Toronto Reference Library News marks the end of the newsletter, after 24 years (there will be a new publication covering events at all the city's public libraries); the last issue has a look-back section of photographs, one of which shows the inventors of the game "Trivial Pursuit" in the Arthur Conan Doyle Room in 1984, in search of answers for questions on Sherlock Holmes for the second edition of their game. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Victoria Gill, Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada; no charge.
354. The Trifling Monographers, which meet during annual meetings of the Public Relations Society of America, plan to hold their twentieth annual meeting in Boston on Oct. 18, expecting a good turnout for an "Evening of Canonical Chat and Unmitigated Bleat". Graham Sudbury (Box 52062, Tulsa, OK 74152) (918-747-6565) will be happy to furnish additional information.
355. Aug 98 #4: Ed. Lange's two-act play "Sherlock's Secret Life" premiered in Troy, N.Y., in March 1997, and there will be new productions this year: at the Fulton Opera House Sept. 15-27 (Box 1865, Lancaster, PA 17608) (717-397-7425); at the Queens Theatre in the Park, Oct. 8-11 (Box 520069, Flushing, NY 11352 (718-760-0064); and at the N.Y. Theatre Institute, Oct. 21-25 (155 River Street, Troy, NY 12180) (518-274-3256).
356. "Dr. W. G. Grace was a phenomenon," John Major notes in his review in the June 14 issue of The Sunday Times (at hand from John Baesch) of Simon Rae's W. G. GRACE: A LIFE (London: Faber & Faber, 1998; 548 pp., £20.00); "Almost single-handedly, he raised the game of cricket from a country-house amusement to a national obsession." And Conan Doyle was proud to have competed against Grace, and wrote a warm appreciation of him when he died.

357. The new "Legends of Hollywood" stamp honors Alfred Hitchcock, who started his filmmaking career in 1919, illustrating title cards for silent films in London, and directed his first film in 1925. His films "The Lady Vanishes" (1938) and "Shadow of a Doubt" (1943) had Sherlockian dialogue, and the television series "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" (which continued after his death in 1980) had an episode "My Dear Watson" (1989) that had a colorized introduction that showed Hitchcock wearing a deerstalker and blowing bubbles from a calabash pipe.
358. The BBC videocassette in PAL format with two of the 1964 "Sherlock Holmes" broadcasts starring Douglas Wilmer (Oct 96 #1) now is available in Malaysia for about RM39$ (about US $9.00), according to a report from Aziz Bin Adam; that's a sharp discount from the issue price in Britain (£14.99), and the BBC obviously has cleared out a warehouse somewhere. PAL-format cassettes won't play on American NTSC machines, unfortunately. I've no idea what the shipping charges might be, nor whether the cassette still is available in Britain, but the distributor is Vision Four Home Video, No. 28 Jalan Liku Bangsar, 59100 Kuala Lumpur, West Malaysia.
359. William H. Preston died on July 10. He was 50 years old and working as a bookkeeper in Philadelphia when he became a professional actor, winning a part in "We Bombed in New Haven" (which closed after only a single performance in New York). He played many other roles in the 27 years since then, including Rodgers (a comic old man) with Patrick Horgan as Holmes in "Sherlock Holmes and the Speckled Band" in Philadelphia in 1990.
360. "This narrative, told with restraint, should make you laugh, if it does not make you cry," is the way Dr. Fatso's literary agent describes the latest episode in the saga of Turlock Loams, hot off the Pequod Press. THE WETHEADED LEAGUE costs $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkley, CA 94707.
361. Eve Titus reports that Basil of Baker Street's cousin Anatole (hero of her other children's series) is due to appear on television, in one of six animated series now being produced by the Canadian company Nelvana for CBS-TV. "Anatole" will air on Saturday mornings starting in September (he's a dignified French mouse who serves as an ambassador of the animal world to the human world). Eve much prefers Basil, of course. So do Sherlockians.
362. Aug 98 #5: Sherlockians do manage to find a way to distinguish themselves from other Sherlockians: Robert Ennis, of Weston, Florida was struck by lightning this month. And survived. "It had been raining pretty heavily," he told a local reporter, and he noticed at one that there was a little trickle of water coming in one of the windows, and he walked out to his driveway to survey the roof. "The next thing I knew, I was flat on my face." He had just started his vacation, and now plans to do what he had originally planned: go to Disney World. With his grandchildren.
363. Nick Scovell reports that the Dramatis Personae company will present "The Final Problem" at the Portsmouth Arts Centre in Southsea on Oct. 8-10; the box office telephone number is 01705-732236. This is the last episode in a trilogy of Sherlockian plays -- and a chance to see Sherlockian theater in the city where Arthur Conan Doyle first wrote about the Great Detective.
364. Peter Lewis reported to the N.Y. Times (July 14) on the Macworld trade show in New York, where Apple displays what's new for Macintosh users. The new Mac OS 8.5 operating system (code-named Allegro, and due in September) will feature a powerful file-finding utility called Sherlock.
365. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere," Mycroft Holmes said. And one of the more interesting places to look for Sherlockian echoes is in the works of James Joyce. Sherlockians and Joyceans have been doing that for close to fifty years (Hugh Kenner was the first in print, in 1949, and William D. Jenkins was the next, in 1969). Bill Jenkins loved to explore the connections between Conan Doyle and Joyce, but he died in 1993 with his *magnum opus* not yet published. Now you can see just how much fun he had, in THE ADVENTURE OF THE DETECTED DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES IN JAMES JOYCE'S FINNEGANS WAKE (Westport: Greenwood Press, 1998; 149 pp., $45.00). Joyce's book is "the most perplexing whodunit ever written," Bill suggests, and he certainly enjoyed trying to solve at least some of the puzzles Joyce created.
366. "Who Chopped Chang" is the theme for this year's "Sherlock Holmes Night" (a free event for the public) to be presented by the Honolulu Police Dept. on Sept. 11, 1998, Pam Verrey reports. If you'd like to participate, contact the HPD's Informational Resources Section, 801 South Beretania Street, Honolulu, HI 96813 (808-529-3351).
367. Michael Williams starred as Watson in this year's BBC Radio 4 broadcast of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and his wife Judi Dench played Mrs. Hudson. Try your hand at identifying other married couples who acted together in a Sherlockian production (there are at least two more). Answers next month.
368. E. G. Marshall died on Aug. 24. His acting career began on radio in the 1930s, and continued in film and on television and the stage. In 1981 he was the host on the "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" series, introducing their Sherlockian and other mystery broadcasts.
369. The "Sherlock Holmes Festival" on Nov. 7 in Tryon, N.C., will be a tribute to William Gillette; they'll have a film festival, a "Search for Sherlockian Clues" contest, a radio-play performance ("Silver Blaze"), and other events; additional information is available from the Polk County Travel & Tourism Council, 401 North Trade Street, Tryon, NC 28782 (800-440-7848).
370. Aug 98 #6: "Tainted Blood" is a three-act "drawing-room comedy with teeth" written by Tom Jacobson, with Oscar Wilde, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Bram Stoker as young unknowns who encounter a vampire during a weekend at Wilde's country estate in Ireland. The play was first performed in 1990 in Houston, and Christopher Roden reports that there will be a new production from Oct. 2 to Nov. 22 at the Road Theatre (5108 Lankershim Boulevard, North Hollywood, CA 91601 (818-761-8838).
371. Dave Galerstein has decided to sell his Sherlockian collection, as one lot, to an individual or consortium, and estimates that it's worth from $11,000 to $12,000. If you would like to visit to inspect the collection and make an offer, you can contact Dave at 44 Center Drive, New Hyde Park, NY 11040 (516-248-6210) <davebsi@erols.com>.
372. "Scruffy Is Badge of Pride, But Some Physicists Long for Cool" is the headline on Malcolm W. Browne's essay in the N.Y. Times (July 21) on the public image of scientists. And Browne noted that Conan Doyle endowed one of his characters in "The Lost World" with a "stereotypical image that still resonates," writing of Prof. Summerlee that "among his minor peculiarities are that he is careless as to his attire" and "unclean in his person."
373. The new catalog from Bits & Pieces, 1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297) has two new mystery jigsaw puzzles in "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (the puzzle pictures help solve the crimes); "The Kent Chapel Murder" and "Sins of the Father" are $10.95 each (or $17.95 for the pair).
374. Doug Wrigglesworth reports that he and other visitors enjoyed the production of Conan Doyle's "Waterloo" during the Shaw Festival in Ontario, and copies of WATERLOO: A CASE-BOOK ON SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S HISTORICAL PLAY are now available. David Skene-Melvin edited the 76-page book, which has the texts of the play and of the story on which it was based, and essays by Clifford Goldfarb, Doug Elliott, and others; the postpaid cost is CA$38.50 (CA$33.50 to members of the Friends) from the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection (Toronto Reference Library, 789 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON M4W 2G8, Canada); credit-card orders welcome. The play continues in repertory though Sept. 19; the box-office is at: Box 774, Niagara-on-the-Lake, ON LOS 1J0, Canada (800-267-4759) <shawfest@sympatico.ca>.

375. The Conclave of Richmond Pipe Smokers' annual Exposition & Celebration featured Sherlock Holmes in 1997; this year's event won't be Sherlockian, but there will be lots of pipes and tobacco and smoking, at the Holiday Inn Select on Oct. 9-11; details are available from the Conclave (Box 34023, Richmond, VA 23234) (804-342-0761) <corpipemsk@aol.com>.
376. Forecast: THE ADVENTURES OF INSPECTOR LESTRADE, by M. J. Trow (from Regnery Gateway in Sept., $22.95); a reprint of the amusing pastiche published in 1985 (it was the first of a long series, and Regnery plans to publish more of them). EMBASSY ROW, by Quinn Fawcett (from Forge in Oct., $24.95); a sequel to the Mycroft pastiche AGAINST THE BROTHERHOOD published in 1997.

377. Sep 98 #1: Thomas L. Stix, Jr. ("The Norwood Builder") died on Sept. 9. He was proud of the three generations of Sherlockians in his family (his father Thomas L. Stix, his son Stephen, and his wife Dorothy are all members of the BSI); his father helped start, and Tom and Stephen continued for many years, the traditional running of The Silver Blaze at race tracks near New York. Tom received his Investiture in 1961, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1982, and in 1986 he succeeded Julian Wolff as head of the BSI, inaugurating the title of "Wiggins". In 1991 Tom welcomed women to full membership in the BSI, and in 1997, after a carefully-orchestrated roast by family, friends, and former friends (since roastees are not permitted to disown family), he announced that he had led the BSI for eleven years, one more than he had planned, and handed over the gavel to Mike Whelan, who then presented Tom with a special crystal plaque from the BSI recognizing his long service and many contributions to the cause.
378. It was a century ago that Arthur Conan Doyle wrote his splendid short story "The Lost Special" (and it was in Sept. 1898 that readers in the U.S. found the tale in the American edition of The Strand Magazine); the tale has long been regarded as apocryphal (almost, that is, part of the Canon) because it includes mention of "an amateur reasoner of some celebrity" who "attempted to deal with the matter in a critical and semi-scientific manner." It may be that Conan Doyle omitted the name of that amateur reasoner because the amateur reasoning turned out to be wrong, and it's nice to be able to celebrate the centenary of something both Doylean and Sherlockian.
379. The Baker Street Irregulars have always honored Sir Arthur for the world he created for us: you can see Christopher Morley's admiration for Conan Doyle in the introduction to THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, and over many years in the pages of The Baker Street Journal, from Morley and Edgar W. Smith and many others who at the same time greatly enjoyed following the trail blazed by Ronald Knox, pretending that the world of Sherlock Holmes is a real one.
380. And our "Wiggins" Mike Whelan certainly agrees: at the BSI's annual dinner last January he said that "It is my opinion that the Great Game of viewing Dr. Watson as the creator of the Canon and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as the literary agent reached full flower as the American equivalent of the raspberry to Adrian Conan Doyle (sometimes referred to as 'The Viper'). I'm hardly suggesting restrictions on this form of fun, but I do believe Doyle should receive the proper credit he deserves for making all this possible."
381. "Palmer and Pritchard were among the heads of the profession," Holmes noted (in "The Speckled Band"); "The Life and Crimes of William Palmer" will air on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV on Nov. 12 and 19. "When a doctor does go wrong he is the first of criminals," Holmes also suggested, and the mini-series will show just what he meant.
382. William Neblett's SHERLOCK'S LOGIC, first published in 1985, is now available in Barnes & Noble reprint ($7.98); Holmes' grandson attempts to solve a murder mystery in the first third of the book, with the rest of the book devoted to an exposition of elementary logic. Barnes & Noble also has THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES (in cloth) discounted at $4.98 per volume.
383. Sep 98 #2: Last month's challenge asked for married couples who have acted together in a Sherlockian production (other than Michael Williams and Judi Dench in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on BBC Radio 4 this year). John Cleese and Connie Booth acted in the British television film "The Strange Case of the End of Civilisation as We Know It" (1977). David Morrill offered Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon, who toured in Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1902-1904 and 1907).
384. Beryl E. Cooper died on Aug. 28. She was an enthusiastic member of the Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse and of the The Bootmakers of Toronto, and co-author with her husband Tom created two collections of SHERLOCKIAN JUMBLES in 1987 and 1997.
385. Further to the item (Apr 98 #3) about the Essex police testing the prowess of bloodhounds named Sherlock and Morse, John McGowan has forwarded a new report from The Times (Sept. 3): "Police forces are to be told that if they really want to get their man, they should abandon German shepherd dogs and replace them with bloodhounds." The six-month trial has proved that "their tracking abilities are out of this world," according to dog-handling expert PC Malcolm Fish.
386. If you'd like to know more about Douglas Wilmer's tour earlier this year, there are excellent reports in the September issue of The Holmes & Watson Report, by John Baesch and Scott Monty and Dave Morrill, and much more of interest; $14.00 a year for six issues, from Brad Keefauver, 4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.
387. Johnathon Schaech will play the title role in "Believe: The Houdini Story" (scheduled on TNT cable on Dec. 6). Limited information at Internet Movie Database does not list any writers, so the movie may or may not be based on the book BELIEVE., which was written by William Shatner and Michael Tobias (Jul 92 #5); there is no cast listing for anyone as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The director is Pen Densham, who directed Jeremy Brett's last film, "Moll Flanders" (1996).
388. The digital video disk (DVD) is slowly finding a market, but I'm not sure just how large the market is. In any case, there's now a Sherlockian DVD available: "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976, with Nicol Williamson and Robert Duvall) has been released by Image Entertainment ($23.95).
389. Hugo's Companions will celebrate their 50th anniversary in April, at which time they will publish a guided tour through the history of the society. The first hard-cover edition will be sold by subscription only, and available in April, but pre-publication orders are being accepted until Dec. 31 at $50.00 postpaid (the price will be $65.00 postpaid next year). Checks payable to Hugo's Companions, please, and sent to Grosse Point Lighthouse, 2535 Sheridan Road, Evanston, IL 60201.
390. Further to the item about "Imagination Theatre" (Jan 98 #4), the first two of Jim French's Sherlock Holmes radio programs ("The Poet of Death" is #114 and "The Sealed Room" is #121) are now available (along with lots of other shows) on CD or cassette at $7.99 each postpaid from TransMedia, 719 Battery Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 (800-227-7234) <www.transmediasf.com>.
391. Sep 98 #3: More news from the Sherlockian conference in Minneapolis last month: Wilson's Basement Dwellers unveiled two of the continuing adventures of Hamhock Holmes, written by Billy Joe-Bob "Bubba" Watson and edited by John "Blue Tick" Atkins and C. Bryan "Bird Dawg" Gassner (who at least in Minneapolis, didn't talk the way they write). "The Adventure of the Wild Turkey" (24 pp.) and "The Red-Necked League" (39 pp.) cost $4.00 each (add $1.20 shipping for one or two booklets) from C. Bryan Gassner, P.O. Drawer G, Corrales, NM 87048.
392. Turlock Loams recovers a legendary rarity to gratify the collecting mania of Myron R. "Whizzer" Oz, the wealthy Sprocket King, in THE ADVENTURE OF THE BLUE GARFUNKEL, the latest story from Dr. Fatso and the Pequod Press. Available from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).

393. John continues his pursuit of Vernet namesakes, having noted Lloyd Vernet Bridges II, who died earlier this year (Mar 98 #3). There is both acting and art in the blood, it seems: John now reports that Beau Bridges' real name is Lloyd Vernet Bridges III.
394. T. A. Waters died on Aug. 7. In an obituary in The New Yorker, Ricky Jay described Waters as a remarkable man, a classic autodidact, and the world's foremost expert in mentalism (the term magicians use to describe magic of the mind: the simulation of clairvoyance, telepathy, and precognition). He had been the librarian at the Magic Castle in Hollywood, and was the author of the landmark ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MAGIC AND MAGICIANS (1988), and also wrote science fiction, fantasy, mystery, and gothic novels. His THE PROBABILITY PAD (1970) involved Waters and Michael Kurland and Chester Anderson in a series of time-travel adventures and included an encounter with Holmes and Watson and Count Dracula in Transylvania.
395. Tyco, the company that makes Sesame Street Beans (bean-bag toys) has kindly reported that they have just shipped Sherlock Hemlock, and he will be found in Kmart, Walmart, and Target stores ($4.99 recommended retail).
396. "Use the word horticulture in a sentence." "You can lead a horticulture, but you can't make her think." No matter: you can start looking for flowers with the names of Canonical tales. Vic Lahti, of the Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa, notes in their newsletter that there is a day-lily named "Study in Scarlet" (described as "blood red self with a green throat"); it received a Junior Citation from the American Hemerocallis (Daylily) Society in 1986, and an Honorable Mention in 1990.
397. Doug Elliott reports that Jo Soares' A SAMBA FOR SHERLOCK (Dec 97 #4) will be reprinted as a trade paperback by Vintage in November ($13.00); the book is a thriller, and a parody of Holmes and Brazil and Brazilians, with broad humor that's often vulgar, and sometimes quite dark.
398. The excellent recreation of the sitting-room at 221B that delighted Sherlockians and other tourists for many years at S. Holmes, Esq. in San Francisco still seeks a new location in a pub, hotel, or theme restaurant; the rental is $3,000 a year, and enquiries can be directed to 2700 19th Street San Francisco, CA 94110 (456-616-3116) <mycroft813@aol.com>.

399. Sep 98 #4: "Rodger Baskerville's Lonely Hound from Hell" is a two-act rock opera, with lyrics by Wanda and Jeffery Dow, performed by the Willie Nelson Oratorio Society (aka Wanda and Jeffery) to the music of Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Band (aka John Lennon, Paul McCartney, and George Harrison) during the Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium in Florida in May. And the lyrics, with an introduction by Tom Stix and some amusing production notes, are now available from the Dows at 1737 Santa Anna Drive, Dunedin, FL 34698; $6.00 (to North America) or $8.00 (elsewhere).
400. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets (with 15 different stamps for each decade) have reached the 1930s, and the new sheet includes a stamp that honors Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the first president of the United States to be a member of The Baker Street Irregulars. Other designs show Life magazine (which published many Sherlockian items) and Bobby Jones playing golf (a sport not unknown to Sherlock Holmes).
401. Paul Kessel and John Fiske perform (in English) in Sweden, and one of their shows is "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (they perform all the roles, sometimes arguing about it); they'll be in Umeå in October, Aalborg (Denmark) in November, Stockholm in February, and Helsingborg and Malmö in April. If you would like more information, you can write to Kesselofski & Fiske, Box 2066, 750 02 Uppsala, Sweden <kessel@dany.pp.se>.
402. Syd Goldberg reports that the videocassette of "FairyTale: A True Story" will be go on sale in videostores on Oct. 6 at the sell-through price of $14.95; this is the film that starred Peter O'Toole as Arthur Conan Doyle and Harvey Keitel as Harry Houdini.
403. Gael Stahl recommends "An Evening with Sherlock Holmes" at Chaffin's Barn Dinner Theatre (8204 Highway 100, Nashville, TN 37221) (615-646-9977) (800-282-2276) <www.dinnertheatre.com>; the show opened on Sept. 1 and will run through Oct. 24, and offers John Chaffin's dramatizations of three stories ("The Speckled Band", "The Crooked Man", and "The Second Stain").
404. John Baesch reports that the Criterion, far fancier now than when Watson stood drinking at its bar, was praised by A. A. Gill in The Sunday Times (June 14) as one of the most beautiful restaurants on the south side of Piccadilly: "It looks like the mother-in-law's entrance to a well-stocked harem. Loathed by gossip-column girlies because, whatever you forget to war, nobody is going to notice."
405. Reported by Don Hobbs: CLASSIC MYSTERIES: A COLLECTION OF MIND-BENDING MASTERPIECES, edited by Molly Cooper, illustrated by Barbara Kiwak (from RGA Publishing Group/Lowell House in 1996; $5.99); contents include "The Veiled Lodger".
406. David McCallister reports that The Pleasant Places of Florida enjoyed their summer visit to the Cassadaga Spiritualist Camp; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is honored there as an early evangelist, and David suggests that visitors consider staying at the nearby Clauser's Bed & Breakfast (201 East Kicklighter Road, Lake Helen, FL 32744) (800-220-0310), where guests can gather at the end of the day in Clauser's pub, which is called Sherlock's.
407. Sep 98 #5: Tome Press (Caliber Comics) has published a new comic book DR. JEKYLL & MR. HOLMES ($2.95), written by Steven Philip Jones and drawn by Seppo Makinen. If you can't find the comic book in a local shop, the publisher's address is 225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170 (888-222-6642) <calcomic@aol.com> <www.calibercomics.com>. Caliber also offers back issues of other Sherlockian comic books, and has announced a new SHERLOCK HOLMES READER SERIES ("adaptations of classic stories, as well as all-new Holmes tales set in the world of Doyle").
408. Mona Morstein notes that the film "Zero Effect" (Mar 98 #1) is now in the videoshops, with Bill Pullman as the world's best private detective, who is utterly brilliant, a deductive genius, emotionally unstable, and uses disguises, and Ben Stiller as his steady, reliable aide who eventually leaves him for a wife.
409. Stu Shiffman spotted WALT DISNEY'S COMICS AND STORIES #629 (Oct. 1998) from Gladstone ($6.95), with Police Chief Ratz incognito in Sherlockian costume on the cover and in one panel in a new story ("Donald Duck: Scandal on the Epoch Express"). And Detective "Burlap-Bones" is seen in Sherlockian costume with an early calabash pipe in one panel in "Mr. Slicker and the EggRobbers" reprinted from daily strips published in 1930. There's a web-site at <www.brucehamilton.com>.
410. A new catalog from femmes fatales offers some intriguing new Sherlockiana, including a checkbook cover ($14.95), earrings ($24.95), and neckties (two designs, $24.95 each), and some interesting non-Sherlockian items as well). The address is Box 4457, Lakewood, CA 90712 (800-596-3323) <byteocrime@aol.com> <www.register.com/femfatal>. Readers of this newsletter qualify for a 10% discount (the magic word is "Scuttlebutt").
411. Sorry about that: the earlier mention (Aug 98 #3) of Sherlockian notecards with Barbara Holmes' pencil sketches of Jeremy Brett didn't make clear that there are different designs offered; she will be happy to send you a sample card and an illustrated flier in return for a self-addressed stamped envelope (Box 446, Scottsville, VA 24590).
412. Joe Eckrich offers a third sales-list of Sherlockiana from his collection, by e-mail on request to <jeckrich@aol.com>, or you can send a #10 SASE to him at 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026 (if outside the United States, please send two IRCs or $1.00 in currency).
413. You don't need to live in Cottingley to have fairies in your garden: Mary Beth Myles reports that the mail-order catalog from Past Times offers nice Victorian items, including three different rust-proof powder-coated steel "Flower Fairy Silhouettes" (7201 Intermodal Drive, Louisville, KY 40258) (800-242-1020) <www.past-times.com>.

414. The summer issue of The Wigmore Street Post Office has 40 pages of amusing and interesting material taken from the electronic cauldron that bubbles and seethes at the Prodigy computer service (and the contest for the worst original one-paragraph opening for a Watsonian pastiche is still open, with a Nov. 1 deadline). $5.25 postpaid, or $10.00 a year (three issues) from Mel Hughes, 2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32246.
415. Sep 98 #6: "The Magic Door" is the newsletter of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library, and the first (summer) issue is nicely done, edited by Chris Redmond and with interesting articles about the collection and some of its treasures; copies are available from Doug Wigglesworth, 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwig@netrover.com>.
416. Jeffrey Moss died on Sept. 24. He was a co-founder of "Sesame Street" in 1969, and was head writer for the series when Sherlock Hemlock arrived on the show in 1971. He also wrote the hit song "Rubber Duckie" and invented Cookie Monster, and was nominated for an Oscar for his lyrics for the film "The Muppets Take Manhattan".
417. "Ms. Lewinsky testified that she gave the President a number of additional gifts.(181)" "(181). These included a Sherlock Holmes game sometime after Christmas 1996." From the second part of the Referral to the United States House of Representatives, Submitted by the Office of the Independent Counsel, Sept. 9, 1998 (noted by Jon Lellenberg, who surely deserves an award for reading all of the footnotes).
418. The Armchair Detective has suspended publication due to physical and financial problems of its publisher, Judi Vause, according to a report from the magazine's editor-in-chief Elizabeth Foxwell in August. Vause is seeking for a buyer for the magazine; her address is 459 Park Avenue #252, Scotch Plains, NJ 07076. The most recent issue appears to have been vol. 30, no. 3 (1997).
419. Sherlock Holmes encounters both Jack the Ripper and Professor Moriarty in Colin R. Grimes' new play "Exit Sherlock Holmes", which will premiere at the Performance Space Orlando on Oct. 9 and runs weekends through Oct. 31; tickets cost $12.00, and the theater is at 1707-A North Mills Avenue, Orlando, FL 32803 (407-896-5717).
420. Julie Rosenblatt, one of the speakers at the conference in Minneapolis in August, told of Arthur Conan Doyle's skiing exploits in Switzerland (his route from Davos to Arosa is graded now as suitable only for experienced skiers, who are warned of the frequent danger of avalanche); Julie now reports that Dave Goodman, a very experienced back-country skier, skied the route recently and will report on his trip in an article in the Feb. 1999 issue of Skiing.
421. Geoff Jeffery notes that the Sherlock Holmes nesting dolls (Sep 93 #4) are offered at $12.95 in a catalog from Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7287); also Tom Bullimore's BAKER STREET PUZZLES (Nov 94 #1) and another puzzle book by Falcon Travis with S'ian artwork on the cover ($9.95 for the set of two).
422. Rupert Books has published THE JEREMY BRETT-LINDA PRITCHARD STORY: ON THE WINGS OF PARADISE; Linda Pritchard was Jeremy Brett's companion during the last seven years of his life, and offers her personal account of their time together. 146 pp., £20.00 or $32.00 plus shipping (credit-card orders welcome); 58/59 Stonefield, Bar Hill, Cambridge CB3 8TE, England <rupert_books@compuserve.com> <ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages.rupert_books>.
423. Sep 98 #7: Olaf Maurer reports that the Deutscher-Sherlock-Holmes-Club is planning a Sherlock Holmes exhibition next year, and would like to have a display of Sherlockian emblems, stationery, and publications to show how interesting and world-wide interest in Sherlock Holmes is. If you would like to contribute something to the display, his address is P.O. Box 150314, D-67028 Ludwigshafen, Germany.
424. Applewood Books published a facsimile of the first authorized cloth-bound separate edition of THE SIGN OF FOUR, published by Lippincott in 1893 (Dec 94 #4), with a foreword by James H. Billington and an introduction by John Y. Cole, and it's still available for $24.95 (128 The Great Road, Bedford, MA 01730) (800-277-5312) <www.awb.com>. And on Nov. 7, Applewood will begin publishing facsimiles of Harper's Weekly, beginning with the Nov. 10, 1860, Lincoln election issue ($125.00 per year by mail, $35.00 by e-mail); it will be a long wait, however, for the first issue with anything Doylean ("A Straggler of '15" appeared on Mar. 21, 1891) or Sherlockian ("The Cardboard Box" was published in the Jan. 14, 1893, issue).
425. Our new sheet of 20 stamps honoring "Four Centuries of American Art" shows Sherlockiana such as a plover, a geranium, a bison, and the Missouri, and Frederick Edwin Church's splendid painting of "Niagara" (1857).
426. Plan ahead: Christopher Lee, who has played Sir Henry Baskerville, Sherlock Holmes, and Mycroft Holmes, will be one of the superstar guests at "Monster Rally '99" (on Aug. 6-8, 1999, at the Crystal City Hyatt in Arlington, Va.) where he will be signing the new Midnight Marquee Press edition (redesigned and with additional photographs) of his 1977 autobiography TALL, DARK AND GRUESOME. There will be other guests, and a Forry Ackerman impersonation contest, and more information is available From FANEX (John Stell, 12118 Little Patuxant Parkway #J, Columbia, MD 21044) <www.fanex.com>.
427. Forecast: MIDNIGHT LOUIE'S PET DETECTIVES, edited by Carole Nelson Douglas, from Forge in October ($23.95); includes her new story "A Baker Street Irregular" (Midnight Louie meets Irene Adler). Quinn Fawcett's AGAINST THE BROTHERHOOD: A MYCROFT HOLMES NOVEL (May 98 #4), from Tor in October in a paperback reprint ($6.99).
428. Shelby Peck reported to the Mary Russell fans on a lecture on "A Short History of the Mystery" by Ron Goulart, who, during a discussion of American detective novels, mentioned his new book GROUCHO MARX, MASTER DETECTIVE, and his next book GROUCHO MARX, PRIVATE EYE due in 1999, and in the year 2000, ELEMENTARY, MY DEAR GROUCHO, which involves Groucho in a murder that takes place during the filming of a (fictitious) Sherlock Holmes movie in the late 1930s.
429. M. J. Trow's series of amusing pastiches about Inspector Sholto Lestrade, published since 1985 in Britain, now has an American publisher: Regnery Publishing (Gateway Mysteries) will publish all sixteen titles, starting with THE ADVENTURES OF INSPECTOR LESTRADE (224 pp., $19.95) in October. Trow offers a new and more sympathetic look at the oft-maligned detective portrayed in the Canon, writing with humor and ingenuity.
430. Sep 98 #8: Franklin W. Dixon has been writing the "Hardy Boys" series for more than 70 years, and he finally has got round to doing something Sherlockian (and yes, I know that it's really a house name, and that he doesn't exist). His THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA (New York: Minstrel/Pocket Books, 1997; 152 pp., $3.99) is #143 in the series; Franklin and Joe Hardy are involved in the production of a new musical version of the unrecorded case. "There's singing! There's dancing! And there's sabotage!"
431. More than one movie-going reader has reported that the trailer for "A Rugrats Movie" (an animation, to be released on Nov. 25) shows Angelica in a deerstalker, and you can see her in full color at web-sites at <www.nick.com/rugrats-movie/goodies/color_book/angelica.html> and <www.rugratsmovie.com/>. And elsewhere, since this will be a heavily merchandized movie: there's a doll ($21.99) on p. 513 of the J.C. Penney Christmas catalog (spotted by Sonia Fetherston), and the book RUGRATS AND THE ZOMBIES written by Sarah Willson and illustrated by Barry Goldberg ($3.25 from Simon & Schuster) that shows Angelica watching the television series "Shirleylock Holmes" (noted by Jim Vogelsang), and she's on the lid of Mott's Apple Sauce and Mott's Fruitsations (reported by Tim O'Connor), and on the band of the Mott's Adventure Watch you can buy for $3.99 with nine Rugrats points (you get three points for each $2.39 package of six 4-ounce jars). No word yet on an Angelica toy at a fast-food chain, but surely

- there's one on the way. I don't think that we can (or should) complain about anything that ensures that pre-schoolers see (and enjoy) the Sherlockian symbols.
432. More dolls: Sonia Fetherston reports that oversized stuffed-animal prizes for games of "skill" on the midway at the Oregon State Fair included huge Scooby Doo dolls dressed in Sherlockian costume. No one has reported them in stores, but the next time you're at a fair you might ask where they get their prizes from. And John Farrell has reported seeing a similar (but of course smaller) prize in an amusement-arcade claw machine.
433. Reported: THE MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Grosset & Dunlap, 1996; 218 pp., $14.95); nine of the stories, illustrated by Paul Bachem.
434. Five sets of Douglas Wilmer's splendid readings of Sherlock Holmes stories have been issued on audiocassettes by Penguin in Britain (not all have yet been issued in the United States), and they were available during his tour, and limited quantities are offered now: FOUR ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Spec/Devi/Musg/Chas); BLACK PETER AND OTHER SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES (Blue/Resi/Blac/Lady); THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOL. 1 (Scan/Iden/RedH/Bosc); THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOL. 2 (Five/Twis/Blue/Spec); and THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOL. 3 (Engr/Nobl/Bery/Copp). And yes, two of the tales are duplicated. $15.00 per set, plus $2.00 per order for one or two sets (or $3.00 per order for three to seven sets) for shipping by surface post to any address. US dollar or UK sterling checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please, and sent to the address below.
435. Oct 98 #1: Francie Monaghan happily notes that SHERLOCK HOLMES BY GAS-LAMP: HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE FIRST FOUR DECADES OF THE BAKER STREET JOURNAL (New York: Fordham University Press, 1989; 423 pp., $22.50) is still in print, and that's nice news indeed for those who don't have it. Edited by Philip A. Shreffler, it offers splendid examples of the wit and intelligence and devotion that have been and still are found in the Sherlockian world.
436. John Sherwood reports that Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson will visit The Victorian Villa Inn in Union City, Mich., to participate in "The Adventure of the Maniac Murders" on Nov. 6-8 and Nov. 13-15. Additional information is available from the Inn (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094) (800-348-4552) <sherwood@internet1.net> <<http://www.internet1.net/~sherwood/>>.
437. Elliott M. Black reports that The Criterion Bar Association enjoyed a performance of "Villains" at their meeting on Sept. 12. Commissioned by the society and performed by Charles Picard, the production presents "The Red-Headed League" and "The Norwood Builder" from the villains' point of view; if your society would be interested in hiring Picard to put on his show in your area, or doing it on your own, you can contact Elliott at 2511 Windsor Lane, Northfield, IL 60062 <emba10@aol.com>.
438. Noted by Don Hobbs: CLASSIC ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Barnes & Noble, 1998; 216 pages, $4.98); seven stories (RedH/Iden/Bosc/Bery/Copp/Scan/Spec), in their Children's Classics series.
439. Reported by Willis Frick: HOLMES, CHEMISTRY AND THE ROYAL INSTITUTION, by Antony Richards and Bryson Gore, in collaboration with The Sherlock Holmes Society of London; essays assessing Holmes' chemical work and his relationship with the Royal Institution of Great Britain. The 168-page book costs £13.50 from the Irregular Special Railway Company, 170 Woodland Road, Sawston, Cambridge CB2 4DX, England.
440. Carolyn and Joel Senter offer the 1998-1999 issue of The Sherlockian Times (their 20-page catalog/journal/newsletter); Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. The catalog has lots of new (and interesting) Sherlockiana, as well as news of goings-on in the Sherlockian world.
441. Dorothy K. Stix has decided to sell her husband Tom's collection to Sherlockians in multiple catalogs; if you would like to receive a catalog, you should send your requests to her at (34 Pierson Avenue, Norwood, NJ 07648) (fax 201-768-5843) or by e-mail to Carl Stix <carl.stix@ey.com>.
442. If you've wondered about those foot marks of some small animal ("five wellmarked footpads, an indication of long nails, and the whole print might be nearly as large as a dessert-spoon," Watson tells us in "The Crooked Man"), George Vanderburgh happily recommends this year's sheet of Christmas seals from Zimbabwe, which shows 15 small carnivores of Zimbabwe (including three different mongooses) and comes with a pamphlet of explanatory notes showing their footprints. George suggests a donation of at least $5.00 (currency, please), to RAPT National Headquarters, P.O. Box 2166, Bulawayo, Zimbabwe.

443. Oct 98 #2: Marius Goring died on Sept. 30. He studied theater at the Old Vic dramatic school, and during World War II provided the voice of Hitler in an anti-Nazi radio serial "The Shadow of the Swastika" (and he then acted in so many World War II movies that he was able to claim to have played every rank in the German army from private to field marshal). Other films roles included the young composer Julian Craster in "The Red Shoes" (1948) and a South American wastrel in "The Barefoot Contessa" (1954), and he starred as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on radio for the BBC Home Service in Michael and Mollie Hardwick's "The Man Who Was Sherlock Holmes" in 1963.
444. There are many foxes mentioned in the Canon, and the design of our new one-dollar stamp features a red fox, perhaps honoring "Mortimer Tregennis, with the foxy face" ("The Devil's Foot").
445. Sorry about that (I had the phone number wrong): the excellent recreation of the sitting-room at 221B that delighted Sherlockians and other tourists for many years at S. Holmes, Esq. in San Francisco still seeks a new location in a pub, hotel, or theme restaurant; the rental is $3,000 a year, and enquiries can be directed to Willy Werby at 2700 19th Street San Francisco, CA 94110 (415-616-3116) <mycroft813@aol.com>.
446. Robert Lewis Taylor died on Sept. 30. He was a journalist, biographer, and novelist, and in 1958 won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction for THE TRAVELS OF JAMIE MCPHEETERS. He joined the staff of The New Yorker in 1939, and wrote many splendid profiles for the magazine, including a two-part article ("Two Authors in an Attic") in 1951 about John Dickson Carr, with many fine tales about the author, his imaginative mysteries, and his work on his biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
447. Further to the report (Sep 98 #8) of Scooby Doo dolls dressed in Sherlockian costume, Jim Vogelsang notes that they were offered for sale (in five different sizes: small, medium, large, jumbo, and life-size) at a Six Flags amusement park, and that he has seen them at pet-supply stores. "Large" is about 21 inches high, and costs $26.99.
448. Christopher Sliwa would be delighted to hear from Sherlockians in Poland (and from Sherlockians who aren't in Poland, but would like to correspond with a Sherlockian there): Krzysztof Sliwa, ul. Wegierska 10d/2, 73-110 Stargard, Poland <holmes54@friko6.onet.pl>.
449. Christopher Roden reports that Simon Jones (who played Arthur Dent in "The Hitchhikers Guide to the Galaxy" and read June Thompson's "The Case of the Scottish Tragedy" on the recently-issued audiocassette) will play the title role in The Actors Company Theatre production of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" at the Theatre at the New York Historical Society (2 West 77th Street at Central Park West) on Nov. 13 and 16 (7:30 pm) and Nov. 15 (2:00 pm); tickets cost $15.00, and the box office phone number is 212-645-8228.

450. MIDNIGHT LOUIE'S PET DETECTIVES, edited by Carole Nelson Douglas (New York: Forge/Tom Doherty, 1998; 350 pp., $23.95), offers an interesting collection of short stories (almost all of the new) by authors who include Anne Perry, Carolyn Wheat, Barbara Paul, and Douglas herself, whose tale allows her own cat detective Midnight Louie to solve a mystery for Sherlock Holmes.

451. Oct 98 #3: A Common Reader (141 Tompkins Avenue, Pleasantville, NY 10570 (800-832-7323) <www.commonreader.com> continues to issue its delightful catalogs, with interesting descriptions of books not often seen in other catalogs, such as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's THE COMPLETE BRIGADIER GERARD STORIES ($15.95), Ben Macintyre's THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME ($12.95), Umberto Eco's THE NAME OF THE ROSE ($13.00), and Michael Dibdin's THE LAST SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY ($10.00).
452. Ben Wood (9840 Sucia Circle, Parrish, FL 34219) offer his compact Sherlockian calendar for 1999; it's 5.5 x 4 in. unopened and costs $2.50 postpaid.
453. Yuichi Hirayama has published the eighth volume of The Shoso-in Bulletin, with 248 pages, articles from contributors in Asia, Australia, Europe, and the United States, and papers presented at the international convention in Japan last spring, all in English and nicely done as always. $12.00 postpaid from Mel Hughes, 2664 Sam Hardwick Boulevard, Jacksonville, FL 32246.
454. Gerald F. O'Hara died on Oct. 11. He was an energetic member of The C.P.R. Stockholders of Edmonton, and edited and published his own Sherlock Holmes Information Exchange Newsletter, and was keenly interested in Arthur Conan Doyle and his visits to Canada; some of Gerry's research was published in "Doyle's Visit to Jasper" (Canadian Holmes, summer 1987) and in his 20-page pamphlet TRAVEL ALBERTA WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES (1988), and much more in his newsletter.
455. THE CASE OF THE MYSTERIOUS FUDGE has Turlock Loams linking a prosaic shipment of odd fudge to the bizarre machinations of the evil fast-food empire which seeks to control the world, Dr. Fatso's literary agent reports. The latest (hand-set and hand-printed) Pequod Pressing costs $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
456. Jim Vogelsang reports that Amelia Watson continues to solve mysteries, now in San Francisco, where she has accompanied her husband John on a lecture tour. Michael Mallory's "The Adventure of the Japanese Sword" is in Murderous Intent (summer/fall 1998); Box 5947, Vancouver, WA 98668 ($5.95).
457. Jim also reports still more appearances of Angelica in a deerstalker: in THE RUGRATS MOVIE STICKER BOOK and THE RUGRATS MOVIE SUPER COLORING AND ACTIVITY BOOK ($1.49 each), as a Rugrats Movie Soft Pal 5-inch-high doll ($4.99), and as an Angelica Safari Mini Plush 6-inch-high doll ($6.99).
458. "Victorian Fairy Painting" (at the Frick Collection, at 5th Avenue at East 70th Street in New York through Jan. 17) offers 34 paintings selected from the exhibition organized by the Royal Academy in London in 1997, and it is an interesting show: there are three paintings by Richard Doyle and one by Charles Doyle (Arthur Conan Doyle's uncle and father). Visitors can also see three fine paintings by Jean-Baptiste Greuze displayed in the Frick's permanent collection.
459. Mark Alberstat's 1999 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
460. Oct 98 #4: There weren't any Sherlockian sessions or panels at Bouchercon (the world mystery convention) in Philadelphia on Oct. 1-4, but of course there were Sherlockian authors on hand, including Carole Nelson Douglas, who reported that her four Irene Adler novels have been bought by Recorded Books for release as unabridged recordings on cassette (there's no word yet on who will do the reading); the same company has issued three of Laurie R. King's Mary Russell novels, read well by Jenny Sterlin.
461. Future Bouchercons will be held in Milwaukee on Sept. 30-Oct 3, 1999 (Box 341218, Milwaukee, WI 53234) <whreenie@aol.com> <www.execpc.com/~piesbook/bouchercon'99.html> and in Denver on Sept. 7-10, 2000 (Box 17910, Boulder, CO 90308) <claffin@colorado.edu> <www.bouchercon2000.com>.
462. Douglas G. Greene continues to publish fine short-story collections from his Crippen & Landru Press, the latest being Bill Pronzini's CARPENTER AND QUINCANNON: PROFESSIONAL DETECTIVE SERVICES and Peter Robinson's NOT SAFE AFTER DARK; each $40.00 (cloth) or $16.00 (paper). Non-Sherlockian, but he can still provide copies of Edward D. Hoch's DIAGNOSIS: IMPOSSIBLE (Mar 96 #1) and THE RIPPER OF STORYVILLE (Oct 97 #6). Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (toll-free 877-622-6656) <crippenl@pilot.infi.net> <www.crippenlandru.com>.
463. The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse offers its new lapel pin (black on silver); $7.00 postpaid, and checks should be sent to Joseph A. Coppola (103 Kenny Street, Fayetteville, NY 13066).
464. The latest issue of Scarlet Street has David Stuart Davies' wishful report on "My Interview with Basil Rathbone" (wishful because David never met Rathbone, but then neither did Tony Howlett, and David explains why), but the next issue of the magazine will have David's report on Edward R. Murrow's interview with Rathbone on "Person to Person" on CBS-TV on Jan. 11, 1957. Scarlet Street is published bimonthly, with coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre, and costs $35.00 a year; Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452.
465. Bill Mason's DEEPER SHADES offers an interesting analysis of "the dressinggowns of Sherlock Holmes, and the psychology of color" in a 44-page booklet available (for $8.00 postpaid) from Bill (5805 Post Corners Trail #K, Centreville, VA 20120).
466. Scott Price (The World of Sherlock Holmes Mystery Shop, 3957-A Grahamdale Circle, Memphis, TN 38122) (toll-free 888-355-6877 2:00pm-10:00pm CST) has a new illustrated mail-order catalog with a wide variety of Sherlockiana.
467. Spotted by Ev Herzog: ALBERT'S HALLOWEEN: THE CASE OF THE STOLEN PUMPKINS, by Leslie Tryon (New York: Atheneum, 1998; 40 pp., $16.00); Chief Inspector Albert Duck leads Miss Maple, Sam Slade, and Shamrock Homes (a monkey) on a quest to find some missing pumpkins (the latest in a series for children).
468. "A character suffers from the fear that he will become boring to the author, who will simply let him drop, without so much as a terminal illness or a dramatic tumble down the Reichenbach Falls in the arms of Professor Moriarty." John Updike, in BECH AT BAY: A QUASI-NOVEL (New York: Knopf, 1998).

469. Oct 98 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 145th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 8, with the traditional festivities in New York. But the festivities actually will begin on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Allen Mackler and Charlie Shields will lead participants in the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with lunch at McSorley's; Allen's address is 324 2nd Street NE, Osseo, MN 55369 (612-424-8889) <psarasate@aol.com>, and from Jan. 5, Allen will be at the Doubletree Guest Suites (212-719-1600).
470. On Thursday afternoon The Morley-Montgomery Reception (by invitation only) will honor past winners and this year's recipient of the award for the best paper published in The Baker Street Journal each year, and recent contributors to the BSJ. The BSI Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club at 24 East 39th Street (between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Owen Dudley Edwards, biographer of Arthur Conan Doyle and the general editor of THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES ($10.00; seating is limited, and you are advised to - reserve early; details below). Then there's time for supper and theater, or maybe the Aunt Clara Sing-Along at a site to be named later (since Hugh O'Lunney is frantically seeking another site for his pub).

471. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the hotel provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend each day (and pay about $15.00; details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $35.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler's open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) is from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm, and it is possible that Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
472. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street, and The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will include drinks, dinner, and entertainment at 6:30 pm at La Belle Epoque at 827 Broadway (at 12th Street); $45.00 (Maribeau Briggs, 46 East 29th Street #2-R, New York, NY 10016). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
473. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in a dealers room on the 2nd floor of the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street, from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; information about vendor tables is available from Donald B. Izban, 213 Ivy Court, Streamwood, IL 60107 (630-483-3497). The BSI annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park South (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); there will be an open bar and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the cost is $35.00 (details below) or $45.00 at the door.
474. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $190.00 a night (Wednesday through Saturday); this is the total cost, since no tax is due on reservations arranged by the BSI (the special rate is the equivalent of $166.00 plus tax). Other charges (room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians; contact the Algonquin directly (and don't delay), and ask for the Baker Street Irregulars rate (212-840-6800).
475. Oct 98 #6: And here are the details: you can request a reservation form for BSI events (including the lecture on Thursday, the Martha Hudson breakfast on Friday, and the reception on Saturday) from Michael F. Whelan, 414 N. Park Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46202; the forms will be mailed to you by mid-November.
476. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. You should for weekend specials, or winter promotional rates, and if you plan to arrive on Thursday, you should confirm the rates, and that the weekend rates include Thursday. Portland Square (132 West 47th St.): $99 (single) $109 (double) (212-382-0600); Gershwin (7 East 27th St.): $99/$119 (212-545-8000); New Yorker (481 8th Ave.): $119 (212-971-0101); Hampshire (157 West 47th St.): $119 (dollars and sense rate) (212-768-3700); St. Moritz (under renovation) (50 Central Park South): $125 (212-752-7760); Chelsea Savoy (204 West 23rd St.): $125/$145 (212-929-9353); Quality Fifth Ave. (3 East 40th St.): $129 (212-447-1500).
477. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, c/o The Baker Street Irregulars, at 414 N. Park Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46202; the checks will be forwarded unopened and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.
478. Forecast: HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Carol-Lynn Waugh, from Berkley in November in a paperback reprint ($13.00); 14 pastiches, all with a seasonal theme, written by Anne Perry, Barbara Paul, Carolyn Wheat, Carole Nelson Douglas, Edward D. Hoch, and others (first published in 1996).
479. Plan ahead: the next Sherlock Holmes Festival in Crowborough will be held on July 3-10, 1999; there will be Doylean and Sherlockian events, and more information is available from P.O. Box 17, Crowborough, East Sussex TN6 1WU, England <webzone.ccacyber.com/www/conan_doyle_crowborough/>.
480. Joseph Cates died on Oct. 10. He was a Broadway and television producer, a creator of the television game show "The $64,000 Question", and helped make television specials into regular network features, writing, producing, and directing more than a thousand of them. He was executive producer for the special "Timex Presents Sherlock Holmes", planned by NBC-TV for spring 1976 with Robert Shaw as Holmes and Donald Pleasance as Watson, but the project was shelved because of Shaw's commitments after his hit movie "Jaws".

481. Nov 98 #1: Francine Kitts notes that the current catalog from the Britannia Collection (Box 64413, St. Paul, MN 55164) (800-778-7007) offers an Irish deerstalker in Donegal tweed ($49.95); a dozen of the Gielgud/Richardson radio programs on audio cassette ($26.95); and six of the Brett/Hardwicke television shows ($19.98 each). Adventures in Cassettes (5353 Nathan Lane North, Plymouth, MN 55422) (800-328-0108) offers 16 of the Gielgud/Richardson shows ($29.98) and many of the Rathbone/Bruce and Conway/Bruce programs.
482. Wilfrid de Freitas happily reports that he has found the Priory School: it is an independent co-educational English School (Kindergarten to Grade 6), founded in 1947 and located in Montreal.
483. James Goldman died on Oct. 28. He was the author of the play "The Lion in Winter" (and won an Academy Award for his screenplay for the film) and the book for Stephen Sondheim's musical "Follies", he also wrote the script for the play "They Might Be Giants" (1961), which was made into a film in 1971 starring George C. Scott as a psychotic judge who believes that he is Sherlock Holmes, and Joanne Woodward as his psychiatrist Dr. Watson.
484. Ben Wood notes that the new catalog from Russell's For Men offers a Holmes-and-Watson set of two meerschaum pipes carved by M. Aydogu (item SMS-126); the cost is $195.00, and the address is 1705 North Thompson Street, Springdale, AR 72764 (800-255-9034) <www.agrussell.com>.
485. The Practical, But Limited Geologists met at the Old Spaghetti Factory in Toronto on Oct. 28, for a dinner honoring the world's first forensic geologist, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. The Bootmakers of Toronto offered a warm welcome, the traditional toasts were drunk (along with some untraditional toasts), and many of the visiting geologists remembered that one of the nice things about Canada is that Cuban cigars are both available and legal (although not inexpensive). Our next dinners will be in San Antonio in April, and in Denver in October.
486. Those who have enjoyed the Canonical Convocation and Caper in Door County, Wis., in years past will welcome the news that the fun and games will continue, since plans are afoot for a Sherlockian Equinoctial Experience there in Sept. 1999. If you would like to be on the mailing list, write to Jane Richardson (3427 East Exchange Road, Crete, IL 60417).
487. Tom O'Day reports that the Book-of-the-Month Club set THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (Mar 94 #3) has been remaindered to Crown (and perhaps other) stores at $3.99 a volume. The nine-volume uniform hard-cover set sold for $44.95 in 1994; A STUDY IN SCARLET and THE SIGN OF THE FOUR seem to have been copied from a pirated edition first published by Orange Judd in 1907, and the other seven volumes were copied from the first American editions.

488. If you missed the "Victorian Holmes Weekend" in Cape May on Nov. 6-8, there is plenty of time to plan to attend the next one, on Mar. 12-14, 1999. You get a tour of eight Victorian homes, meals, and a mystery to solve; details are available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <www.capemaymac.org>.
489. Nov 98 #2: The Cambridge Stamp Centre celebrated the 40th anniversary of the making the Hammer Films version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on Oct. 31 (when principal photography for the film ended) with a series of commemorative covers with a special pictorial postmark on the 1997 British stamp honoring the Hound, illustrated with the film's poster, and signed by Christopher Lee and actors who have performed in the Granada television series. Additional information is available from the company (attn: Keith Astell), at 9 Sussex Street, Cambridge CB1 1PA, England.
490. The Mac OS 8.5 operating system was released with great fanfare about Sherlock (described as "your personal search detective"), and with a nice logo that also appears on free T-shirts given to those who were among the first to buy the new upgrade.
491. Some of the nicest things about book catalogs are the surprises one finds in them, including occasional quotes: "Gentlemen, you must not mistake me. I admit that he is the sworn foe of our nation, and, if you will, of the whole human race. But Gentlemen, we must be just to our enemy. We must not forget that he once shot a bookseller." Thomas Campbell, on Napoleon, quoted in a catalog from Buddenbrooks (31 Newbury Street, Boston, MA 02116) <buddenbrooks@worldnet.att.net>.
492. Norman L. Rosenbaum's collection of Conan Doyle books and manuscripts will be sold at auction at Sotheby's in London on Dec. 17, in 218 lots, one of them being twelve minutes of home movies of Conan Doyle and his family). The catalog is available from Sotheby's (attn: Peter Selley, 34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England) <peter.selley@sothebys.com> and on their web-site <www.sothebys.com>.
493. The October catalog from the J. Peterman Company (1318 Russell Cave Road, Lexington, KY 40505 (800-231-7341) <www.jpeterman.com> is devoted to "holiday attire" (and Scott Monty notes that quite a bit of it echoes stylish attire from late-19th-century England and America).
494. The Sept. issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota reports on the Founders' Footprints Conference held at the Wilson Library this summer, with reports on the festivities, and by new curator of special collections Timothy Johnson on his background and plans for the future. You can join the mailing list by writing to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
495. There was quite a bit of publicity for the unveiling of the skeleton of a new spinosaur *Suchomimus tenerensis* at the National Geographic Society in Washington this month (it was as large a *Tyrannosaurus rex* but preferred a diet of fish, and there were a lot of fish available 100 million years ago in what's now central Niger). There aren't all that many spinosaurs known, but one of them is *Irritator challengeri*, found in Brazil and named after Professor George Edward Challenger, of the Lost World (Feb 96 #1).
496. Nov 98 #3: Bob Kane died on Nov. 3. He was the creator of Batman and Robin, and the Penguin and Catwoman and the Joker, for DC Comics in 1939, and (as might be expected) the comic books had Sherlockian references over the years, the first of them being appearances by Bruce Wayne's butler Alfred in a deerstalker in the 1940s). Kane gave artistic control over the series to DC Comics early in Batman's history, but retained (and profited from) the copyright, and continued to be involved in the series, and worked as a consultant right through the most recent feature films.
497. Dan Knight reports that the current catalog from The Mind's Eye (Box 6549, Chelmsford, MA 01824 (800-949-333) offers wool deerstalkers (S/M/L/XL) for $24.95; a Sherlock Holmes pipe from Peterson of Dublin for $249.00; and six audiocassettes each with two of the Gielgud/Richardson radio broadcasts for $35.95.
498. Greg Darak reports that a Celebrity Play Reading Series at the Stratford Shakespeare Festival Theater will include Charles Edward Pogue's 1987 play "The Ebony Ape" on Jan. 25, 1999, with Michael York (Sherlock Holmes) and Simon James (Dr. Watson). Tickets cost $15.00 or $10.00 ($5.00 for students), and the series benefits the continuing renovation and restoration of the theater; 1850 Elm Street, Stratford, CT 06497 (203-381-9518).
499. Reported: new double-audiocassette sets from CSA Telltapes (101 Chamberlayne Road, London NW10 3ND, England): THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, EPISODE 3, read by Edward Hardwicke (Suss/Cree/Spec); and CLASSIC SCI FI STORIES, read by Nicky Henson (includes Conan Doyle's "The Disintegration Machine"). £8.99 each postpaid in Britain; £9.99 each to other addresses.
500. Decorative eggs have long been a holiday tradition in Europe and in some parts of the United States, and Ramute Pliplys has produced a series of attractive Sherlockian eggs, to hang on your Christmas tree or elsewhere. The eggs are decorated in the Lithuanian tradition (using heated beeswax and multiple dye baths) and feature dancing men and various mottos; they cost $20.00 each plus shipping, and you can request an illustrated flier from Ramute (7212 South Talman Avenue, Chicago, IL 60629).
501. The Mysterious Bookshop's fall-winter catalog includes three pages of new and old Sherlockiana (and lots of other books); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840); 8763 Beverly Boulevard, West Hollywood, CA 90048 (800-821-9017); or 82 Marylebone High Street, London W1M 3DE, England. And there's a web-site at <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
502. Ted Friedman continues his exploration of Sherlockian philately in a well-illustrated two-page article on the "Music of Sherlock Holmes" in Topical Time (Nov.-Dec. 1998). The issue costs $5.00 postpaid, from the American Topical Association, Box 50820, Albuquerque, NM 87181.
503. Anglofile reports a new treasure trove for trivia fans: the "RADIO TIMES" GUIDE TO TV COMEDY, by Mark Lewisohn (London: BBC Worldwide, 1998; 736 pp., £19.99); the book offers details on 2,600 comedy programs, from sitcoms to sketch shows, series to specials, broadcast on British television over the last 54 years. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter with detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($15.00 a year).
504. Nov 98 #4: Bill Dorn's Sherlock Holmes Calendar for 1999 shows the dates for 54 of the case (Bill has used the Zeisler and Christ chronologies, and omits the six cases that Zeisler and Christ did not date), and the founding dates for 65 Sherlockian societies, and birth and death dates for Sherlockian notables; $9.95 postpaid (or $11.95 outside the U.S.) from William S. Dorn, 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210.
505. The Library of Congress has added "The Lost World" (1925) to the National Film Registry, as one of 25 films selected this year "based on their historic, cultural, or aesthetic importance." The Registry was created by the National Film Preservation Act of 1988, and 25 films are chosen each year; Buster Keaton's "Sherlock, Jr." (1924) was honored in 1991.
506. Plan ahead: there will be another spring-break "221Beach" Sherlockian gathering at Spring Lake, N.J., on Apr. 23-25, 1999; details are available from Al Gregory and Jan Stauber, at 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044 <grimpen@compuserve.com>.
507. The Library of Congress exhibition "Freud: Conflict and Culture" (through Jan. 16) is accompanied by a film series in Mary Pickford Theater in the Madison Building, and Brian Taves notes that "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" is scheduled for 7:00 pm on Dec. 15; there's no charge, but there are only 64 seats in the theater, and you should call 202-707-5677 for reservations starting Dec. 8.

508. Jim Suszynski spotted Holmes and Watson on the cover of WEATHER TRACKER (a supplement in the special school edition of the Philadelphia Inquirer that helps students in grades 4-8 understand how weather makes news), and Pooh in a deerstalker on the cover of HUNTING FOR HONEY: SPECIAL EDITION COLORING BOOK from Golden Books.
509. Hugh Scullion reports from Britain that Douglas Moreton died in September. He worked for many years as a salesman for a printing company, and wrote two collections of amusing pastiches: THE PAPER IN THE CASE (1997) and THE UNRELATED ADVENTURES OF CLEWLOW HOLMES (1998).
510. Jennie Paton notes that SMITHSONIAN HISTORICAL PERFORMANCES: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES from Radio Spirits is now in stores; $24.98 on four audiocassettes or $39.98 on four CDs, with twelve of the John Stanley/Alfred Shirley radio programs from the 1947-48 season. The new releases were produced by Ken Greenwald and 221 Baker Street Associates (and almost all of them were not previously available).
511. Carl Heifetz reports that Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be produced by the St. Petersburg Little Theatre, Jan. 7-17, 1999. The theater's address is 4025 31st Street South, St. Petersburg, FL 33712 (813-866-1973).
512. Noted by Ralph Hall: NATE THE GREAT AND ME: THE CASE OF THE FLEEING FANG, by Marjorie Weinman Sharmat (New York, Delacorte, 1998, $9.95); the latest title in the continuing series featuring Nate in Sherlockian costume. AUNT EATER'S MYSTERY HALLOWEEN, by Doug Cushman (Harper Collins, 1998, $14.95); with Aunt Eater in S'ian costume on the cover and throughout the book.
513. Nov 98 #5: T. J. Mullin's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" played at the Heritage Square Music Hall in Golden, and it was quite funny, according to John Stephenson. The show will be revived from Jan. 22 to Feb. 28, 1999; the address is: 18301 West Colfax Avenue #D-103, Golden, CO 80401, and the box-office telephone number is 303-279-7800.
514. David L. Hammer continues his Sherlockian explorations of philately with a pastiche about "Victor Lynch, the Forger" in The American Philatelist, Nov. 1998; Box 8000, State College, PA 16803 ($3.95).
515. Reported: BRIGADE: THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF INSPECTOR LESTRADE, by M. J. Trow (Washington: Regnery/Gateway, 1998; 208 pp., $19.95); the second in the continuing series, with humor that's broad and occasionally slapstick, and a cast of cameo characters that extends from Kaiser Wilhelm to an infant Basil Rathbone.
516. Robert S. Gellerstedt, Jr., (1035 Wedgewood Drive, Fayetteville, GA 30214) has tucked away in his computer a combined index to 20 Sherlockian anthologies, and to the obituaries published in The Baker Street Journal, and to the recorded cases, all included in the 27 pages of the latest edition of THE SHERLOCKIAN ANTHOLOGIES INDEX; $6.00 postpaid to the U.S. and Canada. Bob's "The Irregular News" (his four-page Christmas newsletter, this year with reprints of two Sherlockian essays by A. A. Milne) is available without charge.
517. Scott Monty has forwarded a report from the N.Y. Times (Nov. 18) that the latest Stradivarius to go to auction brought $884,000 at Christie's, quite a bit more than the 55 shillings Sherlock Holmes said he paid for his, and rather less than the $1.58 million a different Stradivarius brought earlier this year (May 98 #3).
518. THE BOTTOM OF THE BARREL is the ninth Pequod Press pressing this year, and it's a volume of verse (primarily Canonical, the poet reports). The booklet costs $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper), from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
519. Michael and Lynette Yencho exhibited a handsome bronze sculpture of Sherlock Holmes "On Grimpen Mire" in Minneapolis earlier this year, and copies still are available ($600 plus shipping). You can write for an illustrated brochure (Garden Studio, 931 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55104) or see it on the Web <www.skypoint.com/members/yencho/holmes/>.
520. Ratana Ngini reports that Ty (the company that makes Beanie Babies) also has a line of plush dolls, one of them a basset hound named Sherlock, about 12" long, that sells for about $10.00. The electronically-enabled can see him at <www.ty.com> (look in the Dog House).
521. A television adaptation of Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical "Cats" was broadcast on "Great Performances" on PBS-TV on Nov. 2 (and perhaps a bit earlier in Britain), and the program is available on a videocassette (from Polygram Video) for $18.99; it's nicely done, and the cast includes Bryn Walters as Macavity: the Mystery Cat, who is just as Canonical in the musical as he is in the poem in T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS.
522. Nov 98 #6: Noted by Bill Mason: THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF MOVIE DETECTIVES AND SCREEN CRIMES, edited by Peter Haining (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1998; 416 pp., $10.95); it's an anthology of stories that have been dramatized, and of scripts that include Thomas R. Hutchinson's "The Three Garridebs" (broadcast by NBC-TV on Nov. 28, 1937).
523. Reported: THE MURILLO MURDER MYSTERY, by Michael Jorgensen, with illustrations by the author; a mystery involving the cast of an Australian tour of "The Speckled Band" in 1911. A brochure is available from the Black Jack Press, 392 Station Street, Carlton North, Vic. 3054, Australia, or you can order the book itself for $29.00 postpaid (or $110 postpaid for a limited edition with additional illustrations).
524. If you've postponed reserving for events during the birthday festivities in January, you may be too late for some of them, but at least there's still time to send souvenirs for the Baskerville Bash to Francine Kitts at 35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301; her deadline is Dec. 20, and you can send her 120 copies of your souvenir.
525. The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse is planning a Fall Sherlockian Weekend at Minnowbrook in Blue Mountain Lake, N.Y., on Oct. 15-17, 1999. More information is available from Carol Cavalluzzi (108 Marvin Road, Syracuse, NY 13207) <cacavall@library.syr.edu>. The resort also has a web-site, at <www.minnowbrook.org>.
526. Hugh Leonard's play "The Mask of Moriarty" (1985) opened at the Blackfriars Theatre in Rochester on Nov. 27 and runs through Dec. 31; the box office is at 248 East Avenue, Rochester, NY 14604 (716-454-1260). The play also will be produced at Seattle's Village Theatre-Mainstage from Jan. 21 to Mar. 28, 1999; 303 Front Street North, Issaquah, WA 98207 (425-392-2202) <seattle.sidewalk.com/link/70125>.
527. William A. Berner ("Aloysius Doran, Esq., of San Francisco, Cal.") died in 1997. Bill was a member of The Scowrers and Molly Maguires, and edited The Vermissa Herald in the 1960s and 1970s, and he was a helpful book dealer to Sherlockians in a time when there weren't that many dealers who specialized in Sherlockiana. He received his Investiture in 1983.
528. Robert B. Frier ("Colonel Upwood") died on Apr. 8. He was one of the first members of The Scowrers and Molly Maguires, and was awarded his Investiture in 1960; he was editor of the Pacific Goldsmith, and loved Gilbert & Sullivan as well as Sherlock Holmes.
529. Larry Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ICE PALACE MURDERS (New York: Viking, 1998; 322 pp., $23.95) brings Holmes and Watson back to Minnesota in 1896 to solve a grisly murder during Saint Paul's famous Winter Carnival; as in his SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (Sep 96 #5), Millett makes good use of local history, color, and characters. And at the Norwegian Explorers' conference last summer, he reported that Holmes paid a third visit to Minnesota, to be covered in a third novel now underway.
530. Dec 98 #1: It's great fun to hear good stories read by fine actors, and audiocassettes offer just that opportunity: Nicky Henson reads Conan Doyle's "Disintegration Machine" and five stories by other authors on CLASSIC SCI FI STORIES, and Edward Hardwick reads three stories ("The Sussex

- Vampire"/"The Creeping Man"/"The Speckled Band") on THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, EPISODE 3. Both are two-cassette sets; £8.99 each postpaid in Britain, or £9.99 each to other addresses, from CSA Telltapes Ltd., 101 Chamberlayne Road, London NW10 3ND, England.
531. The Easton Press (47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06875) (800-211-1308) is still offering THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES in three volumes; first issued in 1987, it's a handsome leather-bound reprint (with color frontispieces) of the Heritage Press edition published in 1952 and 1957; $49.75 per volume postpaid.
532. Eric Ambler died on Oct. 22. He was hailed as the father of the modern spy thriller, famous for novels such as EPITAPH FOR A SPY (1938) and A COFFIN FOR DIMITRIOS (1939), and for his screenplays for films that included "The Cruel Sea" (1953) and "A Night to Remember" (1958). In his introduction to the Murray/Cape edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1974) Ambler recalled his first encounter with the Canon: "For the boy of twelve these stories were more than an entertainment; they opened doors to rooms about which he might not otherwise have known so soon," and noted that they still gave him pleasure.
533. Plan ahead: John Comstock notes that the Shaw Festival in Ontario will produce Arthur Conan Doyle's "Waterloo" from June 5 to July 25, 1999. This is their second production of the play, which was well-received in repertory last summer. The box-office address is: Box 774, Niagara-on-the-Lake, ON L0S 1J0, Canada (800-267-4759) <shawfest@sympatico.ca>.
534. Patrick Horgan began his Sherlockian career playing Captain Gregg in the musical "Baker Street" in 1964, and went on to play Sherlock Holmes in the William Gillette play, and in "The Speckled Band" and in a television commercial, and to play William Gillette (in Kenneth Ludwig's play "Dramatic License"). And he has done much more, recording six of the nine books of the Canon (work is underway on the remaining three) and his book of S'ian scholarship THE DETECTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, for a company called Audio Concepts; some of the recordings are available (and more will be soon) to those who can download them from an Internet web-site at <www.audiohighway.com> (use the link to "audio books"). There's no charge for the recordings or the software, but you will need to be running Windows on a reasonably powerful computer. There are hopes that the scholarship can be published as a book, and that the recordings can be issued on audiocassettes, sooner rather than later.
535. THE EINSTEIN PARADOX AND OTHER SCIENCE MYSTERIES SOLVED BY SHERLOCK HOLMES (Reading: Helix/Perseus, 1998; 254 pp., $12.00) is the new title used for the paperback edition of Colin Bruce's THE STRANGE CASE OF MRS. HUDSON'S CAT (Jun 97 #4); explanations of the more important paradoxes of classical and modern physics, with a cast of Sherlockian and Doylean characters.
536. Dec 98 #2: Plan ahead: Cox & Co. of New England and The Bull Terriers of Boston will hold an anniversary weekend gathering at Windsor Castle on May 15-16, 1999. Windsor Castle is perhaps better known locally as the Sheraton Tara (even though a photograph of the hotel shows that it looks more like a castle than a southern mansion). Additional details are available from David House, 498 Hanover Street #1-D, Manchester, NH 03104.
537. "Houdini" was interesting on TNT cable in December, with David Warner in a short scene as Conan Doyle. It was Warner's second association with Sherlock Holmes, for those who like trivia questions.
538. Bjarne Nielsen (Antikvariat Pinkerton, Algade 3, DK-4500 Nykobing Sjaelland, Denmark) continues to issue interesting sales lists of Sherlockiana, in English and Danish, some from the collection of A. D. Henriksen, and the books and pamphlets that he has published himself; the current catalog also has a photograph of Bjarne's Sherlock Holmes Museum, which is well worth a visit when you're visiting Denmark.
539. Flip Wilson died on Nov. 25. He was the first successful black host of a television variety show, winning Emmy awards for performing and writing on "The Flip Wilson Show" in 1971. In one of the many skits on the series he portrayed Hemlock Jones, on Dec. 3, 1970, with Johnny Brown as Dr. Dotson and Connie Stevens as Prof. Doriarty.
540. Scott Lucy has reported that plans are afoot to create The Undershaw Club in Arthur Conan Doyle's home in Surrey. Plans call for a major refurbishment of the house (to be completed early in Dec. 1999), and the club will then be open to members, offering accommodations, meals, and entertainment. The management company (ACD Holdings) plans to raise £1.5 million, of which £200,000 will be used to acquire Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes material. The company also plans to raise £600,000 to form a production company (ACD Productions) to produce a feature-length documentary of Conan Doyle's life. The initial joining fee for club will be £500 (waived for founding members who join before Jan. 2000) and the annual fee will be £365 (U.K. members) or £200 (overseas members) or £50 (associate members who visit the club no more than three times a year). Additional information is available from Lucy at The Undershaw Club, c/o Grannom House, Gasden Lane, Witley, Surrey GU8 5QB, England <slucy@supralife.co.uk>.
541. Plan ahead: the STUD Sherlockian Society will hold their next Annual Dinner and Weekend on Mar. 5-6, 1999, in and near Schiller Park, Ill. Details are available from Allan Devitt (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106).
542. Barbara Roscoe reports that Holmes Under the Arch (a group of Sherlockian societies in Missouri and Illinois) are planning a "Weekend at Baskerville Hall" in St. Louis on Sept. 10-11, 1999. Additional information is available from Holmes Under the Arch, 7101 Mardel Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63109 <huta1999@aol.com>.
543. A new flier from Carolyn and Joel Senter (Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <www.sherlock-holmes.com> offers souvenirs (the pin, poster, and medallion) from the recent William Gillette festival in Tryon, N.C., and Bill Dorn's Sherlockian calendar for 1999.
544. Dec 98 #3: Syd Goldberg has kindly forwarded Thomas J. Brady's review (in the Philadelphia Inquirer, Nov. 1) of Paul Theroux's new book about V. S. Naipaul, SIR VIDIA'S SHADOW (Houghton Mifflin, $25.00); Brady reports that Theroux divides his time between Cape Cod and Hawaii, and in Hawaii raises bees, "inspired by Sherlock Holmes, who reputedly survived his supposed death leap with Professor Moriarty at Reichenbach Falls and went on to raise bees in retirement in Sussex."
545. Reported by Steve Rothman: ONE MAN'S CHORUS, by Anthony Burgess (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1998; 368 pp., $26.00); a posthumous collection of essays that include "Our Eternal Holmes" (his "Immortal Crusader" reprinted from the May 14, 1989, issue of The Mail on Sunday).
546. And yes, that was a trivia question: what was David Warner's first association with Sherlock Holmes? In the film "Time After Time" (1979), directed by Nicholas Meyer, with Malcolm McDowell as H. G. Wells and David Warner as John Leslie Stevenson (who is Jack the Ripper). Stevenson uses Wells' time machine to escape to modern-day San Francisco, where Wells tracks him down at the Hyatt Regency, where Stevenson says with admiration, "You're a regular Sherlock Holmes."
547. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine celebrates Sherlock Holmes' birthday in its Feb. issue, with cover art by Kevin Hauff and nice poetry by Peter Lovesey.
548. Congratulations to Al Rosenblatt ("Inspector Bradstreet" in the BSI), who Who has been nominated by New York governor George Pataki to the Court of Appeals, the highest court in the state. "Rosenblatt is a longtime Sherlock Holmes buff," the Albany Times Union noted, "in fact, the fictional sleuth sometimes finds his way into Rosenblatt's decisions." And the N.Y. Law Journal reported, "We had a long talk and most of it was about Sherlock

- Holmes", Judge Rosenblatt said, noting that both he and the governor are aficionados. The state senate is likely to confirm the nomination early next year.
549. Joe Eckrich has nice news for those who have been seeking a copy of Arthur Wontner's "The Sign of Four" (1932): Vintage Entertainment offers a videocassette for $13.95 postpaid. Checks payable to (and sent to) Nothing's New, 23 Bayhill Shopping Center, San Bruno, CA 94066.
550. Steve Rotherman reports that George R. Allen died on Nov. 20. He was a fine bookseller (at William H. Allen in Philadelphia), and in 1945 was assigned to counter-intelligence with the 101st Airborne and was among the first of the Allied troops to enter Berchtesgaden, where in Adolph Hitler's private film library he found a copy of "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1937); he wrote about this to Christopher Morley in 1947, and Edgar W. Smith published the report in The Baker Street Journal in Apr. 1948.
551. Maurice Tanner (180 Whitehorse Road, West Croydon, Surrey CD0 2LA, England) offers a pair of cacheted covers cancelled on Oct. 31 with a "Hound of the Baskervilles" pictorial postmark, one honoring the 1939 film (£13.99 to the U.K., £14.99 elsewhere), and the other the 1959 film (£11.99/£12.99); credit-card orders welcome (L0.30 surcharge) or you can pay in sterling. You can also send him $1.00 for an illustrated flier.
552. Dec 98 #4: Laurie R. King will tour to promote her new (non-Mary Russell) book A DARKER PLACE in February, for those who would like to meet her and get books signed, and perhaps ask for a hint or two about the next book in the Russell series (which is O JERUSALEM, scheduled for June 1999). The dates and places are: 5: Capitola Book Cafe (Capitola, CA); 6: M Is for Mystery (San Mateo); 8: Kepler's (Palo Alto); 9: Bonanza Street Books (Walnut Creek); 10: 23rd Avenue Books (Portland, OR); 11: Park Place Books (Seattle, WA); 12: University Bookstore (Seattle); 14: The Poisoned Pen (Scottsdale, AZ); 15: Rue Morgue (Boulder, CO); 18: Mysterious Bookshop (Los Angeles, CA); 19: Small World Mystery Annex (Los Angeles); 20: Book Carnival (Los Angeles); 21: Mysterious Galaxy (San Diego); 23: Reader's Books (Sonoma).
553. The Radio Spirits set SMITHSONIAN HISTORICAL PERFORMANCES: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Nov 98 #4) is now being discounted widely: Richard Wein reports that it costs $18.88 on four audiocassettes or $29.88 on four CDs, from Collectors' Choice Music (Box 838, Itasca, IL 60143) (800-923-1122). This is the set with 12 of the John Stanley/Alfred Shirley radio programs from the 1947-48 season.
554. Richard also spotted new "Sherlock Holmes Pub" T-shirts ($14.95) and sweatshirts ($24.95) with a design from a pub in Sheffield, England, in the holiday 1998 catalog from What on Earth, 2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087 (800-945-2552).
555. Michael L. Higgs' ON THE RACK WITH CONAN DOYLE, AND OTHER JOURNEYS (Vancouver: Hansom Press, 1998; 105 pp.), is a collection of essays that have been published earlier in the newsletter of the Stormy Petrels of British Columbia, and it is a nice collection indeed; Higgs has traveled widely, and to some unusual places, and he has written about them (and about their Doylean and Sherlockian connections) with insight and enjoyment. The booklet costs $15.00 or CA$20.00 or £10.00 (postpaid) from the publisher (1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada).
556. Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481) (800-544-7297) are discounting the four mystery jigsaw puzzles in "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (the puzzle pictures help solve the crimes); $8.95 each or $29.95 for all four.
557. And there's a new (and different) Sherlockian jigsaw puzzle, reported by Richard Wein: "The Adventure of the Speckled Band" ($19.95) in a catalog from the Spilsbury Puzzle Company (Box 8922, Madison, WI 53708) (800-772-1760); 1,000 pieces, and it's item A3266-03.
558. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library will offer a discussion of "Conan Doyle Among the Spirits" at the library on the afternoon of Jan. 31: Joe Nickell (Senior Research Fellow of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal) will discuss the Spiritualism movement, and Victoria Gill (Curator of the ACD Collection) will display and describe some of the collection's material related to Conan Doyle's participation in the movement. $8.00 at the door (free to members of the Friends); rsvp to Doug Wrigglesworth at 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwrig@netrover.com>.
559. Dec 98 #5: A press release at hand from Bjarne Nielsen notes the founding of The Great Greenland Expedition Society, whose members have discovered that the island of Uffa actually is the island of M†geoen. The society (using the mothership S/S Perikles) occupied the island on July 17, and declared it free of all unions and nuclear activities, on behalf of all Sherlockians worldwide. The island is located at 55 degrees 53.46 minutes N and 11 degrees 40.15 E, not far from Nykobing Sjaelland in Denmark, and conveniently near Bjarne's home. The society's statutes state that its aim is the final charting of navigable regions in Isefjorden and Roskilde Fjord with due attention to accessibility of anchorage, and local availability of beer, pot-luck, and snooker.
560. The Oxford Popular Fiction edition of THE LOST WORLD, with an Introduction by Ian Duncan (Oct 95 #6) has been joined by an Oxford World Classics Edition (Oxford: Oxford Univ. Press, 1998; 224 pp., $8.95); the new edition is a reissue, now uniform with THE OXFORD SHERLOCK HOLMES.
561. Norman L. Rosenbaum's collection of Arthur Conan Doyle material was sold at auction at Sotheby's in London on Dec. 17, and some of the highlights (with hammer prices not including the 15% buyer's premium) were: a first edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (£11,000), a first separate American edition of THE SIGN OF THE FOUR in Collier's Once a Week Library (£8,000), an inscribed first edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (£15,000), a first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in superb condition (£5,000), the 21-page manuscript of "How the Brigadier Rode to Minsk" (£12,000), an Indian silver cornucopia given by Rudyard Kipling to Conan Doyle as a Christmas present (£10,000), a one-page letter from Conan Doyle in the early 1890s in which he wrote that Holmes' "reasonings & deductions (which are the whole point of the character) would become an intolerable bore upon the stage" (£5,000), an unpublished ink-and-wash portrait of Sherlock Holmes by Sidney Paget, signed and dated 1904 (£18,000), and 12 minutes of home movies of Sir Arthur and his family (£2,000). An inscribed copy of the first American edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET sent to auction by another owner brought £20,000.
562. Maureen O'Sullivan died on June 23. She made more than 60 films, and was best-known as Jane (with Johnny Weismuller as Tarzan) in "Tarzan, the Ape Man" (1932) and five sequels. She also played Lady Doyle in the television film "The Great Houdinis" (1976), with Peter Cushing as Conan Doyle.
563. THE HISTORY OF THE NORWEGIAN EXPLORERS, a 32-page booklet prepared by Julie McKuras and Richard J. Sveum for the society's 50th-anniversary dinner this month, is a nicely-researched review of both earlier and more recent Sherlockian events in Minnesota and Switzerland; copies are available for $7.00 postpaid from Julie McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124).
564. Reported by Jim Vogelsang: Peterson of Dublin offers pipe tobacco as well as a series of Sherlockian briar pipes; their "Sherlock Holmes" is an "old 19th century blend of orange and red smoking leaf, Brazilian and Mysore Indian tobacco" packed in a 50-gram tin with a S'ian silhouette on the label, which also carries a blunt warning that "tobacco seriously damages health" as required by an EC Council Directive (it's not just our Surgeon General who discourages smoking nowadays); about $10.00 in tobacco stores.
565. Dec 98 #6: Joe Eckrich has some really nice news for those who have long been wanting to see John Barrymore's "Sherlock Holmes" (1922): it's now available on videocassette for $19.95 (plus $4.00 shipping) from Videobrary, Inc. (5812 Wish Avenue, Encino, CA 91316) (818-881-2640) (fax 213-660-5571) <paullysy@aol.com>, and credit-card orders are welcome. The quality is quite good, the length is 103 minutes, there's new organ music, and it's grand indeed to see the Barrymore version of the Gillette play, with a cast that includes Hedda Hopper and William H. Powell. This is the print that

- was restored in 1970 (with help from the film's director Albert Parker) from separate and out-of-sequence scenes discovered at George Eastman House in Rochester, and while it isn't complete it still offers a fine look at what people saw when they went to the movies all those years ago.
566. John Hall's SIDELIGHTS ON HOLMES (Ashcroft: Calabash Press, 1998; 190 pp.) explores each of the Canonical stories, offering commentary and questions (and plausible answers for many of those questions); it's a fine example of the enjoyment to be found in considering the contradictions and confusions and nooks and crannies of the Canon. $21.00/CA$39.00/£13.50 plus shipping ($3.75 to U.S. or CA$5.30 to Canada or $7.05/$4.15 air/surface elsewhere) (credit-card orders welcome) from the Calabash Press, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>.
567. Calabash also has published THE SCROLL OF THE DEAD, by David Stuart Davies (1998; 147 pp.); the pastiche is a nicely-plotted mystery that has Holmes and Watson involved in pursuing and thwarting a villain who hopes to find the secret of immortality. $30.00 or CA$40.00 or £19.00 (cloth); $19.50 or CA$23.50 or £12.50 (paper); plus shipping as above.
568. Dick Wright spotted Matthew Stevenson's article on "Russian Rublette" in The American Spectator (Dec. 1998), about current economics in Russia, and about the proliferation of small regional banks. "I have visited many of these new banks," he writes, "including one in Ufa, nears the Urals, with potatoes for sale in its lobby." No mention of any nearby island, alas.
569. Bill Thornton reports that Rockport Shoes offer a Baskerville collection of men's casual shoes, with styles that include Watson and Moriarty; Rockport shoes are available in a mail-order catalog from Marks Athletic (4028 S.W. 57th Avenue, Miami, FL 33155) (800-666-6222).
570. Keith E. Webb's SHERLOCK HOLMES IN JAPAN (Apr 98 #6) now is available in an expanded 97-page edition; Keith has lived in Japan since 1991 and does well with explanations (in English) of the Sherlockian references in the Canon, and of the history of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians in Japan. The cost is $10.00 postpaid, and you can send checks or currency to Keith at 15104 SE 22nd Street, Bellevue, WA 98007.
571. As subscribers in the United States likely are aware, our domestic postage rates are going to increase in January, and so will the subscription rate for this newsletter, to $9.10 a year; postage rates to other countries are unchanged for the moment, but will be increased later in 1999.

Jan 99 #1:

- The birthday festivities in New York suffered only a brief blizzard on Friday afternoon, and almost everyone traveling that day got to evening events almost on time. The weather was much nicer on Thursday both for the Christopher Morley Walk and for the BSI's Distinguished Speaker Lecture, which featured Owen Dudley Edwards, who both entertained and enlightened a large audience at the Williams Club with his talk on "Dr. Watson: Portrait of a Genius".
  - And (for those up early enough on Friday) the first event was nationwide: Edward Lear reports that during the "Today" show on NBC-TV, Matt Lauer and Al Roker were outside with the audience, and Roker said that they wanted to announce a birthday of someone who was 145 years old today. With that they panned to Lauer, who was wearing a deerstalker and said it was the birthday of Sherlock Holmes. Lauer then had the camera turn to a man in the crowd who also was wearing a deerstalker (David R. McCallister, of The Pleasant Places of Florida, Wanda and Jeffery Dow note).
  - The Hotel Algonquin provided a fine meal for the Mrs. Hudson Breakfast on Friday morning, and the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant was as always a splendid event, with the Friends of Bogie's (aka Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague Joffe, and Paul Singleton) presenting a tour of "Sister Wendy's World of Sherlock". And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop was a nice opportunity for collectors to browse and buy.
  - The Baker Street Irregulars assembled at the Union League Club, which is a new venue, and a fine one indeed (and not just because it's closer to midtown), and joined Otto Penzler in his toast to Deborah Fusco as *the* Woman during the pre-dinner cocktail party (Debbie went on to dine at the Algonquin with many of the other ladies who have received that honor).
  - The evening's entertainment featured the usual traditions, and presentations that included a report by George Fletcher and Jon Lellenberg on the venues of past annual dinners, an explanation by John Linsenmeyer of why Charles Augustus Milverton should be Canonized, a frantic debate on the best and worst stories in the Canon (frantic because each side had to be both pro and con), and a tribute by Dan Posnansky to the late James Keddie (pšre and fils, as they chose to be known in Boston and in the BSI).
  - And there was enthusiastic applause for New York governor George Pataki, who had appointed Al Rosenblatt to the Court of Appeals, and on Jan. 5 had presided over Al's swearing-in ceremony, and was the first state governor to attend a BSI annual dinner (mention was made of the fact that New York governor Franklin Delano Roosevelt had been a Sherlockian and had gone on to serve as president of the United States, but the governor did not seize the opportunity to announce his future plans).
  - Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") awarded this year's Birthday Honours of Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Marilyn MacGregor ("V.V. 341"), Paul Jeffers ("Wilson Hargreave"), Bill Dorn ("The Newgate Calendar"), June Kinnee ("Miss Hatty Doran"), and Les Klinger ("The Abbey Grange").
8. Jan 99 #2: The Baskerville Bash also took place on Friday evening, again at La Belle Epoque and with a capacity crowd, and with entertainment by The Grimpen Mire Choir and the Sherlettes, Will Walsh explaining his Seventeen-Step Program for Recovering Sherlockians (you start by admitting that Sherlock Holmes is fictional), Elliott Black performing his mystifying mentalism act ("The Sherlock Holmes of Thought"), and presentations by Rosemary Michaud and Brad Keefavuer.
- On Saturday morning the dealers' room (at the Algonquin) was as always full of dealers and a wide variety of Sherlockiana to delight eager browsers and collectors. And the Saturday-afternoon cocktail party at the National Arts Club featured Jay and Trish Pearlman's spectacular miniature recreation of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street, displayed for the first time for a Sherlockian audience.
  - Al Rosenblatt waxed poetic in his traditional report on the previous evening's events, and Mike Whelan announced that Jon Lellenberg was the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to last year's Baker Street Journal (the BSI's Christmas Annual history of the 1940 BSI annual dinner). And Beverly Wolov read her poem honoring *the* woman, commissioned as a new tradition at the previous evening's dinner at the Algonquin for *the* woman.
  - The Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from June Kinnee's energetic marketing of raffle tickets for an attractive portrait-in-oils of Sherlock Holmes that was painted by Franklin Moody in 1979 and kindly donated to the raffle by Ken Lanza and Altamont's Agents, and from the generosity of bidders in the auction, which included treasures such a sheet of the Sherlock Holmes stamps and the set of first day covers issued by Nicaragua in 1973, donated from Ted Schulz's collection by Vinnie Brosnan.
  - The festivities continued into the evening, but on a more informal basis, with The Canonical Capricorns celebrating Sherlock Holmes and others born under that sign, and with some going off to theaters or getting into other mischief. And for the hardy souls who stayed on, or perhaps up, until Sunday noon, the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes had arranged a Sherlockian brunch at the Landmark Tavern.

13. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than fit into print here, it is quite likely that there will be much longer reports in the March issue of The Baker Street Journal (quarterly, $21.00 a year, and the address is Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331). The BSI's Christmas Annual for 1998 still is available ($6.00 postpaid, from the same address); "Entertainment and Fantasy" is the title that Jon Lellenberg chose, and it is apt indeed for his appreciative and amusing look at what the Irregulars were up to way back when.
14. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities, and contributions of interesting and unique items for the raffle and the auction are always welcome. If you have something you would like to donate to this worthy cause, you are cordially invited to write to Michael F. Whelan, Box 2189, Easton, MD 21601.

15. Jan 99 #3: "What is your favorite occupation?" "Being an entertainer." "When and where were you happiest?" "Right now!" "What is your greatest regret?" "I could have been a contender." "What do you most value in your friends?" "Love." "Who is your favorite hero of fiction?" "Sherlock Holmes." Those were some of the questions and answers in Tony Bennett's "Proust Questionnaire" in Vanity Fair (Dec. 1998).
16. "His broad black hat, his baggy trousers, his white tie, his sympathetic smile, and general look of peering and benevolent curiosity were such as Mr. John Hare alone could have equalled," Watson reported (in "A Scandal in Bohemia"). And this year the postal service celebrates the Year of the Hare.
17. This year may be the year of "The Lost World" on television: "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" premiered on The Movie Network in Canada on Jan. 4 (the 93-minute television film was produced in Canada and is only, loosely based on Conan Doyle's book, set in Mongolia in 1934, directed by Bob Keen, and starring Patrick Bergin as Challenger); a different two-hour film has been completed by the Telescene Film Group (produced by John Landis and directed by Richard Franklin, it is targeted for the Action Adventure Network, with plans for a spin-off series of twenty one-hour shows); and there was a report last year suggesting that the BBC is considering a production starring Brian Blessed as Challenger.
18. The John Landis television film stars Peter McCauley as Challenger; he has been an actor at least since 1979, and had a supporting role in the television mini-series "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" (1987) that starred Michael Caine as Capt. Nemo, and the film was made in Australia and will be seen on DirecTV (that's a direct broadcast satellite service with 4.6 million subscribers); the film debuts on Feb. 1 and will be available through Mar. 10, and subscribers will pay $2.99 if they want to watch the film.
19. It's really difficult to make a dinosaur film now, since Steven Spielberg has set a standard difficult to match; the Canadian film doesn't begin to do justice to Conan Doyle's story, and the actors aren't up to what story there is, and the dinosaurs aren't much better than the actors. The real problem, perhaps, is that producers don't understand, and thus ignore, the humor in Conan Doyle's tale.
20. It was in 1979 that Sherlock Holmes went on display at the National Museum of Air and Space at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, and I'm glad to report that he's still there, in the exhibit on "Exploring the Planets" on the second floor of the museum, with Sidney Paget artwork and an appropriate quote from the Canon.
21. An interesting book for those who collect foreign-language Sherlockiana: MY DEAR WATSON, by Margaret Park Bridges; it won the second prize in Suntory's mystery-fiction competition in 1992 and it was translated into Japanese and published by Bungei Shunju, and as far as I know it is the only Sherlockian novel to have been written in English, and published in Japanese but not in English. Masamichi Higurashi reports that it's also unusual for a Sherlock Holmes pastiche to win a prize in the competition.

22. Jan 99 #4: Spotted by Jerry Margolin: A STUDY IN SCARLET (1998), a graphic novel published by Thorby Comics ($6.95); it contains reprints of "The Singular Case of the Anemic Heir!" (artwork by Anton Caravana) from The Rook (Aug. 1981) and "A Study in Scarlet" (artwork by Noly Panaligan) from The Rook (Feb. 1982 and Apr. 1982) and Eerie (Jan. 1983), with strong new cover art by Mark Evans.
23. Elic Denbo ("The Ferrers Documents") died on Mar. 9, 1998. He was an ophthalmologist, and for many years a member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches (in which he held the rank of Master Copper Beechsmith). He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1974.
24. Lois McMaster Bujold was the guest of honor at the New England Science Fiction Association's annual convention in 1996, and one of Boskone's pleasant traditions is publishing a collection of the honoree's work. DREAMWEAVER'S DILEMMA (NESFA Press, 1995; 250 pp.) still is available in the trade paperback edition ($14.00 postpaid), and it includes "The Adventure of the Lady on the Embankment" (kindly noted by Alexandra Haropulos); it's a Sherlockian pastiche, written after the author graduated from college and hitherto unpublished. The publisher's address is Box 809, Framingham, MA 01701 (and credit-card orders are welcome).
25. The Pequod's poet laureate has begun the New Year with STIX & STONES, featuring poetic tributes to Tom Stix and perhaps (the poet hedges) a revised version of his own now-out-of-date epitaph; the cost is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
26. Among my Christmas presents: THE MISSING NOSE FLUTE AND OTHER MYSTERIES OF LIFE, by Nick Bantock (San Francisco: Chronicle Books, 1991; $8.95); reproductions of 22 oversize antique postcards with bizarre captions supplied by Bantock (and one of them is Sherlockian, of course). And a canvas bookbag from Waldenbooks with the quote "It is a great thing to start life with ... really good books which are your very own," credited to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The quote is from his THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR (1907), and the three dots replace "a small number of" (one can of course understand why Waldenbooks thought it best to leave that out).
27. Susan Conant's THE BAKER STREET REGULARS (Feb 98 #4) is scheduled in a paperback reprint from Bantam Books in February ($5.99); amateur sleuth Holly Winter and her malamutes Rowdy and Kimi get involved with some Boston Sherlockians, an animal psychic, and a murder.
28. The latest issue of Scarlet Street offers the second part of David Stuart Davies' report on Edward R. Murrow's interview with Basil Rathbone on "Person to Person" on CBS-TV on Jan. 11, 1957, and as always coverage of other aspects of the mystery-and-horror genre. The magazine costs $35.00 a year (bimonthly); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452, And there's a web-site at <www. scarletstreet.com>.
29. Reported by Julie McKuras: Baker Street Pens ("our unique pewter pens are topped with finely crafted figurines depicting Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and Professor Moriarty"), $39.95 each in the new spring catalog from What on Earth (2451 Enterprise East Parkway, Twinsburg, OH 44087 (800-945-2552)).

30. Jan 99 #5: "Clinton Describes Terrorism Threat for 21st Century" was the headline on a story in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 22, 1999), reporting on an Oval Office interview with reporters Judith Miller and William J. Broad the day before. And it's obvious that the President knows the Canon: "he hoped a major legacy of his Presidency would be to stave off unconventional attacks. He said he would be delighted if, decades later, Americans look back on any such threat as 'the dog that didn't bark.'"
31. "I would never have overlooked such a cock pheasant as that," Holmes told Watson (in "The Three Garridebs"); our latest postcard-rate stamp shows a ring-necked pheasant (and we can use it for a while longer since that rate hasn't gone up).

32. Don Hobbs reports THE 50 GREATEST MYSTERIES OF ALL TIME, edited by Otto Penzler (Los Angeles: Dove Books, 1998; 567 pp., $25.00); the contents include "The Red-Headed League" and Vincent Starrett's "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet" (Otto says in his introduction that if it wasn't for a limit of one story per author, there would have been more Sherlock Holmes stories).
33. Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients (the Sherlockian society in Denver) offer their sales-list of society collectibles: their handbook, lapel pin, bookmarks, T-shirts, and sweatshirts. The sales list is available from Mark Langston (1143 South Monaco Parkway, Denver, CO 80224) or from Bill Dorn <holmespage@aol.com>.
34. Michael Pointer died on Dec. 26, 1998. He was one of earliest enthusiasts to investigate Sherlock Holmes on stage and screen, and contributed his expertise to the catalog of the exhibition at Abbey House during the Festival of Britain in 1951, and gladly and quickly joined The Sherlock Holmes Society of London. His fine series of articles on "Which of You Is Holmes?" in The Sherlock Holmes Journal were expanded into THE PUBLIC LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1975) and THE SHERLOCK HOLMES FILE (1976), both delightful explorations of theatrical Sherlockiana, and he went on to expand his reach in THE PICTORIAL HISTORY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1991), another excellent contribution to our literature.
35. Spotted by Jim Suszynski: THE NATURALIST'S HANDBOOK: ACTIVITIES FOR YOUNG EXPLORERS, by Lynn Kuntz (Layton: Gibbs Smith, 1996; 64 pp., $14.95, but now $4.98 on the discount tables); Sherlockian artwork by Michael Moran on the cover and inside the book.
36. "Sherlock Holmes & the League of Night" is the mystery that Holmes and Watson and participants in the next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" will attempt to solve on Mar. 12-14 in Cape May. The weekend includes a tour of the town's Victorian homes, and additional details are available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <www.capemaymac.org>.
37. David R. McCallister's "Periodic Table of the Sherlock Holmes Adventures" is an amusing, artistic, and informative approach to organizing the Canon; it's 14 x 8.5 in., printed in six colors, and it's available for $6.00 post-paid from David at 8142 Quail Hollow Boulevard, Wesley Chapel, FL 33544.

38. Jan 99 #6: One of the more interesting things about the Internet is the electronic auction ongoing at eBay <cgi.ebay.com>, where Amy Brinkley noted the recent offer of a program from the Wyndham Theatre production of "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" signed by both Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke (accompanied by a letter of provenance and a photograph of the seller with Brett and Hardwicke). And the final price was $880 (demonstrating why some collectors like to get signatures on things).
39. THE BEST AMERICAN MYSTERY STORIES 1998 (Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1998; 343 pp., $27.50) is edited by Sue Grafton and Otto Penzler and contains 20 fine stories that were first published in 1997, one of them John T. Lescroart's pastiche "The Adventure of the Giant Rat of Sumatra" (reprinted from Mary Higgins Clark Mystery Magazine).
40. The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond is displaying 50 sketches and finished drawings of horses by Sherlock Holmes' great-granduncle. "Fiery Steeds: French Romantic Studies by Carle Vernet from the Ritzenberg Collection" runs through Mar. 14, and the museum's at 2800 Grove Avenue (804-367-0844) <www.vmfa.state.va.us>.
41. Warren Randall created a new lapel pin for this year's (third annual) Baskerville Bash; it's shown here actual size, and it costs $15.00 postpaid (his address is 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).
42. Charles Prepolec has reported that K. C. Brown's two-act play "Sherlock's Veiled Secret" (1994) is being performed at the Pleiades Theatre in Calgary through Feb. 14; Sherlock Holmes comes out of retirement to solve a blackmail case. Box 2100, Station M #73, Calgary, AB T2P 2M5, Canada (403-221-3708).
43. And a few commercials: the revised 15-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, *The* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.20 postpaid. The 79-page list of 751 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for the 433 active societies, costs $4.20 postpaid. A run of address labels for 362 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.40 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.
44. For the electronically enabled, the 15-page list of Irregulars and others is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" web site at <members.home.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>. Also available free on the Web are Linda Anderson's digital photographs of various and sundry celebrants at the birthday festivities, at <www.geocities.com/~sherlockian/scion/bsi/hounds99.html>.

45. Feb 99 #1: Further to the report (Jan 99 #3) on the latest version of "The Lost World" starring Peter McCauley as Challenger: after the broadcast on DirecTV from Feb. 1 to Mar. 10, the two-hour film will air on TNT cable on Apr. 11. The spin-off one-hour series (same actors) is in production, and will start on DirecTV in July, and will be available for syndication this fall.
46. Spotted by Jim Suszynski: A TREASURY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Dove Audio): "The Six Napoleons" and "The Crooked Man" read by Ben Kingsley on a single "select sound buys" cassette ($1.98); this was part of a four-cassette set that was first issued in 1988. Dove's toll-free number is 800-328-3683.
47. TALES CALCULATED TO DRIVE YOU MAD is a new series, reprinting the earlier issues of Mad; Jack Kerr spotted #6 (spring 1999) with full-color reprints of original issues #16-18, including the classic "Shermlock Shomes in The Hound of the Basketballs" from the Oct. 1954 issue and a Sherlockian panel in "Julius Caesar!" from the Nov. 1954 issue; $3.99.
48. Robert W. Hahn ("Colonel Ross") died on Feb. 4. He was a credit manager by profession, and a Sherlockian both by vocation and avocation: he lectured at conferences and taught courses in Sherlock Holmes, and he was a sparking plug in the S'ian world in Chicago (where he served nine terms as Sir Hugo in Hugo's Companions and founded their running of The Silver Blaze), continuing his S'ian activities after he retired to Sheboygan, Wis., proudly playing the butler in the local community players' adaptation of William Gillette's play in 1987. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1963, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1981.
49. Reported by Christopher Roden: MYSTERY & SUSPENSE WRITERS, edited by Robin Winks (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1998; 1,296 pages, $225.00); two volumes of essays on past and present writers, including a 30-page essay on Arthur Conan Doyle by Owen Dudley Edwards.
50. Barnes & Noble continues to reprint older books under its own imprint: Gaston Leroux's THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA, with reprints of two articles about the Phantom's Sherlockian connections (David Rush's "Holmes and the Opera Ghost" and Barbara Goldfield's "Sherlock Holmes Meets the Living Corpse"), first published in 1988 (now $5.98); and Terry Jones' LADY COTTINGTON'S PRESSED FAIRY BOOK, with artwork by Brian Freud (these fairies definitely are not those photographed at Cottingley in 1917, but the book is delightfully macabre), first published in 1997 (now $12.95).
51. Sorry about that: the correct URL for Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" website (Jan 99 #6), where the 15-page list of Irregulars and others, and the lists of the Sherlockian societies, can be viewed by the electronically-enabled is <members.home.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>.
52. Reported by Jon Lellenberg: MEMBRANES: METAPHORS OF INVASION IN NINETEENTHCENTURY LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND POLITICS (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins Univ. Press, 1999; 248 pp., $49.00); Otis "examines how the image of the biological cell became one of the reigning metaphors of the nineteenth century," and there's a chapter on "Arthur Conan Doyle: An Imperial Immune System".

53. Feb 99 #2: Huntz Hall died on Jan. 30. He made his Broadway debut at the age of three months, worked in vaudeville and radio serials in his boyhood, and went to Hollywood at the age of 16 to be one of the Dead End Kids, and then one of the Bowery Boys. He can be seen with deerstalker and calabash playing Sach Jones in "Hard Boiled Mahoney" (1947), "Private Eyes" (1953), and the last film in the series, "In the Money" (1958). Turner Classic Movies has announced that it will salute Hall by broadcasting 48 Bowery Boys films beginning in June.
54. The Playmates 9-inch "Star Trek" collector-series figure of Data in Sherlockian costume (Mar 98 #3) is now scheduled for release in June, exclusively in Target stores, likely priced at $17.99.
55. The list of Sherlockian pastiches mentioned in novels written by non-Sherlockian authors is short indeed, but you can add John Sandford's THE NIGHT CREW (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1997) (Berkeley, 1998). Andrew Blau spotted the mention: "Later that night, with Glass asleep in his bed, Creek sat in his cluttered living room reading SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON. He turned the last page, sighed, put the book down and his feet up."
56. Reported by Don Pollock: DETECTION AND ITS DESIGNS: NARRATIVE AND POWER IN 19TH CENTURY DETECTIVE FICTION, by Peter Thoms (Athens: Ohio Univ. Press, 1998; 160 pp., $32.95); the author uses Conan Doyle as one of several early detective-fiction authors, and devotes a chapter to "The Hound of the Baskervilles".
57. Reported by George Schenk: THE MODERN SHERLOCK HOLMES: AN INTRODUCTION TO FORENSIC SCIENCE TODAY (London: Broadside Books, 1991), by Judy Williams; with Sherlockian artwork on the cover, and a Canonical quote and a Paget illustration with each chapter, the book is based on a BBC World Service radio series that brought up to date "the meticulous detection methods set down by Sherlock Holmes 100 years ago" (now discounted to $5.98 at Barnes & Noble).
58. The Dec. issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has excellent articles about David L. Hammer and James Montgomery, and other news of what's going on at the Library. You can join the mailing list by writing to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
59. Plan well ahead: the Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium II will be held in St. Pete Beach on June 9-11, 2000. If you would like to be on the mailing list, write to Carl L. Heifetz (3693 Siena Lane, Palm Harbor, FL 34685) <microdoc@gte.net>.
60. William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" was first performed in 1899, and The Blustering Gales from the South-West will hold a conference on Mar. 27 at the Los Angeles Science Fantasy Society Clubhouse in North Hollywood to honor the centenary. The day-long event will include guest speakers, two meals, and a performance of the play; additional information is available from Paula Salo (4421 Pacific Coast Highway, Torrance, CA 90505) and at the society's web-site at <home.earthlink.net/~denmartin/hammer/bgsw.html>.
61. Feb 99 #3: Caliber Comics has begun a new series called SHERLOCK HOLMES READER. The contents of the first issue ($3.95) include the first installment of "The Loch Ness Horror" (with story by Martin Powell and artwork by Seppo Makinen), and reprints of "A Case of Identity" and Barrie's "The Adventure of the Two Collaborators"; Caliber's at 225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170 (888-222-6643) <www.calibercomics.com>.
62. Laurie R. King's THE MOOR (Jan 98 #6) is now in paperback (New York: Bantam Book, 1999; 369 pp., $5.99); it's the fourth novel about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes, and Laurie has done a fine job with the time and place and characters, as well as with the mystery.
63. Herman Herst, Jr. ("Colonel Emsworth, V.C.") died on Jan. 31. He began his as a stamp dealer in the 1930s and became the philatelic world's best-known dealers and collectors. Pat (he was born on St. Patrick's Day) was a fine writer and a delightful story-teller; his philatelic pastiche "Dirty Pool" was published in the Baker Street Journal in June 1966, and he received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1968. He also found interesting philatelic connections for Arthur Conan Doyle, whose uncle Richard designed the first commercial Christmas greeting in 1840 (a caricature of the prepaid Mulready envelope), and whose father Charles was an artist for the Illustrated London Times at the trial of Madeleine Smith in Edinburgh in 1857 (a smudged postmark helped win a verdict of "not proven").
64. John Chaffin reports that "Another Evening with Sherlock Holmes" will open at Chaffin's Barn Dinner Theatre on Aug. 31 and run through Oct. 23 (with dramatizations of "The Red-Headed League", "A Scandal in Bohemia", and "The Dancing Men"); 8204 Highway 100, Nashville, TN 37221) (615-646-9977) (800-282-2276) <www.dinnertheatre.com>.
65. "Our noisy friend upon the sofa has assured me that it is from Franz Joseph's special cellar at the Schoenbrunn Palace," Sherlock Holmes said (in "His Last Bow"). Ben Wood spotted a new set of United Nations stamps honoring the Schonbrunn Palace and Gardens; the Palace was added to the UNESCO World Heritage list in 1996. The palace and gardens are open to the public, but the tour may not include the special cellar.
66. Many hotel chains have magazines now, just like the airlines (although they probably aren't called in-bed magazines). Connie Steffan reports that the contents of the Dec. 1998 issue of Navigator (Holiday Inn Express) included Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Tale of the Gloria Scott".
67. Francine Kitts reports that the Morgan Library (at 29 East 36th Street in New York) has an exhibit of "Detectives, Private Eyes, and Spies" through May 5; it includes a first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and at least one other Sherlockian book (with an accompanying mention of the Baker Street Irregulars in Christopher Morley's essay "On Belonging to Clubs"), and treasures such as the manuscript of Wilkie Collins' THE MOONSTONE. A "Murder at the Morgan" film series accompanying the exhibit includes "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) at 3:00 pm on Mar. 21.

68. Feb 99 #4: John Addison died on Dec. 7, 1998. He began writing music for theater and film in the 1950s, scoring more than 70 films, and he won an Oscar for "Tom Jones" (1963) and an Emmy for the theme music for the "Murder, She Wrote" television series. His other credits included the "detective" theme music for Douglas Wilmer's "The Speckled Band" on BBC television (1964) and the score for "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976).
69. Noted by Jim Suszynski: HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY, MISS HILDY!, by Lois Grambling, illustrated by Bridget Starr Taylor (New York: Random House, 1998; 32 pp., $3.99); a Step into Reading book for grades 1-3, with Miss Hildy as a senior-citizen detective in Sherlockian costume.
70. Reported: Larry Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ICE PALACE MURDERS (the second of his novel-length pastiches), read by Simon Prebble on an abridged four-audiocassette set from Penguin Audio ($24.95).
71. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist at 7:00 pm on Apr. 14 at Mi Tierra in San Antonio. If you'd like to join us for the festivities, please contact Ben Fairbank (Box 15075, San Antonio, TX 78212) (210-733-8738) <baf@texas.net> or me (addresses at the end of the newsletter).
72. The Sons of the Copper Beeches celebrated their 50th anniversary last fall, and published a 24-page collection of essays, poetry, artwork, and history in honor of the event. Copies are available for $8.00 postpaid from Scott P. Bond (519 East Allens Lane, Philadelphia, PA 19119. And the Sons' lapel pin (shown here actual size), which was designed by Scott and (of course) is decorated with a colorful copper beech tree, costs $12.00 postpaid and also is available from Scott (to whom checks should be made payable as well as sent).

73. Tyrol International (Box 909, Cleveland, GA 30528) (800-241-5404) offers a miniature (5.5 in. high) Sherlock Holmes nutcracker hand-crafted in Canada by Norbert Zuber from a design by Bernd Nagy (item 78229) ($45.00) [it will make a nice pair with the similar full-size Steinbach nutcracker that was offered more than 20 years ago].
74. 221B: EN STUDIE I BAKER STREET, by Morgan Malm, offers a careful survey of Baker Street and the many suggested locations for 221B; the 36-page monograph (in Swedish) is available for $9.00 (in currency only, please) from Ystads Antikvariat, Box 165, 271 23 Ystad, Sweden.
75. Ystads also offers KRONDIAMANTEN, ELLER EN KVÄLL MED SHERLOCK HOLMES; this is Conan Doyle's play "The Crown Diamond" (translated into Swedish by Ted Bergman) and with a foreword by Mattias Bostrom (also in Swedish) discussing a production of the play in Malmo in 1994, and with photographs from the show. 28 pp., same price (or $16.00 for the two pamphlets).
76. The exhibition of "Jellies: Phantoms of the Deep" at the National Aquarium in Baltimore in 1997-98 (Apr 87 #6) can be seen at the Tennessee Aquarium in Chattanooga (423-265-0695) (800-262-0695) through the end of 1999, Jack Kerr notes, and it's a fine (and safe) opportunity to see a lion's mane.
77. Feb 99 #5: Noted by Matt Demakos: VISITORS FROM OZ: THE WILD ADVENTURES OF DOROTHY, THE SCARECROW, AND THE TIN WOODMAN, by Martin Gardner (New York: St. Martin's Press, 208 pp., $22.95); the intrepid trio travel to an alternate-universe Wonderland, where they are assisted by Sheerluck Brown (a large brown private-detective bear wearing a deerstalker), and to New York, where they appear on The Oprah Winfrey Show.
78. Ezra A. Wolff ("Sir James Damery") died on Feb. 2. He was a surgeon, and was guided into the Sherlockian world by his brother Julian Wolff, and in 1969 Ezra began his delightful tradition of reporting in rhyme at the Saturday cocktail party on events at the annual dinner the night before. He read the last of his poems in 1988, noting that "It's nineteen years since I, a beginner, Came to my first BSI Dinner." Ezra received his Investiture in 1972, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1987, and the Irregulars still honor the tradition he started, thanks to Al Rosenblatt's judicial poetics.
79. The Northern Musgraves offer a metal bookmark that shows Sherlock Holmes as drawn by Peter Cushing (it's the society's logo); the postpaid cost is £2.00 (Britain) or £3.00 (Europe) or $10.00 (elsewhere). Checks should be payable to The Northern Musgraves, and sent to Anne Jordan (Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. BD16 3DN, England).
80. Gary L. Heiselberg's PERSONAE DRAMATIS IN LUDIS SHERLOCIENSIBUS follows the trail blazed by Edgar W. Smith in his APPOINTMENT IN BAKER STREET, but Gary has cast his net more widely in offering capsule commentaries on the characters and animals named in the Canon. 183 pp., $28.00 postpaid (cloth) or $19.00 (paper) from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada (or you can special-order at Borders bookstores).
81. David McCallister spotted the "leather book collection" in the current catalog from the Home Decorators Collection (8920 Pershall Road, Hazelwood, MO 63042) (800-245-2217): furniture featuring multi-colored book facades that include fake "Sherlock Holmes" volumes. A coffee table with two accent tables costs $199.00, and a four-panel screen costs $299.00.
82. Reported: a new Dover Thrift Series edition of A. A. Milne's THE RED HOUSE MYSTERY, with an introduction by Douglas G. Greene (Mineola: Dover, 1998; 156 pp., $2.00); two of the characters assume the roles of Holmes and Watson to solve the mystery.
83. The 18th annual Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium will be held on Mar. 12-14 at the Holiday Inn Conference Center in Fairborn, Ohio, with speakers and theatrics and other fun and games. Additional information is available from Greg Sullivan, 39 Sherwood Avenue, Danvers, MA 01923 <greg.sullivan@ae.ge.com>.
84. A new catalog from femmes fatales offers some intriguing new Sherlockiana, including deerstalker wine stopper, napkin rings, swizzle sticks, and place cards, and Sherlockian bottle openers and corkscrews, and older items, and some interesting non-Sherlockian material. Box 4457, Lakewood, CA 90712 (800-596-3323) <byteocrime@aol.com> <www.femfatales.com>. Readers of this newsletter qualify for a 10% discount (the magic word is "Scuttlebutt").
85. Feb 99 #6: Tangled Web #7 is a 28-page magazine with an article about the Cottingley fairies by Chris Willis, reviews of British mysteries, and a nice tribute to A. E. W. Mason by Philip L. Scowcroft; available from Andrew Osmond (69 Holm Oak Park, Watford, Herts. WD1 8TH, England) for £2.95 (U.K.) or $6.00 (elsewhere: currency only, please).
86. The Pequot Press' second book of the year is BAKER STREET BAZAAR, with more Sherlockian poetry; the cost is $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
87. Sorry about that: the correct title of the new paperback edition of Susan Conant's mystery novel about amateur sleuth Holly Winter and her malamutes Rowdy and Kimi (Jan 99 #4) is THE BARKER STREET REGULARS (New York: Bantam Books, 1999; 272 pp., $5.99).
88. "The Sign of Four" (directed and adapted by Bart Lovins) will be performed by Expanded Arts from May 16 to June 1; the theater is at 85 Ludlow Street, New York, NY 10002 (between Broome and Delancey) and the box-office phone number is (212-253-1813). The company's production of "A Study in Scarlet" last year won praise in a review in The Three Garridebs' newsletter.
89. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets have reached the 1940s, and the new sheet includes a stamp honoring the film "Citizen Kane" and Orson Welles, one of the few actors who have played both Sherlock Holmes and Prof. Moriarty. Other stamps show Harry S. Truman (who was a member of the Baker Street Irregulars), and a World War II poster drawn by N. C. Wyeth, who also illustrated some of Conan Doyle's stories.
90. The Sherlock Holmes Society of Australia's lapel pin, first sold more than ten years ago (Apr 88 #6), shows a silhouette of Holmes superimposed on an outline map of Australia, and is available again from Alan C. Olding, P.O. Box 13, Stirling, S.A. 5152, Australia; $15.00 postpaid (personal checks are welcome).
91. "My wife and the other furniture will arrive shortly," Dr. Watson said, in "The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes" (1935). An addition to the list of memorable lines from Sherlockian movies, spotted by Jane Langston of The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa.
92. Planning for the unveiling of the statue of Sherlock Holmes in Baker Street this fall continues, with an informal schedule that starts with a tour of Tower Bridge on Sept. 21 and ends with a visit to sculptor John Doubleday's studio in Essex on Sept. 26. And Barbara Herbert has begun work on a package (plane and hotel) for Americans who might participate; you can write or call her at Wayfarer Travel Service (7140 Miami Avenue #100, Cincinnati, OH 45243) (513-271-4637) (800-638-5351) <sherlock@wayfarertravel.com>. The electronically-enabled can find a few more details about the festivities at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>, which is the web-site of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and I hope to have more information here next month.

93. Mar 99 #1: "Pinkerton Inc., the legendary American detective agency that guarded Abraham Lincoln, chased Jesse James, and gave rise to the term 'private eye', is being bought by a Swedish security company," according to a story in the Boston Globe (Feb. 23), spotted by Scott Monty. Securitas AB has agreed to pay $384 million for Pinkerton, which will keep its name, management, and worldwide staff. "We're not losing an icon," Pinkerton's president said. "Pinkerton will remain Pinkerton. We're just trading shareholders."

94. And it's a nice coincidence, of course, that Ettie Shafter was Swedish, at least in The Strand Magazine and in the first British edition of THE VALLEY OF FEAR. In the first American edition, and in the manuscript, Ettie was German; it is likely that the change from German to Swedish was an editorial decision: Conan Doyle's prophetic story "Danger!" (about Britain's weakness if an enemy were to impose a submarine blockade) appeared in the July 1914 issue of the Strand, two months before "The Valley of Fear" began in the magazine.
95. Plan ahead: the third annual Sherlock Holmes Festival on Nov. 5-6 in Tryon, N.C. will again pay tribute to William Gillette; the events will include a performance of his play "Sherlock Holmes", and additional information will be available from the Polk County Travel & Tourism Council, 401 North Trade Street, Tryon, NC 28782 (800-440-7848).
96. Laurie R. King's won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for her first novel, A GRAVE TALENT, and of course copies of the first printing are serious collectibles now, and even more collectible if they're signed. So it was a surprise to Laurie when at a recent book-signing, she was asked to sign a faked copy of the first printing. The faker had photocopied both sides of a proper title page, removed the title page from a later printing, and carefully glued in the photocopy; Laurie might not have detected the forgery, except that the original paper was of better quality than the photocopy paper. And the dedication page (where she was about to sign), has a line of Hebrew, which in the first printing is upside down.
97. Edward Rote and Karen Page offer a wristwatch with a Sherlockian silhouette on the face; $75.00. You can request an illustrated flier from A Sherlock Holmes Occasion, Box 1079, Agoura Hills, CA 91376), or visit their web-site at <www.asherlockholmes.com>.
98. Lenny Gray spotted a new comic-book mini-series THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN from America's Best Comics, with story by Alan Moore and striking artwork by Kevin O'Neill. The first issue is dated March ($2.95) and gathers Allan Quatermain, Captain Nemo, and C. Auguste Dupin into a league that has been organized by an off-stage Mycroft Holmes.
99. THE WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Martin Fido (London: Carlton Books, 1998; 144 pp., £14.99), is subtitled "the facts and fiction behind the world's greatest detective," and it's a handsome book indeed, packed with colorful illustrations and offering interesting two-page summaries of the stories, aspects of their author's life, and the world of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians. The book is discounted here at $20.00 by the Adams Media Corp.
100. Mar 99 #2: Michael Avallone died on Feb. 26. He wrote more than 200 books (about half of them using pseudonyms), and was best-known for his "Ed Noon" series. He liked being known as "the fastest typewriter in the east," and once suggested that "a professional writer should be able to write anything from a garden seed catalogue to the Bible." In 1973 he told a reporter for the Daily Express that "I've been writing ever since I discovered pencils," and that he was considering writing a thriller that would identify Jack the Ripper as Arthur Conan Doyle.
101. Pam Verrey spotted the "Children of the World" shirts and jackets and tops and totes and mini paks in a catalog from S.C.R.U.B.S. (8555 Argent Street, Santee, CA 90271) (800-231-5965); $23.00 to $44.00, and one of the children is in Sherlockian costume.
102. Moshe Nalick notes that Ohr Somayach, a Jerusalem-based yeshiva, publishes a weekly newsletter on the Internet, in which Sherlock Holmes and Watson solve problems in commentary on the Torah. The URL is <ohr.org.il>.
103. Sorry about that: the correct Caliber Comics toll-free number is 888-222-6642. They have launched the series SHERLOCK HOLMES READER (Feb 99 #3), and have back issues of other Sherlockian comics, and there's a web-site at <www.calibercomics.com>.
104. Dr. Watson was "deep in one of Clark Russell's fine sea-stories" (in "The Five Orange Pips"), and David Pearson notes that one of the stories is in print as a paperback: THE WRECK OF THE GROSVENOR, by William Clark Russell (McBooks Press, 1998, 320 pp.); $11.16 from Barnes & Noble (One Pond Road, Rockleigh, NJ 07647) (800-843-2665) and presumably elsewhere.
105. The English Channel offers Sherlockian chess sets ($897.00), bottlestoppers ($17.00), and matchbox covers ($16.00 or $19.00); and you can write for an illustrated sales list (Vine House, 16 New Street, Ledbury, Herefordshire, HR8 2DX, England) or visit their web-site <www.english-channel.com>.
106. Bob Burr reports that in THE FLINTSTONES AND THE JETSONS (from DC Comics, Apr. 1999), Fred Flintstone reads so many Sherlock Holmes books that he becomes the character himself.
107. Lynn Willis died on Mar. 7. She was an early member of The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes (as "Laura Lyons"), and an enthusiastic participant in Sherlockian affairs in the New York, including planning for the Baskerville Bashes.
108. "Hot on the Trail of Sherlock Holmes" is the title of David Goodman's article in Ski Magazine (Mar.-Apr. 1999), but it was Arthur Conan Doyle who did the skiing, in 1894, crossing the Maiefelder Furka from Davos to Arosa, as did Goodman almost exactly 104 years later. The magazine's address is Box 55533, Boulder, CO 80322 (800-678-0817) <www.skinet.com>; $3.99.
109. Mar 99 #3: MEMBRANES: METAPHORS OF INVASION IN NINETEENTH-CENTURY LITERATURE, SCIENCE, AND POLITICS, by Laura Otis (Baltimore: Johns Hopkins Univ. Press, 1999; 210 pp., $49.00), uses the century's attitudes toward the spread and prevention of disease as an analogy for colonial politics, with a chapter on "Arthur Conan Doyle: An Imperial Immune System".
110. Dennis France is trying to assemble an archive of all 56 of the stories as broadcast by Carlton Hobbs and Norman Shelley, and lacks only four ("A Case of Identity", "The Cardboard Box", "The Illustrious Client", and "The Three Students"); anyone who has any or all of the missing four is invited to get in touch with Dennis (8546 North Kedvale Avenue, Skokie, IL 60076).
111. John L. Goldwater died on Feb. 26. He is survived by Archie, Jughead, Betty, and Veronica, in Riverdale, the N.Y. Times noted in its obituary. Goldman and artist Bob Montana created Archie in 1941, and the strip once ran in 750 newspapers. Archie Andrews and his friends are still in their teens, although now exchanging e-mail, and Archie Comics publishes more than 30 comic books. This panel is from a strip that ran on June 13, 1965, with Jughead and Archie rehearsing for a "Sheerluck Homes" play at their school.
112. William F. B. Vodrey has written an interesting one-act radio play about "The Adventure of the Grice Patersons" (it will take 35-40 minutes to perform); copies of the script (with permission for a single performance) cost $15.00 postpaid from the author (3785 Hillbrook Road, University Heights, OH 44118).
113. Alvin E. Rodin ("Palmer") died on Mar. 18. He was for many years a professor in the departments of pathology and postgraduate medicine and continuing education at Wright State University's School of Medicine, and combined vocation and avocation in careful research and excellent writing about Arthur Conan Doyle's life and career, published in The Baker Street Journal, Baker Street Miscellanea, and other journals. With Jack D. Key he wrote MEDICAL CASEBOOK OF DOCTOR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: FROM PRACTITIONER TO SHERLOCK HOLMES AND BEYOND (1984), offering a fascinating assessment of Sir Arthur's career and the medical aspects of all of his writings, and Al's interest in Conan Doyle continued through many other books, culminating in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD (1996), which he wrote with Roy E. Pilot. Al received his membership in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1989.

114. The next Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium (Mar. 10-12, 2000 in Fairborn, Ohio), will have tributes to AI, who founded the symposium many years ago; if you have thoughts or reminiscences for publication in a booklet that will honor AI, please send them to Greg Sullivan (39 Sherwood Avenue, Danvers, MA 01923) <greg.sullivan@ae.ge.com>.
115. Reported: DINOSAUR SUMMER, by Greg Baer (Jun 93 #3), in a paperback reprint (Aspect, $6.99); it's delightful alternate history, about an expedition to return the survivors of America's last dinosaur circus to the Lost World, Willis O'Brien and Ray Harryhausen along for the fun and games.
116. Mar 99 #4: Les Klinger spotted reviews of two books that may be of interest: A MAN'S PLACE: MASCULINITY AND THE MIDDLE-CLASS HOME IN VICTORIAN ENGLAND, by John Tosh (New Haven: Yale Univ. Press, 1999; 288 pp, $30.00); the book considers the decline of the cult of domesticity in late-Victorian times but describes this as a "change in atmosphere" rather than a "full-blown crisis." LILLIE LANGTRY: MANNERS, MASKS AND MORALS, by Laura Beatty (London: Chatto and Windus, 1999; 288 pp., £20.00); recommended by Antonia Fraser as "irresistibly enjoyable" and revealing that Langtry was tutored in Greek and Latin by Oscar Wilde.
117. It certainly isn't the palimpsest that Holmes was studying (in "The Golden Pince-Nez"), but Mary Burke notes that you can see one at the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore in an exhibit that opens on June 20. The "Archimedes Palimpsest" is the oldest surviving manuscript of any of his mathematical works; it was written in Greek in the 10th century in Constantinople, and washed by a monk in the Holy Land in the 12th century (so that the parchment could be used for something more important), and it was bought for $2 million at an auction last year by a private buyer who has loaned it to the Walters. Both of the texts can now be seen, thanks to modern conservation methods, and the palimpsest already is on display on the World Wide Web at <www.thewalters.org/exhibitsarchwag.html>.
118. Leon Falk died on Mar. 13. Better known as Lee Falk, he created the "Mandrake the Magician" comic strip in 1934, and "The Phantom" in 1936 (this panel is from a "Phantom" strip that ran on Mar. 18, 1982).
119. My trial took only seven days, and it was quite interesting: the charges involved possession of cocaine and marijuana with intent to distribute, and possession of drug paraphernalia, and the trial was in D.C. Superior Court, and I was on the jury, for the first time ever (in the District of Columbia you are called every two or three years, and you need to spend only one day at the courthouse unless you're selected for a jury), and this was the first time I've ever gotten through the selection process (in the past I've always been unselected, for unstated reasons), and I suspect it was because they were really desperate to get a jury (the jury included two lawyers and two journalists, which is quite unusual). There were four defendants; charges against one were dismissed, and we voted not guilty on one, and couldn't get unanimous votes for guilty on the remaining two. And jury duty is an experience I recommend to everyone, if only because you get to see that real life isn't at all like television or the movies.
120. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has arrived, with interesting articles, and some truly important news: the launch of Ronald B. De Waal's THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES online at the university's web-site <www.lib.umn.edu/special/rare/ush/ush.html>. It is a work-in-progress at the moment (only the first two volumes are available now), but it's a fine taste of things to come. You can join the mailing list for the newsletter by writing to Richard J. Sveum at: 466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
121. Mar 99 #5: Ray Russell died on Mar. 15. He was a prolific horror and fantasy writer, and his novella "Sardonicus" (1960) was praised by Stephen King as "perhaps the finest example of the modern Gothic ever written." He joined Playboy magazine as an associate editor in 1954, served as executive editor from 1955 to 1960, and continued as a contributing editor into the 1970s. His satirical pastiche "The Murder of Conan Doyle" (with Foames, Squatson, and Goryarty) appeared in Playboy in Apr. 1955.
122. Roger Moore, who has portrayed Sherlock Holmes (in the 1976 television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York"), as well as Simon Templar and James Bond, is now a Commander of the British Empire, in the latest Queen's honours list.
123. Welcome news for those who have been searching for a copy of A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE, by Richard Lancelyn Green and John Michael Gibson, which was published by the Oxford University Press in 1980: Richard has been hard at work on corrections and additions for a revised edition to be published soon by Otto Penzler. There won't be room for all of the additions Richard would like to include, he reports sadly, but the bibliography was and will continue to be the very best reference volume for anyone who collects or is interested what Conan Doyle wrote.
124. The Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers will celebrate their 25th anniversary on July 24 at the Westin William Penn (where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stayed in 1923, when it wasn't part of the Westin chain), with a British high tea at noon, presentations and games, and dinner; details are available from Lynda Conway (2330 Benson Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15216) (412-563-6985) <76241.3027@compuserve.com>.
125. Bill Barnes reports that a contest among members of The Sydney Passengers to nominate actors for a new Sherlock Holmes film or television series produced 23 suggestions for the role of Holmes, including Michael Palin, John Waters, and Maggie Smith. And the society's resident artist Philip Cornell has created a group portrait of all the nominees, available for $15.00 or £10.00 or CA$23.00 postpaid from Bill (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) (currency or checks welcome).
126. The Irregular Special Railway Company offers their 1999 prospectus (available from Antony J. Richards, 170 Woodland Road, Sawston, Cambridge CB2 4DX, England), with information about the society and its activities, and their publications and guidebooks and philatelic items and other items such as souvenirs from the Venice-Simplon Orient Express.
127. Sherlock Holmes died on Mar. 19. He lived in Baltimore, according to the death notice spotted by Steve Clarkson in the Baltimore Sun. One of the nice things about the World Wide Web is access to electronic telephone directories (there are least four of them, and some may have listings that the others don't), and a quick check reveals listings for twelve people named Sherlock Holmes, in Arizona, Arkansas, Illinois, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, and Texas. Another quick check, for Garridebs, turned up only Nathan (in Missouri) and John (in New York), both of whom are Sherlockians masquerading as Garridebs. The Mormons' data base, which is the largest genealogical resource in the world, has no one named Garrideb, and the name remains a unique invention by Arthur Conan Doyle.
128. Mar 99 #6: Interesting material continues to turn up at eBay (the Internet auction site), including a complete 18-hole portable miniature golf course, used for only three years. Each of the holes features a lifesize movie characters on exterior plywood, including Humphrey Bogart, the Three Stooges, Humphrey Bogart, the Terminator, Jason, and Sherlock Holmes. It cost more than $32,000 new, and the high bid of $510 was lower (quite a bit lower, one might assume) than the reserve.
129. The Canadian National Railway Police were the first organization reported to be using lapel pins with this mustached portrait of Sherlock Holmes with a pipe (Sep 89 #4), which then was copied by other police operations in Canada. Four different pins (for the Canadian National Railway Police, the Canadian Pacific Railway Police, the British Columbia Railway Police, and the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit) are available from Paul D. Roy (3874 Winlake Crescent, Burnaby, BC V5A 2G5, Canada) for US$10.00 each postpaid. The CLEU was created in 1974 in British Columbia, combining the "best and brightest" of Royal Canadian Mounted Police and municipal forces to fight drug-smuggling and other organized crime. The design was used in

- 1989 by HOLMES (the Home Office Large Major Enquiry System used for computerized case-management in Britain and acquired by the police in Toronto), but that pin is not included among those now available.
130. Donald J. Grant died on Feb. 7. His career with the state of Connecticut began in 1967, and for many years he was the Department of Environmental Protection Park Supervisor at Gillette Castle State Park in Hadlyme, where he offered hospitality and assistance to local and visiting Sherlockians. If you've seen and enjoyed the sound-film newsreel footage of William Gillette showing off his railroad, you're indebted to Don, who found the film and shipped it off to the Library of Congress for preservation.
131. Fred Levin reports some nice news for collectors of foreign translations: you can add Vietnamese to the list of languages, since he has received THAM TU SHERLOCK HOLMES (Ho Chi Minh City: Nha Xuat Ban-Van Nghe TP, 1998) from a kind friend; there are two volumes, and they don't include all 60 stories (so there may be at least one more volume).
132. MYSTERY & SUSPENSE WRITERS, edited by Robin Winks and including a 30-page essay on Arthur Conan Doyle by Owen Dudley Edwards (Feb 99 #1), has been nominated for an Edgar (best critical/biographical work) from the Mystery Writers of America.
133. The Napoleon of Crime is in the news again: Phil Attwell has noted a report by Clive King in The Times (Mar. 13) that Robert Redford's company Wildwood Enterprises has purchased the film rights to Ben Macintyre's 1997 biography of Adam Worth, whose life and crimes contributed to Conan Doyle's portrait of Prof. Moriarty; the book had been optioned earlier by Steven Spielberg's company DreamWorks SKG (Dec 96 #1). King suggested that "for the 62-year-old heart-throb, the movie marks a long overdue return to the lovable-rogue territory of 'The Sting', or 'Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid'."

134. Apr 99 #1: "And yet I live and keep bees upon the South Downs," said Sherlock Holmes (in "His Last Bow"). And while it's old news in England, I don't recall that it's been reported here: the Countryside Commission decided against national Park status for the South Downs. According to an article in The Times (Apr. 24, 1998), at hand from Chris Redmond, the commission decided that the Downs, from Eastbourne in East Sussex to Winchester in Hampshire, could be best protected by enhancing their existing status as an area of outstanding natural beauty.
135. The commission also welcomed a proposal to give the New Forest a status equivalent to that of National Parks through special legislation. It was Watson, of course, who "yearned for the glades of the New Forest" (in "The Cardboard Box").
136. Kirk Alyn died on Mar. 14. He began his show-business career as a chorus boy on Broadway and as an entertainer in vaudeville, and launched his film career in 1934; in 1948 he became the first actor to play Superman on film, in serial that ran through 1950, and one of his last film roles was an appearance as young Lois Lane's father in "Superman" (1978). He worked with Jim Harmon on a script written by Ron Haydock for "Curley Bradley's Trail of Mystery" (a radio western series) playing Jonathan Frazier, an actor who played Sherlock Holmes on stage at the Strand Theatre in Grant, Utah, where Moriarty was committing foul play during the town's annual Sherlock Holmes Celebration; unfortunately the episode never aired. Alyn also was to star in an unproduced film "Sherlock Holmes and the Golden Vampire" (planned in 1976 by writer-producer-director Frank R. Saletri, with Keith McConnell as Sherlock Holmes and Alice Cooper as the Vampire).
137. "The Rugarats Movie" (1998) was released on videocassette ($26.95) on Mar. 30 (discounted to $16.95 at Safeway and likely elsewhere); Angelica Pickles appears in the film in a deerstalker (and was seen thus in a wide variety of tie-in merchandise last year).
138. Enrico Solito reports that there will be an exposition on Sherlock Holmes in the Imperial Gardens in Rome from July 10 to Aug. 10, and that his society (Uno Studio in Holmes) hold a seminar there on July 24-25. More information is available from Enrico at Via Lazerini 56, 50019 Sesto Fiorentino F1, Italy <esolito@tin.it>, and on the World Wide Web at <soalinux.comune.firenze.it/holmes/start.htm>.
139. John Ruyle has reported that Dr. Fatso has recorded another case of Turlock Loams for the Pequod Press: THE ADVENTURE OF THE FIERY POOL costs $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper) from John, at 521 Vincent Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
140. The Canadian television series "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" aired on the Fox Family Channel last year (Aug 98 #2), but was suspended after a few weeks. Repeats are now airing sporadically, at 2:00 pm on some Saturdays and Sundays. Meredith Henderson stars as the 12-year-old great grand-niece of Sherlock Holmes (and like him, she is brilliant and eccentric and wants to become the world's greatest detective).
141. Apr 99 #2: Further to last month's note that Robert Redford has bought the film rights to Ben Macintyre's THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ADAM WORTH, MASTER THIEF (Mar 99 #6), BBC News reported that Redford wants Paul Newman to play Worth's nemesis, Allan Pinkerton. This may require a bit of artistic license in the film: Allan Pinkerton died in 1884, and it was to his son William that Worth surrendered Gainborough's portrait of The Duchess of Devonshire in 1901.
142. The Berkshire Theatre Festival's summer season will include Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" from June 24 through July 10. The box office is at Box 797, Stockbridge, MA 01262 (413-298-5536) <www.berkshiretheatre.org>. And there's more theater ahead: the Village Players plan to produce William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" from Mar. 17 through Apr. 1, 2000; the address of the box-office is Box 712, Birmingham, MI 48012, and the web-site is at <www.birmingham-mi.com/villageplayers>.
143. It's "the duelling dinosaurs" (or something like that), and if people were confused when Michael Crichton used "The Lost World" as a title for a book, they'll be even more confused now, since two different two-hour television films about "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" have aired this year (Jan 99 #3 and Feb 99 #1). Patrick Bergin starred as Professor Challenger in the first film, broadcast on The Movie Network in Canada in January, and Peter McCauley was Challenger in the second film, which aired on DirecTV in February and on TNT cable in April (when TV Guide and the Washington Post announced the Bergin version). The McCauley film is a pilot for a spin-off one-hour series, announced to start on DirecTV in July.
144. Our new sheet of stamps showing the fauna and flora of the Sonoran Desert includes at least three stamps with Canonical connections, one of them being the "venomous lizard or gila" (mentioned in "The Sussex Vampire").
145. A mail-order catalog from Signals offers a John Cleese video trio: "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It", "Romance with a Double Bass", and "How to Irritate People" on three cassettes ($39.95). Box 64428, St. Paul, MN 55164 (800-669-9696). "The Strange Case of the End of Civilization as We Know It" aired on television in Britain in 1977, with Cleese as Arthur Sherlock-Holmes and Arthur Lowe as Dr. William Watson.
146. Lola Troy Fiur offers an imaginative series of mystery-theme photographic note-cards; two of them are Sherlockian (and one of the S'ian photos also is available on a T-shirt). For an illustrated flier, contact LTF Studios, 360 East 65th Street #17-A, New York, NY 10021 <ltfoto@cloud9.net>.
147. There's still plenty of time to register for Bouchercon (the World Mystery Convention), which will be held in Milwaukee on Sept. 30-Oct. 3, 1999 (Box 341218, Milwaukee, WI 53234) <whreenie@aol.com> <www.execpc.com/~piesbook/bouchercon99.html>. Next year Bouchercon will be in Denver on Sept. 7-10 (Box 17910, Boulder, CO 90308) <clafliin@colorado.edu> <www.bouchercon2000.com>. And then Bouchercon will move to Washington, on Nov. 1-4, 2001 (Box 11700, Washington, DC 20008) <web-site expected by mid-July>.

148. Apr 99 #3: The weekly syndicated radio series "Imagination Theater" continues to air 22-minute Sherlock Holmes programs written by Jim French (Jun 98 #4 and Sep 98 #2). Seven S'ian programs have aired so far, and they are available (along with many other shows) on CD or cassette (at $7.99

- each postpaid) from TransMedia, 719 Battery Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 (800-227-7234) <www.transmediasf.com> (credit-card orders welcome).
149. "The Golden Era of the Movies" is a 35 x 14.5 in. print with portraits of more than 120 stars of the 1930s and 1940s by the late George I. Parrish, Jr., who included Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes; the print costs $92.00 postpaid from Barwick Publishing (Box 5355, Maryville, TN 37802).
150. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met at Mi Tierra in San Antonio on Apr. 14, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, for a dinner honoring the world's first forensic geologist. We were welcomed by the local Sherlockians (The Strange Old Book Collectors), and of course approved of the AAPG's journalism award to Sarah Andrews for her four mystery novels about Emily Hansen, a petroleum geologist who doubles as a detective. We will dine next in October in Denver during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America.
151. John McPhee won the 1999 Pulitzer Prize for general nonfiction for ANNALS OF THE FORMER WORLD (Jul 98 #1); it's a collection of his four fine books about geology, including BASIN AND RANGE, in which he notes that Sherlock Holmes was the first forensic geologist.
152. "Australian Farmer Breeds Blue Sheep" was the headline a on report from the Associated Press (Apr. 20), spotted by Scott Monty, who notes that Sherlock Holmes could now wear a blue dressing gown made with undyed wool. Nancy Follett, who owns a sheep farm at Sleaford Bay in South Australia, said she 25 years ago with a Sussex-type of ram that had a black face and legs and a dark blue body, and now has bred 100 sheep with fleece ranging from light blue to navy blue. "Some people have accused me of dying the sheep," she said. "That's absolutely not true. I'm not up to chasing sheep around and dipping them into dye."
153. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) offers copies of THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 4, with 80 pages of pastiche, humour and serious writing by members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new, but a few items have appeared elsewhere. $12.00 or CA$17.00 or £8.00 postpaid by airmail; or $8.00/CA$11.00/£5.00 postpaid by surface mail. Payment by personal checks or currency is welcome.
154. "Scooby-Doo's Greatest Mysteries" is a new videocassette ($12.99) with four non-Sherlockian episodes from the 1970s animated television series "Scooby-Doo, Where Are You" (and a brief view of the cover of the book "The Hound of Beastville" in one of the short "behind the scenes" segments); the cassette box shows Scooby in Sherlockian costume, and is packaged with a photo frame that also shows Scooby in S'ian costume. And completists will want to visit a Dairy Queen: the paper bag for their "Kids Pick-nic!" has S'ian artwork on a coupon for a $2.00 discount when you buy the videocassette.

155. Apr 99 #4: Reported: THE CROWDED BOX-ROOM: A CHECKLIST OF SHERLOCKIAN PUBLICATIONS AND THEIR PUBLISHERS, by Don Hobbs. 214 pp. in plastic comb binding, with the names and dates of more than 420 publications, and the names of associated societies and editors, plus notes, appendices, and an index; available from the author (2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028) for $31.95 plus shipping costs.
156. John Pforr offers the lapel pin honoring the 50th anniversary of the Six Napoleons of Baltimore; designed by Jeff Decker, the pin is one inch in diameter, and in three colors on a red background, and costs $6.00 postpaid from John (6 Salthill Court, Timonium, MD 21093).
157. Ernie Wise died on Mar. 21. Wise was one of Britain's greatest comedians, best known for his work with Eric Morecambe; they began performing together in 1941, and "The Morecambe and Wise Show" was one of the most popular series on British television. In 1982 the show features a skit with Morecambe (Holmes) and Wise (Watson) solving a murder mystery with Nigel Hawthorne as the butler (who did do it).
158. Kent State University is not distinguished only for providing an electronic home for The Hounds of the Internet: Bruce Southworth notes that its libraries house the Borowitz True Crime Collection, to which Albert and Helen Borowitz continue to donate interesting items, most recently their Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, which features inscribed copies of "The Sign of the Four" in Lippincott's Magazine and of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and a copy of THE CAPTAIN OF THE POLE-STAR AND OTHER TALES (1890) with holograph corrections by Conan Doyle. The last item is of particular interest, since Conan Doyle seldom edited his work after publication. The university is in Kent, Ohio.
159. Mary Ann Madden's "New York Magazine Competition" (Apr. 19) invited competitors to sully by anagram one familiar name of fact or fiction and provide for it a brief description similarly altered by a one-word jumble. The examples she offered included: "Sherlock Sholem--Israeli detective in relentless pursuit of his nemesis, Professor Yom Tirra."
160. Further to the report (Dec 98 #2) on plans to create The Undershaw Club in Arthur Conan Doyle's home in Surrey, Scott Lucy reports that the adjacent property has become available, adding greater scope for the project, which now is targeted for completion by the end of 2000. Additional details are available from Lucy at The Undershaw Club, c/o Grannom House, Gasden Lane, Witley, Surrey GU8 5QB, England <slucy@supralife.co.uk>.
161. I've lived this long because I didn't die," Dirk Struik told the Associated Press when interviewed for a story on centenarians published in the Boston Globe on Apr. 20 and noted by Scott Monty. "I have good friends," Struik said. "I'm healthy. Above all, I'm active." Struik, now 104, was born in the Netherlands, and began teaching mathematics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1926; his article on "The Real Watson" was published in The Baker Street Journal in Jan. 1947, and one of his activities now is attending the annual dinners of The Friends of Irene Adler in Cambridge, where each year he toasts his fellow mathematician, Professor Moriarty.

162. Apr 99 #5: The New York Public Library celebrated its centennial with a display of one hundred "Books of the Century" (1895-1995), and one of them was THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Jan 96 #8), which also was included in a set of 48 "Books of the Century Knowledge Cards" ($9.95) produced by Pomegranate Publications (Box 6099, Rohnert Park, CA 94927) and available at the Library. The card notes that "This full-length novel is considered one of Conan Doyle's most literary and best-written works."
163. "Meanwhile, patrons of alt.comp.virus, a newsgroup where virus writers and hunters hang out, morphed into virtual Baker Street irregulars," noted the story in Time (Apr. 12) about the successful search for the author of the Melissa macro virus that attacked computers recently. Thanks to Syd Goldberg for spotting the story.
164. There still are Sherlockians who discovered Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in John Dickson Carr's THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE; that's something rather different from discovering Sherlock Holmes, of course, and it's nice indeed that fifty years later there is a new biography that will help readers old and new learn just how much more there was to Conan Doyle than the stories he wrote about Sherlock Holmes. Daniel Stashower is a fine writer, and his experience as a magician and warm sympathy for Conan Doyle's religious belief in spiritualism offers real insight into an area that has quite often been ignored or derided by other biographers. TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (New York: Henry Holt, 1999; 472 pp., $32.50) shows well just how interesting a man Conan Doyle was, and how much he did (as well as how much fun he had doing it); surely that's what a good biography ought to do. Recommended.
165. Carole Nelson Douglas' GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES (1990) now is available read (and read well indeed) unabridged by Virginia Leishman and Patrick Tull on nine audiocassettes, from Recorded Books, 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-638-1304) <www.recordedbooks.com>, for

- $67.50 (purchase) or $15,75 (rental); credit-card orders welcome. Laurie R. King's four Mary Russell novels also are available, read by Jenny Sterlin; as well as THE POISON BELT and THE LOST WORLD, and six Canonical books, by other readers.
166. Carol Barnett's "Plotting a Sherlockian Garden" (spotted by Mike Bragg in the June issue of Victorian Homes) is a nicely illustrated and interesting exploration for S'ian botanists; 265 South Anita Drive #120, Orange, CA 92868 (800-999-9718)
167. The U.S. postal service has continued its annual tributes to the stars of Warner Bros. cartoons, this year honoring Daffy Duck, who appeared in "Deduce, You Say!" (1956) as Dorlock Homes (with Porky Pig as Dr. Watkins).
168. The Andaman Islands continue to attract attention: Kathryn Piffat notes an article by Sita Venkateswar on the history of the Andaman Islanders in the May 1999 issue of Scientific American (with a mention of "The Sign of the Four"), and John Clark has forwarded a report from The Times (Apr. 13) that DNA analysis of hair samples taken from Andaman tribesmen by a British anthropologist in 1907 suggests that the islanders may be descended from the first humans to leave man's African birthplace, 100,000 years ago.
169. Apr 99 #6: Laurie R. King's O JERUSALEM (New York: Bantam Books, 1999; 367 pp., $23.95) is her fifth novel about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes, set in early 1919 (just after A BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE) in the Holy Land, with Russell and Holmes in pursuit of a villain who is trying to undo the British conquest. It's nicely done, with some delightful touches, one involving Holmes, in disguise as a Bedouin in an Arab village, listening to someone translate a Sherlock Holmes story from The Strand Magazine.
170. And in an interview with the Internet bookseller Amazon.com, Laurie reports that she has a sixth Mary Russell novel planned, set in England in 1923 and 1924. And that an English producer is interested in a Mary Russell film, but "won't touch anything until the copyright on the Holmes stuff expires in 2001."
171. Laurie will be on a book-signing tour for O JERUSALEM in June; here's the tentative schedule: 1 or 2 Sebastopol, CA, Copperfield's (time not set); 1 or 2 Capitola, CA, Capitola Bookcafe, 7:30 (unconfirmed); 3 Scottsdale, AZ, Poisoned Pen, 12:00; 4 Houston, TX, Murder by the Book, 6:00; 5 Dallas, TX, Mystery Bookstore, 2:00; 6 Louisville, KY, Hawley-Cooke, 2:00; 7 Bethesda, MD, Mystery Bookshop, 6:30-8:00; 8 Washington, DC, MysteryBooks 6:00-7:00; 9 New York, NY, Mysterious Bookshop (time not set).
172. A new set of United National stamps calls attention to endangered species, and one of the stamps shows the long-tailed chinchilla. And, yes, there's an Canonical allusion (in "The Engineer's Thumb"): "The newcomers were Colonel Lysander Stark and a short thick man with a chinchilla beard growing out of the creases of his double chin, who was introduced to me as Mr. Ferguson."
173. The Mysterious Book Shop has issued a 38-page Sherlock Holmes Catalog with 551 items (and that's just A-J); available from the shop, at 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840) <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net>.
174. "Murder in the City: The Classical Detective Story in New York" is scheduled at the New York Historical Society on May 22-23, with an agenda that feature panels and speakers (including B.J. Rahn and Otto Penzler), a playreading, and walking tours. Additional details are available from the New York Festival of Mystery, c/o Mercantile Library, 17 East 47th Street, New York, NY 10017 (212-755-5610) <www.mysterynet.com/nyfm>.
175. Roger Llewellyn first played Sherlock Holmes in Christopher Martin's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Newcastle-under-Lyme in 1997, and he'll be Holmes again in a tour of David Stuart Davies' new one-man play "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act" (opening at the Salisbury Playhouse in Salisbury on May 18-22). The play then tours the provinces, and it will be performed during the Edinburgh Festival on Aug. 6-29, and in London on Sept. 10-Oct. 10. "In the elegant hands of Roger Llewellyn," the Sunday Express noted, "this is Holmes as you've always imagined him: tall, angular and precise, but with a cutting sense of humor."
176. May 99 #1: The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cameron Hollyer's article about the collection's letters and postcards written by Conan Doyle to Strand editor Greenhough Smith, and Victoria Gill's report on family spiritualism material, purchased from Denis Conan Doyle's estate and from other sources; copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth, 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwrig@netrover.com>. And (for the electronically enabled), the collection's web-site is at <www.mtrl.toronto.on.ca/centres/spcoll/acd/home.htm>.
177. Plan ahead: "A Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" will be the 20th annual presentation by The Six Napoleons, The Carlton Club, and Watson's Tin Box, at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore from 10:00 am to 1:30 pm on Nov. 20; the festivities begin with a coffee hour in the Edgar Allan Poe Room, followed by talks by eight members of the societies, and a quiz based on talks. The library is at 400 Cathedral Street, and there's no admission charge for the event, and additional information is available from William Hyder (5488 Cedar Lane #C-3, Columbia, MD 21044) (410-997-9114).
178. Oliver Reed died on May 2. He was a fine actor, with 53 films to his credit, among them "The Three Musketeers" (1973), "The Four Musketeers" (1974), and "The Return of the Musketeers" (1989), directed by Richard Lester and written by George MacDonald Fraser, as well as many television roles. Initial publicity for the 1990s television mini-series "The Lost World" and "Return to the Lost World" had Reed cast as Challenger (with Donald Pleasance as Summerlee); the films eventually were made with John Rhys-Davies as Challenger (and David Warner as Summerlee), and went directly to video stores, and it is interesting to consider what Reed might have been able to do as Challenger.
179. A POETIC TRIBUTE TO BAKER STREET is a delightful audiocassette recorded by Philip Brogdon, who reads and comments on some of the best works by Sherlockian poets, from T. S. Eliot to Vincent Starrett to Kenneth Fearing to E. V. Knox, with many others possibly less well-known but no less poetic. The cassette (53-minutes) costs $16.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
180. Ron Ritter reports that the 18th Annual Midwest Chesterton Conference at the University of St. Thomas in St. Paul on June 10-12 will include a Saturday-morning debate on "Sherlock Holmes vs. Father Brown" (with Pasquale Accardo on behalf of Holmes and Steve Miller on behalf of Brown). There's no charge for the conference sessions, and additional information is available from The American Chesterton Society (4117 Pebblebrook Circle, Minneapolis, MN 55437) <info@chesterton.org>.
181. The Kenneth W. Rendell Gallery offers Conan Doyle's signed three-page contract with Eveleigh Nash and Grayson for their 1926 edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (the book sold for 2s6d, with a 3d royalty to the author, who received an advance of £100, so they expected to sell more than 8,000 copies); the Gallery's address is 989 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10021 (800-376-1776), and they're asking $15,000 for the contract.
-
182. May 99 #2: The manuscripts of "The Dying Detective" and "The Lion's Mane" were loaned to the Marylebone Library in London in 1990 by the son of the late Alfred T. Miller (who bought them at Christie's in 1960); Catherine Cooke reports that the owner has retrieved the manuscripts, and will be putting them up for sale. Both manuscripts have been published in facsimile (Sep 91 #7 and Sep 92 #6), and copies of both still are available from Christopher and Barbara Roden (Calabash Press, Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <ashtree@ashtree.bc.ca>; postpaid prices are $31.50 (to the U.S.) or CA $40.00 (Canada) or $37.00/£11.60 (elsewhere by airmail) ($32.00 /£20.00 by surface post) (credit-card orders welcome).
183. Hyman Shrand died on Apr. 21. He was an artist and poet, and doctor, and retired as chief of pediatrics at Mount Auburn Hospital in Boston in 1983.

184. In retirement in Truro he founded the Truro School Irregulars at the North Central Truro School, and (according to his obituary in the Boston Globe) "was known for his entertaining storytelling, especially his rendition of Sherlock Holmes mysteries."
185. The Interact Theatre Company's production of Nick Olcott's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Purloined 'Patience'" delighted Washington audiences in 1997 (and it won the Charles MacArthur award for outstanding new play that year). Tim Brierly starred as Sherlock Holmes, and he will return as Sherlock Holmes, acting as chairman (master of ceremonies) and performing in "The Very Model of a Major Merry Music Hall" at Arena Stage in Washington from June 9 to Sept. 5; the show will include Gilbert & Sullivan favorites as well as songs and sketches from the hey-day of British music hall. The box-office address is 1221 Mottrom Drive, McLean, VA 22101 (703-218-6500).
186. The AARP (formerly the American Association of Retired Persons, but now officially known as the AARP, because they don't care whether you're retired or working) has a nice booklet YOUR THREE-STEP PLAN TO FIGHT MEDICARE FRAUD (available in English or Spanish), with amusing Sherlockian artwork; the AARP address is 601 E Street NW, Washington, DC 20049.
187. The RE/MAX network of realtors (it's a franchise with 3,200 offices in 27 countries) now is running a major television advertising campaign that has been underway since last December. Holmes and Watson are featured in 15-second and 30-second commercials that ran on many network and cable stations this spring; the commercials will repeat on cable this summer, and we may see Holmes and Watson again on network television this fall.
188. Stephen Davies spotted Ray Greene's article about "The Making of Star Wars" (on the "Return of the Force: Behind the Scenes, Part 2") on a web-page at <mrshowbiz.go.com/feature/phantommenace/behindthescenes6.html>. According to Green, the "Star Wars" production notes began with a quotation from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: "To the boy who's half a man/ Or the man who's half a boy." After the film was released, Lucas said that "It's been a long time since people have been able to go to the movies and see a sort of straightforward, wholesome, fun adventure." Which, of course, also is a fine way to describe "The Lost World" (the source of the quotation).
189. May 99 #3: John Ruyle reports that the fourth Sherlockian book this year from the Pequod Press will be THE ADVENTURE OF THE BLANCHED SHOULDER, in which Turlock Loams, assisted by Inspector S. Lespade and the ubiquitous Dr. Fatso, investigates the notorious acrobatic Lox Brothers. 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
190. Sherlock Holmes made his 100th (and final) visit to the Victorian Villa in Union City, Mich., for an English beer and ale dinner on May 7, John Sherwood reports. His next appearance (perhaps accompanied by Mrs. Norton) is to be on or about July 21, at the Sherlock Holmes Museum in Baker Street, when John and his wife Katari will be on holiday in London.
191. The 22-page manuscript of "The Adventure of the Worst man in London" (Conan Doyle's original title for "The Adventure of Charles Augustus Milverton") will go to auction at Christie's in New York on June 9, accompanied by the original artwork for Frederic Dorr Steele's portrait of Milverton (the lot is estimated at $75,000-95,000); previous owners of the manuscript have included William Randolph Hearst (who bought the manuscript at auction in New York in 1923 for $70), Edgar W. Smith (Buttons-cum-Commissionaire of The Baker Street Irregulars and editor of The Baker Street Journal), and Carl H. Anderson (one of the founders of The Sons of the Copper Beeches of Philidelphia). The auction also will include Sidney Paget's original artwork showing Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson in "The Norwood Builder" (estimated at $10,000-15,000) and a first edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($1,000-1,500). Christie's is at 20 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020 (800-395-6300), and the catalog costs $40.00 postpaid.
192. Syd Goldberg notes that Ronald Howard's "The Case of Lady Beryl" (1954) is one of 24 programs in a six-cassette collection of RADIO TO TV ("comedies, dramas, and adventures sagas that made the transition" from radio to television) available for $59.95 from The Video Catalog (1000 Westgate Drive, Saint Paul, MN 55114 (800-733-6656); item 64842.
193. Whatever happened to ... Guy Henry? Star of the British television series "Young Sherlock" (1982) about 17-year-old Sherlock's investigations of various strange goings-on at his ancestral manor-house home on the edge of the Lancashire fells, Henry has won a Helen Hayes Award in Washington as the best supporting performer in a non-resident production for his appearance as the villainous Cloten in "Cymbeline" with the Royal Shakespeare Company at the Kennedy Center last year.
194. The May issue of Natural History, published by the American Museum of Natural History in New York, is devoted to flowers, and one of the articles is Richard Milner's "Mystery of the Red Rose" (which starts and ends with references to the Canon, and is illustrated with an appropriate photograph of Jeremy Brett from the Granada series).
195. The Holmes & Watson report celebrated Mother's Day in its May issue with a collection of essays about Sherlock Holmes' mother, plus some interesting reviews of older Sherlockian films by David Morrill and Jennie Paton (and Sherlock Holmes' father will be honored in the next issue); subscriptions cost $16.00 a year for six issues ($22.00 outside North America), from Brad Keefauver, 4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.

196. May 99 #4: Dell's Yearling Books has launched "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" as a paperback series based on the Canadian television series starring Meredith Henderson as the 12-year-old great grand-niece of Sherlock Holmes (it also is seen sporadically on the Fox Family Channel). The first two titles are THE CASE OF THE BURNING BUILDING AND THE CASE OF THE RUBY RING and THE CASE OF THE BLAZING STAR AND THE CASE OF THE KING OF HEARTS, written by Judie Angell (each 112 pp., and $3.99).
197. The flier is now available for "Holmes Under the Arch: Weekend at Baskerville Hall" on Sept. 10-12 at the Westport Sheraton Hotel in St. Louis; the speakers will include Bill Cochran, David Hammer, and Jennie Paton. Write to Holmes Under the Arch, 7101 Mardel Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63109 <huta1999@aol.com>.
198. Classic Images has been covering old films since the 1960s, when (as The 8mm Collector) it published the working script for "The Lost World" (1925); the May issue has William M. Apple's article on "The Twentieth Century-Fox Sherlock Holmes Films" and a report about film memorabilia (including Basil Rathbone material) at Boston University. Classic Images usually has 80 to 92 pp., and is published monthly ($32.00 a year); single issues cost $4.00 (301 East Third Street, Muscadine, IA 52761) <www.classicimages.com>.
199. It's been many years since Michael B. Druzman's excellent filmography BASIL RATHBONE was published in 1975, and since then he has been writing non-fiction and stage and screenplays; Druzman's first novel is NOBODY DROWNS IN MINERAL LAKE (Westlake Village: Center Press, 1999; 240 pp., $12.95). It's a mystery, set in the state of Washington in the 1970s, and it includes an echo of one of Rathbone's Sherlockian films. Autographed copies cost only $12.95 postpaid from the publisher (30961 West Agoura Road #223-B, Westlake Village, CA 91361) <www.centerbooks.com>; credit-card orders are welcome.

200. Mike Whelan spotted a new advertising use of Sherlock Holmes: by the Leak Investigation Unit of the Indianapolis Water Company:
201. May 99 #5: Susan Dahlinger notes that there's a William Gillette Exhibit at the Harriett Beecher Stowe Center through July 5; the Center (formerly known as the Stowe-Day Foundation) is at 77 Forest Street, Hartford, CT 06105 (860-522-9258). The Center's quarterly newsletter reports that Harold and Teddie Niver, dressed in period costume, gave a presentation about William Gillette at the Center's annual meeting on May 11.

202. Rex Pinson, Jr. ("Inspector G. Lestrade") died on May 6. Rex grew up in Tulsa across the street from John Bennett Shaw, and by the time he retired as a vice president of Pfizer Pharmaceuticals he was a regular at the annual dinners of The Baker Street Irregulars and at the Sherlockian dinners at the Culinary Institute of America; he received his Investiture from the BSI in 1973. Rex also loved wine, Jon Lellenberg notes, and had the best private wine cellar of anyone Jon has known (which is high praise indeed).
203. John Stephenson has reported a packet of Stickopotamus binder stickers with a mystery theme, and (of course) one of them is a portrait of Sherlock Holmes; it's item SP-CB-13, and their address is Box 86, Carlstadt, NY 07072.
204. Nancy Beiman reports that Walt Disney will reissue "The Great Mouse Detective" on videocassette on Aug. 31; it will be nice indeed to have Basil of Baker Street back.
205. When you visit the Antarctic (and you certainly can, even as a tourist) you might want to visit Cape Evans, where you can see the world's southernmost copy of a book by Arthur Conan Doyle: THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, which was brought there by Robert Falcon Scott in 1910, in the small hut from which Scott set off on an ill-fated attempt to reach the South Pole. Scott had led an earlier expedition to the Antarctic, in 1901-04, and his third lieutenant then was Ernest Shackleton (who, fortunately for Shackleton, was not a member of Scott's second expedition). But Shackleton did return to the Antarctic, and in 1914-16 he led an expedition that is the subject of one of the greatest stories of exploration ever told.
206. That story's at the heart of the American Museum of Natural History's exhibition about "The Endurance: Shackleton's Legendary Antarctic Expedition" (through Oct. 11) that is well worth seeing if you're in or visiting N.Y. And John Rabe (son of the late Bill Rabe) has produced for Minnesota Public Radio a delightful one-hour program "Walking Out of History" about the expedition. The electronically-enabled can visit a web-site at <news.mpr.org/features/199905/31_rabej_walking/>; Minnesota Public Radio is planning to distribute "Walking Out of History" nationally in a month or so, and John (needless to say) would be delighted if you could ask your local PBS radio station to broadcast the program.
207. The May issue of The Dispatch (edited by Vic Lahti for the Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa) has a report on a rebroadcast of an episode the "Kentucky Derby Bet" episode (May 7, 1939) from "The Jack Benny Show": after exchanging their opening jokes and wisecracks, the regulars went "on stage" to begin the formal show, and Benny called out to his dog, "Come on Baskerville, it's time to go." Followed by the yipping of a small dog (the Basil Rathbone film had opened on Mar. 24, so presumably everyone got the joke).
208. May 99 #6: Bill Dunning notes that Edmund L. Hartmann has been honored by the Santa Fe Film Critics Circle with their Golden Chile Award for Lifetime Achievement. Hartmann, who retired to Santa Fe in 1990 after a long Hollywood career as a screenwriter for Universal and Paramount, had among his many credits two of Basil Rathbone's films: "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1943) and "The Scarlet Claw" (1944). The Golden Chile is a serious award, Bill says (it takes its name from the one to four red peppers that a local paper uses to rate movies in reviews).
209. Until 1988 it cost exactly the same to mail a first-class letter from the United States to Canada as to an address within the U.S. But then Canada imposed an extra charge on letters mailed from Canada to the U.S., and the U.S. post office responded by charging 30c (instead of 25c) for letters to Canada. And it still costs more to mail a letter from Vancouver to Seattle than from Vancouver to Montreal (and more to mail a letter from Seattle to Vancouver than from Seattle to Boston), and it got worse at the end of May: one ounce from the U.S. to Canada now costs 55c (up from 52c). And (alas) the cost of this newsletter to Canadian subscribers goes up too (as you'll learn when you next hear from our circulation department).
210. Laura Sifurova spotted a Russian translation of Arthur Conan Doyle's THE HISTORY OF SPIRITUALISM (1926) published by Global Books in St. Petersburg (1998), with additional illustrations by Polina Goryntseva (two of which are shown here). It was in 1929 that the Soviet government banned Conan Doyle's works, because of his interest in occultism and spiritualism, and almost nothing of Conan Doyle's was published in the USSR until World War Two, when some of the Sherlock Holmes stories were translated into Russian for distribution to the Soviet Army.

211. Jun 99 #1: "Last Words of Killer Gave Life to Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on a story by Nicholas Hellen in The Sunday Times (May 16) about BBC plans for a feature film and a television series about Dr. Joseph Bell. "Blood Line: The Dark Beginning of Sherlock Holmes" (the title of the first adaptation) is to deal with the trial, conviction, and execution of Eugene Chantrelle in 1878, when Bell was working with Dr. Henry Littlejohn as forensic experts for the Crown. Jonathan Pryce (who played the villain in the James Bond film "Tomorrow Never Dies") was announced to play the lead in the series.
212. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets (with 15 different stamps for each decade) have now reached the 1950s. The latest sheet includes a stamp honoring the "shot heard round world" (the home run with which Bobby Thompson won the 1951 World Series for the N.Y. Giants). The Giants defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers in that game, as they did in 1922, when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was on hand (and rooting for the Giants).
213. According to Ely Liebow's DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (1982), Littlejohn was present when Chantrelle was sent to the scaffold: just before being pinioned, Chantrelle took off his hat, took a last puff on his cigar, and waving his hand to the police physician, cried out, "Bye-bye, Littlejohn. Don't forget to give my compliments to Joe Bell. You both did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold." It was only a few months later that Arthur Conan Doyle became Joe Bell's student in Edinburgh.
214. Michael W. Homer has long been interested in (and has written about) Arthur Conan Doyle and spiritualism, and his newest book is LO SPIRITISMO (Torino: Elledici, 1999; 96 pp., 10,000 lira), offering (in Italian) an overview of spiritualism, with discussion of Conan Doyle's life and beliefs in many of the chapters.
215. Noted by Tom Dandrew: VICTORIAN QUEST ROMANCE: STEVENSON, HAGGARD, KIPLING AND CONAN DOYLE, by Robert Fraser (Northcote House, 1998; 108 pp., £8.99); one of the chapter ("Arthur Conan Doyle and the 'Missing Link'") focuses on "The Lost World".
216. Stephen Kendrick's HOLY CLUES: THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Pantheon Books, 1999; 192 pp., $21.00) is an interesting discussion of the faith, reason, mystery, and philosophy one can find in the Sherlock Holmes stories, especially with an expert guide. Kendrick is a Unitarian minister, and wisely read (one doesn't often find Henry David Thoreau and Woody Allen quoted in the same book), and he has written with imagination and style. And I don't recall being told before that when Holmes said to Watson, "You see, but you do not observe," he was alluding to passages in both the Old Testament (Isaiah) and New (Matthew).
217. The Crowborough Conan Doyle Trust is continuing its fund-raising for the life-size bronze statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle planned for Crowborough; British sculptor David Cornell designed the statue, and the Town Council has contributed and will maintain the site. More information is available from Brian Pugh (20 Clare Road, Lewes BN7 7PN, England).
218. Jun 99 #2: Hillary Brooke died on May 25. She began a long film career in "New Faces of 1937" and went on to act with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce and with many other major stars, including Charles Laughton (in 1952 in "Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd"), and had a recurring role in the 1950s television series "My Little Margie". She appeared as Jill Grandis in "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" (1942), as Sally Musgrave in

- "Sherlock Holmes Faces Death" (1943), and as Lydia Marlowe in "The Woman in Green" (1945). She told some fine stories about her fellow-actors and her career in an interview in the winter 1996 issue of Scarlet Street.
219. Geoff Jeffery reports a Three Stooges necktie showing Moe, Larry, and Curly in Sherlockian costume (item SGTX30, $16.99) in a recent mail-order catalog from Soitenly Stooges (Box 10666, Glendale, CA 91209) (800-378-6643).
220. David L. Hammer's THE VITAL ESSENCE: BEING THE FURTHER ANNALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Gasogene Press, 1999; 131 pp., $12.95) is his second collection of hitherto-unreported cases hidden away by Dr. Watson. David notes that he has said several times that he would "never demean the Canon by insinuating a pastiche into commerce," adding unapologetically that he has found it to be great fun, and so it is. $15.45 postpaid ($16.45 outside the U.S.) from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46077).
221. The Mysterious Book Shop's second Sherlock Holmes Catalog (J-Z) brings the total of its Sherlockian offers to 1017 items of old and new material; the catalogs are available from the shop, at 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840) <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net>.
222. The Three Garridebs of Westchester County offer a Sherlock Holmes wrist-watch, with a Sherlockian profile on the face, in men's and women's sizes, for $27.00 postpaid; orders can be sent to Dante Torrese, 11 Chestnut Street, Ardsley, NY 10502.
223. P. N. Elrod (better known in Sherlockian circles as Patti Nead Elrod, creator of the "Baker Street Irregulars") began her book series THE VAMPIRE FILES series in 1990 with BLOODLIST and LIFEBLOOD (Jun 90 #3), about Jack Fleming (once a reporter and now a vampire) and his private-detective friend Charles Escott (whose name is not the only S'ian echo in the series, which is set in gangland Chicago in the 1930s). The series graduated to hardcover in 1998 with A CHILL IN THE BLOOD, and the eighth title is THE DARK SLEEP (New York: Ace Books, 1999; 368 pp., $21.95).
224. "Yo, Sherlock" was the headline on a brief item in the Baltimore Sun (May 23), spotted by John Pforr. "In the seventh inning of a game May 7 between the Arizona Diamondbacks and Mets, the opposing pitchers were Holmes (Darren) and Watson (Allen)."
225. The STUD Sherlockian Society will hold a Founder's Day Festival on July 10 in Chicago, with a Depression-era breakfast, a Rache Road Rally, a tour of Graceland Cemetery (resting place of Vincent Starrett, Alan Pinkerton, and others) conducted by Donald B. Izban, and luncheon at the Ridgmoor Country Club. Details are available from Bill Sawisch (418 Galahad, Bolingbrook, IL 60440) or Allan Devitt (630-227-9127) <szd@ix.netcom.com>.

226. Jun 99 #3: Frank Spencer died on May 30. After beginning his scientific career as a medical microbiologist he became an anthropologist, and was editor of THE HISTORY OF PHYSICAL ANTHROPOLOGY and chairman of the Anthropology Department at Queens College. It was in 1976 that he became interested in the Piltdown Hoax, and in his PILTDOWN: A SCIENTIFIC FORGERY (1990) he documented his belief that Sir Arthur Keith was the culprit. He discussed, and dismissed, other suspects, including Arthur Conan Doyle, and published for the first time an amusing discovery in Keith's papers: the postcard portrait photograph of Conan Doyle that he sent to Keith, with an invitation to dinner, after they debated spiritualism in a series of articles in the [London] Morning Post in 1925. On the back of the postcard Sir Arthur mentions the "Great 3rd round exhibition contest between the Crowborough Kid and Battling Arty of Lincolns Inn Fields." [Dec 90 #3]
227. M&Ms are marketed world-wide, and there are collectibles not seen in the U.S.: six different snap-together plastic toys, one of which is a detective (2.5 in. high assembled); they're marketed by Mars (BP 36, 67501 Haguenau, France), and widely available in Europe (there are eleven languages on the small "not suitable for children under three years" warning).
228. "Sherlock Holmes was a sarcastic loner who played his cards close to his vest and left the business details of life to his faithful Dr. Watson," according to a Reuters dispatch in the Baltimore Sun (May 28) now at hand from John Pforr, about the British government's advertising for a new head of Scotland Yard, who will need to meet "demanding strategic business objectives" and must have "strong leadership, organizational ability, and communications skills," to command the 44,000-strong force. "Sherlock Holmes-types need not apply," the story noted.
229. "Obviously the work of we-know-who!" notes Richard Shull on a report in the N.Y. Times (June 1) about the Maritime Museum at the Palais de Chaillot in Paris, where a dilapidated roof and a weekend rainstorm resulted in damage to several paintings by Joseph Vernet (Sherlock Holmes' great-great-granduncle).
230. Malice Domestic XII will be held on May 5-7, 2000, at the Renaissance Hotel in Washington, with Simon Brett as the guest of honor, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as ghost of honor. Celebrating a ghost of honor has long been a tradition at Malice Domestic (John Dickson Carr was honored this year), and we can expect some interesting Doylean (and Sherlockian) discussions, events, and panels next year. If you would like to be on the mailing list, write to Malice Domestic (Box 31137, Bethesda, MD 20824); there's a web-site at <www.erols.com/malice>.
231. "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (a 30-minute animated series with 26 episodes, created by DIC Entertainment and Scottish Television) began airing on ITV in Britain on May 6, and the series also is scheduled to run on the Fox network (probably on Monday mornings) this fall. Holmes, who died of old age and was preserved in honey, is revived and rejuvenated by Insp. Lestrade (well, an attractive woman who, like her ancestor, works for Scotland Yard, and has a robot assistant she calls Watson), and does a fine job of battling crime and criminals in the 2100s.

232. Jun 99 #4: Fred Levin notes that Nakladatelstvi Books (s.r.o., Star18/20, 602 00 Brno, Czech Republic) is a good source for Czech translations, including the complete Canon in eight volumes, Larry Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE DEMON and Donald Thomas' THE SECRET CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (about $6.00 per volume). Hunga Libri Kiado (Budapest Print, Fogarasi ut 17/b, 1149 Budapest, Hungary) offers two paperbacks in Hungarian: A SATAN KUTYAJA [The Hound of the Baskervilles] and A SUSSEXI VAMPIR [The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes] (about $2.00 each).
233. "Black Shag" is the first in a "221B Series" of pipe tobaccos from the McClelland Tobacco Co. ($6.50 suggested retail for a 50g tin); if you can't find it at your local tobacconist, you can ask McClelland for the name of a nearby dealer (Box 7005, Country Club Station, Kansas City, MO 64113) (888-213-8207).
234. Tom Amorosi and Richard Valley interviewed Bert Coules for an interesting account of the "Sherlock Holmes" BBC radio series in the latest issue of Scarlet Street: The Magazine of Mystery and Horror (well illustrated with photographs, including one of Dame Judi Dench playing Mrs. Hudson with her husband Michael Williams as Watson); $6.95, or $35.00 a year for six issues (Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452).
235. And Forry Ackerman's column in the same issue offers a $500 reward for information leading to the return of a treasure stolen from his collection: a little metallic figure on a thin metal support of the pterodactyl from film "The Lost World" (1925); his address is 2495 Glendower Avenue, Hollywood, CA 90027 (323-666-6326).
236. "Hip-Hop Raps to the Top" was the headline on an article in the [Atlantic City] Press (May 2), noted by Francine Kitts. And one of the people happy about the popularity of the genre is Sure Rock Holmes. He's a hip-hop disc jockey at Richard Stockton College of New Jersey radio station WLFR-FM.
237. Lynette Yencho's new bronze Sherlockian sculpture "The Three Pipe Problem" is available ($600 plus shipping), and her earlier "The Grimpen Mire" (Nov 98 #5) still is available at the same price. Both sculptures also are offered in resin as bookends ($250 for the pair). You can write for an illustrated flier (Garden Studio, 931 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55104), or see her work the Web <www.skypoint.com/members/yencho/holmes.html>.

238. The first two Sherlock Holmes jigsaw puzzles in "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" ("The Adventures of the Fellow Lodgers" and "The Phantom of Sorrel House"), now three years old (Mar 96 #3), are discounted at $6.95 in the new catalog from Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481) (800-544-7297) <www.bitsandpieces.com>.
239. The August issue of American History has two articles of interest, one by Daniel Stashower on "The Medium & the Magician" (about the contest between Mina "Margery" Crandon and Harry Houdini), and the other by Joseph H. Bloom on "Undermining the Molly Maguires" (about the originals of the Scowrers), and editor Tom Huntington's "thoughts on history" about Harry Houdini and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. $3.99; 6405 Flank Drive, Harrisburg, PA 17112.
240. Jun 99 #5: The 22-page manuscript of "Charles Augustus Milverton" (accompanied by Frederic Dorr Steele's original artwork for his portrait of Milverton) set a new auction record for a Sherlockian short-story manuscript at Christie's on June 9: $255,000 (including a 15% buyer's premium. The previous record ($97,750 including the premium) was held by "The Three Garridebs" (sold at auction in 1995. And the fortunate new owner of "Charles Augustus Milverton" is Constantine Rossakis.
241. Sidney Paget's original artwork showing Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson in "The Norwood Builder" brought $18,400 (also including the premium) in the same sale, and Jerry Wachs reports that he is delighted to be the new owner. The underbidder was Richard Sveum, who is president of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota as well as a doctor specializing in asthma (which handily explains his special interest in an illustration showing John Hector McFarlane meeting Holmes and Watson: McFarlane was an asthmatic).
242. Great Britain is issuing a series of stamps celebrating the millennium, and one of them honors "Chaplin's Genius" with a portrait of Charlie Chaplin by Ralph Steadman (Chaplin played Billy on stage with William Gillette).
243. Clifton Fadiman died on June 20. "He learned to read when he was four," Richard Severo wrote in an obituary in the N.Y. Times, "and he never got over it." Generations of readers benefited from his expertise, which was wide indeed. He helped to establish the Book of the Month Club and served on its editorial board for more than 50 years, in 1938 he was asked to moderate a new radio program "Information Please" and quickly gained an audience of nine million listeners, and he was a delightful anthologist and essayist. And he was a Sherlockian: listed as a member of the Baker Street Irregulars in the early 1940s, and a guest speaker at the "Trilogy Dinner" in Mar. 1944 (according to one newspaper report, he "elevated Sherlock Holmes to the position of a myth"). And in 1963 he contributed an afterword to a collection of TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES; "I hope this volume of excellent selections will make you want to read all the stories," he wrote. "I know men who have spent part of a lifetime poring over them, with never-failing delight."
244. "Sherlock Holmes has been done so many times," Roberta Klaeser said, "so I decided to make a scene with this man who just wants to be like him." And her "Sherlock Holmes Wannabe" is one of the delightful rooms photographed for Kristen M. Scheuing's article on "Secrets of a Top Collector" in Dollhouse Miniatures (July 1999), at hand from Kelly Blau. Kalmbach Publishing Co., Box 1612, Waukesha, WI 53187; $4.50.
245. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has arrived, with Julie McKuras' article about Christopher Morley's brother Felix Morley, whose son Anthony J. Morley has donated to the collections his father's Sherlockian books; and an essay by Bruce Southworth about Conan Doyle's A DUET: WITH AN OCCASIONAL CHORUS; and other news. You can join the newsletter's mailing list by writing to Richard J. Sveum (466 O. M. Wilson Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.

246. Jun 99 #6: Sotheby's will offer 80 lots of Conan Doyle material in an auction in London on July 15; some of the material is left over from the sale of Norman L. Rosenbaum's collection last year (Nov 98 #2 and Dec 98 #5), and some is new. The catalog's available from Sotheby's (attn: Peter Selley, 34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England) <peter.selley@sothebys.com> and at their web-site <www.sothebys.com>.
247. Plan ahead: the Millennium Congress of Holmesian Societies will be held in May 2000 in Switzerland, sponsored by three French and Swiss societies. To enroll on the mailing list for additional details, write to Michael A. Meer (Morgenstrasse 70, CH-3018 Bern, Switzerland) <sherlock.holmes@gmx.net>.
248. The seventeenth annual "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held at the Tarrytown Hilton in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Oct. 30-31, with an agenda full of Sherlockian doings and undoings. More information is available from Robert E. Thomalen, Highview Drive, Carmel, NY 10512 <crwk02a@prodigy.com>.
249. MYSTERY & SUSPENSE WRITERS, edited by Robin Winks and including a 30-page essay on Arthur Conan Doyle by Owen Dudley Edwards (Feb 99 #1), was an Edgar-winner (best critical/biographical work) at this spring's annual dinner of the Mystery Writers of America.
250. John Ruyle reports that TIDEWAITERS & YEGGMEN will be the fifth Sherlockian book this year from the Pequod Press, offering whimsical verse dealing with Canonical occupations and personages. John's address is 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707; $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper).
251. Margaret Scott died on May 30, She was a journalist, and with her husband Ken attended the first meeting of the Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis, in 1947, and was an enthusiastic member of the Clients for many years.
252. Fred Holt reports that an exhibition called "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" opened at the Fresno Metropolitan Museum in Fresno, Calif., on June 20; it will run through Sept. 12. The exhibition was first seen in Croydon in England (Oct 95 #2), and has visited Des Moines, Iowa (where it was seen by 31,000 people). It's an interactive show, with an actor playing Holmes, and the museum is located at 1515 Van Ness Avenue, Fresno, CA 93721 (559-441-1444) <www.fresnomet.org>.
253. Laurie R. King's O JERUSALEM (her latest book about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes) is one of the Mystery Guild's featured summer selections, and (for the electronically enabled) there's an interesting interview with her at their web-site <www.mysteryguild.com>.
254. The eighth annual Watsonian Weekend will begin with the Royal Berkshires/Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers Regimental Dinner in Elmhurst, Ill., on July 23; continues with the fortieth annual running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Track on July 24; and concludes with a Fortescue Honours Brunch in Des Plaines on July 25. Additional information is available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szd@ix.netcom.com>.

Jul 99 #1:

255. Detailed information about the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's festival on Sept. 21-26 honoring the unveiling of the statue of Sherlock Holmes in Baker Street were mailed and posted from London on July 21; if you've not already heard directly from them, you need to act quickly, and the fastest way to get information is at their web-site at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> or (for those who have text-only browsers) at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/defindex.html>, or ask an electronically-enabled friend to do it for you.
256. News from Moscow (noted by Yuichi Hirayama): on June 9 the Russian General Prosecutor's Office rehabilitated four Grand Dukes who had been executed by the Communists in Jan. 1919 after the attempted assassination of Lenin (Emperor Nicholas II and his family had been executed in July

- 1918); the decision to rehabilitate the Grand Dukes was based on their not having received due process, or having been convicted of anything. And one of the four was Pavel Alexandrovich, a son of Emperor Alexander II and an uncle of Emperor Nicholas II. According to an article by Yuichi in the 1997 volume of The Shoso-In Bulletin, Grand Duke Pavel Alexandrovich is "the most believable candidate for the King of Bohemia."
257. Lora Sifurova has reported that Russian translations of all of the Sherlock Holmes and Professor Challenger stories now are available on the World Wide Web at <www.g2.ru/library/kol/AKONANDOJL/a> and <www.sec.jb.rovno.ua/biblio /bigbook/AKONANDOJL/>.
258. Further to the report (Jan 99 #5) of the anthology THE 50 GREATEST MYSTERIES OF ALL TIME, Otto Penzler also edited a four-audiocassette collection MORE OF THE GREATEST MYSTERIES OF ALL TIME (Los Angeles: Dove Audio, 1997; $24.95); the eight stories include Vincent Starrett's "The Unique Hamlet" (read by David Warner).
259. The July issue of In Britain has Pat Moore's article "The Greatest Detective" about the annual Sherlock Holmes festival in Crowborough, and local associations with Conan Doyle. British Tourist Authority, Thames Tower, Blacks Road, London W6 9EL, England; £2.75/$6.25.
260. It's time for one of my infrequent irregular challenges: Sherlock Holmes says (in "The Abbey Grange"), "Come, Watson, come, the game is afoot. Not a word! Into your clothes and come!" Of course this wasn't the first time the famous phrase was used in literature; it also is found in one of William Shakespeare's plays. In which of Shakespeare's plays does someone say "the game is afoot"? Who says it?
261. The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce has approved the latest list of people to be added to the Hollywood Walk of Fame; sponsors pay $15,000 to have a star installed in the sidewalk, and (with the exception of posthumous stars) the celebrities must promise to appear for installation ceremony, according to an Associated Press dispatch forwarded by Scott Monty. The latest list includes Don Knotts, who appeared in Sherlockian costume as Inspector Winship in "The Private Eyes" (1980), and Peter O'Toole, who did the voice of Sherlock Holmes in animations of the four long stories (1985) and played Arthur Conan Doyle in "FairyTale: A True Story" (1997).

262. Jul 99 #2: Roberta Rogow's THE PROBLEM OF THE SPITEFUL SPIRITUALIST (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1999; 282 pp., $23.95) is a sequel to her THE PROBLEM OF THE MISSING MISS (Jun 98 #6); Charles Dodgson comes to Southsea in Oct. 1885 to visit Arthur Conan Doyle, and they once again are involved in an interesting mystery (with some intriguing hints about Conan Doyle's future writings). Her first book now also has a British edition (as THE PROBLEM OF THE MISSING HOYDEN) from Robert Hale (256 pp., £16.99).
263. Rogow has finished writing the third book in her Dodgson/Conan Doyle series (THE PROBLEM OF THE EVIL EDITOR) and is at work on the fourth (THE PROBLEM OF THE SURLY SERVANT). Plan ahead: the Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium II will be held at the Dolphin Beach Resort in St. Pete Beach, Fla., on June 9-11, 2000; the Pleasant Places of Florida have a full agenda scheduled, and additional information is available from Carl Heifetz (3693 Siena Lane, Palm Harbor, FL 34685) <microdoc@gte.net>.
264. Francine Kitts notes the "novelkeys" in the current mail-order catalog from the book-seller Bas Bleu (515 Means Street NW, Atlanta, GA 30318) (800-433-1155) <www.basbleu.com>; they're book-shaped keychains ($10.00 each), with the name of an author on the front and a quote on the back, and Conan Doyle is represented by "It is a capital mistake to theorize before you have all the evidence."
265. Our new 48c stamp shows Niagara Falls, and appropriately pays the postage on half-ounce letters posted to Canada. Niagara Falls is mentioned in two Sherlock Holmes stories, and one of them ("The Crooked Man") has "I seem to have all Niagara whizzing and buzzing in my ears." In 1991 I wondered how much whizzing and buzzing can actually be heard at Niagara Falls, and Don Pollock noted a comment by Richard Burton, who visited the Falls in 1860: "I well remember not being able to sleep within ear-shot of Niagara, whose mighty orchestra, during the stillness of the night, seemed to run through a repertoire of oratorios and operas."
266. Further to the item about the Annual Midwest Chesterton Conference (May 99 #1), Phil Bergem reports that the "Sherlock Holmes vs. Father Brown" debate was well-done and interesting, and that an audiocassette is available from the American Chesterton Society (4117 Pebblebrook Circle, Minneapolis, MN, 55437); $6.00 postpaid.
267. In which of Shakespeare's plays does someone say "the game is afoot"? Who says it? If your answer was "Henry V" and Henry V . . . you were wrong.
268. This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will have another attractive watercolor by Douglas West, showing Holmes and Watson inspecting the statue of Holmes in Baker Street; the title is straight from the Canon: "It really is rather like me is it not?" $13.50 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks payable to the Society, please, and orders can be sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 22 Home Heights, Clarence Parade, Southsea, Hants. PO5 3NN, England. Note: you can order now, but the cards will not be shipped until September.
269. Jul 99 #3: Lorraine Daly's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LUSITANIA (Romford: Ian Henry, 1999; 188 pp., £15.99) extends Holmes' career beyond his capture of Von Bork, and involves Holmes and Watson in an investigation of the sinking of the *Lusitania* and in a battle against German saboteurs. The publisher's address is 20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England, and a summer 1998 catalog of additional Sherlockian books also is available.
270. Vinnie Brosnan has issued a supplement to his catalog of Ted Schulz's collection (Jun 98 #7); the supplement offers 772 items, including "a curious collection" of 11 items of "adult material which may offend some Victorian sensibilities". Available from Sherlock in L.A., 1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056.
271. That's right, you were wrong. Henry V says in "Henry V" (III, i, 32) that "the game's afoot" (not "the game is afoot"). Try again, please.
272. Biker Sherlock competed in the street luge in the X Games again this year in San Francisco. In 1997 he won three medals (two gold and one silver), more than anyone else in the Games, but last year took home only one medal (gold). This year he won two silver medals (dual downhill and super mass). His real name is Michael Sherlock.
273. Wanda and Jeffery Dow report a Sherlockian "Detective Little Bear" as one of five different toys offered with kids' meals at Subway shops; the toy is 3 in. high, wearing a deerstalker and holding a magnifying glass. "Little Bear" (created by Maurice Sendak) also stars on two videocassettes ("Little Bear: Friends" and "Little Bear: Summertime Tales") that costs $9.95 retail (but no one has yet reported S'ian artwork on the cassettes). Also noted by the Dows: a toy with Wishbone as Holmes advertised by Dairy Queen.
274. The Fortescue Honours Brunch was one of the events held during the annual Watsonian Weekend (Jun 99 #6), and there's a commemorative lapel pin in five colors (1" high) available ($12.00 postpaid) from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106).
275. "I have some knowledge," Sherlock Holmes explained to Watson (in "The Empty House"), "of baritsu, or the Japanese system of wrestling, which has more than once been very useful to me." That's what Watson wrote, and possibly what he heard, but it's likely that what Holmes said was "bartitsu" (note the minor difference). Graham Noble's interesting article "An Introduction to W. Barton-Wright (1860-1951) and the Ecclectic Art of Bartitsu" in the Journal of Asian Martial Arts (1999), reported by Jim Webb, notes that Barton-Wright wrote about "The New Art of Self Defence" in Pearson's Magazine (Mar. 1899 and Apr. 1899), and suggests that he "deserves his niche in martial arts history." The issue costs $10.00 from the Via Media Publishing Co., 821 West 24th Street, Erie, PA 16502 (800-455-9517).

276. The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse has a full schedule planned for its Fall Sherlockian Weekend at Minnowbrook (an Adirondack Camp) in Blue Mountain Lake, N.Y., on Oct. 15-17, 1999. More information is available from Carol Cavalluzzi (108 Marvin Road, Syracuse, NY 13207) <cacavall@library.syr.edu>. The resort also has a web-site, at <www.minnowbrook.org>.
277. Jul 99 #4: Stanton O. Berg's first contribution to the Writings About the Writings was his article on "Sherlock Holmes: Father of Scientific Crime Detection" in the Sept. 1970 issue of the Journal of Criminal Law, Criminology and Police Science (Sept. 1970); he's a forensic firearms consultant, and his two-part illustrated lecture on "The Firearms-Safeties of Sherlockian-Victorian London" at the 1997 and 1998 annual conferences of the Association of Firearm and Tool Mark Examiners has now been published in the spring and fall 1998 issues of the AFTE Journal, with expert discussion of the Canon as well as the conclusions of earlier authors.
278. Sorry about that: Costa Rossakis ("a Yankees fan and a native New Yorker") notes that the "short heard round the world" (Jun 99 #1) was the home run with which Bobby Thompson won the 1951 pennant for the Giants. The Yankees (of course) beat the Giants to win the 1951 World Series.
279. And the manuscript of "Charles Augustus Milverton" (accompanied by Frederic Dorr Steele's original artwork for his portrait of Milverton) sold at auction at Christie's (Jun 99 #5) for $244,500 (including the buyer's premium, which drops to 10% above $50,000).
280. In which of Shakespeare's play does someone say "the game is afoot"? The play is "Henry IV, Part I" (I, iii, 276) and it's said by Northumberland. Next question: "The Abbey Grange" isn't the only Sherlock Holmes story in which the game was afoot. What's the other story? Who said that the game was afoot?
281. Paul S. Newman died on May 30. He began writing comic book stories in the late 1940s, and wound up listed by the Guinness Book of World Records for more than 4,100 published stories in more than 360 comic-book titles (and about 5,000 stories that were rejected). According to Greg Metcalf's article "If You Read It, I Wrote It: The Anonymous Career of Comic Book Writer Paul S. Newman" in the Journal of Popular Culture (summer 1995), Newman's work included the stories for "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (two issues illustrated by Frank Giacoia, published by Dell in 1961 and 1962).
282. The National Crime Prevention Council has been using its "Take a Bite Out of Crime" symbol for more than ten years: according to an article in Smithsonian (Apr 88 #5), the dog's name was selected in a contest in which the most frequent suggestion was "Shure-lock Bones" (but "McGruff" was the winner). The Council now has a sales-list for its McGruff reflective Halloween bags (1 Prospect Street, Amsterdam, NY 12010) (800-995-5121).
283. Len and Elsa Haffenden created "The Adventure of the Evil Apparition" as a three-act puppet show, based on the brief scenario found in Conan Doyle's papers by Hesketh Pearson (and reported by Pearson in his 1943 biography of Conan Doyle); the play (accompanied by a puppet-show dramatization of Conan Doyle's pastiche "How Watson Turned the Trick") were first performed at a meeting of The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia in July 1993. And both scripts (suitable for performance by live actors) have just been published by the Hansom Press in Ellay Aitchison's THE ADVENTURE OF THE AWFUL APPARITION; the 52-page booklet costs $10.00 or CA$14.95 or £7.00 (postpaid) from the publisher (1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada).
-
284. Jul 99 #5: Jay Windsor (who is Charles Marowitz's personal manager) offers a copy of the prompt-script for Marowitz's play SHERLOCK'S LAST CASE (the two-act version performed on Broadway in 1987 by Frank Langella), fully annotated and inscribed to the buyer by Marowitz, for $450.00. Also available are copies of Marowitz's THE SHERLOCK LOG, an unpublished diary record of the show, covering rehearsals, the Washington try-out, and the Broadway production itself, inscribed by Marowitz; $350.00 each. Windsor's address is: Mail Boxes Etc., 23852 Pacific Coast Highway, Box 172, Malibu, CA 90265 <winomar@aol.com>. And he reports that a revival of the play in London's West End is projected for November.
285. What's the other Canonical story in which the game was afoot? It's "Wisteria Lodge" -- and that's exactly what Watson said: "the game was afoot."
286. Dorlock Homes and Dr. Watkins are on display on Fifth Avenue in New York, in a bas-relief on the Warner Brothers store (at East 57th Street), in a scene from "Deduce You Say!" (1956). Thanks to Jay Pearlman for the photograph of a prominent tribute to Daffy Duck and Porky Pig.
287. John Ruyle reports that BAKER STREET GALORE! will be the sixth Sherlockian book this year from the Pequod Press, offering more verse (some new, some expanded and revised from previous collections). $40.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper); John's address is 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
288. Bob Robinson reports that "Towards the end of May, I felt a twinge of something akin to nostalgia or at least deja vu when my physician telephoned me to state, 'You have an aortic aneurism.'" Much of Bob's aorta now consists of Dacron, and he's still recovering from the procedure, and he has founded a correspondence society called The Companions of Jefferson Hope for those who share (or shared) that ailment with Hope. Prospective members are invited to write to Robert E. Robinson, 6117 Lakeshore Drive, Columbia, SC 29206 <rer@lindau.net>.
289. Forecast from the Oxford University Press in November: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: BEYOND BAKER STREET, by Janet Pascal; 144 pp., $22.00, intended for ages 9-12.
290. John D. Clark ("The Politician, the Lighthouse, and the Trained Cormorant") died on July 5, 1988. He was a chemist, in charge of research and development of rocket propellants at the Naval Air Rocket Test Station and at its successor, the Liquid Propulsion Laboratory, and his history of the search for a power package that would take man into space was published in 1972. His best-known contribution to our literature was his landmark paper "Some Notes Relating to a Preliminary Investigation into the Paternity of Nero Wolfe" (published in the Jan. 1956 issue of The Baker Street Journal), in which he proposed the delightful suggestion (now accepted in many quarters as gospel) that Nero Wolfe was the son of Sherlock Holmes and Irene Adler. He received his Investiture in the Baker Street Irregulars in 1965.
291. Jul 99 #6: William Targ died on July 22. He began his career in the book world at the age of 18 as an office boy at Macmillan in Chicago and at 22 opened his own bookshop there; in 1942 he moved to Cleveland and then to New York with Tower and World Books, rising to editor in chief, and in 1964 joined Putnam's (where he wisely paid Mario Puzo a $5,000 advance for the rights to THE GODFATHER). He retired from Putnam's in 1978, and then founded Targ Editions, publishing some 250 titles, carefully printed and bound, and signed by the authors and illustrators. He once suggested that the trouble with the publishing business is that too many people who have half a mind to write a book do so," but Targ Editions are delightful exceptions: one of them was D. R. Benson's IRENE, GOOD-NIGHT in 1982 (with Edward Gorey's signed frontispiece portrait of irene Adler). His own anthologies CARROUSEL FOR BIBLIOPHILES (1947), BOUILLABAISSE FOR BIBLIOPHILES (1955), and BIBLIOPHILE IN THE NURSERY (1957), are delightful, and his memoirs INDECENT PLEASURES (1975) are a fine tribute to his love of books.
292. If you've been postponing a visit to Gillette Castle in Hadlyme, Conn., you will need to wait until Memorial Day 2000; the state Department of Environmental Protection was hoping to keep the castle open through Labor Day this year, but design flaws have left the castle leaking since it was built, and the head of the Parks Division realized that "there was more damage than we thought." According to an article at hand from Tyke Niver, the state will spend $2.98 million repairing the castle roof and stone parapets, and $3.5 million renovating the interior. The DEP now plans to open portions of the castle for the Memorial Day weekend in 2000, when initial repairs have been finished, and hopes the project will be completed in 2001.

293. Seen at Barnes & Noble: new printings of Barnes & Noble reprint editions of THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ken Greenwald, with 13 stories adapted from the Denis Green/Anthony Boucher scripts for the Rathbone radio scripts (1993); and THE FINAL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, compiled by Peter Haining from material by Conan Doyle and others, with a brief added foreword by Jeremy Brett (1995); $5.95 each.
294. "Impressionists in Winter: Effets de Neige" is on display at the Brooklyn Museum of Art through Aug. 29 (718-638-5000); it's a delightful exhibition that was shown at the Phillips Collection in Washington last year. One of the paintings is Camille Pissarro's "Fox Hill, Upper Norwood" (ca. 1870), and there is a Sherlockian connection: Conan Doyle lived in South Norwood in 1891, and wrote many of the early Sherlock Holmes stories there. John Dickson Carr says in his biography of Conan Doyle that "the house stood in semi-rural country," but the photographs the accompany Harry How's article "A Day with Dr. Conan Doyle" in The Strand Magazine (Aug. 1892) demonstrate that Norwood by then was hardly the rustic village that Pissarro painted.
295. The videocassette with Douglas Wilmer's "The Speckled Band" and "The Illustrious Client" (1964) issued by BBC Video in 1996 is offered (in the British PAL format) for £14.99 postpaid from Blackstar (11 Ravenhill Road, Belfast, BT6 8DN, Northern Ireland, U.K.) <www.blackstar.co.uk>; credit-card orders welcome. They also offer an American NTSC-format cassette (£30.99 postpaid). It's delightful to see Douglas Wilmer (and Nigel Stock and many other fine actors) in these pleasant reminders of the days when so much of what one saw on television was in black and white.
296. Jul 99 #7: Antonio Iriarte reports that the second volume of LAS HAZAÑAS DE SHERLOCK HOLMES [that's THE EXPLOITS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr, translated into Spanish by Cristian de la Maza] has at long last appeared. The first volume was published in 1990, launching an "El Club Diogenes" series of paperbacks that now numbers 118 titles, among them Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's HISTORIAS DEL CREPUSCULO Y DE LO DESCONOCIDO, HISTORIAS ESPELUZNANTES, HISTORIAS DEL RING, HISTORIAS DE LA ANTIGUEDAD, LA COMPAÑIA BLANCA, HISTORIAS DE INTRIGUA Y DE AVENTURAS, EL MUNDO PERDIDO, LA NUEVA REVELACION/EL MENSAJE VITAL, HISTORIAS DE PIRATAS, and EL CAPITAN DEL "POLESTAR". Valdemar (C/ Gran Via 69, 28013 Madrid, Spain) is the publisher, and all the volumes are in print.
297. La Sociedad de Mendigos Aficionados [that's The Amateur Mendicant Society] continues to keep the memory green in Spain, and their semi-annual journal The Stranded appears twice a year (with 72 pages in the spring 1999 issue), publishing original scholarship from Spain and Spanish translations from other corners of the Sherlockian world. The society's address is Apartado de Correos 35.262, 28080 Madrid, Spain.
298. Christina Foyle died on June 8. She was for decades the managing director and guiding spirit of Foyle's, the famous and eccentric bookshop in Charing Cross Road, founded in 1904 by her father and her uncle. She began working at the shop in 1928 at the age of 17, and (according to an obituary in the Daily Telegraph) encountered Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who was browsing the shelves. Knowing he was a spiritualist, she asked him if he had ever been in touch with an author "on the other side." "Oh yes, he replied, "Only last week I was talking to Oscar Wilde. He told me that being dead was the most boring thing on Earth."
299. One of the more interesting tours available in Chicago is a visit to Graceland Cemetery with Donald B. Izban as your guide; Graceland is notable for the Sherlockian gravestone honoring Vincent Starrett and for much more, and SHERLOCK HOLMES VISITS A CEMETERY offers Don's seventeen-step tour of some of the more interesting sights to be seen at Graceland. The 44-page booklet costs $11.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
300. "Sherlock Holmes & the League of Night" is the mystery that Holmes and Watson and participants in the next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" will attempt to solve on Nov. 5-7 in Cape May. The weekend includes a tour of the town's Victorian homes, and additional details are available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <www.capemaymac.org>. Their next Sherlockian weekend will be on Mar. 10-13, 2000.
301. Thanks to John Hillen for the news that DirecTV (a direct broadcast satellite service with 7.4 million subscribers) has begun airing its mini-series based on "The Lost World" (the first of 20 44-minute episodes premiered on July 30, and the series will run through Feb. 2000, with subscribers paying $1.49 to view each episode). The series pilot was the two-hour "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" with Peter McCauley as Challenger (Jan 99 #3 and Feb 99 #1); the pilot debuted on DirecTV on Feb. 1, and on TNT cable on Apr. 11. And the mini-series likely will be syndicated to cable this fall.
302. Jul 99 #8: Brian Pugh notes that the Conan Doyle (Crowborough) Establishment's collection of memorabilia and photographs, now displayed at the Old Dairy at Groombridge Place, will be moved to Crowborough in the fall, when the collection will have a new home at Crowborough Beacon Community College. Brian also reports that next year's Sherlock Holmes Festival in Crowborough is scheduled for July 7-9.
303. "Photographing Fairies" (1997) is now in the videoshops from Polygram Video ($19.95); the film is based on, though somewhat different from, Steve Szilaygi's novel (Aug 92 #6), which was an imaginative fantasy that echoed the story of the Cottingley fairies. The film ran in theaters in Britain, but has gone directly to video here; actors in supporting roles include Edward Hardwicke as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Clive Merrison as the theosophist Edward Gardner.
304. The new "Legends of Hollywood" stamp honors James Cagney, who has played Lon Chaney, who likely didn't play Sherlock Holmes, but: in the film "The Man of a Thousand Faces" (1957) there is an early scene in which Cagney (as Chaney) shows his pressbook to a theatrical producer, and there is a fleeting glimpse of a sketch of Chaney as Sherlock Holmes and a press clipping about his performance as Holmes. Charles Shibuk has reported that Chaney did act in the theater early in his career, and it is possible that Chaney may have played Holmes in a touring company of William Gillette's play or in some other play, but no one (including Lon Chaney, Jr.) has been able to provide any information on the plays Chaney may have acted in, or to locate any sort of scrapbook from his early career, and it is more likely that the scrapbook in the film was merely a studio prop.
305. The Goose Club of the Alpha Inn and The Tigers of San Pedro have announced Holmes West '99 on Sept. 24-26 at the Occidental College Library in Los Angeles. "Three days with the Master" is their motto, Leslie Klinger will be the guest of honor, and there's much more scheduled. More information is available from John P. Sohl (20446 Orey Place, Canoga Park, CA 91306) <home.earthlink.net/~jpsohl/holmeswest>.
306. The July 15 auction at Sotheby's in London included some nice Sherlockiana, and yielded some nice prices. The highlight of the sale (at £7,820 including the buyer's premium) was an autograph postcard written by Conan Doyle in 1927, explaining why the mind-reading scene is found in "The Cardboard Box" and in "The Resident Patient" in many editions of the Canon: "...There was a certain sex element in The Cardboard Box story and for this reason I dis-carded it when I published in book form. As there was a bit of good deduc-tive reasoning in it I took it out and inserted it in another story. Years late I was publishing another S.H. collection and as I was rather short I put in the Cardboard Box after all. But I forgot that a bit of it had already been used." A copy of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKER-VILLES, signed and inscribed by Conan Doyle in 1902, estimated at £12,000 to £15,000, would have been another highlight, but it went unsold.

- being directed by Billy Wilder in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (Wilder had written the script, and the actors had to get every word right). And there were chances to meet children of famous actors (Ron Chaney, Sara Karloff, Bela Lugosi Jr., and Victoria Price), and genre greats such as Ray Harryhausen and Forry Ackerman.
308. AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY AND PAST FORGETTING is a new one-volume edition combining both volumes of Peter Cushing's autobiography (first published in 1986 and 1988), with many fine stories about his Sherlockian and other roles (among them the fact that the ugly false teeth he used in "Tales from the Crypt" in 1971 were the same ones he had used as Sherlock Holmes in the earlier BBC television series) and a new afterword by Joyce Broughton, who was his secretary from 1959 until his death in 1994 (Baltimore: Midnight Marquee Press, 1999; 256 pp., $55.00 in cloth or $20.00 in paper covers). The publisher's address is 9721 Britinay Lane, Baltimore, MD 21234 (800-886-0313).
309. Also available from Midnight Marquee is the American edition of Christopher Lee's autobiography TALL, DARK AND GRUESOME (320 pp., same prices in cloth or paper); the first edition was published in Britain (1977), and there was a second (revised and expanded) British edition in 1997 (the American edition has two additional chapters not in the second British edition).
310. Laura Kuhn reports that she received an order from Amazon.com, with a bookmark packed with the book, and with a nice quote from Christopher Morley on the bookmark: "When you sell a man a book, you don't sell him 12 ounces of paper and ink and glue--you sell him a whole new life."
311. Pj Doyle found some electronic conversations with Carole Nelson Douglas at a CNN web-site, where Carole said that she hopes to resume her Irene Adler series in the next couple of years, and that Recorded Books, which has issued GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES unabridged on audiocassettes (Apr 99 #5) will do the same with the other three already-published books.
312. Merlin Holland, grandson of Oscar Wilde, will be the featured speaker at a conference on "The Arts of the British 1890s" in Washington on Sept. 10-12; the interdisciplinary conference is organized by the William Morris Society in collaboration with the Freer Gallery of Art, Smithsonian Institution, Georgetown University Department of English, and National Gallery of Art in association with the Eighteen Nineties Society. Other talks will cover the music, theater, poetry, fiction, book design, printmaking, photography, and Arts and Crafts furniture designs of the 1890s, with special attention to trans-Atlantic connections between British and American arts. All events are free and open to the public; no registration is necessary. Details are available from the William Morris Society in the United States (Box 53263, Washington, DC 20009 <www.cuny.cuny.edu/wmorris/conference.htm>).
313. Aug 99 #2: Constantine Rossakis, who earlier this year (Jun 99 #5) bought the manuscript of "Charles Augustus Milverton" at auction, now is the fortunate owner of two more Sherlockian manuscripts: "The Dying Detective" and "The Lion's Mane" (purchased from the son of the late Alfred T. Miller, who bought them at auction at Christie's in 1960). Other than the Conan Doyles, Dr. Rossakis is the only person to have owned more than two Canonical manuscripts.
314. Douglas Seale died on June 13. He was a British actor, producer, and director who launched his acting career on stage in London in 1934, was nominated for a Tony Award in 1983 for the comedy "Noises Off", and in 1996 appeared as Archie Rice in a production of "The Entertainer" in New York. He was trained at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, and produced and directed plays on both sides of the Atlantic, and in Mar. 1952 he directed William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" for the Birmingham Repertory Theatre.
315. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist at 7:00 pm on Oct. 27 at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver. If you'd like to join the festivities for local Sherlockians and visiting geologists, you can contact Mark G. Langston (1143 South Monaco Parkway, Denver, CO 80224) or me (addresses at the end of this newsletter).
316. Madeline wears Sherlockian costume while doing a bit of detective work in "Madeline and The 40 Thieves" (on a videocassette from Sony at $9.98); it's an episode from the 30-minute animated series that ran on the Family channel in 1993, based on the book by Ludwig Bemelmans and narrated by Christopher Plummer.
317. For completists: Andy Peck reports that the Mystery Guild has its own edition of Daniel Stashower's TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (item #182360, $16.25); their address is Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.mysteryguild.com>.
318. Colonel Sebastian Moran's Secret Gun Club (which meets on Leap Year Day in or near Chicago) is planning next year's gathering, and details are available from Nancy Wrobel, 7998 Garfield Avenue, Burr Ridge, IL 60521. Firearms will be provided, and the luncheon will feature buffalo meat, according to Don Izban, the society's founder, who has revealed the full name of the society: CSMGCEFTUQCOIIIDDRARSOTDRBDJHWOBTTAHEAUEOMSH. Yes, that's an abbreviation, but I'm sure they'll tell you the full name on Feb. 29.
319. Alan Smith's article on "Smoking and Sherlock Holmes: A Three-Pipe Problem" appears in the summer 1999 issue of Pipes & Tobaccos, with illustrations by Chuck Regan; $3.95. The magazine is published by SpecComm International, 3000 Highwoods Boulevard #300, Raleigh, NC 27604 <www.pt-magazine.com>.
320. Jackie Buckrop spotted a nice coincidence in the 30-minute television public-television series "The Desert Speaks" (now in its ninth year from the University of Arizona): the series is produced by Fran C. Sherlock, and the tenth episode this year was "An Inside Look at Beekeeping". The program is available on cassette for $18.95 postpaid from WUAT-TV (attn: business services), University of Arizona, Box 210067, Tucson, AZ 85721 (800-841-5923).

321. Aug 99 #3: Carl Toms died on Aug. 4. A British stage designer whose career spanned more than 40 years, he designed sets for theater, films, opera, and ballet, and in 1969 was awarded the Order of the British Empire for his work as design consultant for the investiture of Charles as Prince of Wales. Toms designed the sets and costumes for the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes", winning Tony and Drama Desk awards for the show's sets in New York in 1974.
322. Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers have launched their own journal, called (quite appropriately) Cliff Notes on Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers; the first issue has 22 pages, including a report on a recent visit to 221B Baker Street in Morristown, N.J. (the former home of Edgar W. Smith), and costs $3.00 postpaid (or $5.00 a year for two issues) from Henry Boote, 184 Central Avenue, Old Tappan, NJ 07675.
323. Fans of Laurie R. King's five books about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes will want to order the new T-shirt offered by the RUSS-L electronic mailing list (the design is different from the one offered last year). The cost is $10.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $11.00 (Canada) or $15.00 (elsewhere), and you should send your orders to Jessie Emerson, Box 2812, Huntsville, AL 35804; please specify size (S to 2X for adults; 6 to 16 for children) and background color (parchment or light blue). Size 3X also is available (parchment only) for $2.00 more. The mailing list motto (which is much more easily read in the full-size emblem on the T-shirt) is: "After 1914, Holmes is ours."
324. Ray Betzner spotted the comic-book SCREAM COMICS #1 (Oct. 1998) with a twopage story "The Ghost of Snaggle Castle" (starring Foreclose Holmes and his trusty assistant Batsin); $2.95. The publisher is A List Comics (8332 Melrose Avenue, Hollywood, CA 90069 <schanes@gateway.net>).
325. It can be interesting to judge "cultural literacy" by looking for examples of things that writers assume that all (or perhaps almost all) readers will recognize without explanation. One example might be an allusion to the dog that did nothing in the night-time, with no explanation that the allusion is

- to a Sherlock Holmes story. And there was an interesting example in the Washington Post's obituary (Aug. 11) for Jennifer Paterson, who was half of the BBC's famous cooking duo whose "Two Fat Ladies" show was syndicated in ten countries. Her partner was Clarissa Dickson Wright, and the obituary noted that "Paterson was filmed for the show driving a Triumph Thunderbird motorcycle, with Dickson Wright riding its Watsonian sidecar."
326. Audio Book Contractors (Box 40115, Washington, DC 20016) offers new recordings by Flo Gibson of A STUDY IN SCARLET (on three cassettes; $8.95 rental or $24.95 purchase) and THE LOST WORLD (on four cassettes; $11.95 rental or $35.95 purchase). Add $3.50 for shipping ($4.50 to Canada).
327. "Freak Storms as Britain Sizzles in the Sun" was the headline on an article in the [London] Daily Telegraph on Aug. 2, at hand from Francine and Wayne Swift. Seaside towns were crowded, needless to say, and "Coastguards were warning paddlers and swimmers from the Wash to the Thames to watch out for Lion's Mane jellyfish reported on the East Anglian coast."
328. Aug 99 #4: The 26-episode 30-minute animated series "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" is scheduled to run weekly on the Fox Kids network at 8:00 am on Saturdays beginning Sept. 18, and possibly also on local stations that pick up syndicated programming from PAX TV. The series began airing in ITV in Britain in May (Jun 99 #3): Holmes, who died of old age and was preserved in honey, has been revived and rejuvenated by Insp. Lestrade (well, an attractive woman who, like her ancestor, works for Scotland Yard, and has a robot assistant she calls Watson), and does a fine job of battling crime and criminals in the 2100s.
329. The annual Sherlock Holmes Festival in Tryon, N.C., continues to pay tribute to local resident William Gillette; this year's dates are Nov. 4-7, and the Tryon Little Theater will give five performances of his play "Sherlock Holmes". Additional information about all the festival events is available from Jacquie Ziller, Polk County Travel & Tourism Council, 425 North Trade Street, Tryon, NC 28782 (800-440-7848); and the festival has a web-site at <www.skydance.com/tlt/sherlockholmes>.
330. Bill Barnes reports that Kel Richards' FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG AND OTHER STORIES (Sydney: Beacon Communications, 1999; 304 pp.) now is available, with three Sherlockian pastiches, from Bill (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) for US$24/CA$32/£15 postpaid (air) or US$21/CA$29/£13 (surface).
331. There's more discussion of the "Sherlock Holmes" BBC radio series in the conclusion of Tom Amorosi and Richard Valley's interview with Bert Coules in the latest issue of Scarlet Street: The Magazine of Mystery and Horror; $6.95, or $35.00 a year for six issues (Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452); future issues will have interviews with actor Douglas Wilmer and scriptwriter Charles Edward Pogue.
332. Larry Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RUNE STONE MYSTERY (New York: Viking, 1999; 317 pp., $23.95) will be published in October; Holmes and Watson return to Minnesota in 1899 to try to authenticate evidence that Norse explorers had visited there in 1362. The book is a sequel to Millett's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (Sep 96 #5) and SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ICE PALACE MURDERS (Nov 98 #6), and he continues to make good use of local history, color, and characters.
333. Guernsey has issued a set of six stamps honoring the 200th anniversary of Sandhurst (the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst was founded by a Guernseyman, Major General John Gaspard Le Marchant); four of the stamps honor people who have Sherlockian or Doylean connections: the Duke of York (Le Marchant's sponsor), and three men who attended the academy: Field Marshal Earl Haig, the actor David Niven, and Winston Churchill:
-
334. Aug 99 #5: The other two Guernsey stamps show Sandhurst founder Le Marchant and graduate Field Marshal Montgomery, but I don't know of any connections for them. As for the other four, Sherlock Holmes mentions "the Duke of York's steps" (in "His Last Bow"), Conan Doyle wrote the poem "Haig is Moving" (1919), Niven (according to his autobiography THE MOON'S A BALLOON) played the juvenile lead in "The Speckled Band" at Sandhurst in 1928, and John McAleer noted in his biography REX STOUT that in Dec. 1931 prospective bridegroom Stout had "a night out with the boys" at a private club where Churchill was one of the guests (at half-past one, Stout remembered, Churchill "was sipping bourbon and discussing Sherlock Holmes with me and three other men").
335. And what did Winston Churchill have to say about Sherlock Holmes? According to Stout, "Churchill knew the Holmes stories fairly well and thought them 'perfect entertainment.'"
336. The third pillar from the left (and the rest of the Lyceum) has been sold, according to a report in The Times (Aug. 5), at hand from John Baesch. The American conglomerate SFX Entertainment paid the Apollo Leisure Group £158 million for more than 20 theaters in Britain, including the Lyceum, where Mary Morstan was directed to meet her unknown benefactor (in "The Sign of the Four"). Apollo spent £14.6 million restoring the Lyceum, which was reopened by the Prince of Wales three years ago (Nov 96 #6).
337. "Rose is a rose is a rose" isn't a quote from the Canon, but we can hold it in reserve. The U.S. Postal Service's newest rose is a pink coral rose, and unlikely to be regarded by the USPS as a tribute to smokers (but of course we know that "the smoke bubbled merrily through the rose-water" in "The Sign of Four").
338. The Cambridge Footlights/Amateur Dramatic Club have scheduled a first for Sherlockian theatricals: "Sherlock Holmes: The Pantomime" will be produced at the ADC Theatre in Cambridge from Nov. 23 to Dec. 4; for those unfamiliar with British traditions, this is not a pantomime in the style of Marcel Marceau, but rather a broadly comic musical (John Cleese, Stephen Fry, and Hugh Laurie have been members of Footlights in the past). You can reserve tickets now from the Cambridge Arts Theatre Box Office, 6 St. Edwards Passage, Cambridge CB2 3PJ, England (01223-503333), and more information about the show is available from Gemma Rougier at the ADC Theatre, Park Street, Cambridge CB5 8AS, England (01223-359547) <gcer2@cam.ac.uk>. Copies of the program for the panto (with a synopsis and director's notes) will be available by mail in December for £3.50 postpaid anywhere in the world (sterling checks only, please) from Gemma Rougier at the ADC Theatre.
339. Further to the report (Jul 99 #7) on the 20-episode television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (with Peter McCauley as Challenger), the series is scheduled to begin in syndication on local stations starting Sept. 27. According to a story by Steve Brennan in The Hollywood Reporter (Aug. 12) executive producer John Landis noted that the two-hour pilot ended with the explorers trapped on the Lost World, and that "the syndicated series takes a wacky left turn at that point, and suddenly our explorers uncover a civilization that has evolved between dinosaurs and humans. They look like lizards and live in a society that is similar to ancient Rome."
340. Aug 99 #6: The STUD Sherlockian Society's Founder's Day Festival was both sold-out and enjoyable, Allan Devitt reports, and the society's next function will be an Anglican Holiday at the Eagle Ridge Resort near Galena, Ill., on Oct. 29-31. And their first gathering next year will be in Schiller Park, Ill., on Mar. 3-4. Details are available from Allan at 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106 <szd@ix.netcom.com>.
341. The Bird's Nest Theatre in South London will present "In League with Sherlock Holmes" on Sept. 8-25 (with new adaptations of "Lady Frances Carfax", "The Copper Beeches", and "The Red-Headed League"). The show runs Wednesdays through Saturdays at 8:00 pm, tickets cost £7.50, and the theater is located above the Bird's Nest pub at 32 Deptford Church Street, London SE8 4RZ, England (0181-694-2255) <birdsnesttheatre@x-stream.co.uk>.
342. The lapel pin of The Scowrers and Mollie Maguires of San Francisco is 5/8" in diameter and black and gold on red enamel; $15.00 postpaid (checks should be made payable to the Scowrers, please) from Jim Ferreira, 753 Oriole Avenue, Livermore, CA 94550.

343. Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine (edited by David Stuart Davies) has a fine variety of articles, essays, reviews, and other material about Sherlock Holmes and other detectives, old and new. Continuing features include Michael Cox's "A Study in Celluloid" (offering the background story of the Granada series) and Roger Johnson's "Societies Forum" and Pat Ward's "Sherlock Stateside" (with news from both sides of the Atlantic). And the most recent issues have featured Kathryn White's intriguing "Sherlock Holmes and the Viagra Principle" (a thoughtful discussion of Holmes' enigmatic sexuality) and Shane Baldwin's "Confessions of a Sherlockian Punk Rocker" (he was 12 or 13 when he found the Canon, and only 19 when his band Vice Squad made its first performance at the Lyceum Theatre and he was delighted to hasten to the third pillar from the left). Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (U.S.), and the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>; their U.S. representative is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. Back issues are available, and credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses.
344. And there's interesting news in the latest issue of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine for fans of the radio series starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams: BBC Radio 4 will extend the Merrison/Williams series into the unrecorded cases, with five original pastiches written by Bert Coules. The new shows will air next year. But Bert's not planning to do the Giant Rat of Sumatra: "some things should be left shrouded convenient Watsonian fog," Bert told the magazine.
345. The digital video disk (DVD) market is expanding; "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976) was issued by Image Entertainment last year (Sep 98 #2), and Tom Kowols has noted that Ian Richardson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1983) will be released by Image Entertainment on Oct. 12 ($19.99). Jeremy Brett fans will also welcome his "Macbeth" (1981), due on Oct. 19 ($29.99).
346. Sep 99 #1: Scuttlebutt from the Spermacti Press Further to the item (Jun 99 #1) on the BBC's "Blood Line: The Dark Beginning of Sherlock Holmes" (about Joseph Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle), an article in the Daily Telegraph (Aug. 14) reported that filming was to start in Glasgow in August, with Charles Dance and Ian Richardson starring, and Dolly Wells as a medical student who battles prejudice against women in the profession and ends up falling in love with Conan Doyle. "I'm learning how to kick a man in his balls," she explained. "I've never done it before but it doesn't sound that difficult."
347. Barbara Michaels (who also writes as Elizabeth Peters about Amelia Peabody Emerson) presents two unsolved ghostly mysteries from the 19th century in OTHER WORLDS (New York: HarperCollins, 1999; 217 pp., $23.00), and she uses Frank Podmore, Nandor Fodor, Harry Houdini, and Arthur Conan Doyle to offer and briefly debate possible solutions to the mysteries.
348. G A M E F O R E Credit Matt Demakos for using word-transformation to demonstrate that the game is a foot, in five changes. Can anyone do
F A M E F O R T it in four? Matt, in turn, credits Lewis Carroll with inventing this kind of puzzle. Note that you're not allowed to change more
F A R E F O O T than one letter in each more, and that each step must be a real word. If you can do it in four, stop: it can't be done in three moves.
349. Aziz Bin Adam noted some interesting items in catalog 174 from Bibliophile Books ("Britain's Best Postal Book Bargains"): UNRAVELLING PILTDOWN: THE SCIENCE FRAUD OF THE CENTURY AND ITS SOLUTION, by John Evangelist Walsh, with discussion of Arthur Conan Doyle and many others (1996, 279 pp., now £5.00) and THE VICTORIAN TOWN CHILD, by Pamela Horn, with details on just what sort of life the original Baker Street Irregulars led (1997, 248 pp., now £8.00). Their address is 5 Thomas Road, London E14 7BN, England; and they welcome credit-card orders, but postage can be expensive: to the U.S. by cheapest rate it's £2.50 per order plus £2.00 per book.
350. Members of The Parallel Case of St. Louis are celebrating their society's tenth anniversary with (among other things) an anthology of new articles and artwork titled THE PARALLEL CASES OF ST. LOUIS. The 56-page pamphlet costs $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($11.00 to Canada and $12.00 elsewhere), from Joseph J. Eckrich (914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026).
351. Jim Suszynski spotted THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in the Parragon Children's Library (Avonmouth: Parragon, 1994; 316 pp.), with a color dust jacket and some uncredited black-and-white illustrations; discounted at $1.99.
352. The "Dover Thrift Editions" ($1.00 to $2.00 each) continue to offer a wide range of good literature: their latest catalog, at hand from Laura Kuhn, has four titles by Conan Doyle: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, SIX GREAT SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES, and THE ADVENTURE OF THE DANCING MEN AND OTHER SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES ($1.00 each), and THE LOST WORLD ($1.50). There's also a new "Dover Audio Thrift Classics" series that includes LISTEN & READ SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES ($6.95, with SIX GREAT SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES and an audiocassette with readings of "The Red-Headed League" and "The Final Problem"). Dover's address is 31 East 2nd Street, Mineola, NY 11501.
353. Sep 99 #2: Hugh S. Scullion's THE FATAL MISTAKE and the late Douglas Moreton's THE RISING RANSOM are available in one volume (144 pp.) from Cadds Printing (56 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England); Scullion's pastiche involves Wiggins, now a detective in his own right, investigating a case in Dulwich, and Moreton's pastiche has Holmes in pursuit of kidnappers near Lancaster. £12.00 postpaid to the U.K. or $20.00 postpaid elsewhere (dollar checks payable to Hugh Scullion, please).
354. Issue #32 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine is a "Special Statue Issue" with much about the new statue of Sherlock Holmes in Baker Street (including an interview with sculptor John Doubleday). And a report on a new sight for Sherlockian visitors to London to see: The Sherlock Holmes Memorabilia Company (at 230 Baker Street) has mounted an exhibition of furniture and props used by Granada in their television series, accompanied by Linda Pritchard's scrapbooks of Jeremy Brett's career. An annual subscription (six issues) costs £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (U.S.) and the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>; Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com> is their U.S. representative. Back issues are available, and credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses.
355. Jerry Margolin reports that the second issue of Caliber Comics' SHERLOCK HOLMES READER is in the shops ($3.95), with the second installment of "The Loch Ness Horror" (story by Martin Powell and artwork by Seppo Makinen) and other Sherlockian articles, puzzles, and artwork; 225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170 (888-222-6643) <www.calibercomics.com>.
356. What is small, lives underground, and solves crimes?
357. The "special millennium issue" of British Heritage (Aug.-Sept.) includes a review of British art and literature by Chris Smith; with a portrait of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and credit to him for having "created one of the most popular characters in fiction and provided material for hundreds of adaptations this century in film, television, and radio." $4.99 on newsstands, or $6.00 postpaid (6405 Flank Drive, Harrisburg, PA 17112) (800-358-6327). And there's a web-site at <www.thehistorynet.com>.
358. There's more news about the BBC's "Blood Line" (Sep 99 #1), from a story in the Daily Mail (at hand from Jay Hyde): Ian Richardson will play Joe Bell, Robin Laing will be Arthur Conan Doyle, and Charles Dance will be hospital patron Sir Henry Carlyle.

359. The Arthur Conan Doyle Society celebrates its tenth anniversary this year, and the ninth issue of its journal ACD (June 1999) offers 180 pages of essays, articles, reviews, and scholarship, including Pierre Nordon's address to the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner in Jan. 1999, articles and letters by and about Conan Doyle found by John Michael Gibson in the pages of the [London] Daily Mail from 1909 to 1930, Conan Doyle on Houini's Last Escape" (from the Mar. 1930 issue of Ghost Stories) and Douglas G. Greene on "Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr". Membership in the society (including two issues of the journal) costs $27.00 a year (CA$33.00 /£16.00); credit-card orders are welcome, and the address is Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/acdsoc.html>.
360. Sep 93 #3: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is the first of a series of five limited editions of Sherlock Holmes stories, with illustrations in full color by Jason Powers and published by Micawber Fine Editions. The price varies from $395 to $95, depending on how many signed prints are included; shipping is extra, and an illustrated flier is available from Janis Frame at Book Buffs, Ltd., 1307 Bannock Street, Denver, CO 80204 (800-265-9552) <jframe6383@aol.com>. An illustration can also be seen on the Web at <www.abebooks.com>: search for Micawber Fine Editions as the publisher.
361. What is small, lives underground, and solves crimes? Sherlock Gnomes! According to Tod Hageman, in Betty Debnam's "The Mini Page" (Sept. 5).
362. The seventh and eighth Sherlockian books this year from John Ruyle's Pequod Press are THE CHIMNEY-CHILD (poetry old and new) and THE MELLOW FACE (a new case from Dr. Fatso's archives, in which Turlock Loams joins forces with the famed private eye Philip Merlot). The hand-set and hand-printed books cost $40.00 each (cloth) or $20.00 (paper); John's address is 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707, and you're invited to request his sales-list of earlier titles still available.
363. Arthur C. Schroeder died on Aug. 26. He was an insurance underwriter and marketing representative, and an enthusiastic member of the Sherlockian societies in the Saint Louis area. Art was the sparking-plug as well as the skilled handicapper for the local running of The Silver Blaze, and he wrote a series of amusing radio dramas performed at society meetings.
364. The Friends of Dr. Watson (a branch of The Franco-Midland Hardware Company with an interest in the medical aspects of the Canon) are organizing their second annual prize-essay competition (open to all) for the best essay discussing Dr. Watson's medical abilities, knowledge, and skills, with a deadline of Mar. 31. Details are available from Richard Stacpoole-Ryding, 14 Western Close, Letchworth, Herts. SG6 4SZ, England; please send an SASE (in the U.K.) or two International Reply Coupons (elsewhere).
365. Further to the report (Aug 99 #6) on the 20-episode television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (with Peter McCauley as Challenger), TV Guide (Sept. 11) noted that there are two versions: the "slightly more risque" series is airing on pay-per-view DirecTV, and the other one began in prime-time syndication on Sept. 27.
366. Larry Millett will be on a book-signing tour for SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RUNE STONE MYSTERY in October: here's the tentative schedule: 16 Minneapolis, MN, Once Upon a Crime; 23 Stillwater, MN, Valley Bookseller (1:00; 25, Dayton, OH, Books and Company, 7:00; 26, Madison, WI, Booked for Murder, 7:30; 27, Seattle, WA, Seattle Mystery Bookshop, 12:00; 28, Portland, OR, Murder by the Book, 7:00; 29 Los Angeles, CA, Mysteries to Die For, 12:00; 30 Los Angeles, CA, Coffee, Tea and Mystery, 1:00.
367. Jean Dutourd's novel-length pastiche MEMOIRES DE MARY WATSON was first published (in French) in 1980 (Apr 81 #4), and it has now been translated into Russian and published in Ukraine; if you would like to add to your collection of foreign pastiches, contact Lora Sifurova (49-1, Apt. 65, 9th Parkovaya Street, Moscow 105425, Russia) (7-095-463-6803) <laura@cityline.ru>.

368. Sep 99 #4: Reported: THE AUTHENTIC WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: AN EVOCATIVE TOUR OF CONAN DOYLE'S VICTORIAN LONDON, by Charles Viney (Godalming: Quadrillion, 1999; 168 pp., $14.99; almost certainly a reprint of his SHERLOCK HOLMES IN LONDON (Oct 89 #3) under a new title, and aimed for the bargain tables. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN LONDON was a delightful book, with more than 200 sepia-toned contemporary photographs, accompanying appropriate quotations from the Canon; recommended then, and now.
369. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers the first part of Barbara Rusch's report on interesting ephemera in the collection, and Victoria Gill's account of what is old and new in the Arthur Conan Doyle Room, and much more; copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth, 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwig@retrover.com>. And (for the electronically enabled), the collection website is at <www.mtrl.toronto.on.ca/centres/spcoll/acd/home.htm>.
370. Ed. Lange's play "Sherlock's Secret Life" premiered at the N.Y. State Theatre Institute in Mar. 1997, and it's now available in the Institute's "Family Classic Audio Book" series on two cassettes, with the original cast and narration by Karl Malden, and it's nicely done indeed. The cost is $21.90 postpaid; 155 River Street, Troy, NY 12180 <www.nysti.org> (credit-card orders are welcome).
371. Marcus Geisser reports that he is now working for the International Committee of the Red Cross, and is on his way to Congo-Kinshasa (formerly known as Zaire), where he will be for the next ten to twelve months. He doesn't have e-mail yet, but will welcome letters, which will be forwarded if they are addressed to: Marcus Geisser/Lubumbashi/R.D.C., c/o CICR, 19 avenue de la Paix, CH-1202 Geneva, Switzerland.
372. Our new set of six stamps honoring Hollywood Composers includes one for Academy Award-winner Bernard Herrmann, whose lengthy list of credits included conducting the orchestra on Orson Welles' Mercury Theater radio broadcast of William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes", and writing the score for the 1976 film "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution".
373. Vincent Starrett, who was described by Julian Wolff as "the greatest Sherlockian of all time" when he wrote Vincent's obituary for The Baker Street Journal in 1974, was photographed by Laura V. Page at his home in Oak Park, Ill., in 1972. She also designed the imaginative grave-marker installed at Vincent's grave in 1986, and she now offers high-quality prints of three of those photographs; $25.20 each postpaid. An illustrated flier is available from Laura (Box 5283, Madison, WI 53705) <lvpage@mailbag.com>.
374. It's nice to see that Christopher Morley's not forgotten: John Pforr noted an article by John Rivera in the Baltimore Sun (Sept. 16) on the 100th anniversary of the Gideons, an organization that still distributes Bibles "in the human traffic lanes and streams of national life." And the article began with a quote from Morley: "Why do they ut the Gideon Bibles only in the bedrooms, where it's usually too late, and not in the barroom downstairs?"

375. Sep 99 #5: Bill Dorn's Sherlock Holmes Calendar for 2000 has the dates for 55 of the cases (he uses the Zeisler and Christ chronologies), founding dates for more than 80 Sherlockian societies, and other dates of significance in the Sherlockian world; $11.95 postpaid ($12.95 to Canada or $13.95 elsewhere) from William S. Dorn, 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210 <www.TheSherlockStore.com>.
376. The film "The Ninth Gate" is scheduled for release on Dec. 22, but it's not going to be a Christmas-holiday film. Directed by Roman Polanski and starring Johnny Depp and Lena Olin, the film is based on Arturo Perez-Reverte's book THE CLUB DUMAS, which one reviewer called "a cross between Umberto Eco and Anne Rice," and "a beach book for intellectuals." The book is literate and mysterious, and has Canonical echoes, including a woman who says she is Irene Adler; I reported on it earlier (Jun 98 #5), and took far too long to get round to reading (and recommending) it. EL CLUB DUMAS was published in Spain in 1993, and in English in 1997 as THE CLUB DUMAS, and it's available now as a trade paperback (New York: Vintage Books, 1998; 362 pp., $13.00).

377. Marco Zatterin noted last year that Perez-Reverte has said that there are pictures of three people on the table where he works: Stendhal, Dumas, and Basil Rathbone. In an interview with an Italian crime magazine, Perez-Reverte said that "Rathbone represents the real Sherlock Holmes. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was one of the first authors I read, and he is still an important point of reference for me." And as a war correspondent, "Wherever I went, Beirut or Sarajevo, I would take some books with me. By the light of a candle, I was traveling in the world of Sherlock Holmes, or the world of Hans Castorp."
378. And Don Pollock has reported that there are many Sherlockian references in Perez-Reverte's earlier THE FLANDERS PANEL, as well as more subtle references in his later THE SEVILLE COMMUNICATION, whose "whole plot is borrowed from the Canon (though one could make that claim about a large percentage of mysteries...)."
379. The Palm Pilot is a small (hold it in the palm of your hand) computer that is useful for various things, including reading books (as long as you don't mind reading them on a very small screen), and you can download books from the World Wide Web; Cliff Goldfarb reports that the books available at the web-site <www.memoware.com> include Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian titles by Arthur Conan Doyle, and Christopher Morley's THE HAUNTED BOOKSHOP.
380. Carl Heifetz has reported that the Avenue Players Theatre will present Hugh Leonard's play "The Mask of Moriarty" in Tarpon Springs on Nov. 5-20. The box-office is at 324 Pine Street, Tarpon Springs, FL 34689 (727-942-5605).
381. President Clinton has selected Jim Lehrer as one of this year's recipients of the National Humanities Medals. Lehrer, a novelist and playwright as well as the anchor of "The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer" on PBS-TV, provided a quote that every collector ought to memorize, in an essay on the pleasures of collecting, in the Mar. 1990 issue of Smithsonian: describing himself as a world-class collector of depot signs and other memorabilia, Lehrer suggested that collectors are not odd. "We are merely possessed with a need to collect certain things that some people might consider odd."

382. Sep 99 #6: Moonlight Cinema (416 West 3rd Street, London, KY 40741) has an interesting list of old and new Sherlockian and Doylean films on videocassette, with seldom-seen titles such as "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" ["The Sleeping Cardinal"] (1931) with Arthur Wontner, "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1937) with Bruno Guttner, and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1977) with Peter Cook, and a high-quality transfer of "Sherlock Holmes" (1932) with Clive Brook; write to Moonlight for the complete list.
383. Richard Carleton Hacker, author of THE ULTIMATE PIPE BOOK, has celebrated its 15th anniversary with a new title: RARE SMOKE: THE ULTIMATE GUIDE TO PIPE COLLECTING, with thorough coverage of collection 20th-century estate pipes. Rick reports that he includes information on commemorative Sherlock Holmes pipes, and some previously untold stories about his adventures with the late Jeremy Brett. The 288-page book retails for $37.50, and is available from the author (Box 634, Beverly Hills, CA 90213); $42.00 postpaid.
384. Ben Wood (9840 Sucia Circle, Parrish, FL 34219) offer his compact Sherlockian Calendar (Noting Red-Letter Days) for 2000; it measures 5.5 x 4 in. unopened, and costs $2.00 postpaid to U.S. addresses.
385. Masamichi Higurashi is continuing his work on the MEITANTEI HOLMES [HOLMES THE GREAT DETECTIVE] series of translations of the Canon (with four stories in each volume), published by Kodansha with illustrations by Hitoshi Wakana and "Ki". And the first two of Laurie R. King's novels about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes (THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE and A MONSTROUS REGIMENT OF WOMEN) have been translated by Kumiko Yamada and published by Shuisha with cover art by Goro Sasaki (the publisher hopes to do more of the series).
386. "Seers and Believers: A Symposium on Victorian Spiritualism" will be held on Oct. 16 at the Town & Country Club and the Harriet Beecher Stowe Center in Hartford, Connecticut. Hartford's celebrated 19th century community, Nook Farm, was home to several prominent believers (and a few skeptics), including author Harriet Beecher Stowe, theologian Calvin Stowe, suffragist Isabella Beecher Hooker and attorney John Hooker. Additional information is available from the Harriett Beecher Stowe Center, 77 Forst Street, Hartford, CT 06105 (860-522-9258). Reported by Susan Dahlinger, who notes that Wililam Hooker Gillette was born at Nook Farm.
387. George C. Scott died on Sept. 22. He was an award-winning actor on stage, screen, and television (and refused to accept the Oscar he won for "Patton" in 1971). His many great films included "They Might Be Giants" (1971), in which he played Justin Playfair, a psychotic judge who believed that he was Sherlock Holmes (Joanne Woodward was his pyschiatrist, Dr. Mildred Watson).
388. The unveiling of the statue of Sherlock Holmes in front of the Baker Street underground station on Sept. 23 was well received by the Sherlockians who gathered for the event. According a story by T. R. Reid in the Washington Post (Sept. 24), Lord Tugendhat, chairman of Abbey National, noted that his bank was "proud to be associated with the world's greatest fictional detective," and looked stunned when he was booed by the assembled fans.
389. Oct 99 #1: The six days of festivities arranged by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London to celebrate the unveiling of the statue of Sherlock Holmes at the Baker Street underground station on Sept. 23 delighted the large contingent of Sherlockians who assembled from many nations and more than three separate continents, according to accounts from all quarters received. The Guardian noted the ceremony in an editorial, and T. R. Reid had a story in the Washington Post (with a photograph of Joe Moran and a quote from June Kinnee); his story was reprinted in the Houston Chronicle, the Denver Post, and the Japan Times. I'm not aware of other reports in the general media, but I'm sure there will be lots of coverage in the Sherlockian press.
390. "Sherlock Holmes got me to Oxford, says Ukraine girl," was the headline on an article in The Sunday Telegraph, at hand from Garth Hazlett. The girl is Eleonor Suhoivy, who spoke no English when she arrived in England four years ago at the age of 14; she became fluent in English largely through comparing translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories with the originals, she said in an interview, and good grades in her A-levels won her a place at Oxford, where she began her degree course this month.
391. "The book combines the pastoral charms of THE WIND IN THE WILLOWS (1908), the urbanity of James Branch Cabell, the wackiness of Thorne Smith, and the mysticism of a whole pot of Inklings," is the way Paul Di Filippo describes Christopher Morley's WHERE THE BLUE BEGINS (1922) in the June issue of Fantasy & Science Fiction. "Morley's dialogue and characterizations are absolutely brilliant, his touch light and assured," Di Filippo continues, "This quintessentially Jazz Age novel simultaneously encapsulates and transcends its era." The book is great fun to read, and the praise well-deserved.
392. Alexander Orlov has forwarded a long article from the Moskovsky Komsomolets (Sept. 4) by Stanislav Kuvaldin, noting the 20th anniversary of the Russian television series that starred Vasily Livanov and Vitaly Solomin. According to Kuvaldin, Russian Public Television recently commissioned Igor Maslennikov (director of the original series) to produce "Memoirs About Sherlock Holmes" (which will have as its central figure Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, played by Alexei Petrenko).
393. Sorry about that: Bernard Herrmann's credits did not include the score for the 1976 film "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (Sep 99 #4). As noted by David Morrill, the score was written by John Addison. Philip Cornell has noted that Herrmann is reported to have been signed to write the film score, but ill health intervened and he was replaced by Addison. Herrmann does have one Sherlockian film credit: the score for "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951), which is one of the very few films to include a member of The Baker Street Irregulars in the cast.

394. This year's Kennedy Center Honors will be presented on Dec. 4, recognizing the life-long artistic achievements of musician Stevie Wonder, actor Jason Robards, comic pianist Victor Borge, dancer Judith Jamison, and actor Sean Connery, who starred in two films of interest to Sherlockians: "The Molly Maguires" (1970), in which he played Jack Kehoe, and "The Name of the Rose" (1986), in which he was William of Baskerville.
395. Oct 99 #2: THE STRANGE AFFAIR AT GLASTONBURY (Bridgwater: Big House Books, 1999) is Eddie Maguire's fourth pastiche; Holmes and Watson are in Somerset, where a series of apparent practical jokes conceal a far more serious mystery. The 37-page pamphlet costs $10.00 postpaid from Ian Henry Publications (20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England).
396. Our new set of six stamps honor Broadway Songwriters includes one for Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, who wrote together from 1942 into the 1970s, with hits such as "Brigadoon" (1947), "Paint Your Wagon" (1951), "My Fair Lady" (1956), and "Camelot" (1960). And they might have had a Sherlockian connection: according to Maurice Zolotow (BILLY WILDER IN HOLLYWOOD, 1977), Wilder Billy Wilder purchased the rights to the characters from the estate in 1955 for a musical play, with book and lyrics by Lerner, and music by Loewe, but let the option lapse; after the success of the film "Irma La Douce" he tried again, proposing a Technicolor musical film with score by Lerner and Loewe, starring Peter O'Toole as Holmes and Peter Sellers as Watson.
397. Yes, "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951) includes a member of The Baker Street Irregulars in the cast. When the alien spaceship landed in Washington, there were lots of news reports, and one of the reporters was newsman Elmer Davis, played by himself. Elmer Davis was one of the early members of the BSI, and wrote its Constitution and Buy-Laws.
398. And Michael Ross has reported a possible Sherlockian television credit for Bernard Herrmann: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1972), broadcast by ABCTV, starring Stewart Granger as Holmes. According to the 9-10/1988 issue of ARD Magazin, published by the German public television station ARD, the music was written by Herrmann. But he's not mentioned in the credits.
399. The latest issue of The Sherlockian Times, the catalog/journal/newsletter from Classic Specialties, has 28 pages of news and offers of books, audio, and other Sherlockiana; Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 (toll-free 877-233-3823) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>.
400. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine often celebrates Sherlock Holmes' birthday by including something Sherlockian in the issue that's available during the birthday festivities, but that's not the only time that intriguing stories appear in the magazine: Ian Rankin's "The Acid Test" (Aug. 1999) will be of interest to Doyleans as well as Sherlockians.
401. Mark Alberstat's 2000 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
402. Sherlock Hemlock is alive and well, in Singapore (and perhaps other Asian countries), where McDonald's has a tie-in promotion of Sesame Street mini bean pals, 5.5 in. high, that includes a cute little Sherlock Hemlock. And if you're not planning to be in Singapore soon, the mini-bean pals turn up at auction on the Internet at eBay (less than $9.00 postpaid).
403. Oct 99 #3: Plan well ahead: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London Golden Jubilee Cruise is scheduled to the Baltic, departing Harwich around Aug. 23, 2001, for a 12-day voyage with stops at Oslo, Tallin, St. Petersburg, Riga, and Kalliningrad, returning to Harwich through the Kiel Canal. Details are available from Arena Travel, Freepost 1H 1037, Felixstowe, Suffolk IP11 7BR, England <holmes@arenatravel>.
404. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets have reached the 1960s, and one of the new stamps honors Gene Roddenberry's television series "Star Trek". First broadcast in 1966, it led to a series of films; in "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" (1991) Spock says "An ancestor of mine maintained that if you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth."
405. The ancient Jarawa people of the Andaman islands face the threat of extinction because of the spread of disease resulting from the growing links with the outside world, according a story by Rahul Bedi in the Sept. 29 issue of The Telegraph noted by John R. Clark. At least 50 of the 300 or so surviving Jarawa, who live deep in a rain forest and traditionally shun contacts with outsiders, are ill with measles and pneumonia, to which they lack immunity; the outbreaks have followed efforts by local officials to encourage contacts with the tribe. In the 1950s contact groups attempted to woo the Jarawa, leaving them gifts such as bananas and coconuts. Construction of a major road a decade ago led to wider exposure to the outside world. And in 1998, a Jarawa teenager found by police with a broken leg was treated in a hospital in Port Blair. He was fussed over and treated to bangles, sweets, cakes and color television; when he returned home, his tales of his adventures and luxuries prompted others to venture out, seeking modern treats. This week, six Jarawa boys, naked and armed with bows and arrows, stopped all vehicles on the road passing through their reserve, located about 50 miles north of Port Blair. Slapping their bellies and mumbling the Hindi word for "hunger", they lunged at all packages, presuming they contained food, before police chased them away. Local officials now advise travelers passing through the Jarawa reserve to carry bananas and biscuits to appease them. This has upset anthropologists, who demand more positive measures to preserve the tribe.
406. Les Klinger has forwarded a report in Daily Variety (Sept. 23) that Centropolis Entertainment ("Independence Day" and "Godzilla") has purchased an option to produce a Victorian thriller "Cast of Characters" from a script written by Larry Cohen. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson (and other characters from the Canon) are involved in the story.
407. The 50-minute BBC documentary "Queen Mary's Dolls' House" was produced by the BBC in 1989 ("tour the sumptuous rooms and enchanting garden in this miracle of miniature craftsmanship"), but when it was issued on videocassette (Oct 90 #5) there was no report that it showed the manuscript of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "How Watson Learned the Trick" (specially written for the library). Frank Darlington now confirms that the manuscript is indeed shown in the documentary, which is available ($24.20 postpaid) from Discovery Channel Video (Box 4055, Santa Monica, CA 90411) (800-207-5775); it's item E1788 in their catalog.
408. Oct 99 #4: Further to the report (Apr 98 #3) about Sherlock and Morse (the pedigreed bloodhounds working for the Essex police), the dogs are doing quite well, according to a story in The Sunday Times (Sept. 19), at hand from John Baesch: in one case, Sherlock followed a 13-day-old trail (German shepherds with the same training were able to follow trails only up to 48 hours old). and in another case Sherlock found a smash-and-grab raider in Harwich, following the trail down several roads and eventually identifying the thief's house even though he had driven home after the raid.
409. Jerry Margolin reports that Disney has celebrated the videocassette re-release of "The Great Mouse Detective" by adding Basil, Dr. Dawson, Olivia, and Ratigan to their "mini bean bags" line, available in Disney stores, or by phone (800-237-5751), or at the Disney web-site <www.disneystore.com>; the mini beans are about 4" high, and cost $6.00 each or $24.00 for the set of four (item 20078WW).
410. Boston University is planning an Alumni College in the Swiss Alps on Sept. 17-25, 2000, Scott Monty reports, and one of the long list of attractions is: "Walk through the Rosenloui Gorge, with lunch under the glacier. Then, view the Reichenbach Falls of Sherlock Holmes fame." There's no need to be affiliated with the university, Scott notes, and you can request a brochure with much more information from: Alumni Travel Program, Boston University, 599 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, MA 02215 (800-800-3466) <alumtrav@bu.edu>.

411. The 20 stamps in our new "Insects & Spiders" set have a nice assortment of them, and there are many mentions of flies, butterflies, beetles, and spiders in the Canon. And there is one mention of a bug-hunter (in "The Three Garridebs"), providing a nice excuse to show an assassin bug ("this predator, which hunts from ambush, feeds on many insects including bees," according to the U.S. Postal Service's note on the back of the stamp).
412. Trevor Raymond notes that Simon Callow now is a CBE (Companion of the Order of the British Empire); he is a director and an actor (he played Inspector Lestrade in Charlton Heston's "The Crucifer of Blood" on TNT cable in 1991, and Sherlock Holmes in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" on BBC Radio 4 and in "The Unopened Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" on BBC Radio 5 in 1993, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in a one-man play "In Defence of Fairies" in London in 1997), and his fine biography of another Sherlockian actor (ORSON WELLES: THE ROAD TO XANADU) was published in 1995.
413. Trevor also reports that Tim Kelly's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be produced by the Mystery Company at the Lancaster Opera House on Jan. 14-23, 2000. The box-office address is 21 Central Avenue, Lancaster, NY 14086 (716-683-1776).
414. George MacDonald Fraser's FLASHMAN AND THE TIGER, AND OTHER EXTRACTS FROM THE FLASHMAN PAPERS (London: HarperCollins, 1999; 320 pp., £16.99) offers the first (and long-awaited) book appearance of the story first published in the Daily Express, Sept. 29-Oct. 3, 1975. It's a delightful tale: the "tiger" is Colonel Sebastian Moran, with whom Flashman had three encounters (this being the third, in an empty house in Baker Street in 1894).
415. Oct 99 #5: Richard B. Shull ("An Actor and a Rare One") died on Oct. 14. Dick was a fine actor indeed, on stage and screen and television (N.Y. Times theater critic Frank Rich once praised him as "that amusing character actor who looks like a bloated fish"), and he performed with wit and humor at many of the annual dinners of the Baker Street Irregulars. He was director of the North American Araucania Royalist Society, a knight of the Sovereign Military Order of the Temple of Jerusalem and of the Orthodox Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and a member of the Society of the Colonial Wars, the Veterans Corps of Artillery, the Military Society of the War of 1812, the Colonial Order of the Acorn, the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, the Honorary Order of Kentucky Colonels, Washington Irving's St. Nicholas Society, the Dutch Treat Club, and (since 1986) the BSI.
416. The ninth volume of The Shoso-in Bulletin, edited by Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes and published by The Men with the Twisted Konjo, has 201 pages of articles, essays, pastiches, parodies, verse, and artwork contributed from Asia, Australia, Europe, and the United States, all in English and as usual nicely done. $12.00 postpaid from Classic Specialties, Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219 <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>; credit-card orders welcome.
417. Another report of Lion's Manes on display in the U.S.: according to Mark Andersen, there are several (small) specimens on view at the Birch Aquarium at Scripps in San Diego.
418. Stu Shiffman's "The Game Is Afoot!" artwork is available (white on purple) on T-shirts (size XL only) for $20.00 postpaid; his address is 8616 Linden Avenue North, Seattle, WA 98103. If you're interested in other colors or other sizes, or in polo shirts or caps, just let Stu know <roscoe10@home.com>.
419. The ninth Sherlockian book this year from the Pequod Press is BAKER STREET ANTICS, in which (as John Ruyle reports) he sheds poetic new light on dark corners. Hand-set and hand-printed; $40.00 each (cloth) or $20.00 (paper), and his address is 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.
420. Jean Shepherd died on Oct. 16. He was one of America's greatest humorists, described by Marshall McLuhan as "the first radio novelist," and in 1956 he began a 21-year career on WOR-AM (New York), creating an audience of "night people" that stretched from Canada to Florida. In 1969 he introduced the broadcast of "The Priory School" by Chris Steinbrunner and other members of The Priory Scholars of Fordham on WFUV-FM, and when he visited the Okefenokee Swamp in Georgia for his television series "Jean Shepherd's America" on PBS-TV in 1985, he happily reported that the mists reminded him of Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles.
421. Further to the report (Jun 99 #1) on the campaign to raise funds for David Cornell's life-size bronze statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Crowborough, the Crowborough Conan Doyle Trust offers 34.5 cm. bronze maquettes (£890) and bronze-resin maquettes (£390), according to a flier at hand from David Rush. A leaflet is available from the Trust (The Town Hall, The Broadway, Crowborough, East Sussex TX6 1DA, England).
422. Oct 99 #6: The Oct. 1999 issue of Hayakawa's Mystery Magazine offers the Japanese a nice variety of Sherlockiana in Japanese: original stories, pastiches by Jacques Futrelle, Laurie R. King, John T. Lescroart, articles by Paul Chapman and Kathryn White from Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine, and an excerpt from DINING WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Julia Carlson Rosenblatt and Frederic H. Sonnenschmidt; many of the translations are by Masamichi Higurashi, who also contributed an article on "Holmes Never Dies: A Guide to Overseas Books and Events".
423. Daniel Stashower will be in Toronto on Nov. 7, at the Beeton Auditorium at the Toronto Reference Library (789 Yonge Street) at 1:00 pm, reading from his biography TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE; there's no charge for the event, which has been arranged by the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. And Victoria Gill, curator of the collection will display and discuss some of the collection's treasures.
424. The Practical, But Limited Geologists met at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver on Oct. 27, for a dinner honoring the world's first forensic geologist, during the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America, and we were welcomed by Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients. Our next dinners will be in New Orleans in April, and in Reno in November, and in Denver and Boston in 2001 (there is a tentative possibility that there will be a formal session on forensic geology at the GSA annual meeting in Boston).
425. Sarah Andrews was at the GSA meeting to sign copies of BONE HUNTER ("a mystery featuring forensic geologist Em Hansen, the dust jacket notes); it's Sarah's fifth mystery novel, and it's a fine one (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 1999; 340 pp., $24.95).
426. Donald W. Marshall died on Apr. 20, 1999. He joined the editorial staff of the New York World in 1926, and worked for the New York Times from 1931 to his retirement in 1959, and he was a member of the faculty at the Columbia School of Journalism, and for many years a distinguished member of The Five Orange Pips (in which his title, appropriately, was "Horace Harker").
427. Our new 40c stamp shows the Rio Grande, and can be used to send postcards to Mexico. "To the right of the Sierra Blanco -- so we shall reach the Rio Grande," said one of the Mormons (in "A Study in Scarlet"), creating considerable confusion for Sherlockian geographers.
428. Richard Wein reports that Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481) (800-544-7297) <www.bitsandpieces.com> offers two new mystery jigsaw puzzles in "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (the puzzle pictures help you solve the crimes); "The Watson Inheritance" and "The Case of the Fallen Actress" are $10.95 each (or $17.90 for the pair) (or $29.95 for the four most recent puzzles). Great for meeting prizes, Richard notes.
429. Trish Prehn's attractive painting of the sitting-room at 221B is available as a full-color print (18 x 14.5"), accompanied by a key to the stories in which things are mentioned; $67.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($70.00 elsewhere), and her address is 312-B West 34th Street, Austin, TX 78705 (512-302-4064) A postcard-size reproduction is available on request.
430. Oct 99 #7: Sherlock Holmes' 146th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 14, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the celebration actually begins on Thursday afternoon, with The Morley-Montgomery Reception (by invitation only) honoring winners and this year's recipient of the award for the best paper published in The Baker Street Journal each year, and recent contributors to the BSI. And the BSI Distinguished Speaker

- Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club at 24 East 39th Street (between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Michael Dirda, a winner of the Pulitzer Prize for criticism and the senior editor of the Washington Post's Book World ($10.00; seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early; details below). Then there's time for supper and theater, and this time there will be some Sherlockian theater:
431. There are plans for a New York production of David Stuart Davies' one-man play "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act!", which has been performed by Roger Llewellyn on tour in the provinces and in London this year. If all goes well, there will be performances on Thursday and Saturday evenings, somewhere, and possibly also on Sunday morning. And (sorry) there's no firm information yet on the venue or prices, which will be available soon from Mike Whelan (see below).
432. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the hotel provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend each day (and pay $15.00; details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $36.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
433. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 800 Seventh Avenue (at 52nd Street); $55.50 (Maribeau Briggs, 46 East 29th Street #2-R, New York, NY 10016) <www.homestead.com/baskervillebash/BB.html>. Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
434. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103) and 125 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
435. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in a dealers room on the 2nd floor of the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street, from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; for information on vendor tables, contact Ralph Hall, 2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218 (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com>. The BSI annual reception, which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Third and Park Avenues); open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the cost is $35.00 (details below) or $45.00 at the door.

436. Oct 99 #8: The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at $195.00 a night (Tuesday through Sunday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI (the special rate is the equivalent of $170.00 plus tax). Other charges (room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians; contact the Algonquin directly (and don't delay), and ask for the Baker Street Irregulars rate (212-840-6800).
437. And here are the details: you can request a reservation form for the Thursday lecture, the Martha Hudson breakfast, the Saturday reception, and the David Stuart Davies play, from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; the forms will be mailed to you by mid-November.
438. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. You should ask for weekend specials, or winter promotional rates, and if you plan to arrive on Thursday, you should confirm the rates, and that the weekend rates include Thursday. Portland Square (132 West 47th St.): $99 (single) $109 (double) (212-382-0600); Quality Hotel (59 West 46th St.): $99 (and up) $139 (suite) (senior discounts available); Gershwin (7 East 27th St.): $127 (212-545-8000); St. Moritz (50 Central Park South): $125 (212-752-7760); Grand Hyatt Grand Central (42nd St. at Park Ave.): $139 (212-883-1234). And Mary Ellen recommends <www.hotres.com> as a website for economy-rate hotels in New York.
439. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; the checks are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.
440. Norman S. Nolan ("Godfrey Norton") died on Oct. 17, 1999. Norm was first an engineer, and then a doctor, and a ringleader in Sherlockian affairs in New Jersey, where he was the sparking-plug of The Scandalous Bohemians and The Ostlers, and among the Baker Street Irregulars (for whom he began the tradition of providing identification keys to the photographs of the annual dinners) (and from whom he received his Investiture in 1972). He also was an energetic collector, and one of the few fortunate Sherlockians to own a Canonical manuscript ("Black Peter").
441. Congratulations to Steve Rothman, who will take over as editor of The Baker Street Journal with the March 2000 issue. Manuscripts, letters, and other BSJ submissions can now be sent to: Steven Rothman, 220 West Rittenhouse Square #15-D, Philadelphia, PA 19103.

442. Nov 99 #1: Snoo Wilson's one-man play "In Defence of Fairies" was performed by Simon Callow in London in December 1997, in association with an exhibition of "Victorian Fairy Painting" at the Royal Academy of Arts. Wilson was at the time reported to be writing a play about Conan Doyle, and the play (titled "Moonshine" opened in London in October. "Guaranteed to empty Hampstead Theatre faster than a powerful laxative," Michael Billington wrote in The Guardian (Oct. 27), "it already has the makings of a myth, and, as with any play that sinks in the water, one wonders why anyone thought it seaworthy in the first place." The play stars Robin Soans as Conan Doyle, who meets a sun god Abraxas (played by Ian Gelder); Abraxas has spawned the monstrous Moloch, an Australian media magnate, who is planning to destroy Earth with a meteorite unless Abraxas takes on the guise of Sherlock Holmes, with Conan Doyle as his doggedly faithful Watson. The play was scheduled to close on Nov. 13.
443. Tess Connors notes that Blackstone Audio has added two Canonical titles to its list of unabridged books on audiocassettes. Both are read by Frederick Davidson: "A Study in Scarlet" is on 3 cassettes ($23.95 purchase or $8.95 rental) and "His Last Bow" is on 5 cassettes ($39.95/$10.95). The address is Box 969, Ashland, OR 97520) (800-729-2665) <black@blackstoneaudio.com> <www.blackstoneaudio.com>
444. "Griffin, Dis to Investigate 'Holmes'" was the headline on a story in the Hollywood Reporter (Oct. 12), spotted by Nancy Beiman. Buena Vista Motion Picture Group is developing a feature film about a streetwise American private eye on assignment in Britain as a starring vehicle for comedian Eddie Griffin (who stars in the UPN sitcom "Malcolm & Eddie" and recently wrapped a Disney comedy "Deuce Bigelow: Male Gigolo". In the script by Colby Carr ("Blank Check"), when the American detective arrives in Britain, he is assigned a stuffy Englishman as his partner, and the two opposites must learn to work together to solve a crime. It's not very Sherlockian, of course. And one wonders what Walt would say when he learned that Disney had made a comedy about a male gigolo . . .
445. George V. Higgins died on Nov 6. He was a crime novelist best known for THE FRIENDS OF EDDIE COYLE (1972), and an assistant United States attorney for the district of Massachusetts, and a newspaper columnist. In 1985 he reviewed Granada's dramatization of "The Crooked Man" for the Wall Street Journal, noting that Jeremy Brett was "unsettlingly good," but complaining about some of Granada's changes in the stories: "I have some reservations

- about such alterations, dramatically desirable as they may be," he wrote. "Watching Sherlock Holmes bound around like Jimi Hendrix in a frock coat doesn't delight me. This Holmes should be detoxed."
446. "Nero Wolfe: The Doorbell Rang" was broadcast by ABC-TV in 1979, starring Thayer David as Nero Wolfe and Tom Mason as Archie Goodwin. And now "The Golden Spiders" is being filmed for A&E cable, with Maury Chaykin as Wolfe and Timothy Hutton as Goodwin. Winnifred Lewis has an informative report on her visit to the set, on the web at <www.geocities.com/Athens/8907/nero\_tgs.html>, and Walter Doherty has suggested to the Nero Wolfe electronic mailing list that the film is likely to air early next year.
447. Nov 99 #2: Reported: Wayne Worcester's THE MONSTER OF ST. MARYLEBONE: THE JOURNALS OF DR. WATSON (New York: New American Library/Signet, 1999; 272 pp., $5.95); "A madman is terrorizing London's St. Marylebone district and Scotland Yard is clueless, but when Sherlock Holmes himself is injured by the killer, Dr. Watson is forced to step in to investigate."
448. Further to the item (Sep 99 #1) on the BBC's "Blood Line" (about Joe Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle): according to new reports, at hand from Jon Lellenberg, the big-budget period drama will air in two parts on BBC-2 next year, with Ian Richardson as Bell, Robin Laing as Conan Doyle, and Charles Dance as hospital patron Sir Henry Carlyle.
449. Nancy Beiman also spotted a report in the Hollywood Reporter (Nov. 5) that Columbia Pictures has purchased Michael Valle's script for "Sherlock Holmes and the Vengeance of Dracula" for production by the Mutual Film Co. "Filmmaker Chris Columbus may come on board to develop and direct the project, which is described as an action-adventure-horror film in the vein of 'The Mummy'" (Chris Columbus directed the 1998 film "Stepmom" with Julia Roberts and Susan Sarandon, and wrote the screenplay for the 1985 film "Young Sherlock Holmes").
450. Stephen Davies reported to the Gaslight mailing list on the Geminis (those are the Canadian television awards): among the winners was Meredith Henderson, who received award (for best performer in a series about children or youth) for the series "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes". The series ran for three seasons in Canada, and started in Britain earlier this year, but no longer airs in the United States. There's an excellent fan web-site at <www.ozemail.com.au/~damonjf/shirley\_holmes/>, and in case you've been wondering, at the end of the third season Shirley found and rescued her longlost mother. And Peter Calamai reports that shows for a fourth season have been filmed and are in post-production; the new episodes will air in Canada on YTV cable beginning in February.
451. The weekly syndicated radio series "Imagination Theater" continues to air 22-minute Sherlock Holmes programs written by Jim French (Apr 99 #3). A dozen Sherlockian shows will have aired by the end of the year, and they are available (along with many other shows) on cassette or CD ($7.99 each postpaid) from TransMedia, 719 Battery Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 (800-229-7234) <www.transmediasf.com> (credit-card orders welcome).
452. There's still time to consider a triple play that's reminiscent of Tinkersto-Evers-to-Chance (although this one covers more distance: Copenhagen-to-London-to-New York). You can attend three different Sherlockian events in three different countries in one week: the 50th-anniversary dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark at the Hotel Ascot on Jan. 7, the annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London at Lincoln's Inn on Jan. 8, and the birthday festivities in New York beginning on Jan. 13. Details on Copenhagen are available from Bjarne Nielsen (Sherlock Holmes Museet, Agade 3, DK-4500 Nykobing Sjælland, Denmark) <sherlock@sherlockiana.net>; on London from Pamela Bruxner (2-B Hiham Green, Winchelsea, East Sussex TN36 4HB, England) <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>, and on New York in my newsletter (Oct 99 #7) <members.home.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm> and from Michael F. Whelan (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278).
453. Nov 99 #3: Watson & the Sherlocks contribute two tracks ("Funky Walk" and "Standing on the Corner" to a CD called "All Night Soul Stomp!" (STOMP-S-4001) available for $14.75 postpaid from Midheaven Mailorder, 2525 16th Street (3rd floor), San Francisco, CA 94103 <www.midheaven.com>; the 24 tracks on the disk are soul dance and stomp, mainly from the mid 1960s.
454. "ABC has green-lighted a script for a drama series called 'Holmes & Watson' in which Sherlock Holmes and his partner, Dr. John H. Watson, are now private eyes working the Venice Beach area of Southern California," Lisa de Moraes noted in the Washington Post (Nov. 2). The project is "in development," so there's no further comment from ABC, but yes, Venice Beach is the place where all those people flex all those muscles, and we may get to see the series next year.
455. Brad Keefauver reports that the comic book SCOOBY-DOO #30 (Jan. 2000, from DC Comics, $1.99) features a cover that has young Fred as Sherlock Holmes, and a story ("Spring-Heeled Jack") that takes place in "The Sherlock Holmes Gallery".
456. Reported from Britain: THE INTELLIGENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by John Radford (Sigma Forlag, £9.95); "in which the author, a distinguished psychologist, charges through the Holmesian oeuvre asking intriguing questions." ATLAS OF THE EUROPEAN NOVEL, 1900-1900, by Franco Moretti (Verso, £12.00): "this is a book which makes maps out of where books are set" and a map of Holmes' investigations shows that murders in Sherlock Holmes' London were far more likely in the best, rather than the worst, neighborhoods.
457. Bill Dorn offers wristwatches with portraits of Holmes and Watson (in men's and women's sizes) for $24.95 postpaid ($25.95 to Canada, $26.95 overseas); an illustrated flier is available from William S. Dorn, 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210 <www.TheSherlockStore.com>.
458. Bob Hess has a new sales-list of interesting Sherlockiana (posters, pins, postcards, statues, dolls, and much more); available on request from Robert C. Hess, 559 Potter Boulevard, Brightwaters, NY 11718 (631-665-8365) <two21baker@aol.com>.
459. Ev Herzog spotted some attractive poly-resin Victorian figurines at a CVS store; they're made by Lemax Village Collections (25 Pequot Way, Canton, MA 02021), and are about 2" high, and they show people wreath-hanging, treetrimming, snowman-building, street music-making, etc., and two of the sets echo "The Blue Carbuncle": "The Christmas Goose" has a small tree, a frockcoated gent with an unplucked white goose in a basket, and a bonneted lady with shopping baskets ($2.99); and "The Turkey Seller" has a poulterer with plucked fowl, a young lady with a shopping basket, and a young lad ($4.99).
460. Stu Shiffman spotted a press release from Pizza Hut (Nov. 4) that reported that "Dr. Seuss Tops Governors' Favorite Book Survey" (Pizza Hut sponsors a program that offers free pizza to children in elementary schools and childcare centers as an incentive for reading). Nine governors listed Dr. Seuss books as their favorite childhood reading, THE LITTLE ENGINE THAT COULD and TREASURE ISLAND were named by five governors each, and one governor (John Engler of Michigan) included SHERLOCK HOLMES on his list.
461. Nov 99 #4: Christopher Roden has news from Britain: Christopher Frayling, who presented the television series "Nightmare: The Birth of Victorian Horror" on A&E cable in 1996 (broadcast by the BBC as "Nightmare: The Birth of Horror" in 1997), is working with Penguin on a new Complete Sherlock Holmes with introductions and annotations. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is one of the first volumes planned, and will be out next year.
462. When you visit the Antarctic (and you certainly can, even as a tourist) you might want to visit Cape Evans, where you can see the world's southernmost copy of a book by Arthur Conan Doyle: THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, which was brought there by Robert Falcon Scott in 1910, in the small hut from which Scott set off on an ill-fated attempt to reach the South Pole. Scott had led an earlier expedition to the Antarctic, in 1901-04, and his third lieutenant then was Ernest Shackleton (who, fortunately for Shackleton, was not a member of Scott's second

- expedition). But Shackleton did return to the Antarctic, and in 1914-16 he led an expedition that is the subject of one of the greatest stories of exploration ever told.
463. That story's at the heart of an exhibition about "The Endurance: Shackleton's Legendary Antarctic Expedition" at the National Geographic Society's Explorers Hall in Washington (through Feb. 6); it's well worth seeing, as it was last year in New York (May 99 #5).
464. Gene Levitt died on Nov. 15. He was a journalist, and served as a Marine in World War II, and then became a writer, director, and producer in radio and television (with credits for "Barnaby Jones" and "Hawaii Five-O"); his biggest success was the series he created in 1978: "Fantasy Island" (which in 1982 included a segment called "Save Sherlock Holmes" that starred Peter Lawford as Holmes, Donald O'Connor as Watson, and Mel Ferrer as Moriarty).
465. R & E Pipes (219 Patterson Place, Alton, IL 62002) <www.re-pipes.com> offer a 221B Series of their own blends of pipe tobacco: Black Shag ($6.30 for 50 grams) and Arcadia ($8.75 for 50 grams); a price-list of pipes and tobacco is available on request.
466. The 19th annual Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium (Mar. 10-12 in Fairborn, Ohio) has launched a pastiche contest (and you don't need to register for the symposium to enter the contest); the deadline for pastiches is Feb. 15, and more information (about the symposium and the contest) is available from Greg Sullivan (39 Sherwood Avenue, Danvers, MA 01923) <greg.sullivan@ae.ge.com>.
467. Ronald B. De Waal's latest bibliography is rather shorter than THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES: it's an annotated list of all his published writings and awards, Sherlockian and otherwise; eight pages, $2.00 postpaid ($3.00 overseas) from Ron (638 12th Avenue, Salt Lake City, UT 84103).
468. "Sherlock Holmes: Consulting Detective" was first a board game (Dec 81 #3) and then a CD-ROM disk game (Dec 91 #1), and now it's a DVD game (from DVD International, $25.00); according to a Los Angeles Times review (Nov. 17), at hand from Willis Frick, "It's a great concept and fun for a while, but the production values are almost nil, and the performers playing Holmes and Watson are strictly elementary when it comes to acting talent."
469. Nov 99 #5: THE TRAGEDY OF ERRORS AND OTHERS is the first new Ellery Queen book in almost 30 years, Doug Greene has reported, offering a long and detailed plot outline for the last (and unpublished) Ellery Queen novel, six hitherto uncollected EQ short stories, and a section of reminiscences written by family, friends, and others (one of whom is Bill Vande Water, who has contributed an essay on "Frederic Dannay, BSI"). The cloth edition is already exhausted, but the trade paperback costs $18.25 postpaid from Crippen & Landru, Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 <www.crippenlandru.com>.
470. MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Carol-Lynn Waugh (New York: Berkley Prime Crime, 1999; 262 pp., $21.95), is an excellent sequel to HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAY (Nov 96 #2); the eleven stories are all originals, and of course seasonal, and the authors include Anne Perry, Daniel Stashower, Peter Lovesey, L. B. Greenwood, Jon L. Breen, Barbara Paul, and Edward D. Hoch.
471. Andy Peck and Laura Kuhn report that MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS also is available in a Mystery Guild edition, discounted to $10.98. And that Annette Meyers' FREE LOVE is discounted to $11.98 (from $23.95); private investigator Harry Melville is known as "Sherlock" and has a group similar to the Baker Street Irregulars called the Hudson Dusters. The Mystery Guild address is Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.MysteryGuild.com>.
472. THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: ORIGINAL STORIES BY EMINENT MYSTERY WRITERS was a fine celebration of the centenary (Sep 87 #6); the new (and expanded) edition, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Carol-Lynn Rossel Waugh, and Jon L. Lellenberg (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1999; 404 pp., $13.95), offers the stories in the original edition (by authors such as Lillian de la Torre and Stephen King) and three new tales (by Daniel Stashower, Bill Crider, and Anne Perry). There's no overlap between the stories in this volume and in MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, by both books are recommended to those who enjoyed well-written Sherlockian pastiches.
473. "There's a bunch of detective stories that have been important to me," Jake Kasdan told an interviewer, "and Sherlock Holmes is certainly among them." Kasdan wrote and directed the film "Zero Effect" (1998), with Bill Pullman as a dysfunctional and emotionally-handicapped detective named Daryl Zero, and Ben Stiller as his sidekick Steve Arlo (Mar 98 #1); it has been in the video shops for a while, and it's now on television, and it has quite a few Canonical echoes.
474. Bruce Beaman reports that Barnes & Noble <www.bn.com> offers some attractive Sherlockian prints and posters: you select the design you want, and it is shipped to you printed on paper ($19.95) or canvas ($99.00 and up). You may also be able to see the artwork (and Sherlock Holmes is only one of the many categories available) at Barnes & Noble stores.
475. Dorothy R. Shaw died on Nov. 24. She was the widow of John Bennett Shaw, toasted by the Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1974, and she received the BSI's Queen Victoria Medal in 1995. She created the magnificent miniature of 221 Baker Street (the entire building) now on permanent display at the Special Collections at the University of Minnesota, and happily welcomed (and put up with) the many pilgrims who journeyed to visit their home in Santa Fe.
476. Nov 99 #6 The Pleasant Places of Florida have a new lapel pin, with the society logo and name, in orange, blue, and black on gold, and the cost is $12.00 postpaid ($13.00 outside North America) from Wanda Dow, 1737 Santa Anna Drive, Dunedin, FL 34690. And their new round-robin pastiche "The Adventure of the Glorious Scot" costs $6.00 postpaid from Carl Heifetz, 3693 Siena Lane, Palm Harbor, FL 34685.
477. Don Izban notes in the latest issue of the SBIOS Post that the quadrennial meeting of the Colonel Sebastian Moran Secret Gun Club on Feb. 29 (Aug 99 #2) will include another Hunt for the Mongoose Named Moriarty ("no greater sport," Don writes); details are available from Nancy Wrobel, 7998 Garfield Avenue, Burr Ridge, IL 60521.
478. "New Life for Noted Lions?" was the headline on an Associated Press story by Sue Leeman in the Philadelphia Inquirer (Nov. 26). The noted lions are Barbary or Atlas lions, and the Port Lympne Wildlife Park in Kent (England) and Oxford University's Wildlife Conservation Unit hope that hybrid descendants of Barbary lions in the King of Morocco's zoo in Rabat can be used to breed a new Barbary line that can be restored to the wild. Sahara King (in "The Veiled Lodger") was a North African lion, and the breed was recorded as extinct in the wild in the 1930s (killed by the likes of Count Negretto Sylvius). They were larger (and fiercer) than the lions of East Africa and South Africa, with spectacular black manes on the males, as members of The Red Circle of Washington know from their "Cat House Picnic" at the National Zoo in June 1977: the National Zoo had bred them back from hybrids, but did not maintain the experiment. But Morocco has now earmarked 98,000 acres of land in the Atlas Mountains as a potential refuge, and local Berber people hope that Barbary lions will become a tourist attraction there.
479. Stephen Kendrick's "A Sherlock Way of Knowing: Five Spiritual Teachings of a Fictional Detective" was published in the Nov.-Dec. issue of World: The Journal of the Unitarian Universalist Association; the article is adapted from his book HOLY CLUES: THE GOSPEL ACCORDING THE SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 99 #1). The magazine costs $4.50, and the address is Lock Box 5971, Boston, MA 02206 <www.uua.org/world>.
480. An addendum to the birthday-festivities forecast: Susan Rice notes that the Friends of Bogie's (Andrew Joffe, Susan Montague, and Paul Singleton) will (as in years past) present original theatrics at the Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Restaurant on Jan. 14. The luncheon costs $36.00; details are available from Susan at 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 <rice-fromkin@worldnet.att.net>.

481. The BBC television mini-series "Clouds of Witness" (with Ian Carmichael as Lord Peter Wimsey) was produced by the BBC in 1972 and broadcast here in an age when VCRs were not ubiquitous. And now it's available on cassette (on five NTSC cassettes, actually, about 45 minutes each); the boxed set costs $59.95 (plus $8.95 shipping, for a total of $68.90) from Signals, but I am happy to offer one boxed set, viewed once only, at a discount: $50.00 postpaid (first come, first served).
482. Dec 99 #1: A last-minute addition to the birthday festivities: The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both P. G. Wodehouse and John H. Watson will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent gathering) at the Hotel Algonquin on Saturday, Jan. 15, at 12:30 pm (possibly in the lobby, or elsewhere, depending on how many people show up). If you're planning to attend, please let Anne Cotton know (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@mediaone.net>.
483. And Judith Freeman reports that Spinning in Their Graves Productions will present staged readings of "The Sign of the Four" at 8:00 pm on Thursday, Jan. 13, and Saturday, Jan. 15, at the Theater at St. Clements at 423 West 46th Street (212-613-3023); $15.00.
484. The fall issue of The Cormorant's Ring (published by The Trained Cormorants of Long Beach and edited by Jim Coffin) offers a nice mix of material, including Don Hardenbrook on "Sherlock Holmes and Raffles", Rick Mattingley on John LaBarbera's Sherlockian jazz, and John Farrell on Sherlock Holmes' musical tastes. $7.00 a year (two issues), and back issues are available; Jim's address is 6570 East Paseo Alcazaa, Anaheim Hills, CA 92807.
485. Plan ahead: the Bimetallic Question has announced their Second Bimetallic Colloquium, to be held at McGill University in Montreal on June 2-4, 2000. Details are available from the society (Box 883, Stock Exchange Tower, Montreal, QC H5Z 1K2, Canada) <wilfrid@defreitasbooks.com>.
486. Mike Ockrent died on Dec. 2. He began his theatrical career as a director in Perth, Scotland, moving to London in the late 1970s and then to New York where he was nominated for three Tonys (for his direction and work on the score and book) of a revival of "Me and My Girl" in 1986, and for another Tony as director of Ken Ludwig's "Crazy for You" in 1992. And it was in Perth, in 1971, that he directed Joan Knight's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles".
487. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine celebrates Sherlock Holmes' birthday in its Feb. issue, with cover art by Keith Richens Hauff, a new pastiche ("The Adventure of the Cipher in the Sand") by Edward D. Hoch, and a poem ("Shaggy Dog") by Dennis Upper.
488. Ev Herzog reports that the ENGLISH PUBS 2000 CALENDAR (Browntrout, $12.00) shows (for October) an interior view of The Sherlock Holmes in London. And there's lots of Victorian (though not Sherlockian) atmosphere in an ADVENT CALENDAR MUSICAL VICTORIAN STREET SCENE ($14.95) and a MILLENNIUM CALENDAR 2000 ($14.95) in a catalog from Past Times (7201-A Intermodal Drive, Louisville, KY 40258) (800-621-6020) <www.past-times.com>. Past Times also offers a Millennium Party Pack of eight masks ($12.95), one of which (eyes up) is Sherlock Holmes in standard deerstalker.
489. Sherlock Holmes was Entertainment Weekly's sleuth of the week in their Dec. 10 issue: Focusfilm Entertainment has announced that it will release four fully-restored Basil Rathbone films on DVD early next year, with extra material that will include the filmed interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
490. Dec 99 #2: Stu Shiffman reports that in January the Kellogg Co. will make new Sesame Street mini-bean toys available in specially-marked boxes of cereal: four toys (including Sherlock Hemlock) will be available in Apple Jacks and in Honey Crunch Corn Flakes. "This will be a hot crosscategory promotion for those collecting cereal boxes and premiums as well as Sesame Street items. There will also be special games, quizzes and cutout-and-color versions of the Sesame Street buildings."
491. Judith Freeman edits an occasional newsletter ("Pound Notes") with information about the Baskerville Bash, and other items of Sherlockian interest; if you'd like to be on her mailing list, she's at 280 9th Avenue #1-C, New York, NY 10001 <judith-freeman@worldnet.att.net>.
492. Madeline Kahn died on Dec. 3. She was a wonderful comedian, nominated for Oscars in as Trixie Delight in "Paper Moon" (1973) and as Lili von Shtupp in "Blazing Saddles" (1994), and was once described (as her obituary in the N.Y. Times noted) as "a Botticelli angel cracking a malicious grin." And Sherlockians will remember her as a delightful Jenny in Gene Wilder's "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
493. "Black Shag" was the first in a "221B Series" of pipe tobaccos from the McClelland Tobacco Co. (Jun 99 #4), and the second is "Arcadia" ($9.25 for a 50g tin), offered in a catalog from Georgetown Tobacco (3144 M Street NW, Washington, DC 20007 (800-345-1459) <www.gttobacco.com>. They also have "Full Virginia Flake" from Samuel Gawaith & Co. in England ($8.95 for a 50g tin). Both may also be available from your local tobacconist.
494. David Bradley reports that John Chaffin's dramatizations will continue next year with "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at Chaffin's Barn Dinner Theatre, Aug. 29 through Oct. 21, 2000 (8204 Highway 100, Nashville, TN 37221) (800-282-2276) <www.dinnertheatre.com>.
495. BURIED BLUEPRINTS: MAPS AND SKETCHES OF LOST WORLD AND MYSTERIOUS PLACES, by Albert Lorenz with Joy Schleh (New York: Harry N. Abrams, 1999; $19.95), offers imaginative views of 14 places, some real and some imaginary, from The Garden of Eden to Dinosaur Island (the Lost World of Arthur Conan Doyle rather than Michael Crichton).
496. Edward Lear reports that Sherlock Holmes is shown on the front of (and one assumes also on at least some of its pages) the N.Y. Public Library's THE 2000 366-DAY MYSTERY LOVER'S CALENDAR ($10.95).
497. Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh has received a temporary reprieve, thanks to a campaign by Doyleans and Sherlockians to thwart plans to demolish the building so that McDonald's could build a restaurant on the site. In the 1860s the house was owned by the sister of historian John Hill Burton, and Arthur Conan Doyle lived there when he was five to seven years old. Historic Scotland (a government agency) now has six months to decide whether the house should be added to a statutory list of buildings of architectural or historic interest. "Sherlock Holmes still has his magic, it seems," Richard Lancelyn Green told a reporter for the Associated Press.
498. Dec 99 #3: "It is not eight o'clock, and a Wagner night at Covent Garden!" Holmes said to Watson (in "The Red Circle"). The first Covent Garden opera house opened in 1728 (with John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera"), and the current Royal Opera House was built in 1858; it closed for reconstruction in July 1997, and was reopened on Dec. 1 with a gala celebration that headlined Plácido Domingo serenading Her Majesty.
499. M. J. Trow's LESTRADE AND THE MAGPIE (Washington: Regnery, 2000; 224 pp., $19.95) will be in the stores next year in an American edition: it's the tenth novel in his delightful series about Inspector Sholto Lestrade (with the usual name-dropping, bawdy humor, and puns). The nine earlier titles are still available from Regnery (same price), and Regnery plans to issue all sixteen to complete the series.
500. Sherlock Holmes has made it into the current campaign for the presidency: a report on "The Life of Bill Bradley" by Barton Gellman and Dale Russakoff in the Washington Post (Dec. 14) discusses Bradley's 1965 journey from basketball stardom at Princeton to his Rhodes scholarship at Oxford. Bradley shared a cabin on the Queen Mary with Jack Horton, an older Rhodes scholar. Informed that the British press awaited the American sports star at Southampton, Bradley winced, and Horton offered to shake them. "Jack put on a Sherlock Holmes hat and a pipe, picked up a violin case," tucked a Bible and a volume of Shakespeare under his arm, strode ashore, and declared himself to be Bill Bradley in the flesh.
501. Jerry Margolin has reported a new comic book: THE GREAT DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES #1 (Avalon Communications, $2.95), with a reprint of "The Problem of Thor Bridge" from the 1954 comic strip written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia. The publisher's address is 2800 Halpern, St-Laurent, QC H4S 1R2, Canada.

502. Don Hardenbrook notes that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's autobiography MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES is available read (unabridged) by Robert Whitfield on ten 90-minute audiocassettes ($69.95 purchase or $13.95 rental) from Blackstone Audio (Box 969, Ashland, OR 97520 (800-729-2665) <www.blackstoneaudio.com>).
503. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets have reached the 1970s; the latest sheet includes a stamp that honors Pioneer 10, the first spacecraft to travel to Jupiter and send back data and images (eleven years later it became the first manmade object to leave the solar system). Jupiter can be seen in the background ("Jupiter is descending today," said Sherlock Holmes in "The Bruce-Partington Plans").
504. John Hillen notes a mention of "The Lost World" in an Associated Press dispatch endangered wildlife in Venezuela: the government is building a highvoltage electricity line through Canaima National Park, which is one of 100 World Heritage Sites designated by the United Nations, and critics say the plan is a recipe for environmental catastrophe. Canaima, the sixth-largest national park in the world, has Angel Falls (the world's tallest waterfall) and the mysterious flat-topped mountains said to have inspired Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" (the park is the size of Belgium and is protected by 14 park rangers, most of whom have only bicycles for transportation).
505. Dec 99 #4: Sir Rupert Hart-Davies died on Dec. 8. He began his publishing career as an office boy at William Heinemann, and after serving in the Coldstream Guards in World War II, started his own publishing house, which he named after himself. Hart-Davies was known "as much for the care he took in publishing books as for his almost complete lack of business acumen" (as Sarah Lyall noted in an obituary in the N.Y. Times), and he was an accomplished editor and writer. His company published the first British edition of William S. Baring-Gould's SHERLOCK HOLMES: A BIOGRAPHY OF THE WORLD'S FIRST CONSULTING DETECTIVE (1962), which unlike the first American edition was illustrated, and had on the dust jacket and as the frontispiece a delightful photograph of Sherlock Holmes, taken in Montenegro and discovered by the late James Montgomery.
506. Richard Lowry spotted a new mail-order catalog for chess enthusiasts, with Sherlockian artwork and a portrait of Moriarty, available from Chessco, Box 8, Davenport, IA 52805 (800-397-7117) <www.chessco.com>.
507. Another collectible for "Wishbone" fans: Wishbone as Sherlock Holmes (with deerstalker and Inverness) in the Snap-On Costume Collection manufactured by Equity Toys (Los Angeles); he is 3.5 in. high and "fully poseable" (you can move his head and legs), and there are four other literary characters available (spotted by Phil Attwell in a bargain store in England).
508. Hugh Haynie died on Nov. 25. He worked as a syndicated political cartoonist at the Louisville Courier-Journal from 1958 to 1995, and his critical comments on Watergate earned him a place on Nixon's enemies list. Haynie often used the Sherlockian icons; these cartoons were published on Aug. 29, 1972, and Aug. 4, 1994.
509. Further to the report (Nov 99 #2) that a fourth season of television series "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" is in post-production in Canada, the first two seasons are being broadcast in Britain, and there are some book tie-ins published by Harper-Collins: THE ESSENTIAL CASE FILE, compiled by Stella Paskins and Sue Mongredien, with profiles, tips for detectives, and an episode guide (94 pp., £3.50); and novelizations of four of the episodes.
510. The Canadian Institute for Mediterranean Studies will present a lecture by Clifford Goldfarb on "Arthur Conan Doyle--the Napoleonic War Tales: History or Romance?" on Jan. 19 at Emmanuel College (room 119) at the University of Toronto (5 Queen's Park Crescent); there's no charge for the event, which is open to the public.
511. Discovered by Ratana Ngin: SHERLOCK'S MISSING BONE: A PICTURE PUZZLE BOARD BOOK, written by Dawn Bentley and illustrated by Siobhan Dodds (New York: Barnes & Noble, 1999; $9.95); a 12-piece jigsaw puzzle helps children help a dog dressed in Sherlockian costume solve a mystery.
512. Dec 99 #5: Further to the item (Sep 99 #1) on the BBC television program Blood Line" (about Joe Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle), it's now titled "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" and it will air on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV on May 18 and 25 (60 minutes each), according to the press release at hand from Otto Penzler. The program features Ian Richardson as Bell and Robin Laing as Conan Doyle.
513. Otto now is a consultant to Amazon, and writes a monthly column ("Penzler's Picks") for their web-site, recommending six mysteries a month. The electronically-enabled can read all about it at <www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/tg/feature/-/12820/ref=ad\_b\_mt\_2>.
514. Lamba Aaman reports from India: there's a Sherlock Holmes Pub in Bangalore.
515. Plan well ahead: the centenary of the first publication of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (in The Strand Magazine) will be celebrated in Toronto on Oct. 26-28, 2001, which also will mark the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library. The festivities will include scholarly and social activities, and an exhibit at the library, and other events. If you'd like to be on their mailing list, the address is HOUND2001, 18 Jackson Avenue, Etobicoke, ON M8X 2J3, Canada <sherlox@attglobal.net>.
516. Alan Addlestone ("The Addleton Tragedy") died on Sept. 2. He was a member of The Scowrers and Molly Maguires of San Francisco for many years, and a fine punster, and remembered for his ferocious quizzes. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
517. Charles Schulz has announced that he will stop drawing the "Peanuts" comic strip to focus on recovering from colon cancer. The strip first appeared on Oct. 2, 1950, in seven newspapers, and now runs in 2,600 newspapers and reaches an estimated 355 million readers. Rare among cartoonists, Schulz has drawn every frame of every one of the strips; the final original daily "Peanuts" will be published on Jan. 3, and the last Sunday strip on Feb. 13. He said in PEANUTS JUBILEE: MY LIFE AND ART WITH CHARLIE BROWN AND OTHERS (1975) that "in my high school years, I became a Sherlock Holmes fanatic and used to buy scrapbooks at the local five-and-dime and fill them with Sherlock Holmes stories in comic-book form." And in his contribution to BOOKS I READ WHEN I WAS YOUNG, edited by Bernice Cullinan and M. Jerry Weiss (1980), Schulz wrote, "When I was a teenager, the three books that gave me the most enjoyment and probably led me on to more reading were the Sherlock Holmes stories, *Beau Geste*, and *Ivanhoe*." Snoopy has often paid tribute to Sherlock Holmes: here's an extract from his first known S'ian appearance, on Jan. 28, 1962:
518. Dec 99 #6: The latest volume in Jon L. Lellenberg's archival-history series is IRREGULAR CRISES OF THE LATE 'FORTIES (New York: Baker Street Irregulars, 1999; 508 pp., $28.95), with accounts of how Edgar W. Smith rescued the BSI after Christopher Morley's decision that there would be no more annual dinners, the trials and tribulations of The Baker Street Journal and other BSI publications, an irregular visit to the White House, the mysterious Helene Yuhasova, and usual) much more; recommended. $31.90 postpaid ($32.90 outside the US) from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
519. Christopher and Barbara Roden continue to published a wide variety of Sherlockian and Doylean books from their Calabash Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <www.ash-tree-bc.ca/calabash.html>, including AS IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN: A COLLECTION OF SHERLOCKIAN PARODIES FROM UNLIKELY SOURCES, edited by Robert C. S. Adey; his research in humor magazines from the 1890s onward has uncovered many previously unreprinted examples of what writers have done with and to Sherlock Holmes. Denis O. Smith's THE CHRONICLES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, VOLUME TWO offers three atmospheric pastiches, two old and one new. John Hall's THE ABOMINABLE WIFE AND OTHER UNRECORDED CASES OF MR. SHERLOCK HOLMES is a thoughtful examination of the cases mentioned by Dr. Watson but never recorded for posterity, as well as the apocryphal cases and the Canonical and Uncanonical plays and parodies.

520. Christopher and Barbara Roden also edit THE CASE FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, a series of anthologies of essays devoted to single stories. THE MUSGRAVE RITUAL and THE SPECKLED BAND have already been examined, and THE DYING DETECTIVE contains some delightful scholarship, including (for those who enjoy discoveries in the manuscripts), Christopher's interesting thoughts on who may have written which parts of the story. Prices and shipping costs vary, credit-card orders are welcome, and you can write to the press for their catalog with all the details on these and on other books available.
521. "Millennium Hugo" is a lapel pin marking the fourth annual Baskerville Bash (2" high, showing Sir Hugo in full color); available from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720) for $16.50 postpaid.
522. Michael Lawrence offers full-size reproductions of London street signs, and is happy to include one for Baker Street ($135.00). His company is Signpost International (19 Bramall Court, Peterborough, Cambridgeshire PE3 9RD, England) <sign@post19.fsnet.co.uk>; details available on request.
523. The Cercle des Sites Holmesiens Francophones (a French-speaking group of Sherlockian web-masters) has announced a Sherlock Holmes millennium contest for short stories about "Sherlock Holmes and the Millenium" (stories can be written in French or English, and the deadline is Jan. 31). Rules and other information about the contest is available by mail from Francois Hoff (19 avenue Marechal Joffre, F-67000 Strasbourg, France) and at their web-site <www.pleia.de/concours/>.

Jan 00 #1:

1. It was nice to get back to Washington after the "triple play" (three Sherlockian events in three countries in one week); the three events were the 50th-anniversary annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark on Jan. 7, the annual dinner of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London on Jan. 8, and the start of the birthday festivities in New York on Jan. 13). For readers who aren't familiar with American sporting traditions, the triple play is from baseball, and involves ending an inning by getting three men out on just one hit ball.
  2. And I wasn't the only one participating in the historic Sherlockian triple play: the others were Mike Whelan and Mary Ann Bradley, Kate Karlson, Herb and Addie Tinning, and Susan Dahlinger (from the U.S.), and Anders Hammarqvist (from Sweden), and Bjarne Nielsen, Bjarne Rother Jensen, and Jan B. Steffensen (from Denmark).
  3. Denmark was delightful, and those who were able to arrive early enjoyed a visit with Bjarne Nielsen at his Sherlock Holmes Museet in Nykobing and some sight-seeing in Copenhagen as well as the annual dinner at the Hotel Ascot, where about 40 Sherlockian from four countries celebrated the 50th anniversary of the Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark; Ted Bergman was on hand from Sweden, with a grand video tour of his miniature of the house at 221 Baker Street, and the toasts and reports were all delivered in English, in honor of the more far-flung guests.
  4. London was just as much fun (and the weather just as pleasant); there were about 160 gathered in the Great Hall of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn (it's one of the four Inns of Court and a spectacular place in which to dine), and somewhat fewer for the Morning-After Get-Together at the Royal Commonwealth Society the next day, just round the corner from The Sherlock Holmes (which still happily offers a warm welcome to visitors from near and far). And there was time to visit (or perhaps revisit) the statue of Sherlock Holmes, which presides over Marylebone Road outside the Baker Street tube station, undisturbed by local pigeons; sculptor John Doubleday now is working on his third statue of Sherlock Holmes, which will be installed in Switzerland (where the first one greets visitors to Meiringen).
  5. I don't think that anyone has mentioned (in print or otherwise) an intriguing Sherlockian tourist site: the public convenience across Marylebone Road from the statue of Sherlock Holmes. There is a decorative mural over the urinals, and it shows a party of tourists heading happily for The Sherlock Holmes. We await word from the distaff side on whether there is a ladies' loo with equally appropriate decoration.
  6. The birthday festivities in New York began on Wednesday this year, with an Ash Wednesday luncheon at O'Casey's attended by about 40 enthusiasts pursuing a truly long weekend, and continued on Thursday at the Williams Club, where Michael Dirda (senior editor of the Washington Post's Book World) was the BSI's Distinguished Speaker, he reminisced fondly about his childhood discovery of Sherlock Holmes, and noted the intriguing coincidence of three brothers named Moriarty and three more named Morley, and you'll be able to read the full text in an early issue of The Baker Street Journal.
7. Jan 00 #2: The Hotel Algonquin offered a fine venue for an informal Mrs. Hudson Breakfast on Friday morning, and about 160 people were on hand for the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Andrew Joffe and Paul Singleton (aka The Friends of Bogie's) provided entertainment: delightful impersonations of Chip Finney and Bob Spacey (neophyte Sherlockians on their first visit to the birthday festivities from Traverse City, Mich., Community College), and Richard and Cynthia Wein, David Stuart Davies, Susan Rice, Mickey Fromkin, and Peter Blau (all of whom also were in the audience and none of whom were aware they were to be impersonated). And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  8. There were about 190 at the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars at the Union League Club, where the pre-dinner cocktail party featured Steven Rothman's toast to *the* Woman: Eleanor Baker O'Connor, who for many years has assisted Julian Wolff, Tom Stix, and now Mike Whelan with arrangements for the annual dinner. The dinner honored the BSI's "moment of creation" by copying the menu from January 1934 (oysters, pea soup, curried chicken, ice cream, petits fours, and cafe), and the entertainment offered the usual traditions, a discussions of Canon and Cult in three centuries, and of Canonical maladies, Bob Coghill's warm tribute to the late S. Tupper Bigelow, and (as always) much more.
  9. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") awarded this year's Birthday Honours: Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Michael Meer ("The Englischer Hof"), Fred Kittle ("Jack Stapleton"), Douglas Wilmer ("The Lyceum Theatre"), Ben Vizoskie ("Alexander Hamilton Garrideb"), Jean Upton ("Elsie Cubitt"), Doug Elliott ("Canadian Pacific Railway"), Karen Anderson ("Emilia Lucca"), Anders Hammarqvist ("Jacob Shafter"), and Don Curtis ("Jabez Wilson"); and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award ("for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty") to Scott Bond.
  10. The Baskerville Bash also took place Friday evening, at the Manhattan Club and with about 100 people on hand, and with entertainment that included a pastiche/parody by Rosemary Michaud ("Jeeves and the Horrible Hound"), a performance by the irrepressible Sherlettes (as the Dartmoorsketeers), and a musical toast by Cynthia Wein ("There is Nothing Like a Hound").
  11. On Saturday morning the dealers' room (at the Algonquin) was as always full of dealers and a wide variety of Sherlockiana to delight eager browsers and collectors. And the Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted a capacity crowd to the National Arts Club, where a display of interesting items from the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota honored John and Dorothy Shaw. Al Rosenblatt reported in verse on the previous evening and the previous year (and you will be able to read that in the BSJ, too), and events, and Susan Dahlinger was applauded as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to last year's Baker Street Journal (her fine article on William Gillette in the September issue). And The Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from June Kinnee's energetic marketing of raffle tickets for

Jeff Decker's original artwork for his portrait of Julian Wolff (won by Bruce R. Parker, who will present it to Ted Schulz), as well as from the enthusiastic bidders in the traditional auction.

12. Jan 00 #3: On Saturday evening a capacity-house Sherlockian audience saw the American premiere of David Stuart Davies' play "Sherlock Holmes: The Last Act!" with Roger Llewellyn in a fine portrayal of Holmes. The script is nicely done as well, and available from the Calabash Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>; $15.00 or CA$20.00 or £9.50 (shipping extra), and credit-card orders are welcome.
13. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than fit into print here, it is quite likely that there will be much longer reports in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $21.00 a year ($23.50 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) can be sent to the BSJ at Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
14. The birthday festivities attracted some attention from the press: Michael Pollak's report that "They Came to Honor Mr. Holmes. Or So, at Least, They Claimed." ran in the home edition of the N.Y. Times (Jan. 16), and Karl E. Meyer's story about "The Curious Incident of the Sleuth in the Meantime" in all editions (Jan. 19); the latter story also ran on the paper's wire, and was reprinted in the Sydney Morning Herald (and perhaps other papers less far-flung).
15. The Scotland Yarders will honor their tenth anniversary with T-shirts with their logo and "10th Anniversary" in silver on black over the left breast; sizes offered are small to extralarge, $16.00 postpaid, and checks (payable to The Scotland Yarders) should be sent to Barbara Wells, 8894 Knight Avenue #413, Des Plaines, IL 60016 (the deadline for orders is Mar. 14).
16. John Archer died on Dec. 5. He began his acting career in radio in 1938, and was best known for his echo-chambered "Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men?" introduction on "The Shadow" in 1944 and 1945. He appeared on stage and screen and television as well, starring in the science fiction film "Destination Moon" (1950), and he played Lt. Pete Merriam in "Sherlock Holmes in Washington" (1943).
17. The second volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 1999; 303 pp., $26.95), and it's full of excellent scholarship, with a personal approach to the annotations (as was the case with Baring-Gould's THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES). $29.70 postpaid from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46260).
18. Roger Rees, who played Sherlock Holmes in Bert Coules' BBC Radio 4 dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 1988 (and more recently a "womanizing, slightly inebriated English lord who's actually quite brilliant" on the NBC-TV series "West Wing") also is a director: he will stage a revival of George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man" for the Roundabout Theatre in New York (in previews for a Feb. 10 opening), and this spring will star in Roundabout's production of "Uncle Vanya". "Arms and the Man" is playing at the Gramercy Theatre at 127 East 23rd Street (212-777-4900).

---

19. Jan 00 #4: Laurie R. King will be on a book-signing tour in February promoting NIGHT WORK (not part of her Mary Russell series); here's the tentative schedule: Feb. 2 Capitola Book Cafe, 7:30 (Capitola, CA); 3 or 4 Orinda Books and Walnut Creek Barnes & Noble; 5 M Is for Mystery, 2:00 (San Mateo, CA); 6 Powell's, 7:30 (Portland, OR); 7 Seattle Mystery Books, 12:00, and Third Place Books, 7:30 (Seattle, WA); 8 Vroman's, 7:00 (Los Angeles, CA), 9 Coffee, Tea & Mystery, 12:00 (Los Angeles, CA) and Barnes & Noble, 7:00 (Huntington Beach, CA); 10 Bookseller, 6:00 (Grass Valley near Sacramento, CA), 11 Mysterious Galaxy, 7:00 (San Diego, CA); 12 Poisoned Pen, 11:00 (Scottsdale, AZ). And Apr. 29 or 30 she will be at the Los Angeles Festival of Books.
20. Geoff Jeffery notes that local Disney stores have a "Countdown to the Millennium" series of lapel pins ($4.00 each); one of the (#27) is "The Great Mouse Detective".
21. TOURNAMENT OF SHADOWS: THE GREAT GAME AND THE RACE FOR EMPIRE IN CENTRAL ASIA, by Karl E. Meyer and Shareen Blair Brysac (Washington: Counterpoint, 1999; 646 pp., $35.00), received a rave review in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 9); the Great Game was the long-standing competition between Britain and Russia, and the story of the Second Afghan War (and the fatal battle of Maiwand) will of course be of particular interest to Sherlockians. Nancy Beiman notes that Dr. John H. Watson is included in the index, no doubt thanks to Meyer (who is "Fritz von Waldbaum" in The Baker Street Irregulars).
22. Nathan Lane is reported ready to star in the Broadway revival (set to open on June 30) of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" (in which Monty Woolley starred as Sheridan Whiteside on Broadway in 1939 and in the film in 1942). In the play and the film Whiteside says about Harriett Stanley, "Strange? She's right out of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'."
23. Peter Jeffrey died on Dec. 25. He was a veteran character actor in British film, television, and radio, and he played Mycroft Holmes in the television film "Hands of a Murderer" (1990).
24. Caroline Bryan offers a new audiocassette with country and western versions of "I Wanna Be the Hound" (which debuted as the open-mike contest-winner at the Under the Arch conference in Saint Louis) and "The Ballad of Moriarty's Excuse"; the cassette costs $5.00 postpaid from Wilson's Basement Dwellers, Box 57057, Albuquerque, NM 87187.
25. Planning continues for the Millennium Congress of Holmesian Societies that will be held in Meiringen on May 4-7; there will be guest speakers from at least four continents, and excursions, exhibitions, and wining and dining, and full details are available from Michael A. Meer (Morgenstrasse 70, CH-3018 Bern, Switzerland) <sherlock.holmes@gmx.net>.
26. Jerry Margolin notes that the second issue of THE GREAT DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES (Avalon Communications, $2.95) is in the comic-book shops, with "The Missing Heiress" reprinted from the 1954 comic strip written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia; the publisher's address is 2800 Halpern, St-Laurent, QC H4S 1R2, Canada.

---

27. Jan 00 #5: "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" aired in Britain on BBC-2 in two one-hour episodes on Jan. 4 and 5, with Ian Richardson as Joseph Bell and Robin Laing as Arthur Conan Doyle; it was interesting indeed to see Richardson, who has played Holmes, as the man who contributed so much to Conan Doyle's portrayal of Holmes, and David Pirie's script has some interesting twists, turns, and surprises. The mini-series will be broadcast on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV on May 18 and 25.
28. THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ADAM WORTH, by Ben Macintyre (Feb 98 #2) is now available in a paperback edition in Britain (Flamingo, £7.99); the book is a fine account of the man who was indeed called "the Napoleon of Crime" by some of his contemporaries. The connection between Worth and Moriarty appears first to have been reported by Vincent Starrett, in his THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in 1933: "this was revealed by Sir Arthur in conversation with Dr. Gray Chandler Briggs, some years ago."
29. James Card died on Jan. 16. He was a devoted collector and admirer of silent films, and he was the founder and the first curator of the Department of Film at the George Eastman House in Rochester, where he arrived in 1948, bringing with him his personal collection of 800 films. He also was an energetic film preservationist, and one of the films he was able to save was John Barrymore's "Sherlock Holmes" (1922), which was restored and shown to a delighted audience of Sherlockians at George Eastman House in 1975.

30. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets have reached the 1980s, and the new sheet includes a stamp honoring the musical "Cats", which opened on Broadway on Oct. 7, 1982, and is now the longest-running show in Broadway history; the Andrew Lloyd Webber hit, based on poems in T. S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats", brought "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" to the attention of millions.
31. The Silver Blaze, an Irregular event conceived by Thomas L. Stix, Sr., and run for the first time at Jamaica Race Course on Long Island in 1952, has been revived, and the next running will be held on Aug. 19, at a new venue for the historic event: Saratoga Race Track in upstate New York. Saratoga is a delightful place to go to the races, and a committee is energetically planning some other events that will be of interest to Sherlockians, and scouting hotels and restaurants. If you'd like to be on the mailing list, please contact Lou Lewis (Box 2990, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) <lewisgreer@aol.com>; you can expect to receive full details by mid-June.
32. Reported: Barbara Michaels' OTHER WORLDS (Sep 99 #1) in a paperback reprint from HarperCollins ($6.99); Frank Podmore, Nandor Fodor, Harry Houdini, and Arthur Conan Doyle offer (and briefly debate) possible solutions to two unsolved ghostly mysteries from the 19th century.
33. Vinnie Brosnan reports that the late Alvin E. Rodin's collection (including originals, proofs, and drafts of his writings about Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes), is to be sold by Mary Frost-Pierson at Mysteries from the Yard beginning Feb. 14. The catalog will be available at Mary's web-site at <www.mysteriesfromtheyard.com> or via the mail ($5.00 postpaid, and you can order now) from Jean C. Rodin (4440 Pavlov Avenue, San Diego, CA 92122).

34. Jan 00 #6: Brian Pugh reports that the Crowborough Town Council has agreed to fund the life-size statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle that the Crowborough Conan Doyle Trust and local enthusiasts have been campaigning for; sculptor David Cornell has started work on the £48,000 statue, and an unveiling is planned for late summer or early fall. This year's Sherlock Holmes Festival (which had been scheduled for July 7-9) will not be held, but the unveiling of the statue will be celebrated with due ceremony.
35. Bill Barnes still has copies of THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 4 available, (80 pages of pastiche, humor, and serious writing by members of The Hounds of the Internet; most of the material is new, but a few items have appeared elsewhere). $12.00 or CA$17.00 of £7.50 postpaid by airmail, and payment by personal check or currency is welcome; his address is 19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia.
36. You can get 24 different Sesame Street mini beans in packages of Kellogg's cereals, and they include Sherlock Hemlock, who is one of four characters in packages of Apple Jacks and Honey Crunch Corn Flakes; there's no way of telling who's in any particular package, of course, but if you aren't lucky you can send in $2.50 and three box tops to get the set of four.
37. Issue #34 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine (edited by David Stuart Davies) offers the usual wide variety of articles, essays, reviews, and other material about Holmes and other detectives, old and new. Davies' new series on "Sherlock Holmes: The Millennium Film Star Hero" starts in this issue, which also has the conclusion of Paul Chapman's two-part article on Sherlock Holmes and Jack the Ripper. Annual subscriptions (six issues) are £20.00 (U.K.)/£22.00 (continent)/$40.00 (U.S.), and the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>; their U.S. representative is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. Back issues are available, and credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses.
38. Compliments of the season from Andrew G. Fusco, who kindly contributed the enclosed pocket calendar for 1876 (it works just fine for 2000, of course).
39. And a few commercials: the revised 15-page list of Investitured Irregulars, Two-Shilling Awards, The Women, and the Adventuresses costs $1.20 postpaid. The 79-page list of 764 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 426 active societies, costs $4.20 postpaid. A run of address labels for 359 individual contacts (recommended if you wish to avoid making duplicate mailings to people who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.40 postpaid. Checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please.
40. The list of irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <http://members.home.net/sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>. Also available free at Linda Anderson's home page are digital photographs of celebrants at the birthday festivities <http://www.fortunecity.com/victorian/canterbury/222/bsi2000.htm>.

41. Feb 00 #1: "Burger Giant Chips Away at Holmes Truth" was the headline on a report in the Edinburgh Evening News (Jan. 8), at hand from Jon Lellenberg. Liberton Bank House, where Arthur Conan Doyle lived when he was five to seven years old, and which McDonald's planned to demolish so that they could build a restaurant on the site, was granted a temporary reprieve last month by the Edinburgh City Council (Dec 99 #2), but McDonald's is bringing in its own experts to verify that Conan Doyle actually lived there. Conan Doyle biographer Owen Dudley Edwards said that "McDonald's is perfectly entitled to do its own historical research. I would be extremely glad to see what evidence it gets. I hope they develop a conscience at the same time."
42. Sorry about that: my list of the participants in the historic "triple play" (three Sherlockian events in three countries in one week) was not complete (Jan 00 #1). The full list: Mike Whelan and Mary Ann Bradley, Kate Karlson, Herb and Addie Tinning, Paul and Margaret Smedegaard, Susan Dahlinger, and Peter Blau (from the U.S.), Anders Hammarqvist (from Sweden), and Bjarne Nielsen, Bjarne Rother Jensen, and Jan B. Steffensen (from Denmark).
43. And another correction: the home page where you can see digital photographs taken at the birthday festivities in New York (Jan 00 #6) is located at the web-site of the San Francisco Bay Area Sherlockian Societies. The URL is <www.fortunecity.com/victorian/canterbury/222/bsi2000.htm>.
44. W. R. Michell ("The Rock of Gibraltar") died on Jan. 18. He was a Captain in the Royal Navy when he joined The Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 1958, and not long after his retirement happily enlisted as Honorary Secretary of the society, a post he held from 1973 to 1988. Bill's genial humor was a delight, and he will be missed by his many friends.
45. Paul Martin reports that Critics' Choice Video (Box 749, Itaska, IL 60143) (800-367-7765) <www.ccvideo.com> offers John Neville's "A Study in Terror" (1965) for $19.95 (discounted from $69.95), and the longer (98-minute) version of George C. Scott's "They Might Be Giants" (1971) for $14.95. Richard Wein spotted Claude Rains' "The Lost World" (1960) in the same catalog discounted to $10.77; shipping is free until Mar. 31.
46. Sonia Fetherston spotted some business news in the Portland Oregonian (Jan. 23): Pat Sherlock, owner of Sherlock Holmes Real Estate, has merged his 17-year-old company with the Equity Group.
47. Desmond Llewelyn died on Dec. 19. He studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in the 1930s and had a long career in films. Best known as "Q" in all but one of the James Bond films, he also performed in the Merrison/Williams BBC radio series, as Bannister in "The Three Students" (1993) and as Palfreyman in "Shoscombe Old Place" (1995).
48. News for the electronically-enabled: Chris Redmond's "Holmepage" was as far as I know the first one on the World Wide Web, and it's still an excellent entry-way into the strange Sherlockian world of bits and bytes. And it has name (Sherlockian.Net), a new format, new graphics, lots of revisions and additions, and a new URL: <www.sherlockian.net>.

49. Feb 00 #2: "Krushchev Wary of Yeltsin's Successor" is the headline on a story in the Providence Journal (Jan. 6), at hand from Al and Julie Rosenblatt. The Krushchev is former Soviet leader Nikita Krushchev's son Sergei, who became an American citizen last summer and is a scholar at Brown University; Vladimir Putin, the new prime minister, was hand-picked by a group of "political oligarchs" aligned with Boris Berezovsky, according to Sergei Krushchev, who noted that Berezovsky is close to Yeltsin and his family, and is "the Professor Moriarty of the 21st century."
50. SHERLOCKIAN ABROAD: THEIR ADVENTURES AT AND MEMOIRS OF THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES STATUE FESTIVAL, collected and edited by Susan E. B. Vizoskie, with photographs by Ben Vizoskie, offers 71 pages of reminiscences by 32 of the participants; $3.50 postpaid ($3.75 to Canada and $4.00 elsewhere) in U.S. funds, please, with checks payable to The Three Garridebs, and sent to Sue (90 Ralph Avenue, White Plains, NY 10606).
51. Reported: Martin Booth's THE DOCTOR AND THE DETECTIVE: A BIOGRAPHY OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (published in Britain in 1997), in an American edition from St. Martin's Press in January (384 pp., $27.95).
52. "Holmes!" is a work-in-progress musical with book and lyrics by Brett Nicholson and music by Hans Vollrath, first performed in concert at the Disney Institute in Orlando in Sept. 1997. A revised version of the musical will be presented in a workshop performance on May 4-5 at the Disney Institute Performance Center in Orlando, Fla.; additional details are available from Holmes! (Box 2242, Windermere, FL 34786) <www.holmesthemusical.com>.
53. "What is the name of that inn you spoke of?" "The Green Dragon" (as noted in "Shoscombe Old Place"). There are two other allusions to dragons in the Canon (in "Charles Augustus Milverton" and "The Sign of the Four"), and it is nice to have three appropriate references to help the postal service celebrate the Year of the Dragon.
54. The Village Players will produce William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" from Mar. 17 through Apr. 1; the box-office address is Box 712, Birmingham, MI 48012 (248-644-2075) <www.birmingham-mi.com/villageplayers>.
55. Art Hoppe died on Feb. 1. He joined the San Francisco Chronicle as a copy boy in 1949 and soon was promoted to reporter, and in 1960 began writing a column that eventually appeared five days a week and was syndicated in more than 100 newspapers. The targets for his political satire included Watergate, and in 1974 he created Sherlock Helms in a column titled "As American As Ample Spies" (voted "best pun of the year" by John Bennett Shaw).
56. Richard Lancelyn Green and John Michael Gibson's A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE, published in 1983, was, as I reported at the time (Sep 83 #2), *the* bibliography of Conan Doyle, and it still is. Long out of print, and only rarely offered by used-book dealers, it will be available again on Mar. 4 in a revised edition (with corrections and additions) by Hudson House (Otto Penzler's new imprint), priced at $100.00 retail. Otto will be glad to accept your orders (The Mysterious Bookshop, 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840) <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net>.
57. Feb 00 #3: Wolf Ackva died on Jan. 16. He was an actor in Germany, and he provided German dubbing for famous actors such as Clark Gable, Vincent Price, William Holden, James Mason, and Sam (the eagle on "The Muppet Show"). He also played Sherlock Holmes in the first known television adaptation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (broadcast in Germany by ARD on Aug 16, 1955). In 1997, Michael Ross notes, Ackva was made an honorary member of Von Herder Airguns, Ltd.
58. The film "The Ninth Gate" had its world premiere in Spain on Aug. 25, and is scheduled for release in the United States on Mar. 31; directed by Roman Polanski and starring Johnny Depp and Lena Olin, the film's based on Arturo Perez-Reverte's book THE CLUB DUMAS, which one reviewer has called "a cross between Umberto Eco and Anne Rice." But: Marco Zatterin reports from Italy that none of the Canonical echoes in the book, including a woman who calls herself Irene Adler (Sep 99 #5), are in the film.
59. Peter Calamai reports that the fourth (and final) season of "The Adventures of Shirley Holmes" (starring Meredith Henderson as the great-grandniece of Sherlock Holmes) started on YTV in Canada on Feb. 13.
60. TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, by Daniel Stashower (Apr 99 #5), has been nominated for an Edgar (best critical/biographical work) from the Mystery Writers of America. The winners of the Edgars will be announced at the MWA annual dinner in New York on May 4.
61. Don Martin died on Jan. 7. He began drawing for Mad in 1956, and for more than thirty years he contributed "a gallery of harridans, freaks and imbeciles burdened with over-large feet and bulbous noses, all of whom came too frequently in contact with buzz-saws, steamrollers, and falling safes" (as noted in his obituary in the Independent). His caricature of Sherlock Holmes (as one of eight literary heroes) appeared in the Mad in the 1970s.
62. Reported: THE ILLUSTRIOUS CLIENTS SECOND CASE-NOTES, edited by Steven T. Doyle and Mark Gagen, with an introduction by Don Curtis and contributions by members of the society (96 pp., $12.95); $14.70 postpaid from Gasogene Books, Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46268.
63. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers the second part of Barbara Rusch's report on interesting ephemera in the collection, and Victoria Gill's note on a manuscript letter from Conan Doyle in which he affirms the date of the end of the 19th century (Dec. 31, 1899), and much more; you can request a copy from Doug Wrigglesworth, 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwig@netover.com>. And (for the electronically enabled), the collection web-site is at <www.mtrl.toronto.on.ca/centres/spcoll/acd/home.htm>.
64. The second issue of Cliff Notes (published by Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers) offers 25 pp. of (viniferous, philatelic, and other) contributions from its members, and it costs $3.00 postpaid (or $5.00 a year for two issues) from Henry Boote, 184 Central Avenue, Old Tappan, NJ 07675.

65. Feb 00 #4: Don Hobbs has compiled a list of sources for translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories into Arabic (Almaktabah, P.O. Box 1998, Beirut 11, Lebanon) <www.almaktabah.com>; Croatian (Unival Company) <mmartic@unival.hr> <www.unival.hr>; Marathi (Rasik) <www.rasik.com/marathi/ph2marathi_static.html>; Farsi (Ferdosi, Box 45095, S-104 30 Stockholm, Sweden) <www.ferdosi.se>; Braille (I Can See Books) <www.island.net/~dfaris /i/>; Urdu (Sang-E-Meel Publications (25 Shahrah-E-Pakistan Lower Mall, Lahore 54000, Pakistan <smp@sang-e-meel.com>); and Tamil (Don Hobbs, 2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028 <djhobbs@airmail.net>).
66. Jane L. Jenkins died on Feb. 3. She was a delightful lady, and the widow of William D. Jenkins, and honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *the* women in 1985.
67. Reported: THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Paxton Franklin Watson (Chillicothe: Community Press, 2000; 330 pp., $25.00); pastiches. $30.00 postpaid from William C. Paxton (12907 East 36th Street Terrace, Independence, MO 64055).
68. The American Firm, a Sherlockian society whose "resident patient" project raises money to buy large-print editions of the Canon for adult homes and nursing homes, offers badges, bookmarks, tea towels, and other Sherlockian merchandise; an illustrated sales-list is available from Edward S. Smith, Jr. (Box 353, Williston Park, NY 11596) <amerfirm@aol.com>.
69. Nancy Beiman reports that Bert Coules is now at work dramatizing five of the unrecorded cases (starting with "Colonel Warburton's Madness" and "The Disappearance of Mr. James Phillimore") for broadcast by the BBC (and Clive Merrison and Michael Williams have been approached to continue as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson).

70. Peter Jeffrey died on Dec. 25. One of the more memorable guest actors on "The Avengers", he also appeared in "Room Without a View", "The Joker", and "House of Cards", he played Mycroft Holmes in the television film "Hands of a Murderer" (1990).
71. Al Gregory has noted that THE KEY TO THE NAME OF THE ROSE: INCLUDING TRANSLATIONS OF ALL NON-ENGLISH PASSAGES, by Adele J. Haft, Jane G. White, and Robert J. White (first published in 1987), has been published in paperback (Ann Arbor: Univ. of Michigan Press, 1999); 190 pp., $14.95; fans of William of Baskerville and his assistant Adso will also welcome the glossary of unfamiliar names of people, places, and heresies.
72. Raymond Murray quotes from the Canon to highlight his article "Devil in the Details: The Science of Forensic Geology" in the February issue of Geotimes (published by the American Geological Institute, 4220 King Street, Alexandria, VA 22302; $5.00).
73. Reported: Ron Frantz's FANDOM: CONFIDENTIAL, a 200-page history of two decades of organized fan activity, and comics and nostalgia collecting; there are occasional mentions of Sherlock Holmes, reflected in Pete Morisi's cover portrait of Frantz. $17.95 postpaid from Midguard Publishing, Box 1711, Mena, AR 71953 <members.aol.com/midguard20/Midguardindex.html>.
74. Feb 00 #5: One does hear of Sherlock everywhere, Scott Monty notes, even on the syndicated radio "Howard Stern Show": on Feb. 10, Howard and his staff were running through true/false trivia questions, and one of them was, "Sherlock Holmes never said, 'Elementary, my dear Watson.'" Both Howard and Robin Quivers quickly said it was a true statement. Robin even went so far as to identify the Rathbone/Bruce films as the source, and Howard said, "Yeah, he said something else, like 'Hey, Watson,' or something."
75. The Blustering Gales of the South West will hold a conference on "Sherlock Holmes and the Future" on Mar. 25 at the Los Angeles Science Fantasy Clubhouse (11513 Burbank Boulevard, North Hollywood, Calif.); the speakers will include Poul and Karen Anderson and Len and June Moffatt. More information is available from Paula Salo (4421 Pacific Coast Highway #E-112, Torrance, CA 90505) (310-378-7947) and at the society's web-site <home.earthlink.net/~bgsw/next.html>.
76. Jerry Margolin notes that the third issue of THE GREAT DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES (Avalon Communications, $2.95) is in the comic-book shops, with "The Mystery of The Thames Afire" reprinted from the 1954 comic strip written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia; the publisher's address is 2800 Halpern, St-Laurent, QC H4S 1R2, Canada.
77. Antonio Iriarte reports that a newly-annotated nine-volume Spanish edition of the Canon is in the works; Juan Antonio Molina Foix, a well-known translator who specializes in fantastic literature (most recently a collection of Arthur Machen's short stories) will be the editor, and Editorial Valdemar of Madrid will publish the set.
78. "The starting point in any attempt to rewrite the history of the Molly Maguires today, is to treat the surviving evidence with the skepticism it deserves," Kevin Kenny suggests, and he does just that in his MAKING SENSE OF THE MOLLY MAGUIRES (New York: Oxford Univ. Press, 1998; 336 pp., $19.95). It's an interesting book, and Kenny has done his best to avoid the biases that have colored previous histories of the Mollies. Arthur Conan Doyle is mentioned only in passing in a book that focuses on the facts of Irish history in the Pennsylvania coal fields.
79. A. E. Van Vogt died on Jan. 26. His first science-fiction story was "Black Destroyer" in Astounding Science Fiction (July 1939), and it is often cited as the inspiration for the film "Aliens" and its many sequels; he was one of the great science-fiction writers, and a friend of Luther Norris and a member of the Praed Street Irregulars, and van Vogt's articles about Solar Pons were published in The Pontine Dossier from 1958 to 1977.
80. St. Bartholomew's Hospital (the site of the historic first meeting between Holmes and Watson) was reported to have been saved (Feb 98 #2), but there's still plenty of controversy: according to an article in The Times (Feb. 8), at hand from John Baesch, prime minister Tony Blair's decision to turn the hospital into a specialized cancer and heart unit, at a cost now estimated at £150 million, has been criticized in a report by cancer specialists who say that not enough back-up services are available at Barts. Critics also suggest that Blair's election promise to rescue the hospital was made because his children were born there.

81. Feb 00 #6: Many Sherlockians have wondered and speculated about how Sherlock Holmes got to where we find him in the Canon, just as many actors who have played him have felt a need to understand his motivations. THE CHILDHOOD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Mona Morstein (Lakeville: Galde Press, 2000; 340 pp., $24.95), presents an imaginative and well-written history of the Holmes family, both parents and children, told by the butler who served them. Available for $28.95 postpaid (shipping costs higher to Canada and overseas) from the publisher, Box 460, Lakesville, MN 55044 (800-777-3454) <www.galdepress.com>; credit-card orders welcome.
82. A colorful brochure for The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's Golden Jubilee Cruise, scheduled to the Baltic from Aug. 25 to Sept. 7, 2001 (departing from Harwich and with stops at Oslo, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Tallin, St. Petersburg, Kaliningrad, and Kiel) is offered by from Arena Travel Cruises (Hamilton House, Cambridge Road, Felixstowe, Suffolk, 1P11 7SW, England) <holmes@arenatravel.com> <www.arenatravel.com>.
83. Bjarne Nielsen's February "Millennial Highlights" catalog from the Sherlock Holmes Museet Antikvariatet has a fine assortment of Sherlockian books and pamphlets, in Danish and in English, and Alex Secher's original artwork for a Danish translation of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1976). His address is Algade 3, DK-4500 Nykobing Sjaelland, Denmark, and his material also can be seen on the World Wide Web at <www.sherlockiana.net>.
84. Hammer Films, like its long-running hero Dracula, has been revived, according a story in the Hollywood Reporter (Feb. 8), at hand from Nancy Beiman. The company that produced Peter Cushing's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959) has been purchased by a private investment consortium (for a little more than £1 million, according to industry sources); the new owners plan to take advantage of Hammer's library of more than 250 film and TV titles by relicensing remake rights, and will expand the Hammer brand into computer games, merchandising, animation, and the Internet.
85. Marina Stajic notes that you can see Sherlock Holmes and Hercule Poirot in the same play on Broadway, at the Music Box Theatre at 239 West 45th Street (212-239-6200). The play is Peter Shaffer's "Amadeus", with David Suchet as Salieri and J. P. Linton as Count Von Strack (Linton played Holmes in Tom McClary's "Flights of Devils" on Long Island in 1987).
86. Charles Schulz died on Feb. 12, the day before his last original "Peanuts" comic strip ran in papers around the world. He became a Sherlock Holmes fan in high school, he wrote in 1975, and it was in 1962 that readers saw Snoopy's first known Sherlockian appearance (Dec 99 #5). That was only the first of the strip's Canonical allusions; this one ran on Aug. 28, 1964:
87. Feb 00 #7: Amanda Foreman's GEORGIANA, DUCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE was published in 1998 in Britain to great acclaim, and there's now an American edition (New York: Random House, 2000; 454 pp., $29.95) that is getting excellent reviews here. It was Gainsborough's portrait of Georgiana that was stolen by Adam Worth, and she's the duchess mentioned in the Canon (in "A Case of Identity"), where Miss Mary Sutherland's broad-brimmed hat was "tilted in a coquettish Duchess of Devonshire fashion over her ear."
88. "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (the BBC-2 two-part mini-series starring Robin Laing as Arthur Conan Doyle and Ian Richardson as Joseph Bell) will air on BBC America cable on Mar. 5 and 12, according to Anglofile, and then on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV on May 18 and 25. Anglofile is a monthly newsletter that offers detailed coverage of British entertainment; Box 33515, Decatur, GA 30033 ($15.00 a year).

89. The latest issue of Scarlet Street (#36) has David Stuart Davies' interesting article on how he wrote his play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!", and a review of the new laserdisc (from Image Entertainment, $29.98) of "Photographing Fairies" (1997, with Edward Hardwick as Conan Doyle), and the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. The magazine costs $35.00 a year (six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452. And there's a web-site at <www.scarletstreet.com>.
90. "Sherlock Holmes & the Royal Regatta" is the mystery that Holmes and Watson and participants in the next "Victorian Holmes Weekend" will try to solve on Mar. 10-12 in Cape May. The weekend includes a tour of the town's Victorian homes, and additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <www.capemaymac.org>.
91. George C. Scott's "They Might Be Giants" (1971) has been released on DVD by Anchor Bay Entertainment ($24.98); Jennie Paton reports that it's the longer television version with the supermarket food-fight, and additional material that includes commentary by director Anthony Harvey and film archivist Robert A. Harris, theatrical trailers, and a featurette.
92. The late John Ford is said to have had THE WHITE COMPANY in his sights at the end of his career, with John Wayne and Alec Guinness in mind, George MacDonald Fraser notes in his perceptive and interesting introduction to a new edition of Arthur Conan Doyle's two great historical novels: THE WHITE COMPANY/SIR NIGEL (Pleasantville: Akadine Press, 1999; 618 pp., $24.95). Akadine also has published a new edition of Conan Doyle's THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR (276 pp., $16.95), in which he offers a delightful tour of the books in his own library, and the authors he admired. And you get a discount to $37.70 if you order both books. Akadine Press editions are not available in bookstores, but rather from A Common Reader (141 Tompkins Avenue, Pleasantville, NY 10570) (800-832-7323) <www.commonreader.com>; I've recommended A Common Reader's catalogs in the past, and am glad to do so again: there's a wide variety of interesting reading, including Christopher Morley's THE HAUNTED BOOKSHOP and PARNASSUS ON WHEELS ($15.95 each, or $26.90 the pair).
-
93. Mar 00 #1: The musical "Cats" (based on poems in T. S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats") is the longest-running show in Broadway history, and was honored by the U.S. Postal Service in January (Jan 00 #5), but weekly receipts are dwindling, and Andrew Lloyd Webber announced on Feb. 19 that the show will close on June 25. Fans of "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" will still be able to see him, however: the London production, which opened on May 11, 1981 is still running.
94. More translations available: Atanas Topalov offers Bulgarian translations of the Canon (ABLEN, 2 Elena Snejina Street, Dragalevtzi, Sofia 1415, Bulgaria) <www.ablen.com/bookstore/authors>.
95. "Beautiful? It's elementary, my dear Watson" is the headline on Lee Karen Stow's two-page discussion of the southwest of England in a "Britain: Time to Travel" booklet published by the British Tourist Authority and spotted by Laura Kuhn. The BTA's address is 551 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10176 (888-364-6101).
96. Daniel Stashower's TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Apr 99 #5) has a British edition (London: Allen Lane, 2000; 472 pp., £18.99), and good reviews in The Sunday Times, The Times, and the Daily Telegraph.
97. The eighth annual Mid-Atlantic Mystery Book Fair & Convention will be held on Oct. 13-15 at the Wyndham Franklin Plaza in Philadelphia, with more than 500 people expected to attend; additional information is available from the Society Hill Playhouse (507 South 8th Street, Philadelphia, PA 19147) <www.erols.com/shp>.
98. Sean Connery, recipient of a Kennedy Center Honor in December (Oct 99 #1), was knighted by the Queen in her New Year's Honours List; he played Jack Kehoe in "The Molly Maguires" (1970), and William of Baskerville in "The Name of the Rose" (1986).
99. Sherlock Holmes (impersonated by John Sherwood) will return to Union City, Mich., on July 8 for an English-style banquet and conversation with guests at the Victorian Villa Inn. Additional details are available from the inn (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094) (800-348-4552) <members.kennet.net/brownsherwood/bakerstreet25.htm>.

102. Mar 00 #2: LANGUAGE OF THE LAND: THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS BOOK OF LITERARY MAPS, by Martha Hopkins and Michael Buscher (Washington: Library of Congress, 1999; 287 pp., $50.00), does not neglect Sherlock Holmes: the book includes six of Julian Wolff's Sherlockian maps, and "The Sherlock Holmes Mystery Map" published by Aaron Blake in 1987.
103. Robert McG. Thomas died on Jan. 6. He was a splendid journalist: a police reporter, a rewrite man, a society news reporter, and a sports reporter at the N.Y. Times until he began writing obituaries full-time in 1995, "shaking the dust from one of the most neglected areas of daily journalism" (as Michael T. Kaufman noted in his tribute to Thomas). He was at his best in writing about people who were out of the ordinary, including Samuel Rosenberg (Jan. 12, 1996), and Herman Herst (Feb. 7, 1999).
104. The 1999 issue of Beeman's Christmas Annual, published by The Occupants of the Empty House and edited by Janet Bensley and Jack Crelling, is devoted to "Geology in the Canon", with an article by Raymond C. Murray on forensic geology and contributions from society members on other geological aspects of the stories. The 32-page booklet costs $10.00 postpaid; checks (payable able to O.E.H.) can be sent to Stan Tinsley, 105 Wilcox Street, Ziegler, IL 62999.
105. Forecast: THE HAUNTING OF TORRE ABBEY, by Carole Bugge (New York: St. Martin's Press, 2000; 272 pp. $22.95); a new pastiche from the author of THE STAR OF INDIA (Jan 98 #7).

110. Mar 00 #3: Mary Bodne died on Feb. 28. She and her husband Ben discovered the Algonquin Hotel on their honeymoon, purchased it from Frank Case in 1946, and lived there for 41 years, happily maintaining its literary and theatrical connections. They sold the Algonquin, still the informal headquarters for the January birthday weekend in 1987, and the current owners, the Camberley Hotel Co., continue many of the decades-old traditions, including the lobby cat.
111. Laurie R. King's O JERUSALEM (her fifth novel about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes) is available from Recorded Books, read unabridged by Jenny Sterlin and with a 56-minute interview with Laurie, on ten audiocassettes; it's an excellent reading, and an interesting interview that includes discussion of Russell and Laurie's other protagonists, and of how she writes and why. $80.00 (purchase) or $17.50 (rental); Recorded Books, 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-638-1304) <www.recordedbooks.com>; credit-card orders welcome.
112. If one believes the pundits, the primary campaigns are pretty much wrapped up, which means it's time to focus on the political aspects of the Canon, where one finds a forecast of what will happen when Al Gore faces a family of Republicans: George W. supported by his father and his brother.
113. The ninth annual Watsonian Weekend on July 21-23 will feature Daniel Stashower as guest speaker at the Regimental Dinner in Schiller Park, the 41st annual running of The Silver Blaze at Arlington Race Track, and the Fortescue Honours Brunch in Des Plaines; more information is available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szd@mediaone.net>.
114. Britain has opened its first diplomatic mission in Mecca, according to a report in The Times (Feb. 23), at hand from John Baesch. The mission will be led by Labour peer Lord Ahmed and will consist of Muslim diplomats from the foreign Office and Muslim volunteer staff, and will provide assistance to British pilgrims. The article notes that Sir Richard Burton, who visited Mecca in 1883 after staining his skin with walnut juice and undergoing a circumcision, is the only British Christian known to have visited Mecca. Sherlockians, of course, know that Holmes looked in at Mecca.
115. John also has forwarded a story from The Independent on Sunday (Mar. 5) an exhibition "Chapter & Verse: 1,000 Years of English Literature" on display at the British Library through Oct. 15; one of the items is the manuscript of "The Missing Three-Quarter" (the first page in shown in the article).
116. Issue #35 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine offers discussion of the television mini-series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes", Bert Coules' interview with Michael Valle (scriptwriter for the new film "Sherlock Holmes and the Vengeance of Dracula"), the first part of David Stuart Davies' report on Granada's "The Last Vampyre", and much more (S'ian and otherwise). Annual subscriptions (six issues) are £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (U.S.); the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>, and their U.S. agent is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. Back issues are available; credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses.
117. Mar 00 #4: Diane Nolan writes that she is offering some of the Sherlockian ephemera from Norm's collection in auctions on eBay <www.ebay.com>; "nothing rare or scarce," she notes, "but mainly the toys, T-shirts, games, etc." (search at eBay for items offered by seller <n2913@aol.com>. Diane expects to sell the books eventually, but as a collection.
118. Robert E. Brolli died on Jan. 31. He was an actor and director in local and regional theater in western New England, and appeared on Broadway with Mary Martin in "Skin of Our Teeth". In 1977 he played John Forman in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" at the Williamstown Theatre Festival (with Frank Langella in the title role), and again in the 1981 broadcast of the play on HBO cable.
119. What will happen when Al Gore faces George W. supported by his father and his brother? The quote's in "Black Peter": Al Gore will be "surrounded on three sides by Bushes."
120. For completists: Andy Peck reports that the Mystery Guild its own edition of the 1999 revised and expanded edition of THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (item #051359, $11.98); their address is Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.mysteryguild.com>. MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS also is available in a Mystery Guild edition (item #054775, $10.98).
121. The February issue of Baker Street West 1 has 52 pages of Sherlockiana from the western states, including Chuck Kovacic's article on dark lanterns and Stu Shiffman's report on Sherlockian toys and dolls; $6.00 (or $11.00 for a one-year two-issue subscription) (checks made payable to the magazine) from Jerry Kegley, 110 South El Nido Avenue, #41, Pasadena, CA 91107.
122. GOOSE'S CHOICE is described by its editors (John Farrell and John P. Sohl) as a collection of Sherlock Holmes stories chosen by The Goose Club of the Alpha Inn, and original research papers and a Cockroach Bones pastiche; the 88-page book has been published on (and only on) the Internet, as with the latest best-seller by Stephen King, at it costs $6.00 to download the book at <www.mightywords.com>.
123. Frank Pape died on Mar. 5. He was regarded as Chicago's toughest cop, and his character and cases were used as a basis for the "M Squad" television series; he joined the force in 1933 and by the time he retired in 1972 he was credited with sending 300 men to prison, including five to the electric chair, and in 16 gun battles he shot and killed nine suspects. He took a leave of absence from 1961 to 1965 to head the security detail at Chicago's racetracks, where owners were concerned about syndicate bookmakers, many of whom Pape and his men knew by sight. He also was a good friend of Chicago Sherlockian Eugene Carey, Bob Mangler reports, and made sure the locals who attended runnings of the Silver Blaze in Chicago "got the royal treatment."
124. Jon Lellenberg notes that the authors at a "N.Y. Times Literary Lunch" at the Fairmont Copley Plaza in Boston on Apr. 9 will include Karl E. Meyer and Shareen Blair Brysac, authors of TOURNAMENT OF SHADOWS: THE GREAT GAME AND THE RACE FOR EMPIRE IN CENTRAL ASIA (Jan 00 #4); Meyer is a member of the Baker Street Irregulars, and the book has many allusions to the Canon. The cost of the lunch is $65.00 (212-556-1905).
125. Mar 00 #5: Dayna McCausland, as this year's "Meyers" of The Bootmakers of Toronto, has decided to set the Sherlockian apocrypha for discussion by the society, and George Vanderburgh has published a helpful 66-page pamphlet: BEYOND THE CANON contains "The Field Bazaar", "How Watson Learned the Trick", "The Story of the Man with the Watches", and "The Story of the Lost Special", with an introduction and notes by Cameron Hollyer and an afterword and illustrations by Dayna. It's available for US $7.00 postpaid from Dayna McCausland (Box 321, Erin, ON N0B 1T0, Canada).
126. Charles Gray died on Mar. 7. His wide-ranging career as a character actor included stage, screen, and television, and his best-known roles were Ernst Blofeld in the James Bond film "Diamonds Are Forever" (1971) and the narrator in "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" (1975). He also played a splendid Mycroft in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976) and in Granada's "The Greek Interpreter" (1985), "The Bruce-Partington Plans" (1988), and "The Creeping Man" (1991).
127. "Sherlock Holmes for President" proclaims the cover of the March issue of The Holmes & Watson report, and the contents offer a look at the possibilities, plus a new Sherlockian word-puzzle from Dana Richards, and much more. $16.00 a year for six issues ($22.00 outside North America), from Brad Keefauver, 4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.

128. Spotted recently on a bargain table: THE CRIME AND MYSTERY BOOK: A READER'S COMPANION, by Ian Ousby (London: Thames & Hudson, 1997; 224 pp., £12.95 but discounted to $7.00); it's an interesting and nicely-illustrated review of the genre, with due attention to Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle.
129. Janus Books has an excellent new Sherlockian catalog available at its website: go to <janusbooks.com> and click on "Sherlockiana" and you can view or download the catalog. And if you're not electronically-enabled, Mike Greenbaum will be glad to mail the catalog to you (Janus Books, Box 40787, Tucson, AZ 85717 (800-986-1165)).
130. Michael Lawrence is selling full-size reproductions of 20th-century London street signs, and is happy to include one for Baker Street N.W.1 ($185.00 postpaid). His company is Signpost International (19 Bramall Court, Peterborough, Cambridgeshire PE3 9RD, England) <www.signpost-international.com>; details available on request.
131. Hayward Cirker died on Mar. 8. He founded Dover Books in 1941 and specialized in publishing inexpensive paperback reprints of interesting books that brought good literature to millions of readers; the current series of Dover Thrift Editions ($1.00 to $2.00 each) offers THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES and SIX GREAT SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES, as well as Douglas G. Greene's 1998 anthology DETECTION BY GASLIGHT: 14 VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES.
132. David Morrill reports news from Hollywood: Don Knotts, five-time Emmy winner for his portrayal of bumbling Deputy Barney Fife on "The Andy Griffith Show", was honored Jan. 19 with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. "I can't believe I have my own star," Knotts said. I'm gonna come down here every morning and shine that sucker up." Knotts wore Sherlockian costume as Inspector Winship in the film "The Private Eyes" (1980).
133. Mar 00 #6: Alexander Orlov reports a review in The Economist (Mar. 18) of Jonathan Schneer's LONDON 1900: THE IMPERIAL METROPOLIS (Yale University Press, 1999; 416 pp., $29.95); according to the review, "in half a dozen entertaining pages, Mr. Schneer combs the Sherlock Holmes stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle for a rich store of imperial themes." The same issue has a review of WAINEWRIGHT THE POISONER, by Andrew Motion (New York: Knopf, 2000; 306 pp., $26.00) (and Faber & Faber £20.00); the biography's subject is Thomas Griffiths Wainwright (1794-1847), who was (according to Sherlock Holmes, in "The Illustrious Client") both a great criminal and no mean artist.
134. Sergio Martinez's attractive Sherlockian artwork has been published in the Portland House "Illustrated Classics" edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1988) and the Reader's Digest "World's Best Reading" edition of THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1988), and on the boxes for the audiocassettes of the BBC radio broadcasts starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams (1991-1999); an illustrated brochure for the original artwork for 27 of his illustrations (priced from $350 to $2,400) is available from Illustration House (96 Spring Street, New York, NY 10012 <www.illustration-house.com>.
135. The Bimetallic Question's flier for their Second Bimetallic Colloquium (at McGill University in Montreal on June 2-4) is now available from the society (Box 883, Stock Exchange Tower, Montreal, QC H4Z 1K2, Canada) <wilfrid@ defreitasbooks.com>.
136. Stephen Farrell died on Mar. 6. He was a banker and financial advisor, and an authority on small arms; he joined The Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 1977, served as a Member of Council 1984 to 1987, and contributed often to The Sherlock Holmes Journal in the 1980s and 1990s.
137. The Japan Sherlock Holmes Club has awarded its annual grand prize (for contributions to the Sherlockian world in Japan) to the publisher Hara Shobo, honoring the company for its publication of Japanese translations of HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS and MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, the anthologies of new pastiches edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg, and Carol-Lynn Waugh and first published in English in 1996 and 1999.
138. Tom Simmons died on Mar. 17. His long career in journalism led to the post of news editor of the Dallas Morning News, and he was a long-time member of The Diogenes Club of Dallas. His article on "Dartmoor: Tracking the Baskerville Hound" was published in the Dallas Morning News on Mar. 13, 1994.
139. The new issue of Scarlet Street (#37) has the second part of David Stuart Davies' article about his play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!" (with an interesting account of the tribulations encountered in getting it produced and the pleasures encountered when it eventually was), and the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre (including excellent tributes to Thorne Smith's "Topper" books, and the films based on the books. Subscriptions to the magazine cost $35.00 a year (six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452. And there's a web-site at <www.scarletstreet.com>.

140. Apr 00 #1: Further to the item (Aug 98 #2) about a Daily Telegraph report that Brian Blessed was in Venezuela, filming "The Lost World" for BBC television, it would appear that he was exploring rather than acting. Blessed has written a fine account of his expedition in QUEST FOR THE LOST WORLD (London: Bantam, 1999; 164 pp., £16.99), and notes that he first fell in love with the romance of the Lost World as a schoolboy, when he had a chance to listen to the BBC radio dramatization of the book.
141. John Baesch has forwarded a story from the Evening Standard (Mar. 20) about plans to sell a Stradivarius at Christie's in New York on May 5. It's the Taft Stradivarius, described as the most desirable Strad at auction since the Kreutzer Strad sold for $1.58 million in 1998. Sherlock Holmes did get a bargain when he paid 55 shillings for his Strad.
142. Abbey National is considering selling off and then leasing back its freehold buildings, including the head office at 221B Baker Street, according to a report from Reuters (Apr. 7) at hand from Ray Betzner. Abbey has 800 branches and a total of about three million square feet of office space; the sale and lease-back would free up capital to develop the core banking business (the freehold portfolio could be worth as much as £460 million).
143. Sorry about that: Charles Gray, who died last month (Mar 00 #5), played a fine Mycroft in Granada's "The Greek Interpreter" (1985), "The Bruce-Partington Plans" (1988), "The Golden Pince-Nez" (1994), and "The Mazarin Stone" (1994) -- and he didn't appear in their "The Creeping Man" (1991).
144. The opening of the University of Minnesota's new Elmer L. Andersen Library was celebrated on Apr. 8 with a gala ceremony. There are two caverns in the new underground library, with storage space totaling 2.5 million cubic feet; university librarian Tom Shaughnessy told the Minneapolis Star-Tribune that the $46.5 million library contains some of the most important research materials in the world, including the world's largest collection of Sherlock Holmes books and memorabilia.
145. Sy Weintraub died on Apr. 4. In 1958, against the advice of his friends, he acquired the rights to "Tarzan" and produced a new series of films that starred Gordon Scott, Jock Mahoney, and Mike Henry as Tarzan and featured supporting actors such as Sean Connery, Anthony Quayle, Helen Hayes, Diana Ross and the Supremes, John Carradine, Peter Cook, and Woody Strode; Weintraub retained the television rights, and went to become a highly successful television producer. Sherlockians are indebted to him for two television films that starred Ian Richardson as Holmes: "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" (broadcast by HBO cable in 1983).
146. Nancy Beiman has reported a reissue of the recording of the splendid music composed and conducted by Patrick Gowers for the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" television series, originally published by That's Entertainment Records in Britain (Dec 87 #6) and by Varese Sarabande Records in the United States (Feb 88 #2). The new CD is "Sherlock Holmes" (with the same 19 tracks and a revised booklet), issued by Jay Records in Britain, and it's available here at $17.97, discounted to $13.99 at <www.amazon.com>.

147. Apr 00 #2: The Strand Magazine (published from 1891 to 1950) brought Sherlock Holmes (and much more) to a wide readership, and the name of the magazine has been resurrected for a new periodical launched in the fall of 1998 and edited by Andrew F. Gulli. The magazine's focus is on the mystery genre, and it has had fine stories by authors such as Henry Slesar, Michael Gilbert, and H. R. F. Keating; and articles by Matthew Prichard on his grandmother Agatha Christie, and Barbara and Christopher Roden on Conan Doyle and other mystery writers. The fourth issue has just been published, and subscriptions (four issues) cost $24.95 (U.S. and Canada) or $29.95 (to other countries); Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (UK: 800-961-280) <www.magamall.com/magazine/96117/Strand.htm>.
148. The Speckled Band of Boston are celebrating their 60th anniversary with a poster ($15.00); also available are their 50th anniversary poster, wristwatches, neckties (four-in-hand and bow), and lapel pins, and you can request their sales-list from Richard Olken, 200 Hyslop Road, Brookline, MA 02445 <rick@bikesbelong.org>.
149. Spotted by Doug Wigglesworth: the Apr. issue of Firsts: The Book Collector's Magazine, with an article by Gary Lovisi's on "Not Conan Doyle: Sherlock Holmes: The Pastiche" and a checklist with current prices (and there also is an interesting article by William F. Nolan on "Collecting: Raymond Chandler"). $4.95; 4493 North Camino Gacela, Tucson, AZ 85718.
150. Noted by Caroline Bryan: Glow Dog (131-A Great Road, Bedford, MA 01730) (888-456-9364) <www.glowdog.com> offers a "Sherlock Bones" plush doll (20" high) for $350.00 (credit-card orders welcome).
151. Peter Calamai's career as a journalist was of great help in his research for a discussion of rare Victorian newspaper accounts of Sherlock Holmes at the 25th-anniversary festivities of The Bootmakers of Toronto in 1997, and you can see his discoveries for yourself in the spring 2000 issue of Canadian Holmes. $20.00 a year (four issues); checks payable to the society can be sent to Derek Thorpe (5 Brownlea Avenue, Toronto, ON M9P 2R5, Canada).
152. E. W. McDiarmid ("The Bruce-Partington Plans") died on Apr. 27. He served a director of the University of Minnesota library from 1943 to 1952, and then was Dean of the university's College of Liberal Arts. In 1948, Mac was one of the founders of The Norwegian Explorers, and helped the society celebrate its 50th anniversary (there are few Sherlockian societies indeed that have celebrated 50th anniversaries with a founder present). He helped edit two excellent Sherlockian anthologies, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1957, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1985.
153. Jerry Margolin notes that the fourth issue of THE GREAT DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES (Avalon Communications, $2.95) is in the comic-book shops, with "The Mystery of Pendennick Castle" (reprinted from the 1954 comic strip written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia); the magazine's address is 2800 Halpern, St-Laurent, QC H4S 1R2, Canada.
154. Apr 00 #3: Julie McKuras reports that the Hallmark Collectors Club has announced that one of this year's Hallmark ornaments will be "The Detective" (Snoopy, dressed in standard Sherlockian costume, accompanied by Woodstock in Watsonian costume); the ornament will be in Hallmark stores on July 15, priced at $9.95.
155. Another translation noted by Fred Levin: a two-volume Thai translation of THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES; $9.38 plus shipping ($18.80 by air or $9.00 by sea to the U.S., but possibly different to other countries), available from the Chulalongkorn University Book Center, P.O. Box 2011, Chulalongkorn Post Office, Phythai Road, Bangkok 10330, Thailand <info@cubook.chula.ac.th> <www.cubook.com> (credit-card orders welcome).
156. John Sladek died on Mar. 10. Best known as a science-fiction author who specialized in satire and parody, he also wrote fine mysteries, including BLACK AURA (1979), in which his detective Thackeray Phin investigates (with due deference to Sherlock Holmes) a spiritualist mystery.
157. Steve Tolins has served as official quizmaster (described by Joe Fink as a "fearsome inquisitor") for The Three Garridebs for 15 years, and a baker's dozen of his quizzes, together with a fine assortment of his Sherlockian essays, have been collected in SHERLOCKIAN TWADDLE, with illustrations by Paul Churchill. 156 pp., $25.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada.
158. John Sherwood will appear as Sherlock Holmes (discussing one or more unpublished cases involving Freemasons) at the anniversary meeting (and ladies night) of the Patmos Masonic Lodge of Ellicott City at 7:00 pm on May 22nd (at the Candle Light Inn in Catonsville, Md.). The cost of the dinner is $29.00 (including tax and tip), and additional details are available from S. Brent Morris (7780 Blueberry Hill Lane, Ellicott City, MD 21043) (410-796-7984) <sbrentm@home.com>.
159. It is interesting to see how the World Wide Web is beginning to have an impact on publishing. At least one Sherlockian book has been published on (and only on) the Internet: GOOSE'S CHOICE, edited by John Farrell and John P. Sohl and available at <www.mightywords.com> [Mar 00 #4]. And a company called Xlibris has gone a step farther, offering to publish books as trade paperbacks or in electronic form at no cost to the author, distributing via bookselling channels such as Amazon, Borders, and Barnes & Noble, as well as at the company's web-site at <www.xlibris.com>. Xlibris also offers information at a toll-free telephone number (888-795-4274). Machines such as Ingram's Lightning Print and a new on-site press called BookBuilder are examples of the new technology available, and are described in an interesting article by Linton Weeks in the Washington Post (Apr. 24), which can be read on-line at <www.washingtonpost.com>.
160. The Practical, But Limited Geologists met for dinner at Ralph and Kacoo's in New Orleans on Apr. 19, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, to honor the world's first forensic geologist, and we were welcomed to the Big Easy by Robin Leckbee of The Mystik Krewe of Sherlock Holmes. Our next dinners will be in Reno in November, and in Denver in June and in Boston in November 2001.

161. Apr 00 #4: And here's a reminder that "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (the BBC-2 two-part mini-series starring Robin Laing as Arthur Conan Doyle and Ian Richardson as Joseph Bell) will be broadcast on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV on May 18 and 25. it is interesting to see Richardson, who has played Holmes, portray the man who contributed so much to Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, and David Pirie's script has some fine twists, turns, and surprises.
162. About 75 people are expected at the Pleasant Places of Florida's Sunshine State Sherlockian Scion Symposium II at the Dolphin Beach Resort in St. Pete Beach, Fla., on June 9-11, 2000; there's a full agenda scheduled and, additional details are available from Carl Heifetz (3693 Siena Lane, Palm Harbor, FL 34685) <microdoc@gte.net>.
163. Edward Gorey died on Apr. 15. He was a genius of the macabre as an artist and author, from his first book, THE UNSTRUNG HARP (1953), to his animated artwork for the opening and closing credits for the PBS-TV series "Mystery!". He first drew Holmes and Watson for THE CASE OF THE HEAVY READER: A PASTICHE FOR MADISON AVENUE, a brochure published by Esquire in 1967 to persuade companies to advertise in the magazine. He also provided Canonical artwork for Kingsley Amis' "The Darkwater Hall Mystery" in Playboy (May 1978), D. R. Benson's IRENE, GOOD-NIGHT (1982), and the jacket of the American edition of THE D. CASE: THE TRUTH ABOUT THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD (1992), and a portrait of Macavity: The Mystery Cat for a new edition of T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS (1982).
164. News for members of The Baker Street Irregulars, and ladies who have been honored as The Woman: the BSI's Shameless Commerce Division (aka George McCormack & Wayne and Francine Swift) has received a new shipment of rosettes ($10.00 postpaid/$11.00 outside the United States), bow

- ties, four-in-hand ties, scarves (48 x 6 in.), and cummerbunds (each $29.95/$32.95); all in the BSI's official colors (purple, blue, and mouse), and (sorry about that) available only to members of the BSI and (the scarves) to The Women. Your orders can be sent to George J. McCormack (615 Third Street, Brooklyn, NY 11215 (checks payable to George); those wishing to pay in sterling can send checks payable to Francine Swift.
165. Sorry about that: correcting the report on Britain's first diplomatic mission to Mecca (Mar 00 #3), Mona Morstein has noted that it was in 1853 (not 1883) that Sir Richard Burton visited Mecca.
166. "Try one of these cigars" (as Sherlock Holmes proposed, in "The Sign of the Four"), and you may even wish to keep them in your coal-scuttle. Sherlockian cigar-smokers (as well as S'ian collectors who don't smoke cigars) are invited to acquire the new "221b Baker Street Collection" of six cigars (in Churchill, Torpedo, Pyramid, Lonsdale, Corona, and Grand Corona sizes) with Sherlockian labels and in an attractive display case, available for $30.00 (plus shipping) from GSI (485 South Illinois Route 59, PMB 175, Aurora, IL 60504) (877-430-7476) <www.CUs4Cigars.com>.
167. Apr 00 #5: Andre Deutsch died on Apr. 11. Born in Hungary, he emigrated to Britain in 1939 and soon became a publisher; his first major success was the British edition of Norman Mailer's THE NAKED AND THE DEAD (condemned by The Sunday Times in 1949 as something that should not be left around lest women might read it), and his company's Sherlockian titles include Richard Hughes' FOREIGN DEVIL: THIRTY YEARS OF REPORTING FROM THE FAR EAST (1972) and Julian Symons' PORTRAIT OF AN ARTIST: CONAN DOYLE (1979).
168. There's more news about this year's running of The Silver Blaze at Saratoga Race Track on Saturday, Aug. 19 (Jan 00 #5): "Sherlock at Saratoga" will be a weekend event, with lunch "At the Rail" (a lovely tented pavilion offering a buffet and a nice view of the races); post time is 12:30 pm. And on Sunday morning, Aug. 20, there will be a Sherlockian brunch in the elegant Whitney Room of the Saratogan Sheraton, with distinguished speakers and an excellent meal. The cost of the event (admission to the track, lunch, and brunch) is $95.00, and checks (payable to the Baker Street Irregulars) can be sent to Lou Lewis (11 Raymond Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603).
169. Participants are invited to make their own hotel reservations, and sooner rather than later, since lots of people go to the races in Saratoga. The Hilton Garden Inn in Saratoga costs $228.00 a night (and a two-night stay is required); the telephone number for reservations is 800-445-8667 (Wayne Swift notes that AARP members qualify for a $225.00 rate). And a block of rooms has been reserved at the Holiday Inn in Albany (about a half hour's drive from the track) with a discount rate of $128.00 a night (reservations for one night only are welcome); the phone number is 800-465-4329.
170. And there's plenty to do in Saratoga before and after the races and such: antiquing and shopping, the National Museum of Racing, the National Museum of Dance, the Saratoga Spa State Park, the Historical Society of Saratoga Springs, and (for Revolutionary War buffs) the Saratoga National Historical Park. Lou will be happy to answer questions by mail (see above) or e-mail <lewisgreer@aol.com>, and to supply a detailed schedule to those who register for the festivities.
171. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, EPISODE 4, read by Edward Hardwicke, is the latest audiocassette set available from CSA Telltapes (101 Chamberlayne Road, London NW10 3ND, England) <www.csatelltapes.demon.co.uk>. As always, Hardwicke is an excellent Watson reading three stories (Croo/Gree/Nava) on two cassettes. £8.99 postpaid in Britain; £9.99 elsewhere. Note: earlier available from Tangled Web Audio as SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF INTRIGUE (Nov 95 #2). CSA also has CLASSIC DETECTIVE STORIES read by Hardwicke on four cassettes (one of the stories is "The Dying Detective"); the story also was earlier available from Tangled Web (Sep 93 #3).
172. Dave Galerstein and Caroline Bryan, hoping to provide a wider audience for some of the better papers delivered at meetings of Sherlockian societies, are planning to edit an anthology, and invite authors or archivists to submit suitable material ("we are interested in quality," Dave notes, "especially Sherlockian humor") (and, Caroline adds, toasts, lyrics, cartoons, and graphics). The new collection will be similar to A SINGULAR SET OF PEOPLE (edited by Dave and Marlene Aig in 1990), and Dave's address is: 49 Stonewyck Place, Monroe Township, NJ 08831 <davebsi@erols.com>.
-
173. Apr 00 #6: The weekly syndicated radio series "Imagination Theater" continues to broadcast 22-minute Sherlock Holmes programs written by Jim French (Apr 99 #3). Sixteen Sherlockian shows will have aired by the end of May, and they all are available (along with many other shows) on cassette or CD ($7.99 each postpaid) from TransMedia, 719 Battery Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 (800-229-7234) <www.transmediasf.com> (credit-card orders welcome).
174. Hugh Scullion (Cadds Printing, 59 Lancaster Avenue, West Norwood, London SE27 9EL, England) <hometown.aol.com/beetons> offers an illustrated saleslist of Sherlockian books, postcards, posters, calendars, keyfobs, etc.
175. Bud Livingston's ANATOMICALLY, MY DEAR WATSON offers "some trifling monographs on Canonical body parts" (extending to beards and voices, with some intriguing thoughts on why so many people in the Canon have grey eyes); the 58-page pamphlet is available for $9.95 (plus shipping) from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <www.sherlock-holmes.com>.
176. Also available from Classic Specialties is a 56-page pamphlet with 366 EXCUSES FOR A SHERLOCKIAN PARTY (or at least a commemoration) in which Joel and Carolyn Senter provide one or more Canonical or Sherlockian events that can be celebrated on each day of the year; $12.95 (plus shipping).
177. Alexander H. Cohen died on Apr. 22. He was one of the most flamboyant and successful theatrical producers, beginning his career with "Angel Street" in 1941 (the play starred Vincent Price and was filmed as "Gaslight") to Noel Coward's "Waiting in the Wings" (starring Lauren Bacall and Rosemary Harris and now playing on Broadway). His production of the musical "Baker Street" (with Fritz Weaver, Peter Sallis, Martin Gabel, and Inga Swenson) has 313 performances on Broadway in 1965, undoubtedly thanks to promotion that included a massive marquee display featuring animated figures from the show, young ladies in "Palace Guard" costumes assisting customers standing in line for tickets, and a theater-lobby exhibit of the manuscript of "The Greek Interpreter", bought at auction at Christie's in Dec. 1964 by Lew D. Feldman on behalf of Adrian Conan Doyle for $12,600 (then the highest price ever paid for a manuscript of any short story by any author, and there was a persistent rumor that Cohen had contributed toward the purchase price as an investment in publicity for the musical).
178. Jay Hyde notes that the May issue of Biography (published by Arts & Entertainment for those who watch the series on A&E cable) has a long article by John Kehoe about "The Case of the Murderous Author: Why Arthur Conan Doyle Tried to Kill Sherlock Holmes" (the magazine may be available at bookshops such as Borders and Barnes & Noble).
179. The Pequot Press continues to publish its proprietor's poetry and prose, as always nicely hand-set, hand-printed and bound; the latest titles are MONGOOSE & MENDICANTS (a collection of verse) and THE ADVENTURE OF THE BEEPING MAN (another Turlock Loams tale); each book costs $40.00 in cloth or $20.00 in paper, from John Ruyle, 521 Vincente Avenue, Berkeley, CA 94707.

180. May 00 #1: The fourth issue of the new Strand Magazine has arrived, with editor Andrew Gulli's interesting interviews with Michael Cox (the first producer of the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" series) and David Suchet (who is ready to do more "Poirot" programs), and a review by H. R. F. Keating of the TV mini-series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes"; subscriptions (four issues) cost $24.95 (U.S. and Canada) or $29.95 (elsewhere), from Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (UK: 800-961-280) <www.magamall.com/magazine/96117/Strand.htm>.

181. Laura Kuhn reports that Ian Richardson's "The Sign of Four" (1983) will be released on DVD on June 27; $14.99 plus shipping from <www.cduniverse.com>, and one assumes that's also a discount street price.
182. The obituary for Sy Weintraub (Apr 00 #1) listed Peter Cook as one of the many actors who appeared in Weintraub's "Tarzan" films. Dave ("I've seen this one a million times since I was a lad") Morrill reports that the end credits for "Tarzan Goes to India" show a Peter Cooke as the foreman in the building-the-dam sequences, and Peter Cooke certainly isn't Peter Cook.
183. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers tributes to Vincent Starrett, Grant Allen, and Olga Katzin, and reports on the collections and the library. If you'd like to be on their mailing list you should contact Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
184. Laura Sifurova has reported that the Russian television series (1979-1986) that starred Vasily Livanov and Vitaly Solomin has been repackaged with a new framing story that stars Alexei Petrenko (Arthur Conan Doyle), Larisa Udovichenko (his wife), and Sergei Bekhterev (his secretary Alfred Wood) in a thirteen-part mini-series "Vospominaniya o Sherloke Kholmse" that aired on Russian public television (ORT) in April. But only eleven episodes were broadcast, because a private company that claims to own the rights to the original series sued, and an arbitration court ruled that the new series was using too much from the old series, and it may be a long time (if ever) before the final two episodes are seen.
185. "Nothing stirred over the vast expanse save a pair of ravens, which croaked loudly from a tor behind us," Dr. Watson wrote (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). And you can find a pair of ravens in the design of our new sheet of Pacific Coast Rain Forest stamps.
186. It will be interesting to see just what the impact is on Sherlockian philately (and on philatelic Sherlockians) of the new of P-Stamps (called vanity stamps by some). Personalized stamps were introduced by Australia in 1999: Australia Post printed your own photograph on tabs attached to each stamp in a sheet of Australian stamps. The most recent nations to join the movement are Great Britain and Canada; one assumes that it won't be long before we see P-Stamps that honor Sherlock Holmes and other Canonical characters (Canada Post will charge $24.95 for a booklet of 25 standard 46c stamps).
187. May 00 #2: Penelope Fitzgerald died on Apr. 28. She was the daughter and niece of great names in the Sherlockian world: her father was E. V. Knox, who used the pen-name "Evoe" when he edited Punch in the years when it published much Sherlockian material, and one of her uncles was Ronald Knox, inventor of the grand game so many Sherlockians play. She wrote a fine biography of THE KNOX BROTHERS in 1977 (her other uncles were Dillwyn, a classical scholar and a noted code-breaker in both World Wars, and Wilfred, an Anglo-Catholic priest and teacher). That was the year she began her literary career, at the age of 60, and she went on to win England's prestigious Booker Prize in 1979 and the U.S. National Book Critics Circle Award in 1998.
188. Laura Kuhn reports that the latest mail-order catalog from Skeletons in the Closet (1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033) offers their Sherlockian skeleton mascot on coffee mugs, buttons, mouse pads, baseball caps, T-shirts, pins, etc. Profits help support the Los Angeles County Coroner's Department's Youthful Drunk Driver Visitation Program.
189. THE OXFORD COMPANION TO CRIME AND MYSTERY WRITING, edited by Rosemary Herbert (London: Oxford University Press, 1999; 608 pp., £30.00/$50.00), has had excellent reviews, and (of course) does not neglect Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle.
190. Congratulations to Daniel Stashower, who has won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America (for the best critical/biographical work) and an Agatha from Malice Domestic (for the best non-fiction work) for his biography of Arthur Conan Doyle, TELLER OF TALES. The Edgar is a juried award, and the Agatha is awarded by vote of those attending the convention, and it's rare for an author to win both awards the same year.
191. Malice Domestic XII was great fun, of course, with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as the ghost of honor. There was a session titled "A Study in Sir Arthur" with panelists Carole Nelson Douglas, Roberta Rogow, Walter Satterthwait, and Daniel Stashower (and Peter Blau as moderator), and Dan Stashower and Verena Rose presided over a Sherlockian "In Jeopardy at Malice" contest, and Douglas G. Greene's convention souvenir from Crippen & Landru was a reprint of Conan Doyle's "The Surgeon of Gaster Fell" (from the original periodical text) with an afterword by Dan Stashower.
192. Malice Domestic sessions are audiotaped, and you can purchase a copy of "A Study in Sir Arthur" (session 021) from Audio Recording Services (1103 Butterworth Court, Stevensville, MD 21666) <www.ars-service.com>; $11.00 postpaid. Copies of the reprint of "The Surgeon of Gaster Fell" are offered by Crippen & Landru free to those who buy at least one of their other books.
193. One such book might be DIAGNOSIS: IMPOSSIBLE, a collection of stories by Ed Hoch about Dr. Sam Hawthorne (Mar 96 #1); the book has just been reprinted, and one of the stories is "The Problem of the Covered Bridge" (there's an appropriate Sherlockian allusion); $17.25 postpaid. Or THE VELVET TOUCH, a collection of Ed's stories about Nick Velvet (including "The Theft of the Sherlockian Slipper"), due in late June or early July; $40.00 cloth/$16.00 paper. Crippen & Landru's address is Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (tollfree 877-662-6656) <www.crippenlandru.com>.
194. May 00 #3: Malice Domestic XIII will be held May 4-6, 2001, at the Crystal Gateway Marriott in Arlington, Va.; Margaret Maron will be the guest of honor, and Rex Stout the ghost of honor. If you would like to be on the mailing list, you can write to Malice Domestic (Box 31137, Bethesda, MD 20824); there's a web-site at <www.erols.com/malice>. A bit nearer on the calendar is Bouchercon 2000 at the Adam's Mark Hotel in Denver (their motto is "High Crimes") on Sept. 7-10, with Elmore Leonard as the guest of honor; Box 17910, Boulder, CO 80308 <www.bouchercon2000.com>. Bouchercon 2001 ("A Capital Mystery") will be held in Washington, at the Hyatt Regency Crystal City on Nov. 1-4, 2001, with Sue Grafton as American guest of honor and Peter Lovesey as international guest of honor; Box 11700, Washington, DC 20008 <www.bouchercon2001.com>.
195. Reported by Christopher Roden: a new four-DVD set AN EVENING WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES with four Rathbone/Bruce films ("Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon", "The Woman in Green", "Terror by Night", and Dressed to Kill"); theatrical trailers; film production notes; a photo gallery; and the sound-on-film interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; plus 15 hours of Rathbone/Bruce "Sherlock Holmes" radio broadcasts. The list price is $69.96. The films are the four that are in the public domain; Les Klinger notes that the DVD versions are not from high-quality masters, but the quality of the interview and the radio shows is excellent.
196. The set of four "Great Mouse Detective" mini bean bags (Basil, Dr. Dawson, Olivia, and Ratigan) is back in the Disney catalog, at $24.00 the set (item 20078-560). The Disney Catalog, Box 29144, Shawnee Mission, KS 66201 (800-237-5751) <www.disneystore.com>.
197. The Liberton Bank House saga continues: further to the earlier report (Feb 00 #1) about attempts to save the house where Arthur Conan Doyle lived when he was five to seven years old from being demolished so that McDonald's can build a restaurant on the site, a story in the Edinburgh Evening News (May 4) noted that McDonald's and its partner Pearl Assurance have warned that if their plans are thwarted they will sue for up to £1.7 million - and if they're given an okay to build the restaurant they may sue for "significant compensation" from the city council for the delay. The story also reports that Pearl bought the property in 1997 for £245,000.

198. The 500-member Japan Society Scotland joined the campaign to preserve the house, which was owned by the Burton family when the Doyles lived there. William K. Burton, who was a childhood friend of Conan Doyle, was invited by the Japanese government to teach sanitary engineering at the Imperial University of Tokyo, and married a Japanese woman and settled in Kyoto, which now is Edinburgh's sister city.
199. And the preservationists have won, no doubt assisted by the fact that Mary Burton, owner of the house in the 1860s, was the first woman governor of what is now Edinburgh's Heriot Watt University, and perhaps in defiant reaction to McDonald's bullying tactics: on May 24, Historic Scotland decided to list the house as a building of special interest that cannot be altered or demolished unless special permission is granted. Allen Simpson, a local resident and historian who led the campaign to save the house, said "this almost certainly means plans to demolish it will be turned down."
200. May 00 #4: Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) has published THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 5; the book contains 76 pages of pastiche, poetry, song, and serious writing by members of The Hounds of the Interne. Most of the material is new, but a few items have appeared elsewhere; the cost is $9.00/CA$13.00/$9.00/£5.00/AU$9.00 postpaid by air (payment in currency preferred, but checks are acceptable).
201. David Stuart Davies' play "Sherlock Holmes...The Last Act!" (starring Roger Llewellyn as Holmes) was performed on tour in Britain last year to excellent reviews, and for an enthusiastic Sherlockian audience in New York during the birthday festivities in January, and it will be on tour in eastern Canada in June and July: at the Centaur Theatre (Montreal) on June 4-7; St. Luke's Church Theatre (Ottawa) on June 9-11; The Playhouse (Fredericton) on June 13-14; the Centenary Theatre (Saint John) on June 15-18; the Neptune theatre (Halifax) on June 22-25; the Waterloo Stage Theatre (Waterloo) on June 28-29; the Market Centre (Woodstock) on July 4-5; the Old Factory Theatre (London) on July 6-9; the Von Ayres CC Theatre (Wallaceburg) on July 11-12; Mackenzie Hall (Windsor) on July 14-15, and the Palmerstown Library Theatre (Toronto) on July 19-29. The tour is produced by the Federal Bureau of Entertainment (29205 Greening Boulevard, Farmington Hills, MI 48334) <jsapub@aol.com>; FBE's proprietor, Joseph S. Ajlouny, would be delighted to hear from a booking agent interested in arranging a tour in the U.S.
202. Further to the report (Jan 00 #1) that sculptor John Doubleday is working on his third statue of Sherlock Holmes, the statue is to be installed in 2002 outside the village of Meiringen, facing the Reichenbach Falls. And in the meantime, Michael Meer reports, there is a limited edition of small statuettes, in solid bronze, 32 cm high on a wooden base; one of them is for sale now, and you can contact Michael at Morgenstrasse 70/1/1, CH-3018 Bern, Switzerland <sherlock.holmes@gmx.net>.
203. Jerry Margolin spotted the new comic book STAR TREK: THE NEXT GENERATION -EMBRACE THE WOLF (Wildstorm/DC Comics, $5.95); 7910 Ivanhoe Avenue #438, La Jolla, CA 92037. The story brings back Redjac, the villain of the episode "Wolf in the Fold" written by Robert Block in 1967; Data once again appears in Sherlockian costume on the holodeck.
204. In his preface to The Crowborough Edition (1930), Arthur Conan Doyle wrote that "the small book, *The Parasite*, has also a psychic, or at any rate a psychological, interest." The story, first published in 1894, only a year after he joined the Society for Psychical Research, deals with mesmerism and obsession, and there's a new edition with an introduction by Martin Edmonds, who discusses Conan Doyle's interest in spiritualism and the supernatural. The 69-page booklet is available from Rupert Books (58/59 Stonefield, Bar Hill, Cambridge CB3 8TE, England) <rupert_books@compuserve.com>; £13.26 postpaid (to the UK) or $22.82 (to the US) or £13.83 (elsewhere). Checks payable to R. D. Smith, please; credit-card orders welcome.
205. Rupert Books also published A STUDY IN CELLULOID: A PRODUCER'S ACCOUNT OF JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Michael Cox (the first producer of the Granada series); Dixon Smith describes it as "the most popular, best-selling, award-winning Sherlockian book" of 1999. 235 pp. and 21 photographs; £19.00 plus shipping from Rupert Books (address above).
206. May 00 #5: Les Klinger reports a facsimile edition of WHITAKER'S ALMANACK 1900, published by Stationery Office Books in London (928 pp., £25.00); in the section about "Landmarks in the History of Whitaker's Almanack" the entry for 1914 is: "In THE VALLEY OF FEAR, Sherlock Holmes uses the Almanack to decode a message." WHITAKER'S ALMANACK still is published, by the way; the 2000 edition (1,291 pp.) costs £40.00.
207. David Waxman (Estates of Mind, 217 Shoreward Drive, Great Neck, NY 11021) (516-487-5160) <www.estatesofmind.com> offers a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887 (with "A Study in Scarlet"): the text pages only, without wrappers or advertisements, bound together with Bow Bells Annual for 1870 in contemporary cloth. He believes that the book was purchased shortly before or after WWII by an Englishman and has been in the family since, and surfaced last year in England. The asking price is $20,000.
208. Bloomsbury Book Auctions (3 & 4 Hardwick Street, London EC1R 4RY, England) <www.bloomsbury-book-auct.com> offers 79 lots (#258-336) of Sherlock Holmes material in an auction on June 15, including first editions, first appearances in periodicals, and other items. The items are described at the website, and the catalog costs £10.00 (UK and Europe) or $21.00 (US/Canada) or £12.00 (elsewhere).
209. Peter Calamai reports that the final mailing for the Second Bimetallic Colloquium is available; the convention will be held at McGill University in Montreal on June 2-4, and there's a fine assembly of speakers. Additional information is available from The Bimetallic Colloquium (Box 883, Stock Exchange Tower, Montreal, QC H4Z 1K2, Canada) <wilfrid@defreitasbooks.com>.
210. The next meeting of The Sub-Librarians Scion will be at 4:30 pm on Sunday, July 9, at the Sheraton Chicago Hotel (Ballroom 9/10) during the annual conference of the American Library Association; the guest speaker will be Philip Jose Farmer, and there's no charge to attend. Additional information is available from Marsha Pollak (1318 Mildred Avenue, San Jose, CA 95125) <dsp66@aol.com>.
211. The 18th annual "Autumn in Baker Street" will be held at the Tarrytown Hilton in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Oct. 28-29, with an agenda full of Sherlockian doings and undos. This will be the last event in the series, Bob Thomalen has announced, and more information is available from Paula Perry (one of the stalwart band assisting Bob with his swan song); her address is 346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10128 (212-348-8817) <pjperry@msn.com>.
212. The U.S. Navy and the U.S. Postal Service are celebrating the 100th anniversary of the submarine service, and a new sheet of stamps includes one showing the USS Holland, which was accepted for service on Apr. 11, 1900. It was designed by Joseph P. Holland, who may or may not have been aware of the earlier Bruce-Partington plans.
213. For the electronically-enabled: Stephen Davies has reported to the Gaslight mailing list that mp3lit.com (a web-site with excerpts from talking books) offers a chance to hear Basil Rathbone read from Edgar Allan Poe's "The Pit and the Pendulum". The URL is <www.mp3lit.com/fiction/poe.html>.
214. May 00 #6: Richard Lancelyn Green and John Michael Gibson's A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE (1983) is an invaluable reference for anyone who collects Arthur Conan Doyle's works; long out-of-print (and seldom seen advertised by used-book dealers, since those who own and use the book tend to keep it). The bibliography is available again in a revised and expanded edition (New York: Hudson House, 2000; 726 pp., $100.00/£65.00); it's a reprint of the first edition, with 14 pages of addenda and corrigenda, and it is nice indeed to see it back in print. It's available from the Mysterious Bookshop (127 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019) <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> and from Nigel Williams (22 Cecil Court, Charing Cross, London WC2N 4HE, England) <www.nigelwilliams.com>; shipping is additional, and creditcard orders are welcome.

215. The May issue of The Holmes & Watson Report offers Brad Keefauver's consideration of the similarities between Sherlockian scholarship and professional wrestling and Dave Morrill's return visit to "BrettBash '95", and other reverent and irreverent approaches to the Canon; $16.00 a year for six issues ($22.00 outside North America), from Brad Keefauver, 4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614.
216. Reported: Dan Kilcup's CHINESE BOX MYSTERIES: SHERLOCK HOLMES offered three pastiches (Jul 96 #3), and there are eight new stories in CHINESE BOX MYSTERIES: VOLUME TWO (260 pp.), due this month. $16.00 postpaid from Allen Wayne Ltd., 14121 Parke Long Court #104, Chantilly, VA 20151 (703-321-7414) (800-695-8880) <www.allenwayne.com>; credit-card orders welcome.
217. "Footprints of the Hound" (celebrating the centenary of the first publication of "The Hounds of the Baskervilles in The Strand Magazine) has been rescheduled, and will be held in Toronto on Oct. 19-21, 2001 (Doug Wrigglesworth notes that the International Organization of Chiefs of Police has block-booked all of the decent hotel and meeting rooms in Toronto on the weekend the festival was planned to be held). If you'd like to be on their mailing list, the address is HOUND2001, 18 Jackson Avenue, Etobicoke, ON M8X 2J3, Canada <sherlox@attglobal.net>.
218. "Stop being Sherlock Holmes," Israeli president Ezer Weizman told a reporter last month, according to a Reuters dispatch that ran in the Philadelphia Inquirer on Apr. 10 (at hand from Syd Goldberg). Weizman, his reputation damaged by a secret-gifts scandal, had announced plans to resign some time before his term expires in 2003, but would not give a specific date.
219. Scott Monty notes news of a modern "Aurora" rather more grandiose, but no less problem-free, than the one in the Canon: "Lauded Luxury Liner Limp Home" was the headline on an Associated Press dispatch from London that reported that a luxury super-liner christened with great fanfare last month had developed a mechanical problem and headed home, just one day into its maiden voyage. An overheated propellor shaft on the $320 million "Aurora" forced the liner to return to its home port of Southampton, and a two-week Mediterranean cruise for 1,800 passengers was canceled. The ship had been christened by Princess Anne, but the traditional champagne bottle failed to break against the side of the ship, a bad omen to seafarers. The "Aurora" is Britain's largest cruise liner, with five lounges, 12 bars, five restaurants, a theater, a concert hall and cinema, and three swimming pools.

220. May 00 #7: Sir John Gielgud died on May 21. He made his professional acting debut as a walk-on herald in "Henry V" at London's Old Vic in 1921 and appeared in a silent-movie melodrama in 1924, and went on to become a consummate actor and director, winning a Tony as the director of "Big Fish, Little Fish" on Broadway in 1961, and an Oscar as the austere butler Hobson in "Arthur" (1982). He played Sherlock Holmes (with Ralph Richardson as Dr. Watson) in 16 delightful 30-minute radio broadcasts produced by the BBC in 1954, and Lord Salisbury in Christopher Plummer's film "Murder by Decree" (1979).
221. My long-weekend first-time-ever visit to Disney World in Florida was quite enjoyable, with splendid weather, helpful staff, uncrowded theme parks, and lots of interesting things to see, even though a long weekend offered time to visit only two of the parks (Epcot and Disney-MGM Studios). There's not much Sherlockian at Disney World, except for occasional glimpses of Basil and Dr. Dawson in some of the animation shows (Disney Store merchandise is an entirely different set-up, and the mini bean bags aren't sold at Disney World), and the movie memorabilia available at Sid Cahuenga's One of a Kind shop, which offers lobby cards and posters from "The Great Mouse Detective" and (no longer available) a "certificate of alien claiming residence in the United States" signed and dated by Basil Rathbone in 1965.
222. Sid Cahuenga's shop has some serious memorabilia, including movie props and clothes, and books from Marilyn Monroe's library, and prices are serious as well, but other material is quite reasonable. Actually, there is something else Sherlockian at Disney World: "Sherlock Goofy" T-shirts and pins that were given to cast members (employees) who participated in a treasure hunt a while back and now available in a special store that's open only to cast members. And no, you can't sign up as a very-short-term employee.
223. There also was time to visit the Grosvenor Resort, and inspect Moriarty's Pub, and Baskervilles Restaurant, and the recreation of the sitting room at 221b Baker Street furnished by the Werbys (the west-coast version still is in storage and available for rental); if you know of a restaurant or hotel that might want to display it, you should contact Willy Werby at 2700 19th Street, San Francisco, CA 94110 <mycroft813@aol.com>.
224. A spoiler alert: those who have not yet seen the mini-series "Murder Rooms" should skip the rest of this paragraph and go directly to the next page of the newsletter. Still here? Okay: American television viewers did not see exactly the same version of "Murder Rooms" that British viewers saw. For one thing, the mini-series was titled "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" in Britain, and "Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes" in the United States. But that was only a minor difference; more interesting were the closing credits for the second episode, which in Britain offered viewers more information about the villainous Neill: "Dr. Thomas Neill Cream did attend medical school alongside Arthur Conan Doyle. Finally convicted as a serial killer, Neill was hanged at Newgate Prison in 1892. To this day he remains a prime suspect in the case of Jack the Ripper." In the United States the closing credits did not mention Cream. It is likely that after the program aired in Britain someone pointed out that Cream studied at the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons in Edinburgh, not with Conan Doyle at Edinburgh University.

225. May 00 #8: David Spencer Smith's article on "The Dog and the Afghanistan Campaign Medal" in the May issue of the NI Bulletin (at hand from Bob Fritsch) discusses the penny-size medallion available at the Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire, and Wiltshire Regimental Museum in Salisbury, honoring the battle of Maiwand with portraits of Queen Victoria and the rough-haired terrier Bobbie; a display at the museum notes the similarity between the severe injury sustained by Dr. Watson at Maiwand with the injury suffered by Surgeon-Major A. F. Preston, as recorded in the official 66th (Berkshire) Regimental History. The magazine is published by Numismatics International (Box 670013, Dallas, TX 75367); $2.00.
226. "BBC seeks ratings triumph with Conan Doyle epic combining technology and costume drama," according to The Guardian (May 23), which reported that the BBC aims to repeat the ratings bonanza won by its acclaimed "Walking with Dinosaurs" (which aired on the Discovery channel here). "The Lost World" will be a £5 million project, with filming on location in Australia or New Zealand from January to March, and some scenes shot in London. The adaptation will be largely faithful to the book, according to co-producer Jane Tranter (head of drama serials), but a new female character has been introduced to spice up the plot. "A load of sweaty men would be a bit dull," she said, adding that the character will be a "plucky lass," and that "love does eventually blossom." The other co-producer, Tim Haines (who was responsible for "Walking with Dinosaurs") said that Conan Doyle's novel, while not a classic, was a "rollicking good story." The BBC's plans call for the program to air as a mini-series with two 75-minute episodes at Christmas in 2001.
227. The next grand gourmet Sherlock Holmes dinner at the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., will be held on May 12, 2001, and Al and Julie Rosenblatt and Fritz Sonnenschmidt are again hard at work on plans for the event. The dinner is a year away, and no price has been set, and reservations are not being accepted; if you would like to be on the mailing list for more information (when it's ready), send a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Rosenblatts (300 Freedom Road, Pleasant Valley, NY 12569), and they will send a mailing to you some months from now. There may still be rooms available at the historic Beekman Arms in Rhinebeck (800-361-6517); information on other hotels in the vicinity of the CIA will also be available anon.

228. Fritz is the culinary dean at the CIA, and he is featured in the February issue of Chef Educator Today, at hand from Joe Coppola. "When he's not directing the futures of chef-hopefuls, Fritz Sonnenschmidt lives a life of crime," the sub-head to the article notes, and there's a photograph of him with his deerstalker and calabash.
229. If you'd like to see how much fun a past CIA dinner was, copies of Al and Julie's 20-page souvenir menu for "An Evening in Scarlet" on May 16, 1987, handsomely devised, designed, and produced, with many illustrations, annotations, and explanations, are still available; $20.00 postpaid (checks to and payable to Peter E. Blau, please).

230. Jun 00 #1: Katherine McMahon ("Lucy Ferrier") died on Dec. 26, 1999. She was the last survivor of the elite band who earned membership in The Baker Street Irregulars by submitting correct solutions to the Sherlock Holmes Crossword that was devised by Frank V. Morley and published by Christopher Morley in the Saturday Review of Literature on May 19, 1934. Katherine received a Queen Victoria Medal from the BSI in 1990, but it was not until 1991 that she received her Investiture and Irregular Shilling from John Bennett Shaw at a small gathering in his library in Santa Fe, while the BSI's cocktail party was underway in New York. There's much more about this interesting lady in Caroline Bryan and Morrow Hall's excellent article "The Haunted Bookplate" in the Sept. 1994 issue of The Baker Street Journal.
231. "Sherlock at Saratoga" is this year's renewal of the original Silver Blaze, on Aug. 19 at the Saratoga Race Track ("At the Rail," with a buffet and a nice view of the races), and on Aug. 20 at the Saratoga Sheraton (with a brunch and speakers); more information is available from Lou Lewis, 11 Raymond Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603.
232. Issue #36 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine has David Stuart Davies' report on the recent discovery of a videocassette with a conversation between Holmes and Watson about the Abbey National Building Society (apparently made in the spring of 1988 with Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke), Nick Connell's report on the Sherlock Holmes correspondence in the Scotland Yard Files at the Public Records Office, an interview with Roy Ward Baker (who directed some of the programs in the 1979 "Sherlock Holmes" television series and the 1984 television film "The Masks of Death"), a note on a new Sherlock's Bistro at the Victoria Hotel in Cottingley; and much more (both S'ian and otherwise). Annual subscriptions (six issues) are £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (U.S.); the address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>, and their U.S. agent is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. Back issues are available; credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses.
233. The television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (starring Peter McCauley as Challenger) was launched with a two-hour pilot in 1999, followed by 22 one-hour episodes (including a two-part repeat of the pilot) that runs on DirecTV (a direct broadcast service) and in syndication on local stations. It's reported to be the #2 rated new syndicated action series in the United States, and the #1 new adventure series in Germany, and it has been renewed for 22 more one-hour episodes, according to a press release spotted by Dave Morrill. There's a web-site with lots of graphics at <www.thelostworldtv.com>.
234. "Sherlock Holmes to Succeed Mrs. Hudson as British Spy Chief" isn't how the headline read, but it could have. Dave Morrill has kindly forwarded a Reuters dispatch citing a report in The Mirror (May 18) that Edward Woodward will play "M" in the next James Bond film; Woodward was Holmes in the television film "Hands of a Murderer" (1990); Judi Dench, who played "M" in the first three films starring Pierce Brosnan as Bond, was Mrs. Hudson in the BBC Radio broadcast of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1998).

235. Jun 00 #2: "Welcome to the land of G-men (and women), foreign operatives, political consultants, secret tapes, shredded papers, special prosecutors, and interns," according to the invitation to Bouchercon 2001; the convention will be held at the Hyatt Regency Crystal City on Nov. 1-4, 2001, and there are some interesting events planned, including a pre-convention Halloween party, FBI and CIA expert panels, guided mystery tours of Washington, and a Nick & Nora Charles Martini Happy Hour, and certainly a lot more than when Bouchercon was last in Washington, at the National Press Club in 1980. The cost of registration is $135 though Sept. 1, 2000 (higher afterward). Additional details are available from Bouchercon 2001 (Box 11700, Washington, DC 20008) <www.bouchercon2001.com>.
236. Cameron Hollyer ("The Three Students") died on June 4, 2000. Cam was a librarian in the Literature Department of the Toronto Public Library when he helped organize the first Sherlockian conference ever held, in Dec. 1971, an event that led to the founding of The Bootmakers of Toronto and the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Library, and he worked hard on behalf of both those institutions for many years, retiring from his post as curator of the collection in 1991. The Bootmakers honored him in the autumn 1991 issue of Canadian Holmes by publishing his delightful paper "The Curator's Egg" (a fine example of how well he combined humor and scholarship). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1978.
237. Paul D. Herbert (734 Alpine Drive, Milford, OH 45150) offers The Tankerville Club's new lapel pin (designed by Jeff Decker); $11.00 postpaid.
238. Tracy Cooper-Posey's CHRONICLES OF THE LOST YEARS: A SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERY (Winnipeg: Ravenstone, 1999; 209 pp., $14.95) offers quite a bit of adventure and romance: Holmes is involved with a mysterious and accomplished woman named Elizabeth Sigerson before, during, and after the Great Hiatus, but there's mystery, too, and the adventures are interesting. Ravenstone is an imprint of Turnstone Press (607-100 Arthur Street, Winnipeg, MN R3B 1H3, Canada) <www.turnstonepress.com>.
239. The SHERLOCK HOLMES READER #3 is now in the shops from Tome Press/Caliber Comics, $3.95). Jerry Margolin notes, with another installment of "The Loch Ness Horror" (story by Martin Powell and artwork by Seppo Makinen) and other Sherlockiana; 225 North Sheldon Road, Plymouth, MI 48170 (888-222-6643) <www.calibercomics.com>.
240. "Better Holmes and Gardens: Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Architectural Design 'Down Under'" is the title of an exhibition on the fourth floor of the Wilson Library at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis through the first week of August, Tim Johnson reports. It's a collaboration by Derham Groves, his students of Architectural Design and Practice at the University of Melbourne, and the Department of Special Collections & Rare Books at the University of Minnesota, and a 28-page illustrated catalog is available on the Web at <www.lib.umn.edu/special/rare/rare.html> and ($10.00 postpaid) from Special Collections, Anderson Library #111, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 (checks payable to the University of Minnesota, please).

241. Jun 00 #3: Roberta Rogow's THE PROBLEM OF THE EVIL EDITOR (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2000; 298 pp., $23.95) is her third mystery novel about Charles Dodgson and Arthur Conan Doyle; Dodgson is in London in Feb. 1886 to introduce Conan Doyle to an editor, and they quickly become involved in solving a murder. It's an interesting story, and in the midst of their investigation Dodgson and Conan Doyle get to visit the Cafe Royal in search of Oscar Wilde, who (needless to say) is far more at home there than the two visitors.
242. Dame Barbara Cartland died on May 21. She launched her writing career in 1925, and for decades ruled the romance genre with more than 700 books that sold more than one billion copies. "My heroines are always virgins," she said in 1973. "They never go to bed without a ring on their fingers; not until page 118 at least." She also maintained that a truly sexy man was one who was "fully clothed and preferably in uniform." She often alluded to Sherlock Holmes in her books, and in her author's note in MOON OVER EDEN (1976), set in Ceylon in the 19th century, she wrote that "the success of

- Ceylon tea after the failure of the coffee was immortalized by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle when he wrote: 'Not often is it that men have the heart, when their one great industry is withered, to rear up in a few years another as rich to take its place, and the tea fields of Ceylon are as true a monument to courage as is the lion at Waterloo.'
243. Jeff MacNelly died on June 8. He was 24 years old in 1972, when he won the first of his three Pulitzer prizes for editorial cartoons, and his comic strip "Shoe" runs in more than 1,000 papers. He used Sherlockian icons in his editorial cartoons, including one from July 1992 on the U.N. in Iraq.
244. Sorry about that: Malice Domestic XIII (May 00 #3) will be held May 4-6, 2001, at the Crystal Gateway Marriott in Arlington, Va. Thanks to Donna Goldthwaite for noting the typo.
245. Jerry Margolin notes that the fifth issue of THE GREAT DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES (Avalon Communications, $2.95) is in the comic-book shops, with "The Mystery of the Black Death" (reprinted from the 1954 comic strip written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia); the magazine address is 2800 Halpern, St-Laurent, QC H4S 1R2, Canada.
246. And the comic-book mini-series THE LEAGUE OF EXTRAORDINARY GENTLEMEN (from America's Best Comics, with a story by Alan Moore and powerful artwork by Kevin O'Neill) has reached the fifth issue (June 2000, $2.95). Holmes and Moriarty are involved, along with Allan Quatermain, Captain Nemo, and many others; the mini-series will end with the sixth issue, and the address is 7910 Ivanhoe #438, La Jolla, CA 92037 <wildstorm.com>.
247. Mary Erickson reports that she now has a new home: a trailer with "washer, dryer, central air, telephone, and *no* kerosene heater" (there was a kerosene heater in her previous home, which didn't survive the fire), and four new cats, and that she is grateful to Sherlockian friends for their concern and generosity. Her new address is 212 Zurich Drive, Lynwood, IL 60411.

248. Jun 00 #4: The tenth volume of ACD: The Journal of The Arthur Conan Doyle Society (May 2000) offers 110 pages of interesting scholarship, including Dana M. Batory's conclusions about the internal dating of "The Lost World", Wladimir V. Bogomoletz's report on Conan Doyle's seven visits to Paris, and Thomas R. Tietze's discussion of Conan Doyle poetry. Membership in the society (including two issues of the journal) costs $27.00 a year (CA$33.00/£16.00); credit-card orders are welcome, and the address is Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/acdsoc.html>.
249. The new issue of Scarlet Street (#38) offers David Stuart Davies' review of the television mini-series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (noting that the BBC has commissioned four new episodes, with filming on the first one, set in Southsea, to begin this fall), discussion by Richard Scrivani of John Morgan's work on a soon-to-be-released Marco Polo CD with an orchestral recreation of the theme music for "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror" (1942), and other coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. Subscriptions to the magazine cost $35.00 a year (six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452 <www.scarletstreet.com>.
250. The Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis offer their new lapel pin, available in two versions, one for members and the other for non-members; each costs $10.00 postpaid, from Yvonne De Tar (1838 Portage Terrace #C, Indianapolis, IN 46227); please make checks payable to The Illustrious Clients. Membership in the society costs $10.00 (same address), which includes their newsletter and allows you to buy the members-only version.
251. Ben and Sue Vizoskie have noted in the April issue of the Foolscap Document (the newsletter of The Three Garridebs) that Bill Schweickert was once interviewed for a newspaper article about Holmes and Watson, and was pleased to find that the article was published without mistakes -- until the last paragraph, which reported there was a plaque in the men's room at Barts to honor the first meeting of Holmes and Watson. The reporter seems to have thought that Bill said that the meeting took place in the lavatory.
252. The Three Garridebs' newsletter is published six times a year for the society's members; dues are $6.00 a year (Ben Vizoskie, 90 Ralph Avenue, White Plains, NY 10606).
253. Bob Robinson spotted Keith Aitken's article in Scottish Life (summer 2000) on "The Case of the Missing Memorial", in which he suggests that "While Arthur Conan Doyle's immortal Sherlock Holmes stories were inspired by Edinburgh's people and places, the capital city seems intent on wiping out all connections to its native son." Some of Conan Doyle's residences survive, however, in Sciennes Hill Place and Argyle Park Terrace, and at 23 George Square, all dating from the 1870s, in the years after he was sent to stay with Mary Burton at Liberton Bank House (May 00 #3). Box 403, Vandalia, OH 45337; $4.50.
254. Jennie Paton reports a DVD due from Focus Film: SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION with four of the 1940s Rathbone/Bruce films ("The Woman in Green", "Terror by Night", "Dressed to Kill", and "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon") and the film interview with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (list price $19.99).
-
255. Jun 00 #5: The June issue of National Geographic has two articles of interest: "Jelly Bellies" has a splendid photograph of a lion's mane with a caption quoting Sherlock Holmes that the creature "can be as dangerous to life as, and far more painful than, the bite of the cobra." But: "It's a bad rap," the caption notes, "The sting of a lion's mane jelly hurts but almost never kills--unless you're a copepod." And an article on London is accompanied by a double map supplement of "Britain and Ireland" and "The Heart of Tourist London" that includes the Sherlock Holmes Hotel on Baker Street.
256. Nicholas Clay died on May 5. He began his acting career on screen in 1971, and he played Stapleton in Ian Richardson's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1983) and Dr. Percy Trevelyan in Granada's "The Resident Patient" (1985).
257. William Serad's article on "Sherlockian Pipes" in the summer 2000 issue of Pipes & Tobaccos has a list of all the pipes mentioned in the Canon, with illustrations of the first results of his decision to commission his own series of Sherlock Holmes pipes from Mark Tinsky, of the American Smoking Pipe Company. The magazine is published by SpecComm International, 3000 Highwoods Boulevard #300, Raleigh, NC 27604 <www.pt-magazine.com>; $3.95.
258. Carole Nelson Douglas has reported that her fifth novel about Irene Adler will be published in Nov. 2001, "with that ubiquitous consulting detective, I suppose, and some surprise guest villains, vamps, and victims." And in the meantime, her "The Dame's Afoot" silhouette of Irene (with artwork by Carole) is offered on embroidered T-shirts (S/M/L/XL $28.75 2X $31.75 3X $32.75 4X $35.75), golf shirts (S/M/L/XL $33.75 2X $36.75 3X $37.75 4X $40.75), and totebags ($33.75); all prices are postpaid. Checks or money orders only, please, payable to Carole Douglas: Box 331555, Fort Worth, TX 76163 <www.catwriter.com/cdouglas>.
259. John Hillen spotted an announcement from the UCLA Film and Television Archive for its Tenth Festival of Preservation (July 28-Aug. 26). "Sherlock Holmes Faces Death" (1943) and "The House of Fear" (1945) will be screened at 7:00 pm on Aug. 13 (Hugh Hefner provided funds for restoring the Universal "Sherlock Holmes" films). Details on the festival are available from Nancy Reed (310-206-8588) <nreed@emelnitz.ucla.edu>.
260. Otto Penzler (The Mysterious Bookshop, 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019) (800-352-2840) <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> publishes an interesting series of pastiches and parodies, some are reprints and some originals, and almost all first separate publications; $10.00 each (with shipping extra, and there's a 10% discount for standing orders). The list so far: SHADY SINNERS OF THE STYX (Lawrence Daniel Fogg); THE MYSTERY OF PINKHAM'S DIAMOND STUD (John Kendrick Bangs); THE SLEUTHS (O. Henry); THE ADVENTURE OF THE CIPHER IN THE SAND (Ed Hoch); A PRAGMATIC ENIGMA (John Kendrick Bangs); THE ADVENTURE OF THE DIAMOND NECKLACE (George F. Forrest); MURDER IN STUDIO 221B (Ron Goulart);

SHERLOCK HOLMES AGAIN (John Kendrick Bangs); SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MYSTERIOUS CARD (Joel Lima); ME, OR THE STRANGE EPISODE OF THE REINCARNATED GREEK (E. V. Knox); THE ADVENTURE OF THE WOODEN BOX (Leslie Klinger); ANATOMY OF TWO MURDERS (Murray Shaw), HERLOCK SHOMES AT IT AGAIN (anonymous); and THE MARRIAGE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Gregory Breitman).

261. Jun 00 #6: The Virginia Romance Writers' next "Step Back in Time" conference on romance, history, and crime is scheduled for Mar. 23-25, 2001, in Williamsburg, and it will include a workshop on criminology; if you'd like to be on their mailing list, you should send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Virginia Romance Writers, 13 Woodlawn Terrace, Fredericksburg, VA 22405 <www.geocities.com/SoHo/Museum/2164>.
  262. Sorry about that: the Baker Street Irregulars (Shameless Commerce Division) merchandise (Apr 00 #4) is available from George J. McCormack, but his best address is at Cusack & Stiles, 61 Broadway #2912, New York, NY 10006.
  263. Ray Betzner spotted the announcement on America Online News: "Chapters Online Extends Digital Delivery Strategy with Addition of New eBook Titles at Chapters.ca" (May 29). The electronically-enabled can now go to a web-site at <www.chapters.ca/digital/books> and download a long list of electronic books (including THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES) using the free Glassware Reader software also available at the web-site. Customers can also pay for and download more recent titles; the company reported that in March more than 10,000 people downloaded Stephen King's eBook RIDING THE BULLET in the first 48 hours after its release.
  264. "The Rock says, call Sherlock Holmes! Call Magnum P.I.! Call Scooby-Doo himself!" The Rock is World Wrestling Federation superstar Rocky Maivia, on "WWF Smackdown" on UPN-TV on June 15, as reported by Brad Keefauver.
  265. The House of Ascot (4450 Arapahoe Avenue #100, Boulder, CO 80303) (800-717-3105) <www.houseofascot.com> has an interesting catalog of British collectibles, including a Lakeland Studios oval wall plaque (8 x 6 in.) showing the sitting room ($39.95) and Hazle Ceramics' Sherlock Holmes Museum house-front ($74.95) and miniature teapot ($24.95); shipping is extra, credit-card orders are welcome, and there's a 10% discount in July if you quote "CRO7".
  266. The 90-minute laserdisc of "The Lost World" (1925) released by LumiVision (Apr 92 #4) is now available on DVD from Slingshot Entertainment (with a trailer, a promotional short, and a demonstration of the stop-motion special effects devised by Willis O'Brien), priced at $19.99. Check your local shops, or their web-site at <www.slingshotdvd.com>.
  267. Dennis France died on June 20. He was an attorney, and an energetic member and officer of many of the Chicago-area societies, including The Criterion Bar Association and The Scotland Yarders, and The STUD Sherlockian Society.
  268. Pat Ward has reported that "Bloomington by Gaslight: Sherlock Holmes in the Lilly Library" is now on display in the library's main gallery at Indiana University in Bloomington, through Sept. 19. The exhibit includes a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, the manuscript of "The Red Circle", a manuscript page with the first three sentences of the note Holmes left for Watson at the Reichenbach, and Darryl F. Zanuck's personal copy of the script for Rathbone's "The Hound of the Baskervilles"

269. Jun 00 #7: This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will have another attractive watercolor by Douglas West, showing Holmes and Watson looking out across the Thames, captioned "There is a boatman here with a wherry, Watson. We shall take it and cross the river." $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks payable to the Society, please, and orders can be sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 22 Homeheights House, Clarence Parade, Southsea, Hants. PO5 3NN, England. Note: you can order now, but the cards will not be shipped until September.
  270. The latest issue of Reichenbach Cliff-Notes, edited by Kendall Pagan and published occasionally by The Reichenbach Cliff-Divers, offers four pages of skewed Sherlockiana, including a report on S'ian lapel-pin piercings. A few copies are still available from the Punctuality Press (4010 Devon Lane, Peoria, IL 61614) in return for a #10 self-addressed stamped envelope.
  271. A three-hour special "AFI's 100 Years...100 Laughs" (broadcast by CBS-TV on June 13, 2000) honored the 100 funniest American films, chosen by a jury of 1,800 film-industry leaders for the American Film Institute. Buster Keaton's "Sherlock Jr." (1924) was #62 on the list.
  272. Is it possible that none of the Sherlockians who watch the show are willing to admit they watch "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire" on ABC-TV? A non-Sherlockian has reported that on June 11 one of the early questions asked which street Sherlock lived on. "Baker Street" was one of the answers, and the contestant got it right, adding, "it was at 21 Baker Street."
  273. Uno Studio in Holmes (the Sherlockian society in Italy) has arranged for a symposium in Milan on Sept. 9-11 and in Sesto Fiorentino (near Florence) on Sept. 15-17; there will be exhibits, papers, films, games, excursions, and a concert, and additional details are available from Gianluca Salvatori, cp 14, 55042 Forte dei marmi (LU), Italy <www.versilia.toscana.it/~mycroft>.
  274. BLOODLINE (New York: St. Martin's Paperbacks, 2000; 316 pp., $6.50) is Jill Jones' seventh romance novel, and she combines the romance and mystery genres in an investigation of a modern serial killer whose murders start at a Sherlockian "The Unsolved Case of Jack the Ripper--Where Was Sherlock When We Needed Him?" conference in London. The hero's a Scotland Yard inspector and the heroine an FBI agent, there's plenty of romance as well as mystery, and the Sherlockian aspects are incidental.
  275. Joe Bevilacqua reports that his 1980s radio series "The Mis-Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" will air again on National Public Radio stations in September (when he will also make the parodies available on CD).
  276. The audiocassette version of Ed. Lange's 1997 play "Sherlock's Secret Life" (Sep 99 #4) has won an Audie Award (from the Audio Publishers Association of America) for best multi-voiced presentation. The set's still available ($12.90 postpaid) from the N.Y. State Theatre Institute (155 River Street, Troy, NY 12180) <www.nysti.org> (credit-card orders are welcome).

Jul 00 #1:

277. BBC Radio 4 celebrated "Conan Doyle Week" (July 1-7) with a fine assortment of programs that included Nick Utechin on "Do What You Like with Him: The Unreal Life of Sherlock Holmes" (about pastiches and parodies), Ruth Dudley Edwards on "The Real Sherlock Holmes" (about Victorian science and crime), Humphrey Carpenter on "The Secret History of Conan Doyle" (about his life and career), and Simon Russell Beale reading abridgements of five of the Brigadier Gerard stories on "Book at Bedtime".
278. Radio Times gave "Conan Doyle Week" plenty of coverage, and the RT Shop is offering "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" with "48 hours of audio material on 36 cassettes" and "a special behind-the-scenes book" together with a boxed set of four dramatizations of "Agatha Christie's Miss Marple" starring June Whitfield, all for £150 postpaid; checks (payable to RT Shop) can be sent to JEM House, Littlemead, Cranleigh, GU6 8TT, England.
279. "You don't have to be Sherlock Holmes to hunt down hard-to-find books," according to the voice-over on the opening credits on "Mystery!" on PBS-TV, "You can deduce their whereabouts on Alibris: the on-line source for books you thought you'd never find." The spot began airing in April, promoting <www.alibris.com>, one of the new sponsors for the series.

280. "We started off with 12 Rembrandts. We are now down to one plus two halves and a probable," Ros Savill, director of the Wallace Collection in London, said in an interview in the Evening Standard (June 15), at hand from John Baesch. The collection, assembled by four Marquesses of Hertford and the 4th Marquess' illegitimate son, Sir Richard Wallace, used a £10.6 million lottery grant to redevelop Hertford House in Manchester Square, where visitors can now see all 5,470 items in the collection, including some fakes, because the collection "exposes the misjudgements of the collectors, not to mention the machinations of the art market." And it's a nice place to view your favorite Greuze, John notes.
281. Discounted at Barnes & Noble: THE MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Grosset & Dunlap, 1996; 218 pp., now $5.98); with nine of the stories, illustrated by Paul Bachem.
282. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES BOOK OF MAGIC, by Jeff Brown (Colorado Springs: Piccadilly Books, 2000; 96 pp., $10.00), offers explanations of almost 30 magic tricks, all related in some way to Holmes, Watson, or other Canonical characters (but if you're planning to put on a Sherlockian magic show, remember that everyone who has read the book will know what your secrets). $13.20 postpaid from the Village Booksmith (233 Main Street, Hudson Falls, NY 12801) <booksmith@global2000.net>; credit-card orders welcome.
283. I recommended Chris Redmond's A SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK highly when it was published by Simon & Pierre (Oct 93 #4), and it's still highly recommended, as well as available (CA$29.99/£14.99) from the University of Toronto Press 5201 Dufferin Street, Toronto, ON M3H 5T8, Canada, or 2250 Military Road, Tonawanda, NY 14150 (800-565-9523) <utpbooks@utpress.utoronto.ca>; creditcard orders welcome. The book can be used and enjoyed both by Sherlockians and by those who are wondering just what Sherlockians do, and why.

284. Jul 00 #2: "There is a lack of firm scientific evidence about the effect on the welfare of a fox of being closely pursued, caught and killed above ground by hounds. We are satisfied, nevertheless, that this experience seriously compromises the welfare of the fox." According to a British government committee's report on the environmental, economic, and other aspects of the ruling Labor Party's proposed ban on fox-hunting. The Canon contains no mention of fox-hunting (although there is a mention of a foxhound), but it's quite important in Conan Doyle's stories "The King of the Foxes" (1898) and "The Crime of the Brigadier" (1900).
285. "I am one of those who believe that the folly of a monarch and the blundering of a minister in far-gone years will not prevent our children from being some day citizens of the same world-wide country under a flag which shall be a quartering of the Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Noble Bachelor"). Our new sheet of stamps honoring the Stars and Stripes includes one showing the Grand Union flag.
286. Nino Cirone's UPON THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE ASHES OF THE VARIOUS TOBACCOS is not Sherlock Holmes' long-lost monograph, but rather an interesting collection of interesting descriptions of 60 tobaccos, one for each of the Canonical tales, accompanied by appropriate period artwork. The 70-page book costs £14.99/$25.00 from Ian Henry Publications, 20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England; credit-card orders welcome.
287. It's odd that it should take so long for the American edition of FLASHMAN AND THE TIGER, AND OTHER EXTRACTS FROM THE FLASHMAN PAPERS to appear, but it's due from Knopf in August (346 pp., $25.00). For those who didn't get the British edition (Oct 99 #4), George MacDonald Fraser's delightful tale, first published in the Daily Express in 1975, deals with Colonel Sebastian Moran, with whom Flashman had three encounters (this being the third, in an empty house in Baker Street in 1894).
288. "Cows Invade New York!" More than 500 life-sized fiberglass cow sculptures (each decorated or painted by a local artist) are to be found in streets, parks, and hidden corners in each of the five boroughs through Labor Day, according to publicity at hand from Ev Herzog. But none of them appear to be Sherlockian (at least not yet). You can call 302-291-4538 for more information, or see a map of cow locations at <www.cowparadenewyork.com>, and may even be possible for one of the local Sherlockian societies to sponsor a Sherlockian cow.
289. Issue #37 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine has David Stuart Davies' discussion of Granada's "The Eligible Bachelor" and Universal's "The House of Fear", essays by Roger Forsdyke's essay on real Victorian crime and criminals, and Grant Eustace's on "Baker Street Addictions", and much more (Sherlockian and otherwise); an annual subscription (six issues) costs £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere). The magazine address is Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>, and their U.S. agent is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>. Credit-card orders welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.
290. Jul 00 #3 Barry Day has written three pastiches: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SHAKESPEARE GLOBE MURDERS (London: Oberon Books, 1997; 190 pp., $11.00); SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ALICE IN WONDERLAND MURDERS (London: Oberon Books, 1997; 180 pp., $11.00); and SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE COPYCAT MURDERS (Palm Beach: Second Opinion, 2000; 192 pp., $11.00). All three novels involve Holmes and Watson in complicated mysteries that involve assassination and attempts to overthrow the government or destroy the empire.
291. Ted Friedman's interesting series of articles about Sherlockian philately in Topical Times continues with "Literary Skills of Sherlock Holmes" in the July-August issue, which also has Allan Hauck's "Topics on Postmarks" with an illustration of the postmark created for the Sherlock Holmes Festival in Tryon, N.C. on Nov. 4-7, 1999 (the magazine costs $5.00 postpaid from the American Topical Association, Box 50820, Albuquerque, NM 87181) <atastamps@juno.com> (credit card orders welcome).
292. The ATA has also announced a new 72-page handbook on THE PHILATELIC ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Larry Dodson. $11.00 postpaid for members of the ATA ($12.00 for non-members) if you order by Oct. 1 (extra charges for shipping after that date); addresses in the preceding paragraph.
293. Reported: Stephen Kendrick's HOLY CLUES: THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 99 #1) in a trade paperback edition (New York: Vintage Books, 2000; 208 pp., $12.00); it's an interesting discussion of the faith, reason, mystery, and philosophy one can find in the Sherlock Holmes stories, especially with an expert guide.
294. "Psst... Did you know we are currently hiring..." asked an advertisement in the N.Y. Times (June 25) for a government agency that promises "Challenges for a Challenging World" (most positions are in the Northern Virginia area, but there is an opportunity for living abroad); it's the Central Intelligence Agency <www.cia.gov>.
295. Paulette Greene (7152 Via Palomar, Boca Raton, FL 33433) offers copies of two older items: Madeleine B. Stern's 1982 monograph THE GAME'S A HEAD: A PHRENOLOGICAL STUDY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, with illustrations by Sam Greene ($15.00), and Trevor H. Hall's 1986 monograph THE LAST CASE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: IVY JOHNSON BULL OF BORLEY ($30.00); both prices are postpaid (please pay by check of money order).
296. Noted by Dave Morrill: "Radio-Active Man" in Filmfax (June-July 2000), the first part of an excellent interview with long-time radio, television, and film actor Harry Bartell, who was the announcer for the Rathbone/Bruce radio series "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" from 1945 to 1946.
297. Fans of "They Might Be Giants" (the rock group that took its name from the 1971 George C. Scott film) may want to purchase the two-CD set "They Might Be Giants/Then: The Earlier Years" issued by Restless Records in 1997 (the set number is 72931-2); the contents include their two albums "They Might Be Giants" and "Lincoln", EP B-side recordings, and bonus tracks (only the name of the group is Sherlockian). They have a web-site at <www.tmbg.com> and their dial-a-song telephone number is 718-387-6962.

298. Jul 00 #4: Jane Seymour has received her award as an Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE). She appeared on British television in 1974 in "Orson Welles' Great Mysteries: The Leather Funnel". Simon Ward was a young Englishman who went to Paris to propose to a French girl (Jane Seymour); her uncle (Christopher Lee) drugged Ward's drink and left him near the leather funnel.
299. Michael Caine, already honored as a Commander of the Order of the British Empire (CBE) in 1993, was knighted in the Queen's Birthday honors list in June. He starred in "Without a Clue" (1988) as Reginald Kincaid, a drunken actor hired by Dr. Watson to impersonate his fictional Sherlock Holmes.
300. Prescott's Press (the quarterly journal of The Three Garridebs) has been revived after a lengthy hiatus, and issue 21 is now available, with Mona Morstein's "The Adventure of the Strange Case of the Woman with the Really Long Name" and Tom Cynkin's "The Worst Woman in London: An Opinion" (among other contributions to the literature); $12.00 for four issues, from Warren Randall, 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720.
301. THE BIG BOOK OF BAD, by Jonathan Vankin (New York: Paradox Press, 1998; 191 pp., $14.95), is a collection of short comic-strip explications, including with two pages (artwork by Phil Jimenez) on "Moriarty: Professor of Crime".
302. Our "Celebrate the Century" souvenir sheets have reached the 1990s, and the new sheet includes a stamp honoring the World Wide Web, which has had a delightful impact on the Sherlockian world, and of course made it possible for many people to read this Sherlockian and Doylean newsletter without depending on the postal service or paying for a subscription. The URL is <members.home.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>.
303. Many of the items in Tom Stix's fine collection of Sherlockiana were sold from a series of catalogs (Oct 98 #1), and the remainder (some in the earlier catalogs and some not) will be sold at auction by The Three Garridebs on Aug. 27, at the Sunset Supper Club in Tuckahoe, N.Y.; mail bids will be accepted until Aug. 22. A 70-page catalog is available from Ben Vizoskie (90 Ralph Avenue, White Plains, NY 10606) <garridebs@aol.com>.
304. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers Tim Johnson's update on the collections and the move to the new underground facility, and Julie McKuras discussion of the collections' "Pipes, Matches, and Tobacco". If you'd like to be on their mailing list you can contact Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
305. George Perlman died on June 18, at the age of 103. He was a violin teacher and for 74 years he rented a studio in the Fine Arts Building in Chicago, where he taught generations of students to play the violin, continuing to teach until April of this year, when he was hospitalized after a fall. Ely Liebow wrote about him as "The Man Who Wrapped with ACD" (in Baker Street Miscellanea, summer 1991); Perlman accompanied Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to a seance at the Auditorium Hotel in Chicago in 1923.
306. Jul 00 #5: Christopher Lee has been signed to play a "charismatic separatist" in "Star Wars: Episode II" (now filming in Australia and due for release in the summer of 2002), according to a report in the N.Y. Post (July 13), kindly forwarded by Marina Stajic. Lee has played three Canonical characters on film and television: Sir Henry Baskerville in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), Mycroft Holmes in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and Sherlock Holmes in "Sherlock Holmes und das Halsband des Todes" (1962), "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" (1992), and "Sherlock Holmes: Incident at Victoria Falls" (1992).
307. "We had occasion some months ago to strengthen our resources and borrowed for that purpose 30,000 napoleons from the Bank of France," Mr. Merryweather, said, in the cellar of the Coburg branch of the City and Suburban Bank (in "The Red-Headed League"). Thanks to Ted Friedman for spotting the stamp issued by France this year to honor the 200th anniversary of the founding of the Banque de France.
308. Further to the report (Dec 99 #3) on the development-versus-environment battle over Venezuela's Canaima National Park (one of 100 World Heritage Sites designated by the United Nations, and the sixth-largest national park in the world), Ray Betzner has noted an Associated Press report that Indian tribes in Venezuela's southeastern rain forests have signed an accord that will allow construction to resume on a high-voltage electricity line through the park; the $100-million 360-mile project will provide energy to Indian communities as well as to gold-mining companies and towns in north-eastern Brazil. The park contains Angel Falls (the world's tallest water-fall) and the mysterious flat-topped mountains said to have inspired Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Lost World".
309. The four "Great Mouse Detective" mini bean bags (Basil, Dr. Dawson, Olivia, and Ratigan) are still offered in the Disney catalog, discounted to $12.00 for the set (that's half price, which suggests a close-out). The item number is 20078-F20; Box 29144, Shawnee Mission, KS 66201 (800-237-5751) <www.disneystore.com>.
310. "Who Ordered the Rare Roast Beef? I Did, Said the Grosvenor Square Furniture Van." was the headline on a story about "Dinner with the Sherlockians in Washington" in the [Washington] Sunday Star on June 18, 1972. And the author of the article was Lynne Cheney, wife of (now) Republican vice-presidential candidate, who enjoyed her dinner with The Red Circle.
311. TO VISIT THE QUEEN, by Diane Duane (New York: Warner Books, 1999; 354 pp., $14.99) (also in paperback this year; 366 pp., $6.50), is translated from Ailurin, and features a team of feline wizards, caretakers of a time-gate at Grand Central Station in New York, who travel to London to help wizards there thwart a malevolent attempt to change history and destroy the world.
312. The Queen they visit, time-gating to 1874, is Victoria, who is the target assassination attempt, and in the midst of their battle to prevent Armageddon they are assisted by a young human named Arthur Conan Doyle. The fantasy is intriguing, the concept nicely executed, and the book well-written' young Artie is only a supporting character (and yes, he did indeed make a three-week visit to London in 1874, invited by his aunt Annette).
313. Jul 00 #6: Further to the report (May 00 #6) about the trials and tribulations of the modern "Aurora" (Britain's largest cruise liner, whose maiden cruise came to an abrupt end because of mechanical problems), John Baesch has forwarded Sandy Byrne's story from The Mail on Sunday (July 16) reporting on a quite pleasant cruise to the Canaries. And pleasant it ought to be, with a crew of 850 that includes 110 chefs.
314. Further to the report (Apr 00 #3) on Hallmark's ornament "The Detective" (Snoopy, dressed in standard Sherlockian costume, accompanied by Woodstock in Watsonian costume): the ornament now is in Hallmark shops ($9.95).
315. Reported: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, due from MPI on DVD on Oct. 3 ($19.99); the disk will contain Granada's "A Scandal in Bohemia", "The Solitary Cyclist", "The Naval Treaty", and "The Dancing Men". Nancy Beiman has noted, in a message posted at <www.amazon.com> that MPI plans to issue additional disks in the series only if there is sufficient demand for the first one.
316. THE UNKNOWN SHERLOCK HOLMES, VOLUME III is the new volume of Bill Brown's one-act radio plays performed by The Squeaking Axles to amuse and bemuse The Hansom Wheels of Columbia, S.C. The new collection offers five plays, packed with puns and broad humor, and it costs $15.00 postpaid from Lloyd W. Brown, Jr. (103 Snow Court, Lexington, SC 29073). The first two volumes (five plays each) are still available ($10.00 each); $25.00 for all three.
317. Ray Bradbury has high praise for cartoonist Erv Kaplan in the August issue of Playboy, and one of Kaplan's cartoons is Sherlockian.

318. The Ferret Company offers all sorts of imaginative collectibles for ferret fans, including a 2001 wall calendar with a November photograph (also shown on the cover) of a deerstalkered ferret with a magnifying glass. Box 7161, Redwood City, CA 94063 <www.ferretcompany.com>; $13.95 plus shipping ($4.95 to U.S. addresses), and credit-card orders are welcome.
319. Timothy Francis Sheil's THE SIAM QUESTION (London: Camden House, 1999; 603 pp., £19.50/$30.00) is the first of two volumes of THE HOLMES REPORT, which Watson adapted on journals kept by M. Francois Villard when he accompanied Sherlock Holmes during the Great Hiatus from 1891 to 1894. The book covers their adventures in Tibet (where they help defeat a Russian attempt to gain control of the country) and Siam (where they help defeat a French attempt to gain control of the country) and London (where they help defeat Colonel James Moriarty's attempt to gain control of the government); the author has lived in Thailand, and the book is full of local color and history. It is available ($35.00 postpaid) from Firebird Distributing, 2030 First Street (unit 5), Eureka, CA 95501 (800-353-3575) <www.firebirddistributing.com>; and (£19.50 plus shipping) from Camden House Publishing, 54 Kestrel Avenue, London SE24 EB, England <www.sherlockholmesreport.com>; credit-card orders welcome at both sources.
320. Aug 00 #1: Further to the report (Jun 00 #7) that Joe Bevilacqua's 1980s radio series "The Mis-Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" would air again on National Public Radio stations in September, the ten shows also will be available (on five CDs or five cassettes); $16.00 each (postpaid) or $59.00 for all five (also postpaid) from Joe Bevilacqua, Waterlogg Productions, Box 10723, Austin, TX 78766: payment by check or money order, please.
321. Laurie R. King has returned home from a trip to England, where she was researching her next Mary Russell book. Laurie also reports that she now has an official web-site at <www.laurierking.com>, maintained by her niece and offering information about Laurie and all of her books, and on how you can buy signed copies of her books from a bookstore near Laurie's home: Cross-Roads Books, 1935 Main Street, Watsonville, CA 9576 (831-728-4139).
322. The detailed schedule for the 18th annual (as well as the last) "Autumn in Baker Street" (May 00 #5) in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Oct. 28-29, is now available from Paula Perry (346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10120 (212-348-8817) <pjperry@msn.com>.
323. Don Weis died on July 26. He worked as an Air Force film technician during World War II, and then joined MGM where he became a director, then turning to television, where he earned six awards from the Directors Guild of America for best television director of the year. He directed more than 40 episodes of "M*A*S*H" and worked on many other series, including "Fantasy Island", for which he directed the 1982 segment "Save Sherlock Holmes" with Ron Ely playing a department-store detective in a fantasy that had him rescuing Sherlock Holmes (Peter Lawford) from Professor Moriarty (Mel Ferrer).
324. At least one Sherlockian author has followed in Stephen King's footsteps, publishing on the World Wide Web and asking readers to send money: for the electronically enabled, Paul Boler offers three stories: "The Whitechapel Horrors" <smallrain.homestead.com/whitec1.html>, "The Giant Rat of Sumatra" <oliviaj.homestead.com/rat2.html>, and "The Werewolf of Devon" <smallrain.homestead.com/werew2.html>.
325. The Red-Headed League of Jersey meets twice a year in Flemington, N.J., and managed to garner nice two articles about the society and about Conan Doyle in the local newspaper, the Trenton Times (Nov. 14, 1999); photocopies are available from Peter Christianson (4175 Milords Lane, Doylestown, PA 18901) <sunset@comcat.com>.
326. "We are making the hound mystery more ambiguous. Viewers will think it is from hell," director Rodney Gibbons explained to the National Post in Toronto. He is now filming "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Quebec for Muse Entertainment Enterprises, with Montreal filling in for Baker Street, and Harrington for the bleak expanses of Dartmoor. The film stars Matt Frewer (Holmes) and Kenneth Welsh (Watson), and will air this fall on CTV in Canada and on the Odyssey Network in the United States. Charles Prepolec offers the electronically-enabled a lot more information about the film at his web-site <www.geocities.com/sirharryflashman1/hound.html>. And Howard Ostrom reports that Muse will start work on "The Sign of the Four" this fall.
-
327. Aug 00 #2: Sir Alec Guinness died on Aug. 5. He began his acting career in 1934, as Osric and the third player in a production of "Hamlet" (with the assistance of John Gielgud), and went on to starring roles that included Col. Nicholson in "The Bridge on the River Kwai" (1957) and Obi-Wan Kenobi in "Star Wars" (1977). Sherlockians will recall him as the blind butler Bensonmum in "Murder by Death" (1976), which had cameo appearances by Keith McConnell as Holmes and Richard Peel as Watson, cut from the theatrical release but restored for the first television broadcast in 1979. And George MacDonald Fraser has written that the late John Ford is said to have had Conan Doyle's THE WHITE COMPANY "in his sights at the end of his career, with John Wayne and Alec Guinness in mind."
328. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere," Al Rosenblatt reports. Even on peaches, which (at least in upstate New York) are labeled individually as "Holmes Grown in South Carolina".
329. Otto Penzler notes in the July issue of The Mysterious Bookshop Newsletter that he has acquired "a superb collection of Sherlock Holmes books, pamphlets, and ephemera, including many inscribed copies of books by Edgar W. Smith, Vincent Starrett, Christopher Morley, etc. If you have particular wants of more obscure titles, or variant editions of the Canon, please send you wants lists, or make an appointment to see the collection." 129 West 5th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-3520-2840) <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net>.
330. There's some Sherlockian gossip about the "Harry Potter" film that Warner Bros. hopes to have in theaters in time for Thanksgiving 2001. Pam Russell noted a report posted by Brian Linder on June 11 at the IGN FilmForce website at <filmforce.ign.com/harrypotter/> that Jean Hirshenson, the film's American casting director, has been testing American children for the title role, under the guise of casting for a "Young Sherlock Holmes" film; the screenplay for "Young Sherlock Holmes" was written by Chris Columbus, who is directing the "Harry Potter" film. According to Linder's source, scenes from the Holmes script were chosen that closely parallel some of the scenes from the Potter story, including the one where Holmes and Watson first meet (parallel to the scene where Harry and Ron first get to know each other on the train).
331. THE YOUNG WITCHES IV is a three-issue mini-series continuing the thoroughly adults-only comic-book series from Eros Comix (7563 City Way NE, Seattle, WA 98115) (800-657-1100) <www.eroscomix.com>. Sherlock Holmes returns in the first issue (June 2000); $3.50.
332. Readers of this newsletter will have noted that I like show postage stamps that have some connection to the Canon or to Arthur Conan Doyle: Larry Dodson's THE PHILATELIC ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jul 00 #3) offers not pastiches or parodies, but rather a well-researched and nicely-illustrated review of postal items that show Conan Doyle, Holmes, other Canonical characters, musicians mentioned in the Canon, and actors and an executive producer associated with Sherlockian films. 72 pp., $11.00 postpaid for members of the ATA ($12.00 for non-members) if you order by Oct. 1 (shipping charges extra after that date); American Topical Association, Box 50820, Albuquerque, NM 87181) <atastamps@juno.com> (credit card orders welcome).
333. Aug 00 #3: Daniel Stashower has turned his attention from biography (TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE) to mysteries, and THE DIME MUSEUM MURDERS (New York: Avon/Twilight, 1999, 249 pp., $5.95) is both interesting and amusing. It's billed as a Harry Houdini mystery, but Harry's brother Dash does some fine detecting as well; the story is set in New York in 1897, when Houdini was still trying to launch his career as an escapologist, and liked to quote from the Sherlock Holmes stories. A second book in the series (THE FLOATING LADY) is due in December.

334. J. Brendan Shaw (son of Mary and grandson of Dorothy and John) edits a new newsletter called Scene of a Crime Magazine; $7.55 for four issues (1205 East Meinecke Avenue, Milwaukee, WI 53212), and the first issue (May 2000) has eight pages of reviews and interviews (non-Sherlockian this time).
335. The late Bill Rabe's VOICES FROM BAKER STREET I, II, AND III was a landmark four-record boxed LP album (Dec 83 #3), described by Bill as "sounds to deduce by" and offering a fascinating aural history of the Sherlockian world. And Bill's son John has found a few mint sets, still in the original cellophane wrapper, available for $50.00 postpaid ($60.00 outside the U.S.) from John S. Rabe, 1742 Grevelia Street #1, South Pasadena, CA 91030; payment by check or money order, please. Note: you will need a phonograph to play LP records, which are sometimes mistaken for large, thick, CDs.
336. Susan J. Beasley died on Aug. 14. She was an artist, and a mystery (and science fiction and fantasy) writer, and head of the Sherlockian society The Nonpareil Club in Fort Worth, Texas.
337. Ben Macintyre's excellent THE NAPOLEON OF CRIME: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF ADAM WORTH, MASTER THIEF (Feb 98 #2) reports on the stolen Gainsborough portrait of Georgina, Duchess of Devonshire, and what happened to the man who stole it, and contributed to Conan Doyle's portrait of Moriarty; it's available, discounted to $5.98, along with many other inexpensive books, from Daedalus Books (Box 6000, Columbia, MD 21045) (800-395-2665) <www.salebooks.com>.
338. Spotted by Ted Friedman: STICKS AND STONES: 7 WAYS YOUR CHILD CAN DEAL WITH TEASING, CONFLICT, AND OTHER HARD TIMES, by Scott Cooper (New York: Times Books, 2000; 160 pp., $13.00); with an interesting section about a "Sherlock Holmes technique" that children can use in starting conversations and keeping them going.
339. "So vivid are [Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson] that they have become the object of a worldwide cult coupled with a make-believe scholarship: The members of the dozens of Sherlock Holmes societies pretend that Holmes and his friend were historical persons whose lives are recorded in minutest details in the sixty stories. Since these were not written to be consistent or complete, inferences from the data are the subject of endless argument, much of it carried on with the subdued humor that is itself an engaging aspect of Doyle's narratives. This manifestation of modern pedantry does not differ from that shown in the single-author societies and collectors' bibliographical concerns. But the Holmes-and-Watson 'findings' show how easy it is to draw plausible conclusions from verbal hints when the truth is in fact unknowable." Jacques Barzun, in FROM DAWN TO DECADENCE: 500 YEARS OF CULTURAL TRIUMPH AND DEFEAT: 1500 TO THE PRESENT (1999).

340. Aug 00 #4: Off-topic (as they like to say in the world of the Internet): don't miss a chance to hear a performance by the Paragon Ragtime Orchestra, which does a splendid job of accompanying silent films, and performing Scott Joplin's music, on tour in the United States and Canada. Their schedule is posted at a web-site at <www.paragonragtime.com> and it's in their newsletter (The Paragon Ragtime News), and they offer their music on cassettes and CDs, and on a videocassette "The Charlie Chaplin Moving Picture Show" (their address is: Box 247, Lewisburg, PA 17837).
341. John Baesch notes that the ENGLISH PUBS 2001 CALENDAR (BrownTrout, $19.99) shows the facade of The Sherlock Holmes in London on the cover and on the page for February. In book stores (now or eventually), and from the Calendar Club (800-366-3645) <www.calendars.com>.
342. Guernsey has issued an attractive set of ten stamps celebrating the beauty of some of the flowers to be found in Candie Gardens in St. Peter Port; the stamps were designed by Petula Stone, and one of them portrays the *Watsonia*, which has tall spires of vivid red or pink petals, and comes from the winterrainfall areas of the Cape in South Africa. It's quite likely named for a Watson than the one in the Canon, but perhaps some Sherlockian (or even Watsonian) botanist will have more information about the flower.
343. John Milford died on Aug. 14. He was a character actor, with appearances in more than 500 films and television shows, and was credited with the original design for the Hollywood Walk of Fame. He played Dave Taylor in "My Dear Uncle Sherlock" on ABC-TV in 1977.
344. Midnight Marquee (9721 Britinay Lane, Baltimore, MD 21234) (800-886-0313) <www.midmar.com> still offers the expanded American edition of Christopher Lee's autobiography TALL, DARK AND GRUESOME (Aug 99 #1) for $20.00 (autographed), and the one-volume edition of Peter Cushing's AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY AND PAST FORGETTING (Aug 99 #1) for $35.00 (cloth) or $20.00 (paper); shipping costs extra, and credit-card orders welcome. Their sales list offers many other titles, and FANEX 15 will be held at the Hunt Valley Inn in Baltimore on July 6-8, 2001.
345. OCCASIONALLY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT, edited by Joseph Coppola for The Mycroft Holmes Society Press, offers 156 pages of scholarship, poetry, pastiche, and artwork devoted (appropriately) to Mycroft Holmes; the cost is $24.95 postpaid, from Joseph A. Coppola (103 Kenny Street, Fayetteville, NY 13066).
346. Carol Wenk has asked Trish and Jay Pearlman to assist with the work of The Mini-Tonga Scion Society, and they report that they're at work on setting up a web-site, and other things; those who attended the Saturday-afternoon cocktail party during the birthday festivities in 1999 will recall the delightful miniature of the sitting-room displayed by the Pearlman's. They'll be in touch soon with members of the society; if you're not a member, and would like to know more about the society, their address is 1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229 (718-998-5351) <minitongasociety@aol.com>, and there's a web-site at <hometown.aol.com/minitongasociety/mini1.htm>.

347. Aug 00 #5: The Hotel Algonquin, for many years the unofficial headquarters for Sherlockians during the birthday festivities in New York, may become the first major New York hotel property to be run by a foundation, according to a story by Ward Morehouse III in the N.Y. Post (Aug. 8), at hand from Ted Friedman. Ian Lloyd-Jones, president of the Camberley Hotel Co. which bought the Algonquin in 1997 and has renovated the lobby and rooms, said that he is planning to set up a foundation to run the Algonquin that would be similar to the Shubert Foundation, which owns and operates 16 historic Broadway theaters. A foundation would provide the Algonquin with more protection than its current designation as a landmark, and ensure that it "will never fall into the wrong hands" and subsequently be torn down or substantially altered, Lloyd-Jones said.
348. Chuck Kovacic has founded a new Sherlockian society (The Baker Street Builders), for those who actually have created a full-scale reproduction of the sitting-room at 221b Baker Street. There is a lapel pin, gold for full members (free) and pewter for others ($10.00 postpaid); his address is 9337 Sophia Avenue, North Hills, CA 91343 (818-891-4069) <cfkovacic@aol.com>. And his own version of the sitting-room is on display for visitors (by appointment only); North Hills is near Los Angeles, and there's a different lapel pin available (free) for those who visit from out of state, or twice in one year from California.
349. "Sherlock at Saratoga" offered those who had made their reservations early enough) a pleasant day at the races on Aug. 19 (Hero's Tribute won The Silver Blaze by two lengths, driving); an enterprising con artist who claimed to be a television journalist and was hoping to finagle four free luncheons (the Sherlockians weren't fooled, needless to say); and entertaining papers at the brunch on Aug. 20. "Sherlock at Saratoga" will repeat in 2003.
350. "I am not Sherlock Holmes," said O. J. Simpson, at a news conference where he explained that he's still trying to find the killer of his wife and Ronald Goldman. "I can't do those things--other people do those things." The wire-service report was noted by Arnie Matanky in the Grimpen Mire Gazette (which he edits for Hugo's Companions).

351. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" was first exhibited in Croydon in England (Oct 95 #2), and has been in Des Moines and Fresno (Jun 99 #6), and it's now scheduled at The Health Adventure in Asheville, N.C., Sept. 25 to Dec. 31, 2000; there will be a gala event (dress black tie or Victorian costume) on Oct. 13, with a Victorian meal and live and silent auctions of Sherlockian and other material. Additional information is available from the museum (2 South Pack Square, Asheville, NC 28801) (828-254-6373 ext 0) <www.thehealthadventure.org>.
352. Audio Book Contractors (Box 40115, Washington, DC 20016) offers readings of a long list of authors, including Arthur Conan Doyle, on cassettes for rental or purchase. The Conan Doyle titles, read by Flo Gibson, Grover Gardner, or Richard Brown, are THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD, THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE LOST WORLD, SELECTED CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and A STUDY IN SCARLET; THE VALLEY OF FEAR is a coming attraction.

353. Aug 00 #6: This year's Kennedy Center Honors will be presented on Dec. 2, recognizing the life-long artistic achievements of actor/director Clint Eastwood, musician Chuck Berry, dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov, tenor Placido Domingo, and actress Angela Lansbury, who portrayed mystery-writer Jessica Fletcher in the television series "Murder, She Wrote" (which premiered in 1984 with a two-hour pilot "The Murder of Sherlock Holmes")
354. The Pleasant Places of Florida offer their lapel pin, window decal, books, and water glasses (from which some may wish to drink something other than water, of course); an illustrated sales-list is available from Wanda Dow, 1737 Santa Anna Drive, Dunedin, FL 54698 <wjced.dunedin@worldnet.att.net>.
355. Kay Price reports in the current issue of the August Derleth Society Newsletter that this year's Walden West Festival (Oct. 8, in Sauk City, Wis.) will feature a play based on the Solar Pons story "The Unique Dickensians" and the publication of the new original-text version of THE SOLAR PONS OMNIBUS ($130.00). Membership in the society costs $15.00 a year (Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583) <www.derleth.org>. The guest speaker at Walden West will be Robert Weinberg, who owns the copyright to (as well as a complete collection of) the magazine Weird Tales.
356. THE LOST ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Feb 00 #4) has now been published, as THE HIDDEN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Bill Paxton (Independence: Omnibus Enterprises, 2000; 239 pp., $25.00), with four pastiches involving Holmes with a robbery of gold from the Bank of England, handwriting analysis, the Baha'i religion, and the Knights Hospitaller. $30.00 postpaid from the publisher (12907 East 36th Street Terrace, Independence, MO 64055).
357. Carl Barks died on Aug. 25. He started working for Walt Disney in the early 1930s as an "in-between" (drawing frames between action in animated cartoons), moved on to the story department, and in the 1940s was working on Disney comic books, where he gave Donald Duck what has been described as a career-prolonging personality transplant (he liked to say that he turned Donald into an everyman, albeit one that quacks). He also created fabulously wealthy (and stingy) Scrooge McDuck, who encountered the "Hound of the Whiskervilles" in 1960, and appeared with Sir Sherlock in "The Invisible Intruder" in 1963.
358. There are still some of us who fondly remember an era when the Saturday afternoon cocktail party each January was held in Julian Wolff's Upper West Side apartment at 33 Riverside Drive, where hors d'oeuvres were laid out on the dining-room table (which the rest of the year was used by Julian as the desk where he edited The Baker Street Journal). To show what inflation is all about, New York magazine noted (Aug. 14) that a three-bedroom, threebath, 1,800-square-foot co-op in Julian's building has been sold (time on market: one week) for $1.425 million.

359. Sep 00 #1: The summer issue of The Baker Street Journal has much of interest, including Michael Dirda's reflections on Sherlock Holmes and The Baker Street Irregulars (presented to a capacity audience during the birthday festivities in January), and Leslie S. Klinger's interview with Hugh M. Hefner (at the Playboy Mansion, but there are no Playmates visible in the photograph that accompanies the interview); $21.00 a year for four issues ($23.50 outside the U.S.), Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.
360. The BSJ also is considering publishing a complete run of the journal on a CD-ROM disk, in PDF format readable with Adobe Acrobat software (included), in early 2001, for $100. Expressions of interest are requested (payment is not due until the disk is shipped), to help determine if there will be sufficient demand. Please contact Les Klinger (2029 Century Park East #3290, Los Angeles, CA 90067) <lsklinger@home.com>.
361. Bob Ennis reports that Eve Titus (the creator of Basil of Baker Street) is seriously ill in hospital in Florida (she has Guillian-Barre syndrome and is on a respirator), but she is awake and alert, and you can send get-well cards to her at Columbia-Aventura Hospital (CCU-8), 20900 Biscayne Boulevard, Aventura, FL 33180; Bob also will be happy to bring her e-mail greetings sent to him at <lsterndale@aol.com>.
362. Kazuo Ishiguro's novel THE REMAINS OF THE DAY won the Booker Prize in Britain, and his WHEN WE WERE ORPHANS has just been published by Knopf; he was born in Nagasaki and raised in southern England, and Helen M. Jerome's interview with him was published in Book magazine (July-Aug. 2000), reported by Tom Huntington: "By the age of ten, Ish [as he likes to be called] had discovered Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes and became 'quite nerdy' in his obsession with the language of those books, books in which people would say 'pray tell me' and 'my dear Watson.' Ish laughs as he confesses: 'I went around speaking like that and it must have been very bizarre, this little boy from Japan talking Victorian English.'" Book costs $4.95, or $20.00 a year (10 Bank Street #204, Summit, NJ 07901) (800-317-2665).
363. Found by Bob Robinson at his local Target store: MOTHER GOOSE: SILLY PEOPLE RHYMES (Lincolnwood: Publications International/Rainbow Books, 1996; 99c); with a bloodhound in Sherlockian costume illustrating "Peter White".
364. Further to the item about "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" in Asheville, N.C. (Aug 00 #5), the exhibit will also be on view in the Hall of Ideas at the Midland Center for the Arts in Midland, Mich., Jan. 20 to Apr. 23, 2001. Additional information is available from the museum (1001 West Saint Andrews, Midland, MI 48640) (571-631-5930) <www.mcfta.org>.
365. Luke Steven Fullenkamp's new pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ADVENTURE OF THE THREE DRAGONS (Bloomington: 1stBooks Library, 2000; 192 pp., $13.98) is set in 1879, with Holmes and his friend Dr. Johnathan Watson defending London and the Queen from an evil Chinese villain. The book can be downloaded over the Internet for $4.95 <www.1stbooks.com> (and you can read a preview at the web-site), and it also is available in paper covers for $14.70 postpaid from the publisher (2511 West 3rd Street #1, Bloomington, IN 47404).
366. Sep 00 #2 "Operation Tatzelwurm" is a series of mystery weekends underway in Meiringen, according to a flier at hand from Jurg and Bice Musfeld-Brugnoli, proprietors of the Parkhotel du Sauvage (which has long been under a haven for Sherlockian visitors). "Wir freuen uns sehr auf ihre Anmeldung," they note, and additional information is available from the hotel (CH-3860 Meiringen, Switzerland) <www.parkhotel-du-sauvage.ch>.
367. Sorry about that: last month's item about "Autumn in Baker Street" on Oct. 28-29 in Tarrytown, N.Y., had the wrong ZIP code for contact Paula Perry; her correct address is 346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10128 (212-348-8817) <pjperry@msn.com>.
368. Ray Betzner spotted a <www.prnewswire.com> announcement (Sept. 5) that the Dutch company BEA Hotels NV has acquired a long-term lease on the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in Baker Street; the lease will cost £10 million plus £450,000 a year for the 125-room three-star hotel, and the hotel will be refurbished to upgrade it to a four-star rating.

369. G. Joseph Sills died on Aug. 31. He was a Fulbright scholar and a lawyer, and served as a Maryland workers' compensation commission for many years. He was a member of The Six Napoleons of Baltimore, and the Little Big Horn Association, and he was able to combine those interests in a scholarly paper on "Holmes's Last Stand" (1987) in which Joe suggested that Holmes had spent his early life in America and had survived Custer's Last Stand, and thus was a deserter from the 7th U.S. Cavalry.
370. Bits & Pieces (1 Puzzle Place, Stevens Point, WI 54481 (800-544-7297) <www.bitsandpieces.com> has a seventh mystery jigsaw puzzle in its series "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes": "The Adventure of the Suicidal Secretary" (item 04-H0140-003) costs $7.95 plus shipping.
371. Ev Herzog spotted the item in the Aug.-Sept. issue of Irish American Magazine about a Gathering of Clan Moriarty, beginning Oct. 7 in Dublin. The nine-day event includes a clan reception in Dublin, a bus tour of the West of Ireland, and a clan rally in Killarny. The contact is Fr. Jim Moriarty (St. Pius X Parish, 4314 South Oak Park Avenue, Stickney, IL 60402) (708-484-7951) <jmoriarty.ync.net>.
372. The musical "Cats" (based on poems in T. S. Eliot's "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats") holds the record as the longest-running show in Broadway history; it opened on Oct. 7, 1982, and closed on Sept. 10, 2000. Fans of "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" will still be able to see him, however, since the show's still in theaters in other cities.
373. Penelope Fitzgerald, who died on Apr. 28 (May 00 #2), was the daughter and niece of great names in the Sherlockian world: her father was E. V. Knox, who used the pen-name "Evoc" when he edited Punch in the years when it published much excellent Sherlockian material, and one of her uncles was Ronald Knox, inventor of the grand game so many Sherlockians play. She wrote a fine biography of THE KNOX BROTHERS in 1977 (her two other uncles were Dillwyn, a classical scholar and a noted code-breaker in both World Wars, and Wilfred, an Anglo-Catholic priest and teacher), and her book has just been reprinted (Washington: Counterpoint Press, 2000; 304 pp., $26.00).
374. Sep 00 #3: "The greatest challenge is Catullus, who could be very filthy," an Oxford professor said recently. Yes, the volume of Catullus that Holmes, in disguise as an old bookseller, offered Watson, was a dirty book, especially if it was in the original Latin. According to a story in The Times (Aug. 22), at hand from John Baesch, the Loeb Classical Library, which since 1911 has been censoring the naughty bits in translations of authors such as Catullus and Aristophanes, now is owned by Harvard University Press, which hopes that the classics can become best-sellers if the profanities and obscenities are restored.
375. Groombridge Place is for sale. Andrew de Candole, who bought the house and grounds eight years ago, is selling reluctantly, because he's spending much of his time overseas and can't give it the attention it needs, according to an article in the Daily Telegraph (Aug. 24), at hand from Jon Lellenberg. The 17th-century house is surrounded by a moat dating back to 1230, and is set in 200 landscaped acres. Acknowledged by Conan Doyle to have inspired the moated manor house of Birlstone in "The Valley of Fear" (Sir Arthur not only visited Groombridge, but was accused of stealing its ghost), it can be seen to good advantage in the Peter Greenaway film "The Draughtsman's Contract" (1983). The property draws up to 100,000 visitors a year, and the gardens will remain open to the public until the end of October.
376. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists will meet for dinner in honor of the world's first forensic geologist at 7:00 pm on Nov. 15 at the Liberty Belle Saloon, Museum & Restaurant in Reno. If you would like to join us for the festivities, please contact Paul and Jenny McFarlane (10180 Deadwood Drive, Reno, NV 89506) (775-972-9141) <mcfarlane@sprintmail.com> or me (addresses at the end of the newsletter).
377. Sir Julian Critchley died on Sept. 9. The former Tory member of Parliament was famous for his battles with prime minister Margaret Thatcher, whom he described as someone "who cannot see an institution without hitting it with her handbag" (he received a knighthood only after Thatcher left office, at the recommendation of her successor John Major). Critchley wrote an appreciate essay about Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD for the Illustrated London News (Christmas 1976), noting that it is "one of the best adventure stories in the language" as well as high comedy, and that "Conan Doyle was one of the greatest figures in the literature of Edwardian England, surely soon to be recognized as a silver age in our letters."
378. The Liberton Bank House saga continues: further to the earlier report (May 00 #3) about attempts to save the house where Arthur Conan Doyle lived when he was five to seven years old from being demolished so that McDonald's can build a restaurant on the site, McDonald's and its partner Pearl Assurance filed a new application that would have kept the house bricked-up and isolated at the rear of the restaurant site, with no access road and no ground around the house. Local historian Allen Simpson sent out an e-mail alert on Sept. 3, and the Dundee Press Agency reported on Sept. 7 that the Cockburn Conservation Trust had offered to buy and preserve the house. Edinburgh City Council planning convenor Bob Cairns said that he had received e-mail from the United States, Brazil, and New Zealand urging the council to reject the latest McDonald's proposal, and that "We will be looking very closely at whether the application harms the building or its setting."
379. Sep 00 #4: An exhibition "South: The Race to the Pole" has opened at the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich, and it can be seen until Sept. 2001. It's the world's first major exhibition on Antarctic explorers Capt. Robert Falcon Scott, Sir Ernest Shackleton, and Capt. Roald Amundsen, and there's a web-site at <www.nmm.ac.uk>, It was Scott who brought to the Antarctic a copy of Conan Doyle's THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, and it's still there, in the small hut from which Scott set off on his ill-fated attempt to reach the South Pole.
380. "Lost World Babes" is the cover story on the October issue of Femme Fatales (which is devoted to "the luscious ladies of horror, fantasy, and sciencefiction), spotted by Dana Richards. Jennifer O'Dell is on the cover, and there are stories about her and Rachel Blakely and the CGI special effects. "Yes, they also shoot a European version of the show which is a little more 'revealing,'" O'Dell said. "If we're going to show any T&A in the episode, then they'll show it in the European version. $5.95 on the newstands; 7240 West Roosevelt Road, Forest Park, IL 60130 <www.femmesfatales.com>.
381. For those who came in late, O'Dell and Blakely star in the television series "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (with Peter McCauley as Challenger), syndicated on local stations here. TV Guide noted (Sept. 9) that a second season will debut in October, and that O'Dell "trades in her original loincloth (which was auctioned off to a lucky fan at the end of last season for an even skimpier outfit."
382. Mike Ward offers original watercolor artwork for two illustrations by British artist Paul Hogarth for a French pastiche "La main brune" published by Gallimard: a deerstalker (29 x 40 cm, signed, £125) and a pipe (24 x 32 cm, initialed, £75). You can see them on the web at <www.users.waitrose.com/~clapplin/deerstalker.jpg> and <www.users.waitrose.com/~clapplin/shpipe.jpg>. Mike's address is (27 Addison Road, Guildford, Surrey GU1 3QQ, England) <michaeljohnward@btinternet.com>.
383. The Walt Disney cartoon "Lonesome Ghosts" (1937) featured Mickey and Goofy (wearing deerstalkers) and Donald pursuing ghosts in a haunted house, and Julie McKuras spotted a new limited-edition (2,500 copies) sericel called "Ghouls Rush In" (showing the trio) at $295 (framed and matted) at a local Disney Store. Your local Disney Store may have a copy, or might be able to order one for you.
384. Reported: discussion of "The Dancing Men" in Simon Singh's THE CODE BOOK: THE EVOLUTION OF SECRECY FROM MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS TO QUANTUM CRYPTOGRAPHY (New York: Doubleday, 1999; 402 pp., $24.95) just reprinted in paperback as THE CODE BOOK: THE EVOLUTION OF SECRECY FROM ANCIENT EGYPT TO QUANTUM CRYPTOGRAPHY (New York: Anchor, 2000; 416 pp., $14.00).

385. Curt Siodmak died on Sept. 2. He created "The Wolf Man" for Universal Pictures in 1941, and wrote or co-wrote more than 70 screenplays between 1928 and 1979, and his science-fiction novel DONOVAN'S BRAIN (1943) has become a classic in the genre. He wrote the screenplay for "Sherlock Holmes und das Haslband des Todes" (1963, which starred Christopher Lee as Sherlock Holmes and Thorley Walters as Dr. Watson, and was dubbed and released in English in 1968 as "Sherlock Holmes and the Necklace of Death".

386. Sep 00 #5: "L'homme n'est rien, l'oeuvre tout," Gustave Flaubert wrote to George Sand, and while those aren't the exact words to be found in "The Red-Headed League", it's what Flaubert did write to Amantine Lucile Aurore Dupin, the Baroness Dudevant, who was the most famous woman writer in France in the 19th century. And she's the subject of Belinda Jack's new biography GEORGE SAND: A WOMAN'S LIFE WRIT LARGE (New York: Knopf, 2000; 395 pp., $30.00).
387. "The Golden Spiders: A Nero Wolfe Mystery" debuted on A&E cable on Mar. 5, starring Maury Chaykin as Nero Wolfe and Tim Hutton as Archie Goodwin, and a brief glimpse of the portrait of Sherlock Holmes on the wall over Goodwin's desk in Wolfe's office; it's now available on cassette (100 minutes) from A&E Home Video ($19.95). John McAleer (Rex Stout's biographer) asked him, "Did Archie hang up the picture of Sherlock Holmes that is found over his desk, or did Wolfe put it there?" Stout replied, "I was a damn fool to do it. Obviously it's always an artistic fault in any fiction to mention any other character in fiction. It should never be done."
388. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has nice tributes to the late Cameron Hollyer, and Dayna McCausland's examination of Sherlockian comic strips and comic books; copies are available from Doug Wrigglesworth, 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwig@idirect.com>. And (for the electronically enabled), the Friends' web-site is at <www.acdfriends.org>.
389. The 1932 Czech film "Lelicek ve sluzbach Sherlocka Holmesa" [Lelicek in the Service of Sherlock Holmes] was directed by Karel Lamac and starred Martin Fric as Holmes, and it's now available on an NTSC-format videocassette (in Czech, without subtitles) from Video EL Canada, 583 William Street, London, ON N6B 3E8, Canada; CA$41.00 or US$37.00 postpaid (checks or money orders, please).
390. Further to the earlier report (Aug 00 #1) on the new version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (with Matt Frewer as Holmes), the film is scheduled to debut on the Odyssey Channel on Oct. 21. The Odyssey Channel most likely can be found among the digital channels available from some cable services.
391. Patricia King examines "The Dyeing Detective" in the September issue of The Camden House Journal (the monthly four-page newsletter published by the Occupants of the Empty House), and that's not a misprint: it's hair dye, and she comes to a surprising and interesting conclusion about what Holmes did after he encountered Moriarty at the Reichenbach Falls. A subscription to The Camden House Journal costs $12.00 a year from Stan Tinsley (105 Wilcox Avenue, Ziegler, IL 62999); copies of "The Dyeing Detective" are available (free) from Stan, who's also at <srtn@hotmail.com>. And the society has a web-site at <www.75megs.com/camdenhouse/>.
392. For the electronically-enabled: the SciFi Channel's web-site at <www.scifi.com/set/originals/> offers a Seeing Ear Theater web-page with a long list of audio adaptations, and you now can (if your computer is fancy enough), listen to Poul Anderson's imaginative pastiche "The Martian Crown Jewels" starring Bronson Pinchot as Syaloch (and with a script by Andrew Joffe).

393. Sep 00 #6: There has been a lot of publicity about Rodger Garrick-Steele's claim that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle colluded with his publishers to deny B. Fletcher Robinson recognition for devising the plot and supplying much of the local detail for THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and then in 1907, worried that his affair with Fletcher Robinson's wife Gladys would be discovered, poisoned Fletcher Robinson with laudanum. According to a story in the Sunday Times (Sept. 10), Garrick-Steele moved into Park Hill House, Fletcher Robinson's former home, in the 1980s, but was unaware of its literary connections until "a photograph of the young Conan Doyle was mysteriously left on the doorstep." According to a story in the Sunday Express on the same date, Garrick-Steele's 500-page manuscript has been rejected by 90 publishers, and he is hoping that "publicity surrounding his allegations will be enough to get the book into print." He has been described in the press as a former driving instructor, undertaker, and property developer; it remains to be seen if he will become a published author.
394. A new stamp honors the 150th anniversary of California's statehood; California is mentioned in three Sherlock Holmes stories ("A Study in Scarlet", "The Noble Bachelor", and "The Valley of Fear"). The spectacular view of the Pacific coast is one that Conan Doyle might well have seen when he visited California in 1923. "It is a nice question," he wrote in OUR SECOND AMERICAN ADVENTURE, "whether San Francisco does not stand first in natural beauty of all cities in the world."
395. Almost three years ago I wrote about a new CD-ROM disk, and it is just as interesting and useful now as it was then, and, since there are many more Sherlockians and Doyleans who have computers with CD-ROM readers now, I'll reprint my review: Dec 97 #3: The world of technology uses the phrase "killer application" to describe something that's so desirable that it sells a product: it was pornography, for example, that drove the rapid expansion of VCR ownership (since people could watch X-rated films at home rather than in seedy movie theaters). And THE WORKS OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE on a CD-ROM disk may well help many Sherlockians decide to add a CD-ROM reader to their computers. It has almost all of Conan Doyle's published works, an extensive bibliography, and an updated and expanded second edition of THE QUEST FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (edited by Jon L. Lellenberg), in plain-ASCII that's platform-independent (you can run it on any computer, possibly even including an IBM 650, which is the first computer I ever wrote programs for, back in 1960). And there's more, including useful software, and the manuscript of the first chapter of THE WHITE COMPANY. John Thibeau and Frank A. Young have created a splendid resource for Sherlockians and Doyleans and anyone interested in good literature: there's material on this disk that has been out-of-print for decades and almost impossible to find in original appearances, and it's grand indeed that so many more people will be able to read it now. $95.00 postpaid from Insight Engineering (Box 10785, Franconia, VA 22310), and there's a Zip disk for those who have Zip drives ($100.00 postpaid); US dollar checks or money orders, please.

396. Oct 00 #1: There's going to be a lot going on in mid-November in and near Washington: Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" will be performed in Arlington, Va., on Nov. 17-19; "A Saturday with Sherlock Holmes: Sherlock Under the Lens: will be held at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 18, and The Red Circle of Washington celebrates its 50th anniversary at dinner on Nov. 20.
397. A synopsis of the play: "William Gillette has invited the cast of his revival of 'Sherlock Holmes' to his Connecticut home for the weekend. Someone is trying to murder Gillette, and he has reason to suspect that it is one of his guests for the weekend, and the intrepid and eccentric Gillette has taken on, in real life, his greatest role: he plans to solve the case a la Sherlock Holmes! Shots in the dark, a stormy night, and bottles over the head, all lead to misbegotten suspicions among the guests." There will be three performances, on Nov. 17 (8:00 pm), Nov. 18 (8:00 pm), and Nov. 19 (2:00 pm), at the Bishop O'Connell High School at 6600 Little Falls Road, Arlington, VA 22213; tickets cost $8.00 (or $5.00 for students and seniors) (and there's a special family rate for members of the Knights of Columbus), and reservations are needed if you want a good seat (the box-office telephone number is 703-237-1448).

398. "A Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" is sponsored by the Sherlockian societies in Baltimore; it's the 21st annual program, and it starts at 10:00 on Nov. 18, with presentations by local Sherlockians, and the festivities will end at 1:00. There's no charge, and the Enoch Pratt Free Library is located at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
399. And The Red Circle will celebrate its 50th anniversary at dinner at The National Press Club in Washington, with Karen Anderson (the founder and still the president of the society) on hand, accompanied by her husband Poul Anderson; drinks at 6:30 and dinner at 7:30. Dinner costs $36.50, and reservations are important; please contact Peter E. Blau (addresses at the end of the last page of this newsletter).
400. John A. Kerr died on Oct 13. He was a certified public accountant, proud of his Scots ancestors (he wore his kilt to help the Bootmakers of Toronto celebrate their 25th anniversary), and a member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches, The Clients of Sherlock Holmes, The Denizens of the Bar of Gold, and other societies on the mid-Atlantic coast.
401. Marina Stajic and Paul Singleton have discovered a Baker Street restaurant and pub in New York, at 1152 First Avenue (at 63rd Street); there's a Sherlockian silhouette on the menu and matchbooks, and their web-site may be up and running now at <<http://www.bakerstreetny.com>>.
402. Planning continues for the 10th annual dinner of the STUD Sherlockian Society, at the Sheraton Four Points in Schiller Park, Ill., on Mar. 2, 2001, with Steve Doyle as featured speaker, a silent auction of material from the late Dennis France's collection of Sherlockiana, as well as the traditional awards, toasts, and door prizes. And there will be a Solar Pons Breakfast and other events on Mar. 3. Additional details are available from Allan T. Devitt (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <atdevitt@mediaone.net>.

403. Oct 00 #2: For the completists: Tom Baker's autobiography WHO ON EARTH IS TOM BAKER? (London: HarperCollins, 1997; 268 pp., £17.99) has been remaindered, and includes minor discussion of his appearances on television as Doctor Who in "The Talons of Weng-Chiang" (1977) and as Sherlock Holmes in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1982) and in Hugh Leonard's play "The Mask of Moriarty" (1985).
404. Further to the obituary for Curt Siodmak (Sep 00 #4), the latest issue of Scarlet Street (#39) offers some fine articles about him and his films; the magazine costs $35.00 a year for six issues (Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452). <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>.
405. Scarlet Street also reports that Arts & Entertainment cable plans to follow their "The Golden Spiders: A Nero Wolfe Mystery" with another two-hour film ("The Doorbell Rang") and ten one-hour episodes starring Maury Chaykin and Timothy Hutton. If they use the same set for Wolfe's office, there may be more glimpses of the portrait of Sherlock Holmes hanging on the wall over Archie Goodwin's desk.
406. Claire Pierce, who provides Special Events Bulletin Boards for the Touring America Guild, has kindly created one for Sherlockian events, and if you have access to the World Wide Web, you can see how it works at the web-site at <<http://www.touringtiles.com/bulletin/sherlock/wwwboard.htm>>, and post your own notices (and there's no charge for posting or access).
407. Thomas Wolfe (1900-1938) has been honored in our series of "Literary Arts" stamps. He's best known for his novel LOOK HOMEWARD, ANGEL (1929), and Stephen M. Black's "A Meeting Between Sherlock Holmes and Thomas Wolfe--A Possible and Plausible Scenario" was published The Thomas Wolfe Review (spring 1983).
408. Does anyone recall anything about Arthur Conan Doyle having visited Elton Manor? Eliza Wright spotted a passing mention of this in THE MARIAN CONSPIRACY, by Graham Phillips (London: Sidgwick and Jackson, 2000); Phillips says that Conan Doyle stayed at Elton Manor in 1899, and that the manor was the inspiration for Baskerville Hall, but cites no source.
409. A new issue of The Sherlockian Times has arrived from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>> with a nice selection of books, mugs, audio and videocassettes, and other collectibles, including a new "Sherlock Hare" (complete with birth certificate); do your Christmas shopping early.
410. It has been a while since I mentioned The Edgar Wallace Society, whose members are devoted to their hero as we are to ours; Edgar Wallace was one of the most prolific authors in modern literature (and he wrote the dialogue for the 1932 film version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). The society has the blessing of Wallace's granddaughter Penny Wyrd, and has a quarterly newsletter called The Crimson Circle, and membership costs £15.00 in Europe (£10.00 for students and seniors) and £20.00/£15.00 elsewhere. Additional information is available from Kai Jorg Hinz at Kohlbergsgracht 40, NL-6462 CD Kerkrade, The Netherlands <<http://www.edgarwallace.org>>.

411. Oct 00 #3: John Baesch has forwarded a review by Jim Carey in The Sunday Times (Sept. 24) of HOW THE ENGLISH MADE THE ALPS, by Jim Ring (London: John Murray, 2000; 290 pp., £19.99); it appears that British mountaineers who were members of the Alpine Club, founded in 1857 by people who believed that Alps were only to be climbed, were far from happy when Arthur Conan Doyle launched the sport of downhill skiing, which one member of the club called "a return to the primitive delights practised by savages."
412. The Sept. 2000 "mostly new arrivals" catalog from Peter L. Stern (55 Temple Place, Boston, MA 02111) <psbook@aol.com> offers some interesting Sherlockiana and Doyleana, including the 12-page manuscript for "The Coming of the Huns" (one of his fine tales of Roman history), offered at $37,500.
413. The Easton Press (47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06875) (800-211-1308) is still offering THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES in three volumes; first issued in 1987, it's a handsome leather-bound reprint (with color frontispieces) of the Heritage Press edition published in 1952 and 1957; $54.00 per volume postpaid.
414. Stradivarius violins continue to make the news: John Baesch has forwarded a story from the Daily Telegraph (Sept. 25), about the Messiah Stradivarius, which has been owned by the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford for a century and a half and, now that experts have concluded it's authentic, is valued at £10 million. The violin is in perfect condition, which made it suspect in the view of some who believed it a 19th-century fake, but a study of tree rings in the violin's Alpine spruce top show it to be far older, and perhaps even made from the same tree as two other Strads created in 1717.
415. Morton Lowry died on Aug. 22. He began his acting career on stage in London, and moved to Hollywood in the 1930s, acting in films for more than 20 years; he played John Stapleton in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) and the steward Sanford in "Pursuit to Algiers" (1945).
416. Forecast: Gerard Van der Leun's THE QUOTABLE SHERLOCK HOLMES ("a comprehensive compendium of the first consulting detective's wit, wisdom, and philosophy"), from the Mysterious Press in November (256 pp., $12.95).
417. Jerry Kegley presented a paper on "The Magic Bullet Pre-Kennedy: Dr. John H. Watson at the Battle of Maiwand" at a meeting of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street on Sept. 17; copies of the 23-page paper (which Jerry describes as a "definitive chapbook") are available from the author (110 El Nido Avenue #41, Pasadena, CA 91107) ($7.50 postpaid).
418. Further to the item (Sep 00 #1) on the possibility of a CD-ROM disk with a complete run of The Baker Street Journal, The Baker Street Irregulars have announced that the disk will be published, with the Old Series, the Christmas Annuals, and 50 volumes of the New Series (through the end of 2000) in PDF format; and with Don Redmond's subject, author, and title indexes; and with search and cut-and-paste features; and with Adobe Reader software in both Windows and Macintosh formats. The cost will be $105.00 postpaid (or $110.00 outside North America); checks (payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) should be sent to The Baker Street Irregulars, 2029 Century Park East #3290, Los Angeles, CA 90067, and the disks will be shipped early in 2001.

419. Oct 00 #4: Peter Melonas (Sherlock Holmes Mystery Book Store, 1770 Sixth Crompton Square, Memphis, TN 38134 <capedthief@cs.com> offers copies of Joe Barros' 1981 "A Three Pipe Problem" lithograph portrait of Sherlock Holmes ($45.00 postpaid), and of John Northcross' 1992 print showing Holmes and Watson ($12.00 postpaid). Illustrated flier are available on request.
420. Further to the item (Jul 00 #1) about the boxed set of "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" with 48 hours of audio material on 36 cassettes, I neglected to mention that all those hours are the BBC radio series that starred Clive Merrison and Michael Williams (the first time the entire Canon has been recorded with the same actors as Holmes and Watson); the set costs £150, and the cassettes also are available separately.
421. Available from Thomas Biblewski: a chrome-plated lapel pin with a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes. $7.00 postpaid, from the Baker Street Dispatch, Box 5503, Toledo, OH 43613.
422. Noted by Paul Churchill: William R. Hanson's article "The Adventure of the Detective Stamp" in October issue of American Philatelist, about many of the postage stamps that have honored Sherlock Holmes. Hanson has designed more than 3,000 stamps for some two dozen countries, and one of his designs may be new to Sherlockian philatelists: a young woman of Queen Victoria's day shown in front of the Northumberland Hotel in London, on the souvenir sheet issued by Bhutan in 1990 to honor Stamp World London 90. Box 8000, State College, PA 16803; $3.95.
423. Further to the item (Sep 00 #6) on Rodger Garrick-Steele's claim that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stole "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from B. Fletcher Robinson, had an affair with his wife, and murdered him, Variety reported on Oct. 11 that Nash Entertainment has bought the film, stage, television, and book rights to the Garrick-Steele manuscript. Nash Entertainment is a Hollywood production company responsible for television series such as "The Sexiest Bachelor in America", "I Confess!", "Speed Dating", and "Wanted!".
424. William S. Dorn has been teaching courses on Sherlock Holmes at the University of Denver for more than 25 years, and the results of his work are now available in A STUDY GUIDE TO SHERLOCK HOLMES, which offers quizzes, questions, and exercises in chronology. The first volume (with 288 pages) has a foreword by Julia Carlson Rosenblatt and covers the four novels, the Adventures. and the Memoirs; it can be ordered from The Sherlock Store (2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210), and the postpaid cost is $19.95 (to the U.S.), $20.95 (Canada), and $25.95 (elsewhere). A CD-ROM disk (without answers to the questions) can be used to generate print-outs of assignments and costs $9.95/$10.95/$12.95 postpaid.
425. "2001: A New Sherlockian Odyssey: a Journey Through the Shaw 100" will be held in Minneapolis on June 29-July 1, 2001; the conference will focus on John Bennett Shaw's "Basic Holmesian Library" (with an exhibit at the Elmer L. Andersen Library), and there will be distinguished speakers, an auction, a banquet, a meeting of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, and other entertainment. Details are available from Julie McKuras (13512 Granada Avenue, Apple Valley, MN 55124) <mike9750@aol.com>.
426. Oct 00 #5: Peter Turgeon died on Oct. 6. He started his acting career as one of the Day children in a touring production of "Life with Father" in 1940, and worked in film and television as well as on stage, and he was a writer, director, and actor at the Eugene O'Neill Theater Center in Waterford, Conn., where in 1973 he played Holmes in the world premiere of Allen Sternfield's one-act play "Holmes and Moriarty, or An Extension of Philosophy, or The Rape of Mrs. Hudson".
427. The American Firm, a Sherlockian society whose "resident patient" project raises money to buy large-print editions of the Canon for adult homes and nursing homes, welcomes donations for the project, and offers badges, bookmarks, mouse pads, tea towels, a quiz book, and other Sherlockian merchandise; an illustrated sales-list is available from Edward S. Smith, Jr. (Box 353, Williston Park, NY 11596) <amerfirm@aol.com>.
428. Elfed Jones offers original, excellently-preserved issues of The Times and the Pall Mall Gazette from the 1880s and 1890s ("as read by Holmes and Watson"); $19.00 each (Yesterday's News, 43 Dundonald Road, Colwyn Bay, Clwyd LL29 7RE, United Kingdom).
429. Cerebro (Box 327, East Prospect, PA 17317) <<http://www.cerebro.com>> (800-695-2235) offers a wide variety of colorful antique label art (cigar box, fruit crate, and can labels), and their new catalog includes the Sherlock Holmes cigar box labels: inner lid label ($8.00) and outer label (two variants, $24.00 and $75.00).
430. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers warm tributes to the late E. W. McDiarmid, by Andrew Malec, Julie McKuras, and John Bergquist, and news of the collections and notes on some of the more interesting items. If you'd like to be on their mailing list you can contact Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@maroon.tc.umn.edu>.
431. The Ferret Company Catalog is now available, with a colorful illustration of The Ferret Calendar 2001 cover photograph of a deerstalkered ferret with a magnifying glass (Jul 00 #6). The calendar costs $13.95 plus shipping ($4.95 in the U.S.); Box 7161, Redwood City, CA 94063, and can see the photograph at <<http://www.ferretcompany.com>>.
432. Issues #38 and #39 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine offer David Stuart Davies' continuing series of articles on the Granada series; Roger Llewellyn's report on his tour of Canada in the play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!"; Roger Johnson's tribute to Solar Pons; an interview with Matt Frewer (who played Sherlock Holmes in the new television version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"); Nick Utechin's two-part discussion of parodies and pastiches (adapted from his BBC radio broadcast in July); and much more (Sherlockian and otherwise). Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>, and their U.S. agent is Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>>. Creditcard orders welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.
-
433. Oct 00 #6: The Shoso-in Bulletin's tenth volume, published by The Men with the Twisted Konjo and edited by Yuichi Hirayama and Mel Hughes, offers 208 pages of articles, poetry, essays, pastiches, parodies, and artwork, from contributors on five continents, all in English and nicely done as usual. $12.00 postpaid from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; credit-card orders welcome. And the Shoso-in Bulletin has its own web-site, at <<http://www.parkcity.ne.jp/~hirayama/index.htm>>.
434. Spotted by Jennie Paton: a "Stuffins" seated Santa, about 10" high, wearing a deerstalker, in "The Island of Misfit Toys" soft-toys series, exclusively at CVS stores; $12.95. Stuffins is at Box 124, Brielle, NJ 08730.
435. Plan ahead: The Canonical Convocation and Capar, held in Door County, Wis., from 1989 to 1998, will hold a reunion (not restricted to alumni) on Sept. 7-9, 2001, at the Waterbury Inn in Ephraim. Donald B. Izban, Tom and Janet Biblewski, and Joel and Carolyn Senter comprise the CCC Committee, and they note that reservations are first come, first served. Details are available from Donald B. Izban (213 Ivy Court, Streamwood, IL 60107).

436. Jacques Barzun's FROM DAWN TO DECADENCE: 500 YEARS OF CULTURAL TRIUMPH AND DEFEAT: 1500 TO THE PRESENT (Aug 00 #3) has been nominated for the National Book Award. The winners of the awards will be honored by the National Book Foundation in New York on Nov. 15, when Ray Bradbury will receive the 2000 Medal for Distinguished Contribution to American Letters.
437. The Czech Republic has joined the list of countries that have Sherlockian societies: Ceska spolecnost Sherlocka Holmese [The Czech Sherlock Holmes Society] will have its first meeting on Nov, 25 in Prague. The contact is Ales Kolodrubec (Milesovska 1, 130 00 Praha 3, Czech Republic) <classifieds@praguepost.cz>.
438. Reported: James R. Stefanie's THE CHARTERS AFFAIR: BEING A REMINISCENCE OF DR. JOHN H. WATSON (428 pp., $20.95); a pastiche involving Holmes in an investigation of a 16th-century mystery that has culminated in a 19th-century murder. The book can be ordered through bookstores, and from retailers on the World Wide Web; it's published on demand by iUniverse, a company that's similar to Xlibris (Apr 00 #3), offering authors who can provide electronic text a way to have books published at little or no cost. You can get more information about iUniverse at <<http://www.iuniverse.com>> (800-376-1736).
439. Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes is one of the more than 120 stars of the 1930s and 1940s portrayed by the late George I. Parrish, Jr., in his print (35 x 14.5 in.) "The Golden Era of the Movies"; it's available for $75.00 from Barwick Publishing (Box 5355, Maryville, TN 37802), and they now have a web-site at <<http://www.barwickpublishing.com>>.
440. "They Might Be Giants" (the rock group that took its name from the George C. Scott film) is touring: Nov. 2/9/16/23/30 at the Bowery Ballroom in New York (212-982-6115); Nov. 3 at the 9:30 Club in Washington (202-265-0930); Nov. 4 at the Recher Theater in Baltimore (410-337-7178); Nov. 10 at Palestra in Rochester, N.Y. (716-275-2332); and Nov. 18 at the Avalon Ballroom in Boston (617-262-2424). Their web-site is at <<http://www.tmbg.com>>.

441. Oct 00 #7: Sherlock Holmes' 147th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 5, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the celebration actually starts on Thursday evening, when the BSI Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club at 24 East 39th Street (between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Madeleine B. Stern, author of the classic paper "Sherlock Holmes: Rare-Book Collector" (1953), and for decades an expert book dealer ($10.00); seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early; details below).
442. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the hotel provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend each day (and pay $15.00; details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $36.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
443. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 201 West 52nd Street (between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $65.00 until Dec. 15, then $75.00 (Paula J. Perry, 346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10128) <www.homestead.com/baskervillebash/BB.html> (and please let Paula know your e-mail address, and your primary Sherlockian society affiliation). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
444. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103) and 140 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
445. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in a dealers' room on the 2nd floor of the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street, from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; for information on vendor tables, contact Ralph Hall, 2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218 (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com>.
446. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will hold a Junior Bloodstain (a rather less than totally reverent gathering) at the Hotel Algonquin at 12:30 pm (possibly in the lobby, or elsewhere, depending on how many people show up). If you're planning to attend, please let Anne Cotton know (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@mediaone.net>.
447. The BSI annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held on Saturday afternoon from 3:00 to 5:30, at the National Arts Club at 15 Gramercy Park (on 20th Street between Park and Third Avenues); there will be an open bar, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, and the usual traditional and untraditional entertainment, and the cost of the event is $35.00 (details below) or $45.00 at the door.
-
448. Oct 00 #8: There will be an early-Saturday-evening event, also at the National Arts Club, where Paul Singleton will present "The Celluloid Hound" reviewing the many film and television versions of the story; this will take about 30 minutes, and it will start reasonably soon after the reception ends, and there will be a nominal charge for the event.
449. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes have arranged an informal brunch on Sunday, at noon at the Baker Street restaurant at 1152 First Avenue (at 63rd Street); it's open to all, and reservations are advised, to Marina Stajic (425 East 51st Street #4-A, New York, NY 10022) <mstajic@aol.com>.
450. The Baker Street Irregulars are a tax-exempt organization, and Mike Whelan has arranged with the Hotel Algonquin for single or double rooms at 195.00 a night (Tuesday through Sunday); this is the total cost, since there is no tax due on reservations arranged by the BSI (the special rate is the equivalent of $170.00 plus tax). Other charges (room service, telephone calls, meals, drinks, etc.) are not covered. The offer is available to all Sherlockians; contact the Algonquin directly (there's a firm mid-December cutoff deadline) and ask for the Baker Street Irregulars rate (212-840-6800).
451. And here are the details: you can request a reservation form for the Thursday lecture, the Martha Hudson breakfast, and the Saturday reception, from Michael F. Whelan, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; he will mail out the reservation forms by mid-November.
452. Mary Ellen Rich has kindly provided a list of hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, along with a warning about nonoptional extras: $2.00 a day occupancy tax, 8.25% state tax, and 5% city tax. Ask for the lowest available rate, don't be shy about asking for discounts (AAA, senior, corporate), and if you plan to arrive on Thursday you should confirm that weekend rates apply, and you should request a written confirmation. Best Western Manhattan (17 West 32nd St.): $89 (promotional: single/double) (212-736-1600); Comfort Inn Midtown (129 West 46th St.): $89 $99 (double) (212-221-2600); Thirty Thirty Hotel (30 East 30th St.): $90 (promo: single/double) (212-689-1900); Red Roof Inn (6 West 32nd St.): $90 (corporate: single/double) (212-643-7100); Quality Hotel (59 West 46th St.): $99 (single/double) (212-719-2300); Best Western Woodwood (210 West 55th St.): $119 (single/double) (212-247-2000). And Mary Ellen recommends <<http://www.panix.com>> for links to Manhattan hotels, hostels, and bed-and-breakfasts.
453. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance can also be mailed to Dr. Watson at the same address.

454. Nov 00 #1: The 18th "Autumn in Baker Street" in Tarrytown, N.Y., on Oct. 28-29 was a delightful gathering, with some 125 people on hand for the festivities, and to pay tribute to Bob Thomalen, who has both arranged and presided over all of the gatherings. This was his swan song, and the weekend was full of fun and games, and a bit of scholarship, and a dinner that featured warm tributes to Bob and Terry, and a rousing performance by the Sherlettes and the Sherhunks (who will perform again at the Baskerville Bash in January), and an after-hours songs-and-cigars room-party that was raided by the hotel security chief, who wisely offered the celebrants a larger meeting room next to a wedding party that was almost as raucous; the room's smoke alarm was disabled, and it was reported at breakfast that the party concluded at the Canonical hour of 2:21 am.
455. Bouchercon 2000 was held in Denver on Sept. 7-10, and (according to reports from all quarters received) quite successful, and there were three 45-minute sessions of particular interest: "Sherlock's Radio Plays" (David Haugen and Bill Seil) [BCX09-420]; "Spirits and Spitoons: Arthur Conan Doyle in America" (Daniel Stashower) [BCX09-840]; and "The Sherlockian Canon: High Crimes" (David Haugen, Bill Seil, and Stu Shiffman) [BCX09-910]. Bouchercon sessions are audiotaped, and you can purchase cassettes from Tree Farm Communications, 23703 N.E. 4th Street, Sammamish, WA 98074 (800-468-0464) <<http://www.treefarmtapes.com>>; $11.00 each postpaid (credit-card orders welcome).
456. Bouchercon will be in Washington on Nov. 1-4, 2001 (Box 11700, Washington, DC 20008) <<http://www.bouchercon2001.com>>, and then in Austin in 2002 (Box 27277, Austin, TX 78755 <acs@crimeandspace.com>).
457. Reported: Adam Goodheart's article "The Last Island of the Savages" in the autumn issue of American Scholar, about North Sentinel Island, which is a close neighbor (30 miles away) of Great Andaman Island in the Indian Ocean; the first "friendly visit" occurred in 1991, when a small group of Indian officials managed to land on the island and distributed gifts of coconuts without being killed by the Sentinelese. That also may have been the only friendly visit: Goodheart approached the island in a small boat, but did not attempt to land.
458. "Swift Goes to the Races!" is the theme of this year's Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal, which will offer Wayne B. Swift's comprehensive history of the Silver Blaze races (world wide) since the first such event was held in 1952. The 64-page annual is not part of subscriptions to the BSJ, and you'll need to place your orders by Dec. 15 in order to be sure of getting a copy. Orders can be sent to The Baker Street Journal (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); $11.00 postpaid in the U.S. (checks only, please), and $12.00 postpaid to other countries (credit-card orders welcome).
459. The most recent volumes in The Baker Street Irregulars' excellent archival history series (edited by Jon L. Lellenberg) also are available: IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS OF THE MID 'FORTIES (1995), and IRREGULAR CRISES OF THE LATE 'FORTIES (1999) cost $27.90 each postpaid ($28.90 outside the U.S.) from The Baker Street Irregulars, Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331.

460. Nov 00 #2: Dirk J. Struik died on Oct. 21. He began teaching mathematics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1926, and his landmark two-volume CONCISE HISTORY OF MATHEMATICS was published in 1948 (a revised fourth edition was issued in 1987 and is still in print). He also was a fervent Marxist and in 1951 was accused by a county grand jury of advocating the overthrow of the government, and MIT suspended him from teaching until the case was dropped five years later. His article on "The Real Watson" was published in The Baker Street Journal in Jan. 1947, and he was still a Sherlockian when he was a centenarian; Dirk greatly enjoyed attending annual dinners of The Friends of Irene Adler, and toasting his fellow mathematician Professor Moriarty. "I've lived this long because I didn't die," he told the Associated Press in 1999, when he was 104.
461. Arthur Conan Doyle wrote "The Haunted Grange of Goresthorpe: A True Ghost Story" toward the end of the 1870s, and submitted it to Blackwood's Magazine; the story was never published, but the magazine kept the manuscript, which was discovered in its archives, now at the National Library of Scotland. The story is being published for the first time, on Dec. 1, with an introduction by Owen Dudley Edwards, an afterword by Christopher Roden, and a reproduction of the first page of the manuscript, by the Ash-Tree Press (Box 136, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada). The book costs CA$45.00/US$35.00 /£21.00 plus shipping (credit-card orders welcome), and there's a web-site at <<http://ash-tree.bc.ca/ashtreecurrent.html>>.
462. "Mr. Holmes was a dinner guest at the White House," Washington Evening Star reporter Ben McKelway was told by an official at the National Theater on Jan. 6, 1930. Of course it wasn't Holmes, but rather William Gillette, who had arrived to begin a one-week run of his play and had been invited to luncheon with President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover. Our new stamp honors the bicentennial of the opening of the White House, which has been visited by notable Sherlockians, including Christopher Morley, whose article about "What the President Reads: Notes on a Visit to the White House" in the Saturday Review of Literature (Sept. 24, 1932) said of President Herbert Hoover: "Though not a great zealot of the detective story he knows his Sherlock Holmes, Anna Katharine Green, Mary Roberts Rinehart, S. S. Van Dine."
463. Mark Alberstat's 2001 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The cost is US$12.00 postpaid, and his address is 5 Lorraine Street, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2B9, Canada.
464. Laurie R. King is home after her promotional tour to Australia, and is now at work on her next Mary Russell book, JUSTICE HALL, scheduled for publication next year. There's lots of information about Laurie and her books at her official web-site at <<http://www.laurierking.com>>, with information on how to get signed copies of her books from a bookstore near Laurie's home: Cross-Roads Books, 1935 Main Street, Watsonville, CA 9576 (831-728-4139).
465. And Laurie's "The Beekeeper's Apprentice" is now on the air in Great Britain, dramatized by Sean Prendergast and broadcast by BBC Radio 4 in four weekly episodes beginning on Nov. 15, starring Monica Dolan (Mary Russell), James Fox (Sherlock Holmes), and Sean Prendergast (Dr. Watson).
466. Nov 00 #3: The Northern Musgraves offer some attractive new merchandise: a bronze bust of Peter Cushing as Holmes, a pewter statuette of Peter Cushing as Holmes, and a bone-china cup with the Musgrave Ritual and the society's logo. An illustrated sales-list is available from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. BD16 4DN, England.
467. Further to the item (Oct 00 #6) about the Shoso-in Bulletin, editor Yuichi Hirayama welcomes submissions (especially from countries where English is not the primary language) for the next volume; Yuichi's address is: 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181-0012, Japan <hirayama@parkcity.ne.jp>.
468. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists met for dinner at the Liberty Belle Saloon in Reno on Nov. 15, welcomed by Paul and Jenny McFarlane and other members of The Jarveys of the Metropolis. As usual, we toasted the world's first forensic geologist, and then many other people, including Sarah Andrews, whose sixth mystery novel about forensic geologist Em Hansen (AN EYE FOR GOLD) has just been published by St. Martin's Minotaur. Sarah brought along her friend David A. Spencer, who carried a paperback copy of her earlier ONLY FLESH AND BONES with him to Mount Everest, and left it behind at the camp at 6,502 meters, establishing Em Hansen as our most elevated forensic geologist. Our next dinners will be in Denver in June and in Boston in November 2001.
469. William T. Hurtz died on Oct. 14. He was a splendid animator who began his career with Walt Disney in 1938 (working on the dancing mushroom sequence in "Fantasia" in 1940), and went on to launch United Productions of America (he was the layout artist for "Gerald McBoing-Boing"), and in

- 1959 moved to Jay Ward Productions (where he was one of the first to direct and supervise "The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle"). He drew this Sherlockian "Rocky and Bullwinkle" artwork for Jerry Margolin, who reproduced it on his 1984 Christmas card.
470. Many Sherlockians have visited William Gillette's home (Gillette Castle and State Park) in East Haddam, Conn., but I don't recall anyone reporting on a visit to Gillette's grave in Riverside Cemetery in Farmington, Conn. William Force spotted the story in the Farmington Valley Post (Oct. 26): enter the cemetery through the south gate, and look for the brownstone Civil War Monument; Gillette's grave is several steps to the east of the monument.
471. Allen Mackler reports some nice finds in a catalog from The Scholar's Bookshelf: Richard D. Altick's WRITERS, READERS, AND OCCASIONS: SELECTED ESSAYS ON VICTORIAN LITERATURE AND LIFE (1989) discounted to $12.95; Altick's THE PRESENCE OF THE PRESENT: TOPICS OF THE DAY IN THE VICTORIAN NOVEL (1991) discounted to $19.95; Daniel Stashower's TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1999) discounted to $19.95; and THE SUPERNATURAL TALES OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1987) discounted to $8.99; the address is 110 Melrich Road, Cranbury, NJ 08512) <<http://scholarsbookshelf.com/literature/>>.
472. Nov 00 #4: Those who enjoyed "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" on BBC-2 in Britain in January and on PBS-TV in the United States in May (starring Ian Richardson as Joseph Bell and Robin Laing as Arthur Conan Doyle) will welcome the report from script-writer David Pirie that shooting began on Nov. 13 on four more 90-minute episodes.
473. Further to the mention of The Edgar Wallace Society (Oct 00 #2), the House of Stratus is bringing Wallace's books back into print: 28 titles are now available, with 28 more due in February, and members of the society receive a discount. Details are available from Penny Wyrd (84 Ridgefield Road, Oxford OX4 3DA, England) <<http://www.edgarwallace.org>>.
474. Tom Huntington notes Sherlockian dialogue in the new film "Best in Show": when Harlan Pepper (played by Christopher Guest) enters the show arena with his bloodhound Hubert, the clueless commentator (Buck Laughlin, played by Fred Willard) asks his co-commentator if the bloodhound would stand a better chance if he came on wearing a Sherlock Holmes cap and with a pipe that could be rigged to blow smoke.
475. And Mia Stampe has reported that in Robin Williams' film "Jakob the Liar" (1999), one of the old men says that he has played minor roles in some Shakespeare plays, and Sherlock Holmes in "The Hound of the Baskervilles".
476. John Broush's artwork is shown on new "Shirts from the South Downers" (polo shirts and T-shirts), available in various colors and sizes; an illustrated flier with full details is offered by Tim O'Connor (6015 West Route 115, Herscher, IL 60941); the deadline for orders is Dec. 31.
477. The Red Circle of Washington celebrated its 50th anniversary at dinner at the National Press Club on Nov. 20 with our founder Karen Kruse Anderson on hand for the festivities. Karen reminisced about the society's early days, Jon Lellenberg paid tribute to six members of The Baker Street Irregulars who attended meetings in the 1950s, Sarah Rosenbaum reviewed significant events of later decades, Mike Whelan offered ideas on why so many Sherlockian societies have been so long-lived, and Beau Briggs and Nora Myers offered a dramatic bilingual toast to Emilia Lucca. And as might be expected, national politics was not neglected: both presidential candidates were reported to be suffering from medical problems. George W. Bush was receiving treatment for erectile dysfunction, and Al Gore was havtrouble with of premature congratulation.
478. Further to the item (Oct 00 #4) about the boxed set of "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" on 36 cassettes starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams (in the series broadcast by BBC radio), Bert Coules notes that you get all 50 hours for your £150 (and he should know, since he wrote many of the series scripts).
479. Sherlock Holmes continues to turn up in medical journals: Richard Lackritz spotted Krishnansu S. Tewari's "The Adventure of the Three Abnormal Paps" in Obstetrics & Gynecology (Nov. 2000). in which Holmes is consulted by Sir William Gull and meets Dr. Frederick Treves (of Elephant Man fame).
480. Nov 00 #5: Forecast for December: THE SCOTTISH PLAY: A MYCROFT HOLMES MYSTERY, by Quinn Fawcett (Forge, $24.95); the fourth novel in the series of pastiches ("when an actor resembling him mysteriously disappears, Mycroft Holmes must step into his shoes in Macbeth, while his allies search London for the missing man and battle to the enigmatic Brotherhood").
481. Forecast for January: a paperback reprint of SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON, by Larry Millett (Penguin, $5.99). INTO THE MUMMY'S TOMB, edited by John Richard Stephens (Berkley, $14.00); contents include essays by Egyptologists Arthur Weigall and Howard Carter, and short stories Anne Rice, Bram Stoker, Elizabeth Peters, Arthur Conan Doyle, and others.
482. An auction of "illustrative paintings and drawings" at Illustration House on Nov. 4 included a painting by Arthur Conan Doyle's uncle Richard Doyle, ("Man at the edge of the pits of Hell", in watercolor and gouache en grisaille) which sold for $2,200 (plus 10% for the buyer's premium). The electronically-enabled may still be able to see the painting (lot 14) at their web-site at <<http://www.illustration-house.com>>. If you'd like to be on their mailing list for future auctions, their address is 96 Spring Street, New York, 10012 (212-966-9444).
483. Forwarded by Bob Reynolds and Joe Coppola: Howell L. Hodgskin Jr.'s "'The Game Is Afoot'" in the November issue of American Philatelist, reporting on his Sherlockian stamps, postcards, and covers, with an illustration of his advertising cover from Parker Brothers in 1904 that promotes the company's "Sherlock Holmes" game.
484. Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be produced at the Long Beach Playhouse on Dec. 1-16 and Jan. 5-20. The theater is at 5021 East Anaheim Street, Long Beach, CA 90804 (562-494-1014).
485. "I wish I could say that Plato, Aristotle and other worthies were my fare, but my tastes at the period were for fun and adventure and mystery," Julia Child told Amy Wallace and Jerry Griswold when they asked celebrities about their youthful reading for an article in Parade Magazine (Mar. 13, 1983). "Kiddie adventure stories were my favorite reading," she reported, listing G. A. Henty's, the Sherlock Holmes stories, and Western sagas by Zane Grey. On Nov. 19, Scott Monty has reported, Julia Child was awarded the Legion d'Honneur, France's highest honor, in recognition of her work in ensuring that "any literate person with a reasonable amount of manual dexterity can concoct praiseworthy French meals." One hopes that she recalls that Sherlock Holmes received the same honor, for the tracking and arrest of Huret, the Boulevard assassin.
486. Things do change: those who remember the Hotel Iroquois as an inexpensive alternative to the Hotel Algonquin will have noticed that the Iroquois has been renovated and now far from inexpensive. William Grimes wrote in his "Diner's Journal" in the N.Y. Times (Oct. 27) that: "On 44th Street, the Algonquin has always held sway over the Iroquois next door. But the Iroquois, in the final phase of its transformation into a chic boutique hotel, has trumped its old rival. It has created a restaurant worth eating at." The new restaurant is called Triomphe, and it has 11 tables and an interesting menu, with dinner entrees $23.00 to $27.00.
487. Nov 00 #6: Lee Shackleford's play "Holmes & Watson" had its world premiere at the University of Alabama in Birmingham in 1989, and it was performed in New York during the birthday festivities in 1990, and it will be revived next year at the Library Theatre of the Hoover Public Library in Hoover, Ala., on May 10-12 and 18-20. The theater address is 200 Municipal Drive, Hoover, AL 35216 (205-444-7888) <<http://www.gulliver.cc/h&w.htm>>.

488. Frank Thomas was honored by The Blustering Gales from the South-West at a dinner in Los Angeles on Oct. 21; he made his first stage appearance in 1932, and acted in a dramatization of Christopher Morley's novel "Thunder on the Left", and appeared in his first film ("A Dog of Flanders") in 1935, and on television as "Tom Corbett, Space Cadet" in the 1950s. After retiring from acting, he began new careers as an author and as a bridge teacher, and in the 1980s and 1990s wrote a series of Sherlockian pastiches.
489. Mary Burke reports that the exhibition "Art for the Nation: Collecting for a New Century" (at the National Gallery of Art in Washington through Feb. 4) displays recent acquisitions by the museum, including "The Shipwreck" by Sherlock Holmes' great-great-grandfather Claude-Joseph Vernet.
490. Further to the report (Apr 96 #2) on the postage stamp issue by Great Britain honoring the 50th anniversary of the Wildfowl & Wetlands Trust and its efforts to save endangered birds that include the bittern, one recalls that Stapleton suggested (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles") that "I should not be surprised to learn that what we have heard is the cry of the last of the bitterns." John McGowan has noted a story in the Daily Telegraph (Nov. 20) that records some cheerful news: there are 22 surviving pairs of bitterns, and one of them has produced young, at a sanctuary run by the Lincolnshire Wildlife Trust at Barton.
491. Sotheby's (34-35 New Bond Street, London W1A 2AA, England) is offering some interesting Dorothy L. Sayers material at auction on Dec. 19 (sale L00215), and lot 279 consists of items relating to her interest in Sherlock Holmes. There's an unpublished BBC radio script of Lord Peter Wimsey's tribute to Sherlock Holmes (broadcast in 1954), an annotated proof copy of her article "Dr. Watson's Christian Name", an autograph notebook with her notes on "The Priory School", and other intriguing material. Sotheby's estimates the lot at £2,500-3,500. The electronically-enabled can view a full description at <http://www.sothebys.com/cgi-bin/osform.exe/lotservice?osforms\_template=CatalogueSearch.oft> (type in the sale and lot numbers).
492. There's a delightful stained-glass portrait of Sherlock Holmes on display in the O'Shaughnessy-Frey Library at the University of St. Thomas, designed by Austin H. Lange, manufactured by Conrad Pichel, and installed in 1959. John Bennett Shaw showed the portrait on his Christmas card in 1975, and it can also be seen on the dust jacket of the 1977 Bramhall House reprint of Ronald B. De Waal's THE WORLD BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DR. WATSON, and it now is one of the illustrations in a booklet about the library, recently at hand from Bob Brusic. Copies of the booklet are available on request from the Library (2115 Summit Avenue, Saint Paul, MN 55105).
493. Dec 00 #1: The formal announcement for the grand gourmet dinner (honoring the centennial of "The Hound of the Baskervilles") at the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park on May 12 is ready: the cost of the black-tie event will be $120.00, and you should send your checks to Albert and Julia Rosenblatt, 300 Freedom Road, Pleasant Valley, NY 12569. And quickly, because seating is limited, and it's first-come, first served.
494. Bert Coules reports that Michael Williams has been awarded a Papal Knighthood, presumably for services to the Church rather than for being the only actor to have portrayed Dr. Watson in all sixty Canonical stories.
495. Inspector Morse died last month, on British television, in the last of 33 television programs starring John Thaw, according to a Reuters dispatch at hand from Jay Hyde. Colin Dexter, who created the detective, said that "by killing Morse now, I am ending it while the show is still a success," and that "Morse deserves to die. He's not looked after himself -- he is diabetic and drinks too much. So it is no wonder he keels over. It happens to us all one day, so why should Morse be any different?" And John Thaw praised Morse's fallibility: "It's one of the things I loved about him, the way he got things wrong but was so convinced he was right. Sometimes he would be chasing the wrong man for three quarters of an episode. He was never Sherlock Holmes."
496. Michael Ross notes a new Sherlockian pastiche (in German): DER VIERTE KOENIG [THE FOURTH MAGI], by Stefan Wings (Cologne: Emons Verlag, 2000; 255 pp., DM 19.80); Holmes is called in to unravel the theft of the relics of the Biblical magi from Cologne Cathedral. $10.00 postpaid (to any address) from Baskerville Buecher (Postfach 42 06 70, 50900 Cologne, Germany); currency only, please.
497. Claire Pierce, who provides Special Events Bulletin Boards for the Touring America Guild, continues to offer one for Sherlockian events, and if you (or anyone in your Sherlockian society) has access to the World Wide Web, you can see how the bulletin board works (and post your own notices, at no charge) at <<http://www.touringtiles.com/bulletin/sherlock/wwwboard.htm>>.
498. "Whoever plays him, the Doctor is a cosmic meddler. with no ideology except an aversion to suffering and injustice," Lloyd Rose wrote in the Washington Post (Dec. 2), discussing the television series "Doctor Who" (which is now being aired on Maryland Public Television). "As a hero, he belongs to the class of Eccentric English Bachelor Geniuses, of whom the supreme example is Sherlock Holmes. Like Holmes, he is cerebral, solitary, and curious, in both senses of the word. He doesn't find wickedness fearsome as much as supremely irritating."
499. The British Tourist Authority (551 Fifth Avenue #701, New York, NY 10176) (800-482-2748) <<http://www.travelbritain.org>> does a splendid job of helping tourists. Their "Literary Britain" map offers discussion of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes, and their "Movie Map" includes the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" series. There's also a brochure for The Original London Walks <<http://www.walks.com>> with various walks devoted to Sherlock Holmes.
500. Dec 00 #2: Laurie R. King will be on tour next year, promoting her new (non-Mary Russell) novel FOLLY. Her schedule is: Mar. 5 at the Capitola Book Cafe in Capitola, CA; Mar. 6 at Stacey's in San Francisco, CA, and Kepler's in Menlo Park, CA; Mar. 7 at Rakestraw in Danville, CA; Mar. 10 at M Is for Mystery in San Mateo, CA, and the Bookshop in Benicia, CA; Mar. 11 at the Poisoned Pen in Scottsdale, AZ; Mar. 12 at Murder by the Book in Houston, TX; Mar. 13 at Anderson's in Naperville (near Chicago), IL; Mar. 14 at Once Upon a Crime in Minneapolis, MN; Mar. 15 at Borders in Bailey's Crossroads, VA; Mar. 16 in bookstores in New York and at Book Revue in Huntington, Long Island; Mar. 18 at Nicholas Hoare in Toronto, ON; Mar. 21 at Elliott Bay in Seattle, WA; Mar. 22 at Borders in Tigard (near Portland), OR; Apr. 25 at the Bookshop in Santa Cruz, CA. And she will be in England the first week in May, but with no schedule set yet.
501. Classic Specialties offers Hugo's Companions' gold-plated lapel pin; $17.00 postpaid, or $15.00 if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt"); credit-card orders welcome (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>.
502. The Pleasant Places of Florida had "The Missing Three-Quarter" as their adventure of the evening on Nov. 18; David R. McCallister prepared souvenirs for the occasion that include a carefully-researched "Rugby for Sherlockian Dummies" complete with contemporary illustrations; copies of the souvenirs are available from David (8142 Quail Hollow Boulevard, Wesley Chapel, FL 33544 ($2.00 postpaid). And the 11th running of The Florida Wessex Cup is set for Tampa Bay Downs in Florida on Feb. 10. Details also are available from David McCallister.
503. The latest issue of the August Derleth Society Newsletter has Kay Price's report on this year's Walden West Festival in Sauk City, and a reprint of an essay "Of Books and Great Books" Derleth wrote for one of Ben Abramson's Argus Bookshop catalogs in the early 1940s. A year's membership in the society costs $15.00 (Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583) <<http://www.derleth.org>>.
504. Evelyn P. Black died on Nov. 23. She was for many years a dealer in used and rare books, an ardent mystery buff (she liked to play Miss Marple with the theatrical troupe Murder by Invitation), and a member of The Men on the Tor in Rocky Hill, Conn.

505. OVER THE EDGE: THE CRIME WRITERS OF CANADA ANTHOLOGY, edited by Peter Sellers and Robert J. Sawyer (East Lawrencetown: Pottersfield Press, 2000; 224 pp., $18.95), includes Sawyer's Sherlockian time-travel pastiche "You See But You Do Not Observe" (reprinted from the 1995 anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES IN ORBIT). OVER THE EDGE costs $21.00 postpaid from the publisher (83 Leslie Road, East Lawrencetown, NS B2Z 1P8, Canada).
506. "Attorney General Investigating the Venerable Players Club" proclaimed the headline on a story in the N.Y. Times (Nov. 12), kindly forwarded by Francine Kitts. The Baker Street Irregulars held their annual dinner there in years past, but that's not the reason for the investigation. The Players share their building (actor Edwin Booth's home) on Gramercy Park South, and board of directors members, with the Hampden-Booth Theater Library and the John Drew Fund, and there's now a dispute about who owes money to whom.
-
507. Dec 00 #3: The Christopher Morley Knothole Association continues its efforts to honor Morley's memory on Long Island: the latest issue of their newsletter notes that there will be a CMKA Reading Scholarship at the Bryant Library on Jan. 9, and the society contributes funds to maintain the Knothole (his writing studio, complete with Buckminster Fuller's dymaxion bathroom), now open to the public during the summer; membership costs $20.00 a year (Christopher Morley Knothole Association, The Bryant Library, Paper Mill Road, Roslyn, NY 11743).
508. The electronically-enabled can listen to readings of poems by Edgar Allan Poe, including Basil Rathbone's "The Raven" (if you can run the software) at <<http://www.angelfire.com/pa3/poeaudio>>.
509. "Sherlock Holmes and the First English Gentleman" is a two-act play written by Doug Warwick that had its world premiere at St. Vlad's Theatre in Toronto last March; the electronically-enabled can read the script, Nancy Beiman reports, at <<http://www.dramex.org/ftp/scripts/sherlock.txt>>.
510. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London offers a 32-minute videocassette, in both European (PAL) and American (NTSC) formats, of the festivities honoring the unveiling of the statue of Sherlock Holmes in London in 1999. The postpaid cost is £10.95 (U.K.), £11.95 (Europe), $19.85 (U.S.), or £13.25 (elsewhere); from Mrs. E. M. Godden, Apple Tree Cottage, Smarden, Kent TN27 8QE, England (checks made payable to The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, please). You can also request information about a wide range of other memorabilia, including neckties, umbrellas, mugs, cameos, bookmarks, posters, lapel pins, medals, and pens.
511. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London also welcomes new members: associate members receive only The Sherlock Holmes Journal, and full members also receive notices of meetings. Prices vary depending on where you are, and on whether you're an adult or a junior, and details are available from R. J. Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU England; the society has a website at <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.org>>.
512. And the Society's forward schedule is intriguing. Of particular interest is an event scheduled for June 10, 2001: a cricket match, in Victorian costume, played to 1895 rules, at the private cricket ground of Sir Paul Getty in Buckinghamshire.
513. Further to the report (Oct 00 #7) on the "Stuffins" seated Santa wearing a deerstalker, in "The Island of Misfit Toys" soft-toys series exclusively at CVS stores, Al Gregory reports for completists that there are three sizes: small ($5.99), medium ($12.99), and large ($24.99). The large size, which is a standing Santa holding a sack, has (at least) three variants, with an elf, an elephant, or a Raggedy Ann doll in the sack.
514. The registration brochure for "Footprints of the Hound" in Toronto is now available: the conference on Oct. 19-21, 2001, is sponsored by The Bootmakers of Toronto, The Toronto Public Library, The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, and The Arthur Conan Doyle Society, and the schedule is an excellent one. The brochure is available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwrig@idirect.com>.

515. Dec 00 #4: I don't know how many Sherlockian and Doylean artists are represented in the collections of the Smithsonian Institution, but one of them is the Polish-born illustrator Wladyslaw Theodore Benda (1875-1948), whose mixed-media theatrical mask of Myrna Loy (ca. 1940) is owned by the National Portrait Gallery and is shown (in full color) at the week of Sept. 9-15 in the Smithsonian: America's Treasures 2001 engagement calendar ($16.99). Benda illustrated Conan Doyle's work (including "The Sussex Vampire") in the Metropolitan Magazine, Nash's-Pall Mall Magazine, and Hearst's International Magazine from 1918 to 1924.
516. Ron Fish has founded a new Sherlockian society: The Master's Masons, which is open to any male belonging to a Masonic Lodge. Ron's address is Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919 <ronf404@aol.com>.
517. Ron also has begun work on a new "Commomplace Book" project that will have entries for individual Sherlockians (in North America only) and on meetings of Sherlockian societies; the information will be published on floppy disks each January (beginning in 2002), and copies of his questionnaire will be in dinner packets at the birthday festivities in New York. Copies also are available from Ron (addresses as above).
518. Issue #40 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine offers the usual fine mix of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian material, with a report that Random House plans to issue a series of books, beginning in May, based on the television series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes", and Alan Perry's review of MURDER THROUGH THE AGES, edited by Maxim Jakubowski (Headline, £12.99) with a new S'ian pastiche by June Thomson. Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £18.00 (U.K.)/£20.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Classic Specialties is the agent in the U.S. (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>>. Credit-card orders welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.
519. Kate Karlson is selling some of her Sherlockian books collection at a website at <<http://home.stny.rr.com/edware/books/>>. Her sales-list also is available if you send a #10 self-addressed stamped envelope to Kate at 1259 Fowler Place, Binghamton, NY 13903.
520. John Clark has kindly forwarded a report from The Independent (Nov. 26) on the latest news from Britain's Police Information Technology Organization: Holmes 1 has been upgraded, and Holmes 2 is expected to be in national use by 2002. Both systems are powerful computers, and Holmes 1 was created in 1985; Holmes 2 can store fingerprints, photographs, and even the recorded voices of suspects. There was no mention in the story of the original name of the computer for which HOLMES is an acronym: the Home Office (Large) Major Enquiry System (Aug 85 #5).
521. Spinning Graves Productions performed Bart Lovins' dramatization of "The Sign of Four" during the birthday festivities last January, and they will be performing his "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at Freaks Local at 413 West 44th Street (between 9th and 10th Avenues) on Jan. 4-6. Seating is limited, and the telephone number for reservations is 212-613-3023.
522. Dec 00 #5: William A. S. Sarjeant continues to pursue his varied interests in geology and science fantasy, contributing an introduction to a first-ever reprint of Bohun Lynch's MENACE FROM THE MOON (first published in 1924); the book costs $31.00 (postpaid) from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 204, Shelburne, ON L0N 1S0, Canada).
523. Tom Darcy died on Dec. 6. He was an editorial cartoonist for Newsday, for many years, and won a Pulitzer prize in 1970 for work he said was "not for the amusement of the comfortable." His colleague Doug Marlette described Darcy's work as having "a stainless steel quality that cut through everything, demanding that you paid attention." And he drew Sherlock Holmes from time to time; this cartoon was in Newsday on Aug. 1, 1975.
524. Bill Nadel has reported that the York Theatre Company will perform a "concert version" of the musical "Baker Street" (1964) on Jan. 19, 20, and 21. The theater is at 619 Lexington Avenue, New York, NY 10022 (212-935-5820).

525. The latest issue of Scarlet Street (#40) has three articles and interviews by Charles Prepolec dealing with the recent Canadian television version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" with Matt Frewer and Kenneth Welsh), plus the usual coverage of the mystery-and-horror genre. $35.00 for an annual subscription (six issues); Box 604, Glen Rock, NJ 07452, and there's a website at <<http://www.scarletstreet.com>>.
526. Catherine Cooke reports that London now has two statues of Sherlock Holmes, the second one being a "living statue" she describes as "a bloke dressed as Sherlock Holmes sprayed bronze, who stands motionless on a low plinth." He can be seen in Leicester Square, on the northeast corner near the Old Swiss Center.
527. Harold Prince, director of the musical "Baker Street" (1964), was one of those selected to receive a National Medal of Arts this year; the winners of the National Medals of Arts and National Humanities Medals were honored at Constitution Hall and at dinner at the White House on Dec. 20.
528. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Daniel Stashower's interesting comments on Rodger Garrick-Steele's accusation that Arthur Conan Doyle was a plagiarist and a murderer: "If only it were true," the headline on Dan's article suggests, and if you'd like to know more, the newsletter is available from Doug Wrigglesworth, 16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada <dougwrig@idirect.com>. And the Friends have a web-site at <<http://www.acdfriends.org>>.
529. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine celebrates the birthday festivities in the Feb. 2001 issue, with an attractive cover by Chris Kotsakis, a new "Stately Homes" parody by Arthur Porges, and Sherlockian cartoons by David Hurd and Richard Tomasic.
530. Dec 00 #6: Further to the report on BBC plans for a new television version of "The Lost World" (May 00 #8), there was a story in the Telegraph (Nov. 12) headlined "BBC Will Strip Conan Doyle of Racial Overtones" with a quote from producer Christopher Hall: "Some of the Victorian obsessions and concerns are now viewed differently. There are things about Conan Doyle which are old-fashioned, particularly his view of natives. We feel differently now." The BBC expressed concern about the story's references to "sub-human natives noted for their savage behaviour and low intellects."
531. Ray Betzner noted a Reuters dispatch from Montreal (Dec. 1) reporting that Telecene Film Group intends to file for bankruptcy so that it can reorganize its finances. The company said that this will not affect production of the second season of "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World" (with Peter McCauley as Prof. Challenger). The series is broadcast in syndication on Warner Bros. channels in the U.S., and six episodes of the second season have already aired.
532. Sorry about that: I got the name of Quinn Fawcett's new Mycroft Holmes mystery wrong (Nov 00 #5). It's THE SCOTTISH PLOY (Forge, $24.95). Thespians will understand my Shakespearean slip in referring to "The Scottish Play".
533. Jon Lellenberg's DISJECTA MEMBRA: STRAY SCRAPS OF IRREGULAR HISTORY, 1932-1950 is a 96-page interim addition to his continuing archival history of The Baker Street Irregulars, offering letters and other material from early Sherlockians that has come to light since earlier volumes were published. The contents range from Edgar W. Smith's birth certificate to a report to the stockholders of The Baker Street Irregulars, Inc.; the annotations and explanations are helpful, and the glimpses of the early days are interesting as always. Copies will be available during the birthday festivities in New York, and by mail from Jon (3133 Connecticut Avenue NW #827, Washington, DC 20008); $13.00 postpaid ($13.50 outside the U.S.).
534. Susan Rice's THE SOMNAMBULIST AND THE DETECTIVE: VINCENT STARRETT AND SHERLOCK HOLMES is a delightful reminder for those who knew him of how talented he was, and (far more important) a welcome introduction to Starrett and his work for those who have come more recently to the Sherlockian world. It's Musgrave Monograph Number Ten, with 60 pages and nicely illustrated, and it costs (postpaid) £7.00 (U.K.)/£9.00 (Europe)/US $15.00 or CA $25.00 (elsewhere); checks (US or CA dollars welcome) payable to The Northern Musgraves can be sent to Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bigley, West Yorks. BD16 4DN, England). Copies may also be available from Susan Rice (212-989-1768) <srice@virtuoso.com>.
535. HOUDINI AND THE SEANCE MURDERS, by Christopher Farran (Bend: Salvo Press, 2000; 169 pp., $12.95), has Harry Houdini, Houdini's nephew Ira, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Sir Arthur's granddaughter Lucinda (who'd rather be called Solitaire) investigating a murder committed during a seance in Trieste; Ira and Solitaire get to visit Paris, and they do most of the adventuring. The novel is available in bookstores and on-line, and the distributor is Seven Hills, 1531 Tremont Street, Cincinnati, OH 45214.

Jan 01 #1:

1. The birthday festivities in New York began midweek with an ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's for dedicated enthusiasts seeking a truly long weekend, and continued on Thursday at the Williams Club, when Madeleine Stern (accompanied by her partner Leona Rostenberg) was the Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker, offering stories about Sherlock Holmes' rare books (and her talk will be published in the Baker Street Journal this year).
2. The Hotel Algonquin was a nice venue for an informal Mrs. Hudson Breakfast on Friday morning, and more than 140 people were on hand for the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant, where Andrew Joffe and Paul Singleton offered a dramatic rendition of "The True Murderers of Sherlock Holmes". And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
3. There were more than 160 on hand for the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars at the Union League Club, where Paul Herbert offered the toast to Sharon Novorksy as *the* Woman during the pre-dinner cocktail party (she then went on to dine at the Algonquin with other ladies who have received that honor). The dinner agenda was both scholarly and musical, including the usual traditions, recognition of George McCormack (attending his 43rd consecutive annual dinner), reminiscences of old Irregulars Elmer Davis (by Jon Lellenberg) and Nathan Bengis (by Andrew Fusco), and a spectacular "musical tribute to the children of Baker Street": Eddy the Button (Paul Singleton), Julie the Wolf (Mary Ellen Rich), Tommy the Stick (Andrew Joffe), and Mikey (Richard Wein), with music and lyrics by Henry Boote.
4. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced this year's Birthday Honours: the Two-Shilling Award ("for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty") to Donald K. Pollock, recognizing his fine work as editor of The Baker Street Journal; and Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Andrew L. Solberg ("Professor Coram"), Lloyd Rose ("George Sand"), Charles Foley ("Marlow Bates"), Julie A. McKuras ("The Duchess of Devonshire"), Daniel Stashower ("Thurston"), Marcus Geisser ("Rosenloui"), and W. Scott Monty ("Corporal Henry Wood").
5. The Baskerville Bash also took place Friday evening, at the Manhattan Club and with more than 90 people on hand, and with entertainment that included a rousing toast by Chuck Kovacic (to The Hound of the Baskervilles) and a stirring performance by the Sherlettes and the Sherhunks of "Hello, Selden" (starring the Hound instead of Carol Channing).
6. On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin was as usual crowded with sellers and buyers, and shortly after noon The Clients of Adrian Mulliner commandeered the lobby for their now-traditional Junior Bloodstain.
7. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party attracted more than 250 people to the National Arts Club, where Bev Wolov introduced ladies who have been honored as *the* Woman over the years, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported in verse on the events of the previous evening and the previous year (and you will be able to read that in the BSI, too). And Ben Vizoskie was applauded as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year (his article on "Who Wrote the American Chapters of 'A Study in Scarlet'?" in the summer issue). And The Dr. John H. Watson Fund benefited from June Kinnee's energetic marketing of raffle tickets for Amy Frisbie's portrait of Sherlock Holmes (won by Dayna McCausland), as well as from the enthusiastic bidders in the traditional auction (which, untraditionally, included signing rights on Kate Karlson's leg cast).

8. Jan 01 #2: On Sunday locals and long-weekenders gathered at the Baker Street Pub and Restaurant for an excellent brunch that also was a surprise party celebrating the 20th anniversary of Susan Rice and Mickey Fromkin.
  9. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than fit into print here, it is quite likely that there will be much longer reports in The Baker Street Journal, which is published quarterly and costs $21.00 a year ($23.50 outside the U.S.), and checks (credit-card payments accepted from foreign subscribers) can be sent to the BSI at Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331. And the electronically-enabled can view photographs of the birthday festivities taken by Linda Anderson (and perhaps others) at a website at <<http://www.ar.cc.mn.us/murdock/bash.htm>>.
  10. Brad Keefauver offers some perspective on the BSI annual dinner (to which he returned after a twelve-year absence), and Brad and his wife Kathryn R. Carter provide a simultaneous account of the BSI dinner and the Bash in the January issue of The Holmes & Watson Report (which also has David Morrill's review of the 1977 television film "The Strange Case of the End of Civilisation as We Know It" and James R. Webb's discussion of the manuscript of "The Dancing Men"). $16.00 a year for six issues (or $22.00 outside North America), or $3.00 for one issue, from Brad Keefauver (4009 North Chelsea Place, Peoria, IL 61614).
  11. And for those who want to mark their calendars for next year's festivities: the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner will be held on Jan. 11, 2002.
  12. The 20th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium will be held on Mar. 9-11 at the Holiday Inn Conference Center in Fairborn, Ohio, with speakers and theatrics and other fun and games. Additional information is available from Cathy Gill, 4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223 (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
  13. Jean-Pierre Cagnat is a splendid French illustrator and political cartoonist, and he has been attending Sherlockian gatherings for 15 years, and of course rendering what he has seen in his unique style. His tour "around the world of Sherlock Holmes" is now available, in full color and with text in English, in IT IS ALWAYS A JOY...TO ME TO MEET AN AMERICAN, A BRITON, A JAPANESE, A CANADIAN, A SWISS... (Paris: Mycroft's Brother Editions, 2000; 160 pp., 485 francs), from the publisher (26 avenue de la Republique, 75011 Paris, France) <<http://www.chez.com/mycroft/English-index.htm>>. Shipping is extra: 67fr to the European Union and Switzerland, 75fr to the rest of Europe and Africa, 110fr to America, Asia, and Oceania. Credit-card orders welcome, as are checks in non-French currency (please leave the payee line blank). And if you would like an inscribed copy, please state to whom.
14. Jan 01 #3: Wayne B. Swift ("The Giant Rat of Sumatra") died on Jan. 15. Wayne was an electrical engineer and a teacher, and a computer systems analyst, and in the early 1970s arrived in Washington, D.C., where he discovered the world of Sherlockians, and met and married his wife Francine, and became one of the stalwarts of The Red Circle, for whom he wrote the continuing serial "Upstairs, Downstairs, All Around the Holmes". Wayne received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1978, and was our expert on race horses and horse racing; he identified Silver Blaze as the Duke of Westminster's Ormonde, and The Baker Street Journal's Christmas Annual for 2000 (which is appropriately bound in turf-green covers) was his carefully-researched "History of The Silver Blaze" (from the race recorded by Dr. Watson through its many successors to last year's race at Saratoga).
  15. Yuichi Hirayama's THE ANNOTATED JELLAND'S VOYAGE offers a reprint of Arthur Conan Doyle's only story set in Japan, with annotations and an interesting discussion of the historical and literary background of the story; the 20-page pamphlet costs $7.00 postpaid from the author, at 2-10-12 Kamirenjaku, Mitaka-shi, Tokyo 181-0012, Japan (US dollar checks are welcome, payable to Mel Hughes).
  16. Our new 10c stamp (for presorted bound printed material) honors the N.Y. Public Library and shows one of the two handsome lions that guard its entrance on 42nd Street; visitors to the Library should not neglect its Berg Collection, which owns a chapter of the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and a letter (written for Conan Doyle by his secretary Charles Terry) to B. Fletcher Robinson (with the text of the acknowledgement found in the first American edition); complete manuscripts of "The Norwood Builder", "The Blanched Soldier", "The Devil's Foot", and two Brigadier Gerard stories; and a fascinating archive of material about "The Lost World".
  17. "A Dime Novelist's View of American History" is the title of a lecture that J. Randolph Cox will give at the New York Public Library on May 17, as one of five talks scheduled this spring on "Pulp Fictions: Reading, Collecting, and Preserving Popular Culture". Randy, billed in the announcement as "the preeminent scholar of the dime novel genre in the United States," wrote the essay on Arthur Conan Doyle in the DICTIONARY OF LITERARY BIOGRAPHY (1988), and has contributed to The Baker Street Journal and Baker Street Miscellanea, including an article noting that some of Conan Doyle's works have been published here as dime novels.
  18. "Rebooted Any Good Books Lately?" asked the headline on Ian Austen's story in the N.Y. Times (Jan. 4), kindly forwarded by Dan Knight. The review of electronic-book readers included an illustration of the Franklin eBookMan displaying a passage from "The Three Students".
  19. THE ORIGINAL TEXT SOLAR PONS OMNIBUS EDITION is a new collection of all of August Derleth's Solar Pons stories, published last year by George A. Vanderburgh in two volumes (with a total of 826 pages), with an introduction by Peter Ruber, and text taken from book collections published by Derleth (an earlier omnibus published in 1982 had text edited by Basil Copper, who corrected "errors" he had perceived in Derleth's text). $138.00 postpaid from the August Derleth Society (Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583).
20. Jan 01 #4: There are paintings by two Canonical artists in the exhibition "Art for the Nation: Collecting for a New Century" at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, through Feb. 4: Jean-Baptiste Greuze's "The Well-Loved Mother" (1765) and Claude Joseph Vernet's "The Shipwreck" (1772). The electronically enabled also can see the paintings at the NGA web-site at <<http://www.nga.gov/cgi-bin/pinfo?Object=111043+0+none>> and at <http://www.nga.gov/feature/artnation/vernet/thepainting\_1.htm>. Thanks to Mary Burke for the URLs.
  21. A reminder (from Aug 00 #5): "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" has been touring in England and the United States, and the exhibit will be on display in the Hall of Ideas at the Midland Center for the Arts in Midland, Mich., Jan. 20 to Apr. 23. Additional information is available from the museum (1001 West Saint Andrews, Midland, MI 48640) (571-631-5931 ext 1217) <<http://www.mcfta.org>>.
  22. The fifth issue of the new Strand Magazine offers editor Andrew F. Gulli's interesting interview with Sir John Gielgud, a Sherlockian pastiche by Guy N. Smith, an Inspector Ghote story by H. R. F. Keating, and much more; subscriptions (four issues) cost $24.95 (U.S./Canada) or $29.95 (elsewhere), from Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (800-961-280 in the UK) <<http://www.magamall.com/magazine/96117/Strand.htm>>.
  23. Don Hardenbrook ("Huret, the Boulevard Assassin") died on Dec. 18. He was a teacher, of English and French, it showed in his Sherlockian scholarship and in the poetry he wrote in the guise of Gaston Huret III. He was one of the founders of The Trained Cormorants, in 1947, and was published in The

- Baker Street Journal in July 1948 and many times thereafter. Don received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1955, and was for decades one of the shining lights among the west coast's Sherlockians.
24. "Sherlock Holmes and the Jackson Street Terror" is the mystery that Holmes and Watson and participants in this year's "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" will try to solve this year, on Mar. 9-11 and Nov. 2-4 in Cape May. The weekend includes a tour of the town's Victorian homes, and additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404) (800-275-4278) <<http://www.capemaymac.org>>.
  25. The third volume of Leslie S. Klinger's SHERLOCK HOLMES REFERENCE LIBRARY is A STUDY IN SCARLET, with an interesting introduction by Donald Pollock (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2001; 150 pp., $19.95); the annotations are perceptive, and draw upon old and new Sherlockian scholarship, and there is intriguing speculation on whether the story had more than one author, and on who those authors might have been. $22.70 postpaid from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46260).
  26. And THE ILLUSTRIOUS CLIENTS' SECOND CASE-NOTES, edited by Steven T. Doyle and Mark Gagen (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 1999; 79 pp., $12.95), is the latest anthology of essays, poetry, and puzzles written by members of the society. Of particular note is a unique scholarly paper ("Whatever Remains Must Be the Truth") written by Paul D. Herbert in 1977 and presented that same year to John Bennett Shaw (who must have loved it), and only now (and at long last) in print. $15.70 postpaid from the publisher (as above).
27. Jan 01 #5: Stephen Clarkson's THE CANONICAL COMPENDIUM (Ashcroft: Calabash Press, 1999; 429 pp., US$45.00/CA$60.00) is the product of more than 30 years of research (it started as a joint project with the late Bill Fleischauer), and the results of the research are both interesting and useful: there's a topical index of the Canon, with 80 categories and 144 subcategories, and story indexes for each of the 60 tales, with page numbers noted for five different editions (Baring-Gould's ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES and the Doubleday, Heritage Press, John Murray, and Oxford Press editions), plus intriguing introductory notes and "miscellaneous" citations for each story. The book costs US$52.50 postpaid (to the U.S.) or CA$66.00 (to Canada) or £34.50/US$55.00 (elsewhere) from the Calabash Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada) <<http://www.ash-tree.bc.ca/calabash.html>>; creditcard orders welcome.
  28. Michael Williams died on Jan. 11. He began his acting career at the age of seven, as a toy soldier in an amateur play, and made his professional debut in repertory at the Nottingham Playhouse in 1959. He went on to star with the Royal Shakespeare Company, where he met and married Judi Dench, appearing with her on television in the 1980s. In 1989 he played Dr. Watson (to Clive Merrison's Holmes) in "A Study in Scarlet" on BBC radio, and in 1998 became the first actor to portray Watson in all of the Canonical stories. Bert Coules, who worked with Williams on the series, has said that he was "a kindly, modest man and a most generous and versatile actor."
  29. The Filmoods Company (Box 475, Scarsdale, NY 10583) offers a sales-list of its pamphlets of Sherlockian and Victorian erotica ("these stories furnish provocative details of the lives and experiences of characters who appear in those adventures, but about whom we know much less than we might...").
  30. Thanks to Michael Ross for last year's German stamp honoring Heinz R hmann, who was Dr. Watson in "Der Mann, der Sherlock Holmes war" (1937). Hans Albers, who played Holmes in the film, was honored on a German stamp in 1991 (Feb 92 #2). The film is a comedy (released on videocassette by Ufa Universum Film in 1992, in German and without subtitles).
  31. "The Sign of Four" (the second two-hour television film to star Matt Frewer as Sherlock Holmes and Kenneth Welsh as Dr. Watson) is scheduled to air on the Odyssey network on Mar. 23. Their version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" debuted on the network last October.
  32. "I have been reading a short but clear and interesting account of the old building, purchasable at the modest sum of one penny from the local tobacconist," said Sherlock Holmes (in "The Valley of Fear"). Paul Churchill has determined that the pamphlet in question was "The Story of Birlstone Manor House", by B. W. Shepherd-Welwyn; it was published in 1888 and distributed by tobacconist L. V. Narramore, and copies of the pamphlet were distributed by Paul at the recent annual dinner of Watson's Tin Box in Eldersburg, Md. Three additional copies will be auctioned on the Internet: the web-site is <<http://www.ebay.com>>, the auction begins on Feb. 4 and runs for one week, and the text keyword phrase will be "Birlstone Manor House" (or search for the item under the seller's ID "morse.hudson").
33. Jan 01 #6: The Montague Street Lodgers of Brooklyn have launched a series of irreverent, and occasionally incomprehensible, celebratory pamphlets, the most recent being THE VERY STRANGE HISTORY OF THE MONTAGUE LODGERS OF BROOKLYN (issued last year honoring their 15th anniversary); it was preceded by YOGOTTABEKIDDING: THE UNAUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY OF DOROTHY D. STIX, and both pamphlets are available ($5.00 each postpaid) from Peter J. Crupe (1533 64th Street, Brooklyn, NY 11219-5709).
  34. Phyllis White died on Dec. 22. She was a stalwart member of The Scowrers and Molly Maguires of San Francisco, and was honored as Member Number One at each meeting of Bouchercon, the annual mystery convention named for her husband Anthony Boucher. Her tales about the "Sherlock Holmes" radio days in the 1940s were delightful, and her poem "Prologue in Baker Street" was one of the birthday tributes published in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Jan. 1986).
  35. Reported: Colin Bruce's CONNED AGAIN, WATSON!: CAUTIONARY TALES OF LOGIC, MATH, AND PROBABILITY, from Perseus Books in December ($24.00); instruction from Sherlock Holmes, by the author of THE STRANGE CASE OF MRS. HUDSON'S CAT: AND OTHER SCIENCE MYSTERIES SOLVED BY SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 97 #4).
  36. H. Paul Jeffers' BLOODY BUSINESS: AN ANECDOTAL HISTORY OF SCOTLAND YARD was published in 1992 (Mar 93 #4), and it's available again in a 1999 Barnes & Noble reprint (278 pp., $6.98). The book is an interesting history of the Yard, with due attention to Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (who has his own chapter).
  37. Carolyn Wheat's TALES OUT OF SCHOOL (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 2000; 237 pp., $40.00 cloth/$16.00 paper), is a collection of the best of her mystery stories, and one of them is a Sherlockian pastiche: "The Adventure of the Angel's Trumpet" appeared earlier in HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS (1996). The cloth edition is signed and is accompanied by a pamphlet with an additional story not included in the paper-covers edition. The publisher's address is Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 <<http://www.crippenlandru.com>> (toll free 877-662-6656); credit-card orders welcome.
  38. The 2000 issue of Beeman's Christmas Annual, published by The Occupants of the Empty House and edited by Janet Bensley, is devoted to "Flora & Fauna in the Canon" (including an article by Brad Keefauver on "Innocent Flora, Evil Fauna" resulting from his speculation that wrongly-accused Flora Miller might have had an evil sister). The 28-page booklet costs $10.00 postpaid; checks (payable to O.E.H.) can be sent to Stan Tinsley, 105 Wilcox Street, Ziegler, IL 62999.
  39. Joseph Coppola was in Washington this month for the winter meeting of the American Library Association, and reported some discoveries in the vendors room: Chinese translations of the Sherlock Holmes stories, available from the New China Book Store (926 Archer Street, Philadelphia, PA 19107) (215-627-4507), and Russian translations, from Russia Online (Box 558, Kensington, MD 20895) (301-929-8981) <[463 | Page Peter E. line.com>. And a necktie, with a pattern of bookshelves with books and Sherlockiana; $29.95 from Stop Falling Productions (15009 Manchester Road #159, Ballwin, MO 63011) (800-362-9511) <<http://www.stopfalling.com>>.

40. Jan 01 #7: "Paul Singleton is the complete lecher!" At least that's what Paul Singleton claims in publicity for his upcoming performance in "The Complete Lecher" at the Kraine Theatre in New York, on Mondays at 7:00 pm from Feb. 12 through Mar. 19; the theater is at 85 East 4th Street (between 2nd and 3rd Avenues), and the box-office phone number is 212-414-5259. Those who have seen him performing at Sherlockian events can expect somewhat different entertainment: "Paul Singleton is back to torment and tantalize Nicole Golden in an hour of hilarity, double entendres, law and disorder! Nicole is the do-right lawyer assigned to Paul's case of selling porn in the back of his station wagon; Paul uses his street sense of Legal-Sleaze to get Nicole in his dark corner. Nicole is no Ally McBeal, as she is fully aware of what is going on, and takes Paul on a little joy ride up the straight and narrow." Tickets cost $10.00, and the show was written and directed by Andrew Joffe.
  41. Steve Allen died on Oct. 30, 2000. He was a prolific song-writer, as well as a talented author and actor, and one of television's most versatile entertainers. He created the "Tonight" show for NBC-TV in 1953, and launched "The Steve Allen Show" in 1956 (and on July 1, 1956, featured Elvis Presley as the guest star, singing "You Ain't Nothin' But a Hound Dog" to a basset hound named Sherlock). His mystery novel THE TALK SHOW MURDERS (1982) had references to Sherlock Holmes and (unusual in mystery novels) a character who belonged to the Baker Street Irregulars.
  42. James Moss Cardwell's musical comedy "Mrs. Hudson?...MRS. HUDSON!!" had its world premiere as a dramatic reading performed for The Diogenes Club of the Monterey Peninsula in 1981; there was no music (and there still isn't), and the author died in 1990. But the script survived, and it's irreverent and amusing, and it was published last year with an interesting introduction by Michael H. Kean and colorful dust-jacket artwork by Jean-Pierre Cagnat; 136 pp., $39.00 postpaid from George A. Vanderburgh, Box 204, Shelburne, ON LNO 1S0, Canada.
  43. READINGS: ESSAYS AND LITERARY ENTERTAINMENTS, by Michael Dirda (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 2000; 216 pp., $24.95), is a collection of his essays published in the Washington Post's "Book World" section; those who heard his Sherlockian reminiscences during the birthday festivities in 2000 (and who read them in the summer 2000 issue of The Baker Street Journal) will know how enthusiastic he is about reading, and how well he writes about what he has read. There are many Sherlockian and Doylean references in this book, but it would be well worth reading even if there weren't.
  44. Spotted by John Baesch: TROUBLESOME THINGS: A HISTORY OF FAIRIES AND FAIRY STORIES, by Diane Purkiss (London: Penguin Books, 2000; 368 pp., £20.00); includes discussion of the Cottingley fairies.
  45. Reported by Doug Wrigglesworth: THE GREAT WAR OF WORDS: BRITISH, AMERICAN AND CANADIAN PROPAGANDA AND FICTION, 1914-1933, by Peter Buitenhuis (Vancouver: Univ. of British Columbia Press, 1987, 218 pp., $25.95); includes discussion of Conan Doyle's writing about the Boer War and the Great War. VICTORIAN QUEST ROMANCE: STEVENSON, HAGGARD, KIPLING AND CONAN DOYLE, by Robert Fraser (Jackson: Univ. Press of Mississippi, 1998; 93 pp., $19.00); relates "The Lost World" to contemporary "quest romances" by other authors.

46. Jan 01 #8: Some attractive Sherlockian prints and posters are available on the World Wide Web: you select the design you want, and it is shipped printed on paper ($19.95) or canvas ($99.00 and up). You can see the images at Barnes & Noble at <<http://posters.barnesandnoble.com/>> and at Amazon Z-shops at <<http://www.amazon.com>>; "Sherlock Holmes" is only one of many categories available.
  47. Forecast for May from St. Martin's Press (and reported by Fred Levin): Roberta Rogow's THE PROBLEM OF THE SURLY SERVANT ($23.95); the fourth in her series of mysteries starring Arthur Conan Doyle and Charles Dodgson. And (also from Saint Martin's) in July: Michael Kurland's new Moriarty pastiche THE GREAT GAME ($23.95), along with a one-volume trade paperback reprint of his first two pastiches THE INFERNAL DEVICE and DEATH BY GASLIGHT ($15.95). And Gerard Williams' DR. MORTIMER AND THE ALDGATE MYSTERY ($22.95); a new pastiche featuring Dr. James Mortimer.
  48. Some late-breaking news: Scott Monty has succeeded Ray Betzner as the circulation and advertising manager of the Baker Street Journal.
  49. Andrew G. Fusco prepares Sherlockian-era calendars for distribution during the birthday festivities in New York, carefully choosing a Sherlockian year that works for the current year; some of my readers will find enclosed the rare green variant that was not distributed in New York.
  50. Our postage rates have changed, and so have the subscription rates for my monthly newsletter, which now costs $9.30 a year for six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean; $12.40 a year to Canada; $15.00 a year overseas (the overseas rate is now 80c for the first ounce, rather than 60c for the first half-ounce and 40c for the next half-ounce)
  51. And a few commercials: a 15-page list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, *the* Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes costs $1.20 postpaid. An 80-page list of 781 Sherlockian societies, with names and addresses for contacts for 430 active societies, is $4.20 postpaid. A run of address labels for 360 individual contacts (recommended to avoid duplicate mailings to those who are contacts for more than one society) costs $10.40 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).
  52. The list of irregulars and others also is available from me by e-mail (no charge), and both lists are available at Willis G. Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page at <<http://members.home.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>>.
  53. Updating the item on the grand gourmet Sherlockian dinner at the Culinary Institute of America on May 12 (Dec 00 #1): Al and Julie Rosenblatt report that the event is now fully-booked. If you would like to see how much fun a past CIA dinner was, copies of Al and Julie's 20-page souvenir menu for "An Evening in Scarlet" on May 16, 1987, handsomely devised, designed, and produced, with many illustrations, annotations, and explanations, are still available; $20.00 postpaid (checks payable to Peter E. Blau, please).

54. Feb 01 #1: Last month I recommended Jean-Pierre Cagnat's IT IS ALWAYS A JOY... TO ME TO MEET AN AMERICAN, A BRITON, A JAPANESE, A CANADIAN, A SWISS... (Paris: Mycroft's Brother Editions, 2000; 160 pp., 485 francs), and I'm happy to do so again, because there's much more to it than Jean-Pierre's excellent art: the accompanying text by Christilla Cagnat is delightful, as she explains what it is like to accompany a Sherlockian spouse, whether in pursuit of the Hound ("I hate Dartmoor!... Dartmoor makes you want to divorce and hate your husband") or between floors in a malfunctioning elevator ("There were nine of us. Nine foolish people who, on a cold Saturday night in New York, crowded into a tiny elevator meant for six"). It's recommended, and available from the publisher (26 avenue de la Republique, 75011 Paris, France) <<http://www.chez.com/mycroft/english-index.htm>>; shipping is extra: 67fr to the European Union and Switzerland, 75fr to the rest of Europe and Africa, 110fr to America, Asia, and Oceania. Credit-card orders welcome, as are checks in non-French currency (please leave the payee line blank). And if you would like an inscribed copy, please state to whom.
  55. Spotted by Ted Friedman: a colorful catalog from De La Concha Tobacconist (1390 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10019) (One Civic Center Plaza, Hartford, CT 06103) <www.delaconcha.com>, with a page for Peterson showing their Sherlock Holmes pipe tobacco, and a cover photograph showing a pipe resting on THE WORKS OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE published by the Longmeadow Press in 1985.
  56. Jacques Barzun's FROM DAWN TO DECADENCE: 500 YEARS OF CULTURAL TRIUMPH AND DEFEAT: 1500 TO THE PRESENT (Aug 00 #3) has been nominated for the National Book Critics Circle Award; the winners will be announced on Mar. 15.

57. Scott Monty reports that the Sherlockian societies in New England are planning a Sherlockian evening at the Algonquin Club in Boston on Mar. 24. The agenda will include an interview with Sherlock Holmes (impersonated by Paul Singleton). Details are available from Scott (1836 Columbia Road #2, South Boston, MA 02127) (617-464-4153) <wsmonty@yahoo.com>.
58. A bibliographic query: Les Moskowitz has noted an interesting typo in the Doubleday edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES published in 1960 (this was reset, and has 1122 pages). The error is on page 645: "Holmes's card sent in to the manager ensured instand attention..." And the error is of interest because it occurs in the two-volume edition, but not in all printings of the one-volume edition. There are printing codes in both editions, at the lower right of page 1122, indicating the year (by letter, beginning with A for 1959) and the week (by number). The earliest copy I know of is a copy of the two-volume edition (with a presentation label from the publisher) with a printing code A41 (1959, 41st week). And there are copies of the one-volume edition with printing codes C10 (1961, 10th week) and Q16 that contain the typo, and a copy with printing code BB42 in which the typo has been corrected. It would be nice to know when the page was reset for the one-volume edition; please let me know if you have copies with printing codes between C10 and BB42, and whether they have the typo. But: do not be confused by later reprints; Book-of-the Month Club editions have different printing codes, such as MP3B (for the Maple Press, 3rd month, 1972).

59. Feb 01 #2: The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has John Bergquist's report on the gift to the collections by Jennie C. Paton of part of her Sherlockian video library (the 16-page catalog is "in tiny print with narrow margins"), with some stories about how Jennie started and maintains the library; a tribute to early Sherlockian Charles Honce; and other news. If you would like to be on their mailing list you can contact Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
60. David Stuart Davies reports that the eighth International Gilbert & Sullivan Festival will be held in Derbyshire from July 28 to Aug. 19, and that the agenda will include some Sherlockian events: a presentation by David on Sherlock Holmes (Aug. 4) and two performances by Roger Llewellyn in David's play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act" (on Aug. 4 and 17) at the Paxton Theatre in Buxton. More information is available from Ian Smith, The Old Vicarage, Haley Hill, Halifax NX3 6DR, England <www.gs-festival.co.uk>.
61. It's the Year of the Snake, and the U.S. Postal Service reports that in Chinese astrology the snake symbolizes wisdom, intensity, and physical beauty. One wonders if that's what readers of the Canon think about when they read about the cobra, swamp adder, vipers, and serpents that are mentioned in various stories.
62. "DK" is a well-known set of initials among those who enjoy Dorling Kindersley's travel guides and educational books, and the company has now begun a line of fiction classics that includes THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (New York: Dorling Kindersley, 2000; 64 pp., $14.95); the story is abridged for younger readers, and illustrated by Mark Oldroyd, and there are annotations and explanations (also illustrated).
63. Further to the report (Apr 00 #1) that Abbey National was considering selling off and then leasing back its freehold buildings, including the head office at 221B Baker Street, Scott Monty notes a new report that the bank is the target of two separate takeover bids. Abbey National has been negotiating with the Bank of Scotland, but Lloyds TSB Group has now offered $27 billion to acquire Abbey National. If successful, Lloyds TSB would become Britain's second-largest bank, and the takeover will require approval from Britain's Office of Fair Trading.
64. Spotted by David Morrill: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES [Scan/RedH/Iden /Bosc/Five/Twis/Bery/Copp] read (abridged) by John Whitaker on four audiocassettes; and THE HOUNDS OF THE BASKERVILLES read (abridged) by Michael J. Bennett on four audiocassettes (Englewood Cliffs: Media Books, 1999; $12.99 each).
65. Gordon R. Dickson died on Feb. 1. He was one of the great science-fiction writers, and with Poul Anderson created the Hokas, and one of the very best cross-over stories: "The Adventure of the Misplaced Hound" (first published in Universe Science Fiction, Dec. 1953) was collected in EARTHMAN'S BURDEN (1957) and reprinted in THE SCIENCE-FICTIONAL SHERLOCK HOLMES (1960). All of the Hoka stories are great fun, and this one especially so.

66. Feb 01 #3: The Feb. 2001 sales-list from Peter L. Stern (55 Temple Place, Boston, MA 02111) <psbook@aol.com> offers interesting Sherlockiana and Doyleana, including a holograph manuscript of the poem "The Song of the Bowmen" with a signed letter from his niece Claire noting that the poem was written out by Sir Arthur for his sister Caroline (Claire's mother), offered at $6,000. Caroline was his sister Lottie, and the poem was first published in THE WHITE COMPANY (as "The Song of the Bow").
67. The British Royal Mint has issued a new Victorian anniversary crown with the reverse showing a young Victoria (based on the William Wyon portrait used on the world's first postage stamps), and a backdrop representing the ironwork of the famed Crystal Palace. The cost of the coin in a presentation folder is $16.50 (plus $4.95 per order for shipping), and there are some toll-free phone numbers: 800-221-1215 (U.S.), 800-563-5943 (Canada), and 01443-623322 (U.K.). And a URL: <http://royalmint.com>.
68. "Songs like '30 Seconds Over Tokyo' and 'Final Solution' (a reference not to Nazism, Mr. Thomas says, but to a Sherlock Holmes mystery) evoked an existential dread that somehow tore through itself to become beautiful," Ann Powers wrote in the N.Y. Times (Oct. 19), in a review (noted by Greg Darak) of the 25th-anniversary performance by David Thomas and the punk rock band Pere Ubu. Do any Sherlockian punk rockers know if the piece is available on a recording?
69. Reported by Catherine Cooke: Conan Doyle's OUR AFRICAN WINTER, scheduled from Duckworth in London in May (£14.99) in their series of reprints of classic travel books; it's an interesting account of the family's tour of eastern and southern Africa in 1928-1929.
70. Dale Evans died on Feb. 7. Her first movie with Roy Rogers was "The Cowboy and the Senorita" (1944), and they married in 1947, performing together in 28 films and then on television. One of their early films was "San Fernando Valley" (1944): a herd of horses is rustled one dark evening, and Rogers deduces that it must have been an inside job, because of the ranch dog: "If they'd a been strangers," Rogers explained, "he would've barked, and there wasn't a peep out of him."
71. And yes, a crown now is worth five pounds, rather than five shillings as in Sherlockian days. The five-shilling coin went out of circulation when the British decimalized their money (and didn't issue a circulating 25np coin); it was in 1990 that the Royal Mint began describing five-pound coins issued for collectors as crowns.
72. Some late-breaking news about the grand gourmet Sherlockian dinner at the Culinary Institute of America: Al and Julie Rosenblatt have confirmed that the Rhinebeck Volunteer Fire Department will again offer their Firehouse Breakfast on Sunday, May 13. It's an easy walk from the Beekman Arms, but there's no guarantee that there will be a fire. The first such event, many years ago, was indeed interrupted by an alarm: the firefighter cooks roared off to fight the fire, and returned after a few minutes to report that it was a false alarm. All in honor of Irene Adler, of course.

73. Feb 01 #4: "We must hurry up, for I want to go to Halle's concert to hear Norman Neruda this afternoon," said Sherlock Holmes (during "A Study in Scarlet"). Here's another quote from an admirer of the lady: "I stayed with Halle in Manchester. Madame Norman Neruda came to the concert; I like her very much, and I think you would too. Her playing is more to my taste than that of any other contemporary--unspoilt, pure and musical. The poor

- lady has been travel travelling about since October, playing in public in the provinces nearly every day and she will continue to do so until the end of March, but then she will make £1800 clear profit." In a letter from violinist Joseph Joachim to his wife, written in February 1870, spotted by Gayle Harris in LETTERS FROM AND TO JOSEPH JOACHIM (New York: Vienna House, 1914; reprinted 1974).
74. Larry Ashley (an addictions counselor with the department of counseling at the University of Nevada in Las Vegas) is finding the Canon helpful: he'll lecture on "Sherlock Holmes and His World of Drug Use" on Apr. 26 (focusing on the historical context of drug use in the Victorian era).
  75. Sorry about that: <<http://members.home.net.sherlock1/Sherlocktron.html>> is the correct URL for Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" home page, where he has kindly provided space for the list of the Investitured Irregulars, the Two-Shilling Awards, the Women, and the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; and the lists of the Sherlockian societies, and many other items of interest.
  76. Our new sheet of "American Illustrators" stamps celebrates three artists of interest (one Sherlockian and two Doylean). Robert Fawcett (1903-1967) "is best remembered for recreating detailed illustrations to accompany a series of Sherlock Holmes stories in Collier's magazine" (as the postal service notes on the back of the sheet); he illustrated Arthur Whitaker's pastiche "The Case of the Man Who Was Wanted" in Cosmopolitan in 1948, and the pastiches by Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr in Collier's in 1953. Howard Pyle (1853-1911) illustrated "The Parasite" in Harper's Weekly in 1894 and "A Forgotten Tale" in Scribner's Magazine in 1895; and N. C. Wyeth (1881-1945) illustrated "The Coming of the Huns", "The First Cargo", and "The Red Star" in Scribner's Magazine in 1910-1911, and a later edition of THE WHITE COMPANY in 1922.
  77. Joe Eckrich offers a 13-page sales-list of Doyleana and Sherlockiana, with books, records, and videocassettes, and some nice non-Sherlockian material by Vincent Starrett and Michael Harrison; his address is 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026 <jeckrich@earthlink.net>.
  78. The centenary of the publication of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be celebrated in Australia on Sept. 29-Oct. 1, when The Sydney Passengers are sponsoring a Victorian-costume weekend at Bishopthorpe Manor at Goulburn, near Sydney. For more information, contact Sally Cornell (24 Byron Street, Croydon, NSW 2132, Australia) <sally\_cornell@optusnet.com.au>.

79. Feb 01 #5: LITTLE SHERLOCK BEAR is a new 34-minute videocassette from Paramount/Viacom ($6.99 in toy stores), with four animations based on the books written by Else Holmelund Minarik and illustrated by Maurice Sendak. The box shows Little Bear with deerstalker and magnifying glass, and the contents include "Detective Little Bear" (length 8 minutes); Little Bear appears in deerstalker and magnifying glass investigating the mystery of his grandfather's missing pocket watch.
  80. "The traditional stationmaster, a pillar of the community and ready to help even the most awkward customer, is set to return," according to a newspaper story at had from John Baesch. The Great North Eastern Railway is changing its customer service delivery managers into stationmasters, equipped with mobile phones and pagers, to make trains friendlier, more efficient, and faster. Stationmasters, one of them Prof. Moriarty's younger brother, are mentioned in five stories in the Canon.
  81. Ian Henry Publications (20 Park Drive, Romford, Essex RM1 4LH, England) has a new (autumn 2000) sales list of their Sherlockian books (including monographs, pastiches, plays, and television and film scripts). And Ian Henry has just launched a series of paperback reprints of M. J. Trow's pastiches about Insp. Sholto Lestrade (£9.99 each).
  82. Further to the item (May 00 #8) about BBC plans to produce a new television version of "The Lost World" (co-producer Tim Haines said then that the novel, while not a classic, was a "rollicking good story"), Nancy Beiman notes a story in the Hollywood Reporter (Feb. 13) that reported that Bob Hoskins will star as Challenger, with Tom Ward (Lord Roxton), James Fox (Prof. Leo Summerlee), Matthew Rhys (Edward Malone), Elaine Cassidy (Agnes Kerr), and Peter Falk (the Rev. Theo Kerr). Executive producer Jane Tranter said last year that a new female character would be introduced to spice up the plot ("a load of sweaty men would be a bit dull"). Tim Haining was responsible for the BBC's acclaimed "Walking with Dinosaurs" (which was on the Discovery channel here), so we can expect some excellent digital dinosaurs.
  83. Reported by Jeff Bradway: Christopher Hitchens' UNACKNOWLEDGED LEGISLATION: WRITERS IN THE PUBLIC SPHERE (New York: Verso, 2001; 320 pp., $25.00) has a chapter on "The Case of Arthur Conan Doyle"; it's his long review of Daniel Stashower's biography of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle TELLER OF TALES, reprinted from the N.Y. Review of Books (Nov. 4, 1999).
  84. Further to the report that the Crowborough Town Council had provided funds for the life-size statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle sculpted by David Cornell (Jan 00 #6), Brian Pugh reports that the statue will be unveiled in Crowborough on Apr. 14. More information is available from the Council (The Town Hall, The Broadway, Crowborough, East Sussex TN6 1DA, England <crowborough@mistral.co.uk>).
  85. David Musto reports that Yale University's 20th annual Sherlock Holmes Lecture will be held on June 28, at 8:00 pm at the Davies Auditorium, Becton Center, 15 Prospect Street on the Yale Campus. Murray Biggs (an Associate Professor of English and Theater Studies at Yale) will discuss the ways in which Holmes illustrated Conan Doyle's attitudes toward society. And the event will include a Rathbone/Bruce film.

86. Feb 01 #6: Dan Stashower has noted a report in The Independent (Feb. 16) about Cottingley fairies material coming to auction on Mar. 13 at Bonhams & Brooks (attn: Carole Park, Montpelier Street, London SW7 1HH, England) (44-20-7393-3829) <<http://www.bonhams.com>>. It's sale 28534, lot 396: a collection of glass plates and other negatives originally owned by Edward Gardner (the theosophist who first showed the photographs to Arthur Conan Doyle); the archive includes photographs of the fairies, and unpublished pictures of Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths and their relatives, and the lot is estimated at £3,000-4,000.
  87. News from Fred Levin: June Thomson's HOLMES AND WATSON, published in Britain in 1995, now has an American edition from Carroll & Graf ($24.00). And Gerard Williams' DR. MORTIMER AND THE BARKING MAN MYSTERY (his second pastiche starring Dr. Mortimer) is due from Carroll & Graf in April ($24.00).
  88. Mary Burke reports that there are photographs of Andaman islanders and of Agra on display in the exhibition "India Through the Lens: 1840-1911" at the Smithsonian Institution's Sackler Gallery in Washington through Mar. 25. There's a web-site at <<http://www.asia.si.edu/exhibitions/ittl/htm>>.
  89. The multicolor BASH 2001 lapel pin (honoring this year's Baskerville Bash during the birthday festivities in New York) is available ($12.50 postpaid to North America, and $13.50 elsewhere) from Warren Randall, 15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720-1346.
  90. Further to the report (Oct 00 #5) on "2001: A New Sherlockian Odyssey: A Journey Through the Shaw 100" in Minneapolis on June 29-July 1, the conference brochure (with details on the speakers, banquet, and other events) and registration materials are now available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  91. Reported by Ed Collins: a dinner-theater production of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (newly dramatized by director Jeremy Tow) at the Chemainus Theatre on Vancouver Island in British Columbia, from Feb. 23 through Apr. 14; Box 1205, Chemainus, BC V0R 1K0, Canada (800-565-7738), and there's a web-site at <<http://www.ctheatre.bc.ca>>.

92. Christopher Morley was a splendid writer as well as the founder of The Baker Street Irregulars, and Jim Hawkins reports that Bartleby ("Great Books Online") offers a sample of Morley's work on the World Wide Web: there's a brief biography of Morley at <<http://www.bartleby.com/people/Morley-C.html>> and the complete text of MODERN ESSAYS (1921) with a preface by Morley at <<http://www.bartleby.com/237/>>.
93. Travelman Publishing has installed three vending machines in the South Kensington Station on the London Underground, offering short stories in a mapfold format (£1.00 each) for readers who want something more interesting than the daily paper. And Sherlock Holmes is among the stories available.

94. Mar 01 #1: "The Sign of Four" (with Matt Frewer as Sherlock Holmes) aired on Odyssey cable in March, and Charles Prepolec has reported that Muse Entertainment has confirmed that their next two-hour television film will be "A Scandal in Bohemia" (combining that story with "The Bruce-Partington Plans"). And The electronically enabled will find graphics and more information about "The Sign of Four" at web-sites at <<http://www.muse.ca/sign4prod.htm>> and <<http://www.odysseychannel.com/sherlockholmes/signoffour.html>>.
95. A HISTORY OF THE MUSEUM TAVERN IN BLOOMSBURY, by John N. Henderson (London: Blemund's books, 1989), traces the history of the tavern from 1723 (when it was the Dog and Duck) to the present day, and it does not neglect the fact that Sherlockian scholars have identified it as the Alpha Inn (in "The Blue Carbuncle"); John Baesch notes that the 32-page booklet still is available at the pub (£1.00).
96. Further to the report (Jan 01 #3) that promotion for the Franklin eBookMan shows the electronic-book reader displaying a passage from the Canon, Richard Wein notes that there's a similar illustration (this time showing the beginning of "The Empty House") in the early-spring catalog of "tools for serious readers" from Levenger (420 South Congress Avenue, Delray Beach, FL 33445 (800-544-0880) <<http://www.levenger.com>>.
97. Robert S. Gellerstedt, Jr., died on Nov. 23, 2000. Bob worked for General Electric in the late 1940s (designing the gas turbine engine) and in 1951 moved to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. where he was instrumental in designing the Jetstar plane. He collected trains, and was a member of The Confederates of Wisteria Lodge in Atlanta, and in 1985 he brought his trusty Macintosh into Sherlockian service, compiling and publishing lists and indexes and 17 issues of his Christmas newsletter The Irregular News, and helping George Vanderburgh scan the entries in the first two volumes of Ron De Waal's bibliographies for use in THE UNIVERSAL SHERLOCK HOLMES.
98. CONNED AGAIN, WATSON!: CAUTIONARY TALES OF LOGIC, MATH, AND PROBABILITY, by Colin Bruce (Cambridge: Perseus Publishing, 2000; 290 pp., $24.00), employs Holmes and Watson to explain scams, game theory, and statistics, and does a good job of making it all sound easy; Bruce's earlier THE EINSTEIN PARADOX AND OTHER SCIENCE MYSTERIES SOLVED BY SHERLOCK HOLMES (Dec 98 #1) used a similar approach for scientific paradoxes. And the author has a web-site at <<http://members.aol.com/OxMathDes/ColinBruce.html>>.
99. Fans of Ross Macdonald's work will welcome the announcement that his biographer, Tom Nolan, has discovered some unpublished material in Macdonald's papers: one short story and two novelettes featuring Macdonald's private eye Lew Archer, all now available in STRANGERS IN TOWN (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 2001). $15.00 (paper) or $37.00 (cloth, signed by Nolan and with some additional material); Box 9315, Norfolk, VA 23505 (toll-free 877-622-6656) <<http://www.crippenlandru.com>>; credit-card orders welcome. There's nothing Sherlockian about the new book, as far as I know, but Macdonald's real name was Kenneth Millar, and his first published story was "The South Sea Soup Co." in The Grumbler (Kitchener-Waterloo Collegiate and Vocational School, 1931); it's a parody featuring Herlock Sholmes and Sotwum.

100. Mar 01 #2: "Violin Won't Go for a Song" was the headline on a story in the [London] Evening Standard (Mar. 14), at hand from John Baesch, about a Stradivarius up for auction at Sotheby's, where it was expected to bring up to £450,000. That's rather more than the 55 shillings that Sherlock Holmes said he paid for his, but much less than the $1.58 million paid for the Kreutzer Stradivarius in 1998 (May 98 #3). Another Strad sent to auction that year in New York sold for $884,000 (Nov 98 #5).
101. Terry Manners' biography THE MAN WHO BECAME SHERLOCK HOLMES; THE TORMENT OF JEREMY BRETT, first published in 1997, has been reissued as a trade paperback (London: Virgin, 2001; 244 pp., £12.99); according to a recent review, "Brett's manic depression and his disastrous submersion in his most famous role are well described in a book that avoids the luvvie banalties of most theatre biographies."
102. E. W. Ziebarth died on Feb. 27. He arrived at the University of Minnesota in 1937 to pursue a doctorate in speech communication, and in 1948 was one of the founding members of The Norwegian Explorers. He was a radio correspondent, and won two Peabody Awards for distinguished achievement in broadcasting, and served as dean of the university's College of Liberal Arts and as the university's interim president. And he wrote a fine article about "The Master and the Mass Media" in EXPLORING SHERLOCK HOLMES (published by the Norwegian Explorers in 1957).
103. There are many Internet web-sites devoted to news/gossip/rumor about films, including Ananova <<http://www.ananova.com>>, which reported this month that Catherine Zeta-Jones "is considering" making a film loosely based on "The Sign of Four" that also focuses on a secret love affair between Holmes and married member of the aristocracy. Alan Rickman "is tipped" as Holmes, and Gabriel Byrne as Watson. The script is currently "being developed," with a view to start filming next spring. Cynicism alert: when you see words and phrases such as "considering" and "tipped" and "being developed" in reports from the film industry, it is reasonably safe to assume that you're reading hype rather than news.
104. Forecast for May: A PICTORIAL TRIBUTE TO JEREMY BRETT: THE DEFINITIVE SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Linda Pritchard (his companion for the last few years of his life), with 100 photographs covering his entire career, and a foreword by Granada Television chairman Charles L. Allen; due from Paradise Books in London, 120 pp. Price not yet known, but expected to be $28.00 to $32.00; you can reserve copies now from Ashland Books, 132 Seventh Street, Ashland, OR 97520 (541-201-0271) <ashlandbooks@ashlandhome.net>.
105. "A Music Reference Goes Electronic, Finally," was the headline in the N.Y. Times (Feb. 15) on Allan Kozinn's article about the new on-line edition of the NEW GROVE DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS, which is regarded by many as the best-ever reference work for musicians and musicologists, as well as music fans. The 29-volume ink-on-paper set costs $4,850, and you can subscribe to the on-line version at rates ranging from $295 a year to $30 for ten 24-hour sessions. And electronically-enabled Sherlockians who want to see what Grove has to say about Lassus or Sarasate or Chopin or others who are mentioned in the Canon may wish to take advantage of the free 24-hour trial offer at the web-site <<http://www.grovemusic.com>>.

106. Mar 01 #3: The spring 2001 issue of The Serpentine Muse offers Kate Karlson's thoughts on "Holmes the Gambler; or A Few Trifling Observations on The Master's Income Sources", the late Wayne Swift's delightful toast to "The Queen Empress", and much more. The Muse is a quarterly published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes, and it costs $10.00 a year (make your checks payable to the Adventuresses, please) from Evelyn A. Herzog (360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011).
107. Sorry about that: my report (Oct 00 #3) that Morton Lowry died on Aug. 22, 2000, was wrong: Lowry, who played John Stapleton in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939 and the steward Sanford in "Pursuit to Algiers" (1945) actually died on Nov. 26, 1987. The erroneous information turned up on the Internet Movie Data Base last year (and their mini-biography of Lowry has not been corrected, although his correct dates are now in the main entry).
108. Further to the item (Jul 99 #6) about the renovation of Gillette Castle in Hadlyme, Conn., the work has taken longer than expected, and the park will be closed to the public on May 1, and the park and the castle are expected to be open again on Memorial Day in 2002. The cost will be about $10

- million, and "it's money well spent," according to state parks director Pamela Adams. Visitors will be able to see the steam and electric trains that ran on track installed by William Gillette (the trains were purchased years ago by an amusement park in Bristol, and recently returned to the park for repair and restoration); they will be on exhibit as a static display, but it may be possible to lay a small loop of track so that the trains can run on special occasions in the summertime. You can see what the train and track looked like in the 1930s on the Fox Movietone interview with Gillette that is available on various videocassettes.
109. Andy Fusco notes an advertisement in the spring issue of Pipes magazine for six pewter pipe tampers (each with a different character from the Sherlock Holmes tales) offered by the Catnip Hill Trading Company (2201 Catnip Hill Road, Nicholasville, KY 40356 (958-887-5737) <<http://www.catniphill.com>>; $124.95 for the boxed set.
110. Carol Wenk died on Mar. 9. She was an ardent and energetic member of the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts, and created and sold miniature blank books in the 1970s (her miniature SHERLOCK HOLMES was offered in 1980). In 1993 she succeeded Dee Snyder as leader of The Mini-Tonga Scion Society and editor of the Tonga Times; she greatly enjoyed the Sherlockian world, and was of much help to its miniaturists.
111. Issue #41 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine offers an assortment of Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian material, including an interesting essay by Bert Coules on Arthur Conan Doyle as a literary stylist, a discussion by Paul M. Chapman of the literary background for "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and an article by David Stuart Davies on the making of Granada's "The Three Gables". An annual subscription (six issues) costs £20.00 (in the U.K.)/£22.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Classic Specialties is the agent in the U.S. (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>>, and credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.

112. Mar 01 #4: Elmer Davis was honored in Jon Lellenberg's tribute during the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner in New York in January, and that reminded me of a question I planned to ask some time ago. Elmer Davis played himself in the movie "The Day the Earth Stood Still" (1951), and Richard Shull appeared in many films. Is there any other Investitured Irregular who has appeared in a film as an actor?
113. A search of the Internet Movie Data Base reveals that Elmer Davis also is an author who has had books made into films. Christopher Morley and Vincent Starrett are two more Investitured Irregulars whose books have been made into films. Are there any others?
114. Bob Coghill has kindly forwarded a losing ticket (he wisely kept all his winning tickets) from the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corporation's "Mystery Cash" game. A caricature of Sherlock Holmes appears on every ticket, and a calabash pipe and a deerstalker are among the game symbols (you need to uncover three of any symbol in order to win).
115. Marcus Geisser reports that he has arrived in Myanmar [Burma], and that he is enjoying both the country and his work there for the International Committee of the Red Cross (for whom he worked in the Congo). Myanmar borders the Andaman Sea, but it's not all that close to the islands (nothing is all that close to the Andaman Islands, of course). He doesn't have e-mail, but his postal address is: c/o CICR/Myanmar/Mawlamyline, 19 Avenue de la Paix, CH-1202 Geneva, Switzerland.
116. William Hanna died on Mar. 22. He was a pioneer in the field of animation, and collaborated with Joseph Barbera for more than 50 years, creating film and television classics that included "Tom and Jerry", "The Jetsons", "The Flintstones", "Yogi Bear", and "Scooby-Doo". Hanna-Barbera shows often had Sherlockian allusions, including "The Hound of the Scoobyvilles at Baskerville Hall" (1984) and "Scooby-Doo Mysteries: Sherlock Doo" (1985).
117. Reported: Quinn Fawcett's Mycroft Holmes pastiches AGAINST THE BROTHERHOOD and EMBASSY ROW are available from Recorded Books, read unabridged by Simon Prebble. AGAINST THE BROTHERHOOD costs $71.00 on cassettes and $94.00 on CDs (or $16.50 rental); EMBASSY ROW costs $82.00 on cassettes ($17.50 rental). Their address is: 270 Skipjack Road, Prince Frederick, MD 20678 (800-638-1304) <<http://www.recordedbooks.com>>; credit-card orders welcome.
118. Further to the item (Feb 01 #6) on the auction of a collection of Cottingley fairies material at auction at Bonhams & Brooks in London on Mar. 13, the estimate was £3,000-4000, and the winning bid (by "an unnamed collector") was £6,000; the lot included glass plates and other negatives originally owned by Edward Gardner (the theosophist who first showed the photographs to Arthur Conan Doyle), with photographs of the fairies, and unpublished pictures of Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths and their relatives.
119. Mar 01 #5: The winter 2001 issue of the Tonga Times has arrived from Trish and Jay Pearlman, and it is nicely done indeed, with ten pages, color illustrations, and a miniature copy of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.
120. They would like to hear from anyone who collects, constructs, or is interested in Sherlockian miniatures, and membership in The Mini-Tonga Scion Society costs $10.00 a year (or $11.00 to Canada, or $13.00 elsewhere); their address is 1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229, and they have a web-site at <<http://hometown.aol.com/minitongasociety/mini1.htm>>.
121. John Baesch has reported a review in the Tatler (Apr. 2001) of Ciaran Carson's SHAMROCK TEA (Granta, £14.99): "The latest novel from this acclaimed Belfast writer is an absorbing fantasy centred round a van Eyck painting. Shamrock tea allows its drinker to pass through the painting into another world. The narrator meets Ludwig Wittgenstein and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and enters a magical universe where time is suspended. A fairytale for adults, which contains a miscellany of facts."
122. John also notes that the epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease has had an impact on at least one Sherlockian site: nearly 400 square miles of Dartmoor were closed to the public in order to protect hundreds of cattle and sheep that graze on common land on the moor. "Dartmoor Pubs Deserted by All But Their Ghosts" said a headline in The Times (Mar. 5); "the hordes of hikers, bird-watchers, canoeists, and geology students who normally populate one of Britain's last unspoilt open spaces have evaporated faster than yesterday's snow in the spring sunshine."
123. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold their spring dinner on Apr. 21, at Bill's Gay 90's Restaurant in New York; details are available from Evelyn A. Herzog, 360 West 21st Street #5-A, New York, NY 10011. "Ladies and gentlemen will be welcomed" at this gathering of the Adventuresses and their friends (the fall dinner is open to members and female guests), and there are plans for an informal brunch on Apr. 22.
124. John Doubleday's life-size statue of a seated Sherlock Holmes was unveiled in Meiringen in 1988, inscribed with 60 cryptic clues, each clue referring to one of the Canonical tales, and a 1:10 scale model of the sculpture was offered as a prize to anyone who identifies all the clues and stories. And no one has claimed the prize, according to Gavin Bell's story in the Daily Telegraph (Mar. 24): so far the highest score is 58.
125. Regnery continues to publish American editions of M. J. Trow's delightful series about Inspector Sholto Lestrade; the 16 novels offer name-dropping, bawdy humor, and puns, as well as interesting mysteries. LESTRADE AND THE MIRROR OF MURDER (Washington: Regnery, 2000; 240 pp., $19.95) is available (it's #14 in the series). And the publisher is starting to issue the series in trade paperback: the first two titles (THE ADVENTURES OF INSPECTOR LESTRADE and BRIGADE) are available at $9.95.

126. Sherlock Holmes (impersonated by John Sherwood) will return to Union City, Mich., on May 4 and 5 to host dinner events at the Victorian Villa Inn in honor of the centenary of the death of Queen Victoria. Additional details are available from the inn (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094) (800-348-4552) <<http://www.geocities.com/jcsherwood/BakerStreet25.htm>>.
127. Mar 01 #6: Reported: THE CONFESSIONS OF MYCROFT HOLMES: A PAPER CHASE, by Marcel Theroux (New York: Harcourt, 2001; 216 pp., $23.00), has had two reviews in the N.Y. Times (Mar. 13 in the daily paper, and Mar. 25 in the N.Y. Times Book Review). It's the second novel by the son of Paul Theroux, and according to one reviewer the novel focuses on family rivalry, and a mystery that involves a manuscript with the same title as the book. The book isn't Sherlockian, but the reviewers like its style and energy.
128. The Bibliotheque Cantonale et Universitaire de Lausanne has an interesting archive of photographs of Arthur Conan Doyle, and in 1999 Sylvie Steinmann, as part of her work for a diploma, prepared a CD-ROM disk with 250 photographs selected from the archives, accompanied by biographical and genealogical information. The disk is in French, and requires FileMaker 4.0 software and it is available from Michael Meer for $49.00 postpaid in currency, or $56.00 postpaid for checks and money orders (to cover bank charges).
129. But: FileMaker is a data-base applications program, and the current version is 5.0, and it costs $249.00 from the company (with discounts available in computer stores), and the disk can be read only with the FileMaker program. The company web-site <<http://www.filemaker.com>> does allow you to download a trial version of 5.0 (as a 9-MB zipped file, and I have no idea how large it unzips to), and then you can run version 5.0 to convert the version 4.0 database on the CD-ROM disk to your hard disk, and you'll likely need 4-GB to convert the entire CD-ROM disk. Of course it might be possible to find someone who'll sell you a cheap copy of the FileMaker 4.0 software now that version 5.0 is available.
130. Bookubes are an imaginative device: eight small cubes connected to form one larger cube that you unfold and refold to show various pictures or designs. The Sherlock Holmes Bookube of Quotations nicely displays full-color Paget artwork and Canonical quotations, and it costs £3.99 plus shipping (£2.99 to the U.S.) from Crime in Store (14 Bedford Street, London WC2E 9HE, England) (0207-379-3795) <<http://www.crimeinstore.co.uk>>.
131. The Musgrave Papers 2000 is the 13th annual published by The Northern Musgraves, and as usual it's nicely done indeed, with 126 pages devoted to the stories in THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Kathryn White suggests that "The Second Stain" is a tale of "sex, lies, and red tape," and Auberon Redfearn offers amusing extracts from the diary of Col. Sebastian Moran). Information on membership in the society and on its publications is available from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. BD16 4DN, England <fairbank@btinternet.com>.
132. The current annual from the society also is the last to be edited by David Stuart Davies and Kathryn White, who report that Roger Johnson already is hard at work on the next one (which is to be devoted to THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES). David also reports that a computer crash has damaged his address files: any American contributors who have not received their authors' copies should write to David at: Overdale, 69 Greenhead Road, Huddersfield HD1 4ER, England <overdale@btinternet.com>.
133. Apr 01 #1: Further to my query (Mar 01 #4) about Investitured Irregulars who have appeared in movies as actors (in addition to Elmer Davis), Bill Ward was a child actor, from the age of three in "The Amazing Mrs. Holliday" (1943) to the age of seven in "The Foxes of Harrow" (1947), and John E. Pforr had a bit part (as an extra) in Barry Levinson's "Liberty Heights" (1999). And Investitured Irregulars who have had books made into films (in addition to Christopher Morley and Vincent Starrett) include Poul Anderson, Isaac Asimov, John Ball, Frederic Dannay (as Ellery Queen), Robert L. Fish, Stuart Palmer, Rex Stout, and Eve Titus. If you include books made into television series, add Michael Harrison to the list. Jon Lellenberg (who supplied many of the authors listed) also notes that Henry C. Potter, the only member of The Baker Street Irregulars who has a star on Hollywood Boulevard, directed many films.
134. "Granada to Revive Sherlock Holmes" was the headline on a story in the Mar. 31 issue of Broadcast magazine, reported by Bill Barnes. "Granada is to revive its successful drama series 'Sherlock Holmes' on ITV, The programme is currently being cast by Granada controller of drama and comedy Andy Harries. It will show a much grittier interpretation of Victorian London and will follow Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson during an earlier period of their partnership, when the men were in their early 30s. Granada produced 39 episodes of the original series, which ran between 1984 and 1994 and garnered viewing figures of up to 14 million for the network. No transmission date has been revealed."
135. And there's more, in a story in the Mirror (Apr. 2), forwarded by David M. Scott, which says that Robson Green and Jerome Flynn "are being lined up" to star as Holmes and Watson, with Sean Benn as Moriarty and Geraldine Somerville as Holmes' girlfriend, in a series of 12 one-hour programs. Note: as with many such projects, Sherlockian and otherwise, initial publicity is quite often intended to help generate interest and funding. It remains to be seen whether Granada actually starts production.
136. Forecast for May: SHERLOCK IN LOVE, by Sena Jeter Naslund, first published in 1993, in a trade-paperback reprint (New York: HarperPerennial, 2001; 240 pp., $13.00); the book opens in 1922 with Watson having decided to write a biography of Sherlock Holmes, and quickly encountering a series of mysteries, current and past, that involve a mysterious violinist named Sigerson, an attempt to rescue Mad King Ludwig of Bavaria, and much more. The style and voice are consistent with the Canon, and the narrative is cinematic, as is often the case with modern pastiches.
137. The Mystery Writers of America will hold their 56th annual banquet on May 3 in New York; the nominees for Edgar awards include Martin Booth's THE DOCTOR AND THE DETECTIVE: A BIOGRAPHY OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (for best critical/ biographical work) and David Pirie's "Murder Rooms: The Dark Origins of Sherlock Holmes" (for best TV feature/miniseries). Ed Hoch, whose work includes both Sherlockian and Doylean stories, will be honored as a Grand Master of the MWA, and Douglas G. Greene (the proprietor of Crippen & Landru) will receive the Ellery Queen Award (for writing teams, editors, and publishers who have made an outstanding contribution to the mystery genre).
138. Apr 01 #2: Further to the previous report (Sep 00 #3) about the continuing battle over Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle once lived), McDonald's has now scaled down its plans: the [Edinburgh] Scotsman reported (Mar. 19), that the company now proposed to build a 75-seat restaurant, painted white and without the world-famous golden M, farther away from the derelict house. But opponents note that the new plan blocks the original driveway to the house and make access impossible except through a shopping center, possibly deterring potential buyers who might want to restore the house. Owen Dudley Edwards said in the South Edinburgh News last month that Conan Doyle "first learned to read and write" while he lived in the house, and that "It was here that the first impressions of human life came to him on the printed page which he would later make his battleground of endless triumphs."
139. Our new stamp commemorates the 100th anniversary of the creation of the Nobel Prize, and by implication the only known Sherlockian to have won one: Prize: Philip S. Hench (1896-1965), winner of a prize for medicine in 1950. His collection (with four copies of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887), now is owned by the University of Minnesota.
140. Further to the item (Feb 01 #5) about the BBC's new television version of "The Lost World", the production company, filming in New Zealand, has lost a famous capuchin monkey, Tuku, named in honor of the nation's first prime minister, according to a story in the Evening Standard (Mar. 27), at hand from John Baesch. A local observer noted that Tuku was part of the background action, and its owner had assured the film crew that if it was taken off

- its lead it wouldn't disappear. "It did immediately, and no one could retrieve it." A BBC spokesman explained that they were in negotiation with the owner, "and we can't comment further about the monkey until the situation is resolved."
141. The Mysterious Bookshop Newsletter continues to appear monthly, offering a wide variety of titles, old and new, and there's always a section of Sherlockiana (also old and new); 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (212-765-0900) <mysteriousny@worldnet.att.net>.
142. The International League of Antiquarian Booksellers has a new web-site with offers by about 2,000 dealers worldwide, including (early this month) 450-500 items listed for Arthur Conan Doyle; some items are rare and expensive (there are three non-Sherlockian manuscripts), and others are less rare and reasonably priced. The search engine is helpful, and one of the nice features of the new web-site is that you can use foreign-language characters in searches. The URL is <<http://www.ilab-lila.com>>.
143. Nyree Dawn Porter died on Apr. 9. She was a fine actress, best known for her portrayal of Irene Forsythe in the BBC's late-1960s television series "The Forsythe Saga" (a role for which she won an award as best actress from the Society of Film and Television Arts, and was honored as an officer of the Order of the British Empire); the series was for many American admirers of Irene Adler an education on the British pronunciation of her given name (eye-REEN-ee). Miss Porter also was Lady Brackenstall in the Douglas Wilmer version of "The Abbey Grange" on BBC television in 1965.
144. Apr 01 #3: "In the year 1878 I took my degree of Doctor of Medicine of the University of London, and proceeded to Netley to go through the course prescribed for surgeons in the Army," Dr. Watson wrote (in "A Study in Scarlet"). John Baesch has forwarded a review from the Evening Standard (Apr. 4) of Philip Hoare's new SPIKE ISLAND: THE MEMORY OF A MILITARY HOSPITAL (Fourth Estate, £17.99); Hoare grew up near Netley, and his book covers far more than the history of the hospital.
145. "In more fertile spots the observer would have come to the conclusion that one of those great herds of bisons which graze upon the prairie land was approaching him," Conan Doyle wrote (in "A Study in Scarlet"). Our new 21c stamp shows the silhouette of a bison; American do call them buffalo, but the buffalo mentioned in the Canon surely were South African Cape buffalo.
146. Further to the item (Feb 01 #5) on plans for the unveiling of the life-size statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Crowborough, the Daily Telegraph ran a story on Apr. 12 on protests by former mayor Steve Isted and others against the cost of the unveiling ceremony, but the statue, sculpted by David Cornell, was unveiled on Apr. 14 without a hitch (or protest). Georgina Doyle (widow of Sir Arthur's nephew Brigadier John Doyle) was the guest of honor, and spoke about how pleasant it was to see a statue of the creator rather than the creation; other members of Conan Doyle's extended family present were Richard Doyle, Catherine Beggs, Robert and Shirley Foley, and Charles Foley.
147. Will Walsh (23 Powder Horn Road, Cortlandt Manor, NY 10567) offers a set of six postcards showing his watercolors of Canonical ships; $5.50 postpaid. Some of his original artwork also is available, and you can contact him by mail or e-mail <wmwalsh221@aol.com>.
148. The tenth annual Watsonian Weekend on July 27-29 will feature Chuck Kovacic as guest speaker at the Regimental Dinner in Schiller Park, the 42nd annual running of The Silver Blaze at Arlington Race Track, the Fortescue Honours Brunch in Des Plaines, and a tour of Graceland (the cemetery where Vincent Starrett and other famous locals are buried) led by Don Izban; more information is available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szd@mediaone.net>.
149. "He's almost magical in his abilities," Morgan Freeman said in an interview with Roger Ebert in the Chicago Sun-Times (Apr. 15), talking about Dr. Alex Cross (the forensic psychologist Freeman plays in the new film "Along Came a Spider"). "He's very like Sherlock Holmes," Freeman continued. "One of my joys was Jeremy Brett doing Sherlock Holmes. I'm drawn to that sort of cerebral detective."
150. Michael Chabon, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for fiction for his novel THE AMAZING ADVENTURES OF KAVALIER & CLAY (New York: Random House, 2000), was interviewed on "The Newshour with Jim Lehrer" on PBS-TV on Apr. 19, and he talked about how he started getting interested in writing. He said he was ten years old when he first wrote something long, in English class: a 12-page story about Sherlock Holmes meeting Captain Nemo, trying to write in Conan Doyle's style. His teacher gave him an A.
151. Apr 01 #4: Derham Groves, recently lecturing about architecture in Vietnam, found the Canon in print there, in small and inexpensive paperbacks. And no, that's not Sherlock Holmes in the cover artwork; the story is "A Study in Scarlet" and the cover shows Jefferson Hope, and the booklet was published in Hanoi in 1998. Another publisher, in Ho Chi Minh [Saigon], has a series of 12 paperbacks with translations from the French OEUVRES COMPLETES published by Robert Laffont in Paris in the 1960s.
152. Apr 01 #5: Jack Haley Jr. died on Apr. 21. He was born into show business (his father played the Tin Man in "The Wizard of Oz" in 1939), and he had a long career as a film and television director and producer; his Sherlockian credits include executive producer for a Sherlock Holmes episode of "That's Hollywood!" (1976) and executive in charge of production for the Roger Moore television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976).
153. Original artwork by Robert Fawcett will be included in an auction on May 5 at Illustration House (96 Spring Street, New York, NY 10012 (212-966-9444) <<http://www.illustration-house.com>>. His artwork for "The Adventure of the Wax Gamblers" (by Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr) in Collier's on Jun 20, 1953, shows Watson taking cards from the hands of the wax gamblers, and is estimated at $5,000-7,000. Fawcett's artwork for Agatha Christie's "Hickory Dickory Dock" in Collier's on Oct. 28, 1955, shows Hercule Poirot, and is estimated at $2,000-$3,000 (suggesting, perhaps, that Watson is more desirable than Poirot when it comes to original art by the same artist).
154. A new sales-list of Sherlockiana, and an extensive one, with more than 500 items (List G), is offered by Michael S. Greenbaum (Janus Books, Box 40787, Tucson, AZ 85717) (800-986-1165) <<http://janusbooks.com>>.
155. Further to the report (Sep 00 #1) on plans to publish a complete run of The Baker Street Journal on a CD-ROM disk, in PDF format that can be read with Adobe Acrobat software (included) for Windows and Macintosh systems, there are four CD-ROM disks, and the set now is ready for shipping; it costs $105 postpaid (to North America) or $110 postpaid (elsewhere), and checks should be sent to The Baker Street Irregulars, 2029 Century Park East #3290, Los Angeles, CA 90067. The first issue of the BSJ appeared in 1946, when its editor, Edgar W. Smith, said that it was "dedicated to the proposition that there is still infinitely much to be said about the scene in Baker Street." That's still true, of course, and the archive on the BSJ disks illustrates just what is meant when we say that Sherlockians have "contributed to our literature." Mike Whelan (the current "Wiggins" of The Baker Street Irregulars) suggested to the BSI at an annual dinner that the Irregulars should be a literary society rather than a fan club, and you'll be able to see on the disks just how literary, and how much fun, the BSJ has been for so many years, and still is.
156. Tom Armstrong's "Marvin" comic strip used a Sherlockian motif to celebrate Easter in a continuing story, Apr. 2-7 and 9-14; thanks to Carl Heifetz for pursuing the mystery through the pages of the St. Petersburg Times.
157. Apr 01 #6: Martin Gardner's imaginative THE ANNOTATED CASEY AT THE BAT: A COLLECTION OF BALLADS ABOUT THE MIGHTY CASEY (according to John Bennett Shaw, it has "the only accurate account of where Moorville (3Gar) was, and what happened to it") appeared in 1967, with a second edition in 1984, and there's a third edition (Mineola: Dover Publications, 1995: 231 pp., $8.95) with additional Sherlockian material: a one-paragraph summary of Charles Michael Carroll's poem "Sherlock at the Bat" (first published in Wheelwrightings in 1991).

158. "Hooked: Illegal Drugs and How They Got That Way" is a four-hour mini-series broadcast by the History channel on Apr. 22; the third one-hour program ("Cocaine: The Third Scourge") included a one-minute segment about Sherlock Holmes, with a photograph of Basil Rathbone, a quote from "The Sign of the Four" (misidentified as "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution"), and commentary by David F. Musto of Yale University (and The Baker Street Irregulars).
159. Laurie R. King will be on tour promoting her new (non-Mary Russell) novel FOLLY, and signing her books. The preliminary schedule: May 7 (Amsterdam); May 8 (joint event with Val McDermid and Manda Scott at Waterstones, Emerson Chambers, Newcastle); May 9 (similar joint event at Waterstones, West End Branch, Edinburgh); May 10 (signings in London at Crime in Stone and Murder One, and perhaps at Silver Moon and Harrods, and a joint event with Andrew Taylor at Heffers, Cambridge); May 11 (joint event with Val McDermid and Waterstones, Deansgate, Manchester). More information may be available at Laurie's web-site at <<http://www.laurierking.com>>.
160. Reported by Stu Shiffman: VILLAINS VICTORIOUS, edited by Martin H. Greenberg and John Helfers (New York: DAW Books, 2001; 320 pp., $6.99); an anthology of 14 original stories, including a Sherlockian pastiche by Peter Tremayne, about Holmes' first encounter with Moriarty, in Ireland, where Colonel James Phillimore disappeared from his estate in Kerry.
161. The museum exhibit "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" has been on display in the United States (Jan 01 #4), and now it's moving to Canada: it will open at the Vancouver Museum on June 11 and run through the end of the year. More information is available from the museum (1100 Chestnut Street, Vancouver, BC V6J 3J9, Canada) (604-736-4431) and (by the end of the month) at their web-site <<http://www.vanmuseum.bc.ca>>.
162. The annual Edinburgh Festival Fringe often includes new Sherlockian drama, and this year's play will be Edward Viney's new dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", at the Stage by Stage Edinburgh Academy in Henderson Row on Aug. 5-19. The box office (0131-557-1155) and the company web-site <<http://www.stagebystage.org>> will open on June 1. After the Festival ends the play will also be produced in Exeter. According to company publicity, the production focuses on the supernatural dimensions of the story and the atmosphere created by a lone man of reason entering a close-knit, frightened community. Sir Hugo makes more than one appearance, and the audiences will get to see the Hound. "The tone of the piece is gothic and suspended, rather than comic or camp, as some adaptations can be."
163. May 01 #1: It was nice to see a mention of the creator of our grand Sherlockian game in conservative columnist George F. Will's op-ed piece in the Washington Post (Apr. 29): "Ronald Knox, the learned Catholic priest whose elegantly medieval mind converted a number of Oxford undergraduates in the 1920s and '30s, believed that airplanes, telephones and such gadgets were overrated and that the last good invention was the toast rack for the breakfast table. Now, *that* was a conservative."
164. Willis Frick spotted a report of a new play, scheduled at the South Coast Repertory's Second Stage in Costa Mesa, Oct. 30-Dec. 2. "Nostalgia" (written by Lucinda Coxon) is set on a farm in South Wales, where "two brothers hear an echo of hypnotic songs sung by sirens. There is a foreboding about the surrounding woods. Perhaps the strange woman across the river, who is loved from afar by one brother and scorned by the other, knows why. When Sherlock Holmes' creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle arrives, he gets the chance to put his literary insights to a real test as he attempts to untangle both the emotional and ethereal enigmas." The theater address is Box 2197, Costa Mesa, CA 92628 (714-708-5555) <<http://www.scr.org>>.
165. One of the events during the annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars in 1960 was a quiz presented by Irving Fenton, for which the first prize was a copy of LEAVES FROM THE COPPER BEECHES supplied by Bill Starr and Tom Hart by way of giving the volume some publicity. And Julian Wolff won the quiz. Julian's prize volume possibly was inscribed by Edgar W. Smith, and may also have been signed by some of those who attended the dinner; and I wonder if one of my readers acquired this copy when Julian's collection was dispersed some years ago.
166. "Try Canadian Pacific Railway," was Sherlock Holmes' suggestion (in "Black Peter"), and John Baesch notes that it's as strong an investment now as it was then. The chairman of Canadian Pacific Ltd. told the company's shareholders on Apr. 26 that the time is right to split CP into five companies, one of which will be Canadian Pacific Railway. The company opened in 1881 as a "ribbon of steel" built to tie Canada together coast-to-coast, and it will again be a "pure play railway company" (CP's ships, petroleum, hotels, resorts, etc., will be owned by the other new companies).
167. There's an addition to the list of three Investitured Irregulars who have appeared in movies as actors (Apr 01 #1), thanks to Roy Pilot: add Richard B. Shull, who was a professional actor on stage, screen, and television.
168. "The Royal Arsenal at Woolwich is a real blast from the past," Chris Wharton wrote in The Sunday Telegraph (Apr. 22), in an article kindly forwarded by John Baesch. The Royal Ordnance Factory closed in 1967, and the London Development Agency bought the 76-acre site from the Ministry of Defence in 1997 for £1, and then spent £48.8 million to decontaminate the area. Some of the buildings now are being converted, one into a museum and others for housing, with apartments that will be priced from £105,000 (one bedroom) to £250,000 (three bedrooms). One hopes, of course, that someone will arrange for a plaque that will commemorate the services of Arthur Cadogan West, who was a clerk at the Woolwich Arsenal ("The Bruce-Partington Plans").
169. May 01 #2: The Sherlock Holmes Gazette was launched ten years ago as a 24-page journal edited by Elizabeth Wiggins, with a "Reichenbach Centenary Edition" on May 4, 1991; it has grown and prospered, and it was retitled Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine in 1997, and it is edited now by David Stuart Davies, and the decade's 40 issues (through 2000) are now available on a CD-ROM disk. The disk costs £39.95 or $60.00 postpaid from PHM Publications, PO Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex, PO18 8HD, England <admin@pmh.uk.com> (you should specify PC or Mac); credit-card orders welcome.
170. "This case deserves to be a classic," is the quote from the Canon noted by Joe Coppola in a new catalog from Reading Etc. (3201 SW 15th Street, Deerfield, FL 33442 (877-909-7323) <<http://www.readingetc.com>>, introducing a collection of handsome desk accessories that aren't themselves Sherlockian.
171. The electronically-enabled will wish to visit Steve Trusell's splendid "Detectives on Stamps" web-site at <<http://trusell.com/detfic/detect.htm>>; it was there that I discovered a report of the latest postage stamp honoring Arthur Conan Doyle:
172. South Africa issued (Oct. 25, 2000) two stamps honoring Anglo-Boer/South African War Writers, showing portraits of Sol Plaatje and Johanna Brandt on one stamp, and Arthur Conan Doyle and Winston Churchill on the other stamp. The mint set, and an official first day cover, still are available from Philatelic Services, Private Bag X505, Pretoria 0001, South Africa <<http://www.sapo.co.za>>; the cost is R5.70 for the stamps and R7.70 for the cover, and credit-card orders are welcome.
173. Bridget Byrne reported (in the Washington Post on May 8) on the cast of the new film "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" (due in theaters on Nov. 16), and the film will feature two actors who have played Sherlock Holmes: John Cleese will be Nearly Headless Nick (a "ghost who 4 years ago wasn't quite beheaded"), and Alan Rickman will be Severus Snape ("cold-eyed, paleskinned, sarcastic Slytherin housemaster and potions professor"). Cleese played Holmes on television in "Elementary, My Dear Watson" in 1973, and Rickman played the title role in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" on stage in Birmingham in 1976.

174. Issue #42 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine offers a first (as far as I know): Peter Guttridge's "Sound Alibi" is a pastiche with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, in the midst of filming for Universal, assisting the police in solving a double murder perpetrated on the film set. And there's much more, non-Sherlockian and Sherlockian, including David Stuart Davies' article about the making of Granada's "The Dying Detective", and Denis Norden's quote from the first Sherlockian sketch that he and Frank Muir wrote for BBC radio in 1949. Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £20.00 (in the U.K.)/£22.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Classic Specialties is the agent in the U.S. (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://sherlock@sherlock-holmes.com>>, and creditcard orders are welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.

175. May 01 #3: A&E cable debuted its "Nero Wolfe" mystery series last year with "The Golden Spiders" (Sep 00 #5), starring Maury Chaykin as Wolfe and Tim Hutton as Archie Goodwin, with a view of the portrait of Sherlock Holmes on the wall over Archie's desk. The series continues this year ("The Doorbell Rang", "Champagne for One", and "Prisoner's Base" have aired so far), and Holmes' portrait seems to have vanished, but there now are views of the picture of waterfall (which hides the secret panel through which people can see what's going on in the office); it is widely assumed that the waterfall is the Reichenbach, although this is not stated in any of the stories (and as seen in the series it doesn't look like the Reichenbach). The series offers excellent atmosphere and production values, and Hutton is delightful as Archie Goodwin.
176. Further to the item (Aug 96 #5) about how much the Conan Doyles liked Mercedes-Benz cars: the Wall Street Journal had a front-page article by Jonathan Welsh on May 8, about a 1955 Mercedes 300 SL Gullwing Coupe, ordered from the factory by Adrian Conan Doyle and now owned by Alfred Barbour, who purchased it for $165,000. The car then spent two years in a restoration shop, and after two years of work and an estimated bill of $300,000 the car resides in Barbour's garage in Mars, Pa. But he doesn't plan to drive it: "Sometimes I'll come down alone, pull up a chair and just sit and look at," he said. And he thinks the car is well worth what he's spent on it: "Some people have beautiful paintings or sculptures, and they have no trouble justifying it. My work of art just happens to be in the garage." Actually, the Mercedes was driven by Adrian's wife Anna Conan Doyle; according to Charles Foley, Adrian's own car was a Ferrari 250 GTO.
177. Further to the report (Apr 01 #5) of original artwork by Robert Fawcett at auction in New York on May 5, his illustration for "The Adventure of the Wax Gamblers" (by Adrian Conan Doyle and John Dickson Carr) in Collier's, showing Watson but not Holmes (estimated at $5,000-7,000), brought $7,150 (including the 10% buyer's premium). Fawcett's artwork for Agatha Christie's "Hickory Dickory Dock", showing Hercule Poirot (estimated at $2,000-3,000) brought $3,080.
178. Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly, NSW 2095, Australia) notes that THE HOUNDS' COLLECTION: VOLUME 6 now is available; there are 98 pages of pastiche, humor, serious writing, and artwork by members of The Hounds of the Internet. Most of the material is new, but a few items have appeared elsewhere; the cost is $12.00/CA$18.00/£8.00/AU$14.75 postpaid by air (payment in currency preferred, but checks are acceptable), and PayPal can be used to <bbarnes@ozemail.com.au>.
179. The latest issue of The Cormorant's Ring is a delightful tribute to Margaret and Don Hardenbrook: Don was one of the founders of The Trained Cormorants in 1947, and their wedding in 1957 was nicely Sherlockian (both the reverend and the best man were members of the Cormorants), and their marriage was a happy one in every way, as you will see in the reminiscences and reprints in the society's journal. It's available for $5.00 postpaid from Jim Coffin, 6570 East Paseo Alcazaa, Anaheim Hills, CA 92807.
180. May 01 #4: Britain's second largest mortgage lender Abbey National continues to sell bonds backed by residential mortgages, and "Holmes Four" (due in June) will be worth £2.6 billion, the largest such bond issue in European history. There's already a Holmes One, Holmes Two, and Holmes Three, and yes, the name is carefully chosen. According to a Reuters dispatch (May 10), at hand from Ray Betzner, "The Holmes vehicle is named after Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective Sherlock Holmes who lived at Abbey's headquarters address on Baker Street in London."
181. The June-July issue of British Heritage is devoted to "The Age of Empire: Victorian Britain", with information on the best sites for tourists interested in the era, and (of course) mention of Sherlock Holmes and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. 645 Flank Drive, Harrisburg, PA 17112 (800-358-6327); $6.00.
182. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has David Kotin's review of the Toronto Public Library's special collections, and Victoria Gill's article about one of the Conan Doyle family photographs (of Arctic explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson, publisher H. M. McClure, detective William J. Burns, Capitol Theatre owner Edward Bowes, and Sir Arthur, taken by Lady Doyle in 1913 at Windlesham, where they discussed the possibility of "a play combining a detective of fact with the greatest detective of fiction." The newsletter is available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwig@idirect.com>. And the Friends have a web-site at <<http://www.acdfriends.org>>.
183. There's a new lapel pin, for The Goose Club of the Alpha Inn; and the cost is $8.50 postpaid, from Jeanette Pyle, 16 Browe Court, Burlington, VT 05401.
184. There were 180 people at the Culinary Institute of America on May 12 to enjoy "Sir Hugo Baskerville's Feast", which included delicacies such as spit-roasted boar, stuffed pheasant eggs, neat's tongue, warm venison pate, roast hind of oxen, cowcumber and dill sallet, and many other dishes known from the time of the Great Rebellion (1642-1652). The agenda also featured a performance by the Friends of Bogie (Andrew Joffe, Paul Singleton, and Sarah Montague Joffe) of a scene that didn't make it into last year's film "Best in Show" (involving the Hound, of course), and many toasts, one of which was Mike Whelan's warm tribute to "The Economic Sherlock Holmes" (Mike noted in passing that consideration is being given to reducing the cost of the annual birthday festivities by moving the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner to a centrally-located McDonald's located in Peoria, Ill.).
185. The irregularly quinquennial Sherlockian dinners have been held at the CIA since 1973, masterminded always by Fritz Sonnenschmidt and Al and Julie Rosenblatt, who were honored this year by Mike Whelan with a presentation of three Waterford toasting goblets, each inscribed as a Culinary Innovation Award. The weekend also included the traditional Sunday-morning pancake breakfast at the Rhinebeck Fire Department, and opportunities to tour the historic sites and sights of the Hudson Valley, one of which is the Presidential Library of BSI member Franklin Delano Roosevelt, whose Sherlockian memorabilia have been carefully preserved in his archives.
186. May 01 #5: Otto Penzler's pamphlet series of pastiches and parodies (Jun 00 #5) has a new title: Montgomery Carmichael's ON THE THRESHOLD OF THE CHAMBER OF HORRORS (which was first published in The Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, Oct 27, 1894). The 16-page pamphlet costs $10.00, from The Mysterious Bookshop, 129 West 56th Street, New York, NY 10019 (800-352-2840) <<http://www.mysteriousbookshop.com>>
187. Isabella Beeton's classic MRS. BEETON'S BOOK OF HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT was first published in 1861, and it was a valuable guide for those who managed households in the days of Sherlock Holmes; she died in 1865 at the age of 28, but the book "spawned what we today would call a brand-name publishing empire," according to an article by Maryann Haggerty in the Washington Post (May 17). "Mrs. Beeton's name was slapped on just about any book that had anything to do with house-wifery. Think Martha Stewart, without the quality control." A new edition of the book, edited by Nicola Humble for the Oxford World's Classics last year (672 pp., $13.95), offers an interesting look at how households were managed in those long-ago days.

188. The Borough of St. Marylebone's contribution to the Festival of Britain in 1951 was an "Exhibition on Sherlock Holmes" at Abbey House in Baker Street that opened to the public on May 22; it ran until Sept. 22 and was visited by more than 50,000 people, and it attracted considerable publicity in the world press with a carefully-researched reproduction of the sitting-room at 221b, as well as displays of manuscripts, first editions, and memorabilia of Canonical cases. The Westminster Libraries have launched a web-site at <<http://www.westminsteronline.org/holmes1951/>> to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the exhibition, and it's nicely done indeed. The web-site will be updated, and next year it will honor the exhibition's visit to New York in 1952; Catherine Cooke would be glad to hear from anyone who saw it (or knows someone who saw it) and can offer reminiscences that can be added to the web-site. Her address is: Marylebone Library, Marylebone Road, London NW1 5PS, England <c.cooke@dial.pipex.com>.
189. Linda Pritchard's A PICTORIAL TRIBUTE TO JEREMY BRETT: THE DEFINITIVE YEARS (London: Paradise Books, 2001; 120 pp., £15.00) offers a brief biography, tributes to the actor and his work, lists of his appearances on stage and screen and television, and a splendid selection of photographs covering his entire career. Available for $29.95 postpaid from Ashland Books, 132 Seventh Street, Ashland, OR 97520 <ashlandbooks@ashlandhome.net>.
190. Jan Meredith died on May 10. She was an actress on stage, radio, and television, and in recent years a member of the Asheville Community Theater in North Carolina. In the 1980s she played Mrs. Hudson in Joseph Bevilacqua's parody radio series "The Mis-Adventures of Sherlock Holmes".
191. Further to the reports (Apr 01 #1) that Granada is planning to revive their Sherlock Holmes series, David Stuart Davies has learned that the company is in the very early development stages of a new series, with the idea of presenting a younger Holmes and Watson. But there is no producer in charge of the project, nor any writers involved, and no decisions on casting. On the other hand, the Jeremy Brett series was the most successful financially of all the series Granada has ever made, and one might assume that something Sherlockian will appear from Granada in the next 18 to 24 months.
192. May 01 #6: Kate Karlson traveled to Paris for the annual meeting of La Societe Sherlock Holmes de France in Paris in May (they "really rock," Kate reports), and the locals and the visitor enjoyed a tour of Pere Lachaise cemetery, where one will find the tombs of Oscar Wilde, Alphonse Bertillon, Honore de Balzac, Frederic Chopin, a Sir Charles Doyle (showing the correct family coat of arms), and a black marble tomb decorated with an enigmatic "SH" in gold below a cross; when asked by a passing tourist whose tomb it was, Phillippe Roland Nicholas (the society's youngest member) had a quick response: "C'est Sherlock Holmes."
193. Further to the item (Mar 01 #1) about plans for Muse Entertainment's third two-hour television film starring Matt Frewer and Kenneth Welsh, it's now in production in Canada, according to a story in the Ottawa Citizen, kindly noted by Les Klinger. The working title is "The Royal Scandal" (based on "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Naval Treaty"). In their next film, Frewer and Welsh will play a cross-dressing hockey player and her coach: "Helga: A True Story" will feature Frewer in two roles: as Helga, who becomes an NHL star while disguised as a man, and her murderous twin sister Sonya. Welsh will be Helga's coach, confidante, and paramour.
194. More investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars in films: Philip Shreffler appeared as an extra in the Huck Finn episode of "Mark Twain: Beneath the Laughter" (1980). Donald Pollock also was an extra (one of the zombies) in "Dawn of the Dead" (1978). And his car was filmed in the airport parking lot in "Airport" (1970).
195. Barnes & Noble <<http://www.bn.com>> still offers handsome Sherlockian prints and posters (Nov 99 #5: you select the design you want, and it's shipped to you printed on paper ($19.95) or canvas ($99.00 and up). You can also see the artwork (and Sherlock Holmes is only one of many categories available) at Barnes & Noble stores.
196. And yes, this end-of-May issue of my newsletter is being published somewhat late, but I have a reasonable excuse: hepatitis A, which is an infection of the liver caused by a virus, and you get it from eating raw or undercooked shellfish that came from contaminated water, or (more likely) anything prepared by someone who hasn't paid attention to the signs one sees in restaurant restrooms ("employees must wash their hands before leaving"). Hepatitis A is the one you recover from (with hepatitis B you never get to drink alcohol again, and with hepatitis C you just get in line for a liver transplant), and there's no medicine to take: you just get plenty of rest, and drink lots of liquid, and eventually you get your appetite and energy back, and your skin and eyes aren't yellow any more.
197. So I'm back to normal (when I say that to people, the response occasionally is, "when were you ever normal?"), and I'm not contagious any more, which will be nice news to those planning to attend the Sherlockian conference in Minneapolis at the end of June, since I plan to be there. As for the next issue of my newsletter, I'm not sure I'll have six whole pages of gossip by the end of June, but I expect to be back on schedule by the end of July.

198. Jun 01 #1: Bits & Pieces (One Puzzle Place, B8016, Stevens Point, WI 54481) (800-544-7297) <<http://www.bitsandpieces.com>> continues to offer "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" puzzles ("read the enclosed story booklet and assemble the 550-piece jigsaw to solve each original murder mystery"): "The Fellow Lodgers" and "The Phantom of Sorrel House" (originally $10.95 each) are now discounted at $6.95 each.
199. The Strand bookstore in New York has been open for business since 1927, and now boasts more than 12 miles of books for sale; Paul Singleton spotted an interview with the store's owner Fred Bass and his daughter Nancy, in Time Out New York (summer 2001), that reports that the store is "named after the famous London publishing street and after the magazine in which Arthur Conan Doyle published the first Sherlock Holmes stories." The store is at 848 Broadway (at 12th Street), and is well worth a visit by every collector.
200. Further to the item (Mar 01 #5) about Ciaran Carson's SHAMROCK TEA (London: Granta Books, 2001; 308 pp., £14.99), pursuit of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle in literature occasionally leads to discoveries of strange and wondrous writing, and the book certainly qualifies: it's an assembly of 101 short, interconnected, and colorful chapters tied to Jan van Eyck's painting "The Arnolfini Portrait", the lives of the saints (both well-known and obscure), and much more. And yes, Carson pays tribute to both Conan Doyle and Holmes.
201. Angela Browne died on June 20. She began her acting career on stage in the mid-1950s, and also had great success in film and on television; she played Mrs. Toller in Granada's "The Copper Beeches" (1985).
202. The French have a long-standing tradition of baking epiphany cakes with a bean in them (whoever gets the slice with the bean gets good luck as well), but more recently small porcelain figurines are used instead of beans. And there's a set of ten "feves" (1" high) each with a character from the film "The Great Mouse Detective" available for $43.50 postpaid (if there are any left) from KinderMagic, 848 West Lantana Road, Lantana, FL 33462 (toll-free 877-875-4633) <<http://www.kindermagicusa.com/Disney%20pages/basil.htm>>. If the supply is exhausted, they may be able to get more, so you can enroll on a waiting list.
203. John Baesch has reported that the Queen's birthday honours included a CBE [Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire] for Christopher Lee, who played Sir Henry in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), Sherlock Holmes in "Sherlock Holmes und das Halsband des Todes" (1963), Mycroft in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and Sherlock Holmes in the television films "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" and "Incident at Victoria Falls" (1992), and he read "The Valley of Fear" for a set of audiocassettes in 1991. Dudley Moore, who also received a CBE, played Dr. Watson in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978). And Leslie Bricusse, who received an OBE [making him an Officer of the Order], wrote the book, music, and lyrics for "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (1988), which included some of his work for MGM (the company hired him to write a new score for their planned-but-never-produced film of the musical "Baker Street").

204. Jun 01 #2: This year's Christmas card from The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will celebrate the society's 50th anniversary, with the society's logo and appropriate wording, on a special white card embossed in gold. $13.00 postpaid for ten cards (£5.50 to the U.K., £6.00 to Europe, £7.00 elsewhere); checks payable to the Society, please, and orders should be sent to Cdr. G. S. Stavert, 22 Homeheights, Clarence Parade, Southsea, Hants. PO5 3NN, England. Note: you can order now, but the cards will not be shipped until September.
205. Lise McClendon has noted a new bookshop: Sherlock's Home, owned by John and Jane Hooper, at 7 North Missouri Street, Liberty, MO 64068 (816-792-0499) <<http://www.sherlockshome.com>>.
206. Further to the report of THE CONFESSIONS OF MYCROFT HOLMES: A PAPER CHASE, by Marcel Theroux (New York: Harcourt, 2001; 216 pp., $23.00), it's an interesting novel, full of twists and turns and surprises, and although it's not Sherlockian ("The Confessions of Mycroft Holmes" are stories written by the narrator's uncle), it's an intriguing mystery.
207. Norman Schatell was a delightful artist whose Sherlockian work appeared in Sherlockian (and other) journals, and informally on the envelopes in which he enclosed his letters to his friends. THE SCION OF SCHATELL: ART IN THE BLOOD (New York: Magico Magazine, 2001; 50 pp., $10.00 postpaid) offers a spiral-bound collection of Norman's work, assembled by Dave Galerstein and with an enthusiastic introduction by Irving Kamil, and it's a fine opportunity to see just how much artistic fun Norm (and his friends) had. Magico Magazine's address is: Box 156, New York, NY 10002.
208. While it's true that The Baker Street Irregulars were born and nourished in the pages of the Saturday Review of Literature, it's also a fact that the pages of the Chicago Tribune offered its readers a splendid opportunity to discover just how much fun Sherlockians have. Vincent Starrett wrote for the paper for many years, of course, but there was another stalwart Sherlockian on its staff: Charles Collins, who for more than two decades edited and wrote a daily column called "A Line o' Type or Two" and provided a forum for his fellow enthusiasts. And you can now see just how much they all had, thanks to the late John Nieminski, who discovered more than 300 separate items of interest in the Collins' column, and assembled and annotated them for a book that was not published while he lived; and thanks to Ely Liebow, who has contributed two informative and enthusiastic introductions, about John Nieminski and Charles Collins, and who presided over publication of SHERLOCK IN THE TRIB (New York: Magico Magazine, 2000; 242 pp., $31.95 postpaid, publisher's address as above).
209. Edgar W. Smith, in his BAKER STREET AND BEYOND (1940), was the first Sherlockian to offer an annotated list of the place names that constitute the geography of the Canon, and others followed in his footsteps in encyclopedias and similar guides. A SHERLOCKIAN GAZETTEER, by Virginia Powell (New York: Magico Magazine, 1997; 157 pp., $27.00 postpaid, publisher's address as above), offers some added value: her comprehensive list of place names, annotated from the Canon and often from the 11th edition of the ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA, also includes identifications by previous scholars of many of the place names disguised by Dr. Watson.
210. Jun 01 #3: Mary Burke has returned from London to report on her visit to the British Museum, where the British Library's former reading room has been restored and opened to the public. Near the front chairs is a placard that states: "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle refers to Sherlock Holmes' researches in the Reading Room, and a later writer describes an imaginary meeting between Holmes and Karl Marx." And in a glassed bookcase against the wall there are 18 books by Conan Doyle, and another card with the quote from "The Musgrave Ritual" about Holmes' use of the British Museum: "There I waited, filling in my too abundant leisure time by studying all those branches of science which might make me more efficient."
211. That "later writer" (Jon Lellenberg reports) was William S. Baring-Gould: his SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET: A LIFE OF THE WORLD'S FIRST CONSULTING DETECTIVE (1962) describes such a meeting (at which, it is amusing to note, Holmes never learned Marx's name). Lewis Feuer, in THE CASE OF THE REVOLUTIONIST'S DAUGHTER: SHERLOCK HOLMES MEETS KARL MARX (1983) has Holmes meeting Marx, but at Marx's home in Maitland Park Road. And Michael Hardwick, in SHERLOCK HOLMES: MY LIFE AND CRIMES (1984), has Holmes recalling his use of the Reading Room: Holmes says of Marx that "I saw him there often," but not that he actually met him.
212. Mary Burke also visited the Dulwich Picture Gallery, where one can see two paintings by Sherlock Holmes' great-great-grand-uncle Claude-Joseph Vernet: "An Italianate Harbour Scene" and "Italian Landscape". The gallery has an "adopt an old master" program that raises funds for conservation (adoption allows the use of the image of the artwork free of charge); "An Italianate Harbour Scene" needs urgent work, according to the gallery's head of development Lottie Cole, and it is up for adoption for £4,000. More information is available from Miss Cole (Dulwich Picture Gallery, Gallery Road, Dulwich Village, London, SE21 7AD, England) <www.dulwichpicturegallery.org.uk>.
213. Noted by Denny Dobry: William R. Hanson's pastiche "Sherlock Holmes and the Hawaiian Treasure" in the American Philatelist (July); one of the illustrations is a photograph of Denny's carefully-detailed recreation (in Reading, Pa.) of the sitting-room at 221B. If you can't find the issue locally, the magazine's address is: Box 8000, State College, PA 16803; $3.95. And their web-site is at <<http://www.stamps.org>>.
214. The U.S. Postal Service has honored "Peanuts" with a recent stamp that portrays Snoopy, not in the Sherlockian costume that we know so well, but rather in his far more widely-recognized guise as the fierce (and famous) World War I fighter pilot. Charles Schulz, who created Snoopy and the rest of the "Peanuts" characters, died last year (Feb 00 #6), and was posthumously awarded the Congressional Gold Medal at a ceremony in the Capitol Rotunda on June 7.
215. Cullen Murphy, managing editor of The Atlantic Monthly, has a column called "Innocent Bystander" in each issue; the columns are always interesting, and sometimes have mentions of Sherlock Holmes and of Sherlockians, as with the June issue, which is about attempts by today's doctors to diagnose the ailments of literary characters. The column also is available on-line at the magazine's web-site <<http://www.theatlantic.com/issues/2001/06/murphy.htm>>.

216. Jun 01 #4: Further to the report (Apr 01 #3) on the unveiling of the lifesize statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Crowborough on Apr. 14, less than a month later the statue was vandalized, and Sir Arthur's hat was stolen. It's nice to note that modern detective methods were used to solve the case: Takeshi Shimizu spotted an Associated Press story (May 17) that reported that a police closed-circuit television camera recorded a 17-year-old youth climbing the statue; he managed to break off the hat before fleeing the scene of the crime, but he was later arrested and "interviewed about the theft" and then "cautioned but released without charge."
217. There's been a lot of publicity for the publication of Mark Twain's "A Murder, a Mystery, and a Marriage" in The Atlantic Monthly (July-Aug. 2001), 125 years after he wrote the novelette for the magazine. And it's nice to learn that two members of The Baker Street Irregulars helped preserve the manuscript: according to the magazine's editor, Michael Kelly, who was interviewed on "The Newshour with Jim Lehrer" on June 25, the manuscript was discovered in the estate of the widow of a British bookseller in 1943 and purchased by Lew David Feldman, who sold it to Ellery Queen (Frederic Dannay), whose collection eventually was acquired by the University of Texas.

218. Each issue of Fantasy & Science Fiction magazine offers a last-page look at "Curiosities": out-of-print and long-neglected books that deserve attention from today's readers. The August issue has an enthusiastic recommendation by Paul Di Filippo's that begins: "Imagine Potocki's grimly fantastic THE SARAGOSSA MANUSCRIPT (1804) comically rewritten by William Goldman in the manner of THE PRINCESS BRIDE (1973), or perhaps infused with the spirit of Monty Python, and you'll have some idea of the giddy, fizzy buzz supplied by [his] first novel, a historical fantasia spanning the years 1483 to the author's present, and revolving around a magical bottled draught from the Fountain of Youth." There's more, including mention of Peter Ruber's suggestion that the book is "one of the great under-appreciated fantasies of this century," and the book they're raving about is Vincent Starrett's SEAPORTS IN THE MOON (1928).
219. Hank Ketcham died on May 31. He worked as an animator for Walter Lantz and then for Walt Disney, and after World War II as a freelance cartoonist, and "Dennis the Menace" was launched in 1951, syndicated in 16 papers. Ketcham recalled in an interview this year that when the cartoon started one editor offered a warning: "I don't see how it can last. There's only so much you can say about a 5-year-old-kid." Dennis has never changed, and now is syndicated in more than 1,000 papers. Here's the opening of the Sunday strip that ran on Aug. 20, 1995:
220. Jun 01 #5: Laurie R. King reports that her next Mary Russell book, JUSTICE HALL, will be published next February. Laurie also is one of the thirteen women mystery writers who have written chapters for the serial novel NAKED CAME THE PHOENIX, edited by Marcia Talley (New York: St. Martin's, 2001; 320 pp., $24.95); the scheme is the same as in the 1996 serial novel NAKED CAME THE MANATEE (and there's no Mary Russell content). An official web-site at <<http://www.laurierking.com>> offers lots of information about Laurie and her books.
221. Many television quiz shows have Sherlockian questions, and Laura Kuhn provided the first report of one on "The Weakest Link" on NBC-TV, on July 2: "What literary detective first appeared in the 1887 novel A STUDY IN SCARLET?" "Sherlock Holmes." "That is the correct answer." It's nice to know that the program offers contestants at least a few easy questions.
222. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES has been reissued in a new Penguin Classics edition (£4.99), edited by Christopher Frayling, who noted in an article in The Independent (July 1) that the book has finally "been promoted from the ghetto of Penguin Crime/Mystery to the pantheon of Penguin Classics."
223. Another new edition of the story is THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: HUNTING THE DARTMOOR LEGEND (Tiverton: Halsgrove House, 2001; 240 pp., £24.95); according to the publisher's publicity, the book includes the full text from The Strand Magazine, and a major new study by Philip Weller of the historical, geographical, and literary background to the story, illustrated with 100 historic and contemporary photographs, and a foreword by Edward Hardwicke. The publisher's address is Halsgrove House, Lower Moor Way, Tiverton, Devon EX16 6SS, England (44-1884-243242) <<http://www.halsgrove.com>>.
224. Dorothy L. Sayers was one of the earliest and best of those who and played the grand game of Sherlockian scholarship, and it is nice indeed that all of her essays on Sherlock Holmes will soon be in print again, together with (and available for the first time) the script she wrote for Lord Peter Wimsey's comments for the centenary birthday tribute to Holmes that was broadcast by BBC radio on Jan. 8, 1954. SAYERS ON HOLMES: ESSAYS AND FICTION ON SHERLOCK HOLMES will also have an informative introduction by Alzina Stone Dale; the 53-page book will be published in August by The Mythopoeic Society; $9.50 postpaid, and checks (payable to the Society, please) should be sent to Joan Marie Verba, Box 1363, Minnetonka, MN 55345.
225. Bibliography can be a puzzling pursuit. There is a copy of George Bernard Shaw's first published play WIDOWERS' HOUSES (1893) inscribed by the author on the half-title for a charity auction a statement that, though the volume had, as he recalled, been issued originally in "a green colored cloth case of the shade called citrine," here was a copy bound in blue cloth. "I never saw or heard of any blue copies," write Shaw. "Consequently, though I am actually writing these words in a blue copy I deny its existence." From a lecture by Dan H. Laurence at the Library of Congress in 1982 in which he discussed his work on his two-volume bibliography of Shaw (published by the Oxford University Press in 1983). Laurence's lecture was published by the Library of Congress' Center for the Book as A PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR AS A BIBLIOGRAPHY in 1983. The inscription, it should be noted, was Shaw's inventive (and false) response to the pursuit of binding variants.

226. Jun 01 #6: The Norwegian Explorers did a splendid job with "2001: A Sherlockian Odyssey: A Journey Among the Shaw 100" in Minneapolis in June, and it was especially nice to be able to tour the new underground storage facility of the University of Minnesota's new library, where the collections of John Bennett Shaw and many others are now preserved. Participants in the conference were taken on guided tours of the stacks, and had a chance to browse through the collection, which includes such things as John's favorite bolo tie, and a box labeled "bust of Sherlock Holmes and two handguns". The presentations, scholarly and otherwise, ran from Friday afternoon through lunch on Sunday, and there were about 120 people on hand for the festivities, and Julie McKuras, who with Dick Sveum presided over the event, ended the conference by suggesting that another one can be expected in 2004.
227. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers eight pages of articles about past and present aspects of the collection, and a report from curator of special collections Tim Johnson, who also gave a delightful talk at the conference on what he collects (conflict of interest concerns ensure that he can't compete with the special collections, but he still has great fun collecting). If you would like to be on the Friends' mailing list you can contact Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
228. Clarkson N. Potter died on June 24. He was a publisher, writer, and literary agent who began his publishing career in 1950 as an editor at Doubleday and Co. In 1959 he founded his own imprint, and published many cornerstone Sherlockian titles, including William S. Baring-Gould's SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET (1962) and THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (1967), the American edition of Michael and Mollie Hardwick's SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION (1977), and a Bramhall House reprint edition of Ronald B. De Waal's THE WORLD BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DR. WATSON (1977).
229. A badger, a bison, a goose, and a grouse appear on our new Great Plains Prairie sheet of stamps, and all are mentioned in the Canon, but of the four only the bison is specifically American: "Those great herds of bisons which graze upon the prairie land" are mentioned in "A Study in Scarlet".
230. Arlene Francis died on May 31. She acted on Broadway, with Orson Welles' Mercury Theater company, and in film and on radio and television, where she was a panelist on "What's My Line" for 25 years. In 1962 she joined Zacherley to introduce Chris Steinbrunner's broadcast of "The Valley of Fear" on Fordham University's WFUV-FM.
231. And yes, it's some days past the end of June, but my newsletter is edging back toward being on schedule again. I seem to have recovered from my bout with hepatitis A, except for not yet being allowed to drink alcohol, but my doctor suggests that I may be able to fall off the wagon by mid-July.

Jul 01 #1:

232. T. R. Reid reported to the Washington Post (May 18) that former president Bill Clinton, on a visit to Poland, was hit on the sleeve by an egg apparently thrown by an anti-globalization protestor; Clinton laughed, and said that "It's good for young people to be angry about something." It was a bit

- different in London, where a heckler egged deputy prime minister John Prescott, who retaliated with a "powerful left to the egg-thrower's jaw." Anne Billman, in a letter to the Daily Telegraph (May 19), was reminded of Sidney Paget's illustration for "The Solitary Cyclist" (the newspaper helpfully reprinted the artwork) and mentioned Holmes' "straight left against a slogging ruffian."
233. Scott Monty has launched a "Calender of Sherlockian Events" at a web-site at <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Sherlockian\_Events>, so that people can post (and read) information about up-coming events. You must register with Yahoo, and obtain a Yahoo ID, in order to access the calendar. Among the things you must tell Yahoo: your birthday, preferred language, ZIP code, gender, occupation, and industry. Yahoo will use the information "to customize the advertising and content you see, to fulfill your requests for certain products and services, and to contact you about specials and new products," according to their privacy policy, and you can opt out of the third category.
234. "Pipe and cigar smoking is salubrious," Marty Pulvers told a San Francisco Chronicle reporter. "It relaxes you. "It's healthful in the same way the ritual is in religion. It causes you to pause and reflect." But Pulvers, the owner of the tobacco shop Sherlock's Haven, is concerned about declining sales of cigars since California has banned smoking in bars and restaurants, and because many former customers are placing out-of-state orders on the Internet to avoid California's high taxes on tobacco, and he is hoping to increase sales of his shop's pipes, according to an article, kindly forwarded by Emory Lee, in the San Francisco Chronicle (July 1).
235. Further to the report (Apr 01 #2) about the continuing battle over Liberton Bank House (where Arthur Conan Doyle once lived as a child), planning officers of the Edinburgh city council have recommended rejection of a proposal by McDonald's to build a restaurant near the cottage, noting that the company had failed to consider restoration of the building. "We will be taking legal advice," a spokesman for McDonald's said on May 30, adding that "At this stage we are likely to look at an appeal by public inquiry."
236. Issue #43 of Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine offers a report (with photographs) on the Georgina Doyle's unveiling of the statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle at Crowborough in April; the third of four installments of David Stuart Davies' "Flickering Phantoms" (his discussion of the many film versions of "The Hound of the Baskervilles") and much more (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian). Annual subscriptions (six issues) cost £20.00 (in the U.K.)/£22.00 (continent)/$40.00 (elsewhere); Box 100, Chichester, West Sussex PO18 8HD, England <<http://pmh.uk.com/sherlock/sherlock.htm>>. Classic Specialties is their agent in the U.S. (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>, and credit-card orders are welcome at both addresses; back issues are available.
-
237. Jul 01 #2: The Practical, But Limited, Geologists, met for dinner at the University Club in Denver on June 6, during the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, to honor the world's first forensic geologist. Oklahoma state geologist Charles J. Mankin presided over the festivities, and continuing to insist that Sherlock Holmes had visited Oklahoma rather than New York (New York state geologist Robert H. Fakundiny was not on hand to present his traditional rebuttal). The society will meet next in Boston in November, and in Houston in March.
238. New York magazine offers a weekly two-page spread called "Gotham" which has a weekly quote about New York. On July 19 the quote was "The city of envy, office work, and hustle--Christopher Morley."
239. Reported: William F. Nolan's DOWN THE LONG NIGHT (Five Star, $21.95) is a collection of his short stories, including "Sungrab" (which was first published in 1980 in AFTER THE FALL, a paperback anthology edited by Robert Sheckley; Mars-based private eye Sam Space, aided by robots named Holmes and Watson, pursues a new manifestation of the Baskerville curse. Also: MURDER MOST POSTAL: HOMICIDAL TALES THAT DELIVER A MESSAGE, edited by Martin H. Greenberg (Nashville: Cumberland House, 2001; 307 pp., $14.95), includes August Derleth's "Solar Pons" pastiche "The Adventure of the Penny Magenta".
240. The Ritual is the semi-annual journal published by The Northern Musgraves; the spring issue has 68 pages of scholarship, news, and reviews, including Patrick Michael's interesting article on the early stage career of Charlie Chaplin, who went from appearing with H. A. Saintsbury in "Jim: The Romance of a Cockayne" and on tour in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes", to acting with Gillette himself in "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes" and "Sherlock Holmes". Information on membership in the society and on its publications is available from Anne Jordan, Fairbank, Beck Lane, Bingley, West Yorks. BD16 4DN, England <fairbank@btinternet.com>.
241. The New York-New Jersey "metro area" Sherlockian societies have issued a joint lapel pin, available for $9.00 postpaid from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720). The pin is 2" in diameter, and (for those who can't read the fine print), the societies are: The Mini-Tonga Society, The Three Garridebs of Westchester County, Watson's Tin Dispatchers of Staten Island, The Priory Scholars of New York, Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers of Cliffside Park, The Long Island Cave Dwellers, The Epilogues of Sherlock Holmes, and The Montague Street Lodgers of Brooklyn. And that's the Statue of Liberty inside the silhouette.
242. "Mystery!" has been one of the best of the series broadcast by PBS-TV for many years, funded by Mobil until last year, but WGBH-TV has announced that the series schedule has been trimmed: PBS-TV will show repeats at 10:00 pm on Thursdays from October through December 2001, when the series will shut down until it is revived with twelve weeks of new shows from July to September 2002, and again in 2003. But mystery fans who have access to cable can still see fine shows, including the "Nero Wolfe" series now airing on A&E; Maury Chaykin is excellent as Nero Wolfe, and Timothy Hutton even better as Archie Goodwin, and the production values are splendid.
243. Jul 01 #3: It has been three years since the last Sherlockian conference in Minneapolis, where Nils Nordberg presented a fine paper on "Sherlock Holmes in the Claws of Confidence Men; or, The Misadventures of a World Detective", noting that Holmes appeared in a long series of dime novels (well, 20-pfennige novels) published in Germany beginning in 1905, and in many other countries, and in a series of short Danish films. His paper is now in print as the lead article in the Oct. 2000 issue of Dime Novel Round-Up, available from its editor, J. Randolph Cox (Box 226, Dundas, MN 55019); $3.00 (or $15.00 a year for six issues).
244. Catherine Cooke reports that Jason Brown of Anyone Can Play Productions has dramatized Conan Doyle's short story "Lot 249" for production at the Portsmouth Arts Center from Oct. 31 to Nov. 3. The Centre is in Reginald Road, Southsea, Hants. PO4 9HN, England (44-23-9283-7373).
245. Reported: a mass paperback reprint of MIDNIGHT LOUIE'S PET DETECTIVES, edited by Carole Nelson Douglas (New York: Forge, 2000, 352 pp., $6.99); contents include her own story "A Baker Street Irregular" (in which Midnight Louie meets Irene Adler and solves a mystery for Sherlock Holmes). And a trade paperback reprint of Daniel Stashower's biography TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE in a paperback reprint (New York: Owl Books, 2001, 472 pp., $16.00); Dan also notes that a British trade paperback edition is now available (London: Penguin, 2001; 472 pp., £8.99).
246. Forecast by Bill Nadel (who contributed to the liner notes) in September, from Radio Spirits (Box 2141, Schiller Park, IL 60176): "The Best of Sherlock Holmes", a collection of 20 of Edith Meiser's radio shows from 1948 (starring John Stanley) on ten cassettes ($34.98) or ten CDs ($39.98). And "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes", a CD with two programs from Meiser's 1948 series ($4.98).
247. James Bernard died on July 12. He was a composer and screenwriter, and one of the very few composers to win an Academy Award for something other than music, for the screenplay of "Seven Days to Noon" (1950). He began working with Hammer Films in 1955, composing the music for "The

- Quatermass Experiment" and then scored most of their best films, including "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959). His most recent work was the score for Kevin Brownlow's television documentary "Universal Horror" (1998).
-
248. It was Scott Monty (naturally ) who spotted the Sherlockian content in Jim Meddick's comic strip "Monty" on June 19:
249. Jul 01 #4: It's always nice to find something old that's new, in this case Will Oursler's FAMILY STORY (1963), which is an interesting and well-written memoir of his family. His father was Fulton Oursler, who knew Conan Doyle and fooled him with a faked spirit photograph; Will notes that his father, when he was a young reporter for the Baltimore American, wrote a short piece that made a box on the front page: "An unknown admirer of the late Edgar Allan Poe, who is buried in Baltimore, left a rose today on his grave." The unknown admirer was in fact Fulton Oursler himself, who thus started a tradition that continues today. He also was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars, as was Will, who inherited his father's Investiture ("The Abbey Grange").
250. C. T. ("Jack") Thorne died on May 2. He was working in the Marylebone Borough Council's Reference Library with responsibility for local history in 1950, and was the first to suggest that the borough contribute a Sherlock Holmes exhibition to the Festival of Britain. He went on to mount the exhibition (Heather Owen notes in an obituary for Jack in the Sherlock Holmes Journal that his wife recalls that everything in the exhibition was of the correct period, "including the dust, which Jack collected from the shelves of the British Museum basement." He then traveled with the exhibition to New York in 1952, and went on to recreate the sitting-room at The Sherlock Holmes in London and at the Chateau de Lucens in Switzerland.
251. Paul Brundage reports that subscribers to America Online can download "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in an E-Book format readable on a personal data assistant (PDA).
252. Further to the mention (Jun 01 #5) of a new Penguin Classics edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, Nicholas Utechin reports that there's more than one volume: A STUDY IN SCARLET (introduced by Iain Sinclair), THE VALLEY OF FEAR AND SELECTED CASES (introduced by Charles Palliser), THE SIGN OF FOUR (introduced by Peter Ackroyd), THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (introduced by Christopher Frayling), THE ADVENTURES AND THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (introduced by Iain Pears), and THE LOST WORLD AND OTHER THRILLING TALES (introduced by Philip Gooden).
253. Further to the item (Jun 01 #3) about the glassed bookcase in the British Museum's renovated Reading Room, containing books by Conan Doyle, a photograph reveals that the Canon is represented by seven of the nine volumes of the uniform set published by the Book-of-the-Month Club in 1994. One hopes that someone might be inspired to lead a campaign to raise the funds needed to donate to the British Museum a complete set of the Sherlock Holmes stories issued by a British publisher.
254. The summer 2001 issue of the Tonga Times honors Gertrude Mahoney (one of the founders of The Mini-Tonga Scion Society), who recently celebrated her 95th birthday and the birth of her newest great-grandchild. The newsletter also has detailed instructions on how to make a miniature tantalus, photographs and news from the world of Sherlockian miniatures, and suitable-for-framing miniature portraits of Queen Victoria. The cost of membership is $10.00 a year (or $11.00 to Canada or $13.00 elsewhere) from Trish and Jay Pearlman (1656 East 19th Street #2-E, Brooklyn, NY 11229, and they have a web-site at <<http://hometown.aol.com/minitongasociety/mini1.htm>>.
255. Jul 01 #5: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made a public declaration of his belief in spiritualism in an article published in 1916, and the next year in a speech, and in much more detail in 1918 in his book THE NEW REVELATION; the book is now available in a new edition (Garden City: Square One Publishers, 2001; 110 pp., $12.95), with an introduction and afterword by George J. Lankevich, who discusses Conan Doyle's life and career, and his relationship with Harry Houdini.
256. Dick Riley and Pam McAllister's THE BEDSIDE, BATHTUB, AND ARMCHAIR COMPANION TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (1999) now has a Japanese translation (Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 2000; 372 pp., ¥1,800) by Masamichi Higurashi, who also has provided additional photographs, a chronology and bibliography, and other material.
257. The Lynn Peavey Co. markets to law-enforcement professionals, and in the Jan.-Feb. of their monthly newsletter The Daily Hound notes that their Zipr-Weld Evidence Tape was used to seal the boxes of ballots sent off to be recounted in Florida. Their company mascot, Big Dog, also exists in larger-than-life inflatable plastic, and could be seen at this year's meeting of the American Academy of Forensic Sciences in Seattle. Box 14100, Lenexa, KS 66285 (800-255-6499) <<http://www.lynnpeavey.com>>.
258. An addition to the growing list of Investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have acted in films: Mary Ellen Rich, who appeared an extra in "The Group" (1966). And Al Rosenblatt reports that when "Nobody's Fool" (1994) was being filmed in Poughkeepsie, he advised the crew on how to set up a courtroom scene (although he didn't receive formal credit as a technical advisor); they did, however, need a proper judicial robe for the scene, and used his (Al regrets that there is no Oscar for best supporting robe).
259. Due in October: MURDER IN BAKER STREET: NEW TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon Lellenberg, and Daniel Stashower (New York: Carroll & Graf, 2001; 277 pp., $25.00; it's an anthology of new stories by fine writers such as Loren Estleman, L. B. Greenwood, Edward D. Hoch, Gillian Linscott, Stuart Kaminsky, Anne Perry, and Carolyn Wheat, plus a review of "100 Years of Sherlock Holmes" by Lloyd Rose, and a discussion of Conan Doyle's contributions to the OXFORD ENGLISH DICTIONARY by Jon Lellenberg.
260. The Ben Silver Collection continues to offer a wide variety of regimental, club, corps, and university neckties in its mail-order catalog, many having Sherlockian and Doylean associations; 149 King Street, Charleston, SC 29401 (800-221-4671) <<http://www.bensilver.com>>.
261. Gordon B. Shriver's "Boris Karloff: The Man Remembered" is a carefully-researched biography of a fine actor whose credits included his appearance as Mr. Mycroft in Alvin Sapinsky's adaptation H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY ("The Sting of Death" was broadcast on ABC-TV's "The Elgin Hour" in 1955, and won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for the best television program of the year). It's featured in the latest issue (#34) of the quarterly Cult Movies ($4.95, or $30.00 for six issues); 6201 Sunset Boulevard #152, Hollywood, CA 90028 <<http://www.cult-movies.com>>.

262. Jul 01 #6: Malice Domestic XIII (in Washington on May 4-6, with Rex Stout as ghost of honor, was (according to accounts from all quarters received) enjoyable, despite the lack of any specifically Sherlockian sessions. Next year's convention will be held on May 3-5 at the Crystal Gateway Marriott in Arlington, Va., with Edward Marston as guest of honor, and G. K. Chesterton as ghost of honor. Full details are available from Malice Domestic (Box 31137, Bethesda, MD 20804) <<http://www.malicedomestic.org>>.
263. And there's a registration cap of 1,500 at Bouchercon 2001 ("A Capital Mystery") on Nov. 1-4 at the Hyatt Regency Crystal City, with Sue Grafton as American guest of honor and Peter Lovesey as international guest of honor, and there will be a Sherlockian panel ("Sherlock and His Creator" is the working title) on Thursday afternoon; registration closes on Aug. 15 (Box 11700, Washington, DC 20008 <<http://www.bouchercon2001.com>>.
264. "The Many Places of Sherlock Holmes" is the theme of Bill Dorn's Sherlock Holmes Calendar for 2002, which offers photographs of Sherlockian locales, plus dates for 55 of the cases, founding dates for many Sherlockian societies, and other dates of significance in the Sherlockian world, The calendar costs $14.45 postpaid ($15.45 to Canada, $16.45 elsewhere), and checks can be sent to William S. Dorn, 2045 South Monroe Street, Denver, CO 80210 <<http://www.TheSherlockStore.com>>.

265. THE POCKET ESSENTIAL SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Mark Campbell (Harpenden: Pocket Essentials, 2001; 95 pp., £3.99), provides an interesting introduction to the world of Sherlock Holmes for newcomers (a "modern equivalent of the old Baedeker Guide," Richard Lancelyn Green suggests in his introduction), with discussion of each of the 60 stories, an annotated list of actors who have played Holmes, and other reference material; the publisher's web-site is at <<http://www.pocketessentials.com>>, and the American distributor is Trafalgar Square Publishing, Box 257, Howe Hill Road, North Pomfret, VT 05053, Campbell reports that a receptionist at Abbey House recently said that mail to Sherlock Holmes at 221B Baker Street is now being sent to the Sherlock Holmes Museum, but the receptionist was wrong: Gug Kyriacou still is Sherlock Holmes' secretary at Abbey House.
266. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: HUNTING THE DARTMOOR LEGEND, by Philip Weller (Tiverton: Devon Books, 2001; 243 pp., £24.95), offers the text of the story from its first appearance in The Strand Magazine, and a great deal of careful and well-written scholarship: annotations to the text; discussion of the legends that echo in the story, and how it came to be written; examination of the locations, real and invented, with contemporary black-and-white photographs and modern full-color photographs; a review of the many film and television versions of the story; and much more. Recommended. The publisher is at Halsgrove House, Lower Moor Way, Tiverton, DE EX16 6SS, England <<http://www.halsgrove.com>>. The book also is available from Classic Specialties (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) (toll-free 877-233-3823) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>; $45.15 postpaid to U.S. readers of this newsletter (the magic word is "Scuttlebutt") and the postpaid cost varies to other countries.

267. Aug 01 #1: Poul Anderson ("The Dreadful Abernethy Business") died on July 31. He was a past president of the Science Fiction and Fantasy Writers of America, and was named a grand master of the organization in 1977, and over the years he won all the major awards in the genre. Poul's first story was published in 1947, and in 1952 he met (and in 1953 married) Karen Kruse, who had earlier founded The Red Circle of Washington. In an essay about his work he once wrote that "There is considerable overlap between followers of science fiction and of the great detective," and he was one of the best examples: his short story "The Adventure of the Misplaced Hound" (written with Gordon R. Dickson) was published in 1953, and "The Martian Crown Jewels" in 1958, and there are many Canonical allusions in other stories and novels. Poul also wrote for Sherlockian publications, and he was twice a winner of The Baker Street Irregulars' Morley-Montgomery Award (recognizing the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal), for work that appeared in 1958 and 1968. He received his Investiture from the BSI in 1960.
268. Poul and Karen Anderson were in Washington to attend a World Science-Fiction Convention in 1974, and were guests of honor at a Red Circle cocktail party in their honor; Gordon R. Dickson also was at the party, as was their creation Sherlock Hoka (appropriately dressed Barry Parker, a prize-winner in the convention's costume competition). Poul is on the right.
269. It has been many years since John Bennett Shaw wondered just how obscene the Canon might be, and revealed the results of his research at an annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars, and in an article "To Shelve or to Censor" that appeared in Shades of Sherlock in 1971. The electronically-enabled can find the results of somewhat similar research at a web-site at <<http://www.geocities.com/TelevisionCity/8827/vict.html>> (it's called "The Sexiest Lines in Sherlockian Canon").
270. Sherlockians in or visiting Arizona might wish to stop by the Dam Bar and Grille in Page. According to a photograph in the Arizona Republic (Dec. 14), Vern Sherlock Holmes is the manager of the bar.
271. More news about Bouchercon 2001, in Washington on Nov. 1-4: nominations for the Anthony Awards (voted on by fans) include Daniel Stashower for his Houdini mystery novel THE FLOATING LADY (for best paperback original); winners will be chosen by those attending the convention. Sorry: registration for Bouchercon 2001 closed on Aug. 15.
272. OTHERWERE: STORIES OF TRANSFORMATION, edited by Laura Anne Gilman and Keith R. A. DeCandido (New York: Ace Books, 1996; 260 pp., $5.99), is an anthology of new stories that deal with shape-shifting into something other than a werewolf; Esther M. Friesner's contribution is "The Strange Case of Ludwig the Unspeakable", and it's an amusing parody involving a consulting detective and his narrator friend, both unnamed but easily recognized (don't neglect the brief biography of the author that precedes the story). The book is out-of-print, but worth looking for.
273. Aug 01 #2: Les Evades de Dartmoor publish an annual with the title Le Registre d'Ecrou (three issues are available at 45 fr each), and they have reprinted Flavien d'Hoursac's 1927 book LA VERITE SUR CONAN DOYLE (60 fr to members, 70 fr to non-members); the annual cost of membership is 132.20 fr (you must certify that you're "un dangereux malfaiteur"). Additional information is available from Sebastien Canevet (37 rue du Commerce, 37160 Descartes, France) <<http://www.baker-street.org>>.
274. A new CD discovered by John Baesch: PLAY THE GAME: VICTORIAN AND EDWARDIAN SPORTING SONGS (JUSCD001), issued by Just Accord Music (Box 224, Tadworth, Surrey KT20 5YJ, England) <<http://www.justaccordmusic.com>>; £9.99 (postpaid in the United Kingdom, £10.99 to Europe, £11.49 elsewhere). One of the 17 songs on the CD is Conan Doyle's "A Hunting Morning" (1898), set to music by Alfred J. Silver in 1908.
275. Canadian Holmes, published quarterly by The Bootmakers of Toronto, always is interesting, and the summer issue has an amusing exchange of correspondence about the television mini-series "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes", between Michael Doyle and Kathy Hughes (who writes the scripts for Diana Rigg's introductions broadcast on "Mystery!"). The focus of the exchange is on whether or not Dr. Joe Bell was pleased, when he was credited as the real Sherlock Holmes, but Hughes also notes that introductions for the next four "Murder Rooms" shows have been taped, and that the stories are set in Southsea, and that one of them features Dr. Rutherford, the prototype for Professor Challenger. Annual subscriptions cost $20.00 a year; checks payable to the society can be sent to Derek Thorpe (5 Brownlea Avenue, Toronto, ON M9P 2R5, Canada).
276. Emory Lee spotted promotion for THE HISTORY OF MYSTERY, by Max Allan Collins, due from Collectors Press in October; 196 pp., 375 full-color images, $45.00. If you can't find it in local bookstores, the publisher is at Box 230986, Portland, OR 97281 (800-423-1848) <www.collectorspress.com>. And yes, Sherlock Holmes is part of the history of mystery.
277. The 2000 version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" starring Jason London and Emma Campbell is available on videocassette from Critics' Choice Video (Box 749, Itasca, IL 60143) (800-367-7765) <<http://www.ccvideo.com>>, discounted at $13.69. And yes, those are the only stars named in the blurb. Jason London (Sir Henry Baskerville) and Emma Campbell (Beryl) were in the television film that starred Matt Frewer as Holmes.
278. There are very few videocassettes of productions of plays by William Gillette: Frank Langella's version of "Sherlock Holmes" was broadcast by HBO in 1981 and taped off-the-air by those who had VCRs, but it's not available on a commercial cassette. Gillette wrote many other plays, but they're seldom produced; one exception is his melodrama "Secret Service" was broadcast by PBS-TV on "Great Performances" in 1977, taped by WNET-TV (New York) from a production at the Phoenix Theatre in New York, and it was an excellent program. It was nice indeed to learn from Karen Ellery that the program now is available on videocassette from the Broadway Theatre Archive (Box 2284, South Burlington, VT 05407) (800-422-2827) <www.broadwayarchive.com> for $34.90 postpaid. The stars of the production are better known today than they were in 1977: Meryl Streep, John Lithgow, and Mary Beth Hurt.
279. Aug 01 #3: Norm Davis reports that his AMUSING, HOLMES! still is available ($20.00 postpaid, signed on request); his address is 168 Grimes Mill Road, Caribou, ME 04736. Some years ago (Jan 93 #4) I reported that: AMUSING, HOLMES! is a collection of Sherlockian humor perpetrated by

- Norman M. Davis, and unfortunately there are only 123 pages in the book. One can judge how good it is by the fact that John Bennett Shaw, in his Foreword, readily admits that he has read the book twice (and anyone who has visited John's library knows that he doesn't have time to read many books more than once). Or you can try to read aloud "Introducing Sherlock Holmes?" without laughing. Recommended.
280. One more to add to the list of Investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have acted in films: Jerry Margolin, who appeared as an extra in the HBO television film "The Last Innocent Man" (1987).
281. THE PRIORY SCHOOL TYRE DIRECTIONAL GUIDE is a 12-page booklet now available from Len Haffenden; it's an illustrated version of the winning side of the debate at a meeting of The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia in April 1992 on whether Holmes could determine the direction a bicycle had traveled (the vote was "yes"). Len's address is 1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada; the booklet costs CA$5.00 to Canada, US$5.00 elsewhere.
282. Tyke Niver reports a new set of two mini bean bags (Inspector Mickey wearing deerstalker and inverness, and Super Sleuth Goofy holding a magnifying glass) in the latest Disney catalog (Box 29144, Shawnee Mission, KS 66201 (800-237-5751) <<http://www.disneystore.com>>; $14.00 (item 23155-F31).
283. Penelope Fitzgerald's THE KNOX BROTHERS (1977) was reprinted last year (Sep 00 #2), and it has now been reissued in paperback (Washington: Counterpoint Press, 2001; 304 pp., $16.00); she was the daughter and niece of two greats in the Sherlockian world: her father was E. V. Knox, who used the pen-name "Evøe" when he edited Punch in the years when it published much excellent Sherlockian material, and one of her uncles was Ronald Knox, who invented the grand game so many Sherlockians play (her other uncles were Dillwyn, a classical scholar and a noted code-breaker in both World Wars, and Wilfred, an Anglo-Catholic priest and teacher).
284. Audio Book Contractors (Box 40115, Washington, DC 20016) offers readings of a long list of authors, including Arthur Conan Doyle. Their latest titles are THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR and THE VALLEY OF FEAR, each on four cassettes ($10.95 30-day rental, $29.95 purchase).
285. Maxine Reneker discovered "The Invisible Library", a web-site maintained by Brian Quinette, who has catalogued more than a thousand books that can be found only in other books. It's at <<http://www.invisiblelibrary.com>>, and it includes books found in the Canon and in THE LOST WORLD.
286. John Baesch has kindly forwarded an article from the Daily Telegraph (Aug. 1) about Japan's launch of personalized postage stamps, which allow you to have your own photograph printed on tabs attached to the stamps. As noted earlier (May 00 #1), P-stamps were introduced by Australia in 1999; Canada and Great Britain joined the movement last year. The world of Sherlockians will, one expects, eventually produce a Sherlockian personalized stamp.
287. Aug 01 #4: This year's "A Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" (sponsored by the Sherlockian societies in Baltimore) will be held at the Enoch Press Free Library on Oct. 6, honoring the centennial of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (starting with morning coffee in the Edgar Allan Poe Room at 10:00, and ending at 1:00). There's no charge for the festivities, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore.
288. Further to the report (Jan 01 #8) of Michael Kurland's third Moriarty pastiche THE GREAT GAME (now out from St. Martin's Press at $23.95), the trade paperback THE INFERNAL DEVICE AND OTHERS (from St. Martin's at $18.95) offers not only the first two novels THE INFERNAL DEVICE and DEATH BY GASLIGHT but also "The Paradol Paradox" (a new Moriarty short story).
289. Carole Nelson Douglas' CHAPEL NOIR: AN IRENE ADLER NOVEL (New York: Forge, 2001; 480 pp., $25.95), continues her series of mysteries about Irene Adler and Penelope Huxleigh and Sherlock Holmes, with plenty of suspense and derring-do, and some interesting surprises and supporting characters; it's a much darker story than the first four novels in the series, and it's nice to know that a sixth Irene Adler mystery (CASTLE ROUGE) is due next year.
290. Robert Kraus died on Aug. 7. He wrote, illustrated, and edited more than 100 children's books, including (with his son Bruce) THE DETECTIVE OF LONDON (1978), and he was a prolific cover artist and cartoonist for The New Yorker. This cartoon ran in the magazine on Mar. 19, 1969, with the caption "Don't 'Elementary, my dear Watson,' me, McCloskey!"
291. John Baesch has forwarded British newspaper reports on the discovery of the wreck of the Mary Celeste, which sailed from New York for Europe on Nov. 17, 1872, and 17 days later was found adrift off the Azores with no one aboard, creating a still-unsolved mystery of the sea (Arthur Conan Doyle offered his own solution in "J. Habakuk Jephson's Statement"). The ship continued in service under other owners until 1884, when it was used in an insurance scam, scuttled in the Caribbean in hopes of collecting on highly-insured but non-existent cargo; the scheme failed when the ship was caught on a coral reef rather than sinking in deep water. American author Clive Cussler and a team of shipwreck experts held a press conference this month to announce that they located the wreck of the Mary Celeste, on Rochelois Reef off Haiti.
292. You can celebrate "La maledizione dei Baskervilles" (sponsored by Uno Studio in Holmes) in Firenze on Mar. 22-24, 2002. For more information, contact Gianluca Salvatori, P.O. Box 140, 55042 Forte dei Marmi (LU), Italy <mycroft@versilia.toscana.it>.
293. "Sherlock Holmes and the Jackson Street Terror" is the mystery that Holmes and Watson and participants in a "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" will attempt to solve this year, on Nov. 2-4 in Cape May. The weekend includes a tour of the town's Victorian homes, and additional information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts, Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204 (609-884-5404 ext 185) (800-275-4278 ext 185) <<http://www.capemaymac.org>>.
-
294. Aug 01 #5: Ian Ousby died on Aug. 6. He was an expert in European history, and a literary scholar, and he taught English in England and the United States in the 1960s and 1970s; according to his obituary in the Daily Telegraph, Ousby said that it was in America that he decided to abandon teaching, because his students "appeared to be better-dressed and to have more money than I did." His first book was BLOODHOUNDS OF HEAVEN: THE DETECTIVE IN ENGLISH FICTION FROM GODWIN TO DOYLE (1976), and he went on to edit reference standards such as THE CAMBRIDGE GUIDE TO LITERATURE IN ENGLISH (1988) and THE CAMBRIDGE GUIDE TO FICTION IN ENGLISH (1998).
295. Scott Monty has reported that The Baker Street Journal now has a web-site, at <<http://www.bakerstreetjournal.com>>, where the electronically-enabled can see some of the BSI's contents, subscribe, and order back issues and the CD-ROM disk with all issues through the end of 2000.
296. Jill Castoral advertised "Sherlock Fox" in Miniature Collector (Feb. 2001); he's a 6.25" posable doll available painted and dressed by the artist ($175.00), or as a do-it-yourself kit ($48.00 painted or $28.00 unpainted (add $5.00 for a set of patterns for the clothing). And she's at work on a Watson raccoon. Her address is 6320 Uplands Boulevard, Sarasota, FL 34243 (914-355-3525) <<http://www.jillcastoral.com>>.
297. Joe Eckrich reports that The Parallelogram (published by The Parallel Case of St. Louis) will have a special supplement celebrating the centennial of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES; 50 pages of articles and other material, almost all of the contents in print for the first time, available for $10.00 postpaid (Joseph J. Eckrich, 914 Oakmoor Drive, Fenton, MO 63026).
298. Further to the item (Jul 01 #4) on new Penguin Classics editions of Conan Doyle's books, Laurie R. King's appreciative essay about him ("Art in the Blood?") can be read at their web-site at <<http://www.penguinclassics.com>>.

299. Don Hobbs has reported William Herbert "Skip" Boyer's article "The Masonic Game Is Afoot: Was Sherlock Holmes a Mason?" in the Aug. 2001 issue of The Scottish Rite Journal; the issue also has an article about Harry Houdini as a Mason. You can read the articles at <<http://www.srmason-sj.org>>; copies of the issue on paper cost $1.00 postpaid (1733 16th Street NW, Washington, DC 20009).
300. The Passengers' Log is published by The Sydney Passengers, and the current issue (60 pages) offers news, reviews, and scholarship from Australia, including an interesting article by Arthur Williams about actor H. G. Stoker, who played Watson with Eille Norwood as Holmes in the play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1923); Stoker was Australian, and a Navy man, commanding (at age 31) the first submarine to pass through the Dardanelles and attack the Turkish battleships that had been shelling Allied troops at Gallipoli. After the war ended he was offered command of a cruiser, but instead decided to pursue an acting career. And Phil Cornell offers a new (and amusing) cartoon pun on the famous "elementary" phrase. Information on membership and subscriptions is available from Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly NSW 2095, Australia) <<http://www.ozemail.com.au/~bbarnes/sp.htm>>.
301. Aug 01 #6: E. T. Hall died on Aug. 11. He was an Oxford University professor who provided the scientific evidence that proved that Piltdown Man was a hoax; after later archaeological discoveries cast doubt on the fossil discovered in Sussex in 1912, Hall used x-ray fluorescence in 1953 to show that the bones had been stained with potassium dichromate, and found iron filings that indicated that orangutan teeth had been altered to make them look human. His scientific work didn't identify the culprit in the hoax, but many people have been accused since then, including (in 1983) Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. It wasn't until 1996 that real evidence turned up (May 96 #6), suggesting that the hoaxer was Martin A. C. Hinton, a curator at the Natural History Museum in London.
302. Venezuelan president Hugo Chavez gave Fidel Castro a 75th-birthday present on Aug. 12: a visit to "The Lost World" in Canaima National Park, which has the world's tallest waterfall (Angel Falls) as well as jungle-draped mesas that may have served as the inspiration for Conan Doyle's novel.
303. Further to the review (Jul 01 #6) of Philip Weller's THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: HUNTING THE DARTMOOR LEGEND, the book launch coincided with an invasion of Dartmoor by The Baskerville Hounds: 55 enthusiasts in full costume, attending from Britain, Europe, North America, and Japan, visited all 120 places on Dartmoor connected to the story, and of course there was some picturesque coverage in the local press.
304. And while on the subject of costume, it was "optional but strongly encouraged" for The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's "Golden Jubilee Baltic Cruise" which (with more than 80 Sherlockians aboard the MV Princess Danae) departed Harwich on Aug. 25 for Oslo, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Tallinn, St. Petersburg, Helsinki, and Kiel, returning (if all goes well) to Harwich on Sept. 7. There have been no press reports of shipwreck or piracy, and it would appear that the ship lacks a connection to the Internet, since I've not seen any messages posted from voyagers to Sherlockian electronic mailing lists. Of course it's also possible that there's no time for e-mail, what with all the wining, dining, lectures, films, and excursions.
305. HOLMES OF THE MOVIES: THE SCREEN CAREER OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1976) was David Stuart Davies' first Sherlockian filmography; he has pursued Holmes in the cinema and on television ever since, and the results of that research are now available in his STARRING SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: Titan Books, 2001; 191 pp., £29.99). The coverage runs from the earliest silent films to the latest television films starring Matt Frewer, and the discussion of films and programs, and actors and directors and producers, is both interesting and perceptive; the illustrations are just as important, and the book is full of them, many in full color and some of them quite hard to find (you will be able to see Jackie Coogan towering over Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in Hollywood in 1923) (well, Coogan is standing on a table). There's an extra benefit for those who can't decide between Basil Rathbone and Jeremy Brett as the ideal Holmes: the publisher has provided a "Janus" dust jacket, and you can decide for yourself which actor belongs on the front of the book.

306. Sep 01 #1: I'm happy to report that all of the Sherlockians in New York and Washington seem to have avoided harm during the tragedy on Sept. 11 (a few, it should be noted, by only narrow margins). And we are grateful for the messages of concern and support from our friends elsewhere in the United States, and in other countries. People have asked how they can help: those who can donate whole blood or platelets can contact the American Red Cross (800-448-3543). For those who would like to donate money, two of the better organizations are the American Red Cross National Disaster Relief Fund (Box 97089, Washington, DC 20090) (800-435-7669) <<http://www.redcross.org>> and the United Way's September 11th Fund (95 M Street SW, Washington, DC 20024 (800-710-8002) <<http://www.unitedwayna.org>>.
307. "The World of Sherlock Holmes: Volume I: Lifestyles" is a new CD-ROM disk that will run on both Windows and Mackintosh platforms; it offers audio and video, and maps of London, Sherlock Holmes' horoscope, and a reference section and you can tour Holmes' sitting room and bedroom. The disk's available from The World of Sherlock Holmes, 7 Candover Street, London W1W 7DN, England <<http://www.worldofholmes.com>>, and it costs £29.00 (including value-added tax in the U.K.) or £24.68 (without VAT) plus shipping (£2.00 to the U.K., £2.75 to Europe, £3.50 elsewhere). Also from Classic Specialties for $45.00 postpaid (to U.S. addresses) (the price is higher to foreign addresses) if you mention the magic word ("Scuttlebutt"); credit-card orders welcome (Box 19058, Cincinnati, OH 45219) <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.com>>.
308. Classic Specialties also offers their new fall mail-order catalog, with a fine selection of Sherlockian books, audiocassettes, videocassettes, calendars, prints, magazines, deerstalkers, and a new embroidered sweatshirt.
309. Virgin Books celebrated Spike Milligan's 80th birthday with a special edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES ACCORDING TO SPIKE MILLIGAN (May 98 #2), and the book has been reissued (£5.99). Milligan has some familiarity with the story: he played a Policeman in the Peter Cook/Dudley Moore film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978); he also played Sherlock Holmes in a skit broadcast in the BBC-TV "Q" series.
310. Barry Day's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE APOCALYPSE MURDERS (Palm Beach: Second Opinion, 2001; 191 pp., $11.00) is the fourth in his series of pastiches; Holmes (and Watson and Mycroft and Irene) are involved in a battle against a serial killer who intends to destroy London.
311. Jeremy Brett toured the United States in 1991, promoting Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" television series, and he was interviewed by Robert Aubry Davis for the "Desert Island Discs" program broadcast by WETA-FM (Washington). And Severine Rubin reports that The Jeremy Brett Society of France has published A THRILLING TIME: AN INTERVIEW WITH JEREMY BRETT, an 80-page booklet that has transcripts of the interview (in French and English), photographs, notes, and a CD with the program itself. Postpaid costs are fr 225/$31.23 (Europe) or fr 240/$33.32 (U.S. and Canada) or fr 260/$36.09 (elsewhere); checks welcome, but please add fr 23/$3.19 for bank charges. Payment can be sent to the society (Residence le Clos de l'Arc, entree 5, Avenue Gaston Berger, 13090 Aix-en-Provence, France).

312. Sep 01 #2: Reported by Janice L. Weiner in The Police Gazette (the newsletter of the Scotland Yarders): a Chicago Tribune (Aug. 12) review of Al Sarrantonio's WEST TEXAS (Lancaster: Stealth Press, 2001; 150 pp., $26.95); the novel's a western, and a mystery, and interesting: Thomas Mullin is a black Civil War veteran, who's also an avid reader of the Sherlock Holmes stories (copies of The Strand Magazine mailed to him from New York), sent onto the high plains to find a senator's missing son, and Mullin has learned from what he has read. The book's a reprint (the first edition was published in 1990), and the Stealth Press address is 336 College Avenue, (Lancaster, PA 17603 (800-806-1660) <<http://www.stealthpress.com>>; shipping is free if you order from their web-site.

313. An addition to the growing list of Investitured members of The Baker Street Irregulars who have acted in films: Jean Upton, who provided voices ("airport announcer" and "obnoxious child on airplane" and others) for "Martha, Meet Frank, Daniel and Laurence" (1998).
314. Muse Entertainment's third television film starring Matt Frewer as Sherlock Holmes and Kenneth Welsh as Dr. Watson will air on the Hallmark Channel on Oct. 19 (repeating on Oct. 21 and 25); "Sherlock Holmes in 'The Royal Scandal'" combines "A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Bruce-Partington Plans".
315. The latest stamp in our "Legends of Hollywood" series honors Lucille Ball, who starred in the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer film "Best Foot Forward" (1943), and (as noted by Ted Schulz) had a line of Sherlockian dialogue: Tommy Dix (playing Winssocki Military Academy cadet Bud Hooper) says, "But I have the whole thing solved." To which Lucille Ball (as herself) replies, "Keep on solving, Sherlock."
316. M. C. Black reports that he has organized first-Friday-of-the-month "club nights" for The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, on Oct. 5, Nov. 2, and Dec. 7, at the New Commonwealth Club at 18 Northumberland Avenue (between Trafalgar Square and the Embankment underground station); members, prospective members, visitors, and friends are welcome: just show up at any time between 6:00 and 9:00 pm. There's no charge except for drinks or food purchased from the bar. There's no formal agenda, and if the gatherings attract a good turn-out, there will be more of them.
317. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has an extensive sales list, offering interesting items such as THE VICTORIAN CRICKET MATCH (a souvenir of their cricket match against the Wodehouse Society in June) (£3.00 postpaid to the U.K./£3.50 to Europe/$6.50 to the U.S./£4.50 elsewhere); HELPING OUT HOPELESS HOPKINS (a 36-page handbook for their summer tour of the locations of "The Golden Pince-Nez", "Black Peter", and "The Abbey Grange") (£7.00/£8.00/$14.50/£9.00); its 50th-anniversary medal (golden color with blue ribbon) (£19.50/£20.00/$29.50/£21.00); a "Swiss Navy" knife (in royal blue, with the Society logo inlaid in white metal) (same prices); a ladies' "Swiss Army" knife (in red, with the logo and slip case) (£10.50/£11.00/$16.00/£12.00); and a woollen scarf (60" long and 9" wide) in navy blue with their logo embroidered in silver at each end (£16.95/£17.95/$29.50/£18.50). Request the list from Lynne Godden at Apple Tree Cottage, Smarden, Ashford, Kent TN27 8QE, England; their web-site URL is <<http://www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>>.

318. Sep 01 #3: "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes: The Patient's Eyes" aired on BBC-1 on Sept. 4, starring Ian Richardson as Dr. Joe Bell and Charles Edwards (instead of Robin Laing) as Arthur Conan Doyle; the 90-minute program is set in Southsea, five years after the opening show that was broadcast in 2000, it's the first of four scheduled by the BBC. The opening show aired in the U.S. on BBC America two months after it aired in the U.K., so cable viewers can watch for it; in the meantime, the series has a web-site at <<http://www.murder-rooms.com>>.
319. "Murder Rooms" faced strong competition in its time slot: "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?" with a special edition featuring "Coronation Street" cast members had 10.6 million viewers and a 47% audience share; "Murder Rooms" had only 4.9 million viewers and a 22% audience share, according to a report in The Guardian.
320. The second program ("The Photographer's Chair") aired on Sept. 18, and the third program ("The Kingdom of Bones") aired on Sept. 25. The fourth (and last) program ("The White Knight Stratagem") is scheduled to air on Oct. 2.
321. Donald Thomas' THE SECRET CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was published in Britain in 1997, and in the United States in 1998, and reissued as a trade paperback (New York: Carroll & Graf, 1999; 343 pp., $12.95); it's a collection of seven short stories that involve Holmes and Watson in mysteries in London, Dublin, Paris, and Yokohama. And (reported) his SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RUNNING NOOSE (London: Macmillan, 2001; 339 pp., £16.99) is a new collection of short stories.
322. Reported: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LIMEHOUSE HORROR, by Philip Pullman (London: Nelson Thomas, 1999; 99 pp., £5.50); a short pastiche for children.
323. Mona Morstein spotted the "Secret Hideaways" item in the October issue of Realm, about The Island at Newquay in Cornwall: it's a five-bedroom house that stands on a 70-foot-high slab of rock, accessible via its own suspension footbridge from the adjacent clifftop (or you can climb 70 feet from the beach at low tide). According to Realm, "The house's inspiring views and unusual position appealed to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who stayed there frequently when the house belonged to his friend, Sir Oliver Joseph Lodge, inventor of the spark-plug." And it's for sale, offered for £500,000 by Lillcrap Chilcott (The Old Chapel, Greenbottom, Truro, Cornwall TR4 8QP, England <<http://www.waterfrontandcountryhomes.com>>).
324. Sep 01 #4: Sherlockian philatelists (and philatelic Sherlockians) can request a copy of Bruce Holmes' sales list, which includes photocopy studies of postage stamps showing Sherlockian saints and dogs, actual "CPR" and "VR" perfins, and other interesting material; his address is 3170 Dutch Village Road #7, Halifax, NS B3L 4G1, Canada <az734@chebucto.ns.ca>.
325. That's the dress that Ida Lupino wore (as Ann Brandon) in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939); it's "designed by Gwen Wakeling, light blue floral bouquet gown with dark blue velvet pleated trim (top has been altered)". It was offered at auction at eBay in January with a $2,000 minimum, and didn't sell, and again in August with a $750 minimum (as noted by Paul Singleton) and again didn't sell. If you're interested, the owner is Profiles in History (345 Maple Drive #212, Beverly Hill, CA 90210) (800-942-8856) <<http://www.profilesinhistory.com>>.
326. Doug Wrigglesworth discovered a Canadian radio dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles", dramatized by Marian Waldman and broadcast by the CBC on "Adventure Theatre" in 1968, with Henry Comor (Sherlock Holmes) and Gerard Parkes (Dr. Watson); it's nicely done indeed, and offered on two one-hour cassettes for $23.99 or CA$26.99 postpaid by Scenario Productions (831 Glencairn Avenue #276, Toronto, ON M6B 2A4, Canada) (877-625-5379) <<http://www.scenarioproductions.com>>. Scenario also offers (at the same prices) "Mystery Theatre Vol. 1" with four 30-minute programs aired by the CBC in 1966 and 1967; the stories are "The Noble Bachelor" (with Robert Clothier as Holmes and Roy Brinson as Watson), Dorothy Davies' "Sight Unseen", Alan King's "The Kitchen Table", and Edgar Allan Poe's "The Tell-tale Heart" (all nicely done as well).
327. Reported: THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (VOLUME 2) from MPI Home Video ($14.98) with "The Crooked Man" and "The Speckled Band"; if you can't find it locally, MPI is at (800-777-2223) <<http://www.mpimedia.com/sherlock>>. The next DVD (with "The Blue Carbuncle" and "The Copper Beeches") is scheduled for Nov. 27 ($14.98).
328. Tony Earnshaw's AN ACTOR, AND A RARE ONE: PETER CUSHING AS SHERLOCK HOLMES (Lanham: Scarecrow Press, 2001; 146 pp. $26.50) is a splendid addition to Scarecrow's "Filmmakers Series"; Earnshaw has long been an admirer of Cushing's work, and has interviewed many people who worked with Cushing in his Sherlockian (and Doylean) films, television shows, and tape recordings, and the book is full of interesting comments and new information. And yes, he did make tape recordings: 13 one-hour readings of the stories in THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, for the Royal National Institute for the Blind in 1971 (not for sale, and loaned only to the visually handicapped). Certainly we would love to hear the radio series that the BBC offered Basil Rathbone in 1967, and to see the new film of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that Cushing was considering at the end of the 1970s with the Hound created by stopmotion expert Ray Harryhausen (who made some brief test footage), and Cushing in a guest role he was offered in Granada's "The Last Vampyre" (a broken hip prevented him from traveling to Manchester). Order from Scarecrow at Box 191, Blue Ridge Summit, PA 17214 (800-462-6420); shipping extra, and there's a 15% discount on web-site orders <<http://www.scarecrowpress.com>>.

329. Sep 01 #5: Reported: THE DANES OF SEND MANOR: THE LIFE, LOVES AND MYSTERY OF GORDON STEWART, by Robert Heal (Erin: Boston Mills Press, 2001; 320 pp., CA$34.95/ $25.95/£17.00); Gordon Stewart was an entrepreneur involved with aviation, motor cars, the theater, and Send Manor, which he designed as the world's best kennel. His Champion Egmond of Send starred in the film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1932), and the book includes stills from and discussion of the film. The publisher is 132 Main Street, Erin, ON N0B 1T0, Canada <<http://www.bostonmillspress.com>>.
330. The current catalog from Roe of Books (Ponderosa Plaza, 209 Oswego Street, Liverpool, NY 13088) (877-286-0544) <<http://www.roeofbooks.com>> offers amusing Sherlockian "Bookworms" products that range from miniature replica books ($9.95) to table lamps ($98.95); that's the 8 in. high shelf sitter ($29.95) in the illustration. Thanks to Joe Coppola for spotting the catalog.
331. Stephen Kendrick's HOLY CLUES: THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SHERLOCK HOLMES was well-received two years ago (Jun 99 #1), and he has now turned to pastiche: Jeff Bradway has noted a publisher's forecast for Kendrick's NIGHT WATCH (due from Pantheon in November, $23.00); Sherlock Holmes and Father Brown investigate a murder mystery.
332. The recreation of the sitting-room commissioned by Adrian Conan Doyle for the Chateau de Lucens in 1965 was designed by Michael Weight, who had done excellent work on the earlier version on display in Baker Street during the Festival of Britain in 1951; he had much room to work with in the chateau, and his second version was delightful. The chateau was closed to visitors in the 1990s, and it is nice to be able to report that the sitting-room has been installed in the Maison Rouge in Lucens, where it is again on view in the Musee Sherlock Holmes, which opened to the public on July 19. There is more information available at the web-site at <<http://www.lucens.ch>>.
333. John Chaffin's dramatization of "A Study in Scarlet" premiered at Chaffin's Barn Dinner Theatre on Sept. 18, and it will run through Oct. 27; the theater address is 8204 Highway 100, Nashville, TN 73221) (615-646-9977) (800-282-2276) <<http://www.dinnertheatre.com>>.
334. Further to my earlier mention (Aug 01 #5) of The Passengers' Log (published by The Sydney Passengers), editor Rosane McNamara doesn't neglect the minor (but interesting) items: in the January issue she reported on an interview (in the Sydney Sunday Telegraph) with Kevin Spacey, who noted that Sherlock Holmes influenced Spacey's choice of a career: on a trip to London, at the age of 10, he saw a production of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in which the revolving scenery fell on Dr. Watson; the actor extracted himself, strolled upstage, lit a cigarette, and declared, "I knew I should never have moved to Kensington." Spacey recalls, "I thought it was incredible, the funniest thing I'd ever seen; that's what I wanted to do." And when Spacey told the story in the dressing room during a 1998 revival of "The Iceman Cometh" in London, Tim Pigott-Smith turned and said, "Yes, Dr. Watson was me." Information on subscriptions is available from Bill Barnes (19 Malvern Avenue, Manly NSW 2095, Australia) <<http://www.ozemail.com.au/~bbarnes/sp.htm>>.

335. Sep 01 #6: TALES FOR A WINTER'S NIGHT, which was first published in 1989 (Dec 89 #5), has a reprint edition (Chicago: Academy Chicago, 1999; 207 pp., $14.95); it offers of eight of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories from ROUND THE FIRE STORIES (Jacques Barzun and Wendell Hertig Taylor suggested in their CATALOG OF CRIME that the stories in that book "are worth reading even around a radiator".
336. WHITE CHAPPEL, SCARLET TRACING was Iain Sinclair's first novel, published in Britain in 1987 (Jan 88 #6); it's a complex novel about antiquarian-book dealers, Jack the Ripper, and a hitherto-unknown first issue of A STUDY IN SCARLET. Sinclair is a well-known author now, and the book has been reissued as a trade paperback (New York: Granta, 2001; 210 pp., $12.95).
337. There's amusing Sherlockian artwork on and in a booklet ("Taking the Mystery Out of Vaccines") found at a doctor's office; the booklet's available from Aventis Pasteur (Discovery Drive, Swiftwater, PA 18370) <<http://www.us.aventispasteur.com>>
338. "Sherlock Holmes probably copied these studies for his own use from the '24 Caprices' by John Scott Eccles, written as a tutor of the Fiorillo grade of difficulty which was also used by Charlie Peace, the famous 19th century violin virtuoso," Belgian composer Boudewijn Buckinx suggests, in the notes for his "Etudes Sherlock Holmes", recorded by violinist Paul Klinck on a PKP Produkties CD (PKP 009) that was issued in 1998. It's nicely done, and pleasantly evocative of the Sherlockian era, and the CD is available from Paul Klinck (Keizervest 24, B-9000 Gent, Belgium) for $12.00 postpaid (in U.S. currency, please). The sheet music also is available (in case you're a violinist, or merely a fanatic collector), from Chiola Music Press (29 via De Cesaris, I-651 Spoltore, Italy); the cost is E14.75 postpaid (payment in Euros, please).
339. The Modern Library first published THE ADVENTURES AND MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES in 1946, and it has been in print ever since; there is now a revised edition with a new introduction by John Berendt (New York: Modern Library, 2001; 483 pp., $24.95).
340. Roger Johnson reports that BBC Worldwide is considering issuing videocassettes of at least some of the surviving programs from the 1968 "Sherlock Holmes" series that starred Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock, and it would be nice if potential buyers let BBC Worldwide know that there's some interest in the programs, and that it would be a good idea to issue NTSC cassettes (for the U.S. and Japan) as well as PAL cassettes (for the U.K.). Comments can be sent to Gavin Collinson, BBC Worldwide (room A-3022), 80 Wood Lane, London W12 0TT, England <gavin.collinson@bbc.co.uk>.
341. BBC Worldwide's earlier videocassette (PAL format only) with Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock in "The Speckled Band" and "The Illustrious Client" still is available (£14.99), along with two-cassette sets of the BBC Radio series starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams (L9.99 each) and a DVD of the Merrison/Williams "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (£12.99) from BBC Spoken Word (A-1047 Woodlands, 80 Wood Lane, London W12 0TT, England); there's a web-site at <<http://www.bbcworldwide.com/spokenword>>.

342. Sep 01 #7: The Norwood Building Inspectors offer a day-by-day Sherlockian Calendar for 2002, book-size (8.5 x 11 in.) with two dates per page (four dates when the book is opened), and information for about cases and events; $16.00 postpaid (checks payable to the Sherlock Holmes Society of Charleston, please), and the society's address is (305 Highland Avenue, South Charleston, WV 25303) <<http://members.citynet.net/wvsherlock>>. The Calendars will be shipped in November to those who have ordered and paid.
343. The animated television series "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" began in repeats on some (but not all) Warner Bros. channels at 7:30 am on Saturday, Sept. 22. I'd appreciate hearing from people who get the series on their local stations.
344. "The crate upon which I sit contains 2,000 napoleons packed between layers of lead foil," said Mr. Merryweather (in "The Red-Headed League"). And you can now have one for your very own: Frank Darlington spotted a mail-order catalog from Treasures from a Bygone Era (Box 81347, San Diego, CA 92138) (800-482-4179) <<http://www.treasurescatalog.com>> that offers the 20-franc coins. minted in 1812 and in very fine condition (item 204541) for $295.00 each. Admirers of the Brigadier Gerard will find other items of interest in the catalog.
345. Ken Lanza reports a new DVD title "Legendary Sherlock Holmes Movies" with three of the Rathbone/Bruce films ("Dressed to Kill", "The Woman in Green", and "Terror by Night"), scheduled from BFS Entertainment & Media on Oct. 9, ($9.98).
346. Paul Martin spotted a discussion (in a catalog from The Common Reader) of David Markson's THIS IS NOT A NOVEL (Washington: Counterpoint Press, 2001; 188 pp., $15.00); it's a collection of "literary and artistic anecdotes" such as "Montaigne could not swim. Unfortunately neither could Shelley." Of special interest: "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was evidently the first person in England ever to receive a ticket for speeding."

347. But: Daniel Stashower notes (in TELLER OF TALES, 1999, p. 249-250) that ACD was an enthusiastic motorist, and was "one of the first men in Britain ever to receive a speeding ticket, prompting an angry letter to the Daily Mail." The letter was published on Sept. 21, 1905, and reprinted in LETTERS TO THE PRESS, 1986, p. 108-109), and he reports that he had been caught "recently" by police in a speed trap at Folkestone. He also comments on "the energy of the police in seizing motorists, and that of the magistrates in taking their money," in and around Andover and Guildford during the summer, with 71 captures and 71 convictions in each district, and it is clear that there were others who were ahead of him in deserving the honor (if it was indeed an honor) of being the first to receive a speeding ticket.
348. John Baesch has kindly forwarded a report from the Sunday Telegraph (Sept. 9, 2001) about a new advertising plan for Coutts, a 309-year-old bank that now styles itself as a dream team of bankers (pops stars and nearly half of the England football squad have accounts at Coutts, according to the bank, which several years ago abolished its famous frock coats). One of the advertisements shows an office door with a sign for Coutts' "dream team" private detective agency: Holmes, Poirot & Marlowe.

349. Sep 01 #8: Carl Heifetz reports that PBS Home Video (1320 Braddock Place, Alexandria, VA 22314 (800-645-4727) <www.shoppbs.com> offers the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" series: "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" and "More Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (each with five programs on five cassettes) cost $99.98 each, and "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes" (six programs on six cassettes) costs $119.98; all three sets for $289.94.
350. Ray Betzner reports that Moonstone Comics has begun a new series of "Sherlock Holmes" comic books, with stories by Joe Gentile and artwork by Rich Gulick and Mike Bianco; 32 pp., $2.95 each, and at least two issues due.
351. Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720-1346) offers a new lapel pin suitable for everyone who attends the birthday festivities in New York in January: the pin is 2" in diameter, with the Statue of Liberty in green on a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes in yellow. $7.50 at the dealers' room at the Hotel Algonquin in January, or $9.00 postpaid now from Warren.
352. "The West End Horror" is a new play, based on the novel by Nicholas Meyer and dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge; it will open off-Broadway at the CAP21 Theater in New York on Oct. 30, and run through Nov. 25. The theater is at 15 West 28th Street, and tickets will cost $40.00 (or $35.00 if you order by Oct. 20); a 15% discount is available for groups of ten or more people. You can order by mail from CAP21, 18 West 18th Street (6th floor), New York, NY 10011 (212-807-0202) <<http://www.cap21.org>>.
353. Forecast from Carroll & Graf: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA, by Alan Vanneman (in December, $24.00); SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE VOICE FROM THE CRYPT AND OTHER TALES, by Donald Thomas (in March, $25.00).
354. Roger Llewellyn continues to tour in Britain in David Stuart Davies' play "Sherlock Holmes - The Last Act!", and next January will have a week's run in Antibes in the south of France.
355. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's article on "Brigadier Gerard" material in the collection, and Victoria Gill's report on the library's spiritualist material related to Conan Doyle's family after his death. The newsletter is available from Doug Wrigglesworth (16 Sunset Street, Holland Landing, ON L9N 1H4, Canada) <dougwrig@sympatico.ca>. Doug also sends word that the "Footprints of the Hounds" conference will be held as scheduled, on Oct. 19-21, at the Delta Chelsea in Toronto, and that space still is available. You can request details from Ted Gurr <foth2001@home.com> <<http://www.acdfriends.org/hound>>.
356. And for those wondering about what the birthday festivities in New York will include: watch this space. As usual, the next issue will include a forecast of events from Thursday (Jan. 10) to Sunday (Jan. 13, 2002).
357. Oct 01 #1: The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' report on this summer's conference (with many photographs of exhibits and participants), Daniel Stashower's "100 Years Ago" response to an accusation that Conan Doyle was a plagiarist, and notes on recent acquisitions such as include artifacts from annual dinners of the Maiwand Jezails, and the Sherlockian scrapbook kept by Katherine McMahon. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
358. Sorry about that: the Clive Merrison/Michael Williams radio version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is not available on a DVD (as noted Sep 01 #6), but rather as a two-CD set (Bert Coules reports) for £12.99 from BBC Spoken Word (A-1047 Woodlands, 80 Wood Lane, London W12 0TT, England); their website is at <<http://www.bbcworldwide.com/spokenword>>.
359. Forecast: MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS, edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenber, and Carol-Lynn Waugh (Nov 99 #5), reprinted as a trade paperback by Berkley in November ($13.00); eleven short-story pastiches by authors such as Anne Perry, Daniel Stashower, Peter Lovesey, Jon L. Breen, Barbara Paul, L. B. Greenwood, and Edward D. Hoch. Also: DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HOLMES, by Loren D. Estleman (Jun 79 #1); reprinted as a trade paperback by Pocket Books in November ($12.00); "Holmes uses his expertise as a chemist to explain a mysterious gap" in Robert Louis Stevenson's story.
360. Bruce Southworth reports that the first edition of Stephen Kendrick's HOLY CLUES: THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (1999) now is available at Barnes & Noble discounted at $4.98; it's an interesting discussion of the faith, reason, mystery, and philosophy one can find in the Sherlock Holmes stories, especially with an expert guide.
361. The production of "The West End Horror" scheduled for this fall (Sep 01 #8) has been postponed; the play will open off-Broadway at the CAP21 Theater in New York on June 11, and close on July 7, 2002. The theater is at 15 West 28th Street, and the box office address is 18 West 18th Street (6th floor), New York, NY 10011 (212-807-0202) <<http://www.cap21.org>>.
362. The British Royal Mint's Victorian anniversary crown (Feb 01 #3) with the reverse showing a young Victoria (based on the William Wyon portrait used on the world's first postage stamps), and a backdrop representing the ironwork of the famed Crystal Palace, is still available in an illustrated presentation folder for $16.50 (plus shipping), and in other formats such as a silver proof ($49.95) and a gold proof ($925.00), and you can request their illustrated brochure: British Royal Mint, Cheyenne, WY 82008-0031 (800-221-1215) (Canada 800-563-5943) (U.K. 01443-623322) <<http://www.royalmint.com>>.
363. Daniel Stashower's TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1999), read unabridged by Richard Matthews on 11 90-minute audiocassettes, now is available from Books on Tape (Box 7900, Newport Beach, CA 92658 (800-626-3333) <<http://www.booksontape.com>> for purchase ($66.00) or 30-day rental ($16.95); shipping extra, and there's a 5% discount if you order on-line.
364. Oct 01 #2: Fats Waller mentioned Sherlock Holmes in the lyrics of his recording of "Somebody Stole My Gal" for Victor in 1935 (as Lord Donegall noted in the Sherlock Holmes Journal in 1972), and it was the earliest known record with Sherlockian lyrics. But Ken Lanza has found Sherlockian lyrics on an earlier and different recording: "Dr. Watson and Mr. Holmes" (by the Spirits of Rhythm for Decca in 1934). Leo Watson and Douglas Daniels founded the group, and Otis Ferguson's enthusiastic tribute to them was published in The New Republic (Feb. 3, 1941); it's also available at

- <<http://www.thenewrepublic.com/jazz/spirits/html>>. The electronically-enabled can hear the piece at <<http://www.jazzmagazine.com/Musique/Encyclo/enc4.htm#The%20Spirits%20of%20Rhythm>>, and it also is available on two CDs: SPIRITS OF RHYTHM 1933-1945 (Classics 1028) and SPIRITS OF RHYTHM 1932-34 (Retrieval RTR 79004 JAZZ); $17.97 each. There is some overlap on the two CDs, of course, but the Retrieval CD is of special interest (it offers two slightly different recording-session takes of "Dr. Watson and Mr. Holmes").
365. The sixth issue of the new Strand Magazine has arrived, with editor Andrew Gulli's interesting interview with Christopher Lee, and fiction (including a Sherlockian pastiche by David Ellis, and a W. G. Grace pastiche by Judith Cutler), and reviews and articles. Subscriptions (four issues) cost $24.95 (U.S. and Canada) or $35.95 (elsewhere); the address is Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012 (800-300-6652) (UK: 800-961-280) <<http://www.strandmag.com>>.
366. The deerstalkered Santa sold last year in the "Stuffins" soft-toy "The Island of Misfit Toys" series (Oct 00 #6 and Dec 00 #3) is now offered (greeting Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer) as the first in a monthly series of "Rudolph and the Island of Misfit Toys" figurines ($26.99 each postpaid) (you can cancel your subscription at any time) from The Hamilton Collection at 9204 Center for the Arts Drive, Niles, IL 60714) (877-268-6638) <<http://www.collectiblestoday.com>>.
367. Reported in a "19th Century Studies" catalog at hand from Ashgate (131 Main Street, Burlington, VT 05401) <<http://www.ashgate.com>>: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND THE MEANING OF MASCULINITY, by Diana Barsham (2000, 320 pp., $84.95); Barsham suggests that Conan Doyle "used his fame as the creator of Sherlock Holmes to refigure the spirit of British Imperialism." Also: GEORGE NEWNES AND THE NEW JOURNALIST IN BRITAIN, 1880-1910, by Kate Jackson (2001, 342 pp., $79.95); Newnes' "new journalism" included The Strand Magazine, The Westminster Gazette, Tit-Bits, and The Wide World Magazine (all contained material by and about Conan Doyle).
368. Dagmar died on Oct. 9. She was born Virginia Ruth Egnor, and took the name Dagmar when she joined "Broadway Open House" on NBC-TV in 1950. She was a statuesque blonde, described in the N.Y. Times as combining "the voluptuous curves of a Venus, the provocative grace of a young Mae West, and the virtue of a Girl Scout." She also performed in the theater, summer stock, and Las Vegas; and she was a regular on "Hollywood Squares" and recorded a duet with Frank Sinatra. And in 1954 she appeared on "The Buick Berle Show" in a 17-minute skit with about a stolen car, with Milton Berle, Mickey Spillane, and Basil Rathbone as Sherlock Holmes.

369. Oct 01 #3: The centenary of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is getting a lot of attention this year, but Sherlockians can also celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of a man whose vocabulary was described by Holmes as "nervous and tense." That was George Bradshaw, of course; he was born on July 29, 1801, according to an article in the October issue of The Railway Magazine (kindly forwarded by John Baesch), and died in Norway on Sept. 6, 1853, a victim of Asian cholera, but his railway guides continued to be published until June 1961.
370. Ron Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919) <commonplacebook@aol.com> is working on a new reference work that will include information on Sherlockians, and on Sherlockian societies and their meeting dates in 2002 (The Commonplace Book will be available in January). Questionnaires, for individuals and societies, are available on request from Ron.
371. It's a bit late, but: further to the report (Feb 01 #2) about the £18 billion bid by Lloyds TSB Group to acquire Abbey National, thus becoming Britain's second-largest bank, the takeover was blocked by the British government on July 10. Secretary of State for Trade and Industry Patricia Hewitt accepted the findings and recommendations of the Competition Commission and the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading that the merger would be against the public interest because of its adverse effect on competition.
372. Herbert L. Block died on Oct. 7. He used the signature "Herblock" for his editorial cartoons, and he began his career with the Chicago Daily News in 1929; he joined the Washington Post in 1946, and he was widely regarded as one of the best journalists ever to have picked up a pen. He won three Pulitzer Prizes and shared a fourth, and was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1994. His first known use of the Sherlockian image came in 1947, in a lampoon of Reps. Rankin and Thomas and the House Committee on Un-American Activities investigation of Hollywood, and he drew many more S'ian cartoons over the years; the most recent one ran on Feb. 18, 2001, with a comment on voting machines.
373. John le Carre, once asked about "writers who mean the most to you," and replied, "P. G. Wodehouse for rhythm and timing. Conan Doyle for thrust and instant atmosphere." And le Carre has included Sherlockian allusions in many of his books, including his novel OUR GAME (Aug 95 #5) (and available in a paperback edition from Ballantine); it's an excellent book about secret service agents involved with and in the conflict on the southern border of Russia (and offering some real insight into the reasons for that conflict).
374. Further to the item (Jun 01 #3) about the Dulwich Picture Gallery in London (where you can view two paintings by Sherlock Holmes' great-great-grand-uncle Claude-Joseph Vernet), Lottie Cole reports that "An Italianate Harbour Scene" has been adopted for conservation (at a cost of £4,000). The gallery's web-site is at <www.dulwichpicturegallery.org.uk>.

375. Oct 01 #4: This has been a banner year for Sherlockians who like to attend major seasonal events, hither and yon: the grand gourmet dinner at the Culinary Institute of America was held last spring, and there was a fine Sherlockian conference in Minneapolis this summer, and about 140 Sherlockians and Doyleans were on hand for "Footprints of the Hound" in Toronto this month, when it was easy to see how simple it is to put on an wonderful conference, if a lot of locals spend two or three years arranging it. The conference was delightful, and I expect there will be a long report on the festivities in Canadian Holmes, so I will tell only one story here, about Canadian immigration.
376. Sir Christopher Frayling, knighted earlier this year for his contributions to arts and letters (including an hour on "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in his 1996 television series "Nightmare: The Birth of Victorian Horror"), was one of the featured speakers; he arrived from England and explained to Canadian immigration that he coming to lecture at a conference, and wasn't being paid, and (asked what the conference was about) decided that he ought to give a suitably dignified answer, and said, "crime fiction." And he was led off to an interrogation room and questioned thoroughly. Other visitors (including this reporter), when asked about the conference, mentioned Sherlock Holmes and were zipped through with a wave and a smile.
377. Visitors to Toronto will also enjoy the splendid exhibition at the Toronto Public Library (at 789 Yonge Street) through Dec. 2. There are manuscript pages from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on display (from public and private collections, and other rare and interesting Sherlockian and Doylean material, and it's always possible to tour (by appointment, please) the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection itself.
378. Canadian Holmes (mentioned above) is the quarterly journal of The Bootmakers of Toronto, costs $20.00 a year; checks payable to the society can be sent to Derek Thorpe (5 Brownlea Avenue, Toronto, ON M9P 2R5, Canada).
379. The U.S. postal service has continued its annual tributes to the stars of Warner Bros. cartoons, this year honoring Porky Pig, who appeared in "Deduce, You Say!" (1956) as Dr. Watkins (with Daffy Duck as Dorlock Homes); Daffy was honored earlier (Apr 99 #5).
380. The complicated relationship between Conan Doyle and Houdini continues to intrigue authors of all sorts: "Listen Houdini" is a new play that opened on Oct. 18 at the Axis Theatre in New York; it runs Thursdays through Saturdays at 8:00 pm until Dec. 22, run through Dec. 22, starring Jim Sterling (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) and Robert Cucuzza (Houdini) in a confrontation about the medium Margery Crandon. The Axis Company is an off-Broadway experimental theater group, and the theater is located at One Sheridan Square (near Seventh Avenue) (212-807-9300)

<<http://www.axiscompany.org>>.

381. Herbert Ross died on Oct. 9. He began his theatrical career as a choreographer, with the American Ballet Theatre and on Broadway and in film, and became a film director in 1969; he directed more than two dozen films over the years, and produced and directed "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976).

382. Oct 01 #5: John Linton's splendid Sherlockian and Pontine prints delighted collectors in the 1970s (you can see some of his earlier artwork in the Sept. 1973, Dec. 1973, and June 1974 issues of The Baker Street Journal), and he has a new print, honoring "The Hound of the Baskervilles", with a properly fearsome hound, and Holmes and Watson, and (look carefully) a self-portrait of John; it measures 18 x 12 in. and it costs $13.00 postpaid from John Linton (704 Burgundy Drive, Rockville, MD 20850).
383. And my use of the word "Pontine" is a nice excuse to mention Luther Norris, who had a wonderful time presiding over The Praed Street Irregulars, which was his way of paying tribute to The Baker Street Irregulars, in the same way that August Derleth, at the end of the 1920s, created Solar Pons (who lived in Praed Street) as a tribute to Sherlock Holmes. Derleth wrote more tales about Pons than Conan Doyle did about Holmes, and Solar Pons was only a small part of what Derleth wrote. There's an August Derleth Society, and a newsletter; membership costs $15.00 a year (Box 481, Sauk City, WI 53583) <Http://www.derleth.org>. The society also offers reprints of many of Derleth's books, including the Solar Pons stories.
384. Hirota Ueda's continuing "EQ Sherlockiana" column (each with an imaginative Sherlockian sketch by the author) appeared in every issue of issue of the bimonthly Japanese edition of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine from Mar. 1980 to May 1999 (the Japanese magazine ceased publication in July 1999); the first collection of his columns was SHERLOCK HOLMES DAIHAKURANKAI (Jul 89 #4), and the second collection is SHERLOCK HOLMES YUYU GAKUGAKU [A JOYFUL STUDY ON SHERLOCK HOLMES] (Tokyo: Thodo-sha, 2001; 241 pp., Y1,700).
385. Reported: THE TRUE CRIME FILES OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Stephen Hines and with an introduction by Steven Womack (New York: Berkley Prime Crime, 2001; 304 pp., $22.95); a collection of what he wrote about his investigation of crimes such as the George Edalji and Oscar Slater cases.
386. GRAMERCY PARK, by Paula Cohen (New York: St. Martin's Press, 2002; 357 pp., $24.95); due in Jan/Feb, and already picked up by the Book-of-the-Month Club, the Literary Guild, and the Doubleday Book Club, and there will be a British edition (from The Fourth Estate) and Italian and Spanish editions. Paula calls the book "historical suspense", closest in spirit to Daphne du Maurier's REBECCA, but set in Edith Wharton's New York. The novel opens in New York in 1894, when Mario Alfieri, the world's greatest tenor, moves into an elegant mansion facing Gramercy Park and encounters a bewitching orphan named Clara Adler. Paula is "Lady Mary Brackenstall" amongst the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes.
387. Bert Coules reports that "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" goes into studio at the end of October, for broadcast by BBC Radio in January and February next year. Clive Merrison returns as Sherlock Holmes, and Andrew Sachs will be Dr. Watson; Sachs played the King of Bohemia in the BBC version of "A Scandal in Bohemia" (and to show just how interesting radio can be, many of you have seen Sachs on television in the John Cleese series "Fawlty Towers", playing the Barcelonan waiter Manuel). There will be five program: "The Peculiar Persecution of Mr. John Vincent Hardin", "The Star of the Adelphi", "The Singular Inheritance of Miss Gloria Wilson", "The Saviour of Cripplegate Square", and "The Madness of Colonel Warburton".
388. Oct 01 #6: Plan ahead: Laurie R. King, author of the Mary Russell series and other mystery novels, will be the guest of honor at Left Coast Crime 12, on Mar. 21-24, 2002, in Portland (Box 18033, Portland, OR 97218 <<http://www.spiritone.com/~jlorenz/leftcoast/>>. And Bouchercon 2002 ("Longhorns of the Law") will be in Austin on Oct. 17-20, 2002; Mary Willis Walker and George Plecanos will be guests of honor (Box 27277, Austin, TX 78755) <<http://www.bouchercon2002.com>>.
389. Further to the report (Sep 01 #8) of a new series of comic books from Moonstone, SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CLOWN PRINCE OF LONDON now is in the shops ($2.95); written by Joe Gentile and illustrated by Rich Gulick. Moonstone is at 582 Torrence Avenue, Calumet City, IL 60409 <www.moonstonebooks.com>.
390. This year's Christmas Annual of The Baker Street Journal is "On the Shoulders of Giants: Jack Tracy and the Encyclopaedia Sherlockian", by Christopher and Barbara Roden, offering a history (based on Jack's correspondence) of how Jack's splendid reference work was conceived, created, and (after a long struggle) published. The annual is not part of subscriptions to the BSJ, and you'll need to place your orders by Dec. 1 in order to be sure of getting a copy. Orders can be sent to The Baker Street Journal (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331); $11.00 postpaid in the U.S. (checks only, please), and $12.00 postpaid to other countries (credit-card orders welcome).
391. George Gately died on Sept. 30. His "Heathcliff" was a stylish cartoon cat who debuted on the comic pages in 1973 (and is thus five years older than Garfield), and then appeared on TV. His brother said that Gately had once hoped to be a musician, but Heathcliff became so popular that he was too busy drawing. This panel ran on July 1, 1989.
392. Philip J. Carraher's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEAD RABBITS SOCIETY: THE LOST REMINISCENCE OF JOHN H. WATSON, MD (Bloomington: 1stBooks Library, 2001; 142 pp., $13.98) has Holmes in disguise in the United States during the Great Hiatus (without Watson, who managed nevertheless to write the story in 1908 and tuck it away for discovery now). You can order the book from bookstores, or from the publisher (2595 Vernal Pike, Bloomington, IN 47404 (800-839-9640) <<http://www.1stbooks.com>>.
393. Fans of the "Nero Wolfe" series running on Arts & Entertainment cable will be glad to hear that production has started on "Death of a Doxy" (scheduled for broadcast on Apr. 30). Sharon Doyle (who dramatized the story) reports that it will be set circa 1965, the year it was written.
394. Further to the report (Aug 01 #5) about Laurie R. King's appreciative essay about Arthur Conan Doyle ("Art in the Blood?") that Penguin Classics made available at its web-site, the essay vanished from the web-site soon afterward. But it's now available elsewhere, and still nicely written, at Laurie's own web-site <<http://www.laurierking.com/mutterings.html>>, along with a link to the Mary Russell electronic mailing list, and lots of new about Laurie, her tours, and her books.

395. Oct 01 #7: Sherlock Holmes' 148th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 11, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the festivities actually will begin on Thursday at 9:00 am at the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), whence Jim Cox will lead the annual Christopher Morley Walk, which ends with lunch at McSorley's. The BSI's Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club at 24 East 39th Street (between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Bert Coules, who dramatized most of the Canon for the BBC radio broadcasts starring Clive Merrison and Michael Williams as Holmes and Watson ($10.00); seating is limited, and you are advised to reserve early; details below).
396. Friday begins with the Martha Hudson Breakfast, from 7:00 to 10:00 in the Oak Room at the Hotel Algonquin at 59 West 44th Street; the hotel provides its guests with a continental breakfast, and others are welcome to attend each day (and pay $16.00; details below). The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; $37.00 (Susan Rice, 125 Washington

- Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014). And Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house at The Mysterious Bookshop (129 West 56th Street) from 11:00 am to 5:00 pm; Sherlockian authors will be on hand to sign their books.
397. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Union League Club at 38 East 37th Street. The Baskerville Bash (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) offers dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club at 201 West 52nd Street (between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $75.00 until Dec. 15, then $85.00 (Paula J. Perry, 346 East 87th Street #4-A, New York, NY 10128) <www.baskervillebash.org> (please tell her your e-mail address, and primary Sherlockian society affiliation). Early reservations are advised for the William Gillette luncheon and the Baskerville Bash.
398. Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs in the dinner packets can send 175 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103) and 125 copies (for the Bash) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301); your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
399. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be offered in the dealers' room on the 2nd floor of the Hotel Algonquin (59 West 44th Street), 9:30 am to 12:30 pm; Ralph Hall 2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218 (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> has information on dealers tables.
