366. Walter Young reports that he has found an article by W. J. Johnston titled "Detective Fiction Defies the Law" in the British journal The Empire Review (Oct. 1927); the article discusses problems that might arise were some of the villains in the Canon represented were by competent lawyers if actually brought to trial in British courts. The article is available as a DOC file <sir.james.walter@gmail.com>.
367. "Baltimore Gives Edgar Allan Poe the Funeral He Should Have Had," on Oct. 11 (almost exactly 160 years after he died on Oct. 7, 1849), according to Jeff Jerome (curator of the Poe House and Museum). Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will be among the featured speakers at the event, which will take place at Westminster Hall (519 West Fayette Street). There will be two services, at 12:30 pm and 4:30 pm, and tickets cost $35.00 each ($40.00 at the door, but it's likely the services will sell out early). Checks (payable to Director of Finance) can be sent to CHAP/POE (8th floor), 417 East Fayette Street, Baltimore, MD 21202; your checks will be returned if the event's sold out. There's more information at <www.poebicentennial.com>.

368. Aug 09 #6: Lee A. Matthias' THE PANDORA PLAGUE, first published by Leisure Books (Apr 81 #4) and (considerably shortened) by Unicorn-Star Press in 1984, is back available again in a revised and expanded third edition (Charleston: BookSurge, 2009; 309 pp., $16.99); the pastiche involves Holmes and Watson with Harry and Bess Houdini, anarchists, Mycroft Holmes, and the Curies in a battle to thwart an attempt to bring down governments world-wide. Matthias' interesting web-site is at <www.pandoraplague.com>.

369. Plan ahead: The Pleasant Places of Florida will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Wessex Cup with a "Wessex Weekend" on Feb. 12-14, 2010. Information about the event will be available from Carl L. Heifetz (1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655) <microdoc@verizon.net>.
370. Cliff Goldfarb has reported an interesting article by Alan M. Petrillo in Antique Trader (May 6) about Conan Doyle, the Arthur Conan Doyle Society, and the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Toronto; the URL is <www.antiquetrader.com/article/Bio_and_literatur_of-Arthur-Conan/#>.
371. Michael Viner died on Aug. 8. He was a music and television producer who launched Dove Books-on-Tape in 1985 and went on to produce a wide range of high-brow and low-brow audiocassettes that included Bennett Cohen's novelization of the film WITHOUT A CLUE (read by Ben Kingsley), THE TREASURY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (also read by Kingsley), Mark Frost's THE LIST OF 7 (read by Rene Auberjonois) and THE SIX MESSIAHS (read by David Warner), and anthologies that included Sherlockian stories by Vincent Starrett, Ed Hoch, and Andrew Joffe.
372. Al Gregory found "character posters" for Guy Ritchie's up-coming "Sherlock Holmes" showing Robert Downey Jr. as Holmes and Jude Law as Watson at eBay <www.ebay.com>; they're printed on both sides, with everything lighter and in reverse on the backs.
373. Jason Kirkfield reports that he has visited the Baker Street Pub & Grill in Boulder, Colo. Sherlock's Pub Co. owns a chain of 20 such establishments (some named Sherlock's Baker Street Pub or Watson's House of Ales) in Colorado, Oklahoma, and Texas; see their web-site at <www.sherlockspubco.com>.
374. MR. HOLMES & DR. WATSON: THEIR STRANGEST CASES (Canton: Transfuzion, 2009; 135 pp., $17.99) offers four of the grand comic strips that were written by Edith Meiser and drawn by Frank Giacoia for the N.Y. Herald Tribune syndicate in 1954 and 1955; Mark Ellis, in his Foreword, notes that Gil Kane and Mike Sekowsky were the primary artists for almost all of the stories in the comic strip (they worked for Giacoia and received no credit), and the book also has Ron Haydock's "Sherlock Holmes and the True Legend of the Hound of the Baskervilles" (reprinted from E-GO Col-lectors Series, 1975).
375. Another title published by Transfuzion is SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE CASES OF THE TWISTED MINDS (106 pp., $14.99), with three stories first published by Caliber/Tome in the 1990s: "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll & Mr. Holmes" (story by Steven Philip Jones and art by Seppo Makinen), "The Adventure of the Opera Ghost" (story by Steven Philip Jones and art by Aldin Baroza), and "The Amazing Mr. Holmes" (story by Gary Reed and art by Wayne Reid). Specializing in graphic novels, the company has a web-site at <www.transfuzion.biz>.

376. Aug 09 #7: Thierry Saint-Joanis has reported on the discovery in Poland of a copy of the last Sherlock Holmes silent film: "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1929); starring Carlyle Blackwell (Holmes) and Georges Seroff (Watson), the film was released on Aug. 28, 1929, only a few weeks before the release on Oct. 18 of the first Sherlock Holmes sound film ("The Return of Sherlock Holmes" starring Clive Brook and H. Reeves-Smith). The film is now at the Polish National Film Archive in Warsaw, undergoing cleaning and conservation. You can read more (in French or English) at the web-site of the Soci,t Sherlock Holmes de France at <www.sshf.com>.
377. "Famous guests include Vincent Van Gogh, Charles Dickens, Sherlock Holmes, George Bernard Shaw, Benjamin Disraeli, and William Gladstone," according to the history of a famous restaurant in London. Bill Briggs has reported the web-site: <www.simpsonsinthestrands.co.uk>.
378. Irene's Cabinet is an annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (46 pp.) continues the society's tradition of offering interesting articles, toasts, and poetry, this year including Dana Richards' appreciative history of Petri Wine, and Joyce Ludwig's report on her imaginative "Silver Blaze" stained-glass window. $18.00 postpaid from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886); copies of annuals from 2004 through 2008 also are available ($15.00 postpaid).
379. Laurie R. King will be on tour in England promoting THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, Sept. 9-21, with appearances in Newcastle upon Tyne, Reading, London, Luton, Oxford, and Cambridge; details at <www.laurierking.com/page_id=1263>.
380. Aziz Bin Adam reports that there's a new Malay (Bahasa Malasia) translation of Sherlock Holmes stories: SHERLOCK HOLMES: WIRA KOTA LONDON, available at the web-site <www.pts.com.my/index.php/buku/3432>. The title translates as SHERLOCK HOLMES: HERO OF THE CITY OF LONDON" and the book's cover uses artwork from promotion for the new Guy Ritchie film.
381. Cliff Goldfarb notes that the Quality Paperback Book Club continues to offer Sherlockiana in discounted softcover editions. The Club has web-sites at <www.qpb.com> and (for Canadians) <www.qpb.ca>, and its current titles include ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS ($9.99), THE SHERLOCK HOLMES NOVELS ($9.99), John R. King's THE SHADOW OF REICHENBACH FALLS, Leslie S. Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED DRACULA ($22.99), Russell Miller's THE ADVENTURES OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE ($15.99), and John Gardner's MORIARTY ($14.99).
382. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Wayside Theatre (7853 Main Street, Middletown, VA 22645) (540-869-1776) <www.waysidetheatre.org> from Oct. 10 through Nov. 7. And there will be a production at the Cider Mill Playhouse (2 South Nanticoke Avenue, Endicott, NY 13760 (607-748-7363) <www.cidermillplayhouse.com> from Apr. 15 through May 2, 2010. And another at the Phipps Center for the Arts.
383. Will Thomas' THE BLACK HAND has been nominated for a Shamus Award (best paperback original) from the Private Eye Writers of America; the winners will be announced on Oct. 16, during the PWA banquet at Bouchercon in Indianapolis. It's the fifth in Will's Victorian mystery series that features Cyrus Barker (an homage to Holmes' rival in "The Retired Colourman") (Aug 08 #4).
384. Aug 09 #8: A reminder: "From Out of That Shadow", the exhibition that was on view at the University of Virginia earlier this year, will open at the Ransom Center at the University of Texas in Austin on Sept. 8 and run through Jan. 4, honoring the bicentennial of Edgar Allan Poe. Exhibition highlights will include Poe's writing desk, records of his student days, a brooch containing his hair, Arthur Rackham's original artwork for TALES OF MYSTERY & IMAGINATION, manuscripts and letters, and the typescript of Robert Barr's "A Chat with Conan Doyle" (first published in The Idler, Oct. 1894) in which Conan Doyle acknowledges his debt to Poe. The exhibition's "Poe Mania" web-site <www.hrc.utexas.edu/exhibitions/2009/poe> will (as of Sept. 4) have digital imagery, including the typescript.
385. Robert Crichton is featured in Milk Bottle Production's "The Complete Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" at the Quay Theatre in Sudbury (Suffolk); the series of weekly readings began on Sept. 16. Crichton will read 15 stories this year, and the remainder of the Canon next year; there are photographs of Crichton in Sherlockian costume at <www.milkbottleproductions.co.uk>.
386. There are now two titles in the SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS series by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin published by Orchard Books/Scholastic Press for readers ages 9-12. THE FALL OF THE AMAZING ZALINDAS (2006, 255 pp., $6.99) involves Wiggins and the irregulars (and Holmes and Watson) in an investigation that involved murder and the theft of a royal treasure, and THE MYSTERY OF CONJURED MAN (2009, 195 pp., $6.99) deals with the pursuit of a malevolent gang of swindlers. The books are well-written and nicely appropriate for their target audience.
387. The U.S. Postal Service issued a stamp this year honoring Bob Hope. There's a caricature of Bob "Sherlock" Hope at his official web-site at <www.bobhope.com/JokePage.html>, where you can click on the image and listen to him telling jokes. He's shown in Sherlockian costume in advertising for the film "My Favorite Brunette" (1947), although there's no S'ian costume in the film itself. And it would be nice indeed if someone

- could find video of his reported appearance in a skit on the "Donny and Marie Show" (1977) as Inspector Wonderful, with Jay Osmond as Doctor Watson.
388. The long-running controversy over the spelling of wisteria/wistaria seems to have been resolved, at least as far as The Times is concerned, according to an opinion piece (June 5) forwarded by Evy Herzog and John Baesch. The plant was named by eminent British botanist Thomas Nuttall in honor of Caspar Wistar, but Nuttall spelled it wisteria. THE TIMES STYLE GUIDE has for many years insisted on the spelling wistaria, but the venerable newspaper has now decided that "wisteria rules." This by no means is the first time The Times has made changes: in 1966 the paper began printing news on its front page, and Rupert Murdoch bought the company in 1981; it has been a tabloid since 2004. Today's Times is considerably different from what it was when Holmes and Watson and others consulted it (the paper is mentioned in six of the Sherlock Holmes stories).
389. Sep 09 #1: Nicholas Meyer is touring to promote his new THE VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE: MEMORIES FROM STAR TREK AND A LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD (New York: Viking, 2009; 272 pp., $25.95), and on Aug. 28 he was interviewed by John Rabe for "Off-Ramp" on KPCC-FM (Los Angeles). You can listen to (and download) the entire 45-minute interview at <www.tinyurl.com/lcxceg>. Both the interview and the book, of course, have Sherlockian content; Meyer wrote THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION (1974) and two other pastiches.
390. Barnes & Noble's reprint (1992) of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (with the introduction by Christopher Morley) available for some time in an edition in "genuine bonded leather with ribbon marker" and with gilt edges, nicely suitable for gifts (Jul 06 #1) was out of print for a while, but it's now available again in a new edition (2009), with a new introduction by Christopher and Barbara Roden. The covers, front and back, are highly decorated with a Sherlockian motif, and the price still is $19.98. And it really is a new edition: the type has been reset, with a new pagination; I've not checked to see whether any of the errors in the Doubleday edition have been corrected.
391. Further to the report on Sherlock Holmes Estates in Sykesville, Md. (Aug 09 #3), Les Moskowitz reports that the list of Canonical street names was incomplete; there are Conan Doyle Way, Sherlock Holmes Street, Watson Court, Mycroft Street, Hudson Drive, Moriarty Court, Baskerville Drive, Elementary Drive, Silver Blaze Drive, Mycroft Street, Baskerville Drive, Silver Blaze Drive, Elementary Drive, and Musgrave Ritual Drive.
392. Sorry about that: The Times (Aug 09 #8) is mentioned in seven of the Sherlock Holmes stories. That's more often than any other newspaper named in the Canon.
393. Karen Murdock noted a press release about Tod Leavitt's performance of "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" for "contrabass and characters" at a faculty recital at Valdosta State University on Aug. 28. It was the first scene of a concert version of "The Speckled Band" that Leavitt has commissioned from Jon Deak. It's not Deak's first Sherlockian work: he was commissioned by Richard Hartshorne to create a concert version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for contrabass and six voices (Oct 89 #5 and Jan 98 #3).
394. THE IMPROBABLE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by John Joseph Adams (San Francisco: Night Shade Books, 2009; 454 pp., $15.95), is a wide-ranging anthology. A few of the stories are published for the first time, with many reprints and a short Sherlockian Primer by Christopher Roden; many of the reprints are from anthologies of Sherlockian pastiches, but Adams has cast his net widely to include pastiches from the BBC Cult homepage and the webzine <www.shredofevidence.com>; some of the authors are well known (Anthony Burgess, Stephen King, Anne Perry, Neil Gaiman), while others will be less familiar. You'll find mystery, fantasy, science fiction, parody, and good writing. And <www.johnjosephadams.com/sherlock-holmes/?page\_id=16> is the URL for the book's web-site, which offers interviews with some of the authors, a chance to read some of the stories on-line without charge, and a free "ebook sampler" download.

395. Sep 09 #2: Further to the item (Apr 09 #6) on the campaign to upgrade the protection of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, the BBC reported (Aug. 25) that the house likely will be converted into flats. Waverly Borough Council chairman Matthew Evan said that there had been talks with the National Trust and the Youth Hostel Association to determine whether plans could be drawn up for community use of the house, but "the reality is that those don't seem to be viable options." He also said that the developer who owns the house is now proposing to knock down an extension that was built in the 1930s and convert the property into 11 flats, and that the new plans are "much more sensitive to the character of Undershaw."
396. Karen Murdoch reports a Sherlock Holmes chess set available from Glen Call International (4 Balgedie Court, Glenlmond, Kinross-shire KY13 9HF, Great Britain) <www.glencall.co.uk>; pieces only (natural cream and brown finish) £80.54, pieces only (hand decorated) £135.67, recommended board £62.77.
397. Lenny Picker has reported that Synergy Entertainment will release SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARCHIVE COLLECTION in October ($24.95); three DVDs with a long list of interesting films: "The Copper Beeches" (1912), "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (1921), "The Limejuice Mystery" (1930), "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" (1931), "Lost in Limehouse" (1933), "The Strange Case of Hennessy" (1933), "The Screaming Bishop" (1944), "The Speckled Band" (1949), "The Man Who Disappeared" (1951), "A Case of Hypnosis" (1952), and "The Sting of Death" (1955), plus bonus features. Some of these are first-time-on-DVD, and a few are first-time-ever.
398. Philip K. Jones has compiled an interesting spread-sheet data base of Sherlockian pastiches with (at the moment) more than 7,900 entries, and it is available for inspection (or download) at the web-site of the Illustrious Clients of Indianapolis <www.illustriousclients.ning.com>.
399. "Discover the Real Sherlock Holmes" is the invitation from the Royal Society of Medicine and the Royal Society of Surgeons of Edinburgh to an exhibition that opened at the RSM's Library on Sept. 1 and will run through Jan. 29. The focus of the exhibition is on Joseph Bell and Arthur Conan Doyle, and on Oct. 29 there will be a free public afternoon meeting on "Sherlock Holmes: Forensic Medicine and Fictional Crime Fighters". M.C. Black also provides a link <www.rsm.ac.uk/public/exhibitions.php>.
400. Bob Mangler spotted a real bargain: the Quality Paperback Book Club edition of the first two volumes of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES for $19.98. The Club's address is Box 6000, Columbia, MD 21045 (800-396-2665) <www.daedalusbooks.com>.
401. David Haugen reports that John Longenbaugh's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will have it's world premiere at the Taproot Theatre in Seattle, Nov. 20 through Dec. 30. 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>. "After being presumed dead for three years, a hardened Sherlock Holmes resurfaces, turning his back on the people who need him most. Three unexpected callers arrive on Christmas Eve uncovering clues from the detective's past, present, and future. Can they save Holmes and his world from a dire end?"
402. Sep 09 #3: The Scotsman reported (Aug. 30) that Robin Harper, chairman of the Scottish Parliament's arts advisory group, has launched a campaign to move the Richard Lancelyn Green collection from Portsmouth to Edinburgh. Harper said that "it is clear that Portsmouth is having a very difficult time handling this collection," noting cataloguing has not been completed, and that Portsmouth has not created a special museum to display the collection. Lee Hunt, the Portsmouth city councillor responsible for culture, responded that the collection is the central point of the city's bid to become a European City of Culture and was also being used to try to get the city included in England's football World Cup bid. "I think there is as much

- wind in this idea . . . as there is in your Scottish bagpipes," Hunt said, adding that "basically, the collection belongs to us and if Edinburgh thinks it's going to get it, it's not going to happen."
403. There's a Baker Street in Amsterdam, spotted by Samantha Wolov on a recent visit.
404. "Kosher Version of Sherlock Holmes Released" was the headline on a story that Al Gregory spotted at <www.isrealnationalnews.com>; the The Israeli branch of the Bilson publishing company has released a version of the Canon "adapted for the religious public." According to the publisher, hareidi-religious rabbis approved the content and vouched that "it doesn't contradict the spirit of Judaism (Hareidi Judaism is the most theologically conservative form of Orthodox Judaism). Intended to teach English to Israeli students, the book is accompanied by a CD recorded by American narrators to help Israeli students grasp American-accented English.
405. It's "in development" (which means that someone's thinking about it): "It's based on these stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Sherlock Holmes guy, that were written whatever, 100 some years ago, they're just really funny," Mike Judge told the Los Angeles Times (Sept. 3). Judge's film is "Brigadier Gerard" and John Altschuler and David Kinsky are working on a script. Variety reported last year that Steve Carrell is "attached" to play Gerard (Oct 08 #3).
406. Karen Murdock discovered costumes for Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson at the Dallas Vintage Shop <www.dallasvintageshop.com/index.php?s=sherlock>. You can see lots of other costumes if you click on "Home Page".
407. Further to the forecast of Eric Simonson's play "Fake" at the Steppenwolf Theater in Chicago (Feb 09 #4), it will run through Nov. 8. Their web-site <www.steppenwolf.org> has "Watch & Listen" audios, videos, photo galleries, and podcasts about the play, which features Francis Guinan as Conan Doyle.
408. A reminder: Eric Simonson's new play "Fake" (Feb 09 #4) opened at the Steppenwolf Theater in Chicago on Sept. 10, and runs through Nov. 8; the play begins in 1914, when Conan Doyle invites four guests to his English country home," and the play investigates how the Piltdown Hoax "rattled assumptions about evolution, faith, and science." The theater's at 1650 North Halstead Street, Chicago, IL 60614 (212-335-1650) <www.steppenwolf.org>.
409. Sep 09 #4: Forecast for October: the first four titles from Titan Books in their new series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (at £7.99 each) will be reprints of David Stuart Davies' pastiches THE SCROLL OF THE DEAD (1998) and THE VEILED DETECTIVE (2004), Daniel Stashower's THE ECTOPLASMIC MAN (1985), and Wade Wellman and Manly Wade Wellman's THE WAR OF THE WORLDS (1975); Titan's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
410. Further to the forecast of The Pleasant Places of Florida's "Wessex Weekend" on Feb. 12-14, 2010, Carl L. Heifetz is at <microdoc@tampabay.rr.com> (a new e-mail address).
411. Randall Stock notes that the typescript for "A Chat with Conan Doyle" (Aug 09 #8) is now on-line, and it turns out not to be the typescript for Robert Barr's "A Chat with Conan Doyle" but rather the typescript for the recording that Conan Doyle made for His Master's Voice on May 14, 1930; the HMV recording was issued in 1930 as "Conan Doyle Speaking". The first page of the transcript is titled (apparently in Conan Doyle's handwriting) "A Chat 'with' Conan Doyle" and you can see it at <www.tinyurl.com/lrr95e>.
412. Sorry about that: to find the Pub Sign Store's imaginative Sherlock Holmes Personalized Pub Sign (item 3252), go to <www.sherlock.pubsignstore.com>; use the coupon code [spermaceti] to get a 10% discount.
413. Reported: Partha Basu's THE CURIOUS CASE OF 221B: THE SECRET NOTEBOOKS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Noida: HarperCollins India; 288 pp., Rs299.00); "In this brilliant retelling that turns the Holmesian canon on its head, Partha Basu brings back a host of characters who have captivated generations of readers, except that they are no longer what we had made them out to be."
414. Michael Lawrence is selling his collection of Sherlockian books: they are mostly modern, and mostly pastiches; if you want to fill gaps in your own collection you can request his sales list <mwlawrence99@aol.com>.
415. Mark Alberstat's 2010 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. The calendar costs US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
416. F. Andrew Leslie's 1978 play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" opened at the Repertory East Playhouse in Newhall, Calif., on Sept. 18, and it will run through Oct. 17. 24266 San Fernando Road, Newhall, CA 91321 (661-288-0000) <www.repeastplayhouse.org>.
417. Richard M. Lackritz died on Sept. 5. He was an obstetrician and fertility specialist, and an enthusiastic collector; "find a book you like, you get it in paperback," he told a reporter in 2002, "and then you say, 'that book was so good, I'll get it in hardcover,' and then you say, 'a first edition would be great,' and then a different dust jacket or one signed by the author." His collection was sold at Christie's in 2002 and 2003, and he had some nice material, including an inscribed "Starrett copy" of "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet", and (something he didn't send to auction) the manuscript of "The Three Garridebs".
418. Sep 09 #5: Jamyang Norbu's pastiche THE MANDALA OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1999), which was published in the U.S. as SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE MISSING YEARS, has been translated into seven languages (Dutch, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, and Spanish), according to an interesting interview with Norbu in the Latse Library Newsletter (fall 2004). The Latse Contemporary Tibetan Culture Library is in New York and the newsletter is available on-line at <www.latse.org>.
419. An interesting Sherlock Holmes trompe l'oeil painting (described as American School, 20th Century) went to auction at Skinner Auctioneers in Marlborough (Mass.) on Sept. 11; estimated at $400-600, it sold for $830. You can see an image in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/l8d6rc>.
420. Dynamite Entertainment's comic-book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Mar 09 #6) has now reached the fourth (of five) issues, and a hardcover collection is due in October: SHERLOCK HOLMES VOL. 1: THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES ($24.95) will include bonus material such as annotations, script pages, and a complete Sherlock Holmes story with new illustrations. Dynamite's web-site is at <www.dynamitentertainment.com>.
421. Thad Holt has reported that a great deal of material in The Strand Magazine has been scanned and is available at Google <www.books.google.com>; enter [editions:LCCN09034301] in the search field. Full text of the magazine is available for 1891-1908, and other volumes as "snippet" views.
422. Fans of Mary Russell (heroine of Laurie R. King's continuing series) have a Yahoo group, and two different designs on a variety of merchandise (shirts, buttons, caps, mugs, coasters, mousepads, totebags, ornaments) available at <www.cafepress.com/lettersofmary>. The Yahoo group has lots of fanfic, and you can sign up at <www.groups.yahoo.com/group/Letters\_Of\_Mary>. There's a tentative publication date (June 2010) for the next book in the Mary Russell series, which will not, after all, be called THE GREEN MAN (since her publisher didn't like it, and has persuaded Laurie to change it); the

- new title is THE GOD OF THE HIVE). And there's a new way to promote books: a book trailer; Two Rock Media created an interesting one for THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, and you can view it on-line at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=sG2f3Q9yDm8>.
423. Donald Thomas' new play "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" had its premiere at the Manor Pavilion Theatre in Sidmouth on Sept. 24-30. He has written many pastiches, the most recent collection being SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE KING'S EVIL (Mar 09 #6); the play is a dramatization of his "The Case of the Phantom Chambermaid", which was published in THE EXECUTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Oct 08 #1).
424. Richard S. Warner ("High Tor") died on Sept. 19. Dick was a historian, an avid researcher, and an energetic Sherlockian. He was one of the founders of The Afghanistan Perceivers of Tulsa, and responsible for the naming of Holmes Peak, the first and still the only geographic feature in the United States named in honor of Sherlock Holmes and officially recognized by the Interior Department's U.S. Board of Geographic Names. Dick published a delightful GUIDEBOOK AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE ASCENT OF HOLMES PEAK in 1985, and received his thoroughly appropriate Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1987.

425. Sep 09 #6: Charterhouse Auctions had some interesting Conan Doyle material on offer on Sept. 25: a black-and-white photograph, inscribed by A. Conan Doyle, and a sword with hilt inscribed "P. Leckie Forbes, from his uncle A. Conan Doyle, 1915". According to Charterhouse, Forbes served with the Middlesex Regiment, attached to the RAF during WW1, and the sword was sent to auction by his grandson. Forbes's father was married to Jean Leckie's sister Sara, according to an article by Philip Bergem in the Newsletter of the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections (Dec. 2007). Estimated at £1,000-1500, the lot sold for £2,300.
426. Patrick Leckie Forbes' father was Patrick Forbes, a friend of Conan Doyle who worked with him on THE LOST WORLD and is acknowledged by Conan Doyle in his foreword to the book. Forbes appears twice (as both Summerlee and Roxton) in the photograph of "the members of the exploring party" (with Conan Doyle impersonating Challenger); the story of the photograph is told in Appendix B in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Alvin Roden (1996).
427. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Barbara Rusch's report on Michael Dirda's 2009 "Cameron Hollyer Lecture", Cliff Goldfarb's interesting account of Peggy Perdue's inspired sleuthing that identified a poster advertising one of the "Brigadier Gerard" stories, and other news from and about the collection; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>).
428. Ken Rozek has reported that San Marino issued a postage stamp honoring Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on June 16, one of three stamps in a set paying homage to writers (the others being Edgar Allan Poe and Raymond Chandler); you can see them in full color at <www.aasfn.sm>. Conan Doyle's is the E0.85 stamp, with an image of a bloodhound following footprints, and you can purchase singles, sheets of 20 stamps with a descriptive strip, and first day covers (Conan Doyle's is the 0.85E stamp, with a bloodhound following footprints); if the web-site "cart" doesn't work, you can order by e-mail at <aasfn@omniway.sm>; shipping costs E7.00.
429. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-9.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new. The previous issue has an amusing and "really terrifying image of an incredibly vicious Hound" that you can view at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times09-8.htm>.
430. Here a rat, there a rat, everywhere a giant rat. They've been turning up almost everywhere, in southeast Asia, at least. It was more than 25 years ago that Guy G. Musser and Cameron Newcomb published "Malaysian Murids and the Giant Rat of Sumatra" in the Bulletin of the American Museum of Natural History (Dec 83 #4), and explorers have been encountering them ever since. Most recently in Papua New Guinea, where the BBC Natural History Unit paid a visit to Mount Bosavi, a dormant volcano, and found at least 30 new species, including the Bosavi woolly rat, which measures more than 32 inches from nose to tail and weighs more than three pounds.

431. Sep 09 #7: There's more on the Guy Ritchie film "Sherlock Holmes" (Aug 09 #4): on Sept. 21 the Hollywood Reporter announced that Warner Bros. is developing a sequel, with Brad Pitt in talks to play Moriarty in the next film. And there's a real possibility that Pitt will have an uncredited cameo in the first film: the story notes that Moriarty is in the first film, but in shadow and unrecognizable. Warner Bros. has firmly denied rumors that Pitt will be in the first film, but of course if they were to confirm the rumors that would spoil any planned surprise.
432. There's plenty of precedent for uncredited cameos, including "FairyTale: A True Story" (1997), which starred Peter O'Toole as Conan Doyle; at the end of the film there's a brief scene with Frances Griffith's father, played by Mel Gibson (who's president of the company that co-produced the film). And at the end of Kevin Costner's "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" (1991) there is an appearance by King Richard, played by Sean Connery.
433. Karen Murdock discovered <www.perkydesigns.net>, which has 18 Sherlockian designs available on address labels, ID name tags, note cards, magnets, and other merchandise; roll over "Site Map" and look for the category "Sherlock Holmes".
434. The September issue of The Mysterious Bookshop Newsletter is now available; go to <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> and click on "Newsletter" in the column at the left. All sort of signed editions, plus a section of Sherlockiana, and news of THE VAMPIRE ARCHIVES: THE MOST COMPLETE VOLUME OF VAMPIRE TALES EVER PUBLISHED, edited by Otto Penzler and due from Vintage in Oct. (1,056 pp., $25.00); there's a preface by Neil Gaiman, and stories by a long list of fine writers in the genre, including Conan Doyle ("The Sussex Vampire" and "The Parasite").
435. The Chester Theatre Group will present Tim Kelly's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from Oct. 9 through Oct. 24 at the Black River Playhouse in Chester, N.J. The address for the box office address is Box 38, Chester, NJ 07930 (908-879-7304) <www.chestertheatregroup.org>.
436. Les Klinger is described as "today's foremost expert on society's fascination with bloodsuckers" in the "Playbill" in the October issue of Playboy. And the cover proclaims: "Vampire Love: Bloodlust! Why the Undead Are Hot Again!" Les' essay accompanies a pictorial on "Love Bites: Vampire Lovers Turn Fear into Fantasy".
437. Peter Abrahams' DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE: AN ECHO FALLS MYSTERY (Apr 05 #1) won an Agatha (childrens/young adults fiction) at Malice Domestic, and the series continued with BEHIND THE CURTAIN (New York: Laura Geringer/HarperCollins, 2006; 346 pp., $15.99) and INTO THE DARK (2008; 300 pp., $16.99); the heroine is Ingrid Levin-Hill, eighth-grade Sherlock Holmes fan and amateur actress, who is involved in seriously-adult problems and mysteries that are well written, with interesting characters and plenty of suspense. Stephen King gave BEHIND THE CURTAIN an enthusiastic blurb (saying that "Nancy Drew was never like this; it's the real deal"), and he was correct indeed.

438. Oct 09 #1: "The Sherlock Holmes Effect: How the Arthur Conan Doyle Classics Influence Contemporary Mysteries" is the title of a symposium that will be presented by the New York chapter of the Mystery Writers of America at 6:30pm on Jan. 26 at the Mid-Manhattan Library at 40th Street and 5th Avenue in New York; it will be open to the public at no charge, and the moderator will be E.J. Wagner, who will be assisted by Lyndsay Faye, Jonathan Maberry, Reggie Nadelson, and Andrew Jay Peck. There's an illustrated flier with more information at <www.mwa-ny.org/pdf/NYPL\_flyer\_2010-01-26-sherlock-holmes.pdf>. E.J. has a new Sherlockian blog at <www.ejdissectingroom.wordpress.com>.

439. Paramount Home Video has released a new DVD "Alvin and the Chipmunks Go to the Movies: Star Wreck" ($16.99) with three episodes from the series, one of them "Elementary, My Dear Simon" (30 minutes, 1988); "Simon introduces this special mystery episode and then stars in it as monocled ace detective Sherlock Holmes," with Theodore as Watson and Alvin as Moriarty.
440. Legacy Interactive is preparing to issue a sequel to its computer game "The Lost Cases of Sherlock Holmes" (May 08 #4). Vol. 2 will be available online in December and in retail shops early next year. Six screenshots can be seen now <www.gamershell.com/news\_83320.html>.
441. William Safire died on Sept. 27. He was a speechwriter for President Nixon, a Pulitzer Prize-winner political columnist for the N.Y. Times, a pundit, and an excellent writer. His column "On Language" ran for 30 years in N.Y. Times Magazine, with assistance from correspondents he called his Lexicographic Irregulars, and he mentioned Sherlock Holmes often in his columns in the N.Y. Times and his books; it was in SAFIRE'S POLITICAL DICTIONARY (1978) that he credited a Sherlock Holmes story as the inspiration for phrase "smoking gun" that became so popular during the Watergate era.
442. Forecast from MX Publishing in 2010: THE NORWOOD AUTHOR: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND THE NORWOOD YEARS (1891-1894), by Alistair Duncan. Duncan's the author of ELIMINATE THE IMPOSSIBLE (Apr 08 #5) and CLOSE TO HOLMES (Mar 09 #2).
443. Peter L. Stern's catalogs always are interesting: his fall 2009 catalog has a copy of the first edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES inscribed "I perambulated Dartmoor before I wrote this book. A. Conan Doyle." ($85,000) and an original wash drawing by Frederic Dorr Steele that was described by a New York bookshop in 1962 as an unpublished drawing of Sherlock Holmes, and it's attractive even though it's not Holmes ($750). Peter's address is 15 Court Square, Boston, MA 02108 (617-542-3263).
444. Forecast for March: David Grann's THE DEVIL AND SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF MURDER, MADNESS, AND OBSESSION (Doubleday, $25.95); presumably including his New Yorker article about Richard Lancelyn Green (Jan 05 #7).
445. Further to the report (Aug 09 #8) about the long-running controversy over the long-running controversy over the spelling of wisteria/wistaria, Karen Ellery notes that there is also a long-running controversy over the pronunciation of the word wisteria; and you can read an interesting discussion at <www.collinslanguage.blogspot.com/2009/07/normal-0-false-false-false.html>.

446. Oct 09 #2: It's not Sherlockian, but it's highly recommended: the Folger Shakespeare Theatre in Washington had a new production of "Macbeth" last year, directed by Teller (as in Penn &) and Aaron Posner, with fine actors and astounding magic devised by Teller; it's now available on a DVD with a new Folger edition of the play with a foreword by the directors (they describe the play as "a supernatural horror thriller"). The DVD has the play, and 50 minutes of interesting special features, and the book+DVD is published by Simon & Schuster ($16.00 and well worth it).
447. John Longenbaugh's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be produced in the Tap Root Theatre in Seattle, Nov. 20 through Dec. 30; the box-office address is 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>.
448. Chronicling America is a searchable digital data base of American newspaper pages from 1880 to 1922; it's sponsored jointly by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Library of Congress, and it now has more than a million pages. The URL is <chroniclingamerica.loc.gov> and a recent search for [sherlock holmes] turned up 352 hits; a search for [conan doyle] yielded 303 hits.
449. Nis Jessen reports that there's a new web-site displaying handsome artwork, including his work on an illustrated edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (Jul 05 #5): <www.jessen-gallery.dk>.
450. Andy Solberg notes that "It's a Mystery, Charlie Brown" (1974), with Snoopy as the Sherlockian detective, is one of six 30-minute television specials in a new two-DVD set PEANUTS 1970'S COLLECTION, VOLUME 1 (from Warner Home Video, $29.98).
451. VICTIMS & VILLAINS: BARBIE AND KEN MEET SHERLOCK HOLMES (Vancleave: Ramble House, 2009; 169 pp., $17.99) is the latest book by Derham Groves, who continues to offer interesting Sherlockian challenges to his architecture students at the University of Melbourne: this time they each read a Sherlock Holmes story and portrayed a victim or villain in the story by changing the appearance of a Barbie or Ken doll, and Derham notes that they produced "a horrifying collection of dolls that had been bludgeoned, garroted, hanged, mauled, poisoned, scared, shot, stabbed, and strangled," and the students obviously had fun with the project. The book has photographs of the dolls, and discussion of the exhibition "Murderous Melbourne" that was on display at the University last year. You can also view a podcast about the exhibition at <www.visions.unimelb.edu.au/episode/47>; there's an interview with Derham, and views of the exhibition, all in the second half of the 5-minute podcast.
452. Further to the report (Jan 09 #4) on THE COMPLETE BAKER STREET MISCELLANEA on CD, Randall Stock has provided an excellent in-depth review of the CD at <www.bestofsherlock.com/journal/bsm-review.htm#summary>, including helpful tips on using the CD; the CD is available for $40.00 (postpaid) from Donald Pollock, 521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305; non-U.S. buyers are welcome to use PayPal and should contact Don at <donaldkpollock@gmail.com>. Randall also offers an informative look at "The e-World of Sherlock Holmes" at <www.bestofsherlock.com/eworld/ewhome.htm>.

453. Oct 09 #3: Profiles in History (26901 Agoura Road #150, Calabasas Hills, CA 81391 (310-859-7701) <www.profilesinhistory.com> is offering three interesting letters: one (non-Doylean) by Joseph Bell; one written by Conan Doyle to the actor O. P. Heggie, who in 1911 was appearing as Holmes in "The Speckled Band"; and one written by Harry Houdini to Conan Doyle in 1922, after the famous seance in Atlantic City. You can see them on-line; go to the web-site and search for [conan doyle].
454. In 2004 Nicholas Utechin recorded new introductions for the BBC Digital Radio 7 series "Sherlock Holmes with Carlton Hobbs" (12 of the stories that the BBC broadcast in 1959, starring Carlton Hobbs and Norman Shelley), and BBC Audio plans to release the 12 programs in "The Carlton Hobbs Sherlock Holmes Collection" on three CDs in January (£30.00).
455. Sorry about that: to find The Strand Magazine at <www.books.google.com> you search for [editions:LCCN09034341] to get the various scanned issues of the magazine.
456. James Barry's play "Sherlock Holmes' Excellent Adventure" will be performed at the Coronado Playhouse, Oct. 30 through Nov. 29 (1835 Strand Way, Coronado, CA 92118) (619-435-4856) <www.coronadoplayhouse.com>; "this delightful parody uses visual and theatrical jokes, wordplay, and audience participation to skewer Holmesian traditions."
457. The script for the play can be read (and purchased) on-line from Lazy Bee Scripts <www.lazybeescripts.co.uk>, and there are other Sherlockian scripts available: "The Double-Headed Penny-Farthing" (by Robert Black), "Sherlock Holmes & the Emerald of Alcazar" (by Geoff Bamber), "The Death of Sherlock Holmes" (by Richard James), "Sherlock Holmes and the Pirates of the Horn" (by Vithal Rajan), "Sherlock Holmes' Last Case" (by Charlie Cook), "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of Mallen Hall" (by Richard James), "Sherlock Holmes--The Panto" (by Jenny Gilbert), "The Sinister Mrs. Eaves" (by Robert Black), and "The Man Who Died Twice" (by Robert Black).

458. Forecast: SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S SHERLOCK HOLMES, from A&E Home Video in December, on 2 DVDs ($29.95); the five surviving broadcasts from the 1968 BBC television series starring Peter Cushing and Nigel Stock ("The Hound of the Baskervilles" in two parts, "A Study in Scarlet", "The Sign of Four", "The Blue Carbuncle", and "The Valley Mystery").
459. There's always something new: a Sherlockian comic book that's available only on the Internet: John Arcudi's MENS INIURIA IN CORPORE SANO: A PANGOLIN CLASSIC at <www.myspace.com/darkhorsepresents?issuenu=26&storynum=1>. It's issue #26 in a series from Dark Horse, and they'll publish it next year in an ink-on-paper collection. Thanks to Les Klinger for reporting this.
460. Forecast for November: VICTORIAN UNDEAD, from Wildstorm; the first issue of six in comic book mini-series written by Ian Edginton ("the undead are returning to life, hungry for flesh and threatening all of Victorian London," and Holmes and Watson face "the most extraordinary case of their career"). Also: GASLIGHT GROTESQUE: NIGHTMARE TALES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec, from Edge in November; it's a follow-up to their GASLIGHT GRIMOIRE (Dec 08 #2).
461. Oct 09 #4: Ken Lanza spotted a story in the North Wales Daily Post (Oct. 1) about location work in Caernarfon on a new Sherlock Holmes that will star Ben Snyder as Holmes and David Gareth-Lloyd as Watson; the film is expected to be available on DVD in January. The production company explains that "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective faces the ultimate challenge when enormous monsters attack London."
462. It's not quite "Conan Doyle slept here," but a house he's said to have visited is for sale: Green Lane in Dalston in Cumbria, was built in the early 1700s and has been home to seven generations of the Trimble family and is now on the market for £1.3 million. Ron Trimble, the current owner, told the Cumberland News (Oct. 11) that Conan Doyle was a "not-infrequent visitor" to Green Lane because his sister Angel had married the local curate, and they lived at Whitesmiths at the top of the Green Lane drive. Presumably that was Conan Doyle's sister Dodo, who married Charles Cyril Angell.
463. Jerry Margolin is selling Sherlockian artist Jeff Decker's portrait in oils of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. You can request an image and price from Jerry (10007 S.W. Quail Post Road, Portland, OR 97219) <221bee@comcast.net>.
464. If you would like to be among the first to see Guy Ritchie's new "Sherlock Holmes" film, plan to be in Hong Kong or Malaysia on Dec. 24, which is the release date posted at the Internet Movie Data Base. And the film will be in theaters on Dec. 25 in Singapore and five countries in Europe (they're a few hours ahead of the U.S.). There is a new trailer for the film (you get to see Mrs. Hudson, and Dr. Watson's bull pup), and it may still be available at <www.iwatchstuff.com/29/1/new_sherlock_holmes_trailer_du.php>.
465. Stuart M. Kaminsky died on Oct. 9. He was a prolific writer who won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America for Best Novel (1989), and the MWA Grand Master award in 2006. His novel THE HOWARD HUGHES AFFAIR (1979) featured hard-boiled Los Angeles detective Toby Peters and amateur Sherlockian detective Basil Rathbone, and HE DONE HER WRONG (1983) had Peters appearing as guest speaker at a monthly meeting of The Engineer's Thumbs. He wrote a pastiche "The Final Toast" (1987) and dramatized it for performance at the International Mystery Writers' Festival in 2008.
466. Reported (new pastiches): THE MERCHANT OF DEATH, by June Dixon and Donald Monat (from iUniverse); SHERLOCK HOLMES: REPORTS FROM THE DARK SIDE, by Tom Cavenagh (from iUniverse); VANISHING GIRL, by Shane Peacock (the third in his series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes," from Tundra)
467. Karen Murdock spotted the debut album titled "Theories to Suit Facts" from the Bristol-based indie/electronica band JetKing; the album features Conan Doyle on the cover. It was in "A Scandal in Bohemia" that Sherlock Holmes told Watson that "It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts." The band has a web-site at <www.jetking.info>, and the album is available as a CD (£7.99) or as an MP3 file (£6.99). Vaughn Atkinson (guitars and programme) explains that the band really liked the thought behind the quotation, and examples of that kind of thinking are still very much evident today, and that once the album was in place it seemed logical to feature Conan Doyle on the cover.

468. Oct 09 #5: Ransom Riggs' article on "The Surreal Life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" was published earlier this year in the magazine mental_floss (Jul 09 #4), and his new book THE SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK (Philadelphia: Quirk Books, 2009; 221 pp., $16.95) offers an interesting and sometimes off-beat look at "the methods and mysteries of the world's greatest detective" (with helpful hints on "How to Outwit a Criminal Mastermind" and "How to Survive a Plunge Over a Waterfall"). There's a "look inside" feature, with a sample of Eugene Smith's artwork, at <www.amazon.com>.
469. Jennie Paton spotted two deeply-discounted offers from Daedalus Books (800-395-2665) <www.daedalusbooks.com>: DVDs with "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970/Robert Stephens and Colin Blakely) and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978/Peter Cook and Dudley Moore) at $6.98 each.
470. Sean Wright has reported that TCM (Turner Classic Movies) will broadcast a "Sherlock Holmes Orgy" Dec. 25-27: "Sherlock Holmes" (1922/John Barrymore), "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" (1931/Arthur Wontner), almost all of the Basil Rathbone, "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959/Peter Cushing), "A Study in Terror" (1965/John Neville), and "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970/Robert Stephens).
471. Peter H. Wood has donated his reference collection of Sherlockian and Doylean books and journals to the Rare Books Library at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, British Columbia; he is the author of the pastiche THE WINGED WHEEL (1995) and a long-time member of The Bootmakers of Toronto (from whom he received a Master Bootmaker Award in 1983).
472. Reported: POWERLESS, by Matthew Cody (New York: Knopf Books for Young Readers, 2009; 288 pp., $16.99); "superhero kids meet comic-book mystery" (12-year-old Daniel has a sharp mind and is fond of Sherlock Holmes stories).
473. Milton Supman died on Oct 22. He began his television career in the 1950s and became the star of the widely-syndicated television program "The Soupy Sales Show" in the 1960s; he developed pie-throwing into an art form, and claimed that he and his guests had been hit by pies more than 20,000 times during his career. He also had puppets on his show, including White Fang ("the meanest dog in the U.S.A."), whose howl was taken from a radio broadcast of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Sales got his start in entertainment in the Navy, broadcasting over a ship's radio station, where he found, and kept, a recording of the story that had been distributed Armed Forces).
474. Andy Peck has noted that the Mystery Guild is offering book-club editions of THE IMPROBABLE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by John Joseph Adams (Sep 09 #1) for $12.99 (order no. 25-8783), and THE LANGUAGE OF BEES, by Laurie R. King (Apr 09 #4) for $14.99 (77-8398); Box 6325, Indianapolis, IN 46206 <www.mysteryguild.com>.
475. Further to the forecast (Aug 09 #1) of the "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" coming up in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 6-8, the next weekend celebration will be held on Mar. 19-21, with a repeat of the mystery "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Mistaken Identity"; you can contact the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts (1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204) (800-275-4278) or visit the web-site <www.capemaymac.org/content/sub-age_tours.aspx?id=96>.
476. Oct 09 #6: Sherlock Holmes' 156th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 15, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own

- checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014 <susan221bee@gmail.com> know if you're coming to the event.
477. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcox@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather.
478. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 6th floor of the Williams Club (24 East 39th Street, between Madison and Park Avenues); the speaker will be Joan Winterkorn, an internationally recognized appraiser and archivist who evaluated the seven-generation John Murray & Sons archives; she will talk about Holmes, Conan Doyle, and other Murray authors' archival adventures. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below). Tickets will not be sold at the door.
479. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Friday on the second floor of the Algonquin to present Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people.
480. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
481. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $45.00 for chicken or salmon ($50.00 for prime rib). Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> is the contact for a formal announcement.
482. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919/phone 845-361-4320). Please include your e-mail address and primary Sherlockian society affiliation.
483. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised.
484. Oct 09 #7: Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs included in the various dinner packets can send 170 copies (for the BSI) to James B. Saunders (3011 47th Street, Astoria, NY 11103), and 100 copies (for the Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley, 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your material should arrive by Dec. 15.
485. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available in the dealers' room (Covent Garden West) on the second floor of the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; for information about dealers' tables, contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com>. And the Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the writings of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will convene for a Junior Bloodstain (a considerably less than totally reverent event) in the lobby of the Algonquin Hotel at 10:30 am; if you're planning to attend, please contact Anne Cotton (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
486. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:30 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). The cost is $79.00 (details below) or $89.00 after Nov. 25 or at the door.
487. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:15 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 64th Street (between 6th and 7th Avenues) (and yes, 6th Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas), and the cost will be $20.00 including tax and tip. It's open to all, but space is limited and reservations will be important; please send your checks to Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032). Guests from overseas can reserve by e-mail and pay at the door; her e-mail address is <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
488. The Algonquin Hotel has been the weekend home for the birthday festivities for more than 50 years, and rooms may be available (details below).
489. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Algonquin Hotel, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, you can visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and click on BSI Weekend, or contact Mary Ann Bradley <mabmfw@aol.com>.
490. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; you would be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you should not forget about non-optional extras such as almost 18% in state and city taxes).

491. Oct 09 #8: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
492. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and <www.bsiweekend.com>. News of additional events will be found in this newsletter, and at the web-sites.
493. Vic Mizzy died on Oct. 17. He had a long career as a composer for film and television, and was best known for his "Addams Family" theme (unless you're a fan of "Green Acres"); Dave Morrill notes that much of Mizzy's score for William Castle's "The Night Walker" (1964) was used again in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1972, with Stewart Granger).
494. Reported: tales of a "bloodsucking plant, a heat-draining Eskimo vampire, and a fang-bearing femme fatale" in THE VAMPIRE TALES OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Robert Eighteen-Bisang, with an introduction by Martin H. Greenberg (from Skyhorse, $14.95).
495. There's a new special-clearance offer at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> for a "six pack" of BSJ Christmas Annuals. You should click on "Items for Sale" and then on "Deal Table"; the offer's limited-time-only.
496. Christopher Morley called H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY (1941) "the most original and enchanting crime story of the year," and it is grand to have the book back in print (Nevada City: Blue Dolphin, 2009; 180 pp., $16.95) as the first in "The Mr. Mycroft Commemorative Series". The book is about "Mr. Mycroft" (many have suspected he's really an elderly and retired Sherlock Holmes); the book was adapted for television as "The Sting of Death" (1955) with Boris Karloff as Mr. Mycroft (kinescopes survive, but are not available commercially), and the film "The Deadly Bees" (1967) was based on the book, with a script by Robert Bloch (who was so annoyed when a British writer removed the Mr. Mycroft character and "juiced up the script" that

- Bloch never saw what he called his "deformed offspring"). The new edition has an informative foreword by Stacy Gillis, and an interesting afterword by John Roger Barrie, who addresses the question, "Who Is Mr. Mycroft?"
497. An accidental discovery on Wikipedia: "The Menagerie" (described as a dark fantasy-novel series written by Christopher Golden and Thomas E. Sniegowski) has four titles published by Ace Books: THE NIMBLE MAN (2004), TEARS OF THE FURIES (2005), STONES UNTURNED (2006), and CRASHING PARADISE (2007), all of them featuring Arthur Conan Doyle as a major character named Mr. Doyle, who is the second most powerful sorcerer in the world, according to the Golden's web-site <www.christophergolden.com/menagerie>.
498. Nov 09 #1: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London also celebrates the Great Detective's birthday in January: a reception honoring "Conan Doyle and Joseph Bell" on Jan. 8 at the Royal Society of Medicine, an annual dinner (the title this year is "The Blackmailer's Beanfest") on Jan. 9 in the Members' Dining Room at the House of Commons (Ruth Rendell will be guest of honour), and a morning-after gathering on Jan. 10 at the Centre Page in Knightrider Street.
499. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Charles Press' "100 Years Ago" essay on Bertram Atkey and his early golfing pastiche, Jon Lellenberg's "50 Years Ago" discussion of the ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE CENTENARY ALBUM, Tim Johnson's report on a visit by John Bennett Shaw's son Patrick, and other news about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
500. Bouchercon 40 ("Elementary, My Dear Indy!") was held Oct. 15-18 in Indianapolis, and the program included a well-attended panel ("A Canonical and Conan Confluence") with Mike Whelan as moderator, and Steve Doyle, Laurie King, Les Klinger, and Roy Pilot as panelists. Jeffrey Marks received an Anthony (best nonfiction critical work) for his ANTHONY BOUCHER: A BIOBIBLIOGRAPHY (Mar 08 #1).
501. Bouchercon 41 will be held in San Francisco, Oct. 14-17, 2010 (with Laurie King as the American guest of honor) <www.bcon2010.com>; Bouchercon 42 will be in St. Louis (Sept. 15-18) <www.bouchercon2011.com>, and there has been no selection of a city for Bouchercon 43 in 2012. Bouchercon is the longestablished world mystery convention, run by fans for fans, named in honor of Anthony Boucher, and it's a grand opportunity to meet authors and fans.
502. Technology continues to make things interesting: Mattias Bostrom's Swedish web-site at <www.sherlockholmes.se> has a "Google Translate" feature that translates from Swedish into 34 other languages, and while it's not a polished translation, you can get a good idea of what's going on in Sweden and elsewhere in the world.
503. Further to the discussion (Oct 09 #1) of wisteria and wistaria, Steve Rothman notes that Caspar Wuster anglicized his name to Wistar (the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia is named in his honor); his brother John used the spelling Wister (and one of his descendants was Owen Wister, author of THE VIRGINIAN). It is unlikely that the Worcestersters and Woostersters are branches of the same family tree.
504. Titan Books' reprint series "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" has launched with four excellent pastiches: David Stuart Davies' THE SCROLL OF THE DEAD (1998) and THE VEILED DETECTIVE (2004), Daniel Stashower's THE ECTOPLASMIC MAN (1985), and Manly Wade Wellman and Wade Wellman's THE WAR OF THE WORLDS (1975); £7.99/$9.95 each (trade paperbacks, with attractive covers). H. Paul Jeffers' THE STALWART COMPANIONS (1981) and Barrie Roberts' THE MAN FROM HELL (1997) are scheduled for February 2010. The publisher's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.

505. Nov 09 #2: Frank S. Beckman ("Lord Backwater") died on Oct. 16. He was a mathematician, the founder and chairman of the Dept. of Computer and Information Science at Brooklyn College of the City University of New York, and then the founder and executive director of the computer science Ph.D. program at the CUNY Graduate Center in New York; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1984.
506. "Science is cool!" is the motto of Pulse of the Planets' Kids' Science Challenge, which has a Sherlockian emblem for its "Detective Science" section; their web-site's at <www.kidsciencechallenge.com>.
507. Susan Diamond has reported that the running of The Silver Blaze at the Hawthorne Race Course in Chicago (Apr 09 #1) went very well, and that there are extra copies of two commemorative booklets and a commemorative pin; $18.00 postpaid for all three items (please make your check payable to The Watsonians) from Susan at 16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106.
508. The race also was the occasion for the publication of TWO CELEBRATIONS: THE FIFTIETH ANNUAL RUNNING OF THE CHICAGO BLAZE AND THE TRIENNIAL SILVER BLAZE OF THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS by the BSI; edited by Candace Lewis, the 56-page book includes 14 black-and-white and color photographs is available for $12.95 (plus shipping) <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>. Candace Lewis offers a description of flat-racing as shown in 19th-century art, Roger Donway investigates the fun and logic of "Silver Blaze", and Art Levine reminisces about runnings of the race in New York. The BSI's special offer of copies of BSI Christmas Annuals ($7.00 each or $35.00 for six), also available at the web-site, expires at the end of December.
510. The Beaver Creek Community Theatre will present Tim Kelly's version of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" from Dec. 4 to 13; 3868 Dayton-Xenia Road, Beaver Creek, OH 45432 (937-429-4737) <www.bctheatre.org>.
511. "The Empty House" is a new and imaginative set of figures (Holmes, Watson, Lestrade, Moran, a bobby, and Mrs. Hudson), designed by Jim Hillestad, and available for $155.00. The Toy Soldier Museum <www.the-toy-soldier.com>, offers many other attractive figures, and you can see the Sherlockian set in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/ykn13au>.
512. Anthony J. Richard reports that Breese Books is offering Douglas Wilmer's memoirs STAGE WHISPERS (Apr 09 #3), and will soon publish Emanuel E. Garcia's pastiche THE CASE OF THE MISSING STRADIVARIUS and reprint Abbey Pen Baker's IN THE DEAD OF WINTER (1994) and then publish her new Myrl Norton Adler pastiche DEATH AT THE ROUND TABLE; details are (or will be) available at his web-site at <www.crime4u.com/officialbreesebo.html>.
513. Nov 09 #3: VANISHING GIRL (Toronto: Tundra, 2009; 307 pp., $19.95) is the third in his series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" (who is on his own in London and learning how to be a detective); the book has interesting characters, an intriguing mystery, and imaginative twists and turns. Peacock maintains the quality of his series, and Tundra is producing good books, with decorated covers and two-sided dust jackets. The author's website is at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.
514. Sorry about that: the Mid-Manhattan Library, site of the symposium on "The Sherlock Holmes Effect: How the Arthur Conan Doyle Classics Influence Contemporary Mysteries" on Jan. 26 (Oct 09 #1) is at 40th Street and 5th Avenue in New York.

515. Samantha Wolov has spotted a cute hand-crafted felt Sherlock Holmes mouse from Eden & Eden (560 Jackson Street, San Francisco, CA 94133) (415-983-0490); you can see it in full color at <www.edenandeden.com/item.php?p=499>.
516. Archie McPhee offered their attractive Sherlock Holmes Action Figure some years ago (Aug 04 #6); it's still available at the same price ($8.95), along with a wide variety of amusing items such as absinthe dental floss and an avenging narwhal play set (Box 30852, Seattle, WA 98113) <www.mcphee.com>.
517. AbeBooks has reported the results from BookFinder's compilation of the most sought-after books from July 2008 to June 2009: in the "mystery and thrillers" category William S. Baring-Gould's ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES ranked IN 7th place. If you want to see the top-ten titles on all of the lists, just visit <www.abebooks.com/book/rare-scarce/most-wanted-out-of-print.shtml>.
518. David Morrill has reported that Douglas Wilmer's version of "The Illustrious Client" (1965), at YouTube. All of it, in fact, in five parts. Go to <www.youtube.com>, search for [illustrious client wilmer], and then click on the "five videos" link.
519. "Elementary, My Dear Watson: The Man Behind Sherlock Holmes" is a new video by Philip Gardiner, who has written books that include SECRETS OF THE SERPENT: IN SEARCH OF THE SACRED PAST and THE BOND CODE: THE DARK WORLD OF IAN FLEMING AND JAMES BOND; produced by Reality Entertainment, the DVD attempts to answer the question "What secrets lurk hidden behind the enigmatic counterpart to Sherlock Holmes?" and concludes that there's much of Conan Doyle in both Watson and Holmes. Produced by Reality Entertainment ($24.95), the DVD includes the new 55-minute video and Gardiner's earlier 70-minute "The Madness of Sherlock Holmes: Conan Doyle and the Realm of the Faeries" (Jan 08 #7). There are previews of both videos at <www.youtube.com>.
520. Admirers of "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" and "Gus: The Theatre Cat" will enjoy a new edition of T. S. Eliot's OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS (Jul 08 #2); book has had many illustrators, including the author (who designed the dust jacket for the first edition), Nicolas Bentley, and Edward Gorey, and Axel Scheffler has created attractive artwork for the new edition (London: Faber and Faber, 2009; 80 pp., £14.99) and (Boston: Harcourt Children's Books, 2009; 64 pp., $16.00).

521. Nov 09 #4: There's a long series of early pastiches known to Sherlockians as the "memorias intimas" (actually first published in German, they first came to the attention of Sherlockian collectors translated into Spanish). The original title of the series was "Detektiv Sherlock Holmes und Seine Weltberuhmpten Abenteur" (1907), and Holmes was assisted by Harry Taxon; eventually the hero became Harry Dickson, assisted by Tom Wills, and the stories are still being published, in translation and pastiche. HARRY DICKSON: THE AMERICAN SHERLOCK HOLMES (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2009; 247 pp., $20.95/£12.99) offers translations by Jean-Marc and Randy Lofficier of four stories first published in the 1930s. The publisher has a web-site at <www.blackcoatpress.com>.
522. Ken Lanza discovered the first issue of Dynamite Entertainment's comic-book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TRIAL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sep 09 #5) online in full color <www.newsarama.com/php/multimedia/album.php?aid=31844>. It's an interesting way to promote a series.
523. Alderney (one of the Channel Islands, and part of the Bailiwick of Guernsey) has about 2,400 inhabitants and an extremely active philatelic bureau, and it is the fourth country to issue stamps honoring Conan Doyle this year. There's a set of six stamps, sheets of ten stamps (with illustrated margins), a presentation pack, a first day cover, and a "mystery pack" that includes a special lens and hidden clues that will help you solve a case called "Sherlock Holmes and the Curious Case of the Alderney Bull" (a pastiche written by Keith Robinson, who also designed the stamps). You can order all of the items from the Guernsey Philatelic Bureau (Envoy House, La Vrangue, St. Peter Port, Guernsey, Channel Islands GY1 5SS, Great Britain) and from their web-site at <www.guernseystamps.com>.
524. Bert Coules has reported that "Arthur & George", a new play by David Edgar based on the novel by Julian Barnes about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and George Edalji (Sep 05 #5) is scheduled at the Birmingham Repertory Theatre, Mar. 19 through Apr 10, 2010. Broad Street, Birmingham, West Midlands B1 2EP, England <www.birmingham-rep.co.uk>.
525. VAMPIRE STORIES: SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Robert Eighteen-Bisang and Martin H. Greenberg (New York: Skyhorse, 2009; 271 pp., $14.95), casts its net widely: the contents include nine stories (three Canonical and six non-Canonical), a new pastiche ("The Case of the Vanished Vampire") by Bill Crider, and a comprehensive "Sherlock Holmes Vampire Bibliography" of short stories, books, and comic books. And the editors offer interesting explanations for their choices (in case you're wondering, the other two Canonical stories are "The Illustrious Client" and "The Three Gables"). Skyhorse also published the anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA (Apr 09 #1); their web-site's at <www.skyhorsepublishing.com>.
526. Ely M. Liebow's excellent biography DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (1982) is now available in French as L'HOMME QUI TAIT SHERLOCK HOLMES: UNE BIOGRAPHIE DU DOCTEUR JOE BELL, with a new preface by Thierry Saint-Joannis (Paris: Editions Baker Street, 2009; 304 pp. E21.00); the translation was published by Ely's daughter Cynthia, and the book is available from Amazon in France <www.amazon.fr>.
527. Nov 09 #5: Peter Calamai reports that the Canadian Wildlife Federation's 2010 calendar includes a colorful photograph of a fluorescing Lion's Mane. The Federation's web-site is at <www.cwffcf.org/en>; search for [2010 calendar]. If you'd like to see the photograph (in vivid color), go to <www.mindenpictures.com> and search for [cyanea].
528. The Societe Sherlock Holmes de France has reported on the new Centara Grand Mirage Beach Resort Pattaya in Thailand, which is advertised as a "unique and exciting Lost World themed hotel." Alas, there is nothing related to Conan Doyle's "Lost World" except some jungle. You can read more (in both French and English) at <www.sshf.com/index.php3?file=news&num711>. And the hotel's web-site's at <www.centarahotelsresorts.com/pattaya\_hotels.asp>.
529. Thanks to the Internet, we are able to provide advance news of some of the items that will be in the auction and raffle that will benefit the Dr. John H. Watson Fund during the reception on Saturday, Jan. 16; here's the URL: <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/bsiweekend/auction.html>.
530. Christopher Lee received a knighthood in the Queen's Birthday Honours list for services to drama and charity (Jul 09 #1); he was knighted on Oct. 30 at Buckingham Palace by Prince Charles. Sir Christopher's dramatic roles have included Sherlock Holmes, Mycroft Holmes, and Sir Henry Baskerville, and he has made audio recordings of some of the Canonical tales.
531. Vector graphics uses points, lines, curves, and polygons based on mathematical equations to display images in computer graphics, and Sean Wright found an interesting and imaginative set of Sherlockian images offered for sale by ClipartLab. Their web-site is at <www.clipartlab.com>; search for [sherlock].
532. "Treasures at the National Library of Scotland" is an exhibition in Edinburgh through Jan. 8, and one of the "ten iconic items" from the Library's collections is the manuscript of "The Illustrious Client".
533. More information is available on The Pleasant Places of Florida's 20th-anniversary celebration of the Wessex Cup on Feb. 12-14, 2010. The "Wessex Weekend" includes meals, presentations, and other festivities, as well as the running of the race. Carl L. Heifetz (1220 Winding Willow Drive, New Port Richey, FL 34655) <microdod@verizon.net> will be happy to provide details on request.

534. Randall Stock continues to add interesting and useful material to his "The Best of Sherlock" web-site, the latest being his census of the known pages from the manuscript of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (35 pages are known to exist: 25 pages are held by libraries and 6 by private collectors, and the owners of 4 more pages are not known). You can see the results of his research at <www.bestofsherlock.com/baskervilles-manuscript.htm>. And he has prepared a list of Sherlock Holmes gifts, for those who are preparing their Christmas lists or who are wondering what to give Sherlockians; he has suggestions for new fans and for long-time S'ians, and you will find his lists at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm>.

535. Nov 09 #6: Edmond and Leon Bloch were specialists in disguised and hidden "detective" cameras; they made Physiographe cameras (disguised as minoculars and binoculars), and a Photo-Cravate (with the camera hidden behind a necktie), and the rarest of their designs is Le Sherlock Holmes, a magazine box camera that's disguised as a small briefcase; it's very rare, and nearly all of the handful of examples known worldwide are in museums. All of this according to WestLicht, which is offering Le Sherlock Holmes at auction in Vienna on Dec. 5 (estimated at E16,000 to E20,000, with a starting bid of E8,000). The camera is dated c.1912, and there's a photograph at <www.westlicht-auction.com/index.php?id=175121&acat=175121&\_ssl=off>.
537. Sir Andrew Sloan died on Nov. 11. He was a career detective, and in 1979 he was appointed national coordinator for the regional crime squads of England and Wales, and was one of the specialists invited to review the investigation into the Yorkshire Ripper case, which led to the creation of a new computer called the Home Office (Large) Major Enquiry System [HOLMES] (Apr 85 #6). HOLMES eventually was succeeded by HOLMES 2, and Sloan received a knighthood in 1991.
538. Cookie Beck offers miniatures, dolls houses, and dolls, including Sherlock Fox ($550.00) and his assistant Miss Mouse ($425.00) at Cookie's Bits and Pieces (21 Field Rock Road, Monroe, CT 06468) (203-268-8610), and you can see them in full color at her web-site <www.cookiesbitsandpieces.com>; the dolls are 6 in. high.
540. Reported: THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, a "luxury edition" celebrating the 150th anniversary of the birth of Conan Doyle, with a new introduction by P. D. James, from Random House UK, £25.00. SHERLOCK HOLMES IN RUSSIA, seven pastiches edited by George Piliev and translated by Alex Auswaks, from Robert Hale, £18.99. THE CASE NOTES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Guy Adams and Lee Thompson, from Andre Deutsch, £19.99; a scrapbook of evidence, some of it in evidence bags, for six of the Canonical tales. SHERLOCK, JOHN, AND TREVOR, three pastiches by C. C. Williamsen, from AuthorHouse, $15.99. THE PENGUIN COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, with a new introduction by Ruth Rendell, from Penguin, £30.00 cloth, £16.99 paper.
541. A new catalog from Alberene Royal Mail (Box 902, 9 Mill Alley, Harrisville, NH 03450) (800-843-9078) <www.alberene.com> has many Sherlockian items, including pub glasses, a pub chalkboard, a pub-in-a-box, a pub sign from The Sherlock Holmes, a pocket magnifier, a pocket watch, a movie poster, and a wall clock (as well as a Diogenes Club wall clock).
542. Nov 09 #7: The Red Circle of Washington continues to look for politicians who display some Sherlockian expertise, and we can now add Vice President Joe Biden to the list. Dan Stashower spotted him on "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" on Comedy Central on Nov. 17, discussing the Recovery Act: "One thing you haven't seen is that old thing about the dog that hadn't barked: you haven't seen the big waste."
543. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES, by Steven Doyle, from For Dummies in March; 384 pp., $19.99. The series began in 1991 with DOS FOR DUMMIES, and there are now more than 1,700 titles; according to the publisher, "It's elementary! SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES is an indispensable guide for students and fans alike!"
544. Pattie Tierney has created an attractive Sherlock Holmes Holiday Greeting Photo Card ($3.50) that comes with a recipe for Sherlock's gingerbread; you can see it at <www.etsy.com/view\_listing.php?listing\_id=35011606>.
545. Edward Woodward died on Nov. 16. He began his acting career on stage at an early age, and went on to star as "Callan" on television from 1967 to 1972, and as "The Equalizer" from 1986 to 1989, and received an OBE [Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire] in 1978. Woodward played Mason in "Shoscombe Old Place" in the BBC Peter Cushing television series in 1968, Dr. Watson in John Kane's play "Murder, Dear Watson" in 1983, and Sherlock Holmes in the television film "Hands of a Murderer" in 1990.
546. Pat Ward discovered the American Library Association's series of READ posters, including one showing Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law from the upcoming Guy Ritchie film, with the quotation "When you have eliminated all which is impossible, then whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." $16.00 at their web-site <www.alastore.ala.org>. Early purchasers may have acquired a first edition with a typo ("improbably"). Another poster shows Rachel McAdams, but in a different film ("The Time Traveller's Wife").
547. Further to the report (Sep 09 #2) on SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARCHIVE COLLECTION, the three-DVD set from Synergy Entertainment ($24.95) is a splendid collection of early films. Produced by Ronnie James, one of the earliest and most energetic collector of old and not-so-old films, the set has some real treasures, including "The Sting of Death" (1955), a one-hour dramatization for television of H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY that starred Boris Karloff as Mr. Mycroft that has never been available before. The same is true of "Lost in Limehouse, or Lady Esmerelda's Predicament" (1933), a 20-minute short with Olaf Hytten as Sheerluck Jones, and "A Case of Hypnosis" (1952), a short detective film with an all-chimpanzee cast (with a detective in Sherlockian costume). There are many other films in the set, with Holmes played by Georges Treville, Eille Norwood, Arthur Wontner, Alan Napier, and John Longden, and the quality of the transfers is splendid. Recommended.
548. Raymond B. Browne died on Oct. 22. He founded Bowling Green State University's Center for the Study of Popular Culture in 1967, and its department of popular culture in 1973. With his wife Pat he founded the Popular Press in 1970, and in 1982 they published the first edition of Ely Liebow's DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES.
549. Nov 09 #8: William Gurstelle's ABSINTHE & FLAMETHROWERS (Chicago: Chicago Review Press, 2009; 208 pp., $16.95) has an intriguing title, and an explanatory subtitle: PROJECTS AND RUMINATIONS ON THE ART OF LIVING DANGEROUSLY; the section on "The Physical Arts" discusses bullwhips, knife throwing, and bartitsu (invented by E. W. Barton-Wright, and quite likely misspelled as baritsu in the Canon).
550. Warner Bros. continues to come up with imaginative ways to promote the new Guy Ritchie film: Ken Lanza spotted the game "221B" at <www.221b.sh>; it's a two-player game (but you can play it alone) connected to Facebook, and it has excellent graphics taken from the film. Hot-drink sleeves at 7-Eleven stores ask "How Holmes are you?" and direct you to <www.7-11.221b.sh> (noted by Debbie Clark); 7-11 also will have window banners and point-of-purchase signage for the film, and there's some pay-back in the game, in which one piece of evidence is a vintage newspaper that features a front-page advertisement for "Joe C. Thompson's Coffee Emporium--Open from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m." (in 1927, Joe C. Thompson Jr. founded the Southland Ice Company, the precursor to the 7-Eleven chain).

551. And there's more: if you would like to tour the film's locations, the studio has teamed up with VisitBritain (the national tourism agency) to offer a list at <www.visitbritain.us/campaigns/british-film/index.aspx>; click on "British Locations" to learn about six sites for the films, and many others of Sherlockian and Doylean interest. Holmes is on Facebook, of course, at <www.facebook.com/SherlockHolmes>. Anne Mitchell's colorful blog for the film is at <www.thesherlockholmesmovie.com>. The California Lottery offers four "scratchers" cards with poster artwork; there are images of the cards at <www.calottery.com/Games/Scratchers/Gallery/SherlockHolmes.htm> (reported by Gordon Adelman).
552. Warner Bros. also was one of two sponsors for the 30-minute special "Family Guy Presents: Seth & Alex's Almost Live Comedy Show" broadcast on Nov. 8 by Fox; Warner Bros. replaced Microsoft when that company withdrew after seeing the script and presumably deciding it wasn't appropriate for their customers). The commercial was introduced by Stewie Griffin, the one-year-old member of the family.
553. John Baesch spotted the November issue of Script: Celebrating the Writer, which has a long article by Ray Morton about the writing of the film script, and Morton's long interview with Nicholas Meyer about his memoirs THE VIEW FROM THE BRIDGE (Sep 09 #1).

1. Sherlock Holmes' 156th birthday was celebrated heartily in New York on Jan. 15, and others date during a never-boring long weekend that began with the traditional ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (with the usual lunch at McSorley's).
  2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Williams Club on Thursday evening was Joan Winterkorn (archivist and appraiser for the British bookseller Bernard Quaritch), who spoke about evaluating the papers of seven generations of Conan Doyle's publisher John Murray.
  3. The Beacon Society held its annual meeting at the Algonquin on Friday morning (the group's mission is to encourage and recognize programs that introduce young people to Holmes), and the William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's featured The Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) in a reprise of their imaginative "Holmes in the Nursery". The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the Jan WHIMSEY award (in memory of his wife Jan Stauber) for the most whimsical piece published in The Serpentine Muse last year; the winner was Philip Shreffler, who received a certificate and a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Yale Club, with Jerry Margolin offering the first toast to Karen Gurian as *The Woman*. The dinner featured the usual toasts and traditions, and Nils Nordberg's proposal that Sherlock Holmes was Norwegian, a report by Hartley Nathan on an authentic Penang lawyer that security concerns prevented him from bringing onto the plane in Canada, Sue Vizoskie's discussion of what might have happened in Sherlock Holmes had been a woman, and a toast to Old Irregular Bill Rabe, singing of "Aunt Clara" by Henry Boote to the original music that was composed by Bud Willis in 1936, followed by a performance by Ray Jessel (who was one of the authors of the musical "Baker Street").
  5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, awarding Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Tom Cynkin ("Lord Bellinger"), Pj Doyle ("Ettie Shafter"), Sir Christopher Frayling ("Vernet"), Patricia Guy ("Imperial Tokay"), Laurie King ("The Red Circle"), Sarah Montague ("Violet Smith"), Daniel Polvere ("Holloway and Steele"), Sally Sugarman ("The Three Gables"), and Maria Carmen Veiga-Hayzen ("Isadora Klein").
  6. Mike also presented the BSI's Two-Shilling Award (for extraordinary devotion to the cause beyond the call of duty) to John Bergquist, Bob Coghil, and Steve Doyle; and Editor's Medals were awarded to John Bergquist, Susan Dahlinger, Glen Miranker, Gianluca Salvatore, and the late Paul Jeffers in recognition of their services in editing books and Christmas Annuals published by the BSI. Mike also presented an engraved crystal vase to Freda Howlett, recognizing her as co-founder, honorary member, and past president of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London.
7. Jan 10 #2: The Gaslight Gala, held as usual at the Manhattan Club, celebrated "Poisons in the Canon" with toasts and songs (including a performance by Cynthia and Richard Wein's of Warren Randall's "You've Got to Pick a Poison or Two"), plus a skit (Warren Randall's "Watson's Agency, or a Case of Double Indemnity" acted by Elyse Locurto and Don Hobbs), a quiz game (Donny Zaldin's "Who Wants to Be a Sherlockian Millionaire"), and other entertainment.
  8. On Saturday morning the dealers room at the Algonquin welcomed (as usual) sellers and buyers, and at 10:30 The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (devotees of the works of both Wodehouse and Watson) gathered for their Junior Bloodstain, which featured a dramatic reading of Anne Cotton's script for "Sherlock Holmes and the Sure Thing".
  9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon cocktail party was again at the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, with wining, dining, and conversation in the Great Hall, and entertainment in the Meeting Room: Mary Ann Bradley introduced ladies present who had been honored by the BSI as *The Woman*, and Al and Betsy Rosenblatt reported poetically on the events of the previous year and of the previous evening.
  10. Mike Berdan was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $500) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year: his article "Holmes Alone: Glimpses of Post-Watson Baker Street in 'The Mazarin Stone'". And the Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets by June Kinnee, Sue Vizoskie, Elaine Coppola, and Carol Cavaluzzi for a bottle of vintage (and well traveled Madeira donated by Patricia Guy <www.patriciaguy.com>).
  11. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund (administered by a carefully anonymous Dr. Watson) offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise be unable to participate in the birthday festivities. The generous donors to this year's auction were The Denizens of the Bar of Gold (a pillow hand-crafted and decorated by Alice Zalik that commemorated "The Abbey Grange", Joseph Coppola (a diploma issued by the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh and signed by the father of Joseph Bell), The Curious Collectors of Baker Street and Jerry and Chrys Kegley (a set of five medals crafted by Maggie Schpak), Chuck Kovacic of Baker Street Los Angeles (posters and fake lottery tickets for Guy Ritchie's new film), and Scott Monty (the annual-dinner packet he left behind at the Yale Club and kindly bought back from the Fund).
  12. There was an informal "The One Fixed Point Dinner" at Kennedy's on Saturday evening, with the traditional reading from Ogden Nash's work and the traditional toasts ("the Guinness flowed like wine," one of the participants has reported); and on Sunday a brunch arranged by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant.

13. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 7, 2011. And the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner will be on Jan. 15, 2011.

14. Jan 10 #3: I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; if you want more details than I've provided here, you can visit Scott Monty's well-illustrated blog at <www.bakerstreetblog.com>, or wait for the reports that will be published in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSJ appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $37.50 (to the U.S.) or $47.50 (international); checks can be sent to the BSJ (Box 465, Hanover, PA 17331), and credit-card payments are accepted from foreign subscribers. You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSJ, and information on the BSI's other publications.
15. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2010 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
16. Highly recommended: "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" is a set of four DVDs issued by Acorn Media last year ($59.99) with the 13 programs in the first series broadcast by ITV in 1971. The series was based on the anthology edited by Hugh Greene, and featured excellent performances by fine actors in good stories, including John Neville as Dr. John Thorndyke, Robert Stephens as Max Carrados, Roy Dotrice as Simon Carne, Peter Vaughan as Horace Dorrington, and Donald Pleasance as Carnacki. It will be nice indeed if Acorn Media follows up with the second season.
17. Donald J. Terras (whose Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars is "The Politician, the Lighthouse, and the Trained Cormorant") presides over the Grosse Point Light Station near Chicago, and lives in the keeper's quarters (the station is still in operation as a private aid to navigation on Lake Michigan). And he happily reports that the federal government has awarded $165,000 to help preserve the lighthouse.
18. David Levine died on Dec. 29. His artistic caricatures were a trademark for the New York Review of Books, which published more than 3,800 of his drawings over 40 years. His work appeared on the cover of Time, and in many other magazines and newspapers, and his art is in the permanent collections of the Library of Congress and the National Portrait Gallery in London. His subjects included both Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes; this portrait of Conan Doyle appeared in the New York Review of Books on Aug. 17, 1978, accompanying Julian Symons' long review of Michael Dibdin's THE LAST SHERLOCK HOLMES STORY.
19. William Safire's death (Oct 01 #1) has not ended his interesting N.Y. Times column "On Language": Erin McKean wrote (Dec. 17, 2009) about Wordnik.com, a new on-line dictionary (she's its founder and chief executive) that "uses text-mining techniques and the unlimited space of the Internet to show as many real examples of word use as we can, as fast as we can." The URL is <www.wordnik.com>, and there are (as I write this) 300 million example sentences, 4.7 million unique words, and 29,177 Wordniks who contribute. You are welcome to join their ranks, if only to add to the examples for sherlock, Sherlock, and Sherlock's (or for moriarty, Moriarty, and Moriarty's).

20. Jan 10 #4: Phillip Bergem has compiled two extensive checklists of Sherlockian and Doylean television programs, with more than 800 entries, annotated for date, country, actors who played Holmes and Watson (or Conan Doyle), production company, and alternate titles. It's available by e-mail from Phil <pbergem@att.net> as a PDF or Excel file.
21. This year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture of the Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library will be given by Peter Calamai on May 29, and the Friends have announced that a "revitalization" of the Library will involve creation of a new Special Collections Centre on the 5th floor that will allow access to the Arthur Conan Doyle Room whenever the Library is open.
22. Further to the item (Jul 09 #4) on the statue of Sherlock Holmes in Edinburgh, the Scotsman has reported (Dec. 21) that planning calls for development of Picardy Place as a public square that will include a new hotel, part of a £850 million commercial development. There's no word on where the statue now in storage will wind up.
23. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Mar. 19-21, 2010 will offer a new Sherlockian mystery ("The Case of the Demons in a Padded Room") written by John K. Alvarez. The weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years, and there's more information at the festival web-site at <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html>, and from 1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278).
24. "The membership of Holmes societies around the world is of high intellectual caliber," Theodore Dalrymple suggests in a long piece on "The Eternal Detective" in the National Review (Dec. 31, 2009). "Their publications are learned and ingenious. Never is pedantry more joyously or innocently employed, for example, than in the ferreting out of the details of the biography of Sherlock Holmes (and Dr. Watson, of course)."
25. Donal Donnelly died on Jan. 4. He described himself as "an itinerant Irish actor," and had a long career on stage, screen, and television. He played a fine Watson to Frank Langella's Holmes in "Sherlock's Last Case" in Washington and New York in 1987.
26. The series of Sherlockian mystery jigsaw puzzles was launched quite a few years ago (Mar 96 #3), and two of the 1000-piece puzzles ("The Kent Chapel Murder" and "Watson's Inheritance") are back, with a twist: they're now bilingual, with English and French booklets in each puzzle box ($29.99); you "assemble the puzzle, read the mystery booklet, search for clues, and solve the crime!"
27. Will Thomas reports that the Bartitsu Forum is receiving increased attention, thanks to Guy Ritchie's new "Sherlock Holmes"; the Bartitsu Society's web-site at <www.bartitsu.org> offers an interesting interview with Richard Ryan, who choreographed the fight scenes in the film. There's also a link to a 4-minute preview of an up-coming documentary ("Bartitsu: The Lost Martial Art of Sherlock Holmes") about E. W. Barton-Wright's "new art of selfdefense" that Watson may well have misheard or misspelled when he told his readers what Holmes said about baritsu in "The Empty House".

28. Jan 10 #5: The January-February issue of Dollhouse Miniatures (successor to Nutshell News) has an interesting and well-illustrated article by Deb Weissler about her Sherlockian room box. And the magazine is honoring the 30th anniversary of the founding of The Mini-Tonga Scion Society with a new room-box contest, open to all miniaturists and collectors; you should submit one or more photographs of your Sherlockian room box with a brief description (up to 250 words) to the magazine (68132 250th Avenue, Kasson, MN 59994) <kim@dhminiatures.com>, and the contest deadline is Mar. 10). The magazine costs $6.95 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
29. The 2009 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 48 pages of scholarship and occasional whimsy; the scholarship includes Terri Haugen's report on the research by the late Samuel C. Fry for his paper "The Influence of Mr. Sherlock Holmes on Twentieth Century Arctic Exploration". $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.), with checks payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles, from Terri Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332. Their 2007 annual also is available, with 290 pages celebrating the society's 25th anniversary with a compilation of the best material published in earlier issues; the cost is $24.95 postpaid to the U.S. ($27.95 to Canada, $35.95 elsewhere).
30. L'HOMME QUI ETAIT SHERLOCK HOLMES: UNE BIOGRAPHIE DU DOCTEUR JOE BELL (Paris: Editions Baker Street, 2009; 355 pp., E21.00) is the French translation of Ely Liebow's DR. JOE BELL: MODEL FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES (1982), and it is nicely done indeed, with a new preface by Thierry Saint-

- Joanis; it's interesting to see that it has been "traduit de l'american" (the French obviously are aware that Yanks and Brits don't use the same language). You can buy the book easily at <www.amazon.fr>.
31. Patrick Stewart was knighted by the Queen in her New Year's Honours List, for services to drama. As Captain Jean-Luc Picard he commanded the Enterprise in the series "Star Trek: The Next Generation", and in "Lonely Among Us" (1987) he mentioned "the immortal Sherlock Holmes" (this was the first episode of the series to pay tribute to Holmes).
  32. Watson's Tin Box will host their third "Scintillation of Scions" at Claret House in Clarksville, Md., on Aug. 28, with the intent of bringing together members of mid-Atlantic (and east-coast) Sherlockian societies for "an afternoon of fun, scholarship, and social time." It's an entertaining gathering, and additional information is available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724) <www.watsonstinbox.org>.
  33. Alastair B. Martin ("Colonel Sebastian Moran") died on Jan. 12. He was an art collector, and chairman of the Brooklyn Museum from 1984 to 1989, and a devotee of tennis, many times an amateur champion in court tennis (the game dating back to the Middle Ages and played on walled courts) and in the more modern United States Open; as president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association he supported opening its amateurs-only tournaments to professionals. And he was a Sherlockian: he was a member of the Five Orange Pips of Westchester County, and he owned the four surviving pages of the manuscript of "The Crooked Man" and first contributed to The Baker Street Journal in 1970 with a paper suggesting that Moriarty was a woman. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1972.
34. Jan 10 #6: "During one of the Church of England's more gruesome civil wars recently, I happened to meet the Archbishop of Canterbury at a literary festival," A. N. Wilson wrote in the December issue of the British edition of the Reader's Digest. "I asked how he managed to stay sane. 'I just keep reading the Sherlock Holmes stories,' he said." The article was titled "Sherlock Holmes: What *Is* the Secret of His Success?"
  35. "Sherlock Holmes" is the title of a new DVD released on Jan. 26 by The Asylum Home Entertainment ($24.95), nicely timed to benefit from the attention given to Guy Ritchie's film. This one's billed as "an explosive, creaturefilled mystery adventure in the vein of Harry Potter and Hellboy," and it's a low-budget film produced last year in Wales. Sherlock Holmes is played by Ben Snyder and Watson by David Gareth-Lloyd, and they're supported by a cast that includes a sea monster, dinosaurs, fantastic steam-punk machinery and a robot; the film's not to be taken seriously (the box for the DVD carries a warning that it "contains scene of creature and sci-fi action"), and there is more about the film (and the company) at <www.theasylum.cc>. "Attack of the Clones" is a long and interesting article by Brian Raftery about The Asylum that appeared in the January issue of Wired; according to Raftery, the company's planning to make "a meteor film, an airplane-disaster movie, a western, and something called 'MILF'."
  36. Tim O'Connor reports that "The Sherlock Holmes Collection" (a two-sided DVD from Echo Bridge Entertainment in 2009) has three of the Matt Frewer television films ("The Hound of the Baskervilles"/"The Case of the Whitechapel Vam Vampire"/"The Royal Scandal") in a box with artwork echoing the colors of the posters for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" (sold on discount racks at Target for $5.00). And there's a variant with more sedate generic artwork in black and white (sold on discount racks at Walmart for $5.00).
  37. "Majoring in the Memoirs" is the theme of this year's "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 17-18; their mailing list is maintained by Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@aol.com>.
  38. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2009" includes Timothy Reich's amusing "A Theft Forgiven: A Newspaper Vendor's Letter to Watson", Robert Brusic's "A Baker Street Visit from St. Nicholas", and other entertainment and scholarship; the 50-page booklet is available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122) for $8.00 postpaid (please make checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers).
  39. Reported: Michael Chabon's MANHOOD FOR AMATEURS: THE PLEASURES AND REGRETS OF A HUSBAND, FATHER, AND SON (New York: Harper, 2009; 320 pp., $25.99) includes an essay titled "The Ghost of Irene Adler" (not really Sherlockian).
  40. There's a new date for the conference planned by The Norwegian Explorers in Minneapolis (May 09 #1): "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" will be held on Aug. 6-8 at the Elmer L. Anderson Library at the University of Minnesota. You can enroll on the mailing list by contacting Gary Thaden (2301 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55404) <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>. The conferences have been held every three years, with interesting events and good attendance.
41. Jan 10 #7: "Sherlock Holmes. Duration: 2 hours and 6 minutes. Can you hold it that long?" Kelly Blau discovered <www.runpee.com>, a website devoted to "helping your bladder enjoy going to the movies as much as you do." "Sherlock Holmes" is one of the films, with synopses provided for four points recommended by the site for bathroom breaks.
  42. Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" obviously is a commercial success: according to the Box Office Mojo web-site, as of Jan. 27 (32 days after the film opened, the film had grossed $389.1 million worldwide ($192.1 million domestic and $197.0 million foreign), and ranked #121 in the list of biggest grossing films ("Avatar" is #1 with $1.878 billion, and "Titanic" is 2 with $1.848 billion). And the attention devoted to the film has had some interesting side-effects: reviews and side-bar stories included interviews with local Sherlockians and publicity for local Sherlockian societies, and (according to the Hollywood Reporter) sales of the MPI Media set of "Sherlock lock Holmes" DVDs increased by nearly one-third in the first week after the film's release.
  43. Dennis Palumbo, blogging about the film to the Huffington Post on Jan. 5, recalled and told once again the famous (perhaps infamous) "tent joke" that was posted to The Hounds of the Internet in July 1998 and apparently first published in the Nov. 1998 issue of the Reader's Digest. I've reported the full text of the joke some years ago (Dec 01 #6); I won't reprint it here.
  44. "Sherlock Holmes (well-cut trenches) meets Edwardian dandy (slick, elegant, eight-button double-breasted suits) meets...Hong Kong Phooey? (silk boxer briefs)." That's GQ's description of John Galliano's fall 2010 collection, unveiled in Paris this month; thanks to Mitch Higurashi for a URL that has lots of photographs <www.gq.com/fashion-shows/brief/F2010MEN-JGMEN>. One suspects, of course, that Galliano was inspired by the Guy Ritchie film.
  45. Robert Downey Jr. received the Hollywood Foreign Press Association's Golden Globe Award for best performance as an actor in a motion picture (musical or comedy) for his performance in "Sherlock Holmes" (winning over Matt Damon, Daniel Day-Lewis, Joseph Gordon Levitt, and Michael Stuhlborg), and in his acceptance speech (one of the more interesting during the evening) he quoted the Canon: "Art in the blood is liable to take the strangest forms," he said, noting that the Hollywood Foreign Press Association is a "strange bunch."
  46. The Critics' Choice Awards (bestowed by the Broadcast Film Critics Association) included a nomination for Hans Zimmer ("Sherlock Holmes"); the winner in the category was Michael Giacchino ("Up"); nominations were announced on Dec. 14, and the awards were made on Jan. 15.
  47. Jacquelynn Morris reports that Laurie R. King will speak (and sign books) at East Columbia Branch of the Howard County Library at 5:00 pm on Apr. 30; 6000 Cradlerock Way, Columbia, MD 21045. More information will be available at <www.hclibrary.com>. Laurie will be on tour promoting the new Mary Russell novel THE GOD OF THE HIVE.
48. Feb 10 #1: The papers presented at "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Sesqicentennial Symposium" at the Houghton Library at Harvard last May have been published as PAPERS AT AN EXHIBITION, and it is a delightful volume, with 14 papers about Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and Sherlockians, and a

- full-color dust jacket showing a portrait of Holmes by Frederic Dorr Steele. $38.95 postpaid to the U.S. (or $49.50 elsewhere) from The Baker Street Irregulars (3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953) <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
49. Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (originally commissioned by Jeremy Brett in 1988) will be performed at the People's Light & Theatre, from July 7 through Aug. 8; 39 Conestoga Road, Malvern, PA 19355 (610-544-3500) <www.peopleslight.org>.
  50. Spotted by Joan Betzner: THE GRAPHIC NOVEL ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Vincent Goodwin, from the ABDO Publishing Co.; six titles, $28.50 each, tgfkm, $19.95 each at the company's web-site <www.abdopub.com>; you can also request a catalog (8000 West 78th Street #310, Edina, MN 55439 (800-800-1312)).
  51. THE CARLTON HOBBS SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION (BBC Audiobooks, 2010; £30.00) is a set of three CDs with twelve programs from the old 30-minute Carlton Hobbs/Norman Shelley series and new introductions by Nicholas Utechin, that were broadcast by BBC Digital Radio 7 in 2004; Hobbs and Shelley did (and Utechin does) well indeed.
  52. There's a trailer for The Asylum's DVD "Sherlock Holmes" (Jan 10 #6); Lloyd Rose spotted it at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=DbJgOYupRT>.
  53. Catherine Wynne discusses the connections, both literary and personal, between Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker in her interesting introduction to a new reprint of Conan Doyle's THE PARASITE and Stoker's THE WATTER'S MOU' (Kansas City: Valancourt Books, 2009, 163 pp., $16.95); the book also reprints Conan Doyle's "John Barrington Cowles", Stoker's "The Coming of Abel Behenna", and an interview written by Stoker after a visit with Conan Doyle at Hindhead in 1907, and offers a fine look at authors who are much better known for Sherlock Holmes and Dracula. Valancourt has reprinted two other books by Conan Doyle, and has many other authors in print; their website's at <www.valancourtbooks.com>.
  54. Frogwares' latest Sherlockian adventure game for computers "Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper" was released last year (Apr 09 #7); Dreamcatcher plans to release the game for Xbox 360 in March.   62. Francine Kitts reports that there's a third Sherlockian mystery jigsaw (Jan 10 #4): it's "The Case of the Fallen Actress" and she discovered all three of them priced at $2.99 each at her local Christmas Tree Shop (which is a discount-store chain that seems to be open throughout the year).
  63. Boa Sr. died this month. She was 85 years old, a member of the Great Andamese tribe, and the last person to be able to speak Bo, one of the ancient tribal dialects in the Andaman Islands; it is not known whether Tonga was a speaker of Bo, but (thanks to the BBC) you can listen to a recording of Boa Sr. speaking Bo <news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/8499000/8499752.stm>.
  64. THE FRENCH ARTILLERY OFFICER, by Lawrence Fischman (Dallas: Gram's Group, 2009; 491 pp., $26.95 cloth/$18.95 paper) is billed as "a Sherlock Holmes/John Watson adventure" and offers plenty for both of them to do, working to help save Alfred Dreyfus from a second conviction, and involved with Winston Churchill, La belle Otero, Auguste Escoffier, Cesar Ritz, Mycroft, and a variety of villains of various nationalities and allegiances; you can order on-line at <www.thefrenchartilleryofficer.com>.
65. Feb 10 #3: It's nice news indeed that "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes: Set 2" will be issued by Acorn Media in March with the second set of 13 programs that were broadcast in the U.S. in 1972 and in the U.K. in 1973 ($59.99). As with the first set (Jan 10 #3), there are excellent performances by actors who include Douglas Wilmer (Prof. Augustus S. F. X. Van Dusen), Charles Gray (Eugene Valmont), Barrie Ingham (Dr. John Thorndyke), and John Thaw (Lieutenant Holst).
  66. SHERLOCK HOLMES CASEBOOK: FAMOUS CRIME SCENES, a series of attractive artwork by Larry Gosser, now runs to nine scenes ($9.95 each). and you can see them all in full color at his web-site <www.drawingroomg.com>; just click on "gallery" to see his Sherlockian and other art.
  67. "Is It Inevitable, My Dear Watson?" was the headline on Lenny Picker's informative article in Publishers Weekly (Jan. 18), reflecting on the likelihood of another "boom" resulting from all the attention that has been given to Guy Ritchie's new film; you can read all about it at their web-site at <www.publishersweekly.com/article/CA6715287.html>.
  68. Rod Mollise's web-site <skywatch.brainiac.com/holmes/index.htm> is an interesting "Homage to the Master"; he offers newly annotated versions of the first eight short stories, and his paper on "The Erotic Hound: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES as a Text of Pleasure".
  69. THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES: A SHERLOCK HOLMES GRAPHIC NOVEL is the first in a new series adapted by Ian Edginton and illustrated by I. N. J. Culbard (London: SelfMadeHero, 2009; 132 pp., £14.99); it's nicely done, with fine artwork, and there's an American edition from Sterling ($14.95). A STUDY IN SCARLET is next, followed by THE SIGN OF FOUR and THE VALLEY OF FEAR.
  70. The Falls Players will perform Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" at the Lunda Theater Stage on Apr. 16-18; Box 371, Black River Falls, WI 54615 (715-896-4123) <www.fallsplayers.org>.

74. Feb 10 #4: THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION: AN ELEMENTARY GUIDE, by Daniel Smith (London: Aurum Press, 2009; 192 pp., £20.00/$27.95), is an interesting, attractive, and useful book; he offers summaries for each of the stories (without spoilers), essays on Conan Doyle and Holmes and the Canon, interviews with actors and authors, and a wealth of artwork and illustrations. It's an excellent demonstration of how much fun the world of Sherlock Holmes can be.
75. The detailed schedule and registration form for "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds" (to be held at Bennington College in Bennington, Vt., June 24-27, 2010) is now available from Sally Sugarman (Box 407, Shaftsbury, VT 05262) and at <www.bakerstreetbreakfastclub.com>.
76. The March issue of Playboy has a Sherlockian cartoon by Clive Colins, and news of GAHAN WILSON: 50 YEARS OF PLAYBOY CARTOONS (Seattle: Fantagraphics Books, 2010; 942 pp., $125.00); three volumes in a slipcase, with introductions by Neil Gaiman and Hugh Hefner. Gahan's first Sherlockian contribution to Playboy was in the Dec. 1959 issue, and he has had many S'ian cartoons in later issues.
77. Ken Lanza found a new Sherlockian first day cover for the new "Seabiscuit" stamped envelope created by Tris Fall at Baker Street Cachets, which began last year with the Edgar Allan Poe stamp and now has four different covers available <www.tinyurl.com/ybcyzu>.
78. Malice Domestic has reported that Nancy Springer's THE CASE OF THE CRYPTIC CRINOLINE, the fifth in her series featuring Enola Holmes, 14 years old and the younger sister of Mycroft and Sherlock, has been nominated for an Agatha (best children's/young adult novel); the winners will be announced at the convention banquet on May 1.
79. The comic book mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS ZOMBIES has reached it's third issue (March, $2.99 from Wildstorm), with an interesting story by Ian Edginton and fine artwork by Davide Fabbri; there are previews at the web-site <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics/?cm=13662>.
80. Pj Doyle reports: "Fringe's annual 'Five Fifths of...'" is tackling a Sherlock Holmes story this year." That's the Minnesota Fringe, and the event will be at the Ritz Theatre in Minneapolis on May 3; the Fringe has invited five different performing arts companies to "tear apart and piece back one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories" More information will be available at <www.fringefestival.com>.
81. Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine has added podcasts to its web-site, and one of them is Steve Hockensmith and Michael Wiltrout reading Steve's "Dear Dr. Watson" (from the Feb. 2007 issue). Go to <www.themysteryplace.com/eqmm> and scroll down to the podcast link.
82. 83. Feb 10 #5: DREAMS OF FUTURE PAST: THE SCIENCE FICTION WORLDS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND H. G. WELLS, by Dana Martin Batory (Indianapolis: Wessex Press, 2010; 141 pp., $13.95), is a collection of essays published in the 1980s and 1990s in hard-to-find magazines such as Riverside Quarterly and The Age of the Unicorn, and Batory offers interesting insights into the work of Conan Doyle and Wells. The publisher's address is: Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256 <www.wessexpress.com>.
84. The Baker Street Irregulars were born and nurtured in the pages of the Saturday Review of Literature, but the SRL was not the first American literary magazine to aid and abet Sherlockians: The Bookman came first, and did so during its entire history from 1895 to 1933. The editors (Harry Thurston Peck and Arthur Bartlett Maurice) debated "The Hound of the Baskervilles" as each episode was published in the American edition of The Strand Magazine, and in Feb. 1903 an editor described a contributor to The Bookman's Letter-Box as a "true Sherlockian," the first known usage of the word. And over the years The Bookman published commentary, articles (by authors that included Arthur Conan Doyle and Vincent Starrett), and pastiches and parodies (by Charlton Andrews, Corey Ford, and others). SHERLOCK HOLMES, CONAN DOYLE & THE BOOKMAN, edited and annotated by S. E. Dahlinger and Leslie S. Klinger (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2010; 271 pp., $29.95), is a fascinating demonstration of just how much Sherlockians and Doyleans owe to The Bookman. Gasogene Books is an imprint of the Wessex Press; see above for the publisher's address.
85. Forecast for March (from Doubleday): THE DEVIL AND SHERLOCK HOLMES: TALES OF MURDER, MADNESS, AND OBSESSION, by David Grann (352 pp., $26.95) (and from Simon & Schuster in the U.K., £12.99); Grann is a staff writer for The New Yorker, and the collection includes his 2004 article "Mysterious Circumstances" about the death of Richard Lancelyn Green.
86. There's a new 30-second animated Sherlockian commercial, for Red Bull, and you can watch it at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=M0FykOCcX1E>. There's also a Sherlockian puppet in two 1-minute commercials (Episodes 2 and 3) at <www.nikebasketball.com>; check the "Crew" to see more of The Detective.
87. "Arthur & George" (the new play by David Edgar based on the novel by Julian Barnes about Conan Doyle and Edalji) will premiere at the Birmingham Repertory Theatre from Mar. 19 to Apr. 10 (Nov 09 #4), and will then move to the Nottingham Playhouse from Apr. 22 to May 8 (Wellington Circus, Nottingham, NG1 5AF, England (0115-941-0410) <www.nottinghamplayhouse.co.uk>
88. Spotted by Evy Herzog: COLOR YOUR OWN GRAPHIC NOVEL: SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, adapted and illustrated by John Green (Mineola: Dover Publications, 2009; 46 pp., $4.99); an imaginative approach, and it's nicely executed. Dover also has issued SHERLOCK HOLMES PAPER DOLLS, by Tom Tierney (32 pp., $9.99); Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, Lestrade, and Irene Adler, with different costumes, and interchangeable heads for many actors who have played Holmes and Watson over the years. And a SHERLOCK HOLMES ACTIVITY BOOK, by David Schimmell (48 pp., $4.99); 32 puzzles for young detectives. Also the SHERLOCK HOLMES STICKER ACTIVITY BOOK, by Arkady Roytman (4 pp., $1.50); you create your own crime scenes with 20 reusable stickers. The publisher's web-site is at <www.doverpublications.com>.
89. Feb 10 #6: Forecast for April (from Bantam Books, 368 pp., $25.00): Laurie R. King's THE GOD OF THE HIVE, her tenth Mary Russell/Sherlock Holmes novel. There are excerpts from the novel at <www.laurierking.com>, weekly episodes of a new short story ("A Case of Correspondence"), contests (she's now well into "Twenty Weeks of Buzz!"), links to blogs (both ladies have their own blogs) and to Russell's tweets at <www.twitter.com>.

90. SHERLOCK HOLMES - THE DEATH AND LIFE, a two-CD set from Big Finish (PO Box 3787, Maidenhead, Berks. SL6 3TF, England) <www.bigfinish.com>, is a twoact play written by David Stuart Davies and performed by Roger Llewellyn in 2008 in Guildford, and then on tour. It's an imaginative script and a fine performance, and the CD set costs $24.40 (or $12.99 as a download); the set includes interviews with Llewellyn, Davies, and director Nicholas Briggs. SHERLOCK HOLMES - THE LAST ACT, written by Davies for Llewellyn and first performed in 1999 and then on tour, was recorded and issued last year on a similar two-CD set, available from Big Finish (same address, same price).
91. It's nice when radio station keep their program available in archives: Doug Wrigglesworth and Karen Campbell were on the CBC series "Fresh Air" on Feb. 7 discussing the new film, Sherlock Holmes, Sherlockians, and The Bootmakers of Toronto, and you can listen to the 13-minute segment at the CBC website at <www.cbc.ca/freshair/2010/02/sherlock_holmes_livesontario_m.htm>.
92. Martin Gardner is an entertaining and knowledgeable writer; there are Canonical allusions in his THE ANNOTATED CASEY AT THE BAT (1984) and THE ANNOTATED NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS (1991), and many other books, and his WHEN YOU WERE A TADPOLE AND I WAS A FISH: AND OTHER SPECULATIONS ABOUT THIS AND THAT (New York: Hill and Wang, 2009; 246 pp. $26.00) is an interesting collection of essays about science, bogus science, mathematics, and other topics; Conan Doyle appears in two essays, both about bogus science.
93. Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" won two Oscar nominations: Sarah Greenwood and Katie Spencer (best art direction) and Hans Zimmer (best achievement in music written for motion pictures, original score); the winners will be announced on Mar. 7. And Robert Downey Jr. won an Irish Film and Television Award (best international actor) on Feb. 20 in Dublin.
94. According to the Box Office Mojo web-site, the film has grossed more than $462 million worldwide, and is now in the top 100 all-time films ("Avatar" is #1, with $2.463 billion).
95. Entertainment web-sites have reported that Warner Home Video plans to issue the film on Blu-ray disc and on DVD on Mar. 30; the Blu-ray disc ($35.99) will have many additional features that aren't listed for the DVD ($28.98), but the company likely will also issue a special DVD with that includes the features. The success of the film has won some attention from film-makers who are said to be considering up-dated "action" version of "The Three Musketeers" and "Treasure Island". And Al Gregory spotted a report in Retail Jeweller (Jan. 21) that jewellers have noted an increase in demand for fob or pocket watches coinciding with the release of the movie.
96. Mar 10 #1 If you're a member of the generation that still wishes your mother hadn't thrown out your collection of comic books, the record for the world's most expensive magazine is now held by a very-fine copy of Detective Comics #27 (May 1939), in which The Bat-Man first appeared: it brought $1,075,500 (including the buyer's premium) at auction last month.
97. Tom Tierney's SHERLOCK HOLMES PAPER DOLLS (Feb 10 #5) is artistic and imaginative, with Holmes, Watson, Moriarty, Lestrade, Irene Adler, Irene Adler, and Mrs. Hudson in different costumes, and a set of interchangeable heads for 30 pairs of actors who have played Holmes and Watson, from Gillette and Mason to Downey and Law (and Cohen and Ferrell, who may or may not get to make a Sherlock Holmes film). Published by Dover in 2009 (32 pp., $9.99) <www.doverpublications.com>.
98. Jon Lellenberg has noted Douglas Kerr's interesting article "The Straight Left: Sport and the Nation" in the March issue of Victorian Literature and Culture. His title alludes to "The Solitary Cyclist" ("It was a straight left against a slogging ruffian"), and Kerr explains persuasively why Conan Doyle's enthusiastic participation in sports, his writing about the subject, and his understand of sporting culture have a great deal to tell us about Victorian Britain." The journal is published by the Cambridge University Press, and the article is available on the Internet as a PDF file at <www.journals.cambridge.org>.
99. Roger Johnson has reported in his excellent newsletter The District Messenger that BBC Radio 4 will air a new program in their series written by Bert Coules and starring Clive Merrison and Andrew Sachs as Holmes and Watson. "The Marlbourne Point Mystery" will be broadcast in two parts on Apr. 5 and 6, and you can listen to it on-line. The program will be included with two others in THE FURTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: VOLUME FOUR, from BBC Audiobooks in April (£17.99).
100. The District Messenger (launched in 1985 and now with more than 300 issues) is available by mail from Roger, at 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford, Essex CM2 6DE, England, and on-line at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/district.php>.
101. Laurie R. King's Mary Russell short story "A Venomous Death" was published as a 14x20" broadside last year (Apr 09 #4), and her new broadside story is "Birth of a Green Man" (illuminating a character in her upcoming THE GOD OF THE HIVE); 250 copies, numbered and signed by Laurie and artist Jean Lukens ($25.00 plus shipping). Details at <www.laurierking.com>, where you will also find contests and an invitation to a Russell/Holmes Twitter Party at <www.twitterfall.com/#hivegod> (sorry, the party will be over by the time you read this, but you can read what those at the party have tweeted).
102. THE GOD OF THE HIVE (New York: Bantam Books, 2010; 368 pp., $25.00) continues the story that began last year in THE LANGUAGE OF BEES. Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes and Mycroft Holmes are all being pursued by the official police, Holmes' son Damian and granddaughter Estelle are in serious peril, and there's a villainous opponent behind it all; the supporting characters are interesting, and there are interesting twists and turns.
103. Mar 10 #2: THE DARK DETECTIVE: SHERLOCK HOLMES began last year as a threeissue comic-book mini-series from Black House Comics in Australia (AU$5.00 each), but there are now four issues (with more to come, presumably ; macabre and gruesome, with stories by Christopher Sequeira and art by Australian Sherlockian Phil Cornell and others. You can order at their web-site <www.blackhousecomics.com/the-dark-detective-sherlock-holmes.html> and download a free preview of the series.
104. Francine Kitts discovered Read How You Want, which offers a wide variety of large-print books in sizes from 16pt to 24pt, and in Braille editions, with many of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian books available. The web-site is at <www.readhowyouwant.com>.
105. The Los Angeles Chronicle reported (Feb. 25) that a new annual independent paranormal film festival will debut at the 2010 Paranormal Symposium in Angel Fire, N. Mex., Sept. 9-12; the festival will present Sir Arthur Awards to winning submissions, honoring his interest in spiritualism and the paranormal. The symposium is sponsored by the Alliance Studying Paranormal Experiences, and more information is available at <www.aspefiles.org>.
106. CNN sent Katie Walmsley to record some of the birthday festivities in New York, and broadcast a 3-minute segment on Jan. 21. You can view the segment (which includes interviews with some of the Sherlockians on hand for the festivities) at <www.tinyurl.com/ydwb34j>.
107. William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" will be produced at the Rochester Civic Theatre, Sept. 10-26; 20 Civic Center Drive SE, Rochester, MN 55904 (507-282-8481) <www.rochestercivictheatre.org>.
108. The Noble and Most Singular Order of the Blue Carbuncle will hold its 35th annual Reichenbach Day at Mulnomah Falls, near Portland, Ore. It's a festive event, and more information is available from Kent Teynor (910 NW Island Terrace #B-4, Beaverton, OR 97006) <kent@teleport.com>.
109. The registration form for "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" (the conference in Minneapolis on Aug. 6-8) is now available from Gary Thaden (2301 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55404) <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>. The University of Minnesota's Anderson Library will have an exhibition with the same title from June 1 through Aug. 29, exploring "the many meanings of the word 'spirits' and how they relate to Sherlock

- Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and the Victorian Era. And the Library's gallery will have an exhibition highlighting the collection of the late Allen Mackler (whose replica of the sitting-room also is on display at the Library).
110. Jon Lellenberg has noted Douglas Kerr's interesting article "The Straight Left: Sport and the Nation" in the March issue of Victorian Literature and Culture. His title alludes to "The Solitary Cyclist" ("It was a straight left against a slogging ruffian"), and Kerr explains persuasively why Conan Doyle's enthusiastic participation in sports, his writing about the subject, and his understand of sporting culture have a great deal to tell us about Victorian Britain." The journal is published by the Cambridge University Press, and the article is available on the Internet as a PDF file at <www.journals.cambridge.org>.

111. Mar 10 #3: A commemorative Green Plaque has been installed at the Langham by the City of Westminster, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, the Oscar Wilde Society, and the hotel. Unveiled by Gyles Brandreth on Mar. 19, the plaque reads "Oscar Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle dined here with the publisher of 'Lippincott's Magazine' on 30 August 1899, a meeting that led to 'The Sign of Four' & 'The Picture of Dorian Gray'." The plaque is green not because of the Irish heritage of the two authors, but rather because the City of Westminster uses green to distinguish its plaques from the blue plaques installed by English Heritage.
113. The latest catalog from Acorn (Box 1670, West Chester, OH 45071) (888-870-8047) <www.acornonline.com> offers "Sherlock Holmes: Collector's Edition" ($39.99) with Christopher Lee's "Incident at Victoria Falls" and "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady", and the documentary "The Secret Identity of Jack the Ripper" narrated by Peter Ustinov, on a 5-DVD set with a 32-page booklet in a gift tin.
114. Well known for his assistance to Conan Doyle with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, B. Fletcher Robinson was a prolific writer, and his RUGBY FOOTBALL, first published in 1896, offers a detailed look at a sport that's perceived by many Americans as merely an excuse for post-game drinking and singing. Of course rugby also is of interest to Sherlockians, and his book explains well just what a three-quarter does, and why it can be a disaster if he's missing. RUGBY FOOTBALL DURING THE NINETEENTH CENTURY (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 338 pp., £9.99/$15.99/€12.99) is a facsimile reprint of Fletcher Robinson's book, accompanied by some modern essays, all compiled by Paul R. Spiring.
115. Some Americans do take rugby seriously, Paul notes, and are pleased that it will be reinstated as an Olympic sport in 2016 in Rio de Janeiro. The U.S. will be the defending champion, having won gold medals the last time rugby was an Olympic sport, in 1924.
116. The Hollywood Reporter announced (Feb. 22) that PBS-TV will co-produce the BBC "Sherlock" television series co-created by Mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat (Jul 09 #4); Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman will star as Holmes and Watson. This Holmes will be a modern-day detective, giving the series a "21st century spin." Filming is now underway, Gatiss has said that "the fact that Steven, myself, and millions of others are still addicted to Conan Doyle's brilliant stories is testament to their indestructibility."
117. Jim Suszynski has noted Caroline Lawrence's "The Roman Mysteries" series, from Orion's Children's Books in London; the detective is a young girl in ancient Rome, and there are 17 books in the series, which started in 2002 and ended this year. THE LEGIONARY FROM LONDINIUM AND OTHER MINI-MYSTRIES (176 pp., £6.99) is an additional collection of short stories that fills in gaps and wraps up loose ends, and two of the stories were inspired by tales from the Canon. The author has a web-site at <www.romanmysteries.com>.

118. Mar 10 #4: The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Apr. 23-25; the schedule includes a dinner (with a musical tribute to Sherlock Holmes), a running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. Registration forms are available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
119. The Beacon Society has announced a May 15 deadline for teachers, librarians, Sherlockian literary societies, and others to apply for a Jan Stauber Grant, which funds (up to $250) development of a project that will introduce young people to the Canon. An application form, guidelines, and other details are available at the society's web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
120. "Duke Ellington Meets Sherlock Holmes" is being performed by the University of New Hampshire Dance Company from Mar. 30 through Apr. 3 (83 Main Street, Durham, NH 03824) (603-62-2290) <www.unh.edu/threatre-dance>; it's a jazz, tap, and aerial production paying homage to Sherlock Holmes through the music of Ellington, who read the Sherlock Holmes stories when he was a child (May 85 4).
121. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Kanata Theatre Company on Mar. 23 through Apr. 3 (1 Ron Maslin Way, Kanata, ON K2V 1A7, Canada) (613-831-445) <www.kanatatheatre.com>.
122. "The Strange Case of the Too Few Suspects" is a new one-act play written by Dan Hurwitz, available on-line at <writersnotebook.org>
123. Mystery Scene Magazine has published more than a hundred issues, and it's a fine way to keep up with what's happening in the mystery genre. Edited by Kate Stine, it is published five times a year ($32.00 a year to the U.S.) and you can subscribe by mail at 331 West 57th Street #148, New York, NY 10019, or on-line <www.mysteryscenemag.com>; the web-site offers links to articles from the current and past issues, and to all the book reviews published in the magazine.
124. Kenneth Smookler is planning a tour "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes" from Toronto to England (Sept. 28-Oct. 9), with Switzerland an additional option (Oct. 9-15); there is much more information available at a web-site <www.cwttravelsource.com/SherlockHolmes2.html>.
125. The BBC America Shop's spring catalog (Box 681, Holmes, PA 19043) (800-898-4921) <www.bbcamericashop.com> offers a set of two "Book Lovers Mugs" (item 15137) for $24.98; bone china, 12 ounces, decorated with "cherished, gilded leather-bound novels," from PRIDE AND PREJUDICE and JANE EYRE to SHERLOCK HOLMES and THE HOBBIT.
126. Barry Grant's THE STRANGE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sutton: Severn House, 2010; 13 pp., $27.95) is an intriguing pastiche: correspondent James Wilson has been invalided home after a brief stint in Afghanistan in 2008, and encounters a mysterious detective named Cedric Coombes, who often calls Wilson Watson, and is thoroughly Sherlockian; there are mysteries to be solved (and more to come, presumably), and it's an entertaining novel.

127. Mar 10 #5: A bibliographic query from Nicholas Utechin, who is conducting research on Ronald Knox's ESSAYS IN SATIRE (1928): there was a signed and numbered limited edition of the book, and he would be delighted to hear from anyone who has a copy of the limited edition in a dust jacket. You can reach him at Highfield Farmhouse, 23 Highfield Avenue, Headington, Oxford OX3 7LR, England <highfieldfarmhouse@yahoo.co.uk>.
128. The list of Sherlockian societies with web-sites continues to grow, and the newest one is The Crew of the S.S. May Day, in Northern Ireland; their URL is <www.thessmayday.org.uk>. The best round-up of society web-sites I know of is provided by Chris Redmond <www.sherlockian.net/societies/index.html>.
129. Ripperologist, an electronic monthly journal edited by Eduardo Zinna, casts its net widely, and has had Sherlockian content in all three issues so far this year: "Ripping Yarns: Sherlock Holmes on Screen" (#110/Jan) is Zinna's long review of the Guy Ritchie film and retrospective review of the

- Rathbone films, followed by "Jeremy Brett: An Appreciation" (#111/Feb) by Jon Rees, and (also by Rees) "The BBC TV's Sherlock Holmes: Productions of the Past Decade" (#112/Mar); information on subscriptions is available on request from Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
130. The campaign to preserve Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, continues, and Jim Ballinger has reported a story on the BBC web-site that includes a two-minute video showing what the house looks like now, inside and out <www.tinyurl.com/yaa8c6c>.
  131. The Birmingham-Southern College Library now has a Sherlock Holmes Collection: Richard Green and his son Joshua have placed their Sherlockian collection on indefinite loan to the Library. The Greens are both members of the Genius Loci, the local S'ian society, which was founded at the college in 1980.
  132. The delightful Sherlockian dolls made by Martha Heller ("Martha-My-Dear") in the 1980s can again be seen in action, so to speak, in an amusing video ("Rule, Britannia") by Amy Mantell at <www.sherlockshorts.com>, along with two earlier Sherlockian videos (Aug 09 #5).
  133. Al Gregory has found the web-site for Craig-a-Bella Sherlock, described as a "newly refurbished centrally heated two bedroom apartment, perched on the cliff above Poldhu Cove" <www.tinyurl.com/ybgepm2>; it's available for rental by vacationers, and the web-site says that it's the "little whitewashed house" where Holmes and Watson stayed in "The Devil's Foot".
  134. Michael Procter offers "an elegant solution for a Sherlock Holmes library" using Internet images to create attractive labels for book-shelf boxes used to store magazines and other ephemera; there is a PDF file of what he has done at <www.michael-procter.com/SHLib.pdf> and he's at <micproc@aol.com>.
  135. The Minnesota Fringe boasts that it "celebrates the wacky and the sublime (and the sublimely wacky)," and this year their sixth annual "Five-Fifths of..." event will feature five different theatrical companies or artists in five pieces of "A Study in Scarlet" on May 3 at the Ritz Theater in Minneapolis. Tickets go on sale on Apr. 1 at <www.fringefestival.org>.
136. Mar 10 #6: Peter Egan and Philip Franks had a well-received tour as Holmes and Watson in Clive Francis' "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Britain in 2007-2008, and now they are playing Holmes and Watson once again in Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (first performed by Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke in 1988); the tour opened in Bath on Mar. 8 and will close in Cambridge on Apr. 24.
  137. PLANETARY: LEAVING THE 20TH CENTURY is the third in a four-volume graphic novel by Warren Ellis and John Cassaday that offers "a complete new Elijah Snow astonishing adventure" (Wildstorm, 2004, $24.95 hardcover and $14.99 softcover); the third volume includes issue #13 (Feb. 2001), which has an aged Holmes. Published by Wildstorm <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm>.
  138. Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin now have three titles in print in their SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS series for readers ages 9-12, the latest being IN SEARCH OF WATSON (Dec 09 #5), and there was an interesting feature article about them in the Jan.-Feb. issue of Berkshire Living (their home is in Ashley Falls, Mass.). You can read the article online at <www.berkshirelivingmag.com>.
  139. Paramount has joined The Asylum (Jan 10 #6) in releasing DVDs in boxes with covers in the same colors Warner Bros. is using for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes": "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985) has been reissued, but according to reviewers the cover is all that's new; the DVD $19.99) is the same one that was released ($19.99), and there are no extra features.
  140. "Sherlock Holmes" has been nominated for Saturn Awards from the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy & Horror Films in eight categories: best action/ adventure/thriller film, best actor (Robert Downey Jr.), best supporting actor (Jude Law), best supporting actress (Rachel McAdams), best director (Guy Ritchie), best music (Hans Zimmer), best costume (Jenny Beavan), and production design (Sarah Greenwood); the winners will be announced on June 24 in Burbank. And Jameson Empire Awards (sponsored by Jameson Irish Whiskey and Empire magazine and voted for by British film fans) went to "Sherlock Holmes" (best thriller) and Jude Law (Empire Hero)
  141. And the film continues to do extremely well at the box office: it has now grossed more than $500 million worldwide. Department of placing things in perspective: according to Walter Scott (Parade, Mar. 28) Daniel Radcliffe will be paid $40 million for starring in both parts of the last "Harry Potter" film, and Emma Watson and Rupert Grint will each be paid $30 million; that's a total of $100 million for three actors, more than the entire cost of Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes".
  142. John Watkiss, an artist who has worked on Neil Gaiman's "Sandman" series, was commissioned by Lionel Wigram to create a set of "pitch illustrations" for the film, and is reported to have credited Watkiss' work as the leverage needed to convince Warner Bros. to proceed with the project. You can see the artwork at <www.gallerynucleus.com>; search for [watkiss]. Some of the original artwork still is available for purchase.

143. Apr 10 #1: Christopher Redmond's A SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK (1993) was a comprehensive guide to all things Sherlockian, and the second edition (Toronto: Dundurn Press, 2009; 336 pp., $32.00/£19.00) is even more comprehensive: Chris discusses the Sherlock Holmes stories, their author, pastiches, parodies, fans and followers, Sherlock Holmes in the media, and much more, offering intelligent comment and insight. And the book is thoroughly up to date, exploring in depth the many Sherlockian aspects of the Internet. Recommended.
  144. Sorry about that: the link for Katie Walmsley's CNN video segment about the birthday festivities in New York doesn't work. You can go to <www.cnn.com> and search for [sherlock holmes intrigues fans], or you can try this URL <www.tinyurl.com/ybcqght>.
  145. Reported: BAKER STREET MYSTERIES is a series for readers aged 9-12, written by Tim Pigott-Smith (who has played Watson on stage and Holmes on radio), published by Hodder Children's Books in London. There are three titles so far: THE DRAGON TATTOO (2008), THE ROSE OF AFRICA (2009), and THE SHADOW OF EVIL (2009); £5.99 each.
  146. If you want to read twelve Sherlock Holmes stories on your iPod, just visit <www.notescasts.com/booksnew/sherlockholmesnotescast.html>, where you can download THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES for $0.99.
  147. A new "Sherlock Holmes Shaped Puzzle" available from Bits and Pieces (Box 4150, Lawrenceburg, IN 47025) (866-503-6395) <www.bitsandpieces.com> comes in two formats (300 pieces or 750 pieces) (items 45849 and 45850) and costs $16.99.
  148. Records are meant to be broken: the very-fine copy of Detective Comics #27 (May 1939) that sold for $1,075,500 at auction in February (Mar 10 #1) was surpassed by the $1.5 million paid for a copy in even better condition of Action Comics #1 (June 1938), which featured the first appearance of Superman, in March. Thanks to Paul Herbert for the report.
  149. LibraryThing is an interesting user-generated Internet project for people who want to catalog their books and make that information available to others (May 06 #8), and it's now possible to catalog someone else's library. Benjamin L. Clark has done just that for Conan Doyle, and you can see 403 titles at <www.librarything.com/profile/acdoylelibrary>. He has cast his net widely, and includes books about which Conan Doyle wrote (as in THROUGH THE MAGIC DOOR), books inscribed to Conan Doyle, books inscribed by Conan Doyle to others, and books that have the bookplate commissioned by Adrian Conan Doyle (and placed in some books purchased by Adrian and added to the library at the Chateau de Lucens). And he would be happy to hear from anyone who can add titles to the list; he's at <benjaminlclark@gmail.com>.

150. It has been a while since I mentioned the Internet Archive (Feb 07 #8); the web-site offers a wide variety of scanned books. Allyn Gibson has reported that the site now offers Ellery Queen's classic anthology of pastiches and parodies THE MISADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1944), not easy to find ink-on-paper, at <www.archive.org/details/scriblio\_test\_044>.
151. Apr 10 #2: Jon Lellenberg has forwarded an announcement of the 2010-2011 season at the City Lit Theater in Chicago <www.citylit.org>. A new dramatization of "The Sign of the Four" by Terry McCabe begins previews on May 27, 2011, and run through July 3. Sherlock Holmes will be played by Don Bender, who previously was Holmes in the their productions of "Holmes and Watson" (2006) and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2007).
152. Anglofile, offering detailed coverage of British entertainment and formerly available by mail, now is a blog by Leslie King, and you can read her reports at <anglofileplus.livejournal.com/6322.html>.
153. Al Gregory has noted a report in the Glasgow Herald (Apr. 1) that Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, where Conan Doyle lived as a child, is one of 16 nominees for a Scottish Civic Trust Place Award that recognizes "good local design and conservation." The formerly-derelect 18th-century house was renovated and converted into the Dunedin School (Apr 09 #2).
154. Our new set of four stamps honoring "Cowboys of the Silver Screen" includes one commemorating Roy Rogers, who starred in the western "San Fernando Valley" (1944). When a herd of horses is rustled one dark evening, Roy deduces that it must have been an inside job, because of the ranch dog; Roy noted that "If they'd a been strangers, he would've barked, and there wasn't a peep out of him." William S. Hart, Gene Autry, and Tom Mix are the other three cowboys, so far with no known Sherlockian connections.
155. GRAPHIC CLASSICS is an attractive series of collections and anthologies edited by Tom Pomplun and featuring imaginative artwork; vol. 2 was devoted to Conan Doyle's work (Apr 02 #7), and it was followed by vol. 12 (ADVENTURE STORIES) with "The Crime of the Brigadier", a "special edition" with "John Barrington Cowles", and a revised and expanded second edition of vol. 2 (Jun 08 #6). Vol. 17 (SCIENCE FICTION CLASSICS), published in 2009 (144 pp.) included "The Disintegration Machine". Almost all of the issues can be ordered at <www.graphicclassics.com>: vol. 2 (second edition) and vol. 12 cost $11.95 each, the special edition is $6.95, and vol. 17 is $17.95; you can also see samples of the artists' work at the web-site. Eureka Productions is the publisher (8778 Oak Grove Road, Mount Horeb, WI 53572), and (due in October) their CHRISTMAS CLASSICS will include British cartoonist Hunt Emerson's new adaptation of "The Blue Carbuncle".
156. There was an interesting run of The Strand Magazine at auction at PBA Galleries in San Francisco on Mar. 18, from the collection of Roger Wagner, who had a nearly complete run from Jan. 1891 to Mar. 1950 in publisher's cloth, library cloth, and single issues in wrappers. Estimated at $6,000-9,000, the lot went unsold.
157. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Ralph and Kacoo's in New Orleans on Apr. 14, when the visiting geologists were welcomed by Dr. Rennie Culver on behalf of the local Sherlockians (Le Cercle de Sherlock Holmes). Our next meetings will be in Denver on Nov. 3, in Houston on Apr. 13, in Minneapolis on Oct. 12.
158. Apr 10 #3: Thomas A. Stetak ("The Head of the Police at Cleveland") died on Apr. 12. He owned a company that restored historic buildings and energetically pursued history, both local and Victorian, and he presided over Mrs. Hudson's Lodgers of Cleveland; as a resident of Cleveland he was delighted when he received his thoroughly appropriate Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1990.
159. "Jack el Destripador contra Sherlock Holmes" is the name of a tour that Luz Retamar has led for five years for Spanish tourists who want to join Holmes in pursuing Jack through the actual locations in London. You can read more about the tour (in Spanish) at <viajesconimaginacion.com> and (in English) in issue #113 of Ripperologist, an electronic monthly journal edited by Eduardo Zinna <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
160. Recently discovered: THE ADVENTURE OF THE SOLITARY CYCLIST (Mankato: Creative Education, 1991); it's a 48-page book with attractive design and imaginative dust-jacket artwork. The company also published similar editions of "The Red-Headed League", "Silver Blaze", and "The Speckled Band", all out of print but available at <www.abebooks.com> and other web-sites.
161. Sherlox Parlour is the name of a head shop in Dinkytown, newly opened and offering a store-wide sale to celebrate, according to a story in the Minnesota Daily (Apr. 19), reported by Don Pollock. Dinkytown adjoins the University of Minnesota, and the store is offering an occasional 20-percent student discount on its selection of glass and pipe products. A head shop (for those who aren't familiar with the phrase) specializes in paraphernalia related to consumption of cannabis, other recreational drugs, and New Age herbs, as well as counterculture art, magazines, music, clothing, and home decor.
162. "Give Jeremy Brett a Posthumous BAFTA Award" is the title of an on-line petition at <www.petitiononline.com/JBBAFTA2/petition.html> launched by Charlotte Smith. BAFTA is the British Academy of Film & Television Arts, and you can see more about the campaign at <www.bafta4jb.com/To>.
163. Reported: the television film "The Crucifer of Blood" (1991, with Charlton Heston and Richard Johnson), previously available on VHS cassette (1998), has now been issued on DVD from Warner Home Video ($14.98).
164. Donald Pickering died on Dec. 19. He made his stage debut in 1951 and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television. He played Watson in Sheldon Reynolds' second television series "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1980, with Geoffrey Whitehead as Holmes), and recorded "The Speckled Band" for an audiocassette in 1982.
165. Tweet, tweet . . . messages from an estimated 105 million users of Twitter will be archived by the Library of Congress, and of course there are Sherlockian corners in what's known as the Twittiverse; you can read Sherlockian tweets at Scott Monty's Baker Street Blog <www.bakerstreetblog.com>, at other web-sites, and on your cell phones. For those who came in late: some 50 million messages limited to 140 characters) are posted each day, and you can read all about it at <www.twitter.com> (where the slogan is "discover what's happening right now, anywhere in the world").
166. Apr 10 #4: Further to the report (Dec 08 #1) that the British oil company Serica Energy had named two natural-gas prospects in the East Irish Sea "Conan" and "Doyle", Jon Lellenberg spotted an announcement that Serica has entered into a farm-out agreement with Agora Oil & Gas (UK) for the prospects, and that drilling on Conan will begin in May. Serica holds the lease, Agora will drill the test well, and the two companies will share the proceeds if exploration is successful.
167. Last year's THE WIND OF CERTITUDE: A LITERARY BIOGRAPHY OF RONALD KNOX, by David Rooney (Aug 09 #2), has been followed by another new biography: RONALD KNOX AND ENGLISH CATHOLICISM, by Terry Tastard (Leonminster: Gracewing, 2009; 232 pp., £12.99), favorably reviewed in the Sunday Telegraph (Feb. 6).
168. Dr. William R. Hanson has designed Sherlockian cachets for a first day cover for last year's "Early TV Memories" (with his portrait of Ronald Howard and the artwork from the closing credits on the 1954 series) and for a cover honoring the 30th anniversary of Altamont's Agents (with his portraits of society founder Tom Dandrew and Sherlock Holmes); the covers cost $10.00 each postpaid to the U.S. ($11.00 elsewhere). His address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801; please pay with currency or U.S. postal money orders.

169. The iPad ($499.00), Apple's response to Amazon's Kindle, is much more than a just new way to read books, and there's already a Sherlockian adventure game for the iPad available at <www.itunes.com/appstore> ($2.99). "Sherlock Holmes Mysteries" is inspired by the Guy Ritchie film. Also available is "The Sherlock Holmes Experience" ($2.99), which has "The Speckled Band" and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" accompanied by "videos that provide historical perspective and annotations from academics and experts."
170. Katie Forgetting's 2008 play "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Barter Theatre from Oct. 1 through Nov. 13; Box 867, Abingdon, VA 24212 (276-628-3991) <www.bartertheatre.com>.
171. An interesting signed baseball was offered at auction at Heritage Auction Galleries on Apr. 23: signed by Babe Ruth, Jack Johnson, Clarence Darrow, Jack Dempsey, Bob Muesel, Ted Williams, and Arthur Conan Doyle (the auction house considered describing the lot as "the strangest multi-signed baseball on Earth"); it sold for $1,792.50 (including buyer's premium). It wasn't the only signed baseball in the auction; the most expensive was a baseball signed by Babe Ruth alone that sold for $11,950 (ditto).
172. Apr 10 #5: The Times has reported (Apr. 25) that a painting of the ghosts of dead Australian soldiers in the Gallipoli campaign, bought by Conan Doyle in 1928, has been found in Australia, and will be offered at auction by Bonhams in Sydney in June. The painting is by Will Longstaff; the story says that Conan Doyle kept in his home until his death, and it is estimated at AU$20,000-40,000. You can see the painting in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/35t9qow>.
173. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a stamp honoring cartoonist Bill Mauldin, who died in 2003. He became famous for his creation of Willie and Joe in World War II cartoons, and went on to a long career as an editorial cartoonist. He won two Pulitzer prizes, and used Sherlockian themes in at least three of his editorial cartoons, including this one, which was published on July 1, 1987; Ed Meese is shown with the caption "He's got a rear-view mirror on his magnifying glass."
174. Further to the report (May 09 #5) about the violin that Steve Burnett made from wood from a 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, the "Sherlock" violin will be used in a concert celebrating Conan Doyle at the Usher Hall in Edinburgh on May 15. Concert proceeds will aid the SOS Children's Haiti Appeal and the program is to include shorter pieces of music from the era of Conan Doyle and the world premiere of "Elsie and Frances" by the Scottish composer James Clapperton (inspired by the girls who invented the Cottingley Fairies), plus short dramatic excerpts by storyteller Mike Maran.
175. Keir Helberg is offering for sale 19 transcription disks for "The Falcon", "Sherlock Holmes", and "Bulldog Drummond" radio broadcasts from the 1940s, and will be happy to supply details on request. He's in England; his telephone numbers are 020-8809-4991 (home) and 07747-611889 (cell); his e-mail address is <sthellusson@googlemail.com>.
176. Reported from India: a graphic novel of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, adapted by J. R. Parks and illustrated by Vinod Kumar, published in 2009 by Campfire (72 pp., $9.99 postpaid); some of the artwork can be seen at their web-site <www.campfire.co.in>.
177. Joe and Brad Dickinson's 1992 comedy-spoof "Sherlock Holmes: The Melodrama" is being performed at the Pocket Sandwich Theatre through May 15 (5400 East Mockingbird Lane #119, Dallas, TX 75206) (214-821-860) <www.dallas.net>.
178. Long-lost old films do turn up from time to time: a copy of "When Lincoln Paid" was discovered in an old barn in New Hampshire, according to newspaper reports this month. The 30-minute film, released in 1913, survived on nitrate stock and has now been preserved and restored; Francis Ford, older brother of director John Ford, directed and played Lincoln in the film. It is nice to think that someone may some day find a copy of "A Study in Scarlet" (1914); Francis Ford directed that film as well, and played Sherlock Holmes (John Ford, credited as Jack Ford, played Watson).

179. Apr 10 #6: <www.books.google.com> is a useful resource for research: Thad Holt reports that Google has digitized OUT OF DOORS: A SELECTION OF ORIGINAL ARTICLES ON PRACTICAL NATURAL HISTORY, by the Rev. J. G. Wood (1874), a book which Sherlock Holmes quotes in "The Lion's Mane" (Thad also notes that Holmes actually misquoted Wood).
180. Arkham House was founded by August Derleth and Donald Wandrei in 1939, and published many Solar Pons stories from their Mycroft & Moran imprint; the company continues to publish interesting books, including (due in November, $39.95) Jon Lellenberg's BAKER STREET IRREGULAR, a novel that begins in the 1930s and involves the BSI in mystery and espionage. There's a brief history of Arkham House at <www.arkhamhouse.com>, and much more about Derleth at the web-site of the August Derleth Society <www.derleth.org>.
181. Laurie R. King's new Mary Russell novel THE GOD OF THE HIVE (Mar 10 #1) has been published, and Laurie reports from Lisbon (where she's in the midst of researching and writing the next book in the series) that Russell has been dragged into an absurd film venture and is sailing off for Portugal in the company of a megalomaniacal director making a movie about pirates. You can read all of that and much more at <www.laurierking.com>; click on "God of the Hive, day one" and then on the link to the interview.
182. "Baffling clues, astonishing Holmesian deductions, nimble repartee, catch-your-breath scenes of one slam thing after another" is the description of the Guy Ritchie film on the DVD box. And there's a reason to buy the "deluxe edition" of the DVD from Target ($24.99): it includes a limited edition (30,000 copies) of a 52-page booklet with the John Watkiss "pitch illustrations" that Lionel Wigram used to convince Warner Bros. to make the film (Mar 10 #6). Still available at Target stores and at their web-site <www.target.com>. Early publicity for the film said that it was going to be based on a comic book written by Wigram, but since no such comic book or graphic novel has been published, it's quite possible that the pitch illustrations are all there is; Wigram's original story only vaguely resembles the film.
183. And there's more: the Los Angeles Times reported (Apr. 23) that Kieran and Michele Mulroney, the writers working on the sequel, have said that "there have been a number of serious conversations at Warner Bros." about producing the new film in 3-D. The Mulroneys have also said that Brad Pitt has been reading the script to see if he wants to play Moriarty. "I hope Brad likes it," Kieran Mulroney said, "Let's leave it at that."
184. The film has now grossed more than $515.6 million at the box office worldwide. It also headed the list of DVD rentals in the U.S. in mid-April.
185. Finally, Ken Lanza has reported an amusing story about the DVD of the film: KSFN-TV (Fresno) said (Apr. 21) that a woman who bought a copy of the DVD at Wal-Mart discovered when she got home that someone had replaced the DVD with a pornographic video with a fake "Sherlock Holmes" label; Wal-Mart has replaced the porno video with a real DVD without charge.

186. May 10 #1: One of the more interesting copies of Beeton's Christmas Annual will go to auction at Sotheby's in London on July 15. Previously owned by William S. Hall and then by William R. Smith, it is one of two surviving copies signed by Conan Doyle, and it's inscribed "This is the very first independent book of mine which ever was published" and dated Jan. 9, 1914, on an extra leaf. Bill Hall wrote about this copy in the June 1963 issue of The Baker Street Journal, reproducing Conan Doyle's inscription and discussing some of the points of the two variants of Beeton's.
187. If you would like to know more about the surviving copies of Beeton's, you can go to <www.bestofsherlock.com/beetons-christmas-annual.htm>, where Randall Stock offers an excellent survey. And if you're wondering what to bid in July, the record price for a copy of Beeton's is $156,000

- (including the buyer's premium) for Walter Pond's copy, at Sotheby's in New York in 2007; that one's unsigned, and complete except for having the spine in facsimile, and some repairs and restorations (the inscribed copy going to auction in July is complete except for four leaves of advertisements).
188. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Tim Johnson's report on how the Collection benefited from publicity for Guy Ritchie's new film ("The Adventure of the Media Buzz"), Julie McKuras' examination of a 100-year-old parody, and other news from and about the Collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  189. Phil Attwell has reported that Legacy Interactive's computer game "The Lost Cases of Sherlock Holmes 2" (Oct 09 #1) is now available on-line: you can download a 60-minute demo (243 MB) without charge at <www.virginmedia.com>; "find hidden objects and decipher clues alongside Sherlock and Watson, as you travel to Stonehenge, Marisbury Castle, and London's Music Hall."
  190. Tony Harries, who had been Sherlock Holmes' secretary at 221B Baker Street, toured the U.S. and Canada in 1990. And he kept a journal, which has now been published: THE CASE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES' SECRETARY (Morrisville: Lulu, 2010; 185 pp., $11.15 paper/$9.40 download/$3.92 download) offers an interesting and amusing look at Sherlockian (and non-Sherlockian) America, and at many of the Sherlockians who provided him with hospitality (and only a few of their names have been changed); you can order the book from the publisher <www.lulu.com>, and it will soon be available from major bookstores and web-sites. If you would like to have a signed bookplate, you can send a request to Tony; his address is 11 Longridge, Colchester, Essex CO4 3FD, England <rhinehart@sky.com>.
  191. Further to the report of the discovery of a giant rat in a "lost world" in the remote Foja Mountains in western New Guinea (Dec 07 #4), there's an article about a new expedition to the area in the June issue of National Geographic, with a handsome photograph of the woolly giant rat, which has been named *Mallomys* sp. nov. (it's the photograph that's handsome, rather than the rat). The article is available on-line at <www.ngm.com/foja>, with the photograph and (scroll down) links to earlier reports and photographs.

  192. May 10 #2: Felony & Mayhem Press has an interesting catalog of good books by fine authors, and one of their books is a reprint of WHAT I TELL YOU THREE TIMES IS FALSE, by Samuel Holt (Mar 87 #1); it's an entertaining murder mystery in which the sleuths (and suspects) include actors noted for portraying Miss Marple, Charlie Chan, and Sherlock Holmes. Samuel Holt is one of the many pseudonyms used by the late Donald E. Westlake, and if you'd like to know what the others are, you can visit his web-site at <www.donaldwestlake.com>.
  193. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Footlight Players Theatre, June 24-July 3 (20 Queen Street, Charleston, SC 29401) (843-722-4487) <www.footlightplayers.net>.
  194. Al Gregory reports a nice seven-page article about Sherlock Holmes ("Elementary, My Dear Watson") in the Feb.-March issue of Britain (the official magazine of VisitBritain) [the new name for the old British Tourist Authority]; you can read the story (and many others) at the magazine's web-site at <www.britain-magazine.com/articles/sherlock-holmes-feature>.
  195. Ken Lanza noted a listing for an imaginative event: "Horror at the Museum--Mummy Stories by Conan Doyle" at the Petrie Museum of Egyptian Archaeology at University College London on May 14. British actor Steven Wickham read "The Ring of Thoth" and "Lot 249" in the "atmospheric surroundings" of the museum, and "in the break between the stories the museum will be available to explore by torch light--if you dare!"
  196. Kids on Stage will present Thomas W. Olsen's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" (1989) at the Main Street Theater (Chelsea Market) from May 7 to May 9 (4617 Montrose Boulevard, Houston, TX 77006) (713-524-6706) <www.mainstreettheater.com>.
  197. Reported: PETER PAN'S FIRST XI: THE EXTRAORDINARY STORY OF J. M. BARRIE'S CRICKET TEAM, by Kevin Telfer (London: Sceptre, 2010; 336 pp., £16.99); the cricket team was the Allahakbarries, and its members included Barrie's fellow authors A. A. Milne, E. W. Hornung, Jerome K. Jerome, P. G. Wodehouse, A. E. W. Mason, and Arthur Conan Doyle.
  198. Malice Domestic (the Washington-area convention celebrating the traditional mystery) was enjoyable, and included a panel ("The Game Is Afoot: Sherlock Holmes' Influence on Modern Sleuths") moderated by John Betancourt and with panelists Parnell Hall, William Link, Daniel Stashower, and Steven Steinbock. Malice 23 will be held in Bethesda, Md., Apr. 29 through May 1, 2011 <www.malicedomestic.org>.
  199. Further to the item about the set of four stamps honoring "Cowboys of the Silver Screen" (Apr 10 #2), Paul Herbert reports that Eleanor Packer's GENE AUTRY IN PUBLIC COWBOY NO. 1 (Big Little Book #1433, Whitman, 1938) has a mention of Frog (Autry's assistant) wearing Sherlockian costume, and a photograph of Frog (Smiley Burnette) with a deerstalker and a curved pipe (p. 190). The book is based on the film "Public Cowboy No. 1" (1937), which is available on DVD, restored to its full 61 minutes, from Image Entertainment (2007); there's a one-minute scene with Frog in S'ian costume, and the special features include two stills and one lobby card.

  200. May 10 #3: A STUDY IN SCARLET is the second in the new series of graphic novels adapted by Ian Edginton and illustrated by I. N. J. Culbard (London: SelfMadeHero, 2010; 130 pp., £14.99) and (New York: Sterling, $14.95) as with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Feb 10 #3) the artwork's excellent and the adaptation is faithful. THE SIGN OF FOUR and THE VALLEY OF FEAR and next in line.
  201. Bob Byrne published two issues of his electronic newsletter "Baker Street Essay" in 2007, and he has returned to his keyboard, so to speak, with the third issue (spring 2010), and he offers 16 pages of interesting Canonical comment and analysis; all three issues are available at Bob's web-site at <www.solarpons.com/BakerStreetEssays.htm>.
  202. Further to the report (Apr 10 #5) about the Edinburgh concert at which the "Sherlock" violin will be played, there's a two-minute video of Ani Batikian playing the violin at <www.tinyurl.com/39ktnwk>.
  203. Doug Wrigglesworth notes that Peggy Perdue has created a tribute to "Sidney Paget: Iconic Illustrator of Sherlock Holmes" on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of his birth; it's nicely done, and well illustrated, and there are interesting examples of Paget's work for other magazines as well as the Strand. You can view the tribute at the Toronto Public Library's web-site at <ve.torontopubliclibrary.ca/sidney_paget/index.html>.
  204. Waterstone's (the British bookstore chain) held a contest for a new design for their electronic gift cards, and one of the winners was Rochelle Donald of Inverness; her design features a silhouette of Holmes and page from "The Blue Carbuncle", and the card now can be purchased in Waterstone's 315 stores across the U.K.
  205. Bert Coules spotted a report that the BBC and Warner Home Video are planning to release (on Sept. 14) a set of two-DVDs with 11 of the delightful "Sherlock Holmes" television programs that starred Douglas Wilmer and Nigel Stock in 1964 and 1965; two programs ("The Abbey Grange" and "The Bruce-Partington Plans") will not be included in the set, which will be priced at $11.98 in the U.S.
  206. Nice news for researchers (eventually): the Daily Telegraph reported (May 19) that the British Library will digitize up to 40 million pages of newspapers from its archive over the next ten years, and will make them available on-line. The project will be funded by Brightsolid, a private company that owns the Friends Reunited and Genes Reunited web-sites; the data-base will be available free at the British Library, and for a charge at Brightsolid's web-sites.

207. BBC Radio 7 continues to air web-site repeats of the Clive Merrison/Michael Williams dramatizations; it was a fine series, and the only one to do all 60 stories with the same actors and Holmes and Watson. You can listen to the repeats at <www.bbc.co.uk/iplayer/radio/bbc\_7>.
208. May 10 #4: Laurie R. King's new THE GOD OF THE HIVE made the best-sellers list in the N.Y. Times Book Review on May 16, ranked at #11 in its first week on the list. You can download a copy of her short story "A Case of Correspondence" (an imaginative story told in postcards and other correspondence, released on the Internet during the run-up to the launch of the book); it's available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/32lwcjf>
209. There's an interesting discount offer at the Deal Table at the Baker Street Journal's web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> (click on "items for sale" and then on "deal table"): IRREGULAR PROCEEDING OF THE MID-FORTIES and IRREGULAR CRISES OF THE LATE-FORTIES are available at $25.00 (plus shipping) for the two books. And Henry Boote has recorded a CD with selection of the period Doylean and Sherlockian music performed during the Harvard symposium in 2009 <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/doyleat150.html>; $9.95 plus shipping.
210. Les Klinger spotted "Letters with Character: Letters Written to Fictional Characters by Real People", an imaginative (and sometimes amusing) blog at <www.letterswithcharacter.blogspot.com>; there is a letter to Dr. Watson, and of course you're welcome to write your own letter to a character in the Canon.
211. "The Suite Life on Deck" (a 30-minute series that airs on the Disney channel) has a Sherlockian episode ("Rollin' with the Holmies") that was first broadcast on Jan. 29, 2010; "Cody attempts to solve a mystery surrounding a stolen book that belongs to Queen Elizabeth II." Episodes repeat often on the Disney channel.
212. The comic book mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS ZOMBIES has reached its final (sixth) issue (June, $2.99 from Wildstorm); story by Ian Edginton and artwork by Davide Fabbri, and there are previews at their website <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics/?cm=13662>. It's quite likely that a graphic-novel collection will appear sooner rather than later.
213. Christy Kinahan, dubbed the "Irish Godfather" and believed to be head of a gang operating on the Costa del Sol, was arrested this month by Spanish police in Malaga. According to a blogger's report on May 25, Malaga's police headquarters is located on Calle Conan Doyle.
214. Mark Hime's catalogs are always interesting, and his latest (Bibliotopus #44) offers a portrait of Sherlock Holmes by Sidney Paget ($45,000); the portrait reportedly was torn in half by the artist and the top portion recovered by his wife from a waste-paper basket. It was shown at the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at Abbey House in London in 1951 and the Plaza Art Galleries in New York in 1952, and published in The Cornhill Magazine (summer 1951).
215. SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES, by Steven Doyle and David A. Crowder (Indianapolis: Wiley, 2010; 360 pp., $19.99) is a useful addition to a series that began in 1991 with DOS FOR DUMMIES and now has more than 1,700 titles; it's up to date (with mention of Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes") and of course nicely timed to take advantage of the renewed interest in Holmes. The book is an excellent introduction to the Canon, Conan Doyle, the world of Sherlock Holmes, Sherlockiana, and Sherlockians.
216. May 10 #5: Martin Gardner died on May 22. Born in Tulsa, he grew up with John Bennett Shaw (and reminisced delightfully about their long friendship in the Dec. 1990 issue of The Baker Street Journal), and went on to write more than 70 books about mathematics, magic, Alice in Wonderland, the Wizard of Oz, Casey at the Bat (an annotated edition in which he paid tribute to John by including a mention of Moorville, Kans.), religion, philosophy, and the paranormal and supernatural (which he happily and energetically debunked, sometimes with unkind comments about Conan Doyle).
217. Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is scheduled at the Park Square Theatre, June 4 to July 3; the dates are different from those announced earlier (May 09 #6). The theater is at 20 West 7th Place, St. Paul, MN 55102 (651-291-7005) <www.parksquaretheatre.org>.
218. Macmillan had a launch party at the English-Speaking Union in London in April for Andrew Lane's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD, the first in his new series for children, due to be published on June 4. The photograph (by Carl Court), forwarded by Jon Lellenberg, shows a copy of the book in the hands of Joshua Conan Doyle, the great-grandson of Sir Arthur's younger brother Innes. You can see a one-minute trailer for the book at <www.youngsherlock.com>.
219. MUPPET SHERLOCK HOLMES, a new fourpart comic-book mini-series (reported to be "in development" by BOOM! Studios) with a story by Patrick Storck and artwork by Amy Mebberson and David Petersen. Gonzo appears as Holmes, and Fozzy Bear as Watson; you can see some preliminary cover artwork at the web-site <www.muppet.wikia.com/wiki/Muppet\_Sherlock\_Holmes>.
220. The Muppet Wiki, by the way, has some interesting features, including entries for characters in "The Muppet Show", including Sherlock Holmes' cat, Sherlock Holmes (whale), and Baskerville the Hound. And, of course, Sherlock Hemlock in "Sesame Street".
221. Keith Topping blogged on May 14 that BBC dumped all the footage for the 60-minute pilot of "Sherlock" (starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman) after deciding to turn the drama into a three-part 90-minutes series; the production cost of the pilot was reported to be £800,000. The series (Mar 10 #3) has Holmes as a modern-day detective. A BBC spokeswoman confirmed the decision not to air the pilot, and said that the series is expected to air in July or August.
222. Oscar Ross spotted an announcement for "Tom and Jerry Meet Sherlock Holmes" (an original animation) to be released by Warner Home Video in August. The film will run 75 minutes, and the DVD has been announced at $18.95 in the U.S. and £9.99 in the U.K. There also will be a Blu-ray version ($19.99). You can see the cover artwork at <www.amazon.com>.
223. May 10 #6: Cameo Auctioneers <www.cameo-auctioneers.co.uk> had an interesting sale of material from films and television productions on May 23: the lots included a dinner jacket worn by Nigel Bruce as Watson in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (£850), a frock-coat worn by Jeremy Brett as Holmes (£340), a waistcoat worn by Michael Caine as Reginald Kincaid in "Without a Clue" (£100), and a tail coat worn by Christopher Lee as Mycroft in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (£60). Some items went unsold: a woolen tweed jacket worn by Alan Arkin as Sigmund Freud in "The Seven-PerCent Solution" (estimated at £50-80) and a jacket worn by Ben Kingsley as Watson in "Without a Clue" (£80-120).
224. Alex Braun has reported "The Watson Files", a new radio series that's produced by Strobie Studios, in Riverside, Iowa, and is available on the Internet at <www.strobiestudios.com>; the series debuted on Apr. 11, and you can listen to it on-line, on YouTube, and on iTunes. Written and directed by Scott Strohsal, the series features the grandchildren of Holmes and Watson: Spencer Holmes (played by Michael Helgens) and Dr. Jack Watson (Greg Kilberger).
225. Robert Downey Jr. has already started work on provoking buzz for the "Sherlock Holmes" sequel: according to a message posted at the LiveJournal website Downey has announced that "I'm doing Sherlock Holmes again so I'm going be going back and reading all the Conan Doyle books again. I just finished them, I'm gonna start over again, at volume 1." He also joked that there will be a "pantless" nude scene between him and co-star Jude Law in the sequel.

226. The film has won an Excellence in Production Design Award (for period film) from the Art Directors Guild, and ITV's National Movie Award (best action/ thriller); the ITV awards are voted for by the public in the U.K. (Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law were nominated for the ITV best performance award, which went to Robert Pattinson for his performance in "The Twilight Saga: New Moon"). Accepting the ITV award, Guy Ritchie made a brief speech, explaining that "We set out to make a comedy but we'll take it where we can get it."
227. The John Watkiss "pitch illustrations" for the film aren't the only artwork available; <www.heyuguys.co.uk/2010/05/13/sherlock-holmes-concept-art> has six atmospheric images that Warner Bros. made available in Britain during promotion for the DVD there.
228. The "Sherlock Holmes" Blu-ray disk ($35.99) has a 31 minute "special feature" that isn't found on the commercial DVD: a sequence of "focus points" that includes a 3-minute segment ("The Sherlockians") in which "the experts at a Sherlockian conference in New York explain why Sherlock Holmes is one of fiction's most enduring characters." That footage was filmed during the birthday festivities in 2009 and offers glimpses of (and brief interviews with) some of those who were on hand for the festivities. It is possible, of course, that the special feature will be included on a later version of the DVD of the film.
229. Jun 10 #1: It is nice, as we approach the centenary of Ronald Knox's classic "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", to see a renewed interest in Knox: last year saw David Rooney's THE WIND OF CERTITUDE: A LITERARY BIOGRAPHY OF RONALD KNOX (Aug 09 #2), and now there is Terry Tastard's RONALD KNOX AND ENGLISH CATHOLICISM (Leominster, Gracewing, 2009; 215 pp., £12.99). Both books were published exactly 50 years after Evelyn Waugh's excellent biography of Knox, and Tastard takes the reader through Knox's spiritual life: Knox was born and raised in a Protestant family, became a convert to Catholicism and chaplain to Oxford University, and created a new translation of the Bible, and Tastard suggests that Knox's story reflects the revival of Catholicism in England in the first half of the 20th century.
230. TCM (Turner Classic Movies) will celebrate summer with a weekly series of "family-time favorites" hosted by John Lithgow; "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) will air on Aug. 1.
231. For the completists: Phil Jones reports that SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS: THE FALL OF THE AMAZING ZALINDAS, by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin (Sep 6 #6), was first published as THE FALL OF THE AMAZING WALENDAS ; an advanced reader's edition exists, with different cover, title, text, and pagination, and can be found (if you're lucky) at web-sites such as Alibris and Abebooks. It is possible that the authors or publisher received a complaint from the Amazing Wallendas (that's the correct spelling of the circus act's name).
232. Anthony D. P. Mann, who earlier produced a Canadian version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Jul 04 #4) is now in production on "Sherlock Holmes and the Shadow Watchers", which is scheduled for release on DVD later this year. His web-site <www.anthonypmann.com> has more information about the new film, and a 2-minute trailer.
233. "Of all ghosts the ghosts of our old loves are the worst," is a thoroughly romantic sentiment, written by Arthur Conan Doyle and quoted in "A Commonplace Book" in the May issue of British Heritage. Who spoke those words, and in what work?
234. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times10-5.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new, including Art Schroeder's SHERLOCKIAN SHTICK!, other books, lapel pins, notecards, and much more.
235. Catherine Cooke reports that the Folio Society is planning a new edition of THE LOST WORLD, in pictorial binding and with a new introduction by Andrew Lycett and illustrations that include the drawing and photographs that Conan Doyle commissioned for the first edition of the book. The new edition will cost $48.95, and you can read more about the book and see some of the illustrations at <www.foliosociety.com/book/LWR/lost-world>. And if you'd like to join the society, Catherine will be happy to introduce you, since she's a member and gets vouchers for introducing people; she's at 15 Copperfield Court, 146 Worple Road, Wimbledon SW20 8QA, England, and her e-mail address is <ccooke@westminster.gov.uk>.
236. Jun 10 #2: The new independent film "Cold Weather" (not yet in theaters) appears to be Sherlockian: according to one review, Cris Lankenau (Doug) moves in with his sister and quickly finds himself thrust into a real-life who-done-it when his ex-girlfriend suddenly vanishes; being an admittedly big fan of Sherlock Holmes, Doug sets out to play real-life detective.
237. It was Justice of the Peace Trevor who said that "Of all ghosts the ghosts of our old loves are the worst" (in "The *Gloria Scott*"). He was offering an explanation of the initials tattooed in the bend of his elbow, but the sentiment isn't all that romantic when one realizes that the initials were his own: J.A. (for James Armitage).
238. The "It's That Time Again" series edited by Jim Harmon continues, offering stories about the popular heroes and villains from those long-ago days of old-time radio. IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN 3: (Boalsburg: BearManor Media, 2006; 236 pp., $15.00) has imaginative encounters that include Martin Grams Jr.'s "Hold the Press: Palladin vs. Dillon" (Gunsmoke/Have Gun Will Travel), Michael Leannah's "Vacation in Hollywood" (Jack Benny/Richard Diamond), and Gareth Tilley's "The Singular Affair of the Gentleman Cracksman" (Sherlock Holmes/Raffles). IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN, VOLUME IV (Albany: BearManor Media, 2009; 278 pp., $19.95) Harmon's "Sherlock Holmes Out West" (with Sherlock Holmes and Tom Mix), and other non-Sherlockian tales that include two nostalgic stories by Jack French. Ben Ohmart, proprietor of BearManor Media, offers many other OTR radio titles at <www.bearmanormedia.com>.
239. Arthur Conan Doyle, on tour in the United States in 1894, visited Rudyard Kipling at his home in Vermont, and gave Kipling golf lessons in a field near the house (Mar 05 #1). And Kipling's home, which he named Naulakha, carefully restored and with his original furniture, is now a vacation rental: Anne Lawrence Guyon wrote an interesting report about the house for the N.Y. Times <www.nytimes.com/2010/03/19/travel/escapes/19kipling.html>, and there's an on-line slide show of the house and its rooms.
240. Sherlock Holmes stories have been translated into Croatian, and so have six of Laurie R. King's series about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes, with interesting new cover artwork. Available from Algoritam in Zagreb priced at 69 to 79 kuna (that's about $11.38 to $13.02) <www.algoritam.hr>.
241. Rue McClanahan died on June 3. She made her stage debut at the age of 4 in "The Three Little Kittens" and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television, where she became famous as Blanche Devereaux in the series "The Golden Girls" from 1985 to 1992; Her autobiography was titled MY FIRST FIVE HUSBANDS...AND THE ONES WHO GOT AWAY (2007), and she acted with George C. Scott as Justin Playfair's supportive sister Daisy in "They Might Be Giants" (1971).
242. Prescott's Press, edited by Warren Randall for The Three Garridebs, continues its nice mix of scholarship and whimsy, and the March issue (#55) has Mike McKuras' "Variety Is the Spouse of Life" (in which he offers an amused look at Sherlockians and their world). Subscriptions cost $15.00 for four issues ($20.00 outside the U.S.), and issue #55 costs $5.00/$6.00 postpaid, from Warren Randall (15 Fawn Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720).

243. Jun 10 #3: "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" is an "interactive murder mystery comedy theatre" show that was written by Matthew D. Osmun first performed at the Broker Restaurant in Denver on Mar. 6; it is still being presented in repertory on Saturdays, at least through July 24. The Broker Restaurant's address is at 621 17th Street, Denver, CO 80202 (303-292-5065) <www.thebrokerrestaurant.com/mysterydinner.htm>, and there's more about MO Productions at <www.moproductions.net>.

244. The Oxford University Press has an "English Language Teaching" series that includes SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SPORT OF KINGS, retold by Jennifer Bassett and illustrated by Ron Tiner; first published in 2003, it was reissued with new cover artwork in 2007 (56 pp., $6.75/£4.75).
245. SparkNotes, an on-line version of the old student standbys Cliff Notes and Monarch Notes, will be found at <www.sparknotes.com>. They have long offered "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (Sep 05 #1), and now have added "The Red-Headed League" to their repertoire. SparkNotes provides analysis, discussion, quotations, study questions, and other assistance to those who are studying good literature.
246. Howard Ostrom has reported that the Orlando Jai-alai and Race Book in Fern Park, Fla., offers a "Sherlock's Sure Shot" promotion on Thursdays and Fridays: "Sherlock" posts a horse pick for the day, and you buy a $10.00 win ticket and you either win the money the horse pays for winning or you can get $10.00 worth of food or drink in exchange for the losing ticket. And suggest, in their e-mail promotion, "be sure to read Arthur Conan Doyle's 'Silver Blaze' if you don't think Sherlock knows a thing or two about the Sport of Kings!" <www.orlandojaialai.com>.
247. It is interesting to see how many good Sherlockian books are being written for young reader: the latest is Andrew Lane's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD (London: Macmillan Children's Books, 2010; 311 pp., £6.99), and it's a fine start to a new series. Fourteen-year-old Sherlock, on holiday from school, is quickly involved in investigating a bizarre murder, learning deductive skills from an American tutor whose tomboy daughter helps Sherlock combat sinister villains and foil a plot against the Empire.
248. Roger Johnson notes that it's possible to pre-order "Sherlock Holmes: The Rediscovered Railway" ("four more thrilling Sherlock Holmes adventures from John Taylor, the creator of 'The Unopened Casebook of Sherlock Holmes'") at the BBC Shop <www.bbcshop.com>; £12.99, or £9.09 at the web-site. "The Unopened Casebook" was a series of six stories broadcast by BBC Radio 5, with Simon Callow as Holmes and Nicky Henson as Watson (Mar 93 #1).
249. The phrase "flash fiction" seems to have originated in 1992, and the genre has quickly found a home on the Internet, where fiction with a limited number of words is welcome. HOLMES IN A FLASH: NEW SHORT HOLMES STORIES, edited by Stephen Abbott (Manchester: Abbott ePublishing, 2010, $2.49); offers 13 new stories (1,100 words or less) and Conan Doyle's own short parody "How Holmes Learned the Trick", and can be downloaded from the publisher's web-site <www.abbottpub.com>. Some pieces are atmospheric snapshots rather than plot-driven stories, and the eBook is an interesting introduction to a new format for pastiche and parody.

250. Jun 10 #4: Sonia Fetherston has noted that the Sherlock Building in Portland has been bought by the Church of Scientology. The building, which has been on the National Register of Historic Places since 1977, is named for William Sherlock, who came to the United States from Ireland in the 1840s and completed construction of the property in 1893, and it has an interesting web-site at <www.sherlockbuilding.com>. A development company paid $9.75 million for the building in 2007, and sold it to the Scientologists for $6.4 million.
251. Kelly Blau reports that she received a message from Amazon saying that because she had bought the "Sherlock Holmes" DVD, they had some suggestions that might be of interest to her: "Crack in the World" (with Dana Andrews), "Thanks for the Memories Collection" (with Bob Hope), and "Freud" (with David Suchet). She thinks it must say something profound about Sherlockians.
252. Himan Brown died on June 4. His career in radio began in the late 1920s, and he was best known as the producer of series such as "Inner Sanctum Mysteries", "Bulldog Drummond", "Dick Tracy", and "The Adventures of the Thin Man"; he estimated that he created more than 30,000 radio shows over seven decades. In 1974 Brown launched the "CBS Radio Mystery Theater", which ran for nine years and won a Peabody Award; the series included many dramatizations of Sherlock Holmes stories and, "Nightmare in Gillette Castle" (with Kevin McCarthy as William Gillette/Sherlock Holmes).
253. The Waverley Borough Council met on June 9 to consider the future of Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, and approved the developer's latest plan: the house will be converted into three homes, with a public pavilion with information about Conan Doyle, and a new second wing will be built to provide five town houses; the developer said the project would provide restoration of the building, including the historic details and leaded windows, and enhance the landscape. According to a story posted at the web-site <www.getsurrey.co.uk>, Conan Doyle's grand-nephew Richard Doyle was at the meeting, and said afterward that "It is just such a shame that all that history will be lost forever. The family had been trying to come up with ways of buying it, but the price was so high we could not afford it. We just wish there was something we could do." Actor Stephen Fry described the proposal as "a foolish, short-sighted, and wanton act of vandalism. The Surrey County Council estimated last year (Apr 09 #6) that acquisition and restoration of Undershaw would cost about £3.5 million.
254. E.J. Wagner, author of THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 06 #2) discussed Holmes and forensics in a 5-minute interview on BBC Radio Ulster on May 22. You can listen to the interview at <www.ejwagner-crimehistorian.com>; the link is under "What's new".
255. <www.huffingtonpost.com/2010/06/14/sherlockian-graham-moores_n_609293.html> is the URL for an advance report on Graham Moore's pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (with favorable comments by Christopher Hitchens and Rupert Holmes, and a 2-minute video; the book's due from Twelve/Grand Central in December. According to a post by Amy Hertz: "When literary researcher Harold White is inducted into the preeminent Sherlock Holmes enthusiast society, The Baker Street Irregulars, he never imagines he's about to be thrust onto the hunt for the holy grail of Holmesophiles"

256. Jun 10 #5: Catherine Cooke's article on the collection at the Marylebone Library appeared in the first issue of CADS: Crime and Detective Stories (Sep 85 #3), and publisher Geoff Bradley has included Sherlockiana in many issues since then. The magazine is celebrating its first 25 years of publication with the June issue, and it leads with an interesting discovery: George Bellairs' article "Sherlock Holmes and the Bankers" (reprinted from the spring 1954 issue of Martins Bank Magazine). There's other S'iana as well in the 80 pages in CADS 58, and many interesting articles about old and new books. You can order a copy of CADS 58 from the publisher (9 Vicarage Hill, South Benfleet, Essex SS7 1PA, England); £5.75 to the U.K./$12.00 to the U.S./£7.00 or £10.00 other.
257. One of the useful features of CADS is Marvin Lachman's "Death of a Mystery Writer" section of brief obituaries for writers and others associated with the genre. John Dankworth died on Feb. 6; he was an accomplished musician, and wrote the music (Benny Green wrote the score) for "The Diamond and the Goose" an oratorio first performed in Birmingham in 1981. Jim Harmon died on Feb. 16, 2010; he was a great enthusiast for old time radio, and a prolific writer; his pastiche "Confidence Game" appeared in Galaxy (June 1957) and "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Duplicate Daughter" in IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN 2 (2004). Robert Weverka died on May 19, 2010; his MURDER BY DECREE (1972) was an adaptation of the film (he adapted many non-Sherlockian films as well).
258. Frogwares continues to engineer new Sherlockian computer games; their website <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com/en/index.php?rub=news> offers links to "Sherlock Holmes: The Mystery of Osborne House" (for Nintendo DS) and "The Testament of Sherlock Holmes" (only a trailer, since the next game in the series has not been released.

259. Go to <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/sothebys-2010-beetons.htm#description> if you'd like to see Randall Stock's updated report on the inscribed copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual that will be at auction at Sotheby's on July 15 (May 10 #1); it includes links to Sotheby's five-page catalog description, and to news articles about the sale.
260. Dollhouse Miniatures' room-box contest for Sherlockians (Jan 10 #5) was won by Judy Rosshirt, and they have a description (and full-color photograph of her impressive room in the May-June issue, along with photograph from three other miniaturists (including Joe Coppola), and a story about Jay Pearlman and the Mini-Tonga Society. $6.95 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
261. "The Man Who Murdered Sherlock Holmes" is a new 60-minute "drama documentary" from Electric Theatre in Britain; so far all that's available is a 4-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=OOix4QgTCi8>, with brief comments by Owen Dudley Edwards, Roger Johnson, and Catherine Cooke.
262. "What man wouldn't pass up a necktie for a chance to be associated with an educated, supermacho giant rat?" asked Nicholas D. Kristof in an op-ed column about Father's Day in the N.Y. Times (June 16). African giant pouched rats have been trained by a Dutch company, Apopo, to detect landmines and cases of tuberculosis, and you can read about (and donate to) the HeroRATS program at <www.globalgiving.org>.

263. Jun 10 #6: The Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest, which since 1982 has sought "the opening sentence to the worst of all possible novels," has named Dennis Pearce as the runner-up in the "detective" category this year, and his entry was: "As Holmes, who had a nose for danger, quietly fingered the bloody knife and eyed the various body parts strewn along the dark, deserted highway, he placed his ear to the ground and, with his heart in his throat, silently mouthed to his companion, 'Arm yourself, Watson, there is an evil hand ahead.'" The best of this year's entries can be read on-line <www.bulwer-lytton.com>; the contest's motto is "Where www means 'Wretched Writers Welcome.'" A Sherlockian entry previously won in the "detective" category (Aug 92 #4).
264. Will Longstaff's painting of the ghosts of dead Australian soldiers in the Gallipoli campaign, bought by Conan Doyle in 1928, was sold at auction by Bonhams in Sydney this month; estimated at AU$20,000-40,000, the painting went for AU$72,000 including the buyer's premium (that's about $62,586). More information at <www.tinyurl.com/2dftf6s>.
265. Peter Egan and Philip Franks began their British tour in Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" last spring (Mar 10 #6), and the play will now begin an eight-week run at the Duchess Theatre in London's West End on July 15 <www.nimaxtheatres.com>. Robert Daws will play Watson.
266. Laurie R. King will be on tour in England and Scotland, signing in libraries and bookshops, from July 15 through Aug. 2 (Allison and Busby are publishing British editions of her books with attractive cover art); you will find a detailed schedule at <www.laurierking.com/events/whereslaurie>. And she will be guest of honor at Bouchercon 41 in San Francisco, Oct. 14-17; there's more information the convention at <www.bcon2010.com>.
267. Elephant Family (a financial support organization for endangered Asian elephants) draws attention to its work with an Elephant Parade of decorated life-size model baby elephants displayed in major cities around the world; the parade has now reached London, where 258 elephants are to be sold in an auction that will end on July 4. Cherrie Waltho has reported (and photographed) a Sherlock Holmes elephant in Baker Street (Nick Utechin notes that it's almost outside #109, which was James Holroyd's choice for 221B). More information, along with color photographs, is available at their web-site at <www.elephantparadelondon.org>, where there's also a shop that sells miniature reproductions in four sizes, from 10 cm (£27.50) to 35 cm (£199.00). The artist who created the Sherlock Holmes elephant is Turdsak Piromkraipak, and it was sponsored by the Evening Standard. The organizers are hoping for an audience estimated at 25 million, and that the auction will raise £2 million.
268. Apologies for being a few days late with this month's newsletter: the Sherlockian conference ("Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds") in Bennington was great fun, and I'll report more about the event next month.

Jul 10 #1:

269. "Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His Worlds" (the conference held at Bennington College on June 24-27) was nicely done (as was the first conference, 16 years ago); Sally Sugarman and her accomplices offered a varied schedule of lectures by authors, scholars, and others; late night (and early morning) movie screenings; tours of local attractions (including the Park-McCullough House, a spectacular Victorian mansion where the tour featured a champagne tea); an exhibition of Sherlockian art and artifacts; a Victorian Musicale and a performance of a (non-Sherlockian) play by the Oldcastle Theatre Company. There was an article about the conference in the Bennington Banner; go to <www.benningtonbanner.com> and search for [sherlock holmes].
270. One of the nicer extracurricular opportunities at the conference was a visit (at Lloyd Rose's recommendation) to Owl Pen Books in Greenwich, N.Y. It is one of the last of the grand old book barns, and one of my finds was Elmer Davis' novel GIANT KILLER, published by John Day in 1928 and reprinted by the Readers Club in 1943 (the Readers Club, a competitor of the Book-of-the Month Club, had Clifton Fadiman, Sinclair Lewis, and Carl Van Doren as its judges). The novel is not Sherlockian (except for having been written by a future member of The Baker Street Irregulars and The Red Circle), but it's great fun (according to Lewis "is a lively, well-colored and sometimes ribald restoration of King David the Psalmist, Joab who was his field marshal, his other sanguinary and difficult relatives, and their innumerable girls.")
271. One of the panelists at the conference in Bennington was M. Lee Alexander, whose course on "Detective Fiction: From Victorian Sleuths to the Present" includes a lecture on "Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes, and the Victorian Era"; the course is available on CD ($98.75) or as a download ($59.75), and there's a course description at <www.tinyurl.com/2ckpfqo>. You can also listen to a 7-minute interview with her (June 14) at The Modern Scholar Blog at <www.themodernscholar.ordwpres.com>.
272. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a colorful cachet and an official postmark for the conference (there was someone from the local post office on hand to sell and cancel stamps), and the covers cost $6.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $7.00 (elsewhere); please pay with currency or U.S. postal money orders, and his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
273. Further to the report (Jun 10 #4) on the Waverley Borough Council decision to approve the developer's latest plan for Undershaw. the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, John Gibson, who is chairman of the Undershaw Preservation Trust <www.saveundershaw.com> is challenging the decision on legal grounds, and Lynn Gale has more information about the campaign at <www.undershawhelp.blogspot.com>. Gibson was co-author with Richard Lancelyn Green of the landmark A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF A. CONAN DOYLE (1983), and coeditor with him of volumes of Conan Doyle's previously uncollected work.

274. Jul 10 #2: "A Keyboard to Make Sherlock Holmes Proud" was the title of a post to the Tom's Guide web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/2fg8sx7>, reported by Ken Lanza. The item is an imaginative steampunk computer keyboard created by Richard R. Nagy of <www.datamancer.net>, offered at eBay this month; bidding began at $1,500, and the keyboard sold for $2,646.
275. "Dr. Watson's 158th Birthday Celebration" is the title of a joint meeting of Rochester Row, The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse, An Irish Secret Society of Buffalo, and Watson's Holmestead of Binghamton, on Aug. 7, 2010, in Rochester, N.Y. More information on the all-day event is available from Lewis Neisner (585-360-4715) <lewisneisner@yahoo.com>.

276. Youngsters know all about Silly Bandz, which are die-molded with non-toxic silicone; they're worn by kids as bracelets that return to their original shapes when taken off. Ray Betzner spotted the new "Guess Who?" pack ($5.49 from PII Industries) with twelve bandz that feature the outlines of six famous people, including Marilyn Monroe, Alfred Hitchcock, and (of course) Sherlock Holmes. The pack is shown in full color (and you can order it) at <www.amazon.com/Rubba-Bandz-Rubba-Bracelets-Guess/dp/B003MA90IE>.
277. THE FICTIONAL 100, by Lucy Pollard-Gott (Bloomington: iUniverse, 2010; 475 pp., $25.95), is a ranking of "the most influential characters in world literature and legend," and the author casts her net widely to include less-well-known characters from Asian and African literature as well as those to be found in European and American books; it is fascinating to read (or to browse) what she has written. Sherlock Holmes ranks #9, and you can read an excerpt from his chapter at <www.fictional100.com>.
278. The Baker Street Irregulars have two new items available for purchase. The original of the Sherlockian switch plate that Edgar W. Smith installed in his cottage in Morristown, N.J., has been reproduced in unfinished aluminum ($55.00 postpaid to the U.S., $57.50 elsewhere); proceeds from the sale directly benefit the BSI Archives at the Houghton Library at Harvard, where the original switch plate has been preserved. Jens Byskov Jensen's FIFTY YEARS IN BAKER STREET (95 pp.) is a history of The Cimbrian Friends of Baker Street, and is published jointly by the two societies ($11.95, shipping extra). You can order at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
279. Ceil Baring-Gould died on June 27. She married Bill Baring-Gould in 1936 and happily shared his varied interests over many years; they jointly authored the well-received THE ANNOTATED MOTHER GOOSE (1962), and it was Ceil who saw THE ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (1967) into print after his untimely death. She once complained that Bill's most popular book seemed to be THE LURE OF THE LIMERICK (1967), judging by the number of letters received from readers who sent him obscene limericks they felt ought to be in second edition. In 1969 Ceil was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *The* Woman in 1969, and in 1992 she was the first (and still the only) woman ever to dine with The Five Orange Pips, at the home of the late Ben Clark.

280. Jul 10 #3: SHERLOCK ALIVE, compiled and annotated by Karen Murdock, is a delightful collection of the Sherlockiana that Vincent Starrett wrote for his "Books Alive" column in the Chicago Daily News and the Chicago Tribune from 1942 to 1967 (and a bit more, since he contributed to other columns in the paper). There's an appreciative Introduction by Susan Rice, and a dozen appendices, including brief biographies of many of the people mentioned by Starrett, and the book offers a splendid view of the literary talents and knowledge of one of the early and most knowledgeable Sherlockians. The publisher is George Vanderburgh (2010; 503 pp., $35.00); visit <www.batteredbox.com/VincentStarrett/25-Starrett-SherlockAlive.htm> for a detailed description of (and an excerpt from) the book, and information on how to order is at <www.batteredbox.com/contactus.html>. It's not a book to be read quickly, and the annotations will be most helpful to people who aren't familiar with all the things that Starrett (and his audience) knew in those distant Sherlockian days.
281. Bret M. Herholz's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE PAINFUL PREDICAMENT OF ALICE FAULKNER is a graphic-novel adaptation of William Gillette's play from Alterna Comics (2009; 128 pp., $11.99); the artwork is quite atmospheric, reminiscent of Edward Gorey, and you can see a sample at the publisher's web-site at <www.alternacomics.com/#/sherlock-holmes/4535753000>.
282. Christopher Roden has noted that some interesting Conan Doyle letters have been advertised by Classic Bindings Ltd. (61 Cambridge Street, London SW1V 4PS, England) <www.classicbindings.net>. One lot (priced at £4,300) is an exchange of correspondence in 1919 between Lord Alfred Douglas (son of the Marquess of Queensbury and intimate friend of Oscar Wilde) and Conan Doyle; Douglas accused Conan Doyle of promoting Spiritualism for the sake of money and notoriety and "with the same flat-footed low persistence as you worked your idiot 'Sherlock Holmes' business," and Conan Doyle replied that "It is only your approval which could in any way annoy me." The letters are accompanied by a label written by Lady Doyle: "A splendid answer from my darling to that rat Alfred Douglas."
283. The other lot (priced at £8,300) is a collection of eleven letters he wrote to his wife Jean in 1923 from Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Cincinnati; they are affectionate and amusing: in one he says that he has "Nothing to read all day but the Bible which is interesting but old fashioned rather," and in another that Pittsburg is "a hateful place--hell upon earth." Both of the lots were in the family papers sold at auction at Christie's in 2004, when they sold for £1,912 and £3,585 (including buyer's premium).
284. Tina Rhea has reported a spectacular color photograph of a Lion's Mane, the "picture of the day" (for July 6) at the National Geographic's web-site; it is possible to download it as wallpaper for your monitor, and you see it at <www.tinyurl.com/37zntft>.
285. THE MAN WHO MURDERED SHERLOCK HOLMES is an interesting 63-minute documentary from Electric Theatre Productions; it was written, produced, and presented by Richard Jones, and features interviews with Roger Johnson, Catherine Cooke, Owen Dudley Edwards, and others, and it's available on a DVD in PAL format only (£15.99) at <www.amazon.co.uk>. And you can see a brief clip from the series at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=GFzgZTw2D2A>.
286. Jul 10 #4: Dixie Haywood (aka The Little Georgia Magnet), "known for being able to withstand the strength of some of the world's strongest men," including Eugene Sandow, is the subject of a book by Susan and Hugh Harrington <www.annieabbott.com>; it's a fine example of the strange things that Sherlockians get do (Hugh is "Wisteria Lodge" in The Baker Street Irregulars, class of 1996).
287. Ken Lanza spotted a blog (July 5) with some interesting ideas for a Sherlock Holmes Party (posted by a homeschooling parent); you'll find the blog at <www.syndiluhu.blogspot.com/2010/07/sherlock-holmes-party.html>.
288. "A Study in Pink", "The Blind Banker", and "The Great Game" are the titles of the three-part mini-series "Sherlock", according to Wikipedia; the entry is informative, and has links to older articles and the BBC's latest press release. Go to <www.wikipedia.org> and search for [sherlock (tv series)]. Oscar Ross kindly reported this entry; one might say that anything important has an entry on Wikipedia (of course one does need to be careful about blithely believing everything found there).
289. I can't do it justice in my newsletter, but a search for [jacques camory] at <www.amazon.com> will display an image of his attractive giclee poster print of a scene in "The Dancing Men" ("Sherlock Holmes Studies the Case at His Desk") offered in various sizes and priced from $34.99 to $179.99.
290. THE CASE OF THE ILL-FATED PLAYWRIGHT, by Fred W. Edmiston (Scotts Valley: CreateSpace, 2010; 155 pp., $13.99), has Holmes and Watson involved in an attempt to rescue Oscar Wilde from dire peril at the hands of the Marquess of Queensbury; their attempt was not successful, of course, but there are many Wildean epigrams in the book.
291. Bidding on the inscribed copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual (Jun 10 #5) opened at £140,000 and stopped at £240,000, not reaching the reserve, Nick Utechin has reported, and the Beeton's did not sell. It was estimated at £250,000 to £400,000; the buyer's premium was 25% on the first £25,000 and 20% thereafter, so the person who bid £240,000 was willing to pay £289,000 (a bit more than $444,000). Randall Stock has lots of information on this copy at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/sothebys-2010-beetons.htm#description>.

292. THE SECRET FIEND (Toronto: Tundra, 2010; 244 pp., $19.95) is the fourth in Shane Peacock's series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" (still on his own in London and learning how to be a detective); Peacock has won many awards for his books, and deserves them: he's good at character, atmosphere, and mystery. And his web-site's at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.
293. MX Publishing <www.tinyurl.com/34725mh> is offering its five books by and about B. Fletcher Robinson as a set and at a significant discount to members of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London: £81.96/$148.41 postpaid (if bought separately the books cost £131.96/$238.95 plus shipping). The titles are BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON: A FOOTNOTE TO THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Sep 08 #1), ASIDE ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: TWENTY ORIGINAL TALES (Mar 09 #4), THE WORLD OF VANITY FAIR (May 09 #2), BOBBLES AND PLUM: FOUR SATIRICAL PLAYLETS BY BERTRAM FLETCHER ROBINSON AND P.G. WODEHOUSE (Jul 09 #3), and RUGBY FOOTBALL DURING THE NINETEENTH CENTURY (Mar 10 #3).

294. Jul 10 #5: Alan Plater died on June 25. He trained as an architect, and became a full-time writer in 1961, earning more than 200 stage, screen, radio, and television credits. He was appointed CBE (Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire), for services to drama, in 1995, and he dramatized two of the stories for Granada's television series: "The Solitary Cyclist" (1984) and "The Man with the Twisted Lip" (1986).
295. Sad news for researchers: the web-sites for The Times and The Sunday Times are now available "exclusively by subscription" (£1 for 30 days and then £2 a week); free access will continue, I expect, at libraries that subscribe to the web-sites.
296. Barry S. Brown's THE UNPLEASANTNESS AT PARKERTON MANOR (Santa Fe: Sunstone Press, 2010; 260 pp., $22.95) is the first in a projected series that stars Mrs. Hudson doing the detecting, with assistance of Holmes and Watson; the unpleasantness involves two murders, and exotic heroines and villains.
297. "Can Holmes solve the mystery of the Hound of the Baskervilles and 27 other crimes before Moriarty tightens his grip? And just who does keep sending postcards from Reichenbach Falls?" Answers to those questions may be found in the play "Sherlock (Abridged)" performed on Aug. 8-10 during the Camden Fringe in London. <www.camdenfringe.com>
298. The play "Sherlock Holmes in the Crucifer of Blood" (by Paul Giovanni) will be produced at Theatre Three ("the theatre-in-the-round at the quadrangle") from Aug. 5 to Sept. 5; 2800 Routh Street #168, Dallas, TX 75201 (214-871-3300) <www.theatre3dallas.com>.
299. Reported: THE FICTIONAL 100, by Lucy Pollard-Gott (Bloomington: iUniverse, 2010; 496 pp., $25.95); Sherlock Holmes ranks #9, and you can read an excerpt from his chapter at <www.fictional100.com>. KILLER'S DOZEN, by Richard A. Lupoff (Rockville: Wildside, 2010; 252 pp., $14.95); 13 of his previously uncollected stories, including "Inga Sigerson Weds" reprinted from SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE AMERICAN YEARS).
300. <www.canada.com> is a web-site maintained by Canwest Communications Corp. (Canada's largest media company), and Laura Kuhn has reported their interesting (and well illustrated) story (by Robert Evans) about Meiringen and Sherlock Holmes, at <www.tinyurl.com/23rxkw8>.
301. Spoken Ink: The Audio Story Website <www.spokenink.co.uk> offers a wide variety of downloadable recordings by authors who include Conan Doyle: four of the Sherlock Holmes stories read by Edward Hardwicke (£2.99 each), "The Brazilian Cat" read by Graham Seed (£2.99), and "B24" read by Ben Whybrow (£1.99).
302. Cambridge Scholars Publishing has issued a CSP Classic Texts edition of THE COMPLETE WORKS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE IN 56 VOLUMES, with an introduction by Neil McCaw (he's academic director of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth) (2009; 10,988 pp., £399.00); Jonathan Barnes reviewed the set in the Times Literary Supplement (June 23), noting that it's not comprehensive (no plays, letters, or journalism), almost entirely without illustrations, not scholarly, and poorly copy-edited.
303. Jul 10 #6: Paul Spiring spotted a BBC report (July 16) about the possible closing of the 200-year-old Dartmoor Prison; a Ministry of Justice study has suggested the "permanent closure of old and inefficient existing capacity." The prison, mentioned (as the Princetown Prison) in "The Sign of the Four", "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and two "Brigadier Gerard" stories, is now a Category C facility for less violent offenders; the Prison Reform Trust said earlier in July that the prison "should eventually be closed because it was too isolated and too old."
304. Karen Ellery has kindly noted Russell Stutler's web-site <www.stutler.cc>, where you will find his striking birds-eye view of 221B Baker Street in an improved version with annotations and a link to <www.zazzle.com>, where you can purchase his artwork in various formats and sizes. He also has a link to his imaginative Japanese hiragana version of the Dancing Men code.
305. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is a delightful parody that was written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007; it debuted at the Central Square Theatre on July 22 and will run through Aug. 22. 450 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02139 (617-576-9278) <www.centralsquaretheater.com>.
306. "From the tiny scratches on your mobile, I deduce that your brother is an alcoholic and that you don't get on with him," is something that Benedict Cumberbatch says, according to The Guardian (July 17), in the new television mini-series "Sherlock", which was debuted on BBC-1 on July 25; it will premiere on "Masterpiece Mystery" on PBS-TV on Oct. 24, and they will begin running a promotion on Aug. 4 at <www.pbs.org/masterpiece>. "Sherlocking" (a fan site devoted to the series) is at <www.sherlocking.org>; preview reports and reviews in the British press have been quite favorable.
307. John Sherwood reports that Holmes and Watson are expected to be on hand for "The Adventure of the Nameless Corpse" as part of the Sherlock Holmes Mystery Weekend at the Victorian Villa Inn on Sept. 24-26 (John will impersonate Sherlock Holmes). Additional information is available from the management (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094) (800-348-4552); the e-mail address is <info@avictorianvilla.com>.
308. Randall Stock notes that this is the 150th anniversary of the birth of Sidney Paget, and Randall has updated and expanded his census of Paget's original artwork at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sidney-paget-original-art.htm>. It would be nice indeed if unrecorded originals could be added to the census.
309. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere." The Associated Press reported (July 19) that Patti Blagojevich has been reading "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" on her cell phone during less-riveting stretches of her husband's corruption trial. She is the wife of former Illinois governor Rod Blagojevich, who is on trial for scheming to sell President Barak Obama's former Senate seat (and other offences); she says she's also fond of Jane Austen.
310. Wait, wait, there's more: the TPM Muckraker reported (July 19) that the 41-page memorandum filed by Blagojevich's attorneys in support of a motion for acquittal quoted Conan Doyle: "It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts." Judge James Zagel denied the motion.

311. Jul 10 #7: Rugby is not the only British sport with rules and jargon that are incomprehensible to most Americans: there's cricket, which is Canonical (barely) and which the Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the P. G. Wodehouse Society have played against each other nine times in the last decade. Nicholas Utechin's WYCOMBE WONDERS is a 30-page pamphlet that was published by the SHSOL for this year's match, and it's interesting, amusing, and generally understandable. £3.50 to the U.K., £5.00 to Europe, $9.00 elsewhere; available at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/shop.php> (credit cards accepted).

312. There are now (at least) 25 titles in Marjorie Weinman Sharmat's "Nate the Great" series that features Nate in Sherlockian costume; some of the early volumes have been reissued by Yearling/Random House (with "extra fun activities inside!"), and there's a musical first performed by Theatreworks USA in New York in the spring of 2008 and then on tour.
313. Further to the discussion of miniature Sherlockian room-boxes (Jun 10 #5), a letter from Ann Dickerson in Dollhouse Miniatures (July-Aug. 2010) notes (with a color photograph) a miniature of 221B Baker Street in the collection of Samie Keith's dollhouses at the Mining Museum in Butte, Mont. (the museum's open from June to September); the cost of the issue is $6.95 (866-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
314. For Sherlockian golfers: Nick Utechin observed that up until the end of the second day of the Open at St. Andrews, the players included Holmes, Watson, and Moriarty. And Overton, Garcia, and ("so nearly," Nick notes) Garrido.
315. Further to the report (Jun 10 #6) on the Sherlock Holmes elephant in Baker Street, installed during a fund-raising campaign by Elephant Family (a financial support organization for endangered Asian elephants), the campaign raised more than £4 million, and the Sherlock Holmes elephant sold at auction for £9,750. Needless to say, one hopes to see it eventually on some Sherlockian's front lawn (or in some Sherlockian's very large living room).
316. Lion's mane jellyfish seem to be invading British waters every year; last month John Baesch spotted an astounding color photograph in the Daily Telegraph (June 15) showing a diver making a close inspection of a lion's mane <www.tinyurl.com/3xrz9o3>. It's difficult to decide whether the diver was brave or foolhardy.
317. According to a story in the Hollywood Reporter (May 27), Warner Bros. has announced that Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" sequel will open in the U.S. on Dec. 16, 2011; the date was included on a slide during a presentation by Warner chairman and CEO Barry Meyer during Time Warner's investor day. And the Sun reported (June 29) that Ritchie plans to shoot the sequel in 3D and has hired some of the crew that worked on "Avatar" (truth alert: the Sun is regarded by many as the least reliable of the British tabloids). And there is continuing Internet buzz about candidates to play Moriarty: in addition to Brad Pitts, the list now includes Daniel Day-Lewis, Sean Penn, Gary Oldham, and Javier Bardem.

318. Aug 10 #1: "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" (the conference in Minneapolis on Aug. 6-8) was delightful (as always for these triennial gatherings), with excellent panels and exhibits. Four librarians (Tim Johnson, Neil McCaw, Catherine Cooke and Peggy Perdue) talked about the present and future in Minneapolis, Portsmouth, London, and Toronto; Ev Herzog reminisced about the beginnings of the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; Gideon Hill reported on Watson's possible dipsomania; Dick Sveum and Jon Lellenberg debated whether Ronald Knox should be honored as the creator of the Grand Game that (some) Sherlockians play; Ray Betzner paid tribute to Vincent Starrett (only a few of the items on the agenda).
319. And there was an important announcement: the university has reached its $1 million goal for the E. W. McDiarmid Fund that will endow a curator for the Sherlock Holmes Collections, and the first endowed curator is Tim Johnson, who received thunderous applause, a plaque, and a handsome medallion handcrafted by Maggie Schpak.
320. Tim Johnson would like people to know about the Elmer L. Anderson Research Scholars Program, which supports scholarly research projects that use material from the rare and special collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries. The deadline for applications this year is Sept. 30, and there is more information at <www.tinyurl.com/38ecc9w>.
321. Tim also has reported on new links at the Sherlock Holmes Collections website: the proceedings of "Rogues, Rascals, and Ruffians" (the Norwegian Explorers' conference in 1993 are now available at <www.tinyurl.com/2vgvau2>. And there's a preliminary inventory of the John Bennett Shaw correspondence at <www.tinyurl.com/358tqyz>, and of the "Lumber Room" collection of John's miscellaneous and single-issue periodicals <www.tinyurl.com/3xvudkp>. And of the Vincent Starrett papers <www.tinyurl.com/37cc39c>. There has been additional upgrading on the Sherlock Holmes Collections web-site, including material from the conference this year, and it's well worth exploring <special.lib.umn.edu/rare/holmes.phtml>.
322. The souvenirs from the conference included THE SPIRITS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, a 58-page pamphlet edited by Michael Eckman, with articles such as the editor's discussion of Sherlockian in Mad magazine, and Lucy Brusic's analysis of changes Edith Meiser made over the years in her scripts for radio broadcasts of "The Red-Headed League"; $12.00 postpaid from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122).
323. Oliver Sacks' "A Neurologist's Notebook: A Man of Letters" in The New Yorker (June 28) tells the story of "the novelist who suddenly couldn't read." The novelist is Howard Engel: after a stroke, he could no longer read, but he could write, and it's a fascinating article. Engel is the author of the Benny Cooperman mysteries, and of MR. DOYLE & DR. BELL: A VICTORIAN MYSTERY (Nov 97 #3), a fiction-based-on-fact pastiche that has Conan Doyle still a medical student in Edinburgh in 1879, involved with Joe Bell in solving a mystery full of echoes from the decades-later Oscar Slater case. Sacks, in his article "An Anthropologist on Mars" in The New Yorker, Dec. 23, 1993, noted that Sherlock Holmes showed some of the symptoms of autism.
324. Aug 10 #2: Ann Marlowe has discovered Gallica, an interesting Internet resource that you can visit at <www.gallica.bnf.fr>; it's the digital library of the Bibliotheque nationale de France, and allows users to download and read books published in France. There are 389 hits for [conan doyle] and 436 hits for [sherlock holmes]; note: you can't get full access to some of the more recent titles.
325. You're able to "check which famous writer you write like" at <www.iwl.me>. Maybe, maybe not: I pasted in a few paragraphs from my June newsletter, and was told I write like H. P. Lovecraft. Thanks to Ann Lewis for the discovery of the web-site. The domain is .me for Montenegro; Wikipedia says that "the dot-ME top-level domain replaced the dot-YU (Yugoslavia) domain previously used by Serbia and Montenegro, in addition to declaring .me independent of .yu" (someone has a sense of humor).
326. And there's more: Jason Kirkfield has discovered a blog by Steve Tuttle at <www.newsweek.com/2010/07/23/consider-the-crowded.print.html>; Tuttle found that "I Write Like" is the brain-child of 27-year-old Dmitry Chestnykh, who founded a software-development company called Coding Robots, and whose website had had (as of July 23) more than a million visitors since July 12 and 4.4 million page views. Tuttle also discovered an amusing parody called "I Actually Write Like" at <www.richardclegg.org/write>.
327. Noted by Karen Murdock: Peter Macinnis' THE KILLER BEAN OF CALABAR AND OTHER STORIES (published in Australia in 2004, and in the U.S. in 2005 as POISONS: FROM HEMLOCK TO BOTOX AND THE KILLER BEAN OF CALABAR); passing references to Conan Doyle and Holmes, and lots of interesting stories.
328. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Thaddeus Holt's "100 Years Ago" discussion of Lyndon Orr and his Sherlockian contribution to The Bookman, Dick Sveum's "50 Years Ago" tribute to Fred Kittle, and other news and other news from and about the Collections; the newsletter is available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
329. It is interesting to see how authors and publishers are using the Internet to publicize their books: Graham Moore, author of the THE SHERLOCKIAN (Jun 10 #4), which is due in December, has a blog about the book (and many other things) at <www.thesherlockian.com/about-graham-moore>.
330. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's report on Conan Doyle's connection with the 1916 Olympics, Barbara Rusch's discussion of "Arthur Conan Doyle Among the

- Fairies", and Peggy Perdue's essay on the Library's Virtual Exhibit on Sidney Paget; copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
331. Forecast: THE BEST AMERICAN MYSTERY STORIES 2010, edited by Lee Child and Otto Penzler (from Mariner in September) will include Lyndsay Faye's "The Case of Colonel Warburton's Madness" (reprinted from last year's anthology SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA).
332. Aug 10 #3: It may (or may not) be true that there are some security clearances that are so secret that those who have them can't tell you unless they know you know anyway. According to the three-part story in the Washington Post about "Top Secret America", there now are 854,000 Americans with Top Secret clearances, 265,00 of them private contractors; David Sarasohn (Portland Oregonian, July 27) quoted a Senator who said that all that is needed is "someone responsible for keeping everyone on the same page and making sure the dots are connected." Sarasohn also quoted Sherlock Holmes' statement about the abilities of his brother, who "could get separate advices from various departments, focus them all, and say off-hand how each factor would affect the other." Sarasohn ended by lamenting that "Mycroft Holmes just isn't available" now. Credit Sonia Fetherston for the report.
333. THRILLERS: 100 MUST-READS, edited by David Morrell and Hank Wagner (Longboat Key: Oceanview, 2010; 378 pp., $27.95), casts its net widely, and is an interesting survey of the genre, from the ancient Greek myth of Theseus and the Minotaur (1500 B.C.) to Dan Brown's THE DA VINCI CODE (2003). And of course THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES is a thriller, discussed by Laura Benedict. Carol Nelson Douglas has an intriguing chapter on Bram Stoker's DRACULA (managing to include a mention of Irene Adler).
334. Jeff Bradway spotted a set of artistic "Great Moments in Literature Note Cards" available from Bas Bleu (Box 2599, Hudson, OH 44236) (800-433-1155) <www.basbleu.com>; four cards each of four designs ("Gulliver's Travels", "Peter Pan", "The Three Musketeers", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), and the Sherlock Holmes artwork also is on the cover of the box. $12.00 (item UD2842).
335. Randall Stock continues to expand the scope of his "Best of Sherlock" website and has added a census of known copies of the first edition of Vincent Starrett's classic pastiche "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet", including the copy inscribed by Starrett and sent to Conan Doyle in 1920. Needless to say, Randall hopes to locate more copies, and will be happy to hear from those whose copies aren't listed. Go to <www.bestofsherlock.com> to read the census, which includes a careful description of the first edition and a link to the text of the pastiche.
336. Jim Ballinger spotted a news release about CHARM (The Centre for the History and Analysis of Recorded Music) at King's College London; they've made almost 5,000 history recordings available on-line, one of them the recording Conan Doyle made for the Gramophone Company on May 14, 1930. The quality of the recording is splendid <www.charm.kcl.ac.uk/sound/sound.html>.
337. Forecast: a Japanese translation (by Masamichi Higurashi) of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley, from Toro Shorin next year.
338. The late David Levine caricatured both Holmes and Conan Doyle in the N.Y. Review of Books (Jan 10 #3); Lucy Pollard Gott reports that the magazine's web-site has a gallery of many of his caricatures, and offers made-to-order print of his Sherlock Holmes ($150.00) <www.tinyurl.com/34o7osx>. His Conan Doyle, unfortunately is not available as a print.
339. Aug 10 #4: Molly Carr's THE SIGN OF FEAR (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 310 pp., £12.99/$19.95/€16.99) is an entertaining pastiche in which just about everyone is a bit (or more) different from what they are in the Canon: Mrs. Watson is the detective, working with Mrs. Neville St. Clair, encountering Prof. Moriarty, John Clay, J. Neil Gibson, and others who include Raffles, Bunny, Hercule Poirot's father, and Miss Marple's mother (to name only a few); the detectives travel to Australia and the Vatican, and manage to solve quite a few mysteries (some but not all with the assistance of Dr. Watson).
340. Reported: KILLER'S DOZEN, by Richard A. Lupoff (Rockville: Wildside, 2010; 252 pp., $14.95); 13 of his previously uncollected stories, including "Inga Sigerson Weds" reprinted from SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE AMERICAN YEARS.
341. Aaron Smith's SEASON OF MADNESS: A DOCTOR WATSON ADVENTURE (Metairie: Cornerstone, 2009; 190 pp., $21.95) has Watson and John Seward pursuing a macabre and grotesque mystery that involves other characters from the worlds of the Canon and Dracula; there are two stories in the book, and the second ("Attack of the Electric Shark") features Hound Dog Harker (the son of Jonathan and Mina Harker).
342. Tina Rhea spotted a report in The Independent (Aug. 11) that the web-site <www.ancestry.com> now offers a data base that contains more than six million British wills, dating from 1861 to 1941; one of them is the will of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who left an estate of £63,491 (nearly £3 million today, according to the article).
343. Plan well ahead: NATMEET is what Sherlockians in Australia call their national meeting of Sherlockian societies, and Steve Duke has reported that NATMEET 6 will be held in Adelaide in 2012, on Easter Weekend (Apr. 7-8).
344. It's hard to imagine Conan Doyle "knew his title character would be the inspiration for an electro-pop band from down under made up of four guys and a sultry lead singer," David Dennis Jr. wrote at <www.spinner.com> on Feb. 25; the sultry lead singer is Tanya Horo, who said that Conan Doyle is one of her favorite writers, and "I think I'm slightly obsessed with him om a really unhealthy way [laughs]." Their music is pleasant to listen to, and you'll find it easily on the Internet; search for [sherlock's daughter].
345. Forecast: Andrew Lane's "Young Sherlock Holmes" series (Jun 10 #3) continues with RED LEECH, which is due from Macmillan in November; the first title in the series was DEATH CLOUD, scheduled for an American edition from Farrar, Straus and Giroux in February.
346. James J. Kilpatrick died on Aug. 15. He was a journalist and author, and a fervent conservative, and his great interest in language was expressed in his column "The Writer's Art". In 1989 he discussed the coinage of verbs, complaining that Conan Doyle used the verb "disillusionize" in "The Reigate Squires". He heard from many readers who could find only "disillusion" in the story, and later explained (one paper used the headline "Schlock Holmes Says It's Elementalized, Dr. Watson") that the offending word does appear in the story (and indeed it does, in The Strand Magazine and British editions of the Canon).
347. Aug 10 #5: Anne Perry wrote an afterword for a new Signet Classics edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Dec 02 #5), and an introduction for a new Signet Classics edition of THE SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERIES: 22 STORIES (2005, $5.95), and an introduction for a Modern Library edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (2003, $9.00); all nicely done.
348. And there's more about the campaign to preserve Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907 (Jul 10 #1): "Conan Doyle and the Barbarians" was the headline on a letter published in The Times (July 31) with signatures from 53 people who included authors, actors, relatives of Conan Doyle, and Sherlockians from a dozen different countries. The Times also had a story about the campaign.
349. The discussion of Sherlock Holmes in The Times that day also focused on a suggestion by Jeremy Hunt, the government's Culture Secretary, that funding for the BBC could be cut, with a story that quoted Steven Moffat: "If you want shows like 'Sherlock' and 'Doctor Who', you are going to need

- the BBC." Moffat, co-creator of "Sherlock" and lead writer for "Doctor Who", must have welcomed a review of "Sherlock" by Caitlin Moran, who announced: "Sherlock is so good, if BBC funding is ever called into question I'll pay for it myself."
350. A later story in the Petersfield Post (Aug. 15), forwarded by Al Gregory, reports that John Gibson, chairman of the Undershaw Preservation Trust, is seeking a judicial review of the Waverley Borough Council decision to approve the application of a developer to convert the house into three flats. According to the story, Max Norris, a professional developer who wants to keep Undershaw as a single dwelling, with limited public access, submitted his own application shortly before the Council meeting, too late for formal consideration; the Trust said that the house was valued at £600,000 before the Council's decision, which increased the value to £1.5 million, which is more than Norris can afford to pay. And Paul Spiring reports that there's a recently-updated Wikipedia entry for Undershaw; it's a work-in-progress, at <www.en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Undershaw>.
351. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Minstrel Players at Houghton Hall (on Long Island), Nov. 13-21 (120 Main Street, Northport Village, N.Y. 11768) (631-732-2926) <www.minstrelplayers.org>.
352. George Vanderburgh has published Hugh T. Harrington's RE: SHERLOCK, A COLLECTION OF OBSERVATIONS & COMMENTARIES (2005; 80 pp., $12.00); the book reprints his interesting Sherlockian scholarship from magazines and newsletters from 1987 to 1999. The publisher's at Box 50, R.R. #4, Eugenia, ON NOC 1E0, Canada <www.batteredbox.com>.
353. The spring issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the newsletter of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust) offers a report (with photographs) from the 2009 sesquicentennial symposium at the Houghton Library, Tom Francis' discussion of the Trust's activities, and archivist Bob Coghill's description of his work on the correspondence that has been donated to the Trust. Copies of the newsletter are available on request from Marshall S. Berdan (2015 Main Street, Glastonbury, CT 06033) <editor@bsitrust.org>.
354. Aug 10 #6: Alan Stockwell's pastiche "The Singular Adventure of the Vanishing Nobleman" was published in his THE SINGULAR ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2003) and then dramatized as "The Singular Adventure of the Gloved Pianist" and performed for the Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 2008; Stockwell has turned the play back into a pastiche, and his SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SINGULAR ADVENTURE OF THE GLOVED PIANIST (Ashford: Vesper Hawk, 2010; 128 pp., £6.95/$12.95/E10.00); it's an entertaining mystery (in more ways than one with opportunities for audience participation. The publisher's web-site is at <www.vesperhawk.com>.
355. "The Great Mouse Detective" is now available on a "Mystery in the Mist Edition" DVD from Disney ($19.99); it's an "all-new digital restoration" with special features that include a "So You Think You Can Sleuth" game, a "making of" featurette, and a "World's Greatest Criminal Mind" sing-along.
356. "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars" is a new play written by Heather Wallen and scheduled at the York Little Theatre, Oct. 29 to Nov. 7; 27 South Belmont Street, York, PA 17403 (717-854-3894) <www.ylt.org>.
357. Steve Rothman delivered the annual Cameron Hollyer Lecture at the Toronto Public Library on Nov. 15, 2008, and his remarks (titled "Tincture of Conan Doyle: Christopher Morley on Sherlock Holmes") were published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. A limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now <www.acdfriends.org> (or contact Cliff Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada); the minimum donation is $25.00. Michael Dirda's 2009 lecture ("The Press Is a Most Valuable Institution: Conan Doyle as Essayist and Journal") will be sent to members of the Friends later this year.
358. The "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 5-7, will include a repeat performance of "The Case of the Demons in a Padded Room" (written by John K. Alvarez. The weekends have been held in the spring and fall for many years; there's more information available from 1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278) and at the festival's web-site, which is at <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html>.
359. Gene Grossman's "Peter Sharp Legal Mysteries" feature a former lawyer and private detective who is legal guardian of 12-year-old Suzi, who's a better detective than he is, and the series has reached #15, THE SHERLOCK HOLMES CAPER (Magic Lamp Press, 2010; 167 pp., $12.95); there's imaginative use of clues from the Canon, and you can read the first chapters of earlier books in the series at <www.legalmystery.com> (the author reports that there are Sherlockian allusions in other titles in the series).
360. Acorn Media continues to issue interesting old film and television on DVDs, and Randall Stock spotted a review of RAFFLES: THE COMPLETE COLLECTION on six DVDs ($59.99); Anthony Valentine played Raffles in a British television film in 1975, and then in a 13-episode television series; you can read the review at <www.dvdtalk.com/reviews/42814/raffles-complete-collection>. As far as I know, neither the film nor the series has ever been broadcast in the U.S., and there's nothing Sherlockian about them (other than the fact that Raffles was created by Conan Doyle's brother-in-law). But Valentine did play Baron Gruner in Granada's "The Illustrious Client" (1991).
361. Aug 10 #7: Leo Sauvage was a journalist and author, the N.Y. correspondent for Le Figaro from 1950 to 1975, and then the drama critic for the New Leader, and he was a Sherlockian (investitured as "Victor Savage" in the Baker Street Irregulars). When he died in 1988 he had been working on a book about Holmes, and most of his first draft has been found and has now been published. SHERLOCKIAN HERESIES, edited by Julie McKuras and Sue Vizoskie (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2010; 233 pp., $19.95), offers fine Sherlockian scholarship; there are reprints of his earlier work (he wrote articles for The Baker Street Journal in 1958, 1983, and 1984) and there's much that's new.
362. Gasogene also has published MURDER IN THE VATICAN: THE CHURCH MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Ann Margaret Lewis (2010; 151 pp., $18.95); there are three pastiches that involve Pope Leo XIII: "The Death of Cardinal Tosca", "The Vatican Cameos" (recorded by His Holiness), and "The Second Coptic Patriarch", and they're all nicely done. The publisher's at Box 63808, Indianapolis, IN 46268 <www.gasogenebooks.com>.
363. Michael Capuzzo's THE MURDER ROOM: THE HEIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES GATHER TO SOLVE THE WORLD'S MOST PERPLEXING COLD CASES (New York: Gotham Books, 2010; 439 pp., $26.00) is a history of the Vidocq Society, which is named in honor of the brilliant 18th-century detective Eugene Vidocq; it is a group of forensic experts based in Philadelphia who use joint forensic expertise to attempt to solve "cold case" homicides and other crimes. Capuzzo reports that they are similar to the Baker Street Irregulars (both societies being "strictly fraternal"), and that forensic psychologist and forensic profiler Richard Walter has been described by Scotland Yard as "the living Sherlock Holmes."
364. But Walter doesn't like that description: when one of his colleagues said that Walter looks like Basil Rathbone in "The Hound of the Baskervilles": "he talks like him, thinks like him, Walter responded that "Whenever someone says that, I look away and wait for the moment to pass, as if someone just farted." Sherlockian allusions aside, it's a fascinating book; there will be a segment about the society (and the book) on "20/20" on ABC-TV on Sept. 21.
365. "Miss Marple is aiming to break up the illustrious duo to prevent herself being demoted from the ranks of Britain's foremost detectives, and the pair must set out to prevent Watson from being framed for the murder of one of the aristocratic Baskervilles." That's the Scotsman's description of the play "Sherlock Holmes and the Sound of the Baskervilles" performed by Two Shades of Blue during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in August. It was so well received that they added three matinee performances at the end of the one-week run.

366. The British Film Institute has renewed its "BFI Most Wanted" campaign with a list of 75 films it would like to find, preserve, and make available from its archives, and the "ten most wanted" films include "A Study in Scarlet" (1914), described as the first British feature film to be based on the adventures of "the immortal detective". You can read more about the project, and the film, at <www.bfi.org.uk/nationalarchives/news/mostwanted>; there are some interesting stills and a publicity release at the web-site.

367. Aug 10 #8: Oscar Ross reported a story at the Digital Spy web-site (July 26) about ratings for the first episode of BBC-1's "Sherlock", which attracted 7.5 million viewers (30.4% of people watching television). "Antiques Roadshow" ran second that night, with only 4.82 million viewers (24.3%). The population of the U.K. was estimated at 61.8 million people in mid-2009 (according to Wikipedia). "The Strange Case of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" (the first program in David Pirie's series), aired on BBC-2 in 2005 with 2.63 million viewers (12.6%); the most popular show that night was "Coronation Street" with 9.95 million viewers (47.1%).
368. You can watch "Sherlock" on the Internet, even though the BBC web-site does not allow access from the United States; <www.youtube.com> has the episodes in (I think) nine parts each, and the episodes are available at web-sites such as <www.megaupload.com> (well, at least they were available) (one never knows how long it will be before they're removed). If you want to know where their 221B Baker Street is, the address is 185 North Gower Street and you can dine (as they do) at Speedy's Sandwich Bar on the ground floor of the building.
369. Or you can wait until Oct. 24, when the series will begin on PBS-TV's "Masterpiece Mystery". <www.pbs.org/wgbh/masterpiece/sherlock/index.html> is the URL for their promotion, which includes a few video clips. I can report that the series is extremely good overall, with intelligent scripts, delightful humor, and good acting; it's quite Canonical (if you accept the basic premise that the Canon is set in modern London).
370. And things do change: as with Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes", the new series generated a mild flurry of press and Internet comment about suggestions that Holmes and Watson were gay; I don't recall that sort of publicity when the Granada series aired in the 1980s.
371. Nice news: the BBC, encouraged by the 7 million people who tuned in for the third episode of the series, has announced that there will be more programs ("We're having a meeting to talk about how many and when," series producer Sue Vertue said). She should know: her husband Steven Moffat is co-creator of the series. Mark Gatiss, the other co-creator, can be seen in the series, uncredited, as Holmes' brother Mycroft.
372. Nicer news: according to <www.amazon.co.uk>, the series will be released on region 2 DVD and Blu-ray on Aug. 30, and the disk will include the 60-minute pilot that was never broadcast; region 2 is the U.K., but those in other regions will be able to watch the DVD on their computers (if their computers have the nice software that plays DVDs from any region) or on multiregion DVD players.
373. And the Bookseller reported (Aug. 12) that the series has boosted sales of books such as Penguin's THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (up 83%), Wordsworth Classics' THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (up 431%), Macmillan's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: DEATH CLOUD by Andrew Lane (up 18%), and Quirk's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES HANDBOOK by Ransom Riggs (up 57%).
374. Sep 10 #1: Good news: Ken Ludwig has written a new play about William Gillette. The first play was "Dramatic License", a murder mystery set in Gillette's home that had its premiere in 1983, starring Patrick Horgan as Gillette; renamed "Postmortem", it has had more than two dozen productions by local theater groups. The new play is "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays", a "comedy-mystery-thriller" that's also set in Gillette's home, and it is absolutely hilarious; there was a staged reading, directed by Ludwig, at the Terrace Theatre of the Kennedy Center in Washington on Sept. 6 as part of a free "Page-to-Stage" festival over the Labor Day weekend.
375. Bad news: that was the only performance of the play, and there are no plans for a full-scale production. The author said that he is hoping to find a producer (one does wonder how hard it is for Ken Ludwig to get a play produced).
376. Jon Lellenberg's BAKER STREET IRREGULAR (Sauk City: Mycroft & Moran, 2010; 404 pp., $39.95) is a novel about the early days of the BSI: it begins in 1933, when New York lawyer Woody Hazelbaker gets into conversation with the librarian of the Harvard Club, Earle Walbridge, who takes him to lunch at Christ Cella's and introduces him to Christopher Morley and other members of the Three Hours for Lunch Club. Woody soon becomes a member of the BSI, finds romance and intrigue, and with the assistance of other Irregulars is heavily involved in intelligence operations during World War Two, turning the novel into a thriller rather than an Irregular history. $44.95 postpaid to the U.S. from Arkham House Publishing, Box 122, Sauk City, WI 53585 <www.arkhamhouse.com>.
377. Jon also has created a web-site at <www.bsiarchivalhistory.org>; it's full of interesting material, including links to some of his published essays, excerpts from his books, his blog, and departments that include "The Editor's Gas-Bag" and "Ask Thucydides!" (in which Jon attempts to answer his readers' questions about the web-site and about BSI history). And if you click on "novel" you'll find a link to "Woody's World" in which there are weekly posts about the new book. The web-site's a lively read, including his links to non-Sherlockian but intriguing web-sites.
378. Janice Fisher has noted an intriguing trivia question from Nancy Friedman at her "Fritinancy" web-site: "What do Grace Kelly, Kurt Vonnegut, Johnny Weir, and Sherlock Holmes have in common?"
379. "Previously unseen colour footage of London during the Blitz has been discovered after lying in an attic for almost 70 years," the Daily Telegraph reported on Sept. 6 (noted in a post by an admirer of Mary Russell to the "Letters of Mary" group at Yahoo); go to <www.westendatwar.org.uk> to see the film. Click on "Rare Colour Film Footage" and then on Part 5 of "Pages from St. Marylebone's War Diary" to see "Baker Street Bazaar (Druce & Co.) Is Burnt Out, May 10, 1941". The Baker Street Bazaar was on the west side of Baker Street, between Dorset Street and King (now Blandford) Street, and had an entrance at what is now 59-63 Baker Street, according to Catherine Cooke, who notes that the Bazaar is on the end-paper maps in James Edward Holroyd's SEVENTEEN STEPS TO 221B (1967).
380. Sep 10 #2: "What do Grace Kelly, Kurt Vonnegut, Johnny Weir, and Sherlock Holmes have in common?" They've all had asteroids named after them. Actually, you should add Dr. Watson and Prof. Moriarty to the list: three of the many asteroids discovered and named by American astronomer Edward L. G. Bowell are 5048 Moriarty, 5049 Sherlock, and 5050 Doctorwatson (and the names have been approved by the International Astronomical Union's Committee on Small-Body Nomenclature).
381. Jon Lellenberg has reported "Literary Worlds: Illumination of the Mind", an impressive exhibition at the L. Tom Perry Special Collections of the Harold B. Lee Library at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, running through June 2011; their web-site is <www.lib.byu.edu/exhibits/literaryworlds>, and you can click on "Arthur Conan Doyle" to see their images of the manuscript of THE REFUGEES, an interesting letter about his work on THE WHITE COMPANY, and other material.
382. Pat Ward has noted that Cracker Barrel restaurants have shops that offer a Sherlockian resin basset hound figure that's also available on-line at <www.crackerbarrel.com> (click on "Halloween"); item #329933 ($24.99). And Karen Murdock reports a similar (and smaller) shelf-sitter figure ($6.00) that apparently is available only in the shops and not on-line.
383. It's not often that one finds allusions to O.J. Simpson, Madonna, and the Rat Pack in a book of Sherlockian essays, but those who have heard Bill Mason speak at S'ian conferences won't be a bit surprised. PURSUING SHERLOCK HOLMES (Philadelphia: Xlibris, 2010; 151 pp., $29.99 cloth, $19.99

- paper, $9.99 Ebook) offers conference presentations, reprints of earlier limited-circulation articles, and new pieces, all nicely done, and more important, interesting and amusing. Signed copies can be ordered from Bill (2367 Lights Chapel Road, Greenbrier, TN 37073); $24.00 postpaid for cloth, or $16.00 for paper.
384. Further to the report (May 10 #5) on rhw four-issue comic-book mini-series MUPPET SHERLOCK HOLMES due from BOOM! Studios, there's going to be a book edition coming out in March ($9.99/£6.63), noted at <www.amazon.com> and at <www.amazon.co.uk>.
385. Corbis Motion <www.corbismotion.com> offers easy access to "motion content" (more than 500,000 clips, of which more than 300,000 are in HD); they can be viewed at the web-site (but you need to pay to download and use them). Four clips tagged for [sherlock holmes], and three actually are Sherlockian (two clips at the Sherlock Holmes Museum, and one at the statue in Baker Street).
386. THE PONTINE DOSSIER was a delightful journal published from 1967 to 1977 by Luther Norris for The Praed Street Irregulars; the contributors wrote about Solar Pons, of course, and many other things, and it's grand to find it all available again, this time on a CD (in PDF format) issued by George Vanderburgh ($10.00). If you were a contributor and don't yet have a copy of the CD, let him know and he'll send you a free copy; Box 50, R.R. #4, Eugenia, ON N0C 1E0, Canada <gav@cablerocket.com> <www.batteredbox.com>.
387. Sep 10 #3: H. Ripley Crommarsh's THE SECRET OF MOOR COTTAGE was published in 1906, and has been reprinted by various public-domain publishers; it's available at Amazon and AbeBooks, and is of interest because H. Ripley Crommarsh was a pseudonym used by Bryan Mary Angell, Arthur Conan Doyle's youngest sister Dodo. She wrote two other books, THE EPISODES OF MARGE: MEMOIRS OF A HUMBLE ADVENTURESS (1903) and AT THE WATERS OF STRIFE (1913), but they haven't been reprinted. I suspect that none of the current publishers know who Crommarsh actually was.
388. A reminder that Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" web-site has links to lists of Sherlockian societies; at the moment there are 874 societies, including 415 active societies in 21 countries. And many other links, of course; the URL is <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/sherlocktron>.
389. And Willis, back from vacation in Africa, reports that he found a copy of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES in the library of Abu Camp in the Okavango Delta in Botswana; there's a photograph of the library at the bush camp's web-site <www.abucamp.com> (alas, you can't quite make see the books).
390. Just in time for Halloween: BuyCostumes.com (5915 South Moorland Road, New Berlin, WI 53151) (866-726-7886) <www.buycostumes.com> offers a nice selection of costumes and accessories for men and women who want to dress up as Holmes or Watson.
391. You can live like a Baskerville: Paul Spiring has reported that Honeysuckle Cottage in Ipplepen is for sale; two bedrooms, one bathroom, garden, asking price £210,000. It's the former home of B. Fletcher Robinson's coachman, Harry Baskerville, who received a copy of the first edition of the book inscribed by Fletcher Robinson with thanks for the use of the name.
392. <www.sherlockpeoria.net> is the URL for Brad Keefauver's weird and wonderful Sherlock Peoria web-site, now in its ninth year, offering personal essays, contribution from The Maniac Collector, interesting links, and an imaginative "Action Sherlock Brain Theater" (all well worth checking out).
393. Sherlock Holmes: The True Story" was broadcast on the Discovery channel in 2003 (Oct 03 #1); it's a 46-minute documentary about Dr. Joseph Bell, with interviews with Owen Dudley Edwards and Ely Liebow, and Dorothy Young has reported that it's now available on the Internet at YouTube and other websites.
394. Singer/songwriter Brian McKnight's group "The Baker Street Irregulars" has issued a CD "Hanging on for Dear Life" (Atomic Mouse Recordings, 2006). It is available at Amazon ($10.98) and as MP3 downloads of the albums and each track (you can also listen to samples).
395. THE WORLD'S SHORTEST STORIES, edited by Steve Moss (Philadelphia: Running Press, 1998; 224 pp., $8.95); some of the results of a "Fifty-Five Fiction" contest, which challenged authors to write short stories exactly 55 words long. And one of them is Sherlockian: Tom Ford's "The Mystery". The story also appears in a CoasterBook edition with fewer stories (but you can use the stories as coasters), issued in 2001 ($6.95) and now out of print.
396. Sep 10 #4: The Green Bag was (and still is) a monthly magazine published for lawyers, and early issues had items of Sherlockian interest: J. B. Mackenzie's "Sherlock Holmes' Plots and Strategy" (Sept. 1902) and Donald B. Richberg's "Sherlock Holmes, Witness: The Famous Detective Testifies" (Aug. 1907); Les Klinger has discovered both of the articles at <www.books.google.com> (search for the titles).
397. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Townhouse Players at the Powerhouse Performing Arts Center, Oct. 29-Nov. 13. Box 201, New Canaan, CT 06840 (203-966-7371) <www.tpnc.org>.
398. Further to reports on the campaign to preserve Undershaw, the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, there was a two-minute segment about the house on the BBC-1's "South Today" news program in March, with views of the outside and inside of the derelict house, and statements by John Gibson and Richard Doyle. You can see it at <www.youtube.com>; search for [arthur conan doyle's house].
399. Cindy & Bert (Jutta Gusenberger and Norbert Berger) are a German vocal duo; you can watch them perform their hit song "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1970) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=pYRFvQMh7A> (reported by the Baskerville Hall Club of Sweden).
400. Kieron Freeburn's THE OFFICIAL PAPERS INTO THE MATTER KNOWN AS 'THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES' (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 162 pp., £14.99/£17.99/ $22.95) is an imaginative reprint of the files of the Metropolitan Police and the Devon County Constabulary, offering an instructive and often entertaining look at what the police did during the case, and what they thought about what Sherlock Holmes did.
401. Mystery Readers Journal has been published quarterly for many years by Mystery Readers International, and many back issues are available for purchase and download at their web-site <www.mysteryreaders.org>. Their fall 1996 issue (v. 12, n. 3) was devoted to Sports Mysteries, and included Philip L. Scowcroft's article "Sport and Sherlock Holmes".
402. THE BAKER STREET PHANTOM, by Fabrice Bourland (London: Gallic Books, 2010; 185 pp., £7.99), was published in France in 2008 and is now available in an English translation; it's set in London in 1932, when American detectives James Trelawney and Andrew Singleton become involved with the widow of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the ghosts of Sherlock Holmes and a variety of fictional (and non-fictional) characters.
403. Al Gregory is trying to assemble a complete run of The Baker Street Journal and needs a copy of the March 1965. If you have one for sale, he's at 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044 <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net>.
404. Further to the report (Apr 10 #5) about the violin that Steve Burnett made from wood from a 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, the "Sherlock" violin has been presented to Edinburgh University's instrument collection. Burnett plans to make a "Conan Doyle" string quartet (two violins, a cello, and a viola) next year using more wood from the tree.
405. Sep 10 #5: The wonders of modern technology: many Sherlockian societies in non-English-speaking countries have on-line web-sites and newsletters, and they're easily found at Chris Redmond's <www.sherlockian.net>. And Google has a useful "translate" feature that will automatically translate from other languages into English, not fluently but good enough that you can figure out what's going on there, wherever there might be. Google Translate also works for English into other languages, needless to say, and there are more than fifty languages available.

406. Sherlockians and Doyleans have long been interested in Charles Dickens' unfinished novel THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD, as long ago as 1905, when Andrew Lang's pastiche-solution appeared in Longman's Magazine; Conan Doyle himself discussed the story with Dickens, who explained that "Edwin is alive and Chris is hiding him" (the discussion took place during a seance, needless to say). And there still are Dickensians who debate ins and outs and possible endings, including Ray Dubberke, who wrote DICKENS, DROOD, AND THE DETECTIVES (May 92 #5), and now DICKENS, DROOD, AND REDEMPTION (New York: Vantage Press, 2010; 169 pp., $22.95); the new book is not Sherlockian, but begins by quoting Vincent Starrett, who wrote that the story is "the greatest detective-story in the world."
407. Irene's Cabinet is the annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (42 pp.) offers the usual interesting mix of articles, toasts, and poetry, including Fred Glueckstein's essay on Conan Doyle as a baseball fan, Andrew Solberg's investigation of reports in the press when "A Study in Scarlet" was first published, and Deborah Belchis' "Dancing Men Gangsta Rap"; $15.00 postpaid from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).
408. There's more information on "Tom and Jerry Meet Sherlock Holmes", the animation released on DVD by Warner Home Video (May 10 #5): Michael York is the voice of Holmes, John Rhys-Davies is Watson, and Malcolm McDowell is Moriarty.
409. WHODUNITS: MORE THAN 100 MYSTERIES FOR YOU TO SOLVE, by Tom Bullimore, Hy Conrad, Derrick Niederman, and Stan Smith (New York: Sterling Innovation, 2008; 275 pp., $6.98), includes Holmes and Watson in Bullimore's SHERLOCK HOLMES' PUZZLES OF DEDUCTION (1997) and Holmes' great-great-grandson Sherman Oliver Holmes in Conrad's WHODUNIT CRIME PUZZLES (2002); it's a reprint of CLASSIC WHODUNITS (Dec 03 #5).
410. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at Centre Stage, Feb. 10-26, 2011; the theater's at 501 River Street, Greenville, SC 29601 (877-377-1339) <www.centrestage.org>.
411. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, SHERLOCK HOLMES, AND DEVON: A COMPLETE TOUR GUIDE AND COMPANION, by Brian W. Pugh, Paul R. Spiring, and Sadru Bhanji (London, MX Publishing, 2010; 255 pp., £12.99/$19.95/E14.99), is a valuable and interesting guidebook for those who want to tour Devon, and for those who want to know more about an area that includes much more than Dartmoor. The book has five sections, about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, George Turnavine Budd, Sir George Newnes, Bertram Fletcher Robinson, and (the largest) Devon itself, all carefully researched and well illustrated.
412. Sep 10 #6: Stuart Kaminsky died on Oct. 9, 2009. A film historian, screenwriter, and prolific novelist, he had Sherlockian allusions in two of his "Toby Peters" mysteries: Basil Rathbone was Peters' Sherlockian assistant in THE HOWARD HUGHES AFFAIR (1979), and Peters attended a meeting of a Sherlockian society called The Engineer's Thumbs in HE DONE HER WRONG (1983). He also wrote two Sherlockian pastiches, one of which ("The Final Toast") he dramatized for performance at the International Mystery Writers' Festival in 2008.
413. Ken Lanza spotted the "Sherlock Holmes" shoe at <www.keepcompany.com/detail.aspx&id=115>; it looks much better in full color, needless to say. The unisex tweed-and plaid shoe is made by Keep ($75.00 at their web-site).
414. Further to the report on NATMEET, which is what Sherlockians in Australia call the national meeting of their Sherlockian societies (Aug 10 #4), Steve Duke now reports that something likely will be going on down under in 2012, but not on Easter Weekend. Stay tuned, as they say.
415. Worth a look: Shahan Cheong's web-site <www.scheong.wordpress.com> offers a link to "The Encyclopedia Sherlockian".
416. This year's "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" at the Enoch Pratt Free Library will be on Nov. 6, from 10:00 to 1:00; 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore. The event, open to the public and free, is sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies, and this year's theme is "Is There a Doctor in the House?".
417. What's the most valuable modern Sherlockian periodical? A likely candidate is the first issue of Playboy, which included an excerpt from "The Sign of the Four"; it sold for 50c in Dec. 1953 and had a press run of 53,991 copies, and a copy sold at auction this month for $3,032. It would have sold for much more, of course, if it had been signed by Hugh Hefner (and signed copies do exist).
418. There are some aspects of Sherlock Holmes' world that tend to be neglected by most commentators, one of those aspects being sanitation. Ripperologist (an interesting electronic journal edited by Eduardo Zinna) has been running Tim Mosley's intriguing multi-part article "The House That Jack Built" (it's a pun, since in Britain the common term for "privy" was "jakes" (believed to be derived from "Jack's house" rather than having anything to do with Jack the Ripper); the article began in issue #115 (July 2010) and is continuing. Contact Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> for information about subscriptions.
419. The story of the meeting between Conan Doyle and Chaplin has been told by many, but the source is never stated. The original, in Conan Doyle's own words, was a reported in the N.Y. Times (Dec. 7, 1925) about his speech at the annual dinner of the Savage Club in London: "At one theatre," he said, they had a boy playing the page in 'Sherlock Holmes'. If I had said to him 'we will go halves for all our lives,' I should have made a great deal, for that little boy was Charlie Chaplin." It should be noted that Conan Doyle did not say that he actually had met Chaplin.

420. Sep 10 #7: I'm not sure it's worth buying the DVD with the complete first season, but the Canadian one-hour series broadcast (and now in repeats) by Syfy cable included "Revelations" (a two-part story that first aired on Dec. 29, 2008, and Jan. 5, 2009) in which Dr. James Watson (played by Peter Wingfield) is described as having been Conan Doyle's inspiration for Sherlock Holmes (and this Dr. Watson was modest, and satisfied to have his name used for the secondary character in the stories).
421. Heather Brown's creative Knitwits include Sherlock Holmes (2.5 in. high and in appropriate colors); you can see a full-color image at <www.flickr.com/photos/londonmatt/3190604849>. $27.00 postpaid (they're knitted to order); you can contact Heather at <heatherjanebrown-at-googlemail.com>.
422. "A character so sinister he makes Arthur Conan Doyle's Professor Moriarty look like a common shoplifter" is how the publisher described Fantomas when a new translation of the novel by Marcel Allain and Pierre Souvestre appeared in 1986. FANTOMAS was first published in 1911. launched a flood of novels and silent films; a new DVD will show you just how sinister he was. The DVD has five films (1913-1914), plus additional features, and you can see a trailer at <www.kino.com>.
423. Audio Editions offers a long list and wide range of books on CDs and as MP3 downloads; searching their web-site <www.audioeditions.com> yields 153 hits for [conan doyle] and 131 for [sherlock holmes]. Their more-limited catalog is available by mail (Box 6930, Auburn, CA 95604 (800-231-4261).
424. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE AMERICAN YEARS, edited by Michael Kurland (New York: Minotaur, 2010; 347 pp. $25.99), is an anthology of ten new stories about Sherlock Holmes in America, by authors who include Rhys Bowen, Peter Tremayne, and Steve Hockensmith (whose has arranged a meeting between Holmes and William Gillette).
425. Bernard Davies ("A Study in Scarlet") died on Sept. 21. A stalwart member of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, he was its chairman from 1983 to 1986, and became an honorary member in 1995. His specialty was the locations of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and he was an expert guide to the geography of the Canon and wrote many articles based on his research. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.

426. The artist Charles Wysocki (1928-2002) specialized in Americana, and there is a web-site at <www.charleswysocki.com> that shows his work, including a print "Hound of the Baskervilles" that was published in 1997. The print is available at eBay for $425.00, Ken Lanza reports, along with a less-expensive plate and calendar.
427. Tina Rhea noted a story in the Observer (Sept. 26) about a television commercial in which John Lennon footage is used to advertise the Citroën DS3. But the footage was dubbed; the original footage, shot by the BBC in June 1968, shows Lennon talking about reading the Sherlock Holmes stories in Tahiti, before he went on to write about Shamrock Wolmb's and Doctored Whopper in a story in A SPANIARD IN THE WORKS (1965). You can see both versions of the footage at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ipyUk5-wlFg>.

428. Sep 10 #8: The Scowlers and Molly Maguires invite people who are coming to San Francisco for Bouchercon to a reception on Saturday, Oct. 16, 6:00-8:00 pm, at Schroeder's Restaurant (240 Front Street); there will be a cash bar, and you're asked to RSVP by Oct. 9 to <sfbsi221@gmail.com>. The Bouchercon schedule is now available at <www.bcon2010.com>, and there's still time to register for the whole convention, or just one day (hint: the Sherlockian panel will be on Oct. 14, at 3:00 pm).
429. The BBC mini-series "Sherlock" started on Showcase in Canada on Sept. 10, which gave viewers there access before viewers in the U.S., where the series starts on PBS-TV on Oct. 24. There's a 2-minute preview available at <www.pbs.org/wghb/masterpiece/sherlock/index.html> (it also can be seen at YouTube). The American version of the two-DVD set is scheduled for release in the U.S. on Nov. 9 on DVD ($34.98) and on Blu-ray ($39.98), and the set will include audio commentaries, a making-of featurette, and the unbroadcast pilot episode.
430. "Masterpiece Mystery" will screen the first episode at New York Comicon at 10:00 pm on Oct. 8. And there will be a Twitter Party during the broadcast on Oct. 24.
431. The BBC has announced that they have commissioned three new episodes of the mini-series, for broadcast next autumn. The BBC press release quoted cocreators Mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat as saying "there'll be baffling new puzzles, old friends, and new enemies--whether on two or four legs. And we might be seeing the cold master of logic and reason unexpectedly falling. But in love? Or over a precipice? Who can tell?" And (sorry about that): Sue Vertue's husband (Aug 10 #8) is Steven Moffat.
432. The nifty little hand lens that Sherlock Holmes uses in the new "Sherlock" mini-series is a designo slide-out magnifier made by Eschenbach in Germany, and you can win one the write-a-pastiche contest at <www.sherlocking.org> (click on "The Contest"); the fan-site is maintained by Sean Duncan and Liz Elcessor, and they have other interesting news and links.
433. I guess it's time for some gossip about Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes 2": according to the Hollywood Reporter (Sept. 11), Noomi Rapace (who starred in "The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo") has been signed as the female lead, perhaps playing a French gypsy (although Irene Adler is reported to be returning). Mycroft and Moriarty are to appear in the film. And Jon Lellenberg reports that principal photography will begin in early October (so you can expect a lot more gossip).
434. And Stephen Fry has announced on a BBC radio show that he will be playing Mycroft in the film. There have been rumors as far back as 1991 of a television series in which he would star with Hugh Laurie as Holmes and Watson, but it was reported (Jan 05 #6) that Fry said at annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, that he had realized that he doesn't resemble Holmes ("there's no description in the Canon of Holmes looking like 'a bin liner full of yoghurt'), and that the project had been scrapped.

435. Oct 10 #1: Thad Holt has noted the impressive Wikipedia entry at <www.wikipedia.org> for "Sherlock Holmes Baffled" (the very first Sherlock Holmes film, made in 1900). There are interesting aspects to Wikipedia, such as the "View history" feature (at the upper right) that allows you to review the work that Wikipedia's editors have done, starting with Mary Read (who describes herself as "a goofy pirate chick with a penchant for crazed copy-editing") and others since she launched the entry on Jan. 26, 2007. It has been selected as a "featured article" (click on the gold star at the upper right); there are at the moment 3,075 featured articles out of 3,453,810 articles on the English Wikipedia.
436. And it is intriguing to consider that by the time of "His Last Bow" Holmes would have had a chance to see a "Sherlock Holmes" film (perhaps one of the eight films that were made by the Franco-British Film Co. in 1912 starring Georges Treville).
437. The Baker Street Irregulars is a reggae rock group in Seattle and Bellevue, with a presence at <www.youtube.com>; search for [irregulars mars]
438. Peter Ashman reported an interesting entry in the "Lens" blog at the N.Y. Times web-site at <www.nytimes.com>; search for [artistry and artifice in the times studio]. Slide #2 shows Charles Laughton as Hercule Poirot, but more important is a mention of Basil Rathbone in a "Sexiest Men" feature in 1926. And so he was, in the Rotogravure Picture Section on Dec. 26, 1926. Headlined "The Matinee Idols of 1926: Florenz Ziegfeld, America's Most Famous Judge of Beauty, Selects the Handsomest Men of Broadway", who was then playing the lead in "The Captive". On Feb. 9, 1927, "The Captive" was one of three plays raided by the police on charges of obscenity, but that, as they say, is another story.
439. Randall Stock has added new information to his "Best of Sherlock" census of known copies of the first edition of Vincent Starrett's pastiche "The Adventure of the Unique Hamlet" (Aug 10 #3); go to <www.bestofsherlock.com> to see the latest version.
440. John Longenbaugh's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Taproot Theatre, from Nov. 26 through Dec. 30, with previews on Nov. 19-20; 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>.
441. John Baesch spotted a report in the N.Y. Times (July 27) about the discovery of bone fragments of a giant rat in caves on East Timor; the rat, which may have lived as recently as 1,000 years ago, is estimated to have weighed 13 pounds. It has been many years since Guy G. Musser and Cameron Newcomb published their article "Malaysian Murids and the Giant Rat of Sumatra" in the Bulletin of the American Museum of Natural History (Dec 83 #4), and the new discovery is described by K. P. Aplin and K. M. Helgen in "Quaternary Murid Rodents of Timor" (Bulletin of the American Museum of Natural History (n. 341). The giant rats are in the genus *Coryphomus*, and one of the new discoveries was named *Coryphomus musseri* in honor of Musser; you can read the Bulletin on-line at <digitallibrary.amnh.org/dspace/handle/22466077>.

442. Oct 10 #2: Mr. Frankland, of Lafter Hall, was not the last person to try to prevent people from crossing his land on Dartmoor: John Baesch has forwarded a story in the Sunday Telegraphy (Aug. 8) about what the paper calls "the battle of Vixen Tor". For generations Vixen Tor has been a highlight for people walking across Dartmoor (and for Sherlockians, since it's mentioned in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), but in 2003 Mary Alford bought the land and barred access to the site. Last year the Devon County Council's public rights of way committee unanimously called for two footpaths to be opened across Vixen Tor on the grounds that a right of way had existed before Mrs. Alford bought the land; she has appealed to the Planning Inspectorate, forcing a public inquiry into the case.
443. Earle W. Jacobs' THE GRIMPEN MIRE AFFAIR (Bloomington: AuthorHouse, 2010; 101 pp., $10.99) involves Holmes, Watson, their landlady Mrs. Grimes, and Inspector LeStrade in an adventure that has nothing to do with the Hound, and is told by Watson as a journal entry rather than a story.

444. Anne Cotton reports that The Clients of Adrian Mulliner (who are devotees of the writings of both John H. Watson and P. G. Wodehouse) will convene a Junior Bloodstain (a considerably less than totally reverent event) during the annual convention of the Wodehouse Society on October 13-16, 2011, in Dearborn, Mich. Additional information is available from Anne (12 Hollywood Street, South Hadley, MA 01075) <ladybassett@comcast.net>.
445. Evy Herzog found a new Sherlockian T-shirt sold by Literary Threads; the color is mustard, and it is available in various sizes ($20.00 postpaid) (904-557-3479) <www.literarythreads.com>.
446. Jack Cassin-Scott died on June 9. An artist, author, and actor, he was also an expert model-maker ; his attractive Cassin Baker Street Series of 12-inch latex figures (1969-1971) included Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, Irene Adler, Prof. Moriarty, and Mycroft Holmes.
447. There's almost always something new for fans of Mary Russell at Laurie R. King's web-site <www.laurierking.com>; click on the Bouchercon page for a virtual tour of many of the locations in LOCKED ROOMS and THE ART OF DETECTION. There's news of STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES, an anthology edited by Laurie and Les Klinger, with an interesting list of contributors, due from Random House for Christmas 2011. Laurie also offers A MARY RUSSELL COMPANION as a free e-Book, with excerpts from all the books, an essay by Laurie describing the writing process, and lots of extra features. The COMPANION will be up-dated when additional books in the series are published (PIRATE KING is due next year).
448. There's something new in Scotland: The Sherlock Holmes Society of Scotland has held its first meeting, and plans to meet monthly in Glasgow. It's the first Sherlockian society in Scotland, and its founder is Barry Young; his postal address is 19 Windsor Court, Dirleton Drive, Glasgow G41 3BG, Great Britain, and the society's e-mail address is <sherlockscotland@btinternet>. They have a web-site at <www.sherlockscotland.blogspot.com>.

449. Oct 10 #3: Martha Stewart is now firmly in the world of Sherlock Holmes: in the Grandinroad catalog, which has a "Martha Stewart Detective Woman's Halloween Costume" (cape, collar, and cap) at $119.00 (item #41814), and you can see it in full color at <www.grandinroad.com>; thanks to Evy Herzog, who noted the item. It's too late for Halloween this year, of course, but you'll be in plenty of time for next year.
450. But this isn't the first Sherlockian connection for Martha Stewart: "Where there is no imagination there is no horror" was the appropriate Halloween quote in Martha Stewart Living (Oct. 2008), credited to Conan Doyle. And where did he write that?
451. LONDON QUIZ, by Travis Elborough and Nick Rennison, is a handy pocket-size collection of "400 provocative, curious, and humorous questions to enlighten and entertain" (New York: The Little Bookroom, 2010; 240 pp., $14.95), and it offers a pleasant challenge for people who think they know all about the city and its history (at least three of the questions are Sherlockian or Doylean).
452. Tsukasa Kobayashi ("Baritsu") died on Sept. 27. He was a psychologist, an educator, a novelist, and an active Esperantist, and he was a co-founder of the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club in 1977. He received his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
453. Plan ahead: The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, the Toronto Public Library, and The Bootmakers of Toronto have scheduled a conference on "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Study in Scandal" in Toronto on Oct. 13-16, 2011; their website's at <www.acdfriends.org> and more details are available on request from Barbara Rusch (36 Macauley Drive, Thornhill, ON L3T 5S5, Canada) <ephemeradiva@rogers.com>. The Wessex Press is sponsoring its third "From Gillette to Brett" weekend in Indianapolis on Nov. 11-13, 2011; more information (and an impressive video trailer at <www.wessexpress.com>). The Baker Street Irregulars and the UCLA School of Theater, Film, and Television will hold a Labor Day conference on "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" in Los Angeles on Aug. 31-Sept. 3, 2012; details to come. And The Sherlock Holmes Society of London has scheduled a new Swiss Pilgrimage for Sept. 9-16, 2012; they'll spend four days in Interlaken and three days in Meiringen, presumably all in appropriate Sherlockian costume.
454. "Such Suite Music with Holmes" was the headline on a story by John Gibson in the Scotsman (Oct. 20), spotted by Scott Monty. The Electric Light Orchestra will include Patrick Gowers' "Sherlock Holmes Suite" (from the Granada series) in a concert at the Queen's Hall in Edinburgh on Nov. 6.
455. News from Toronto: three manuscripts that were owned by Adrian Conan Doyle and were bequeathed by his widow Anna to the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection have arrived at the Toronto Reference Library: "The Crown Diamond" (a play that was first performed in 1921 and then adapted as "The Mazarin Stone"), "Some Personalia about Mr. Sherlock Holmes" (an article first published in The Strand Magazine in 1917), and "On the Intemperance of Our Country, the Cause of Its Prevalence, and the Means of Its Suppression" (an essay that was written for a competition in 1878). Randall Stock discusses all three manuscripts at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/crown-diamond-manuscript.htm>.
456. Oct 10 #4: Bouchercon 41 ("Bouchercon by the Bay") was nicely done indeed, with registration about 1,400 plus about 400 one-day attendees. There were two Sherlockian panels: "Going Home" (with Michael Kean, Peter E. Blau, Chris Goetz, and Richard Sveum) and "Letters from the Grave" (with Les Klinger, Steve Hockensmith, Laurie R. King, Michael Kurland, and Graham Moore), and a third non-Sherlockian "A Trout in the Milk" about sex in mysteries (none of the panelists were familiar with the trout in the milk in the Canon). The titles of the panels presented their own mystery, and it was revealed at the end of the convention that the titles of all the panels were titles of (appropriately) of the television series "The Streets of San Francisco".
457. The Scowrers and Molly Maguires hosted a Saturday-evening reception to welcome the Sherlockian visitors, and the conventional also offered an opportunity to visit an exhibition on "Sidney Paget's Sherlock Holmes: A Sesquicentennial Exhibition" at the Arion Press Gallery. The exhibition honors Paget's 150th birthday, runs through Nov. 17, and features six original illustrations (from the collection of Glen Miranker); there's more about the gallery and the exhibition at <www.arionpress.com/paget.html>.
458. Future Bouchercons will be held in St. Louis, Mo., on Sept. 15-18, 2011; in Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 4-7, 2012; in Albany, N.Y., Sept. 19-22, 2013; and in Long Beach, Calif., Nov. 13-16, 2014. More information about Bouchercons past, present, and future will be found at <www.bouchercon.info>.
459. "Where there is no imagination there is no horror" was said by Holmes, to Watson, in A STUDY IN SCARLET.
460. Mark Alberstat's 2011 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. US$14.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
461. Dennis Wickline's audience-participation mystery "Sherlock Holmes Is Coming to Dinner" opened at the Broadway Onstage Live Theatre on Oct. 22, and will run through Nov. 20. 21517 Kelly Road, Eastpointe, MI 48021 (586-771-6333) <www.broadwayonstage.com>.
462. Paul Singleton has reported that F. Andrew Leslie's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978) will be performed by the Gotham Radio Theatre on Nov. 8 at the Mint Theater (311 West 43rd Street #307, New York, NY 10036) (866-992-9263) <www.gothamradiotheatre.com>. There will be two performances, at 7:00 and 9:00 pm.
463. David F. Musto ("Dr. Anstruther") died on Oct. 8. He was for many years a professor at Yale University, and a leading historian of U.S. drug policy. His essay "A Study in Cocaine: Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud" appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association in 1968, and was cited by Nicholas Meyer as one of the inspirations for his novel THE SEVEN-PERCENT SOLUTION. Dave also was founder of the Yale Sherlock Holmes Society, orchestrating annual summer meetings that featured guest speakers and the screening of a Basil Rathbone film. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1969.

464. Oct 10 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 157th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 7, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> or Evy Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you are coming to the event.
465. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcx@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather. Burt Wolder reports that The Three Hours for Lunch Club will honor Frederic Dorr Steele's memory at 1:00 pm at The Players (16 Gramercy Park South).
466. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 2nd floor of the Midtown Executive Club (at 40 West 45th Street); the speaker will be Michael Sims, editor of the anthology THE PENGUIN BOOK OF GASLIGHT CRIME and the upcoming THE DEAD WITNESS: A CONNOISSEUR'S COLLECTION OF VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below). Tickets will not be sold at the door.
467. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Friday in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 4th Street) to present their Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. Their web-site's at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
468. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
469. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $45.00 for chicken or salmon ($50.00 for prime rib). Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> is the contact for a formal announcement.
470. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street at Seventh Avenue); $75.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919 (845-361-4320).
471. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised.
472. Oct 10 #6: Those who wish to have seasonal souvenirs or other mementos included in the various dinner packets can send 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 110 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Francine Kitts (35 Van Cortlandt Avenue, Staten Island, NY 10301), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material should be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15.
473. On Saturday a wide variety of Sherlockiana will be available from vendors in the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) in the Vanderbilt Suite on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; for information about dealers' tables, contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com>.
474. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:00 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). The cost is $79.00 (details below) or $89.00 after Nov. 26 or at the door.
475. For those who wish to continue partying, there are as yet no plans (firm or infirm) for sporting events at Kennedy's or other venues on Saturday evening; stay tuned (as they say) for a further report.
476. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:15 am to 2:30 pm at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant at 160 West 54th Street (between Sixth and Seventh Avenues) (and yes, Sixth Avenue is the Avenue of the Americas), and the cost will be $20.00 including tax and tip (payable by cash or check at the door). The brunch is open to all, but space is limited; please let Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032) <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com> know if you are coming.
477. Arrangements have been made for a block of rooms at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) at a special tax-free rate; the special rate is available only for reservations made through The Baker Street Irregulars (details below).
478. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Roosevelt Hotel, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, after Nov. 1 you can visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and click on "BSI Weekend".
479. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; special rates also are available at <www.travelzoo.com/top20/82851294-890255>. You will be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you should not forget about non-optional extras such as almost 20% in state and city taxes).
480. Oct 10 #7: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
481. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and <www.bsiweekend.com>. News of additional events will be found in this newsletter, and at the web-sites.
482. More television news: BBC Worldwide has said it has sold its mini-series "Sherlock" for broadcast in France, Russia, the Czech Republic, Slovenia, Estonia, Serbia, New Zealand, South Africa, Latin America, and Ireland, in addition to Canada and the U.S. And co-creator Steven Moffat offered some clues about the next series in an interview on Oct. 15 on National Public Radio's "Morning Edition": Linda Wertheimer asked for hints, and Moffat replied "The critical words, I'd say, would be--Adler, Hound, Reichenbach." You can go to <www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyid=13572175> for audio and a transcript.
483. The new British government's call for budget cuts totaling £83 billion includes a 30% reduction in funding for the Arts Council, which supports the BBC. The Financial Times noted (Oct. 22) that Benedict Cumberbatch, Simon Pegg, and Liam Nesson have all asked that the arts be spared, and the paper's

- columnist Jonathan Guthrie asked, "Who can gainsay the combined economic wisdom of men who between them have personated Sherlock Holmes, Scotty from 'Star Trek', and Jedi Knight Qui-Gon Jin?"
484. The U.S. broadcast of the first episode was marked by a Sherlockian first: PBS-TV created a live Twitter chat in which on-line viewers could watch and comment on the program. Scott Monty was one of the hosts, and reports that there were more than 1,500 tweets in less than 90 minutes; you're can visit <www.bakerstreetblog.com/2010/10/more-to-me-than-twitter-illu.html> to read all about it at Scott's "Baker Street Blog".
485. More movie news: Jared Harris (he plays Lane Pryce on "Mad Men" series) has been cast as Moriarty in Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock 2" (putting to rest those rumors about Brad Pitt, Daniel Day-Lewis, Sean Penn, and others). And production has started on "Sherlock 2"; go to <www.dailymail.co.uk> and search for [downey law richmond] to see a story (Oct. 19) with photographs taken during filming in Richmond Park, which reportedly was turned into a gypsy camp. The photographs don't show Noomi Rapace, who may be playing a French gypsy in the film (Sep 10 #8); if you would like to know how to pronounce her name, do a Google search for [pronounce noomi rapace].

486. Nov 10 #1: Sorry about that: the Beacon Society's annual meeting will be held at 10:00 am on Saturday, Jan. 8, during the birthday festivities in New York, in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel (at 45 East 4th Street) to present their Annual Beacon Award recognizing efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. Their web-site's at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
487. And Chrys Kegley of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will once again host The Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians Dinner at Kennedy's Irish Restaurant & Pub (327 West 57th Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues) on Saturday at 6:00 pm; $44.50 for dinner, one alcoholic drink, tax, and tip. Please send checks (payable to the CCOBS) to Chrys at 18014 Sherman Way #275, Reseda, CA 91235, to arrive by Dec. 28; if you have questions, she's at (818-675-5581) <bswl@socal.rr.com>.
488. Al Gregory requests everyone cooperation in ensuring that material intended for the packets at the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars will be received by Dec. 15; his address is 118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044 <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net>.
489. Julie Snell has discovered The Nostalgia League, an interesting on-line resource that includes a department called The Diogenes Club, where you can read two Sherlockian parodies: Sir James M. Barrie's "The Adventure of the Two Collaborators" (1893) and P. G. Wodehouse's "Dudley-Jones, Bore-Hunter" (1903) <www.thenostalgialeague.com/olmag/doyle.html>.
490. The Strand Magazine (published by Andrew Gulli) offers its "Sherlock Holmes 2011 Wall Calendar" accompanied by a bonus DVD that has five Holmes films from 1921 to 1945). $24.95 (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com>.
491. Karen Murdock has noted a "The Doctor Is In... Literature" list on-line at <www.abebooks.com>; the doctors include Mengele, Doolittle, Moreau, Jekyll, Fu-Manchu, Nikola, Van Helsing, No, Zhivago, and Watson.
492. E.J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jun 06 #2) is now available (unabridged) as an audio book at <www.audible.com>; she narrates the book, with the assistance of Simon Prebble. And she has an interesting web-site at <www.ejwagner-crimehistorian.com>
493. Geoffrey Crawley died on Oct. 29. He was for many years editor-in-chief of the British Journal of Photography, and wrote a ten-part series of articles in 1982 and 1983 that exposed the photographs of the Cottingley fairies as fakes. It is an interesting coincidence that Conan Doyle wrote a series of articles about photography that were published in the magazine from 1881 to 1885.
494. TWITTERATURE: THE WORLD'S GREATEST BOOKS IN TWENTY TWEETS OR LESS, by Alexander Aciman and Emmett Rensin (New York: Penguin, 2009; 224 pp., $12.00), the contents include "Sherlock Holmes". The book was published in Britain as TWITTERATURE: THE WORLD'S GREATEST BOOKS RETOLD THROUGH TWITTER. Thanks to John Baesch for spotting the latest version of the Canon.

495. Nov 10 #2: Mystery Scene Magazine (Mar 10 #4) is informative and colorful; the fall issue has Cheryl Solimini's interesting interview with Nancy Springer about her Enola Holmes young-adult mystery series (which is ending with the sixth book this year), Laurence Block's column (intriguing but non-Sherlockian) about Charles Willeford, and a great deal more. The magazine is edited by Kate Stine and is published five times a year ($32.00 a year to the U.S.); you can subscribe by mail (331 West 57th Street #148, New York, NY 10019, or on-line <www.mysteryscenemag.com>. The web-site has links to articles from the current and past issues, and to all of the book reviews published in the magazine.
496. Further to the death of David F. Musto (Oct 10 #4), the 27th annual Sherlock Holmes Lecture at Yale was given by Dr. Thomas Duffy on June 12, 2008, on "Sherlock Holmes' Syringe"; there's a 23 minute video of the lecture at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=JYsuQbo3FM>.
497. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Dixon's Downtown Grill in Denver on Nov. 3, and the visiting geologists were welcomed by Bill Dorn and other members of the local Sherlockian society (Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients). Our next dinners will be in Houston on Apr. 13 and in Minneapolis on Oct. 12.
498. Jill Lepore's "A Critic at Large" essay in The New Yorker (Oct. 18) can be read at their web-site <www.newyorker.com>: it's titled "Too Much Information: Books about the Birds and Bees" and opens with an amusing (and quite appropriate) quotation from the Canon.
499. "Research papers and essays for all" is the motto at <www.oppapers.com>, a paid-access data-base at <www.oppapers.com>, spotted by Francine Kitts. At the moment they have more than 200,000 papers, including some of interest to Sherlockians or would-be Sherlockians. "Submitting papers to a website and reviewing other users' papers is not plagiarism," the company explains, adding that "submitting another's work as your own is plagiarism. Please never turn in any articles from this web-site as your own."
500. Apologies to all those who reported (and some quite a while back) amusing T-shirts available at <www.snorgtees.com>; they're available for $15.16 and in various sizes, and you can search for [velociholmes] or [sedimentary].
501. Nov 10 #3: Phil Bergem has found an amusing "Literary Pets" calendar for 2011 at Half Price Books; it's written and illustrated by Chet Phillips, and the page for September features Sir Arthur Canine Doyle (author of THE WHINE OF FOUR and THE HOUND OF THE BASSETVILLES) and the famed detective Curlock Holmes. The calendar is available only in stores and is free with a purchase of $30.00 or more.
502. Reported: a 2011 Sherlockian calendar that features Sherlockian pets (photographs of pets of Sherlockians, that is), available from Classic Specialties <www.cafepress.com/sherlockholmes2.478406128>; $19.95.
503. Hemlock Holmes was one of the character on the animated series "The Dick Tracy Show"; there were 130 five-minute episodes produced by UPA from 1961 to 1963, and they're all available on a set of four DVDs that was issued in 2006 ($14.97 at Amazon). Hemlock Holmes (voice by Jerry Hausner) was a canine assistant to Tracy, and is non-Sherlockian except for his name.
504. Aziz Bin Adam reports that "Elementary, My Dear View" (a documentary presented by Richard E. Grant) is available at YouTube in four parts (46 minutes total); the documentary is nicely done, and was broadcast in the U.K. by ITV3 on Nov. 17, 2007.
505. "I know what I loved about Conan Doyle's work was he made his characters so real. I mean not only me, but the people that read Sherlock Holmes felt that they knew him." Comic industry legend Stan Lee, in an interview with L. Vincent Poupard at FanFare in Detroit (thanks to Jon Lellenberg for the report). To read more of the interview, go to <www.associatedcontent.com> and search for [stan lee interview with associated content].

506. The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has much about the recent conference that was devoted to "The Spirits of Sherlock Holmes" (including Jon Lellenberg's reminiscences about Allen Mackler); copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
507. Bill Dorn's "Sherlock Holmes Calendar" for 2011 is devoted to "Dr. John H. Watson, M.D., on Film and Television" (with photographs of many Watsons and a few Holmeses); the postpaid price is $12.95 to the U.S., $13.95 to Canada, and $17.95 elsewhere. You can see the calendar, and take an interesting trivia quiz, at <web.me.com/billdorn/2011_Holmes_Calendar/Home.html>.
508. "Watson" (subtitled "The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes") is a new play written and directed by Jaime Robledo, running at the Sacred Fools Theater through Dec. 11 (600 North Heliotrope Drive, Los Angeles, CA 90004) (310-281-8337) <www.sacredfools.org>.
509. CONAN DOYLE AND THE DIVORCE LAW REFORM UNION is a well-researched monograph that Dana Richards has written about a relatively-unknown aspect of Sir Arthur's life; he served as president of the Union from 1909 to 1920, and the 62-page pamphlet offers interesting coverage of a campaign to which he devoted a great deal of effort and enthusiasm. It costs $10.00 postpaid from the author (10814 Rippon Lodge Drive, Fairfax, VA 23032).
510. Nov 10 #4: If you collect Sherlockian records, you may want to extend your search to include wax cylinders: it would appear that the earliest known audio recording to mention Sherlock Holmes was issued in 1910. The song is "The Jingle of Jungle Joe" (words by Jack Mahoney and music by Theodore Morse); the sheet music was published by the Theodore Morse Music Co. in 1910, and there were at least two recordings, one performed by Collins & Harlan in 1910 (Columbia 967) and the other by the American Quartet in 1911 (Edison Amberol 638). You can listen to and download the song from the Internet: the mention of Sherlock Holmes is in the second verse. And if you have trouble understanding the song, I can provide the lyrics, copied from the sheet music.
511. Halloween pumpkins can be quite artistic: Debbie Belchis of Ellicott City celebrated this year with a Sherlockian jack-o-lantern.
512. THE CASE FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Dr. John Watson (New York: Fall River Press, 2009; 62 pp., $22.50), is done with imagination (and without identifying the author); a scrapbook of six of the cases, accompanied by actual artefacts that include interesting items such as a love letter written by Stapleton to Laura Lyons. It was published in Britain (as THE CASE NOTES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES) by Andre Deutsch (£19.99), and the American edition has been seen discounted to $14.98.
513. Penguin has published THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES in their Penguin Hardcover Classics Series with an attractively lepidopterous cover designed by Coralie Bickford-Smith ($20.00); this is a reissue of the Penguin Classics edition with the informative introduction and notes by Christopher Frayling (Jun 01 #5).
514. Herbert P. Tinning ("Dr. Leon Sterndale") died on Nov. 7. He worked as an association executive, and was a dedicated deacon in the Episcopal church and an active Sherlockian as a member of societies in the midwest and then in the northeast; his special enthusiasms included the Antarctic (where he believed Dr. Watson visited during the Great Hiatus) and his namesake story "The Devil's Foot". He was awarded his Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars in 1974.
515. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's discussion of anniversaries celebrated this year of people who had Sherlockian or Doylean connections: Frederic Chopin (200), Sidney Paget (150), J. M. Barrie (150), and Theodor Herzl (150), plus Peggy Perdue's report on manuscript acquisitions, and other news from and about the collection. Copies are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
516. Paul Spiring has reported that Frederick Moy Thomas' FIFTY YEARS OF FLEET STREET: BEING THE LIFE AND RECOLLECTIONS OF SIR JOHN R. ROBINSON (1904) has been reprinted, and you can read it at <books.google.com>; it includes an enthusiastic letter that Conan Doyle wrote to Robinson from Amherst, Mass., in 1894, saying (among other things), "It's a great country, Sir."
517. Nov 10 #5: Aziz Bin Adam has noted a story on CNN that will be of interest to anyone who wants to see and hear what Mecca was like in 1885 (only a few years before Sherlock Holmes "looked in" there); it was Dutch adventurer Christiaan Snouck Hurgronje who made the photographs and recordings, some of which are now on display in Dubai. The full report, by Barry Neild, is at <www.tinyurl.com/2ukqkbw>.
518. Gayle Harris has reported that a catalog from Alberene Royal Mail (Box 902, Harrisville, NH 03450) (800-843-9078) <www.alberene.com> has many Sherlockian items, including pub glasses, a pub chalkboard, a pub-in-a-box, a pub sign from The Sherlock Holmes, a pocket magnifier, a pocket watch, a movie poster, and a wall clock (as well as a Diogenes Club wall clock).
519. Dynamite Entertainment has announced their new comic book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: YEAR ONE, with six issues written by Scott Beatty. There's a blog (with art-work) at <www.comicbookresources.com/?page=article&id=29431>, and the publisher's web-site is at <www.dynamiteentertainment.com>.
520. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's new Christmas card is titled "The Snow Queen" and has an intriguing photograph from the Victoria and Albert Museum, dated ca. 1890, of a man who's wearing a deerstalker and making a snow sculpture of Queen Victoria; you can see the artwork and order packets of the cards at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>. And the Society's annual dinner will be held on Jan. 15 in the Members' Dining Room at the House of Commons; the guest of honor will be Andrew Horowitz, a prolific author and editor, and creator and writer of the television series "Foyle's War".
521. There's an interesting discount offer at the Deal Table at the Baker Street Journal's web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>: the International Series volume SCANDINAVIA AND SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 07 #6) is now available at a 25% discount. The book offers English translations of fine scholarship from Denmark, Sweden, and Norway.
522. Randall Stock has added a new feature to his "Best of Sherlock" web-site at <www.bestofsherlock.com>; "What's New in 2010: Top Holmes Gifts for Long-Time Sherlockians" offers nice choices for Christmas presents, and there's also a list of "Holmes Gifts for New Fans".
523. Peter Cushing recorded THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES for the Royal National Institute for the Blind in 1971, and his work at long last is available to the general public: Cosmic Hobo Productions is issuing his readings on CDs, with new notes by David Stuart Davies. The first volume, with four stories, is available now (£19.99) at <www.cosmichobo.com>; if you order before Jan. 31 and enter the discount code [moriarty] at check-out, you'll get a 25% discount. They are excellent readings, needless to say, and he demonstrates well the visual imagery at which Conan Doyle was so skilled.
524. Cosmic Hobo also has a reissue of Cushing's (abridged) reading of his first autobiography PAST FORGETTING (1988) on two CDs (£14.99); 144 minutes, plus a bonus 16-minute documentary featuring some of the people who worked with him, and with new album notes written by Mark Gatiss (co-creator of the BBC mini-series "Sherlock").
525. Nov 10 #6: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company have issued a new audio recording of William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes", adapted for radio by Roger Johnson and starring Jim Crozier and Dave Hawkes as Holmes and Watson, nicely done indeed.

- The 110-minute recording can be heard or downloaded free at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> and is available on two CDs from the Society (Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England) for £12.00 or $32.00 postpaid; sterling checks should be payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks to Jean Upton.
526. John Baesch notes that the J. Peterman Company (1001 Primrose Court, Lexington, KY 40811) (888-647-2555) <www.jpeterman.com> still offers items of interest to Sherlockians, and so they do: a deerstalker ($128.00), a Sherlock Holmes pipe ($295.00), a blackthorn walking stick ($120.00), a herringbone caped coat ($750.00), and an Acme Metropolitan whistle ($19.00).
527. It's now possible to view at least some of the first known Sherlockian film produced in color: Alexis Barquin has noted a four-minute excerpt available at YouTube. The film is "My Grandfather's Clock", and it's a parody, a 17-minute "musical murder mystery" produced in Technicolor and released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Oct. 27, 1934. The film stars Charles Judels (Philo Holmes) and Franklin Pangborn (Dr. Watkins), and one of the musical numbers has everyone singing "For he's a jolly good Philo." A second (shorter) excerpt also is available; search for [bizarre musical number from 1934].
528. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a cachet for a first day cover for the Edgar Allan Poe stamp, showing a scene from "The Murders in the Rue Morgue" and a Canonical quote about Dupin. $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. (and $11.00 elsewhere); payment only in U.S. currency or postal money orders, please, but other arrangements can be made for overseas buyers; his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801 <drhanson@localnet.com>.
529. Nov 10 #7: Japanese Sherlockiana: Daniel Stashower's TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE has been translated by Masamichi Higurashi (Tokyo: Hara Shobo, 2010; 568 pp., Y3,600), and Hayakawa's Mystery Magazine (Nov. 2009) honored the 150th anniversary of the birth of Conan Doyle with a selection of pastiches (by Steve Hockensmith, Kim Newman, Len Deighton, Edward D. Hoch, and Peter Lovesey), and essays about Holmes and Conan Doyle. And Hara Shobo has reissued Mitch's translation of Dick Riley and Pam McAllister's THE BEDSIDE, BATHTUB, AND ARMCHAIR COMPANION TO SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published in 2000 (Jul 01 #5).
530. John Baesch and Evy Herzog have kindly forwarded a first day cover of the postage stamp issued this year by the Vatican in honor of the 200th birthday of Pope Leo XIII, who reigned from 1878 to 1903, and who twice was the client of Sherlock Holmes (see "Black Peter" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles").
531. J. L. Hazen's SOJOURN: AN ACCOUNT OF THE QUEEN'S BENCH (Bloomington, iUniverse, 2009; 400 pp. $22.95) is set in 1903, and begins with the murder of Sherlock Holmes; the story involves Mycroft and Watson and secret societies, and offers a complicated mystery.
532. Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger are editing A STUDY IN SHERLOCK for publication by Bantam in Dec. 2011; it's an anthology of new stories to be written by authors who range (alphabetically) from Alan Bradley to Jackie Winspear, and there's a web-site at <www.astudyinsherlock.com>.
533. Late-breaking news: there will be some interesting Sherlockiana at auction at Sotheby's in London on Dec. 16: a copy of the pre-publication dummy of the first American edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (estimated at £15,000-20,000) and a copy of the first state of the first American edition (£30,000-40,000), plus the letter from Conan Doyle to Robert Collier (Apr. 3, 1903) announcing the resuscitation of Sherlock Holmes (£15,000-20,000). There's more information on the items at <www.sothebys.com>.
534. The Literary Encyclopedia is an interesting on-line reference work launched in 2000 and available by subscription at <www.litencyc.com>; there are previews of the entries, which include Nils Clausson's new discussion of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (and he's now at work on THE LOST WORLD).
535. Michael Procter has noted an interesting Internet web-site called The Victorian Dictionary <www.victorianlondon.org>, which offers a great deal of information, and much more than a dictionary. One intriguing item is the "Stanford's Map of Central London 1897", which provides large-scale views of a digitized version of the map.
536. CONVERSATIONS WITH...ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, by Simon Parke (Guildford: White Crow, 2009; 137 pp., £14.99/$21.99 cloth or £8.99/$12.99 paper), is an interesting (and imagined) interview with Conan Doyle in 1930; his comments are taken from his published work, and the interview deals mostly with his belief in Spiritualism. White Crow also offers reprints of THE NEW REVELATION, THE VITAL MESSAGE, THE EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN, and D. D. HOME: HIS LIFE AND MISSION (which was edited by Conan Doyle) <www.whitecrowbooks.com>.
537. Nov 10 #8: Edward Hardwicke was on hand for the renaming of a theater in honor of his father, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, according to a story in the Stourbridge News (Nov. 9). The Hardwicke Theatre is at Thorns Community College in Lye, where Sir Cedric was born in 1893. He played Sherlock Holmes in "The Speckled Band" on the BBC Home Service in 1945, and he appeared in the film "I Remember Mama" (1948) as a boarder, reading to the family from THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES and ending his reading with the classic line "Mr. Holmes, they were the footprints of a gigantic hound."
538. Les Klinger was interviewed by Mark Coggins in the San Francisco Chronicle (Nov. 29), and you can read the interview on-line at <www.sfgate.com>. And there's a mention of Coggins' serial pastiche "The Adventure of the Black Bishop", which ran in five weekly parts beginning on Oct. 25; you can read it at the web-site as well (you'll need to adjust your search to include 90 days). The story also is available at <www.amazon.com> as a Kindle short for 99c.
539. Graham Moore's pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (New York: Twelve, 2010; 350 pp., $24.99) has two mysteries: one set in 1900, when Conan Doyle decides to do his own detecting, and the other in 2010, when Harold White, newly made a member of The Baker Street Irregulars, investigates the murder of a Sherlockian who has announced that he has discovered Conan Doyle's missing diary from the last three months of 1900. It's an interesting (and sometimes amusing) story, and you can read more about the book (and other things) at Moore's blog at <www.thesherlockian.com>.
540. Work on Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock 2" continues. And Joel Silver (producer of the series) was quoted in a story in Variety (Nov. 13) as saying that "I'd like to believe that we could keep going with these stories as long as we can. I know that my 9-year-old has started reading the books now, and he would not have done that had he not seen the movies."
541. By now many if not most of you have seen the new BBC mini-series "Sherlock" (starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman), but if you watched the programs on PBS-TV you haven't seen everything: WGBH-TV has edited the programs, and some bits and pieces are missing. If you want the shows as they were broadcast by the BBC, you can see everything on the U.S. DVD set (but you won't see the introductions by Alan Cumming). Another reason for buying the DVD set is the closed captioning, helpful to those who have trouble understanding people who speak quickly in British. There's a Blu-ray version of the mini-series, which of course offers high definition, but it appears not to have any features that are not on the regular DVD.
542. Abbie Bernstein interviewed Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss for Assignment X <www.assignmentx.com>, and Gatiss said that their favorite Sherlock Holmes films starred Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce; their favorite is "Spider Woman", and Moffat added that "it has more plot than any other movie you're ever going to see. It's extraordinary. There's a fantastic friendship at the heart of it, and I think a great time, it's full of ludicrous lurid details."

543. Dec 10 #1: The Red Circle of Washington is alive and well and on the World Wide Web, as many of you already know. We launched our web-site at our dinner meeting on Dec. 10, and the URL is <www.redcircledc.org>. We are fortunate to have an enthusiastic web-master (Alan Rettig) and a knowledgeable technical guru (Bob Howard).
544. Karen Murdock spotted news of a new Sherlock Holmes slot machine unveiled at the European iGaming Congress this month. It is described as a 5-reel, 25-line slot game based on the Sherlock Holmes stories; players will get to search for clues and collect prizes for winning combinations, and in a bonus round help Holmes and Watson solve a murder (there's also a progressive jackpot to be won). And there's a brief video at <www.sherlockholmes.com>; the game is manufactured in Europe, and will in full production next year. And your friendly neighborhood casino can get in touch with GTECH G2; their web-site's at <www.gtechg2.com>.
545. Reported: THE HORROR OF THE HEIGHTS AND OTHER STRANGE TALES (New York: Fall River Press, 2010; 334 pp., $6.98); fourteen of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories (apparently an exclusive at Barnes & Noble).
546. "Story Hour in the Library" (at the University of California Berkeley) featured Laurie R. King on Nov. 4, 2010; there's a 51-minute video at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=TzLHUK5pQVM>, and you can see and hear her read an excerpt from the next Mary Russell novel (THE PIRATE KING).
547. Forecast: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND CONAN DOYLE LOCATIONS: A VISITOR'S DIRECTORY, by Allan Foster, from McFarland, spring/summer 2011 ($35.00); more information at <www.mcfarlandpub.com>.
548. Laura Kuhn reports a long interview with Raymond Massey (done in the 1970s) in the summer issue of Films of the Golden Age; Massey was asked about his film "The Speckled Band" (1931) and said that he got the job because he was recommended by Gerald du Maurier, who was the first choice but said, "I'm feeling rather tired, old boy, so you try it on, will you?" According to Massey, he was the "worst ever Holmes."
549. Robert J. Mangler ("Sir Hugo Baskerville") died on Nov. 29. He was an attorney, and was the first and longest-serving (27 years) corporation counsel of Wilmette, Ill. Bob also was an ardent Sherlockian, and in 1960 he resurrected both The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic) and Hugo's Companions; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1962.
550. Ripperologist is an interesting electronic journal edited by Eduardo Zinna, and almost always has discussion of something Sherlockian; the latest issue (#177) reports that Sony Pictures Home Entertainment has started an online service that offers more than 100 classic films from its Columbia Pictures catalog, available for the first time on burn-on-demand DVDs and in high-quality transfers, priced at $19.94. And one of them is "A Study in Terror" (1965). Go to <www.columbia-classics.com> and search for the title of the film. Contact Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> for information about subscriptions to Ripperologist.

551. Dec 10 #2: The Feb. 2011 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will be on the newsstands during the birthday celebrations, has imaginative Sherlockian artwork on the cover, Donald A. Yates' pastiche "A Study in Scarlatti", Jon L. Breen's review of recent Sherlockian books, and editor Janet Hutchings' explanation of why THE ADVENTURE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was so important to Fred Dannay and to EQMM.
552. Further to the item on plans for an Indian remake of "The Sign of the Four" (Jan 09 #7), Aziz Bin Adam spotted a report in the Calcutta Telegraph (Aug. 27) that "Gumshuda" (directed by Ashoke Viswanathan) stars Rajit Kapur as private detective Prashant Saigal, and former British deputy high commissioner Simon Wilson as a "British gentleman with a hooked pipe, an overcoat, and a tendency to use the word 'elementary' more than once." The film is in Hindi, and Aziz has also has noted a brief trailer at <www.youtube.com>; search for [gumshuda (2010)].
553. Richard Luman died on May 21. He was a professor of religion at Haverford College from 1969 to 1995; he also taught courses on Victorian and Edwardian detective novels, and Icelandic sagas, and his Baker Street Journal article on "The Second Hand in The Second Stain" (Sept. 1978) won the Morley-Montgomery Award for the best contribution to the BSJ that year.
554. Les Klinger has reported "The Game Is Afoot!: The Significance of Gratuitous Transfers in the Sherlock Holmes Canon", by Stephen R. Alton (professor law at Texas Wesleyan School of Law); it's a pastiche that discusses the inheritances, wills, and trusts in the stories, and it can be read or downloaded at <papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract\_id=1676852>.
555. Chris Music reports that The Amateur Mendicant Society of Detroit will celebrate their 65th anniversary at their winter meeting on Jan. 29. More information's available at their web-site <www.amateurmendicant.blogspot.com>
557. Further to the report (Aug 10 #5) on a possible judicial review of the Waverly Borough Council's decision to approve the application of a developer to convert Undershaw (the house where Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907) into three flats, Paul Spiring has forwarded reports from the BBC News and the Daily Telegraph (Dec. 16), the Undershaw Preservation Trust has filed a formal request with Britain's High Court in hopes of overturning the decision.
558. Tom Bosley died on Oct. 19. He acted on stage and television, and was best known as Mr. Cunningham on the series "Happy Days". He also played sheriff Amos Tupper on the series "Murder, She Wrote" and Father Dowling in "Father Dowling Mysteries". In 1976 he narrated a 30-minute program "That's Hollywood!: Sherlock Holmes" broadcast by WABC-TV (New York), and in the "Father Dowling Mysteries" episode "The Consulting Detective Mystery" (1991) he was assisted in investigating a murder by his mentor Sherlock Holmes (played by Rupert Frazer), whom only Dowling could see.

559. Dec 10 #3: Prescott's Press, edited by Warren Randall for The Three Garridebs, has (as always) a nice mix of scholarship and whimsy; the September issue (#75) has Susan Rice's affectionate tribute to John Bennett Shaw. Subscriptions cost $15.00 for four issues ($20.00 outside the U.S.), and issue #75 is available for $6.00/$7.00 postpaid from Warren at 15 Fawm Lane West, South Setauket, NY 11720.
560. There is a wide variety of Sherlockian web-sites, including Charles Prepolec's colorful "Sherlock Holmes News" <www.sherlockholmesnews.com>, where you will find news, reviews, and what he describes as "unsavory opinions."
561. The three interesting Sherlockian items at auction at Sotheby's in London on Dec. 16 (Nov 10 #7) went unsold when the bids did not reach the reserves. The pre-publication dummy of the first American edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES was estimated at £15,000-20,000, the first state of the first American edition at £30,000-40,000, and the letter from Conan Doyle to Robert Collier (Apr. 3, 1903) announcing the resuscitation of Sherlock Holmes at £15,000-20,000.
562. Shakespeare & Company in Lenox, Mass., performed "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) in 2009, and they're reviving the show from July 21 to Sept. 4; it's the play presented by Peepolykus on tour in England in 2007, and it's a delightful spoof. 70 Kemble Street, Lenox, MA 01240 (413-637-3353) <www.shakespeare.org>.

563. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a colorful cachet for a first day cover for the Seabiscuit stamped envelope, showing Shoscombe Prince and a Shoscombe spaniel. $10.00 postpaid to the U.S. ($11.00 elsewhere); payment only in U.S. currency or postal money orders, please, but other arrangements can be made for overseas buyers; his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801 <drhanson@localnet.com>.
564. Dec 10 #4: "Girls with Slingshots" is an on-line comic strip drawn by Danielle Corsetto, available at <www.girlswithslingshots.com>; the cast of characters includes cats as well as people of various genders and persuasions, and there are (of course) collections of older strips. GIRLS WITH SLINGSHOTS: VOLUME FIVE (2010) has a sequence with Jamie McJack as a "Romance Detective" in Sherlockian costume (she's also on the cover), and it's available at the web-site ($19.95).
565. Robert C. Clyne ("The Opal Tiara") died on Dec. 12. He was an attorney and long interested in history and literature, and was a founder of The Diogenes Club of Brooklyn and co-editor of their newsletter The Growler (which they boasted was published every eight years). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1959.
566. The Strand Magazine (published by Andrew Gulli) offers a "221B Baker Street Magnifying Glass" ($19.95) that has a hand-crafted rosewood panel inscribed "Sherlock Holmes/221B Baker Street London" (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com221b.htm>.
567. Quite a few Christmas shoppers have reported a new Sherlockian nutcracker, at Target stores and at <www.target.com> ($12.99); search for [holiday nutcracker detective].
568. The 2010 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 57 pages of scholarship, quizzes, and pastiches; the scholarship includes John Longenbaugh's "The Curious Case of Jack the Ripper: An Unsolvably Sherlock Holmes Mystery", Allen Nelson's "To Joseph, Without Whom?--The Story of an American Publisher and the Future of Sherlock Holmes", and Stu Shiffman's "Holmes, Agatha, and Jeeves". The annual costs $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.), with checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles, from Terri Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332. The 2007 annual also is available, with 290 pages celebrating the society's 25th anniversary with a compilation of the best material published in earlier issues; $24.95 postpaid to the U.S. ($27.95 to Canada, $35.95 elsewhere); other details as above.
569. Dynamite Entertainment's new comic book mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES: YEAR ONE (Nov 10 #5) will launch in January, and Michael Bershad has reported an interesting preview by Cliff Biggers, with artwork by Daniel Indro, in the weekly Comic Shop News <www.csinsider.com/1222.htm>.
570. Steve Hockensmith's WORLD'S GREATEST SLEUTH (New York: Minotaur, 2011; 324 pp., $24.99) is the fifth in his series about Old Red and Big Red Amlingmeyer, who are summoned to the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago for a contest with some of the world's most famous detective, and are confronted with a real mystery when the contest organizer is found murdered, face down in the Mammoth Cheese from Canada; it's interesting and amusing. He has another series for non-Sherlockians: PRIDE AND PREJUDICE AND ZOMBIES; DAWN OF THE DREADFULS was published in 2009, and DREADFULLY EVER AFTER is due in 2011, and his web-site's at <www.stevehockensmith.com>.
571. Dec 10 #5: Michael Dirda delivered the annual Cameron Hollyer Lecture at the Toronto Public Library last year, and his remarks (titled "Arthur Conan Doyle as Essayist and Journalist") were published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. A limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now <www.acdfriends.org>; you can also contact Cliff Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>, and the minimum donation (which includes three issues of the Friends' newsletter "Through the Magic Door") is $25.00. This year's lecture by Peter Calamai ("The Real World of Sherlock Holmes: How Does Historical London of 1895 Compare with the London Described by Arthur Conan Doyle in the Sherlockian Canon?") will be sent to members of the Friends next year.
572. Michael H. McCoy has noted the "Sherlock Holmes Drinking Game", devised by Jill Brumer and published at <www.examiner.com> <www.tinyurl.com/2uopbpz>; she has more on the game, and a recipe for a "Blue Carbuncle" cocktail, at <www.tinyurl.com/2ekx4kb>.
573. The Wildstorm comic book mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS ZOMBIES has been followed by the one-issue story SHERLOCK HOLMES VS JEKYLL/HYDE, written by Jim Edginton and with artwork by Horacio Domingues (Dec., $4.99) and the first issue of a five-issue mini-series SHERLOCK HOLMES VS DRACULA with story by Edginton and artwork by Davide Fabbri (Jan., $3.99); the publisher's web-site is at <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics>.
574. It's no secret that pirated copies of movies are now available on web-sites such as BitTorrent, and it's not surprising that someone keeps track of how people use the web-site. Another web-site, TorrentFreak, has reported that the most frequently downloaded film this year was "Avatar" (with 16,580,000 downloads), with "Kick-Ass" (11,400,000) and "Inception" (9,720,000) next; "Sherlock Holmes" ranked 8th (7,160,000 downloads).
575. Dave Itzkoff blogs about "The Culture at Large" for the N.Y. Times, and reported (Dec. 20) on an interview with Steven Moffat (who is co-creator of the mini-series "Sherlock") about the latest Doctor Who special "A Christmas Carol"; responding to Itzkoff's question "Are you being asked all the time when the Doctor and your Sherlock Holmes will meet up?", Moffat said "I think everyone who's passing me in the streets is suggesting that at the moment. I think there are problems of doing that, because then you would say that Sherlock Holmes lives in the same world as the Doctor, and there are Daleks and all sorts of things. If a Sherlock Holmes story depends on time travel being impossible, it's quite hard if he's a personal friend of the Doctor, isn't it?"
576. I seldom run full-page illustrations, but this captioned photograph of Benedict Cumberbatch in "Sherlock" is well worth it; the photograph (see next page) was submitted by "Greg" to <www.rofrazzi.com>, which is a sub-set of <www.icanhascheezburger.com>, and was spotted by Samantha Wolow. For those who aren't reading this issue ink-on-paper, go to <www.tinyurl.com/26c642n> to see the photograph.

- Jan 11 #1:
1. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York for the celebration of the Great Detective's 157th birthday during the long weekend around Jan. 7, enjoyed nice weather as well as new venues that meant the walk from hotels to most functions were short and easy. People who had rooms on the eighth floor of the Yale Club were pleased to observe that the decorations in the corridor near the elevator included a color photograph of last year's annual dinner at the Club.
  2. The festivities were launched with the Adventuresses' traditional ASH Wednesday supper at O'Casey's and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning (with the usual lunch at McSorley's).
  3. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Midtown Executive Club on Thursday evening was Michael Sims, who edited THE DEAD WITNESS: A CONNOISSEUR'S COLLECTION OF VICTORIAN DETECTIVE STORIES and other anthologies; you will be able to read his amusing paper in The Baker Street Journal's next issue.

4. The William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's was well attended, as always, and featured the Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) in an entertaining new "Holmesian Guide to the Internet" that involved Holmes and Watson in social networking. The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the annual Jan WHIMSEY award (in memory of his wife Jan Stauber) for the most whimsical piece in The Serpentine Muse last year; the winners (Elaine and Joe Coppola, authors of "The Fayetteville Fairies") received a certificate and a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
5. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Yale Club, with Susan Rice offering the first toast to Gail Postal as The Woman. The dinner featured the usual toasts and traditions, John Linsenmeyer's learned discussion of Ronald Knox (this year being the centenary of his landmark paper on "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes"), contest winner James Zych's new look at Moriarty, and Andrew Joffe, Sarah Montague, and Paul Singleton in dramatic portrayals of Arthur Conan Doyle, Dorothy L. Sayers, Sherlock Holmes, and Lord Peter Wimsey. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") announced the Birthday Honours, awarding Irregular Shillings and Investitures to Vinnie Brosnan ("That Gap on That Second Shelf"), Terence Faherty ("Sir Charles Baskerville"), Lyndsay Faye ("Kitty Winter"), Frank Ferry ("Dr. Leon Sterndale"), David W. Houle ("The British Museum"), and Peggy Perdue ("Violet Westbury"). And Andrew Fusco, Steve Rothman, and Les Klinger presented Mike with the first-ever "Wiggie" (a handsome medal designed and executed by Maggie Schpak honoring him as the "benign dictator of the BSI.")
6. Gaslight Gala at the Manhattan Club has "Stately Homes in the Canon" as its theme and featured toasts, songs, and skits that included "States Homes of the Dead and Fictitious" and "A Little Problem: A Three Dimensional Tragedy in Three Acts and Five Prologues".

7. Jan 11 #2: On Saturday morning Covent Garden West (the dealers room at the Roosevelt Hotel) welcomed sellers and buyers, and authors and editors delighted to inscribe or sign their books. And The Beacon Society presented its annual Beacon Award (recognizing someone who introduces young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories) to Peggy Perdue; the society has a fine web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
8. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon reception at the Association of the Bar of the City of New York offered entertainment in the Meeting Room and wining, dining, and conversation in the Great Hall; the entertainment included the usual traditions, and a performance of the song "Let Yourself Fall" from the work-in-progress musical "Dust and Shadow" (based on Lyndsay Faye's book).
9. Michael Pollak was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate and a check for $1000) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year: his article on "The Spies Who Never Were: With Some Observations on Holmes' Retirement". And the Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets (designed by Scott Bond) by June Kinnee, Sue Vizoskie, Elaine Coppola, and Carol Cavalluzzi for Maggie Schpak's replica of the King of Bohemia's flaming beryl brooch, and an auction of literary and artistic donations to the Fund.
10. The principal Saturday-evening event was the "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner arranged by The Curious Collectors of Baker Street at Kennedy's Irish Pub, attended by diners from far (New Zealand) and near (New York's five boroughs), and a goodly crowd gathered at the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' brunch at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant on Sunday morning.
11. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2011 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
12. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 13, 2012. And the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner likely will be on Jan. 7, 2012.
13. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; there will be much more detailed reports in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSI appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $38.50 (to the U.S.) or $49.00 (elsewhere); checks can be sent to the BSI (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077), and credit-card payments are welcome from foreign subscribers. You can also subscribe at the BSI web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSI, and information on the BSI's other publications. And in the meantime, you can also read Scott Monty's report at his blog at <www.bakerstreetblog.com>.
14. The BSI's other publications include three new books, and if you don't have access to the Internet, more information is available from The Baker Street Irregulars, c/o Michael H. Kean, 3040 Sloat Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93953.

15. Jan 11 #3: The Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series continues with BOHEMIAN SOULS, edited by Otto Penzler and with a facsimile of the original manuscript of "A Scandal in Bohemia" and a careful transcript, annotations, commentary, and artwork. All of the Canonical manuscripts are interesting, of course, because they are as close as you can get to the moment of creation when an author writes a story, and this one particularly interesting, because it is written in two different hands (and the "mystery of the second hand" is still unsolved). 199 pp., $35.00 plus shipping to the U.S. and elsewhere.
16. ITALY AND SHERLOCK HOLMES is the new volume in the BSI's International Series ; edited by Enrico Solito and Gianlucca Salvatori, the book has translations of a wide variety of Italian scholarship, from Alessandra Calanchi's "Notes on the Italian Sherlockscape" to Luca Martinelli's "The Great Hiatus: Five Hypotheses for Five Mysteries" to Stefano Guerra's "Between Antigone and Creon: Holmes, Law, and Justice". 208 pp., $39.95 plus shipping to the U.S. and elsewhere.
17. And THE GRAND GAME: A CELEBRATION OF SHERLOCKIAN SCHOLARSHIP: VOLUME ONE: 1902-1959, edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger, is just what the subtitle implies, offering reprints of Ronald A. Knox's cornerstone "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", earlier and later criticism, and King's new introduction "The Grand Game: Textual, Higher, Radical, and Midrashic Criticism". The book is dedicated to the late Bernard Davies, who once wrote, "How wonderful to discover that, even if you are slightly mad, you are not alone," and it demonstrates well just how interesting it can be to play the Grand Game. 437 pp., $39.95 (to the U.S.)/$49.95 (elsewhere) plus shipping.
18. WNYC-FM offers listeners interesting reports on Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians, mainly thanks to Sarah Montague, who interviewed Laurie R. King and Les Klinger about THE GRAND GAME during the birthday festivities; go to <www.culture.wnyc.org/articles/features/2011/jan/13/study-sherlock> to hear what they had to say. And earlier WNYC-FM material still is available on the Internet: <www.wnyc.org/news/articles/120760> aired on Jan. 11, 2009; <www.studio360.org/episodes/2009/12/25> is a one-hour "Studio 360" program; and <www.culture.wnyc.org/articles/features/2010/jan/26/sherlock-love> has audio and video from last year's Gillette Luncheon.
19. RONALD KNOX AND SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ORIGIN OF SHERLOCKIAN STUDIES, edited by Michael J. Crowe (Indianapolis: Gasogene Press, 2011; 126 pp., $32.95), adds to the celebration of Knox's work: there's an interesting introduction by the editor, reprints of five pieces of Sherlockiana written by Knox (including "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes" with annotations by the editor), and (reprinted in full) the letter that Conan Doyle wrote to Knox in 1912. The publisher's address: Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256 <www.wessexpress.com>.

20. "I hate to see you leave/With tears all over your face/Just like Sherlock Holmes/The whole world is on my case" is from a song performed by Johnnie Taylor in 1973 (written by Frank Lee Johnson and Donald Davies), and discovered by Peter Ashman. You can hear Johnnie Taylor performing the song on YouTube at <www.youtube.com>.

21. Jan 11 #4: Tyke Niver has reported a story about Gillette Castle, written by Ben Amato and posted at SalemPatch (a web-site on Long Island) <www.sachem.patch.com/articles/gillette-castle-state-park>; click on the "video" link to view Amato's narrated 7-minute video tour of the Castle (and if you watch to the end you'll see Tyke and Teddie impersonating Gillette and his wife).
22. Sorry about that: I praised Charles Prepolec's colorful web-site "Sherlock Holmes News" (Dec 10 #1); the correct URL is <www.sherlocknews.com>.
23. Edward R. Hamilton, who specializes in remaindered books, offers interesting Sherlockian and Doylean books, DVDs, and CDs at nicely discounted prices ; you can request a catalog (Falls Village, CT 06031) or visit his website <www.edwardrhamilton.com>.
24. Tim Johnson, curator of special collections as well as curator of the Sherlock Holmes collections at the University of Minnesota, maintains an interesting blog called "Special & Rare on a Stick", and his new entry "Sherlock Holmes on U Media" <www.tinyurl.com/2cbujx5> offers an interesting look at what can be done now with digital media: there are two audio files featuring John Bennett Shaw, and scans of three-dimensional objects from his collection.
25. The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection in Toronto also has some nice publicity on the Internet at blogTO <www.tinyurl.com/45mmm32>, with excellent photographs of some of the interesting items in the collection.
26. Does anyone know what happened to Father Francis Hertzberg? He was based in Bebington, Wirral, and active as a dealer in Sherlockiana and Doyleana in the 1970s and 1980s; he also had a letter in the Sunday Telegraph that he signed as coordinator of Backlash: The Man's Movement for True Equality.
27. The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; the winter issue has the second part of Evelyn Herzog's presentation ("Boys and Girls Together") at last year's conference in Minneapolis (her reminiscences about the history of ASH), and the first part of Brad Keefauver's dinner speech ("Changing History"), and much more. It's published quarterly and costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
28. Robert DeFreest reports on his campaign to get Paul-Felix Montez' new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Edwin Drood Mystery" produced: you can see a short trailer at <www.sherlockproject.blogspot.com>, and support the project by purchasing their merchandise at <www.zazzle.com>; search for [sherlock project].
29. Charles E. Henry ("The Lion's Mane") died on Dec. 29. He was a researcher, an educator, and a pioneer in electroencephalography, in 1990 honored with an invitation to be the patron of the Charles E. Henry Society of Electroneurodiagnostic Technologists (which includes a Sherlockian silhouette in its logo). He was highly regarded for his spectacular mustache, his everpresent pipe, and his enthusiasm for Sherlock Holmes, and he received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1980.

30. Jan 11 #5: Gerry Rafferty died on Jan. 4. A Scottish singer and songwriter, he wrote the best-selling hit "Baker Street" (1978), which is not Sherlockian other than the mention of Baker Street; Christopher Roden reported in 2000 that he had heard from Rafferty that he had titled the song in reference to the street in London. You can see him performing the "Baker Street" at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=WkS169P\_Eeo> (Mike McCoy kindly reported the link).
31. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times11-1.htm>, with offers of interesting Sherlockiana, old and new, and a report on the visit by The Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz Society to Clarendon, Iowa (the birthplace of Glenn Miller).
32. The theme of the Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2010" is "Heroism, Courage, and Valor", and the essays range from "Canonical Heroism" (by Pasquale Accardo) to "Holmes Gets a 'C' in Courage" (by Michael Eckman), with nice artwork by Soren Everson (a fourth-grader who is an active member of the society). The 46-page booklet is available from Tim Reich (6809 Pillsbury Avenue, Richfield, MN 55423) for $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
33. The Calabash Press has published many interesting Sherlockian and Doylean book over the years, and Chris Roden reports that he is having a New Year Warehouse Clearance Sale with deeply discounted prices on selected titles. The catalog's available at <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/Calabash Sale.pdf> [and yes, there's a space in that URL] or from the Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada).
34. Forecast: a new (as yet unnamed) pastiche by Anthony Horowitz (from Orion in September); he's the creator of the television series "Foyle's War" and the author of the best-selling "Alex Rider" children's series, and was the keynote speaker at the annual dinner of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London. His web-site's at <www.anthoniyorowitz.com>; the pastiche has the approval of the Conan Doyle Estate.
35. And "Anthony Horowitz Is a Self-Confessed Literary Serial Killer--and the Perfect Choice to Take on Sherlock Holmes" is the headline (presumably not written by Horowitz) on a piece he wrote for The Times (Jan. 22) in which he explains the ten rules he devised "to help avoid the most obvious pitfalls." It's likely still available at <www.thetimes.co.uk>.
36. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: Final Adventure" will be performed by the Circle Players from Feb. 25, to Mar. 13. 416 Victoria Avenue, Piscataway, NJ 08854 (732-968-7555) <www.circleplayers.com>.
37. The campaign to "Give Jeremy Brett a Posthumous BAFTA Award" continues online at <www.bafta4jb.com>. BAFTA is the British Academy of Film & Television Arts, and you're invited to click on "The Petition" to sign one of the three versions: one for actors, directors, producers, and the world of the theater; one for Sherlock Holmes societies and associations, and the third for the general public. Sally Hastings-Thomas reports that they have 3,500 signatures so far, and they hope to have 5,000 soon.

38. Jan 11 #6: Anne Francis died on Jan. 2. She was a child model, and then an actress, best known as Altaira in the film "Forbidden Planet" (1956) and as the star of the television series "Honey West" (1965); in 1978 she made an appearance disguised as a Sherlock Holmes on "Masquerade Party" on channel 2 in New York.
39. WHEELS OF ANARCHY by Max Pemberton (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 397 pp., £14.99/E17.99/$24.95), is a thriller written by a friend of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Bertram Fletcher Robinson and first published in 1908; it was Fletcher Robinson who suggested the story to Pemberton, and Hugh Cooke and Paul Spiring, who edited this reprint, have added a preface and introductory notes that discuss both the book and the connections between the three men. There's a nice web-site at <www.mxpublishing.com> with a nice discount offer for readers of this newsletter; the promo code is [scuttlebutt] (25% off on all books, and a surprise bonus book if you buy two or more books).
40. The Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. is a British-registered company run by descendants of the Doyle family, and beneficiaries of the estate of his daughter, the late Dame Jean Conan Doyle, and there's more information about the company at their web-site <www.conandoyleestate.co.uk>. The three

- directors of the company of Richard Doyle and his sister Cathy Doyle Beggs, children of Sir Arthur's nephew the late Brigadier John Doyle, and Richard Pooley, a step-grandchild of Dame Jean. And among the family members party to it are Charles Foley, grandson of Sir Arthur's sister Ida, and Georgina Doyle, the Brigadier's widow. The agents of CDE Ltd. are Jon Lellenberg in the U.S. and Robert Kirby of United Agents in London.
41. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for Edgars (the winners will be announced at the MWA banquet in New York on Apr. 26. Steve Doyle's SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES has been nominated for best critical/ biographical. And the Robert L. Fish Memorial Award (for best first short story by an American author) has been won by Evan Lewis for "Skylar Hobbs and the Rabbit Man" (a nice comic mystery about a modern would-be Sherlock Holmes that appeared in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine).
  42. There's a nice article about the University of Minnesota's Sherlock Holmes Collections, and their curator Tim Johnson, in the Chronicle of Higher Education (Jan. 16) <www.chronicle.com/article/article-content/125958>.
  43. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' article about Richard Caplan (who corresponded with Sherlock Holmes in the 1990s), Jon Lellenberg's "50 Years Ago" tribute to Julian Wolff (describing his parody "Still Waters" and his work as the Baker Street Irregulars' Commissionaire), and news from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
  44. "Holmes & Watson Save the Empire: A Musical Mystery" will be performed at the Oregon Cabaret Theatre from Apr. 6 through June 5. Written by Jahna Beecham and Malcolm Hillgartner, the play premiered (as "Holmes & Watson: A Musical Mystery") in Milwaukee in 2009. The theater's address is Hargadine Street, Ashland, OR 97520 (541-488-2902) <www.oregoncabaret.com>.

45. Jan 11 #7: Jason Rouby ("Vanderbilt and the Yeggman") died on Jan. 15. He was a journalist, a regional planner, and an enthusiastic Sherlockian, contributing to the literature in the 1960s and 1970s. He was a member of the Maiwand Jezails in Omaha and then founded The Arkansas Valley Investors, Ltd., in Little Rock, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1968. An interesting memorial to him, prepared by his grandson David Aaron Rouby, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kGC7DPUvb5Y>.
  46. Forecast: THE MAGIC BULLET: A LOCKED ROOM MYSTERY FEATURING SHADWELL RAFFERTY AND SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Larry Millett (from the University of Minnesota Press in April).
  47. Some years ago (Nov 94 #2) Gibraltar issued eight one-crown coins honoring "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (six of the designs with Canonical scenes, the seventh showing Watson and Holmes meeting Conan Doyle in Baker Street, and the eighth the Mary Celeste, which is noted as "Gibraltar's own story of the great detective"). Stan Hill is offering a complete set of the cupro-nickel coins for $80.00 (rather less than you'll pay at eBay); you can send him an e-mail message <stanhill@richerassociates.com> or call him at (845-518-9093) to confirm that someone else hasn't already taken advantage of the offer.
  48. "Cold Hearted Murder" is a new pastiche written by Stephen Gaspar, available chapter by chapter on the Internet at <www.stephengaspar.blogspot.com> (the first chapter was posted on Jan. 22, and others will follow).
  49. Tweet, tweet. "Twitter is a rich source of instantly updated information," according to the web-site at <www.twitter.com>. I'm not sure who the first Sherlockian to tweet was (Scott Monty, Laurie R. King, and Les Klinger have been tweeting for a while), but there are now tweets from The Baker Street Journal, thanks to editor Steve Rothman <www.twitter.com/BakerStJournal>.
  50. Further to the item about the miniature of 221B Baker Street in the Samie Jane Keith Collection at the World Museum of Mining (Jul 10 #7), Mike Berdan has visited the museum, and was thoroughly impressed; there's more information about the collection at <www.miningmuseum.org/samiekeith.html>.
  51. Michael Robertson's THE BAKER STREET LETTERS (Jun 09 #3) has been reissued in a trade paperback edition (New York: Minotaur, 2011; 277 pp., $13.99). The second book in the series, THE BROTHERS OF BAKER STREET, will be published by Minotaur in March ($24.99) "the letters to Sherlock Holmes are piling up--including one from someone who claims to be the descendant of Professor James Moriarty".
  52. THE GALACTIC SHERLOCK HOLMES (Don Hobbs' electronic bibliography of translations) has been updated, and edition 11.01 includes Mando'a, making the bibliography truly galactic. Mando'a (which also is known as Mandalorian) is the language of Mandalore, which can be found in the Star Trek "expanded universe" novels written by Karen Traviss. You can read "Te Ge'Tal-Headed League" at <www.tinyurl.com/2dl2saj>. The bibliography on CD costs $15.00 (to the U.S.)/$20.00 (elsewhere), from Don at 2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028 <221b@verizon.net>; Don offers a free CD to those who contribute information on something not already in the bibliography.
53. Jan 11 #8: It's always interesting when Sherlockians bring their own knowledge and experience to bear on Canonical research: Walter W. Jaffee is a captain in the merchant marine and he has written THE SHERLOCK HOLMES ILLUSTRATED CYCLOPEDIA OF NAUTICAL KNOWLEDGE (Palo Alto: Glencannon Books, 2009; 242 pp., $39.95 hardcover and signed, $24.95 paper). He offers informed definitions and descriptions of relevant aspects of the Canon, and he casts his net widely, covering waters both salt and fresh; the book has a bonus appendix with Michael H. Kean's "Who Was Bruce-Partington?"
  54. "Big Nate" is a comic strip written and drawn by Lincoln Peirce, and there was a Sherlockian story arc from Jan. 14 through Jan. 22. you can see the comic strip at <www.comics.com/big\_nate>.
  55. WATSON'S AFGHAN ADVENTURE, by Kieran McMullen (London: MX Publishing, 2010; 216 pp., £9.99/E12.99/$16.95), is a Watsonian pastiche that offers his own account of his adventures in Afghanistan, which were far more colorful than his brief report in the Canon; it's a story of romance and treasure and the battles of the Afghan War.
  56. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ZOMBIE PROBLEM, by Nick S. Thomas (Newport: Swordworks, 2010; 254 pp., $9.99), is a retelling of "The Final Problem". Except for the zombies, and the guns, swords, wholesale slaughter, and narrow escapes.
  57. The official opening ceremony for the new research room at the Conan Doyle Archive in Portsmouth will be held on Feb. 21, with Conan Doyle biographer Andrew Lycett, academic expert Neil McCaw, and other local experts on hand, launching a week of events that will shows the breadth of Richard Lancelyn Green's bequest of his collection to Portsmouth. There's more information available at <www.facebook.com/event.php?eid=179482045406255&index=1>, and soon at <www.conandoyllection.co.uk>.
  58. As (as usual, nowadays) there is more news from the world of film and television. Warner Bros. is hard at work getting publicity for its sequel to "Sherlock Holmes": "Entertainment Tonight" visited the set, and footage of Downey in disguise as a woman went viral on the Internet; <www.youtube.com> has it, if you search for [robert downey jr in drag].
  59. The electronic universe continues to make life interesting, and easier for people who have access to the Internet, and for people who know other people who volunteer to do the technical work required to make things easier. New from and about The Red Circle of Washington is available at the society's web-site <www.redcircledc.org>. And Scott Monty kindly is making this newsletter available at his blog, where you will be able to click on links rather than laboriously type or cut-and-paste URLs into your browser; go to <www.bakerstreetblog.com/search/label/scuttlebutt> to see how much fun this can be (for readers, and for me, since Scott is doing almost all the work). Searchable text of all the issues of Scuttlebutt from the Spermaceti Press since March 1985 continues to be available at Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>.

60. Feb 11 #1: Graham Moore's THE SHERLOCKIAN (Nov 10 #8) has been published in Britain as THE HOLMES AFFAIR (London: Century, 2011; 368 pp., £12.99), perhaps because the publisher thought British book-buyers may not be sure just what a Sherlockian is. The late John Bennett Shaw liked to explain the difference: in the U.S. the Holmesians are called Sherlockians, and in the U.K. the Sherlockians are called Holmesians. I'm not aware of any definitive pronunciation for "Holmesian".
61. Graham continues to update his web-site <www.thesherlockian.com>, where you can watch an interview that ran on the BBC, and listen to an interview by John Rabe (son of the late Bill Rabe) on KPCC-FM (Los Angeles).
62. Flo Gibson died on Jan. 7. After working as an actress on radio, she recording talking books for the blind for the Library of Congress in the mid-1970s and went on to found Audio Book Contractors, which specializes in unabridged readings of the classics. She narrated more than 1,100 books, including many of Conan Doyle's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian works, and 95 of her recordings are available at <www.audible.com>.
63. Paul Spiring continues to update his Bertram Fletcher Robinson web-site at <www.bfronline.biz>, where you can listen to a recent interview on BBC Radio Wales.
64. Carl Heifetz and Mary Ellen Rich spotted 19-year-old Richard Dornbush, who competed (and placed second) in the U.S. Figure Skating Championships last month, skating to Hans Zimmer's music for Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" (2009). You can see him perform at <www.youtube.com>; seach for [dornbush 2011].
65. "Holmes, Watson, Move Forward" was the headline on an AP story in the Albany Times Union (Feb. 26) about the Match Play Championship in Marana, Ariz. J. B. Holmes and Bubba Watson are golfers; they made it to the quarter-finals (competing against each other). Watson won, but lost the semi-finals.
66. "Murder at Mount Hope Mansion" is an interactive dinner-theater performance (with Holmes and Watson in the cast) on weekends at the Mount Hope Estate & Winery from Mar. 4 through Apr. 9 during the Pennsylvania Renaissance Fair; the menu will feature items from Julie Rosenblatt and Fritz Sonnenschmidt's DINING WITH SHERLOCK HOLMES. 2775 Lebanon Road, Mannheim, PA 17545 (717-665-7021) <www.parenfaire.com>.
67. "Enticement from the Adventures" is the theme of this year's "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 8-10; their mailing list is maintained by Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@gmail.com>.
68. Paul Spiring spotted a report in the Guardian (Feb. 1) on "The U.K.'s Crime Hotspots" that includes statistics on London's "crime and antisocial behavior" from a web-site at <www.police.uk>, where you can see how your street or neighborhood is doing. In Dec. 2010, "Baker Street, residence of Sherlock Holmes, recorded 22 offenses--plenty for the sleuth to work on."

69. Feb 11 #2: Lybrary.com, founded in 2000 by Chris Wasshuber, with the idea of making hard-to-get magic books available in electronic form, also has fiction and non-fiction available, but of particular interest to magicians is Stephen Tucker's SHERLOCK ($15.00), which offers instructions for five "self-working Holmes-related mysteries to baffle the cleverest of minds." You can order at <www.lybrary.com/sherlock-p-94740.html>. But you aren't going to be able to use the instructions unless you know how to do a false shuffle. Thanks to Dan Stashower for discovering the book.
70. John Barry died on Jan. 30. He described himself as a "musical dramatist" and composed and conducted music for more than 100 films, winning five Oscars and composing what he called "million-dollar Mickey Mouse music" for many of the James Bond films; his credits include writing and supervising the music for the film "They Might Be Giants" (1971), which starred George C. Scott as a psychotic judge who thinks he's Sherlock Holmes.
71. The late Laverne Sullivan was an accomplished miniaturist, and you can go to <www.home-and-garden.websshots.com/album/207383548yfjQV?start=24> to see two photographs of her Sherlock Holmes room-box, Kelly Blau reports.
72. "The Man Who Murdered Sherlock Holmes" (Jul 10 #3), an interesting one-hour video with interviews with Roger Johnson, Catherine Cooke, Owen Dudley Edwards, and others, was issued earlier this year in Britain; it's now available on a region 1 DVD ($19.99) from Kultur International Films (800-573-3782) <www.kultur.com>. Kultur also offers a region 1 DVD ($14.99) of "The Strange Case of the End of Civilisation as We Know It" (1977), the amusing and weird British television program that starred John Cleese (Arthur Sherlock-Holmes) and Arthur Lowe (Dr. William Watson).
73. David Belke's play "The Reluctant Resurrection of Sherlock Holmes" (1992) is being performed by the Central Alberta Theatre at the Black Knight Inn Dinner Theatre in Red Deer through Mar. 26; 2929 50th Avenue, Red Deer, AB T4R 1H1, Canada (800-661-8793) <www.centralalbertatheatre.ca>.
75. Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" (1978) will be performed by Theatre Three from Aug. 5 through Sept. 5; 2800 Routh Street #168, Dallas, TX 75201 (214-871-3300) <www.theatre3dallas.com>.
76. Synergy Entertainment's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARCHIVE COLLECTION: VOLUME TWO is a three-DVD set ($24.95) that's a worthy companion to the first volume (Nov 09 #7). Produced by Ronnie James, one of the earliest and most energetic collectors of old and not-so-old films, the new set also offers some unusual items, some of them available for the first time on commercial DVD; the more unusual items include the Our Gang comedy "The Mysterious Mystery!" (1924), "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" (1942) and its Spanish version "Sherlock Holmes y La Mira Secreta"), and a (non-Sherlockian) screen test with Nigel Bruce and Leslie Banks (1934).

77. Feb 11 #3: You can add Brazil to the list of countries with Sherlockians, and a Sherlockian society: Carlos Orsi Martinho and two friends have founded the Isadora Klein Amateur Mendicant Society. His address is r. Zacarias de Goes, 404, ap. 92, Jundiai-SP 13201-800, Brazil; his essay on "The Brazilian Villainesses of the Canon" is in the winter 2010 issue of The Baker Street Journal.
78. Eugen Sandow became famous as a champion of "physical culture" and in 1901 he arranged a competition at the Royal Albert Hall to find the man with the world's best physique; Conan Doyle was one of the judges, and wrote a foreword to Sandow's book THE CONSTRUCTION AND RECONSTRUCTION OF THE HUMAN BODY (1907). Ann Marlowe has reported that there's an interesting discussion of Sandow at <www.thehumanmarvels.com/?p=138>, with a link to YouTube video of a short film made of Sandow by the Edison Studios in 1894 (and YouTube has a second film of Sandow made in 1903). And there's much more about Sandow at <www.sandowplus.co.uk/sandowindex.htm>.
79. Ines Hall died on Oct. 29, 2010. She was the widow of Christopher Morley's colleague (and early Irregular) William S. Hall, and she was honored by The Baker Street Irregulars as *The Woman* in 1973.

80. Philip K. Jones has compiled (and continues to compile) an excellent data base for Sherlockian pastiches, parodies, and related fiction; he had entries for 5,520 different items some years ago (Apr 06 #6), and his count now stands at more than 8,500. The data base is interesting and informative, and available on-line at <www.michael-procter.com/holmes>.
81. Tim Johnson continues to add digitized images and audio to the University of Minnesota's new UMedia Archive's section for their Sherlock Holmes Collections <www.umedialib.mn.edu/taxonomy/term/740>; if you search for [sherlock holmes] you will find a nicely indexed display of (at the moment) 484 entries.
82. There has been quite a bit of publicity this month about the appearance of Watson on "Jeopardy" (that's I.B.M.'s computer, rather than the doctor, although some writers don't know that the computer wasn't named for the doctor). Doug Elliott notes an interesting article in the N.Y. Times Magazine <www.nytimes.com/2010/06/20/magazine/20computer-t.html?pagewanted=all> back in June that explains how the computer might respond to "The name of this hat is elementary, my dear contestant." Watson won handily, defeating two reigning (human) champions.
83. Kieran McMullan, author of WATSON'S AFGHAN ADVENTURE (Jan 11 #6) has some interesting posts at <www.kieranmcmullen.wordpress.com>, including (in December) the results of his research into "The Weapons of Maiwand".
84. If you missed the "Bloch Sherlock Holmes Camera" at auction some months ago (Nov 09 #6), Cliff Goldfarb has spotted another one (well, perhaps the same one) offered by Auction Team Breker in Cologne on Mar. 26; it's a magazine-style camera disguised as a small briefcase (dated c.1912). There are photographs at <www.breker.com/english/index.htm>; click on "New Highlights" at the right and then on "Photographica & Film". It's estimated at E10,000 to E15,000, with a reserve of E6,500.

85. Feb 11 #4: THE BROTHERS OF BAKER STREET, by Michael Robertson (New York: Minotaur, 2011; 274 pp., $24.99), is an imaginative sequel to his THE BAKER STREET LETTERS (Jun 09 #3): Reggie Heath, a London barrister who has offices at 221B Baker Street, is pursuing another murderer, and the author of a letter to Holmes from someone who claims to be a descendant of Professor Moriarty, and the mystery offers interesting twists and turns.
86. Anthony Trongone's TRADING IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: BALANCING PROBABILITIES FOR SUCCESSFUL INVESTING (Cedar Falls: Traders Press, 2010; 186 pp., $24.95) uses quotations from the Canon to describe both the market and market forces, and to illustrate his approach to investing: analysis and discipline. The publisher's at <www.traderspress.com>.
87. Randall Stock has reported some important and useful additions to The Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>: downloadable PDF files of Donald A. Redmond's Cumulated Indexes to the BSJ for 1946-1969 and 1970-1993, Randall's tips on searching the indexes on the CD-ROM version of the BSJ for 1946-2000, and Adrian Nebbett's indexes to eight of the books published by The Baker Street Irregulars in recent years.
88. Henry Zecher reports a new 30-minute television series "Portlandia" broadcast by IFC cable; the first episode ("Farm") had a four-minute "Hide and Seek" segment showing the Sherlock Holmes in a game of hide and seek. You watch the segment at <www.ifc.com/videos/portlandia-hide-and-seek>.
89. Crowborough, which for some years has had a handsome statue of Conan Doyle (Apr 01 #3), now has additional honors for him in a local housing estate: the town council has approved the names of Sherlock Shaw and Watson Way for two roads in the Antler Homes development. Crowborough also has a block of flats known as Conan Doyle Court, and in Whitehall Road a Windlesham Close (named after his home on Hurtis Hill).
90. Ken Lanza spotted a report that Christopher Lee received a Fellowship Award from the British Academy of Film and Television Arts this month; it's the highest award that BAFTA bestows. Lee is credited by the Guinness Book of Movie Facts and Feats as the international star with the most screen credits (including Sherlock Holmes, Mycroft Holmes, and Sir Henry Baskerville).
91. "Two Great Capitals--Two Great Detectives" is an exhibition that opened at the Russian State Library for the Arts in Moscow on Feb. 15 and will close on Mar. 5; the capitals are London and Moscow, and the detectives are Sherlock Holmes and Boris Akunin's Erast Fandorin. The Voice of Russia had an interesting article on Feb. 15 <english.ruvr.ru/\_print/44488963.html>, and there's a web-site for the exhibition <www.liart.ru/site/index.php?id=1330> (the web-site's in Russian, but Google Translate will give you a good idea of what it has to say in English, and in other languages).
92. Byook is a French company that has created a new version of "The Speckled Band" in which the text is enhanced with sound and visual effects; it plays on iPods and iPads, and you can see a brief teaser at <www.byook.com>. The cost is $1.99/£1.91, but (according to an analysis in the Scotsman on Feb. 18) you don't get the whole story; a third of the way through have to pay again to find out what happens next.

93. Feb 11 #5: Reported: Michael Foster and Barbara Foster, in their A DANGEROUS WOMAN: THE LIFE, LOVES, AND SCANDALS OF ADAH ISAACS MENKEN, 1836-1968, AMERICA'S ORIGINAL SUPERSTAR (Guilford: Lyons Press, 2011; 368 pp., $24.95), say that "Her memory has captivated Arthur Conan Doyle, Jerome Kern, Billy Rose, and George Cukor, and she has been played in movies by Sophia Loren, Charlotte Rampling, and almost by Marilyn Monroe." They suggest that Irene Adler was a "miniature portrait" by Conan Doyle, but do not mention William D. Jenkins, who proposed in the Mar. 1986 issue of The Baker Street Journal that Menken was the prototype for Irene Adler; Charlotte Rampling never played Menken on the screen, but did play Irene in the television film "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1979).
94. OTHER PEOPLE'S BOOKS: ASSOCIATION COPIES AND THE STORIES THEY TELL (Chicago: The Caxton Club, 2011; 214 pp., $75.00) will be published next month; it's a collection of essays, including Jon Lellenberg's "The Hound upon My Bookshelf", which is Vincent Starrett's own (and extra illustrated) copy of the first edition. The book's available at <www.oakknoll.com>, where there links to an excerpt from the book, and to the table of contents.
95. The Caxton Club and the Newberry Library will hold a symposium on the book at the Newberry (60 West Walton Street in Chicago) on Mar. 19; it's open to the public, and details are available at <www.caxtonclub.org>. You can also click on "Meetings and Speakers Schedule" for a catalog of DVDs of Caxton Club presentations available for purchase, including "Sherlock Holmes, Vincent Starrett, and Literary Memory" (Jon Lellenberg in 1998), "Spitons and Spiritualism: Conan Doyle in America" (Daniel Stashower in 2001), and "Mothers, Don't Let Your Sons Grow Up to Be Biographers" (Jon Lellenberg in 2008).
96. Stephen Gaspar is continuing the chapter-by-chapter posting of his pastiche "Cold Hearted Murder" (Jan 11 #1) at <www.stephengaspar.blogspot.com>, and there's a promo video for the book at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ydPh44KG1I>.
97. Detective Chimp wore Sherlockian costume in the first issue of the comic-book mini-series THE HELMET OF FATE (Feb 07 #6), and there's now a hand-painted 4-inch lead figurine, accompanied by a magazine detailing the history of the character (spotted by Mitch Higurashi); it's available at eBay <www.ebay.com> and elsewhere.
98. Scott Monty has launched an effort to catalog the "Sherlockian Entities on Facebook", where you can find a list (with links) and a form you can use to report additions <www.bakerstreetblog.com/p/holmes-on-facebook.html>. It is fascinating to see the Sherlockian aspects of social networking.
99. Greg Darak notes that the world-famous detective Merlock Jones appeared (in Sherlockian costume) in E. C. Segar's "Popeye" 1930s comic strip, and that the strips have been reprinted in POPEYE, VOL. 3: LET'S YOU AND HIM FIGHT! (Seattle: Fantagraphic, 2008; 168 pp. $29.99). Greg also reports that the book is available for $9.95 from Edward R. Hamilton (Box 15, Falls Village, CT 06031) <www.edwardrhamilton.com>.

100. Feb 11 #6: Laurie King reports that her schedule's now set for four years: 2011 will see Mary Russell in THE PIRATE KING, with another Mary Russell in 2012, a sequel to the non-Russell TOUCHSTONE in 2013, and another Mary Russell in 2014. Her web-site at <www.laurierking.com> always is interesting; one of the features is A MARY RUSSELL COMPANION, a 58-page booklet you can download free.
101. A new set of miniature versions of the Canon, created by Lee Ann Borgia, is available at <www.picturetrail.com/leeann1948>, where she offers miniatures of a long list of authors; her Sherlockian miniatures (priced from $11.75 to $19.50) are shown at <www.picturetrail.com/sfx/album/view/3194486>.
102. The stick figure of Sherlock Holmes on the note cards from Bas Bleu (Aug 10 #3) first appeared in Jeffrey Metzner's book STICK: GREAT MOMENTS IN ART, HISTORY, FILM, AND MORE (Clarkson Potter, 2006) (and published in Britain by Aurum Press, 2007) it's out of print, but readily available from on-line booksellers.
103. "Harry Houdini and Arthur Conan Doyle get drawn into investigating a series of brutal murders in 1920s Los Angeles" in a graphic novel EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN written by Jon Vinson and illustrated by Marco Roblin and published by Dub Comics in 2010; H. P. Lovecraft appears. It's available as a four-issue comic-book mini-series and as a collected edition ($18.00) from Indy-Planet <www.indyplanet.com>. "Charles Fort will be a big part of EDGE OF THE UNKNOWN VOL. 2," Vinson promises.
104. Forecast: THE BASKERVILLE LEGACY: A CONFESSION, by John O'Connell (due from Short Books in Sept.); "a thrilling exploration of friendship and rivalry, love and lust, ambition and the limits of talent" (the story of how Conan Doyle and Fletcher Robinson collaborated to write "The Hound of the Baskervilles").
105. "Her planned novel is inspired by Sherlock Holmes and American crime writer Mickey Spillane," according to the Guardian (Jan. 27) in a story about Patti Smith, who is a singer, song-writer, poet, and author of more than a dozen books; this will be her first detective story.
106. Oh for the days when Britain invented the penny post: their postage rates will increase in April. At the moment a one-ounce letter inside the country costs £0.41/$0.65, and to the U.S. £1.46/$2.35 (by airmail) or £1.00/$1.61 (by surface). In the U.S. a one-ounce letter costs $0.44 inside the country, and $0.98 to Britain.
107. Further to the various celebrations this year of the centenary of his paper "Studies on the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", Michael Procter reports that there's a Ronald Knox Society of North America, with a nice discussion of his contributions to detective literature <www.ronaldknoxsociety.com>.
108. IDW Publishing has now published three volumes of its SHERLOCK HOLMES series, with striking artwork by Kelley Jones; they're sometimes described as graphic novels, but in reality they present the text (handsomely designed), with full-color illustrations. They're priced at $16.99 or $17.99, and you can see Jones' art at the publisher's web-site <www.idwpublishing.com>.

109. Feb 11 #7: "From 1984 to 1994, a perfect storm of people and circumstances changed the face of animation forever," is Disney's description of a 86-minute documentary "Waking Sleeping Beauty" (2009), which includes footage from "The Great Mouse Detective" (1984); the film premiered at the Telluride Film Festival on Sept. 5, 2009, and was released by Walt Disney Home Entertainment on a DVD ($29.99) last November (the trailer can be seen at the Internet Movie Data Base).
110. Neil Hunt and Stephen Harvey Johnson have launched an Internet-only comedy series called "The Blog of Dr. Watson" at <www.drwatsonsblog.com>, with a brief video teaser.
111. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: Final Adventure" is being performed at the Grand Theatre through Mar. 5; Chris Redmond has seen the production, and recommends it. 471 Richmond Street, London, ON N6A 3E4, Canada (800-265-1593) <www.grandtheatre.com>.
112. Entertainment news: Variety reported (Feb. 9) that DreamWorks purchased a script for "Voices from the Dead" from J. Michael Straczynski (who created and wrote the television series "Babylon 5" and "Jeremiah"). The project "centers on a fictional story of magician Harry Houdini and Sherlock Holmes creator Arthur Conan Doyle using a psychic to solve a set of murders in New York during the 1920s."
113. And there's more: according to the web-site Deadline Hollywood (Feb. 11), the Syfy television channel is at work on a dramatic series "Among the Spirits" based on a self-published graphic novel by Steve Valentine and Paul Chart; the series was described as a turn-of-the-century "Fringe" in which Houdini and Conan Doyle, "with the help of a female cop, try to solve bizarre murders and strange occurrences that look like hauntings and other supernatural events using steampunk technology."
114. And yet still more: according to the Hollywood Reporter (Feb. 18), Summit Entertainment has hired Noah Oppenheim to write a script based on William Kalush and Larry Sloman's THE SECRET LIFE OF HOUDINI: THE MAKING OF AMERICA'S FIRST SUPERHERO (Mar 07 #5); the book suggested that Houdini acted as a spy for Britain, and that Houdini's death was not accidental, but rather deliberate murder, by a spiritualist organization that sought revenge for his unmasking of fraudulent mediums (with, of course Conan Doyle involved). The paper added that "the studio is not looking to make a biopic but rather an action thriller featuring a character who is part Indiana Jones and part Sherlock Holmes, documenting his rise as a magician along with his covert involvement with the Secret Service."
115. Finally, Warner Bros. has announced that "Sherlock Holmes 2" (the working title for the sequel to Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes") will be released as "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" on Dec. 16. One assumes they are not worried about confusing people who recall the book written by Mark Fairan-Wada and Lance Williams: GAME OF SHADOWS: BARRY BONDS, BALCO, AND THE STEROIDS SCANDAL THAT ROCKED PROFESSIONAL SPORTS (2007).
116. Mar 11 #1: The number of Sherlockian societies with web-sites continues to grow, and The Pleasant Places of Florida have done well at capturing and presenting their history and their archives <www.ppf.nl>. If you'd like to browse web-sites of other societies, Chris Redmond has an excellent set of links at his "Web Portal about the Great Detective" <www.sherlockian.net>; click on [Societies and events].
117. "Ha Ha Holmes! The Beast of the Blistervilles" opened at the Croydon Warehouse Theatre on Mar. 11 and will run through Apr. 3, then going on tour in Britain; it's a "gripping comedic thriller" from London-based Jamie Wilson Productions, and there's more information (including tour dates) at their web-site <www.jamiewilsonproductions.com> (reported by Phil Attwell).
118. Further to the discussion of miniature versions of the Canon (Feb 11 #6), Don Pollock reports a miniature THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES from Miniaturbuchverlag Leipzig (2007), bound in leather and in two sizes: 18x25 mm ($69.00 in a gilt box) and 38x53 mm ($29.00 in a slipcase and $44.80 gilt-edged). You can see both sizes in color at <www.minibook.de>; their mailing address is Isarweg 2 c, D-85375 Neufarn bei Freising, Germany.
119. Jane Russell died on Feb 28. She made her movie debut and achieved instant stardom in "The Outlaw" (1943), and was once introduced by Bob Hope on radio as "the two and only Jane Russell." She made many more films, including "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" (1953), in which she told Elliott Reed (who played Detective Malone), "Go away, Sherlock! You're a wrong guy!"
120. Andrew Lane was interviewed in the e-mail newsletter of Andrew Gulli's The Strand Magazine, and said that A STUDY IN SCARLET was one of the first two books he ever bought with his own pocketed money, around 1974, when he was 11 or 12 years old; it was a second-hand 1930s reprint without a

- cover. Lane has completed the third book in his YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES series, and has signed a contract for a total of six books. The magazine's web-site is at <www.strandmag.com>.
121. Karen Murdock offers e-mail copies of her paper on "Figures of Speech Found in the Sherlock Holmes Canon", giving definitions and examples of 35 figures of speech such as alliteration, aposiopesis, hendiadys, polysyndeton, simile, and zeugma. Her e-mail address is <murdock1212@gmail.com>.
  122. Karen also notes the GrammarDog Guides, on-line exercises that can be used to teach grammar, style, and proof-reading, available on CDs or as Internet downloads ($14.95 each); go to <www.grammardog.com/samples.php> to see samples of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "Sherlock Holmes Stories".
  123. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTED EDITION was published by John Murray and Jonathan Cape in 1974 in nine volumes with introductions by noted authors, and is well-known to Sherlockian collectors; the publishers extended their uniform set from 1975 to 1979 to include non-Sherlockian titles, and they are worth pursuing: SIR NIGEL (introduction by Mary Renault), THE WHITE COMPANY (Anthony Burgess), THE EXPLOITS OF GERARD (Fitzroy MacLean), ADVENTURES OF GERARD (Elizabeth Longford), and THE LOST WORLD (Alistair Maclean).

  124. Mar 11 #2: Jane Royle died on Dec. 13. She was a highly-regarded film and television make-up artist who specialized in prosthetics she called "the stickies". Her long list of film credits included "Who Framed Roger Rabbit", "Harry Potter", "Batman Begins", and "Young Sherlock Holmes"; the Guardian said in her obituary (Mar. 7) that for "Murder by Decree" (1979) she simulated "the wrenched-out innards of prostitutes killed by Jack the Ripper."
  125. The Livestock Players Youtheatre will present Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the City Arts Studio Theatre in Greensboro on May 19-22. 200 North Davis Street, Greensboro, NC 27401 (336-335-6426) <www.thedramacenter.com>.
  126. MPI Home Video has issued "The Complete Sherlock Holmes Collection" on DVDs (Apr 03 #4) with high-quality restorations of all 14 Rathbone/Bruce films, and with additional features that include new commentary by Patricia Morrison on "Dressed to Kill"; this month MPI released the collection as a highdefinition set of five Blu-ray disks ($129.98).
  127. Ev Herzog spotted an advertisement for "Peeking Duck", one of a series of "Figures of Speech" sculptures by Marsha Tosk; it is hand-painted polyresin (with monocle) and 19 inches high, and costs $950.00. It's also far more attractive in full color at <www.mashatosk-figuresofspeech.com>, where you can see other sculptures in her series.
  128. The late Ian Richardson's ashes were buried last year at the new Royal Shakespeare Theatre in Stratford-upon-Avon, in the foundations in front of the stage, at the bottom of the central aisle, according to a story in The Times (Nov. 22), noted by John Baesch; his son Miles, also an actor, said "My father will be in the front row for every performances and just where liked to be, center stage." Richardson was Sherlock Holmes in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" (1983), and Dr. Joseph Bell in "Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes" (2000); he died in 2007.
  129. Did anyone know or know of Nicholas Francis Sardone? He was born in 1948, and died last month in Branchville, N.J., and he was an energetic collector of Sherlockiana, old and new (and was just as enthusiastic about "Snoopy" collectibles).
  130. Ken Lanza has discovered Street Jewelry Place at <www.jewelryonstreet.com>; it's a clearing house for people who sell more than jewelry, but their offers include "Baker Street Irregulars custom jewelry". You can also search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle].
  131. Reported: THE QUEEN'S DOLLS' HOUSE, by Lucinda Lambton (The Royal Collection, 2010, £12.95); in an excerpt in the Telegraph Magazine (Oct. 16), she notes that Ursula Ridley, daughter of the house's designer Edwin Lutyens, remembered Conan Doyle arriving at the Lutyens' home in Mansfield Street to hand-deliver the manuscript of the pastiche "How Watson Learned the Trick" (which is still in the library of the dolls' house at Windsor).

  132. Mar 11 #3: The first time that Peter Cook and Dudley Moore played Holmes and Watson was in a six-minute skit "Sherlock Holmes Investigates" in their ATV television series "Goodbye Again" in 1968, well before their version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1978); the script for the skit was published in GOODBYE AGAIN: THE DEFINITIVE PETER COOK AND DUDLEY MOORE (Dec 06 #7), and the skit itself is available in the British DVD "The Very Best of Goodbye Again" (region 2 only). The skit is no more serious than the later film.
  133. Lloyd Rose discovered a web-site with some interesting Sherlockian artwork <www.spicysteweddemon.deviant.art.com/gallery/23656984> (sorry: black-and-white won't do justice to the full-color art at the web-site).
  134. "You are the stormy petrel of crime, Watson," Sherlock Holmes exclaimed (in "The Naval Treaty"). Sonia Fetherston has reported a story in the Portland Oregonian about two Portland birders who discovered a new species of stormy petrel during a visit to Chile. To read the story (and see a photograph), go to <www.oregonlive.com> and search for [storm petrel].
  135. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" runs through Apr. 17 at the Pacifica Spindrift Players Theatre (1050 Crespi Drive, Pacifica, CA 94044) (650-359-8002) <www.pacificaspindriftplayers.org>.
  136. Laurie King is continuing to post at <www.astudyinsherlock.com> about the new anthology that she and Les Klinger are editing for Bantam Books. You can see the cover, and a list of contributors, and late-breaking news: the book will include Les' Twiterview (that's an interview in 140 characters) with Mary Russell.
  137. Carl Heifetz notes that Brian Crane's "Pickles" (Mar. 8) was almost Canonical: Sherlock Holmes said (in "A Study in Scarlet") that "I consider that a man's brain originally is like a little empty attic, and you have to stock it with such furniture as you choose."
  138. Ken Ludwig's new comedy-mystery-thriller "The Game's Afoot, on Holmes for the Holidays" was performed at a staged reading in Washington (Sep 10 #1), and it's nice news indeed that the play will have its world premiere at the Cleveland Play House, Nov. 25 to Dec. 18; 8500 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, OH 44105 (216-795-7000) <www.clevelandplayhouse.com>. It's a murder mystery set in William Gillette's home, and it's wonderfully hilarious.

  139. Mar 11 #4: The 9th annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Apr. 15-17; there will be a dinner at the Sheraton Four Points in Schiller Park, the 52nd annual running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. The registration form is available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
  140. Danielle Corsetto's web-comic (that's an on-line comic strip) "Girls with Slingshots" featured Jamie McJack in Sherlockian costume as a "Romance Detective" (Dec 10 #4); Tina Rhea notes that a necklace pendant's available in antique silver ($25.00) from the Girls with Slingshots Shop at <www.etsy.com/listing/70660207/girls-with-slingshots-necklace-jamie>.
  141. The chapter "On Dress and Other Matters" in Michael Harrison's THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1972) offered an excellent summary of the clothes that Holmes and others wore, and now Jason Maclochlainn provides a detailed and discussion of how men's clothing actually was made in THE VICTORIAN TAILOR: AN INTRODUCTION TO PERIOD TAILORING (New York: St. Martin's Griffin, 2011; 160 pp., $29.99); the British edition, from Batsford, is VICTORIAN TAILORING: TECHNIQUES AND PATTERNS. Maclochlainn studied period training manuals and examined surviving garments to learn what tailors did, and explains in detail how costumers can create appropriately Victorian clothing reflecting a time when suits, vests, and coats were made to measure.

142. The Arizona Theatre Company has commissioned a new play by Jeffrey Hatcher: "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" is based on Robert Louis Stevenson's story "The Suicide Club" and involves the club's new member, Sherlock Holmes. The play will be performed in Tucson (Sept. 17-Oct. 8) and Phoenix (Oct. 13-30); there's more information available at the ATC web-site <www.arizonatheatre.org>.
143. Allan Foster's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND CONAN DOYLE LOCATIONS: A VISITOR'S GUIDE (Jefferson: McFarland & Co., 2011; 156 pp., $35.00) offers a delightful exploration of Scotland and England; the author is a writer and tour operator in Edinburgh, where there's much to be found that relates to Arthur Conan Doyle, Joseph Bell, and others. And there's a lot to be learned from the coverage of England (both the counties and London). Foster would be a fine guide to it all, and his book is well-researched, written, and illustrated.
144. Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is at being performed at the Chautauqua Playhouse through Apr. 17; 5325 Engle Road, Carmichael, CA 95608 (916-489-7529) <www.cplayhouse.org>. And then at the Nevada Theatre from Apr. 22 through May 15; 401 Broad Street, Nevada City, CA 95959 (530-265-6161) <www.nevadatheatre.com>.
145. Paul W. Nash's pastiche "The Adventure of the Scarlet Thorn" was featured in the Feb. 2010 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (the annual tribute to the birthday of Sherlock Holmes), and it's one of seven pastiches in his collection THE REMAINS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Moreton-in-the-Marsh: Strawberry Books, 2011; 229 pp., £12.00); there's more adventure than mystery in some of the stories, and one might infer from the author's "editor's note" that there may be more tales to be told.
146. Mar 11 #5: Michael Gough died on Mar. 17. He made his acting debut at the Old Vic School in 1936, and went on to a long career on stage, screen, and television as a supporting actor. He was best known as Alfred the butler in four of the "Batman" films (1989-1997), and he played Russel Partridge in "The Case of the Perfect Husband" (1955) in the Ronald Howard television series, and the Governor in "Cell 13" (1973) in the series "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes".
147. George John ("Sir Jasper Meek") died on Feb. 6. He had a long career as a doctor, in South Dakota, Nebraska (where he encountered the world of Sherlockians in The Maiwand Jezails), and Texas. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1969.
148. Barnes & Noble continues to issue inexpensive reprints, including THE HORROR OF THE HEIGHTS AND OTHER STRANGE TALES (hardbound, $6.98) has 14 of Conan Doyle's tales of the macabre.
149. Margaret Newman Turner's ARTHUR, LOUISE, AND THE TRUE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Almeley: Logaston Press, 2010; 98 pp., £10.00) tells the story of the Hound of the Vaughans of Hergest Court, and much more. The author is the daughter of Cecil P. Turner, who wrote to Conan Doyle enquiring if the family legend had inspired THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES; Conan Doyle replied that "My story was really based on nothing save a remark of my friend Fletcher Robinson's that there was a legend about a dog on the Moor connected with some old family. I had no place in my eye." The letter was sold at auction in 2008 for £3,700 (plus premium and tax), and the new book explores some additional connections: Hergest Court is in Herefordshire (on the border with Wales), and Mrs. Turner believes that Conan Doyle's first wife, Louise Hawkins, whose family owned land in the area, told the story of the spectral hound to her husband, and that her support also was important when he wrote the early Sherlock Holmes stories. Mrs. Turner relies on Georgina Doyle's OUT OF THE SHADOWS for family history, but tells interesting stories of her own about the Hawkins and Vaughan families. There's a BBC television news story at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=uxm1zgZl6i0> with an interview about Mrs. Turner and her book.
150. Derham Groves, the first Australian to become a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (in 1985, as "Black Jack of Ballarat"), has had a long career as architect, artist, and writer, and (thanks to the Internet) you can see his interest work at <www.derhamgroves.com/category/sherlock-holmes>, <special.lib.umn.edu/rare/exhibit/holmesgardens.html>, and <www.youtube.com>; search for [murderous melbourne] at YouTube.
151. Go to <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ztkWKwBi2bQ> to see "The Adventures of Sherlock Hounds", an imaginative and amusing promotional video for the "Catch a Clue" summer reading program in the library system of King County, Wash.
152. The Byook version of "The Speckled Band" (created by a French company that enhances the text with sound and visual effects) is an interesting demonstration of how modern technology can be used by people who have iPods and iPads. You can see a brief teaser at <www.byook.com>, and the app can be downloaded for $1.99/£1.91; the first half of the story is available now, and the second half in April (no additional charge).
154. Matthew Ward and Jimmy Black became famous when they solved the 'Jack the Ripper' murders in WR.Park's FATAL INCISION (2010), and PHANTOM HOUNDS: THE CURSE OF THE BASKERVILLES RETURNS (Castroville: Black Rose Writing, 2011; 236 pp., $16.95) is the next adventure, bringing them to Dartmoor to solve a new mystery that involves a brief meeting with Sherlock Holmes, renewed danger to Sir Henry Baskerville, and (more than half the book) a perilous excursion to Egypt. The author's web-site is at <www.wrparkbooks.com>.
155. The 30th annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium, to be held in Dayton, Ohio, on May 13-16, has the theme "Holmes: Then, Now, & Forever"; Cathy Gill manages their mailing list (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
156. The Wildstorm comic-book five-issue mini-series VICTORIAN UNDEAD: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS DRACULA, written by Jim Edginton and with artwork by Horacio Domingues is complete with the May issue; presumably a graphic novel will appear soon. <www.dccomics.com/wildstorm/comics> is the URL for the publisher's web-site.
157. In other comic-book news, Image Comics will begin a MORIARTY mini-series, written by Daniel Corey and drawn by Anthony Diecidue, scheduled in stores in May; there's more information, and cover art, at Charles Prepolec's website at <www.sherlocknews.com>.
158. H.R.F. Keating died on Mar. 27. He was a fine writer, best known for his "Inspector Ghoti" stories, and an expert commentator on mystery and crime fiction. He also wrote Sherlockian pastiches, and co-wrote the Christopher Lee television film "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" (1991), and his THE WORLD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1979) was a splendid piece of scholarship.
159. Mitch Higurashi and Yuichi Hirayama report that Sherlockians in Japan all seem to have survived the earthquake and tsunami. There's still great concern about the reactors and fuel-rod pools, of course, and much to be done to assist refugees from the area directly affected.
160. Darlene Cypser's THE CRACK IN THE LENS (Morrison: Foolsap & Quill, 2010; 286 pp., $14.95) is a well-written story of Sherlock Holmes' early life in Yorkshire, with his father Siger Holmes, his brothers Sherrinford and Mycroft, his tutor Prof. James Moriarty, and a local girl named Violet Rushdale. There's romance and adventure, nice local flavor, and a good look at what set young Sherlock on the path to becoming what he is in the Canonical tales. Cypser has an excellent web-site at <www.crackinthelens.com>, with excerpts and easy access to various ways to buy the book.

161. Apr 11 #1: Karen Ellery reports that WGBH-TV has a splendid web-site for various Sherlockian programs that have aired on "Masterpiece Theatre": "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Silk Stocking" (2005), "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (2002), and "Murder Rooms" (1999 and 2001). Visit the - over-all web-site at <www.pbs.org/wgbh/masterpiece/silkstocking/retro.html> to find all sorts of useful content, including a comparison of three versions of a scene in "The Hound of the Baskervilles": the text from the story, the script, and video of the scene as broadcast.

162. Al Gregory notes that the Undershaw Preservation Trust is selling items on eBay to benefit their campaign: a badge (lapel pin) for £7.99 and a set of postcards (one signed by their patron Mark Gatiss) for £51.00. You can go to <www.ebay.com> or <www.ebay.co.uk> and search for [undershaw].
  163. Eric Simonson's play "Fake" premiered at a reading in New York in 2008 and was performed in Chicago in 2009, and tells the story of the Piltown hoax ("it's a time-traveling mystery drama revolving around a house party held by Sir Arthur Conan"); it was recorded by L.A. Theatre Works and released in their Audio Theatre Collection last year as a 2-CD set ($25.95); Francis Guinan played Conan Doyle. Their recording of "The Lost World" (adapted by John de Lancie and Nat Segalof) was issued as a single CD in 2009 ($13.22) The company's web-site is at <www.latw.org>.
  164. <www.zavvi.com> is an excellent British source for discounted DVDs, including some older Sherlockian and Doylean DVDs not often seen at American websites.
  165. THE MUPPET SHOW: SEASON ONE (SPECIAL EDITION) is a four-DVD set issued in 2005 ($39.99) with the original pitch reel, the original pilot, and all of the season's programs, including the one with Joel Grey as the guest star, which is of interest because it included "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Disappearing Clues" (starring Rowlf as Holmes, Baskerville the Hound as Watson, Miss Piggy as the maid, and Gorgon Heap as the butler). And if you don't remember it, the reason is that it was cut from the program when it aired in the U.S. on Oct. 18, 1976. But the segment did air in Britain and fortunately is included in the set of DVDs.
  166. YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES: RED LEECH (London: Macmillan Children's Books, 2011; 339 pp., £6.99) is the second book in Andrew Lane's well-written series for young adults; Sherlock Holmes is 14 years old and involved in desperate adventures. The series has an excellent web-site at <www.youngsherlock.com>, with features such as the original proposal and author's notes, and (if you sign up for their newsletter) deleted scenes and other items of interest. An American edition is due later this year. And the next book in the series will be BLACK ICE.
  167. Anthony D. P. Mann's film "Sherlock Holmes and the Shadow Watchers" (Jun 10 #1) had its premiere at the Empire Theatre in Kingston on Apr. 6; the film is scheduled for release on DVD later this year. You can see a six-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=vxqN3tfdIp8&feature=player\_embedded>. Mann's web-site is at <www.anthonypmann.com>.

168. Apr 11 #2: "The Writing of my Autograph/Makes me nearly frantic/But all is well today. We're half/Way over the Atlantic!!" That's a bit of verse that Conan Doyle wrote to accompany his autograph on Apr. 5, 1922 (aboard the *Baltic*, en route to the United States for the lecture tour he described in OUR AMERICAN ADVENTURE). Framed and glazed, and with a photograph of Sir Arthur, it was offered at auction by William J. Jenack on Apr. 17, estimated at $800-$1200.
  169. "As Sherlock Holmes would have no doubt said to his sidekick, 'Baker Street Recordings are mighty spiffing, it's elementary, my dear Watson,'" is the motto of a company spotted by Jerry Margolin. It's based in Leeds, and was founded in 2006 by Paul Hardy and Jacob Kelly; they specialize in "house music" (a style of electronic dance music), and you can go to <www.bakerstreetrecordings.com> to listen to some of their musicians. Downloads can be purchased at <www.amazon.com> and other web-sites (where they use a different version of the silhouette).
  170. "Set in a Victorian world where Sherlock Holmes is king, four lesser-known detectives are pitted against one another," is the premise of "The Rivals", a BBC radio drama written by Chris Harrald and due in October (spotted by Phil Attwell).
  171. Information for people who don't have e-readers but want to read e-books: Darlene Cypser reports that Amazon is happy to let you download free software so that you can read Kindle editions of books on your desk-top or laptop or just about any hand-held device. Barnes & Noble does the same for their Nook editions.
  172. "H2G2: The Guide to Life, the Universe, and Everything" is an interesting BBC on-line collaborative encyclopedia project (similar to a wiki), and one of entries is an informative discussion of the film "The Lost World" (1925) <www.bbc.co.uk/h2g2/entry/A83345132>. The web-site was founded in 1999 by Douglas Adams (author of THE HITCHHIKER'S GUIDE TO THE GALAXY), and if you would like to buy it, it's for sale: the BBC announced in January that the BBC Online budget will be cut by £34 million, and they plan to dispose of H2G2. The BBC is funded by license fees that no longer increase to match the inflation rate (a license for a color television set now is £145.50 a year, and a black-and-white set costs £49.00 a year).
  173. Ask Jeeves (the British version of the web-search Ask.com) commissioned a survey after noticing an increase in the number of queries received asking for biographies and other personal details such as a family tree for fictional characters, according to an article in the Daily Mail (Apr. 5); the survey polled 1,000 adults discovered that 21% thought Sherlock Holmes was a real person. One third of those surveyed believed that Long John Silver was real, and Robin Hood won the support of two thirds.
  174. Additional thanks to Gary for news of Conan Doyle's amusing appearance on "A Prairie Home Companion with Garrison Keillor" on American Public Media (Oct. 16, 2010), in a six-minute segment from "the adventures of Ruth Harrison, reference librarian" You can read the script (and listen to the segment) at <www.prairiehome.publicradio.org/2010/10/16/scripts/ruth.shtml>.

175. Apr 11 #3: Larry Millett's pastiches set in Minnesota began with SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (Sep 96 #5) and went on through four more books, eventually involving colorful Saint Paul saloon keeper Shadwell Rafferty, who also is an ingenious detective. THE MAGIC BULLET (University of Minnesota Press, 2011; 347 pp., $24.95) offers a complicated locked-room murder mystery investigated and eventually solved by Rafferty, with a bit of assistance from Holmes from London.
  176. The University of Minnesota Press also is reissuing Millett's earlier pastiches, starting with SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE RED DEMON (319 pp.) and SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ICE PALACE MURDERS (320 pp.); $14.95 each. Holmes and Watson travel to Minnesota to solve both mysteries.
  177. Kelly Blau has discovered Watson, who is a cute little raccoon as well as an "interactive story buddy" designed to help young people learn to read: you read the book aloud and whenever he hears certain phrases he responds. For $34.89 you get Watson and the first book (WATSON AND THE CASE OF THE SNEAKY STEALER), and he will interact with two more books (THE MISSING ACORN and THE LITTLE LOST CATERPILLAR). You can see Watson in action in a threeminute video available from Hallmark at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=65QVYefR2ul>.
  178. THE HOUSE OF SILK is the title of the new pastiche by Anthony Horowitz (Jan 11 #5), due from Orion Books (in the UK) and from Mulholland Books (in the US) in November; Horowitz has a three-minute teaser video at <www.amazon.co.uk>.
  179. WILLIAM GILLETTE, AMERICA'S SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Henry Zecher (Bloomington: Xlibris, 2011; 733 pp., $23.95), is a splendid biography of the actor/playwright who did so much to make Sherlock Holmes so popular. There was much more to Gillette's life and career than Sherlock Holmes, and the author has told the story well, with careful research and readable style; recommended. The author's web-site is at <www.henryzecher.com>.
  180. BuzzerBeater is an "on-line basketball simulation game" discovered by Karen Murdock, who reports that one of them teams is the Baker Street Irregulars, managed by Sherlock Holmes <www.buzzerbeater.com/team/28544/overview.aspx>.

181. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SHAKESPEARE LETTER, by Barry Grant (Sutton: Severn House, 2011; 185 pp., $27.95), is a sequel to THE STRANGE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Mar 10 #4); Sherlock Holmes, revived after having been frozen in a Swiss glacier for 90 years, is again detecting in London, assisted by James Wilson, a correspondent invalidated home after an assignment in Afghanistan, and this time they're attempting to recover a letter that may or may not have been written by Shakespeare, and that involves them in an intricate international conspiracy.
182. Apr 11 #4: The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Tim Johnson's report on the Sherlockian and Doylean aspects of the new UMedia Archive, Julie McKuras' "100 Years Ago" discussion of the cartoonist TAD (Thomas Aloysius Dorgan), Dick Sveum's "50 Years Ago" review of Peter A. Ruber and William Swift Dalliba's THE DETECTIVE SHORT STORY (A BIBLIOGRAPHY), and news from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
183. Samantha Wolov has reported that Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES will be found at Dan Wilbur's amusing web-site at <www.betterbooktitles.com>; according to Wilbur, his blog provides assistance to "people who do not have thousands of hours to read book reviews of blurbs or first sentences. I will cut through all the cryptic crap, and give you the meat of the story in one condensed image. Now you can read the greatest literary works of all time in mere seconds!"
184. "This film is frequently hampered by the fact that it's horrible," according to James Lileks' review of Reginald Owen's "A Study in Scarlet" (1933); Lloyd Rose discovered Lileks' blog at <www.lileks.com/institute/100mysteries>, where he comments on eight Sherlock Holmes films. Lileks also provides a link to Brian Taves' much longer and more knowledgeable user review of "A Study in Scarlet" at the Internet Movie Data Base.
185. "Sherlock Holmes and the Volcano Horror" (an imaginative two-act play dramatized by Hal Glatzer from "The Devil's Foot") was first performed in Honolulu in 1978; a revised version, performed in Hilo last year, is now available for $20.00 as a 95-minute DVD ($20.00) that can be bought at his website <www.halglatzer.com>, where he also has information about the play and a video trailer.
186. There are many interesting and useful aspects of Chris Redmond's web-site at <www.sherlockian.net>: click on "The original Sherlock Holmes stories" at the top of the list at the left to explore what people have had to say about the tales, such as "Redmond's Delicate Question" for each story. And his links can be weird and wonderful: if you explore "The Hound of the Baskervilles" you'll find a link to Laura Lyons as Playmate of the Month.
187. Gary Thaden discovered a truly unusual edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, commissioned by Penguin Books in Malaysia to publicize the "unputdownable" nature of classic literature; an image of the new edition can be seen at <www.theinspirationroom.co/daily/2009/penguin-books-unputdownable>.
188. Karen Murdock discovered Fancy That of London, a firm that sells all sorts of Sherlockiana, including a colorful Sherlock Holmes Tea Towel (£1.03); go to <www.fancythatoflondon.co.uk> and then click on "Sherlock Holmes Gifts" in the list at the left. And there are William and Kate Wedding Gifts that include a Royal Wedding Condom (for novelty purposes only). But apparently no Sherlockian William and Kate Wedding Gifts.
189. Apr 11 #5: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London will celebrate its diamond jubilee with a long weekend of events that's scheduled for May 19-22; you can read all about it at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>. One of the events is "The Sound of the Baskervilles" (Laurence Owen's "Cinema for the Ears" presentation of "The Hound of the Baskervilles") at the Trafalgar Tavern in Greenwich, and the web-site has a link to a three-minute video trailer for what Owen calls a "radio film".
190. One of the more attractive souvenirs of the Society's jubilee is The Agra Treasure Brooch: just go to the web-site, click on [shop] and then on the brooch to see it in full color. The brooches are hand-crafted by Kim Woodyer-Byers. The web-site also has a link to The Newsletter, where you can read all 310 issues of The District Messenger, which Roger Johnson launched on Dec. 1, 1982; it's the excellent British equivalent of Scuttlebutt from the Spermaceti Press (which is a bit older, and written in American rather than British).
191. "Sherlock Holmes: The Science of Deduction" is a proposed exhibition for science museums whose plan will be unveiled at the annual meeting of the American Association of Museums in Houston, May 22-25. Created by principle designer Geoffrey M. Curley and the Exhibits Development Group of St. Paul, Minn., and licensed by the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Estate Ltd., the family's new business entity now that the Estate of Dame Jean Conan Doyle has been closed, the interactive exhibition will focus on Conan Doyle and Holmes, and the forensic science of both the Sherlockian and modern eras, and is expected to go on tour beginning in 2013.
192. One of the more colorful detectives in pre-Sherlockian England was Francis "Tanky" Smith, who was one of the first detective appointed to the city of Leicester's police force in 1836; he was a master of disguise, and after he retired in 1864 he set himself up as a private detective. He died in 1888, and of course there have been suggestions that his exploits were known to Conan Doyle, who in part modeled Holmes after Smith. He's commemorated in Leicester with a blue plaque and sixteen carved heads showing him in various disguises; go to <www.leicester.gov.uk> and search for [francis smith] to see the plaque and the disguises.
193. Further to the report (Oct 10 #7) on Steven Moffat's hinting about the next Benedict Cumberbatch "Sherlock" series ("The critical words, I'd say, would be--Adler, Hound, Reichenbach"), Mark Gatiss has announced at a media event in London that he will update "The Hound of the Baskervilles", Moffat will do "A Scandal in Bohemia", and Steve Thompson (who wrote "The Blind Banker" in the first series) will take care of "The Final Problem".
194. And Moffat, interviewed by Garth Johnston for www.gothamist.com on Apr. 21 (search for [moffat]), said that "There are genre similarities in 'Doctor Who' and 'Sherlock Holmes', no question about it. The Doctor is Sherlock in space, and Sherlock Holmes is the Doctor on Baker Street. But then you look at it a bit more closely, and Sherlock Holmes is cruel, lonely, loveless, and the Doctor is lovely and flopsy and embraces all the things that Sherlock runs away from." And that "Sherlock Holmes should never be a nice guy. And we're also doing a young Sherlock Holmes. This is before, twenty years before he becomes Basil Rathbone."
195. Apr 11 #6: Ted Riccardi's BETWEEN THE THAMES AND THE TIBER (New York: Pegasus, 2011; 317 pp., $25.00), subtitled "the further adventures of Sherlock Holmes in Britain and the Italian Peninsula", is the sequel to his THE ORIENTAL CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sep 03 #3); Holmes and Watson are as comfortable in Italy as they are in Britain (although Holmes is much more fluent in Italian than Watson), and the echoes from the Canon include their involvement with Pope Leo XIII, and with Isadora Persano (who turns out to be female medium rather than a male journalist and duellist, without a trace of a remarkable worm).
196. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e_times11-3.htm>, with a report (with photographs) on the December meeting of The Torists International, offers of books and other merchandise, and links to interesting web-sites.
197. Bill Scott's new play "The Death of Sherlock Holmes" will be performed on tour in western England and southern Wales by the Miracle Theatre, opening in Porthtowan on June 1 and closing in Falmouth on Aug. 29. More information is available at the company web-site at <www.miracletheatre.co.uk>.

198. Cocktails are making a comeback, and Mike Kean notes a recipe for a "Hound of the Baskervilles" created by Gary Regan (author of THE JOY OF MIXOLOGY and other books) and reported in the San Francisco Chronicle (Feb. 27). Mike reports the result as interesting, though perhaps lethal if taken in quantity.
199. Theatre Aquarius will perform Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" from Sept. 23 to Oct. 8. 190 King William Street, Hamilton, ON L8R 1A8, Canada (905-522-7529) <www.theatreaquarius.org>.
200. Catherine Cooke is helping sell some of Anna Smyth's Sherlockiana (and at reasonable prices); you request an e-mail sales list from Catherine <c.cooke@dsl.pipex.com>.
201. The British Academy of Film & Television Arts has announced the nominees for its television BAFTAs; they include nominatons for "Sherlock" (drama series) Benedict Cumberbatch (leading actor), and Martin Freeman (supporting actor); the awards will be announced on May 22.
202. "Sherlock" also has been nominated for the YouTube Audience Award, the only BAFTA voted on by the public. The British public, that is; Brits can vote at <www.youtube.com/baftaonline> until May 20.
203. And yes, there was something Sherlockian about the Royal Wedding: the guest list at Westminster Abbey included Guy Ritchie, the director of the films "Sherlock Holmes" and "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows".
204. May 11 #1: I recently had an opportunity to watch an episode of "The $64,000 Question" (1956) on which Air Force Captain Thomas O'Rourke and his wife Bobbye each won $32,000 on concealment of identity in the Sherlock Holmes stories: they were each given seven names and asked to give the name of the story and another name by which the character was known. Test your own knowledge: Waldron ; Signora Victor Dorando; Henry Peters; Jack McMurdo; James Armitage; Vandeleur the schoolmaster; James Winter; Arthur Harry Pinner; Sutton; Mrs. Norlett; Don Juan Murillo; Hosmer Angel; Sergius, the nihilist; Mr. Cornelius. Note: they had only 30 seconds to think about their answers.
205. When and where did Sherlock Holmes wear an Inverness cape? There's no mention of an Inverness in the Canon, but many actors have worn one when playing Holmes; nowadays it seems to be worn mainly by members of pipe bands as a raincape, in nylon, polyester, or cotton, rather than tweed. Karen Murdock has found a source for the modern version at <www.misterantony.com>.
206. An unusual print of a blueprint inscribed "Bruce Partington Submarine, Issued by The Royal Navy Research Department" is scheduled for auction by Adam Partridge in England on June 23, estimated at £30-£50; the catalog description states that the print may have been used as a prop during filming of a Sherlock Holmes television program. Go to <www.adampartridge.co.uk/lots/> and search for [bruce].
207. "How Sherlock Kept Me Out of the Gulag" is the title of an article by Bohdan Kachmar posted at the web-site of the Ukrainian Bible Translation Project on May 30, 2009; go to <www.ukrainianbible.org> and search for [sherlock]. Kachmar's recollection of a Sherlock Holmes story did just that.
208. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Cliff Goldfarb's discussion ("A Letter from Bosie") of the correspondence between Lord Alfred Douglas and Sir Arthur (whose wife Jean noted that his response was "a splendid answer from my darling to that rat"), plus other news from and about the collection. Copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>. And there's still time to register for "A Study in Scandal" in Toronto on Oct. 13-16 <www.acdfriends.org>.
209. More cocktails: Al and Julie Rosenblatt stopped by the Hotel Pierre in New York and visited the Two-E Bar/Lounge, which had a "Movie Cocktail Festival" that included the "Sherlock Holmes" (Laphroig Scotch, chilled Lapsang Souchong tea, honey simple syrup, and fresh lemon juice).
210. Mystery Scene magazine has reached its 118th issue (winter 2011), which has Cheryl Solimini's "Steve Hockensmith: Holmes on the Range" and Stephen J. Gertz's (non-Sherlockian) "Bawdy Bibliophiles" and much more. Their website <www.mysteryscenemag.com> also has many interesting articles, including "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (Jon L. Breen's review of the series of reprints from Titan Books), "Two Authors for Teenage Girls" (Oline H. Cogdill's discussion of Laurie R. King and Alan Bradley), and a samples from the spring issue.
211. May 11 #2: Bill Blackbeard died on Mar. 10. He spent a lifetime collecting newspaper comic strips, rescuing old newspapers from people's basements and attics, and from the Library of Congress, and other libraries, and wrote and edited many books about the classic comic-strip artists and their work. Bill presided over what he called the San Francisco Academy of Comic Art in his home, and by the 1990s he estimated that he had clipped and organized more than 2.5 million Sunday and daily comic strips. In 1998 most of his collection was transferred (in six semi-trailer trucks) to Ohio State University's Cartoon Library & Museum. His cornerstone contribution to our literature was his book SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA (1981), which contained his essay on "The Image of Sherlock Holmes in Popular Art and Literature" and a wide variety of comic strips and cartoons, story illustrations, advertising, and reviews extracted from his collection.
212. And why was Guy Ritchie invited to the Royal Wedding? There have been reports that Will and Harry had been invited to the set while work on "Sherlock Holmes" was underway, and they attended the premiere in London on Dec. 14, 2009, arriving at the theater with Kate Middleton, as shown in a photograph that was published in the Daily Mail.
213. "You don't happen to have a Raphael...without knowing it?" Holmes asked (in "The Three Gables"). Having a Vernet would be almost as nice: Joan Moore spotted a report in the Wall Street Journal (Apr 29) that Claude-Joseph Vernet's painting "A Grand View of the Sea-Shore Enriched with Buildings, Shipping and Figures" went to auction at Sotheby's in New York on Jan. 27, estimated at $1.5 million-$2 million, and it sold for more than $7 million; the article reported that 20 bidders duelled for the painting, which went to a private American buyer. Claude-Joseph Vernet was Holmes' great-great-grandfather. If you would settle for Holmes' grand-uncle Emile-Jean-Horace Vernet, his "Portrait of Colonel Auguste-Frederic-Bon-Amour, marquis de Talhouet" sold for only $50,000.
214. Further to the item on the poetic accompaniment to Conan Doyle's autograph at auction at William J. Jenack on Apr. 17 (Apr 11 #2), bidding didn't make the reserve, and the lot didn't sell.
215. Henry Becton has been made an Honorary Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (CBE), receiving the honor from Prince Charles at the British Embassy in Washington on May 5. Becton joined WGBH (Boston) as a producer in 1970 and served as its president from 1984 to 2007, presiding over the co-production of Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series and many other "Mystery!" and "Masterpiece Theatre" favorites.
216. And "Masterpiece" executive producer Rebecca Eaton has been named to Time magazine's annual list of the 100 most influential people in the world; she received an honorary OBE on Dec. 10, 2003, for "her services to Anglo-American film and television."
217. May 11 #3: Ken Lanza spotted a reference to "the Sherlock Holmes of America," who was Ellis Parker, the first chief detective in Burlington County, N.J. Parker had an illustrious career, until he decided he knew who had kidnapped the Lindbergh baby, and was in turn tried and convicted of kidnapping his alternative suspect. And there's a book: MASTER DETECTIVE: THE LIFE AND CRIMES OF ELLIS PARKER--AMERICA'S REAL-LIFE SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Jim Reisinger (2006). Parker died in prison in 1940, and his grandson Andrew Sahol now is seeking a posthumous presidential pardon for his grandfather.

218. Jeremy Paul died on May 3. He was a skillful dramatist and playwright who wrote the "Conan Doyle" episode for the BBC's "The Edwardians" television series (1972), dramatized many of the tales for Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series (his version of "The Musgrave Ritual" won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America), and wrote the script for the play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" for Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke (1988).
219. The Postal Service has honored Helen Hayes as "The First Lady of the American Theater" on a new postage stamp. While she is not known to have acted in anything Sherlockian or Doylean, she did appear with William Gillette in the Broadway production of J. M. Barrie's play "Dear Brutus" in 1918, when she was only 18 years old, winning praise in reviews of the play. She greatly admired Gillette; you can read what she said about him in her memoirs in Henry Zecher's WILLIAM GILLETTE: AMERICA'S SHERLOCK HOLMES (Apr 11 #3).
220. The nominees for this year's Anthony Awards have been announced, and they include Graham Moore's THE SHERLOCKIAN (best first novel) and Steve Doyle's SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR DUMMIES (best critical/non-fiction). The voters will be those who attend Bouchercon 2011 in Saint Louis, and the winners will be announced on Sept. 18.
221. The Undershaw Preservation Trust is continuing its campaign to rescue Conan Doyle's home from a developer who plans to convert the house into flats (Dec 10 #2). The BBC reported that the Trust handed out 500 deerstalkers in Hindhead and asked locals to wear something inspired by Sherlock Holmes on May 14 to show their support for keeping the house as a single building or turning it into a museum. The Waverley Borough Council has approved the developer's plans, and the Council's head of planning, Matthew Evans said, "If Undershaw was to be bought by campaigners or another purchaser with a view to an alternative use for the building and promoting it to tourists, we would be happy to discuss the proposals with them," and added that "it would be a substantial burden on the taxpayer for Waverley Borough Council to make a compulsory purchase of the property, with no assurance that any scheme would be financially viable."
222. Scott Monty's "Baker Street Blog" continues to expand its reach, which now includes Steve Doyle's "From the Dummy's Chair". A recent installment is "Sherlockian Myth-Busters: Thor Bridge", a five-minute video in which Steve and fellow Sherlockians conduct a test to see whether the disappearing-gun trick in "Thor Bridge" actually works. Go to <www.bakerstreetblog.com> to see the solution.

223. May 11 #4: Nicholas Selby died in on Sept. 14, 2010. He had a long career as a supporting actor on stage, screen, radio, and television; he appeared in the cast of the Hobbs/Shelley radio version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on the BBC in 1958, and played James Larrabee in the Royal Shakespeare Company's revival of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in London, Washington, and New York in 1974.
224. Image Comics has launched a new MORIARTY comic-book mini-series, written by Daniel Corey and drawn by Anthony Diecidue. Charles Prepolec has a colorful report on the new comic (and as usual on other interesting things) at <www.sherlocknews.com>.
225. "So I wrote another of my first books and sent it off to the publishers," Conan Doyle wrote in "My First Book" (in The Idler, Jan. 1893). The book was THE NARRATIVE OF JOHN SMITH, and the manuscript was lost in the post. "But I must in all honesty confess that my shock at its disappearance would be as nothing to my horror if it were suddenly to appear again--in print," he added. And, more than a hundred years later, it was a surprise to find the manuscript of the story in the Conan Doyle papers at auction at Christie's in London in 2004. It wasn't the original manuscript, it turns out, but rather a second version that he rewrote from memory, as he wrote to his mother in Feb. 1884 in a letter published in ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: HIS LIFE AND LETTERS (2007).
226. That manuscript was purchased by the British Library, which will publish it later this year, with an introduction by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Rachel Foss (144 pp., £9.95) <publishing.bl.uk> (there also will be an audiobook, and both versions will be distributed in the U.S. by the University of Chicago Press). "Through John Smith," the British Library notes, "Conan Doyle sets down his thoughts and opinions on a range of subjects--including literature, science, religion, war, and education--with no detectable insecurity or diffidence."
227. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LYME REGIS HORROR, by David Ruffle (Peterborough: FastPrint Publishing, 2009; 168 pp., £8.99); Holmes and Watson are in Lyme Regis pitted against the vampire Count Olana in 1896 (Bram Stoker's DRACULA was published in 1897).
228. The Library of Congress and Sony have launched a new web-site that allows listeners to stream an archive of more than 10,000 pre-1925 recordings of music, speeches, poetry, and comedy. It's called the National Jukebox, and it's at <www.loc.gov/jukebox>, and it's well worth a visit. And a search for [sherlock] quickly turned up "Mrs. Holmes taught Sherlock all he knew" on a recording made by the Victor Military Band on Apr. 26, 1917. It's a sprightly tune, and a mystery: the title of the record is "When It's Circus Day Back Home--Medley One-Step" and the Sherlockian title is listed only as one of the four tunes in the medley; one would think it's a song, but there are no results from a Google search other than the record.
229. Marvin Cheiten's new play "The Golden Spy & The World at War" opened at the Off-Broadstreet Theatre on May 13 and is running through June 3. The theater is at 5 South Greenwood Avenue, Hopewell, NJ 08525 (609-466-2766), and the web-site's at <www.off-broadstreet.com>.
230. May 11 #5: The manuscript of "The Story of Pedegue's Dropper" went to auction at Bloomsbury Auctions in London on May 25, estimated at £4,000-£6,000. The title of the manuscript's not a misprint: the story was published as "The Story of Spedegue's Dropper" in The Strand Magazine (Oct. 1928), and Randall Stock has much more information about the manuscript at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/spedegues-dropper-bloomsbury.htm>. The hammer price was £15,000 (before buyer's premium and taxes).
231. The BBC has announced that filming has started on the second season of its "Sherlock" mini-series (starring Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman), and Steven Moffat has revealed that the three new programs will be "A Scandal in Belgravia", "The Hounds of Baskerville", and "The Reichenbach Fall".
232. And the British Academy of Film & Television announced its BAFTA awards on May 22: "Sherlock" won for best drama series, Martin Freeman for best supporting actor, and "A Study in Pink" for best fiction editing.
233. Edward Hardwicke died on May 16. He began his acting career in a film at the age of 10, and performed as well on stage, radio, and television. His first Canonical role was Davenport in the Peter Cushing/Nigel Stock version of "The Greek Interpreter" (1968), and he was a splendid Watson in the Granada series (1986-1994) and in Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (1988). He also read many of the tales for CSA Telltapes and other companies, and he played Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the film "Photographing Fairies" (1997); there's an interesting ten-minute interview with Hardwicke at Scott Monty's Baker Street Blog <www.bakerstreetblog.com>.
234. "Sheer-Luck Holmes: Clueless Again" is a new parody that opened at the Desert Star Playhouse on Apr. 28, and it will run through June 11. 4861 South State Street, Murray, UT 84107 (801-266-2600) <www.desertstar.biz>. There is a one-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=HSAff273-8k>.
235. There was nothing particularly Sherlockian at Malice Domestic in Bethesda at the end of last month, except for Carole Nelson Douglas being the guest of honor, and Steve Doyle and Dan Stashower participating on non-Sherlockian panels, but it was interesting to see a trend in book titles such as A HARD DAY'S FRIGHT, TOMB WITH A VIEW, NIGHT OF THE LOVING DEAD, TOMBS OF ENDEARMENT, and DEAD MAN TALKING, all part of Casey Daniels' "Pepper Martin" series; Pepper is an heiress turned cemetery tour guide who assists ghosts who need a private investigator. Many other authors like amusing puns in their book titles, including Donna Andrews; her latest is STORK RAVING MAD, and you can find more at <www.donnandrews.com>.

- The next Malice Domestic will be held Apr. 27-29, 2012, at the Hyatt Regency in Bethesda, Md.; Jan Burke will be guest of honor, Simon Brett will receive a lifetime achievement award, and there's more information at <www.malicedomestic.org>.
236. OSCAR WILDE AND THE VAMPIRE MURDERS (New York: Touchstone/Simon & Schuster, 2011; 366 pp., $24.00) is the fourth title in Gyles Brandreth's excellent series featuring Oscar Wilde as the detective and Arthur Conan Doyle as his friend and sometimes student; this time they're involved with royalty and murder, and they story's full of twists and turns. The British edition is titled OSCAR WILDE AND THE NEXT OF VIPERS (from John Murray), and Brandreth has an interesting web-site at <www.oscarwildemurdermysteries.com>.
237. May 11 #6: Cinema St. Louis held a ten-day "Vincentennial" this month, in honor of Vincent Price (who was born there in 1911), with interviews, screenings, discussions, and special events; there's a web-site at <www.vincentennial.com>. The films shown include "Champagne for Caesar" (1950), which has a Sherlockian connection: for Disney's "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986), their artists modeled Ratigan after Price's performance in the earlier film, and Price provided the voice for Ratigan. Price also hosted the PBS-TV "Mystery!" series from 1981 to 1989, offering interesting comments on the Granada series; he won an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 1988 for his "contributions to the world of mystery."
238. The German Sherlock Holmes Society has reported that the first issue of The Baker Street Chronicle will appear in June; there will be 32 pages, and the Chronicle will be a quarterly, all in German. And (of course) there is a web-site at <www.baker-street-chronicle.de>.
239. John and Connie Cullen have come up with a way to combine real books with e-readers: their inBOOK is a hardback case that looks like a book and protects your Kindle or Nook. One of the inBOOKS comes with a Sherlock Holmes cover, 16 pages with "The Musgrave Ritual", and a custom-made case for your e-reader ($49.95). There's more information at <www.goinbook.com>.
240. Anthony D. P. Mann's film "Sherlock Holmes and the Shadow Watchers" (Apr 11 #1) has been issued on DVD; it's a 62-minute Canadian production, filmed in Kingston, Ont. (which has some appropriately Victorian locations), written by Mann, who also performs as Holmes. The DVD costs CA$15.00 plus shipping (613-767-2776) <www.sherlockholmesadventures.ca>, and Mann has his own website at <www.anthonypdmann.com>.
241. Al Gregory notes that Thucydides is mentioned in the Sherlock Holmes stories (in "The Three Students"), and now Sherlock Holmes is mentioned in Thucydides. Well, an appendix in Robert B. Strassler's THE LANDMARK THUCYDIDES (2001): "Greek religion in Thucydides is much like the dog in the famous Sherlock Holmes tale who provided a clue because he did *not* bark in the night: Thucydides' comparative silence on Greek religious practices and institutions dramatically illustrates the rationalizing and secular nature of his work."
242. More auction news: Australian Book Auctions' sale on May 30 included a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual that's a new addition to Randall Stock's census. The copy lacks the covers, and has been rebound, and was estimated at AU$40,000-AU$80,000, There's much more information about this new copy of Beeton's at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/australia-2011-beetons.htm>.
243. Rochester Row, The Mycroft Holmes Society of Syracuse, and An Irish Secret Society at Buffalo will hold their second annual summer conference on Aug. 6 in Rochester, highlighted by a tour of the George Eastman International House of Photography (which preserved John Barrymore's 1922 film "Sherlock Holmes"). More information's available from Lewis Neisner (501 Rivers Run, Rochester, NY 14623 (585-360-4715) <lewisneisner@yahoo.com>.

244. Jun 11 #1: Roger Johnson reports that Memorial Auctioneers (104 Kennington Road, London SE11 6RE, England) <www.msgb.co.uk> will offer the Lordship of the Manor of Manaton in Devon at auction in London in July. Roger Smith, chairman of the Manorial Society of Great Britain, believes that Manaton was the inspiration for THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and notes that Conan Doyle was a regular visitor in the neighborhood, and that Heatree House (now an "adventure centre") "receives thousands of visitors a year who are looking for the literary roots of Sherlock Holmes."
245. Faithful readers of this newsletter may recall that a few years ago Manorial Auctioneers offered for sale the barony of Pencelli Castle, which was said to have inspired THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Jun 03 #6), and that the Memorial Society had been described as "one of the most ruthless, vindictive, arrogant, and dangerous of all business enterprises related to titles in the world."
246. Catherine's Cooke's article on "Sherlock Holmes and the Festival of Britain" (celebrating the 60th anniversary of that landmark exhibition) is one of the featured articles in the spring issue of Canadian Holmes, which is published by The Bootmakers of Toronto for its members; it's a lively journal ($35.00 a year); TDC Postal Station Box 1157, 77 King Street West, Toronto, ON M5K 1P2, Canada <www.sherlockian.net/bootmakers>.
247. The Easton Press is publishing a deluxe edition of LONDON: A PILGRIMAGE, by Gustave Dore and Blanchard Jerrold, first published by Grant & Co. in London in 1872. Dore provided 180 engravings for Jerrold's portrait of London that was published only a few years before Conan Doyle's first visit to the city at the end of 1874. It's a leather-bound limited edition that costs $496.00 postpaid; 47 Richards Avenue, Norwalk, CT 06857 (800-367-4534).
248. Registration is now open for "Gillette to Brett III", the conference scheduled by the Wessex Press in Bloomington on Nov. 11-13. They'll celebrate the 35th anniversary of "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (with Nicholas Meyer on hand), and there will be many other interesting speakers. You can register at the web-site <www.wessexpress.com>, or request information by mail (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46077).
249. Karen Murdock has found a web-site for the Sherlock Holmes Outpost in Fort Texas. The Outpost claims that Holmes visited Fort Davis during the Great Hiatus <www.teamyellow.net/SherlockHolmesOutpost/index.html>. Fort Davis is described as "only 220 miles east of El Paso or 175 miles southwest of Midland, and the Outpost offers food in Mrs. Hudson's Dining Room and drink in Dr. Watson's Club.
250. The electronic journal Ripperologist continues Tim Mosley's multi-part article "House That Jack Built" (Sep 10 #6) with an appendix in issue #120 on "A Look Inside the Chamber Pot" in which Mosley suggests that "One may have difficulty visualizing the suave detective using a chamber pot, but that is likely how it would have been even in the 1880s." The issue also includes a tribute to the late Edward Hardwicke; contact the editor Eduardo Zinna at <editorz@yahoo.co.uk> for information about subscriptions.
251. Jun 11 #2: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Old Court Radio Theatre Company have issued a CD with recordings of "The Long Man" (a story written by Rafe McGregor and dramatized by M. J. Elliott) and "The Grace Chalice" (written and adapted by Roger Johnson); Jim Crozier and Dave Hawkes return as Holmes and Watson, and the productions and acting are excellent. The programs can be heard or downloaded free at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk> and the CD is available from the Society (Mole End, 41 Sandford Road, Chelmsford CM2 6DE, England) for £5.00 postpaid to the UK, £6.00 or €9.00 to Europe, and €9.00/$12.00 elsewhere; sterling checks payable to Roger Johnson and dollar checks to Jean Upton.
252. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times11-5.htm>, with tributes to the late Edward Hardwicke and Jeremy Paul, and offers of books, other merchandise, and links to interesting web-sites.
253. Sherlock Holmes never appeared in Oz, at least in the official series written by L. Frank Baum and annointed successors, but Toto was drawn with the Sherlockian icons by Frank Kramer in Jack Snow's THE MAGICAL MIMICS OF OZ (1946). Atticus Gannaway's "Frank Kramer: The Lost Illustrator of Oz" in the spring issue of The Baum Bugle. He illustrated only two Oz books, but he has a long list of credits for work in magazines and books, including illustrations for "A Scandal in Bohemia" and other non-Sherlockian stories in Rosamund Morris' anthology GREAT DETECTIVE STORIES (1965) and dust-

- jacket art for Mary Hoehling's THE REAL SHERLOCK HOLMES: ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (1965). The Baum Bugle is published three times a year by The International Wizard of Oz Club (Box 2657, Alameda, CA 94501) (www.ozclub.org); $25.00 a year.
254. The print of a blueprint inscribed "Bruce Partington Submarine, Issued by The Royal Navy Research Department" (May 11 #1) was sold at auction on May 12 for £180, well above the estimate of £30-£50. You see a different plan in Granada's version of "The Bruce-Partington Plans".
255. The East Haddam Stage Company's production of William Gillette's "All the Comforts of Home" opened at Gillette Castle on June 18, and it runs through Aug. 6. The play is a 30-minute condensation of a Victorian drawing room comedy that Gillette debuted in 1890, and it will be performed outdoors on the Castle grounds. and indoors at the East Haddam Historical Society. Box 176, East Haddam, CT 06423 (960-873-3521) <www.ehsco.org>.
256. The company's also planning to perform a new play about the first time that Gillette adapted Conan Doyle's tales for the stage; "Sherlock Holmes: From Page to Stage" is scheduled at the East Haddam Historical Society, July 29 to Aug. 7.
257. Paul Spiring has reported that there is a three-bedroom apartment for sale in Park House in Ipplepen in Devon. Park House was the residence of Bartram Fletcher Robinson (Conan Doyle wrote to his mother from Princetown in 1901 that he intended to visit Park House), and there is much more information at <www.tinyurl.com/3ulh43x>. The asking price is £189,950.
258. Jun 11 #3: The Sherlock Holmes Gazette was launched in 1991, became Sherlock Holmes: The Detective Magazine in 1997, and in 2003 simply Sherlock, reaching a total of 68 issues before ending its run in 2006. It offered excellent content, Sherlockian and otherwise, and all 68 issues are now available as a digitized CD-ROM archive for £49.95. The disk has useful navigation features, and it's easily searchable; you can buy it at the magazine's colorful web-site <www.sherlockmagazine.co.uk> or from the publisher: Atlas Publishing Ltd., Jordan House, Old Milton Green, New Milton, Hants. BH25 6QJ, England.
259. Christer Holmqvist (a member of the Baskerville Hall Club in Sweden) notes that Out of Print Clothing offers a HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES T-shirt for $28.00; the company "celebrates the world's great stories through fashion," selling T-shirts decorated with vintage book covers; for every shirt sold, one book is sent to a child in Africa through their charity partner Books for Africa. Their web-site's at <www.outofprintclothing.com>.
260. HOUND, John Patrick Bray's dramatization of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, has been performed in Louisiana (Sep 07 #2) and New York (May 09 #3), and the script is now available from Next Stage Press (9810 Westcliff Parkway #927, Westminster, CO 80021) <www.shop.nextstagepress.net>; $8.00 printed or digital (no shipping charge for digital copies).
261. Laurie R. King launched her Mary Russell series in 1994 with THE BEEKEEPER'S APPRENTICE, which opened with Russell's account of her first meeting with Holmes. BEEKEEPING FOR BEGINNERS, an e-novella available on July 6, is an imaginative look at that meeting, from Holmes' point of view, which is quite different from Russell's. The Kindle and Nook editions cost 99¢, and there will be others; check for details at <www.laurierking.com>. And Laurie says there later will be an ink-on-paper print version, and on June 6 she posted an excerpt on her blog <www.laurierking.com/blogs>, along with publicity for the next Mary Russell novel (PIRATE KING), which will be published Sept. 6. Gilbert & Sullivan fans may wish to try singing her "The Major-Criminal's Song" (she has kindly supplied some karaoke music to help you out).
262. Sept. 19 is "Talk Like a Pirate Day" (an event that began in 1995, and is now international); they don't seem to be aware of Conan Doyle's "Captain Sharkey", but there's an interesting web-site at <www.talklikeapirate.com>.
263. Waterlogg Productions has announced their reissue of Joe Bevilacqua's parody radio series "The Misadventures of Sherlock Holmes" (Dec 07 #6) as "The Best of the Comedy-O-Rama Radio Hour, Season One" as a download ($9.95) at <www.amazon.com>. There's more information about Bevilacqua's many other productions at <www.comedyorama.com> and <www.joebev.com>.
264. Tryon, N.C., has in the past honored local resident William Gillette with Sherlock Holmes Festivals, and this year there will be a gathering on July 23, with a breakfast featuring Henry Zecher, author of the recent WILLIAM GILLETTE: AMERICA'S SHERLOCK HOLMES (Apr 11 #3), and afterwards an opportunity to tour the Polk County Historical Museum, which has a large collection of Gillette material; you can make reservations for the breakfast with Robert Reynolds (828-859-9388) <boblo1@windstream.net>.
265. Jun 11 #4: The Serpentine Muse (published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes) always has interesting content: the spring issue offers Benoit Guilielmo's "Prolegomena to a Basic Invisible Holmesian Library" (on the authorities cited by Ronald Knox in his classic essay), and the summer issue has Susan Rice's "By Way of Introduction" (about how a solitary Sherlockian found and joined the wider world of Sherlockians). It's published quarterly and costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
266. Further to the item about plans to publish Conan Doyle's THE NARRATIVE OF JOHN SMITH (May 11 #5), Randall Stock has prepared an excellent report on the manuscript and its history, and on the book, at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/narrative-john-smith-ms.htm>.
267. From time to time one makes accidental discoveries at <www.wikipedia.org>, such as the "List of authors of new Sherlock Holmes", which in turn has a link to "Non-canonical Sherlock Holmes works", where you'll find a link to "Popular culture references to Sherlock Holmes" (all less than complete, so you can help Wikipedia with additions, and for that matter corrections).
268. Stephen Gaspar's THE CANADIAN ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was published by George Vanderburg in 2004; it's a 224-page collection of nine pastiches set during Holmes and Watson's visit to Canada in 1897, and the tales have quite a bit of Canadian history and geography as well as mysteries. Autographed copies are available from the author (9805 Holly Crescent, Windsor, ON N8R 1Y6, Canada) CA$23.50 postpaid to Canada, US$27.50 to the US). He has some promotional videos at <www.youtube.com/user/stephengaspar58> and an interesting blog at <stephengaspar.blogspot.com>, where you can read his continuing Sherlockian serial pastiche "Cold Hearted Murder".
269. Paul Spiring has reported (and will soon publish) "The Grave Accusation", an amusing pastiche that has Holmes and Watson investigating Rodger Garrick Steele's story that Bertram Fletcher Robinson was poisoned by his wife And Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Dicky Neely's pastiche was published in the Coastal Bend Sun, and that at Neely's blog in 2007.
270. The Ocular Helmsman <www.jadedcompass.com/ocular\_helmsman> is Virginia Aldrich's "Vade Mecum Upon the Personal Effects & Environs of Mssrs. Sherlock Holmes & John H. Watson of 221B Baker Street for the Victorian Layman", and it's nicely done.
271. Richard R. Nagy's Datamancer web-site at <www.datamancer.net> is well worth exploring: his imaginative steampunk computer keyboard was offered at eBay last year, described as "a keyboard to make Sherlock Holmes proud" (Jul 10 #2), and Ken Lanza has reported that Nagy is now accepting pre-orders (at $5,500) for his spectacular Victorian/Steampunk Laptop.
272. Paul Spiring has reported another example of how useful the Internet can be for researchers: the National Library of New Zealand has now digitized more than one million pages of the country's newspapers covering the years 1839 to 1945 (and they're still adding to the data base). The Papers Past website's <www.paperspast.natlib.govt.nz>; a search for [conan doyle] turned up 8016 hits, and there were 6801 hits for [sherlock holmes].

273. Jun 11 #5: Otto Penzler, proprietor of the Mysterious Press and the Mysterious Bookshop, has teamed with digital publisher Open Road Integrated Media <www.openroadmedia.com> to launch MysteriousPress.com to move Mysterious Press into electronic publishing, with both classic and original mystery and crime titles as ebooks. Otto also publishes The Mysterious Bookshop Newsletter monthly, always with a "Sherlock Holmes" section that offers new, used, and rare Sherlockiana; go to <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> and click on "Newsletter" at the left.
274. Andrew Lycett's biography of Conan Doyle has an Italian translation: CONAN DOYLE: L'UOMO CHE CREO SHERLOCK HOLMES (from Excelsior 1881, E26.50); it's available at <www.amazon.it> and elsewhere.
275. Heritage Auctions offered some interesting fossils in their Natural History auction on June 12 in Dallas, including "The Fighting Pair--Allosaurus vs. Stegosaurus", a pair of fossils discovered in 2007 in Wyoming and estimated at $2,240,000-$3,360,000; the description of the Allosaurus noted that "it bears the distinction of being one of the first dinosaurs to be depicted on the silver screen, the apex predator of the 1912 novel and 1925 cinema adaptation of Conan Doyle's THE LOST WORLD." And the lot sold for $2,748,500 (including the buyer's premium) to an unidentified museum outside the U.S. There's a full description, and a four-minute video, at <www.ha.com>.
276. David Schulson Autographs (973-379-3800) <www.schulsonautographs.com> has advertised an interesting medical bill in Conan Doyle's hand for one "first night visit" 7/6 and "two subsequent visits" 7/0 for a total of 14/6, noted "received with thanks" on Aug. 2, 1887.
277. Esri Allbritten's CHIHUAHUA OF THE BASKERVILLES (New York: Minotaur Books, 2011; 274 pp., $23.99) is an amusing homage to the Sherlock Holmes story, with a spectral dog (in Manitou Springs, Colo.), and a Baskerville family (some them involved in the Emma Crawford Memorial Coffin Race); the author's web-site is at <www.esriallbritten.wordpress.com/author/elvesamongus>, where she describes the crime as "kind of like Scooby Doo for grown-ups."
278. Les and Carol Moskowitz, vacationing in Europe, visited Bordeaux and discovered a Sherlock Holmes Pub <www.sherlockholmespub.fr> that offers British beer and ale, jacket potatoes, darts, pool, and a pleasant atmosphere. They also found a Sherlock Holmes Pub in Hellesylt in Norway; alas: it was closed, and doesn't have a web-site, but a photograph at Wikimedia Commons shows a rural Scandinavian exterior.
279. And Oscar Ross spotted a report in The Guardian (June 8) on "10 of the Best Barrio Bars in Barcelona", one of them being the Barcelona Pipa Club, described as being dedicated to pipe smoking and as having a Sherlock Holmes theme <www.bpipaclub.com/gourmet.htm>.
280. Greg Darak reports that Marvel Comics has revived Ruse, which was published by Crossgen from 2001 to 2004; there's a new mini-series, apparently with four issues. It's not directly Sherlockian, but there's lots of good Victorian flavor, and some nice artwork. Mark Waid is again the writer, and Mirco Pierfederici is the new illustrator; there's more information about the comic at <www.marvel.com/comic\_books/series/13555/ruse\_2010\_1\_present>.

281. Jun 11 #6: More auction news: two of Basil Rathbone's costumes as Sherlock Holmes in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" were sold by Profiles in History in Beverly Hills on June 18, as part of Debbie Reynolds' collection of movie memorabilia; his tan and black square-checked wool cape overcoat (estimated at $20,000-$30,000) sold for $61,500 (including the buyer's premium), and his tweed wool herringbone double-breasted jacket (estimated at $8,000-$12,000) brought $11,685. The star of the sale was Marilyn Monroe's "subway" dress from "The Seven Year Itch" (estimated at $1,000,000-$2,000,000); it sold for $5,658,000.
282. Al Gregory spotted Adam Whyte's review at <www.obsessedwithfilm.com> of the new British film "Albatross" that was screened at the Edinburgh Film Festival this month. The film stars Jessica Brown Findlay as Emilia, whose surname is Conan Doyle and introduces herself as the great-great-granddaughter of Arthur Conan Doyle.
283. "Learn to fight like Sherlock Holmes!" The New York Historical Society is presenting "A Study in Scarlet: An Evening of Sherlockian Splendor" on July 23 as part of an Antagonistics weekend that's billed as bartitsu's New York City debut. Misspelled "baritsu" by Watson, bartitsu was the Victorian art of self-defense. There's more information at <www.nycsteampunk.com>.
284. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a colorful cachet for last year's "Holiday Evergreen"; the door and doorway are modeled after the set for the Ronald Howard television series (1954). The cost is $10.00 postpaid (in the U.S.) and you're requested to make payment in currency or with U.S. postal money orders; his address is 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801.
285. MRS. HUDSON AND THE IRISH INVINCIBLES, by Barry S. Brown (Santa Fe: Sunstone Press, 2011; 236 pp., $22.95), is the second book in his "Mrs. Hudson of Baker Street" series; as in the first book THE UNPLEASANTNESS AT PARKERTON MANOR (Jul 10 #5), Mrs. Hudson does the real detecting, with assistance from Holmes and Watson, this time in a case involving Irish revolutionaries and imaginative plotting. Omnimystery News offers an interesting interview view with Brown at <www.tinyurl.com/5t34m2t>.
286. Jason Lethcoe's NO PLACE LIKE HOLMES (Nashville: Thomas Nelson, 2011; 207 pp., $9.99) is the first in a new series of books about Griffin Sharpe, a young American who arrives in London expecting to spend the summer of 1903 with his uncle, who lives at 221 Baker Street. Only to discover that his uncle is Rupert Snodgrass, who is a would-be consulting detective who lives at 221A, much in the shadow of the more famous detective who lives at 221B. There's plenty of adventure involved in a battle with the Moriartys (yes, there are two of them). And there's more to come. The author has a website at <www.jasonlethcoe.com>, with a link to his Griffin Sharpe blog.

Jul 11 #1:

287. This year still is the centenary of Ronald Knox's landmark paper on "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", and it was nice to find Robert Speaight long essay on "Ronald Knox the Writer" in RONALD KNOX (published by Sheed and Ward in 1965. In a discussion of Knox's "Satire and Fantasy" Speaight makes an interesting point: "The humorist is out to make a lot of people laugh; the satirist is out to make certain people squirm . . . "Humour sought identity with the victim; it ran with the hare whereas the satirist hunted with the hounds."
288. Oliver Mundy posed an interesting challenge: what Canonical character first appeared outside the Canon, in a work by an author other than Conan Doyle? The character actually participates in a story (as opposed to merely being mentioned by name), and has something to say.
289. Frank Billerbeck died on June 29. He served in France during WWII, and began his show business career there in 1948 using the name Billy Beck. He returned to the U.S. in 1960 and went on to a long acting career on screen and in television. His first credited part in the Ronald Howard "Sherlock Holmes" television series, as Cookson in "The Mother Hubbard Case" (1954); he also played a hansom driver in "The Case of the Tyrant's Daughter" and Coco/station manager in "The Night Train Riddle" (1955).
290. Daniel Corey's MORIARTY comic-book mini-series (May 11 #4) has strong artwork and an interesting story; his media company is DangerKatt, and he has a web-site at <www.professorjamesmoriarty.com>.
291. It's a long-standing urban legend that the Mormon Church has banned A STUDY IN SCARLET because of its unflattering portrayal of the Mormons. Actually, he was welcomed to Salt Lake City in 1923, and lectured on spiritualism in the Mormon Tabernacle, and the book still is easily available at the public library in Salt Lake City. But things seem to be rather different in Albemarle County, Virginia, where a parent complained that she did not want

- her sixth grader, or any other student, to read "the terrible connotations made in the novel," according to a story at Newsplex.Com (June 28). She asked the county to remove the book from its approved reading list, and a committee created by the county school board recommended that the book be removed from the list.
292. "I did feel that there was some obvious bias or misrepresentation of Mormon history," school board chair Steve Koleszar said, adding that "I felt that I could easily see how sixth graders might not understand that it was fiction, that it was from a particular point of view." When the school board met on July 14 they had a long discussion on the issue, and decided to keep the book on the approved reading list.
293. Those who recall the days when the phrase "Banned in Boston" was so helpful in making Kathleen Winsor's FOREVER AMBER a best-seller are aware that the people who attempt to ban things just make them more attractive. One wise Sherlockian father carefully told his son that he wasn't old enough to appreciate the Sherlock Holmes stories, thus guaranteeing that he would begin reading them immediately.
294. Jul 11 #2: Laurie R. King's e-novella BEEKEEPING FOR BEGINNERS (Jun 11 #3) is now available, and her latest newsletter has information on how to buy it <www.laurierking.com/author/lrk-newsletter>, plus some fine Howard Pyle-ish artwork and a link to an amusing book trailer at YouTube. There's also a nice book trailer for the upcoming Mary Russell novel PIRATE KING at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=h2L7s7ZDJDQ>.
295. Mark Twain is the latest author to be honored by the U.S. Postal Service in its on-going "Literary Arts" series of commemoratives. His parody "A Double-Barrelled Detective Story" is Sherlockian, and he was a good friend of Will-Gillette.
296. Ken Lanza discovered the web-site of The Baker Street Irregular Astronomers <www.bakerstreetastro.org.uk>, which have a Sherlockian logo and occasional quotes from the Canon. Co-organizer Tom Kerss has explained that the name was chosen because they meet monthly in Regents Park and because the organizers work at London's only telescope showroom (the Widescreen Centre) just off Baker Street.
297. What Canonical character first appeared outside the Canon, in a work by an author other than Conan Doyle? Billy the page, who appears for the first time in William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" (long before he plays a part in three of the tales).
298. Peter Falk died on June 23. He began his acting career on the stage in the 1950s, appeared in many films, and became most famous for his performance as Lt. Columbo (many of his obituaries mentioned him as saying "I've always said that Columbo was an ass-backwards Sherlock Holmes"). He also played Reverend Theo Kerr in the television film "The Lost World" (2001) that featured Bob Hoskins as Challenger.
299. "Crime-fighting Vultures? What Could Go Wrong?" was the headline on a story spotted by Tina Rhea in The Independent (July 1): the police commissioner in Hanover (Germany) decided to use turkey vultures to find missing corpses, but the vultures proved less than proficient at the task; you can read the story at <www.tinyurl.com/628vatb> with a photograph of Sherlock, one of the vultures who was too frightened to leave the bird park where he had been raised.
300. The newly-reported copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual was offered at auction in Australia in May (estimated at AU$40,000-AU$80,000) didn't sell, and has been "returned to vendor." Randall Stock has more information about this Beeton's at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/australia-2011-beetons.htm>.
301. Ken Lanza spotted a story in the Sunday Mirror (July 10) about the impact of British budget problems on the nation's police, who are targeted for 20-percent cuts over the next four years: further work on Holmes 2020 has been canceled. The new massive computer system, on which £3 million has already been spent, was intended to replace Holmes 2 (Dec 00 #4), which stores fingerprints, photographs, and even the recorded voices of suspects; the first HOLMES was a backronym for the "Home Office (Large) Major Enquiry System", which was created in 1985.
302. Jul 11 #3: This month's demise of the News of the World resulted in a story in the Guardian that offers a (remote) Canonical connection spotted by Oscar Ross. "The Sunday newspaper has thrived on a formula of crime, sex, and sensation since its first edition in 1843," Esther Addley wrote. Shortly into the 20th century, Frederick Greenwood, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, is reputed to said that he had looked at the paper "and then I put it into the waste paper basket. And then I thought, 'If I leave it there the cook may read it'--so I burned it." The Pall Mall Gazette is mentioned in the Canon (in "The Blue Carbuncle").
303. Another trivia question, this one from J.P. Van Gordon: name the actor who has played by Moriarty and Lestrade?
304. shirt.woot! is an interesting web-site at (naturally) <www.shirt.woot.com>; they offer a daily $10.00 special, and this month one was Sherlockian. It's still available (for $15.00); go to the web-site and click on "reckoning" and then on the image to read all about "Ruff Justice" (aka "Olfactory, my dear Watson").
305. The "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" had a total of 1,399 episodes from 1974 to 1982; it was a delightful series created by Himan Brown. E. G. Marshall was the host for most of the series, succeeded by Tammy Grimes in the final year. And of course there were many Sherlockian and Doylean stories. <www.cbsrmt.org> is devoted to the series, and offers information about and downloads of the programs.
306. One of the more interesting programs was "The Silver Mirror" (1981), which is credited to James Agate Jr. as writer, but actually is based on the story by Conan Doyle with additional characters: Arthur Conan Doyle (played by Gordon Gould) and Louise Doyle (Marian Seldes).
307. Stan Buchholtz has sculpted an attractive plaster bust of Sherlock Holmes, and is offering a few copies for $110.00 postpaid; he'll be glad to send a picture of the bust to anyone interested <sbuchholtz1@earthlink.com>.
308. Merrily Taylor noted Clare Toohey's post on CriminalElement.com about "The Plushest 'Sherlock' Ever" <www.tinyurl.com/6ffzhnj>; Malanie Fletcher has created plush dolls for Mycroft Holmes, Sherlock Holmes, and Dr. Watson (in the BBC's "Sherlock" mini-series. Click on [melanie fletcher] to see more photographs of her Sherlockian plushies, and one of the artist.
309. Les Moskowitz reports that Conan Doyle is included in Tim Foley's LITERARY GREATS PAPER DOLLS (New York: Dover Publications, 2011; 128 pp., $9.99), as Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and one of the Cottingley fairies.
310. "The Sherlock Holmes Daily" is one of the many interesting features found at Scott Monty's Baker Street Blog <www.bakerstreetblog.com>; it's a summary of what's being said about Sherlock Holmes on Twitter in the style of a daily newspaper. Well, some things aren't strictly Sherlockian, including "Tweet Naked with Jessie Northey" <www.fingercandy.com/?s=naked>.
311. Jul 11 #4: Lo Jui-ching was minister of Public Security and chief of the Army General Staff until he was purged in 1966, the first victim of Mao Tse-Tung's Cultural Revolution; the reason being his suggestion that public-security personnel should emulate "exceptional" men like Sherlock Holmes, who was called by Lo's superiors a "watch-dog of the British bourgeoisie." Things are quite different now: Al Gregory and Aziz bin Adam both reported a story in the China Daily (July 6) that described the country's top forensic expert Wu Guoqing as "China's Sherlock Holmes".
312. The actor who has played both Moriarty and Lestrade is Colin Jeavons; who was Moriarty in "The Winged Scarab" (1983), one of the episodes in the television series "The Baker Street Boys" and Lestrade in the Granada series.
313. Some on-line publicity for "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" has Jared Harris playing a cameo role in Guy Ritchie's first film, but don't watch it again looking for him. According to the Internet Movie Data Base, the actor who played Moriarty in "Sherlock Holmes" (2009) was Ed Tolputt.

314. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Tim Johnson's report ("To the Success of Our Little Expedition") on a visit to the collections by local middle school students, offering a good demonstration of attracting young readers to Sherlock Holmes; Dick Sveum's "100 Years Ago" tribute to O. Henry, Julie McKuras' "50 Years Ago" discussion of address on "Sherlock Holmes" delivered by Lord Paul Gore-Booth in Delhi, and news from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
315. It's likely that most Sherlockians enjoy reading books. Some Sherlockians may occasionally think about what might happen when there aren't any books. Jennie Paton found Johann Hari's interesting comments about this in The Independent (June 24) <www.tinyurl.com/6j7fyhw>.
316. SHERLOCK HOLMES & KOLCHAK: THE NIGHT STALKER was a three-issue comic-book series (Apr 09 #6); the story was written by Joe Gentile, with artwork by Andy Bennett and Carlos Magno, and is a spin-off from the television series that starred Darren McGavin (1974) and Stuart Townsend (2005). And there's a graphic novel ($11.95) that includes all three issues and the alternate covers, published by Moonstone <www.moonstonebooks.com>. It's an interesting story, with imaginative artwork.
317. Sculptor David Cornell has accused the Crowborough town council of ruining his statue of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle with sloppy cleaning methods, according to a story in the Sussex Courier (July 22), spotted by Al Gregory. The statue, unveiled ten years ago with members of Conan Doyle's extended family on hand for the ceremony (Apr 01 #3). "I think they have used an industrial cleaner," Cornell said, adding "All it needed was a wash with soapy water, then waxed and polished up the following day." Council operations manager David Foot told the paper that "It doesn't look brand new but then anything bronze left outside for ten years wouldn't and, to be honest, some people like things that look weathered." The council plans to decide soon whether to spend £450 to restore the statue, which originally cost £48,000.

318. Jul 11 #5: The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and the Oscar Wilde Society installed a plaque at the Langham Hotel last year honoring the dinner that led to Lippincott's commissioning of "The Sign of Four" and "The Picture of Dorian Gray" (Mar 10 #3); Nicholas Utechin wrote a delightful account of the meeting and its aftermath, with an introduction by Gyles Brandreth, and copies of the 26-page pamphlet 'A GOLDEN DAY' are available (£5.00/€6.50/$12.00) at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.
319. Sherlock Holmes said that he had paid 55 shillings for his Stradivarius violin, and it would be worth more now. The "Lady Blunt" Stradivarius, one of the best-preserved in existence, set a new world's record of £9.8 million when it was sold at auction last month. It also set a record when it sold for £84,000 at Sotheby's in 1971.
320. Dicky Neely's THE CASE OF THE GRAVE ACCUSATION (London: MX Publishing, 2011; 87 pp., £7.99/€8.99/$10.95) is an amusing pastiche that has Holmes and Watson investigating Rodger Garrick-Steele's claim that Bertram Fletcher Robinson was poisoned by his wife and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Paul Spiring has added a detailed and up-to-date rebuttal. The publisher's web-site is at <www.mxpublishing.com>.
321. Al Gregory spotted Spies Online, a web-site with links to investigative resources, with some feline Sherlockian artwork <www.spiesonline.net>.
322. A story on Benedict Cumberbatch's new "Sherlock" mini-series in the Daily Mail attracted some comments from readers: Felix, in Worthing, noted that "these shows have elements of several plots in each episode so maybe this is the Offenbach falls(?) revisited." And (spotted by Lloyd Rose) Nick M., in Birmingham, wrote that "Felix Offenbach was a composer, I think you mean Reichenbach Falls, falling off a medium-sized composer is rarely, if ever fatal."
323. "Did you ever hear a bittern booming?" Stapleton asked Dr. Watson (in "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). Judith Freeman has reported a story that BBC One television broadcast last year <www.tinyurl.com/3phearp> with what experts believed was the first footage of a male bittern booming in daylight in the UK.
324. Suvudu is an interesting web-site for fantasy and science fiction fans that was launched in 2008; last year there as an on-line "Cage Match: Villains!" that started off with a match between Sauron and Professor James Moriarty in the Slytherin Division. Moriarty was quickly eliminated, and eventually so was Sauron; the winner was The Mountain That Rides (Ser Gregor Clegane). Details at <www.suvudu.com/cage-match-villains-2010-bracket>.
325. There's now a finding aid for the Archives of The Baker Street Irregulars Trust, prepared by the Houghton Library at Harvard, where the Archives are housed. The finding aid is now on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/44vvr8>, where scholars can see what's available at the Houghton. The Trust continues to add to the BSI Archives, of course, and there's more information about the Trust at <www.bsitrust.org>.
326. Jul 11 #6: Dick Olken has noted the Baker Street Babes, who describe themselves as "sexy fans of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his lovely creation, Mr. Sherlock Holmes." Visit <www.bakerstreetbabes.blogspot.com> to listen to their podcasts and their theme song. "Older than teenagers, but not yet taking herbal soothers for our hips, we're an intelligent bunch who fangirl by writing essays on the Canon while also giggling crazily at cracky fan comics."
327. Chris and Barbara Roden's New Year Warehouse Clearance Sale of books published by the Calabash Press (Jan 11 #5) is still on; the catalog's available at <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/Calabash Sale.pdf> [and yes, there's a space in that URL] or from the Press (Box 1360, Ashcroft, BC V0K 1A0, Canada).
328. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Licking County Players on Aug. 4-14 at their theater at 131 West Main Street, Newark, OH 43055 (740-349-2287) <www.lickingcountyplayers.org>. His new comedy-mystery-thriller "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will have its world premiere at the Cleveland Play House, Nov. 25 to Dec. 18 (Mar 11 #4).
329. Alfred Burke died on Feb. 16. Born in London, he began his acting career on the stage in the 1930s, appearing also in films and on television, and his last role was in "Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets" (2002); in March 1952 he played the lead in Birmingham Repertory Theatre's production of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes".
330. There are occasional Sherlockian references in the films of The Three Stooges, and Laura Kuhn has discovered Shopknuckleheads.com, where you'll find a Three Stooges CSI T-shirt <www.tinyurl.com/3b4uz21> and a Miracle Detective Agency magnet <www.tinyurl.com/3eece9n>.
331. News for Sherlockian racing fans: there's a new running of The Silver Blaze coming up, on Sept. 17 at Monmouth Park in Oceanport, N.J.; it's sponsored by The Epilogues of Sherlock Holmes and Kate Karlson (organizer of The Turf Builders of Baker Street), and more information on the event is available from Peter McIntyre (732-765-1240) <psipete@optonline.net>.
332. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GHOSTS OF BLY (New York: Pegasus Books, 2010; 364 pp., $25.00) is the latest in Donald Thomas' series of collections of pastiches; there are three stories in the new volume, nicely plotted and well executed.
333. Greg Darak has reported Franz Lidz's article about ransom notes in the N.Y. Times (July 1), honoring the centennial of the comic short film "The Ransom of Red Chief" (based on O. Henry's story), "which may have started it all." Lidz also cites Arden Stern, a doctoral candidate at the University of California, Irvine, who has said that THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES features the first popular example of a cut-and-paste note. Stern's thesis, not yet completed, is titled "The Ransom Note Effect: Cut-and-Paste Typography in American Visual Culture".

334. Aug 11 #1: Laurie R. King's new novel about Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes is PIRATE KING (New York: Bantam Books, 2011; 204 pp., $25.00); it's set in 1924, and has Russell undercover investigating a British movie company that's making a movie about a movie company that's making a movie of Gilbert & Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance". There are visits to Portugal and Morocco, real pirates, plenty of surprises, and a truly splendid set of opening paragraphs. Laurie's web-site is at <www.laurierking.com>, where she has details on her book tour, which begins on Sept. 6 and takes her as far east as Chicago. A British edition (with a different cover) is due on Sept. 12.
335. Romance detective Jamie McJack returns (in Sherlockian costume) in Danielle Corsetto's on-line comic strip available at <www.girlswithslingshots.com> (Dec 10 #4). The cast of characters includes cat as well as people of various genders and persuasions; check the archive for July 25-28.
336. John Baesch spotted an article in the N.Y. Times (June 9) with quotes from Jacki Mari, also known as Sherlockjacki; she and her husband are "intuitive information specialists, free-lance psychic profilers, and corporate intuitives," and her web-site at <www.sherlockjacki.com> more information about their services, as well as Sherlockian artwork.
337. What actor played Dr. Watson in 35 "Sherlock Holmes" programs on American radio in the 1940s, but isn't mentioned in any of the Sherlockian reference books? This isn't really a trivia question, of course, since it isn't easy to find him.
338. Roger Johnson reports "The Legacy of Sherlock Holmes", a 55-minute documentary written and produced by James Hodder and broadcast by the British radio station Resonance104.4fm on July 26. The program includes interviews with Sherlockians, actors, and authors, and can be heard at and downloaded from <www.soundcloud.com/radiohodder/the-legacy-of-sherlock-holmes>.
339. Anglofile, offering detailed coverage of British entertainment and formerly available by mail, now is a blog by Leslie King, and you can read her latest news at <anglofileplus.livejournal.com>; she offers early news of programs to come on PBS-TV and on BBC America.
340. Tina Rhea spotted an amusing basset hound in Sherlockian costume in a tenminute video ("The Mysterious Adventures of Sherlock Hounds") that was created by Charlie Foley to promote the King County (Washington) Library System's "Catch a Clue at the Library!" summer reading program in 2007. Monty stars as Sherlock Hounds at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ztkWKwBi2bQ>
341. Robert A. Moss' "Arthur Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes: A Philatelic Celebration" is the cover story in the August issue of The American Philatelist (the journal of the American Philatelic Society); Moss, a member of The Baker Street Irregulars as well as a philatelist, has done an excellent job of surveying the many stamps that have honored Conan Doyle and Holmes, and the article is profusely illustrated in full color. $4.95; 100 Match Factory Place, Bellefonte, PA 16823 <www.stamps.org>. Bob has kindly made the article available on-line at <www.box.net/shared/f607ed808skv5egbo1m6>.

342. Aug 11 #2: A STUDY IN SHERLOCK: STORIES INSPIRED BY THE HOLMES CANON, edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger (New York: Bantam Books, 2011; 385 pp., $15.00), is an excellent and interesting anthology of new stories, with authors ranging from Alan Bradley to Jacqueline Winspear; some of the stories are pastiches, but many others are indeed, and in various ways, inspired by the Canon.
343. Peter H. Wood ("The Second Stain") died on July 31. He was originally from the Isle of Man, and was a teacher there, and after he emigrated to Canada, in Saskatchewan and Alberta, where he founded The Edmonton Deerstalker and The C.P.R. Stockholder's Society; when he retired he moved to Vancouver and was an energetic member of The Stormy Petrels. The Bootmakers of Toronto made him a Master Bootmaker in 1983, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
344. What actor played Dr. Watson in 35 "Sherlock Holmes" programs on American radio in the 1940s, but isn't mentioned in any of the Sherlockian reference books? Wendell Holmes. The "Sherlock Holmes" series broadcast by WOR-MBS in 1948-49 is widely listed as starring John Stanley as Sherlock Holmes and Ian Martin as Dr. Watson, but the story's quite different if one listens to the series (and they're widely available now). Watson was played by Martin in only the first four of the 39 episodes, and in the remaining episodes by George Spelvin, who really was Wendell Holmes. "George Spelvin" has been used as a theatrical alias for many years, and the producers of the series seem to have decided that listeners would be confused if Watson was played by someone named Holmes.
345. As far as I know, Daniel J. Morrow was the first to confirm (from Stanley) that the series used "George Spelvin" as an alias. There doesn't appear to be much information about Wendell Holmes: the Internet Movie Data Base notes that he was born in 1914 (as Oliver Wendell Holmes) and died in 1962, and appeared often in films and on television. Here's what he looked like in 1949, when he had a supporting role in the film "Lost Boundaries".
346. The electronic journal Ripperologist casts its net widely: the July issue (#121) reprints "Lot No. 249" with an interesting introduction and annotations by the journal's editor Eduardo Zinna. There is also an article by Jeff Mudgett with the intriguing title "Jack Is Holmes"; but it's not our Holmes: Mudgett's new book BLOODSTAINS tells the story of his great-grandfather Herman Webster Mudgett, better known as H. H. Holmes, who admitted to killing 27 people in Chicago in 1893. You can contact the editor at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> for information about subscriptions.
347. P. D. James wrote TALKING ABOUT DETECTIVE FICTION (2009) at the request of the Bodleian Library, which benefits from sales of the book, and there is an interesting chapter on "The Tenant of 221B Baker Street and the Parish Priest from Cobhole in Essex". The limited edition, signed and slipcased, is now out print, but the British edition is still available (Bodleian Library, £12.99); the American edition from Knopf is out of print, but there is a trade paperback published this year (Vintage, $14.00). Fans of G. K. Chesterton will know that the parish priest is Father Brown.

348. Aug 11 #3: The Kennedy Center's Mark Twain Prize for American Humor will be awarded to Will Ferrell on Oct. 23. He is noted for his appearances on "Saturday Night Live" and in films and his one-man comedy show on Broadway, but (so far) not for playing Dr. Watson with Sasha Baron Cohen as Holmes in a film announced by Columbia Pictures (Jul 08 #3); that film's in what's politely described as "development hell".
349. Brit Movie Tours offers Sherlock Holmes tours in London that include locations featured in film and television adaptations, with public walks, private group walking tours, and car and coach tours; you can visit their website at <www.britmovietours.com/bookings/sherlock-holmes-london-tour>.
350. The U.S. Postal Service has honored the centennial of Ronald Reagan's birth. He wrote to O. Dallas Baillio (director of the public library in Mobile, Ala.) in 1977, describing his debt to public libraries and the books he read as a young boy in Dixon, Ill.: "Then came the Zane Grey phase, Horatio Alger and Sherlock Holmes, and, of course, Mark Twain with Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn." In 1992 the Reagans dined at The Sherlock Holmes in Northumberland Street and were greeted by Holmes and Watson (costumed actors Stewart Quentin Holmes and John Barrett-Watson); there's more about that in a story in the Sherlock Holmes Gazette (spring 1993).
351. "Even Sherlock Holmes would have been perplexed by this mystery," an advertisement by GovMint.com proclaimed in the Washington Post (Aug. 5). It's "a real-life mystery Sir Arthur Conan Doyle couldn't write. And Sherlock Holmes couldn't solve," the advertisement promised, but the only connection seems to be that Conan Doyle killed off Holmes in a book published in 1894, and a hoard of Roman bronze coins was found in England in 1895. 1,661 of the coins were sold at auction last year for £46,694 [$76,251], and they're now being offered at $179 (if you buy five or more); the calculation is a simple one, as someone once said: anyone who acted quickly could have had them all for a mere $279,319.

352. The Internet Archive is a fine resource for researchers: Virginia Aldrich reports that they have links to scans of the first 64 volumes of The Strand Magazine (from bound volumes); some scans are faster to open than others, but <www.archive.org/details/TheStrandMagazineAnIllustratedMonthly> gives you slow-speed access to all 64 volumes.
353. Forecast: WINTER AT DEATH'S HOTEL, by Kenneth Cameron (from Orion in November, £12.95); Arthur Conan Doyle and his wife Louisa arrive in New York in January 1896 to begin his first American tour and there is a series of brutal murders, and with the help of a hard-bitten detective and an ambitious female news reporter, "Louisa starts to piece together a story of madness, murder, and depravity."
354. The auction for the Lordship of the Manor of Manaton in Devon (Jun 11 #1) is underway, and details are available at the web-site of Manorial Auctioneers <www.ms.gb.co.uk>; they believe that Manaton inspired THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and estimate the Lordship at £20,000 to £30,000 (and if you intend to bid, you'll need to pay £25 for a "Baskerville Pack").
355. Aug 11 #4: The school board of Albemarle County, Va., has reached a final decision on whether A STUDY IN SCARLET should be dropped from the approved reading list for sixth graders (Jul 11 #1): the book has been removed from the list. A local parent complained that the book was unfair to Mormons, but the board decided that the book was not "age appropriate" for the sixth grade. The parent has suggested that THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES ("a better introduction to mystery") could be substituted for A STUDY IN SCARLET. The board's decision has been widely reported, more often than not in stories and blogs that said (incorrectly) that A STUDY IN SCARLET has been banned from school library shelves. As might be expected, there was a quick increase in the number of downloads of A STUDY IN SCARLET from Project Gutenberg.
356. John Wood died on Aug. 6. He began his acting career in the mid-1950s with the Old Vic Company in London, and went on to perform often with the Royal Shakespeare Company in London and New York, and in films and on television. He won a well-deserved Tony nomination for his title role in their revival of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in 1974.
357. The Pleasant Places of Florida show what can be done with a society's website <www.ppofl.net>: they have made available PDF files of all 306 issues of their newsletter Communications (from Mar. 1972 onward) as well as their other publications.
358. Further to the report (Jul 11 #5) about sculptor David Cornell's complaints that his statue of Conan Doyle had been ruined by sloppy cleaning methods, Brian Pugh reports that the Crowborough town council has decided to pay a specialist £450 to clean up the statue this year, and £300 a year in future to maintain it.
359. Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Unraveling Strand is the title of a mystery weekend scheduled in Cambridge, Ohio, on Jan. 6-7. More information is available at <www.visitguernseycounty.com>; click on "What To Do" and then on "Sherlock Holmes Weekend".
360. Another (non-Sherlockian) Murder Mystery Weekend is scheduled at Madden's at Gull Lake in Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 30-Oct. 2. Details are available at <www.maddens.com/?page=112390>.
361. "How to Make Phosphorus Out of Pee" is an intriguing (and amusing) blogpost by Ether Inglis-Arkell, who says that her first introduction to phosphorus was reading THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES; I haven't experimented to determine whether it works, but will be happy to hear from anyone who gives it a try <www.io9.com/5832776/how-to-make-phosphorus-using-pee>.
362. CBS News conducts a monthly "60 Minutes/Vanity Fair Poll" (of 1,045 adults nationwide, interviewed by telephone), and one of the questions, reported in the Sept. issue was "Which of these fictional character would you most like to go on adventures with?". Sherlock Holmes came in second overall, and for men and for people older than 45; James Bond ranked first, and Captain Jack Sparrow third (except for women and people younger than 45, with whom he outranked Holmes). Harry Potter came in fourth for everyone, and Lara Croft fifth.

363. Aug 11 #5: Stephen R. Alton's impressive article "The Game Is Afoot!: The Significance of Donative Transfers in the Sherlock Holmes Canon in the spring issue of the Real Property, Trust and Estate Law Journal is a fine example of what happens when someone with specialized knowledge brings it to bear on the Sherlock Holmes stories. It's a long article (47 pages) because the author assumes his readers may not have read the Canon and reviews events in some details, but he has discovered a few twists and turns that appear to be new to Sherlockian scholarship. Sonia Fetherson's husband Ben noted the article, and she reports that the best way for Sherlockians to read it will be to find someone who's a member of the American Bar Association and can download it from <www.americanbar.org>; search for [rpte journal].
364. The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic) are co-sponsoring The Fourth Newberry Library Sir Arthur Conan Doyle-Sherlock Holmes Symposium on Oct. 1; 60 West Walton Street in Chicago, from 9:30 am to noon. The event is open to the public without charge, and the speakers will be Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower (on Conan Doyle's THE NARRATIVE OF JOHN SMITH), Jacquelynn Morris (on the continuing campaign to save Undershaw), and Henry Zecher (on William Gillette).
365. The British Library will mount a small exhibition showcasing the manuscript THE NARRATIVE OF JOHN SMITH and other material from their extensive Conan Doyle, exploring "the context of his literary apprenticeship and his early struggles to gain professional recognition," Sept. 9 through Jan. 5. in the Sir John Ritblat Gallery <www.bl.uk/whatson/exhibitions/acdoyle/index.htm>.
366. Jim Ballinger has spotted a bone china Baker Street Mug with an imaginatively stylized Sherlockian design (with "221B Baker Street NW" imprinted on the other side) available from Whittard of Chelsea <www.whittard.co.uk> for £8.00.
367. Lara Bergen's SOPHIE THE SNOOP (New York: Scholastic, 2011; 102 pp., $4.99) is part of a series for readers ages 9-12; the cover and illustrations (by Laury Tallardy) show Sophie in Sherlockian costume; the text has Sophie hoping to be Sherlock Holmes. Megan McDonald's JUDY MOODY, GIRL DETECTIVE (Somerville: Candlewick Press, 2010; 170 pp., $15.99) is Sherlockian only for Peter H. Reynolds' cover and title-page artwork, but it's an amusing story for readers in grades 1-3.
368. People who want to watch DVDs recorded in other regions, and who don't have multi-region software installed on their computers, should download the VLC freeware from <www.videolan.org>; it's useful and efficient.
369. A movie trivia challenge: Julie McKuras recently watched the film "Friends of Mr. Sweeney" (1934), which was based on a novel by Elmer Davis, and she notes that Berton Churchill, one of the actors in the film, also appeared in "Danger on the Air" (1938), which was based on the novel DEATH CATCHES UP WITH MR. KLUCK, by Xantippe (a pen name used by Edith Meiser); Jon Lellenberg adds that Berton Churchill also appeared in "The Spanish Cape Mystery" (1935), based on the novel by Ellery Queen (Fred Dannay and Manfred Lee). Are there other actors who have appeared in films that were based on novels written by different members of The Baker Street Irregulars?

370. Aug 11 #6: Les Klinger reports an interesting, and perhaps useful data base at <www.oldbaileyonline.org>, where "The Proceedings of the Old Bailey, 1674-1913" are easily searchable. On Nov. 21, 1887, James Moriarty (aged 17) was one of three defendants tried for violent theft and robbery, but "the prosecutor, a sailor, did not answer when called upon his recognisances." With no evidence entered for the prosecution, the defendants were found not guilty. And there's much more to the web-site, including an excellent discussion of "Currency, Coinage, and the Cost of Living"; click on "Research and Study Guides" and then on "London and its Hinterlands".

371. Sandy Kozinn notes that <www.smithsonian.com/taj> has information about and a fine photograph of the "old fort at Agra" (as in "The Sign of the Four").
372. William R. Cochran's THINKING OUTSIDE THE TIN-DISPATCH BOX: THE POST REICHENBACH SHERLOCK HOLMES is a collection of his essays about the chronology and many other aspects of the Canon; Bill was a co-founder of The Occupants of the Empty House and has enthusiastically pursued Sherlockian scholarship for more than 30 years. The 168-page book costs $20.00 from George A. Vanderburgh (Box 122, Sauk City, WI 53583 and Box 50, R.R. 4, Eugenia, ON NOC 1E1, Canada) <www.batteredbox.com>.
373. It's well worth checking sales offers at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> once in a while: four books in the Baker Street Irregulars International Series have been available as a set at half price, and there's one set remaining; click on [items for sale] and then on [deal table].
374. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times11-7.htm>, with offers of Sherlockiana, old and new, books and more, and a report (with photographs) of the annual summer picnic of the Nashville Scholars of the Three-Pipe Problem.
375. Yuri Rasovsky notes that AudioFile's web-site <www.audiofilemagazine.com> has a "Listener's Guide to Sherlock Holmes" with samples, reviews, interviews, and an excellent audiography of recordings of Conan Dole's Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian stories.
376. Peggy Perdue's "Letters from Lomax" is a continuing series of reports from the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection of the Toronto Reference Library, and in the summer issue she offers an interesting discussion of Doylean and Sherlockian music and musicals; the quarterly journal is published by The Bootmakers of Toronto (TDC Postal Station Box 1157, 77 King Street West, Toronto, ON M5K 1P2, Canada <www.sherlockian.net/bootmakers> ($35.00 a year).
377. It has always been a bit embarrassing, as a geologist, not ever having been in an earthquake, and although it has taken a while to achieve that goal, I'm happy to report that on the afternoon of Aug. 23 the earth moved, and the house shook, thanks to a magnitude 5.8 earthquake epicentered in Virginia about 87 miles southwest of Washington. And there were a few crooked pictures to prove to doubters that there really had been a quake.

378. Sep 11 #1: Jennie Paton reports that all 26 episodes of the animated children's series "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" (1999) can be viewed using Amazon Instant Video (streaming on-line); $1.99 per episode, $13.99 for all 26, and at no charge if you're a member of Amazon Prime (which also gets you unlimited fast shipping and costs $79.00 a year). They also offer all 26 episodes of the animated children's series "The Adventures of Sherlock Hound" (1983); $1.99 per episode, $28.99 for all 26. And Maurice Sendak's "Little Bear" series, which includes "Little Sherlock Bear" (a segment in episode 18); $1.99.
379. YouTube continues to offer a fertile field for distribution of amateur videos, Sherlockian and otherwise: Susan Rice and Mickey Fromkin's niece Melissa Kelley has reported an amusing animation by Beth Milgate, which can be seen at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=icSNeG-kurE> it's well worth taking a look at other Sherlockian videos posted by yrti0121.
380. The Postal Service has issued a set of stamps with images from various Disney-Pixar films, among them the animation "Up" (2009) which offers a nice visual homage to "The Lost World" (Carl Frederickson's goal is Paradise Falls, which flows down the side of a plateau that has an isolated separate pinnacle, just as in the book and the films based on it). Other stamps in the set honor "Cars", "Ratatouille", "Toy Story", and "Wall-E".
381. Joe Cooper died on Aug. 16. He was an enthusiastic promoter of astrology and psychic investigation, and his sympathetic approach to Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths persuaded them to describe to him how they had faked the famous photographs that he discussed in detail in THE CASE OF THE COTTINGLEY FAIRIES (1990).
382. Harry Stephen Keeler, according to Google Books, is to some an overlooked genius, and to others the Ed Wood of detective fiction. And his novel THE RIDDLE OF THE TRAVELING SKULL (1934) features Milo Payne, who appears with a "long-beaked Sherlockholmsian cap" (noted by Paul Williams in Ineffable Twaddle, the monthly newsletter of The Sound of the Baskervilles). Keller seems to have invented the word (with that spelling).
383. The Byook (Feb 11 #4) isn't the only opportunity to have an enhanced reading experience on your iPhone, iPad, or iPod Touch. Booktrack now offers sound effects and soundtracks for stories that include "The Speckled Band" (their web-site <www.booktrack.com> has previews of their "soundtracks for books").
384. Lenny Picker notes that Publishers Weekly held an on-line "Sherlock Holmes Best Narrator Poll" that was won by David Timson (38.81%); Edward Hardwicke came in second (25.37%), and Simon Prebble was third (8.96%). The runnersup were John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson, and Orson Welles (as a trio), Ralph Cosham, Charlton Griffin, and Edward Raleigh. Charles Griffin, a new discovery, has recorded the entire Canon for Audio Connoisseur; you can listen to samples and download the recordings at <www.audiofile.com>.

385. Sep 11 #2: "Wanted: A Home for Holmes So Portsmouth Can Cash in on Sherlock" was the headline on a story Al Gregory discovered in the Portsmouth News (Aug. 23). Councillor Lee Hunt, who's in charge of cultural issues, has asked the public to suggest permanent venues for an exhibition called "Sherlock Holmes: Made in Portsmouth"; according to Hunt, "221b Baker Street attracted two million visits in its first few years, so if we were to charge £10 per head that would be £20 million coming into the city from the exhibition alone, forgetting the money which will come from hotels and restaurant visits." Of course The arithmetic is interesting: 1000 people a day for 365 days makes 365,000 people a year, and it would take more than five years to get to two million. And a skeptic might wonder whether the Sherlock Holmes Museum ever had 1,000 visits in a single day.
386. The Postal Service has commemorated the 150th anniversary of statehood for Kansas, where John Garrideb was a counsellor at law in Moorville.
387. You can visit <www.cracked.com> and search for [mental illnesses] to see their discussion of "6 Beloved Characters That Had Undiagnosed Mental Illnesses"; it leads with Sherlock Holmes (Asperger's Syndrome), and includes Ariel (disposophobia), Belle (schizoid personality disorder), Holden Caulfield (post-traumatic stress disorder), and Glinda the Good Witch (sadistic personality disorder). Kindly reported by Ann Lewis.
388. Town Head, on the southern tip of Windermere, is for sale for £5.25 million (Telegraph, Aug. 27, 2011); the article mentions that the Grade II listed house allegedly inspired "The Adventure of the Speckled Band" (no further information seems to be available). Carter Jonas <www.carterjonas.co.uk> is the realtor; search for [ulverston].
389. N. F. Simpson died on Aug. 31. Kenneth Tynan said he was "the most gifted comic writer the English stage had discovered since the war," and Simpson had great success as a writer from the 1950s to the 1980s, widely praised an absurdist playwright. He wrote the script for "Elementary, My Dear Watson" (a 30-minute program broadcast by the BBC in its "Comedy Playhouse in 1973 starring John Cleese and William Rushton as Holmes and Watson).
390. Anthony Horowitz's THE HOUSE OF SILK, due in November, is going to be widely read: Jon Lellenberg reports that translations rights have been sold to publishers in Brazil, Bulgaria, China, France, Germany, Korea, Latvia, the Netherlands, Poland, Russia, Serbia, and Spain.
391. There's an unusual event, open to the public, scheduled at Harvard University in Cambridge on Nov. 3, thanks to the Houghton Library and The Speckled Band. The festivities start pm a sherry reception at the Houghton at 5:30 pm, with a viewing of an exhibition from the Band's H. W. Bell

Collection, followed by a gourmet dinner at the Harvard Faculty Club and a presentation by Dan Posnansky on Bell and his classic SHERLOCK HOLMES AND DOCTOR WATSON: THE CHRONOLOGY OF THEIR ADVENTURES. The evening's cost is $100 per person, payable through PayPal to SpeckledBand@comcast.net, or by check (made out to The speckled Band) mailed to Richard Olken (1313 Washington Street #306, Boston, MA 02118).

392. Sep 11 #3: The Bookseller has reported (Aug. 24) that BBC Books is planning to publish some of the Canon as a tie-in with the television series "Sherlock". The first title will be CONAN DOYLE'S SHERLOCK: A STUDY IN SCARLET, with an introduction by series co-creator Steven Moffat (Sept. 15; £6.99; THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with an introduction by Mark Gatiss will follow (Oct. 27). Three more titles will follow next spring: THE SIGN OF FOUR, THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. And next fall there will be THE CASEBOOK "as a hardback gift guide that will revisit all the mysteries solved throughout the series" (£14.99).
393. Lloyd Rose found Red Scharlach's amusing cartoon (posted at his blog on Sept. 6); he's at <www.redscharlach.livejournal.com>.
394. "Sherlock Holmes Strikes Back!" was performed and recorded by the Wireless Theatre Company in August in London during the Camden Fringe Festival. The amusing one-hour show, written by Peter Davis and Matthew Woodcock, features the authors playing Holmes and Watson; go to go to <www.wirelesstheatrecompny.co.uk> to listen to and download the recording (there's no charge).
395. Roy Ward Baker died on Oct. 5, 2010. He began his career in 1934 fetching coffee for staff members at Gainsborough Pictures, and by 1938 was assistant director on Alfred Hitchcock's "The Lady Vanishes"; he continued on to a long and distinguished career as a director in film and on television and was best known for directing "A Night to Remember" (1958). He also directed four episodes of the Sheldon Reynolds television series "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1980) and Peter Cushing "The Masks of Death" (1984).
396. Takeshi Shimizu has succeeded in arranging for a plaque honoring Dr. Joseph Bell to be installed at his last residence, at 2 Melville Crescent in Edinburgh. The house is now the Japanese General Consulate, and the plaque is to be unveiled on Oct. 8, the first Saturday after the centenary of Bell's death on Oct. 4, 1911. The unveiling ceremony will be followed by a reception at the General Consulate, which now is an interesting addition to the list of Sherlockian sites for visitors to Edinburgh.
397. The Theatre Arts Guild will present David Belke's play "The Reluctant Resurrection of Sherlock Holmes" at the Pond Playhouse, Apr. 19 through May 5; the theater's address is 6 Parkhill Road, Halifax, NS B3P 1R3, Canada (902-477-2663) <www.tagtheatre.com>.
398. Bill Barnes spotted a report in the Moscow Times (Aug. 11) that Lenfilm has fallen on hard times. Lenfilm, one of Russia's oldest movies studios, was founded in 1918 and has made more than 1,500 films, including the well-received television series "Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" (1979); it now makes only three to four films a year and is struggling to stay afloat, according to the article. A Russian tycoon wants to buy the company and use the studio for lucrative construction projects.

399. Sep 11 #4: As with many other web-sites the Smithsonian has blogs, including Karen Abbott's "'Mrs. Sherlock Holmes' Takes on the NYPD"; search for [humiston] at <www.smithsonian.com>. Grace Humiston was a lawyer-turned-investigator who fought against "white slavery"; according to a story in the N.Y. Times (on June 24, 1917), "It was like dropping in at Baker Street and having Holmes throw the pipe, the violin, and hypodermic out of the window and begin to discuss how many strawberries make a shortcake." And the reporter continued: "Frankly, so far as appearances go, Mrs. Humiston is badly miscast in the role of sleuth extraordinary, or as the program might say--'Mrs. Sherlock Holmes.'" Reported by Tina Rhea.
400. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is scheduled by the University of Wisconsin-Waukesha Theatre Department on Oct. 21-23, at the Fine Arts Center, 1500 North University Drive, Waukesha, WI 53188 (no phone number or URL available).
401. Mia Trona, an Italian admirer of Jeremy Brett, has donated funds to establish a scholarship program at the Central School of Speech & Drama at the University of London, where Brett studied, graduating in 1954. There are five scholarships available in 2011-12, and an additional two awards in the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years. Additional information is available at <www.cssd.ac.uk/content/news>.
402. The last time I mentioned Lego bricks (Sep 06 #1) there wasn't a Sherlockian minifigure available But there is one now, spotted by Samantha Wolov; search for [lego minifigure detective] to find it at Amazon and eBay and elsewhere, priced as low as 25¢ (plus far more for shipping).
403. Jacquelyn Applegate's SELENA JONES: TRIAL AND ERROR: FEATURING SHERLOCK HOLMES (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2010; 155 pp., $13.00) is the first book in a projected series featuring a young woman who has detective skills and manages to attract the attention of Sherlock Holmes, who plays a supporting role in her adventures and who winds up demonstrating a rather emotional attachment to Selena; there's more information about the book and the author at <www.sites.google.com/site/selenajonesmysteries>.
404. Bryce L. Crawford Jr. ("The Solitary Cyclist") died on Sept. 16. He was a Professor of Chemistry at the University of Minnesota, one of the founders of The Norwegian Explorers in 1948, co-editor of their anthology CULTIVATING SHERLOCK HOLMES (1978) and a stalwart member of the society over many decades. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1985.
405. The Hollywood Reporter carried a story (Sept. 13) about CBS having ordered a script for a modern-day "Sherlock Holmes" drama from CBS Television Studios, producers Sarah Timberman and Carl Beverly, and scriptwriter Rob Doherty; one assumes that someone at CBS has seen Benedict Cumberbatch's series and decided that there's a better way to do it. Copycatting is hardly new in the entertainment industry: news of the Warner Bros. film starring Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law inspired Columbia Pictures to announce plans for a comedy with Sacha Baron Cohen as Holmes and Will Ferrell as Watson (Jul 08 #3); the world is still waiting for that one.

406. Sep 11 #5: Further to the report (Aug 10 #2) on the web-site that allows you to "check which famous writer you write like" <www.iwl.me>, Karen Murdock has an interesting and imaginative article "Do You Write Like Arthur Conan Doyle?" in the fall issue of The Serpentine Muse. The Muse is published quarterly by the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
407. The Toronto Reference Library's "Re:vitalize" project includes a new Arthur Conan Doyle Room to be built within a new Special Collections Centre; work on the new room begins on Oct. 3, when the existing room will close. There is a brief blog by curator Peggy Perdue at <www.tinyurl.com/3kxc4cB>.
408. "Darlock Holmes & Dalek Watson" was drawn by freelance cartoonist Anthony Naylor, whose caption is "When you exterminate the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must also be exterminated." The cartoon is on display in full color at <www.tonecartoons.co.uk/blog/archives/559>. Tina Rhea gets credit for reporting it.
409. Steve Emecz has announced that MX Publishing will sponsor a worldwide electronic debate on Nov. 10; the topic of "The Great Sherlock Holmes Debate" will be "BBC's Sherlock vs. Guy Ritchie's Movies: Which Is More Beneficial to Holmes in the 21st Century"; there will be two teams, and free on-line seats for 100 audience members. Go to <www.mxpublishing.com/page/Debate> for additional information about the event.
410. MX also has published BAREFOOT ON BAKER STREET, by Charlotte Ann Walters, who has set herself a "blogging challenge" and started on Sept. 20 writing a blog a day on each of the 56 short stories in the Canon. You'll find her blog at <www.barefootonbakerstreet.wordpress.com>.

411. For the completists: Andy Peck reports that there's a Mystery Guild edition of A STUDY IN SHERLOCK, at <www.mysteryguild.com>, where you'll find other Sherlockian titles available to members; search for [sherlock]. And if you search for [conan doyle] you'll also find Graham Moore's THE SHERLOCKIAN.
412. Michael Pointer reported in THE PUBLIC LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1975) that "On one occasion Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce appeared a guests on a comedy radio show and swapped their regular parts, with Rathbone as a bumbling Watson and Bruce as a sharp detective Holmes." The radio show was "Request Performance" (a 30-minute series sponsored by Campbell Soup and broadcast by CBS in 1945 and 1946), and the five-minute Sherlockian segment aired on Nov. 4, 1945. It's nice indeed that we can listen to the segment, kindly reported by Bert Coules (who in turn thanked Steven Moffat) on the Internet at <www.basilrathbone.net/radio/mp3/requestperf1945.mp3>.
413. The web-site's title is "Basil Rathbone: Master of Stage and Screen" and it is maintained by Marcia Jessen, who has created an excellent catalog of his appearances on stage, screen, radio, television, and records, with opportunities to listen and view. This may be your first time to see a photograph of Rathbone (as Holmes) and Dagmar (as Dagmar) on television in the 1950s.

414. Sep 11 #6: In addition to the exhibition showcasing the manuscript of THE NARRATIVE OF JOHN SMITH (Aug 11 #5), the British Library will present a public event on Nov. 27 with Anthony Horowitz, the author of the upcoming pastiche HOUSE OF SILK, and Roger Johnson, the editor of the Sherlock Holmes Journal; 2:30 to 4:00 pm at the British Library Conference Centre (96 Euston Road in London) and tickets will cost £7.50.
415. Joan Proubasta has kindly forwarded Alberto Lopez Aroca's SHERLOCK HOLMES Y LOS ZOMBIS DE CAMFORD (Palma de Mallorca: Dolmen Editorial, 2011; 280 pp., E16.95); it's the latest of his Sherlockian pastiches. His earlier story, ("El problema del la pequena cliente") appears to be unique for including Mary Poppins as a character in a Sherlockian pastiche.
416. "The Travels of Sherlock Holmes--It's All About Location, Location, Location" is the theme of the annual "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore on Nov. 5th; the sponsors are the local Sherlockian societies, and the library is at 400 Cathedral Street in Baltimore. The event's sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies, and there is no charge.
417. Work has started on a new Russian "Sherlock Holmes" series, according to a report from Bert Coules. There will be 16 episodes, filmed in St. Petersburg, with Igor Petrenko as Holmes and Andrey Panin as Watson, and you can visit <www.rt.com/news/prime-time/sherlock-holmes-russian-adaptation-875> to see a brief video report.
418. Lenny Picker has reported a Sherlockian episode of the animated childrens' series "Curious George" that aired on Sept. 6: in "The Great Monkey Detective" George imagines himself as a detective and watches a take-off of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on television. The episode is scheduled to repeat on Oct. 12 and Nov. 14 on PBS-TV.
419. Maria Konnikova contributes a guest blog to Scientific American's web-site <blogs.scientificamerican.com/guest-blog>, and has been discussing Sherlock site, including David Bresan's "It's sedimentary, my dear Watson" (part of his discussion of the history of geology). Thanks to Les Klinger and Dan Stashower for reporting the Konnikova blogs.
420. Sherlock Holmes will return to the Victorian Village Inn for a special seven-course champagne English countryside dinner on Oct. 22; more information is available from the management (601 North Broadway, Union City, MI 49094) (800-348-4552) <www.avictorianvilla.com>. John Sherwood, who serves as Mr. Holmes' scheduler, reports that he plans a series of activities to augment the grand meal, but regrets that Dr. Watson will not be able to attend.
421. John Longenbaugh's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Artists Repertory Theatre from Nov. 15 through Dec. 24; "literature's favorite quirky inquisitor is infused with the spirit of crotchety Ebenezer Scrooge in an unusual holiday show." 1515 SW Morrison, Portland, OR 97205 (503-241-1278) <www.artistsrep.org>.
422. Oct 11 #1: Reported: Sherlock Holmes is mentioned three times in Lonely Planet's 1,000 ULTIMATE SIGHTS (Oakland: Lonely Planet, 2011; 352 pp., $22.99), in entries for Reichenbach Falls (most impressive waterfalls), Baker Street (best literary sites), and Baker Street (most interesting subway stations).
423. Kandie Carle's one-act play "Sherlock Holmes: From Page to Stage" will be presented by the East Haddam Stage Company at the Mark Twain House Museum on Dec. 8 and 9; the play "explores William Gillette's journey from Victorian stage actor to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's master sleuth." 351 Farmington Avenue, Hartford, CT 06105 (860-280-3130) <www.marktwainhouse.org>.
424. Criminal Element, "a community web-site featuring daily content for fans of the crime and mystery genres in all of their forms," recently published Guy Bergstrom's "Death Brackets", a contest in which he matched "master detectives" against "spies, assassins, and anti-heroes"; Sherlock Holmes was one of the master detectives, and made it into the semi-finals. You can read all about it at <www.criminalelement.com/features/series/death-brackets>.
425. ISO [that's "in search of" in the personal ads] a postal or e-mail address for Millard Cecil, reported to be contact for a Sherlockian society called The Crouching Lions.
426. For the completists: Judith Solberg found a new version of the Sherlockian nutcracker that was available from Target last year (Dec 10 #4); it's exactly the same, except that the date on the base is 2011 rather than 2010. It still costs $12.99, and is available at their stores or their web-site <www.target.com/p/Decorative-Nutcracker-Detective/-/A-13508848>.
427. "Make a Bid, Seller Is Motivated" was the headline on a listing spotted by Garth Hazlett in Forbes (Sept. 12): Updown Court, Windlesham, Surrey, England, has been on the market since 2005; the current asking price of $124 million. It's not Conan Doyle's home Windlesham, which is in Crowborough in Sussex (Windlesham also is the name of a town in Surrey). Updown Court is England's most expensive home, and has 103 rooms (including two indoor pools) and a heated marble driveway. And of course there's an informative web-site at <www.updowncourt.com>.
428. Garth also has spotted a Sherlockian connection for Moammar Gadhafi, in the Toronto Star (Sept. 21): Diane Sawtch's article about Foyles mentions that Gahaffi once deposited £500,000 with the legendary bookstore to supply him and his government departments with books; the authors requested included John le Carre, Barbara Cartland, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
429. The fall issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Thelma Beam's report on a newly-acquired collection of letters Conan Doyle wrote to his wife during their American tour in 1923, Barbara Rusch's discussion of "The Ring of Thoth" (the story that launched a flood of movies about mummies), and other news from and about the collection. Copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb (22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
430. Oct 11 #2: The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Dan Stashower's report on four recently-acquired manuscript letters, three written by Conan Doyle about the medium Margery and one by Margery herself, and a "50 Years Ago" tribute by Jon Lellenberg and Peter Blau to Bill Rabe and his landmark SHERLOCKIAN WHO'S WHO & WHAT'S WHAT, and

- other new from and about the collections. Copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
431. John Garden, the keyboard player and musical director of the American band Scissor Sisters ("spawned by the scuzzy gay nightlife scene of New York") has composed an original score for the silent film "The Lost World" (1925), which was screened with live accompaniment in England in October; audio and video samples are available at <www.johngarden.net>.
432. Otto Penzler reports that there will be reading and signing at the Mysterious Bookshop in New York on Nov. 7, from 6:30 to 8:00 pm, featuring Anthony Horowitz (author of the new pastiche THE HOUSE OF SILK) and Michael Dirda (author of the new ON CONAN DOYLE, OR THE WHOLE ART OF STORYTELLING; signed copies also will be available for those who can't attend. 58 Warren Street in New York <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.
433. Paul Singleton reports that he will perform as Sherlock Holmes in a staged reading of Alex Simmons' play "Sherlock Holmes and the Hands of Othello" in the Workshop Theater Company's Jewel Box Theater at 6:00 pm on Dec. 4. No charge for admission; 312 West 36th Street (4th floor), between 8th and 9th Avenues in New York City (212-695-4173) <www.workshoptheater.org>.
434. Peter Hammond died on Oct. 12. He began his theatrical career as an actor, and went on to become a prolific television director, with credits ranging from "The Avenger" (1960) to eight of the programs in Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series.
435. Work continues on the museum exhibit "Sherlock Holmes" The Science of Deduction" (Apr 11 #5); there's a preliminary web-site display of information at <www.exhibitsdevelopment.com/InDevelopment.html>, and there are links to descriptions of other exhibits already on tour. The "Sherlock Holmes" exhibit will begin touring in 2013. And in the meantime there's a "Sherlock Holmes: The Science of Deduction" cocktail: Dewar's, Cointreau, fresh lemon juice, and bitters.
436. Tracy Revels' SHADOWFALL: A NOVEL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: MX Publishing, 2011; 193 pp., £9.99/E12.99/$16.95) is a thriller that involves Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson in the world of the wizards and wizardry, and in a battle for "the safety of the British Empire, and Doctor Watson's mortal soul." The publisher's web-site is at <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
437. Also from MX Publishing: RENDEZVOUS AT THE POPULAIRE: A NOVEL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2011; 203 pp., £9/99/E12.99/$16.95): Kate Workman's version of the battle between Sherlock Holmes and the Phantom of the Opera. THE OUTSTANDING MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2011; 317 pp., £12.99/E14.99/$19.95); 13 short stories written and illustrated by Gerard Kelly.

438. Oct 11 #3: Conan Doyle's THE NARRATIVE OF JOHN SMITH (London: British Library, 2011; 138 pp., £10.00/$16.00) offers a delightful look at an author at the start of his career, with an interesting introduction by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Rachel Foss, and excellent footnotes. It's much more of a journal than a novel, and it offers the author's philosophy and opinions, as well as intriguing foreshadowing of many themes and phrases found in his later work, Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian. There's an impressive report on the manuscript, and on the book, at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/narrative-john-smith-ms.htm>, Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" web-site.
439. Michael Dirda discovered Sherlock Holmes in THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES at a time when a dollar bought "two or three candy bars, a box of Cracker Jack, and a cold bottle of Orange Crush" (all of which he enjoyed while he read the book). He tells that story, and many more, in ON CONAN DOYLE: OR, THE WHOLE ART OF STORYTELLING (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 2011; 210 pp., $19.95), which is far more than a delightful introduction to Conan Doyle and his work, and to The Baker Street Irregulars (described by Dirda as a "mysterious literary society" that surely will be less mysterious now to those who read this book): those who need no such introduction will find many pleasant surprises in his insights and infectious enthusiasm for Conan Doyle. Recommended.
440. Mark Alberstat's 2012 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. US$15.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
441. The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection, The Toronto Public Library, and The Bookmakers of Toronto presented an excellent symposium on "Arthur Conan Doyle: A Study in Scandal" this month; the speakers included Les Klinger (an illustrated presentation on "The Other Victorians: A Study of Pornography and Pornographers in the Time of Arthur Conan Doyle") and Bill Mason ("Arthur Conan Doyle on Trial: The Murder of Sherlock Holmes"), and a chance to see an exhibit of some of the treasures in the Collection. "What fun we had!" the symposium web-site explains, "And now it's over. Nothing left but gossip and rumour." Another symposium is possible in 2016.
442. Another interesting presentation at the symposium was Doug Elliott's "The Piltdown Code" (available thanks to the wonders of modern technology): in Australia, Doug offered a documentary that carefully examined the suggestion that Conan Doyle perpetrated the famous Piltdown hoax. Modern technology (Skype) also enabled a question-and-answer session after the presentation. And there's more: the documentary, which exonerates Conan Doyle, is available on-line in two 15-minute segments at <www.youtube.com>; search for [piltdown code].
443. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at the Market Bar-B-Que in Minneapolis on Oct. 12, when visiting geologists were welcomed by Julie McKuras and other members of the local Sherlockian society (The Norwegian Explorers). Our next dinners will be in Long Beach on Apr. 12 and in Charlotte on Nov. 7.

444. Oct 11 #4: Will there be a third "Sherlock Holmes" film that stars Robert Downey Jr. and Jude Law? Will they become the Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce of the 21st century? According to Law, "I always steal a line that Robert said: if everyone else is as happy and enthusiastic for us to carry on doing it, then we'll probably carry on doing it." Not that one need be in any doubt: Variety has reported (Oct. 23) that Warner Bros. has hired Drew Pearce to write the new script; Pearce also is writing a script for "Iron Man 3" (which will star Downey as Tony Stark/Iron Man).
445. And Brenda Rossini spotted an amusing story in the Guardian (Oct. 26) that compares the new film with the Benedict Cumberbatch series; the categories include "best exploding tree sequence" and "sexiest female lead". You can go to <www.guardian.co.uk> and search for [mongolian costume].
446. Otto Penzler's MysteriousPress.com (Jun 11 #5) is now up and running as an electronic publisher, at <www.mysteriouspress.com>, with about 40 books already available, and many more to come. The e-books are available from Amazon, iTunes, and Barnes & Noble, and include a wide range of classic mystery, crime, suspense, and espionage.
447. Thanks to Andy Solberg, who has observed and reported an entry at the Sherlockian Who's Who web-site, there is news of an active Sherlockian society in mainland China: it's The Chinese Sherlockian Society, which has an attractive and interesting web-site at <www.sherlockian.org/sh/home.php>; the web-site's even more interesting if you have Google's "Translate" installed on your computer. Their forum at <www.sherlockian.org/sh/forum/index.php> also is worth a visit.
448. The Sherlockian Who's Who at <www.sh-whoswho.com> also is well worth a visit ; it's maintained by La Societe Sherlock Holmes de France, and it offers an easy way to locate and contact individual Sherlockians as well as Sherlockian societies that have provided that information to the Who's Who.

449. Further to the report (Sep 10 #4) about the "Sherlock" violin made by Steve Burnett from wood from the 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, Burnett has now made a new "Conan Doyle Quartette": two violins, a cello, and a viola. According to the Edinburgh Evening News (Oct. 25), the quartet will debut at the Concert for Trees at the Usher Hall on Nov. 26, when the St. Patrick's Baroque Ensemble will play the quartet and Ani Batikian will play the Sherlock violin.
450. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is scheduled by the Broadhollow Theatre at the Elmont Memorial Library, Nov. 12-27 (700 Hempstead Turnpike, Elmont, NY 11003) (516-775-4420) <www.broadhollow.org>.
451. William Hyder's INTRODUCING SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GREAT DETECTIVE ACCORDING TO DOYLE (2011; 311 pp., $24.00) has been published by George Vanderburgh; the book includes reprints of eight stories and an excerpt from A STUDY IN SCARLET, with informative introductions and explanations, and what Bill has called "biographical assumptions" that provide the reader with an imaginative account of Holmes' early life and his career that often differs from William S. Baring-Gould's proposed biography. The publisher's at Box 50, R.R. #4, Eugenia, ON N0C 1E0, Canada <www.batteredbox.com>.
452. Oct 11 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 158th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 13, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:00 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> or Evy Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you are coming to the event.
453. The Christopher Morley Walk, led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash, will leave from the Algonquin Hotel (59 West 44th Street) at 9:30 am on Thursday, followed by lunch at McSorley's at about 1:30 pm; those planning to participate are asked to get in touch with Jim (2240 15th Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94116) <jasdcx@yahoo.com>, and of course are advised to dress appropriately for the weather.
454. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 2nd floor of the Midtown Executive Club (at 40 West 45th Street); the speaker will be Dr. Lisa Sanders of Yale University, technical advisor to the television series "House", which of course owes much to the Sherlock Holmes stories, including the address of his apartment (221B). The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below); tickets will not be sold at the door.
455. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
456. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $45.00 for chicken or salmon ($52.00 for prime rib). Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> is the contact for a formal announcement.
457. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street at Seventh Avenue); $78.00 (checks payable to Will Walsh can be sent to Carol Fish at Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919 (845-361-4320).
458. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised.
459. If you want to send seasonal souvenirs or other mementos to be included in the various dinner packets you should send 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 100 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material must be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15.
460. Oct 11 #6: On Saturday a wide range of Sherlockiana will be available vendors in the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) in the Vanderbilt Suite on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; you can contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> for information about dealers' tables.
461. The Beacon Society will hold their annual meeting from 10:00 to 11:30 am in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel, where they will present their annual Beacon Award recognizing the efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. Their web-site's at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
462. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:00 to 4:00 at the New York City Bar Association (42 West 44th Street); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). And, of course, the usual (or perhaps unusual) entertainment; the cost is likely to be $79.00 (details below) or $89.00 after Nov. 26 or at the door.
463. For those who wish to continue partying, there are as yet no plans (firm or infirm) for sporting events at Kennedy's or other venues on Saturday evening ; stay tuned (as they say) for a further report.
464. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am to 1:30 pm at a venue not yet confirmed (needless to say, the price is not confirmed either). As always, the brunch is open to all, but space is limited; Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032) <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com> will be happy to provide more information about a fine way to end a long weekend.
465. Arrangements have been made for a block of rooms at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) at a special tax-free rate of $199.00 per night (single or double room); the special rate is available only for reservations made through the Baker Street Irregulars by Nov. 19. In addition, there may be some rooms available at the Yale Club (50 Vanderbilt Avenue) at a special tax-free rate of $200.00 per night (details on both below).
466. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Roosevelt Hotel and the Yale Club, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and click on BSI Weekend, or contact Mary Ann Bradley <mabmfw@aol.com>.
467. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; special rates also are available at <www.travelzoo.com/top20/82851294-890255>. You will be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you should not forget about non-optional extras such as almost 20% in state and city taxes).
468. Oct 10 #7: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street

- Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
469. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and <www.bsiweekend.com>. News of additional events will be found in this newsletter, and at the web-sites.
470. The 31st annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium, to be held in Dayton, Ohio, on May 18-20, has the theme "Cheetahs and Adders and Hounds, On My!"; Cathy Gill manages their mailing list (4661 Hamilton Avenue, Cincinnati, OH 45223) (513-681-5507) <chirpsworth@fuse.net>.
471. Sherlock Crater, named in honor of Sherlock Holmes by astronaut-geologist Jack Schmitt in preparation for the Apollo 17 mission to the Moon in 1972, can be seen at Google; go to www.google.com/moon and search for [sherlock].
472. For San Franciscans: Laurie King and Les Klinger (editors) and Tony Broadbent and Jan Burke (contributors) will appear at the San Francisco Public Library (at 100 Larkin Street at Grove) on Nov. 8 at 6:00 pm to talk about (and sign) the new anthology A STUDY IN SHERLOCK (Aug 11 #2).
473. Bill Dorn's "Sherlock Holmes Calendar" for 2012 features to actors who have played Professor Moriarty on the screen and on television; the price (postpaid) is $17.95, but if you mention the magic word [scuttlebutt] you get a $2.00 discount. You can see (and order) the calendar (and other offerings) at <www.me.com/billdorn/Holmesian\_Films>.
474. Spiritualists in Edinburgh have opened a new church that's named in honor of Conan Doyle, according to a report in the Edinburgh Evening News (Oct. 19); formerly housed in a tenement, the church has about 150 members, and funding from a trust allowed them to move into the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Centre. They have a web-site at <www.edinburghspiritualists.com>.
475. Irene's Cabinet is the annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (58 pp.) offers the usual interesting mix of articles, toasts, and poetry, including Debbie Clark's discussion of various attempts to assassinate Queen Victoria, Russell Wm. Hultgren's examination of the recordings of the Canon David Timson made for Naxos Audiobooks, and Emily Doss' winning essay for this year's Clarkson Prize, sponsored by the society for seventh-graders in Howard County, Md.; $15.00 postpaid from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).

476. Nov 11 #1: There's more information about the birthday festivities in New York: Chrys Kegley of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will once again host The Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians Dinner on Saturday, Jan. 14, at 6:00 pm at Pete's Tavern (129 East 18th Street, between Irving Place and Third Avenue); $42.00 including tax and tip for dinner and two drinks, and details are available from Chrys (18014 Sherman Way #275, Reseda, CA 91235) (818-675-5399) <ckegley@socal.rr.com>.
477. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am to 3:00 pm at the Irish Rogue (356 West 45th Street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues); $20.00 payable by cash or check at the door. As always, the brunch is open to all, but space is limited; details about a fine way to end a long weekend are available from Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032) <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
478. And a reminder: seasonal souvenirs or other mementos intended for various dinner packets should be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15: 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 100 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919), and 20 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278).
479. The "Sherlock Holmes Shaped Puzzle" (Apr 10 #1) offered by Bits and Pieces (Box 4150, Lawrenceburg, IN 47025) (866-503-6395) <www.bitsandpieces.com> has been discounted to $8.49 each for either of the two formats (300 pieces or 750 pieces) (items 45849 and 45850).
480. The White Ghost Shivers are a seven-piece band that plays (according to one reviewer) "an insane collision of ragtime, jazz, swing, bluegrass, cabaret, vaudeville, burlesque, Hostess Twinkie, caffeine, and Tilt-a-Whirl." Their web-site is at <www.whiteghostshivers.com>, and their latest CD is "Nobody Loves You Like We Do" ($12.17); it's of Sherlockian interest because one of the tracks is "We Never Mention Aunt Clara" (which is described as "the anthem of The Baker Street Irregulars") sung by Cella Blue, who is the daughter of Sherlockian book-dealer Vinnie Brosnan. The CD (and possibly an LP) will be available in the Merchants Room at the Roosevelt Hotel during the birthday festivities in January.
481. A page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be offered at auction on Dec. 3, estimated at $115,000-125,000; the auction will be at Ira & Larry Goldberg Auctioneers <www.goldbergcoins.com> in Los Angeles. Currently owned by David Karpeles, the page was advertised at $22,500 by Pepper & Stern in 1994. Randall Stock has compiled an excellent census of pages from the manuscript; it's available at his "Best of Sherlock" website at <www.bestofsherlock.com>.
482. Sean Wright has reported a delightful segment from "The Morecambe and Wise Show" broadcast on July 27, 1969, with guest Peter Cushing as King Arthur, introduced by Ernie Wise (in costume as Merlin) and with a surprise appearance by Eric Morecambe as Sherlock Holmes. And of course it's available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=IT6e58r3bv0>.

483. Nov 11 #2: E. J. Wagner's THE SCIENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: FROM BASKERVILLE HALL TO THE VALLEY OF FEAR: THE REAL FORENSICS BEHIND THE GREAT DETECTIVE'S GREATEST CASES (Jun 06 #2) is available translated into French; her web-site <www.ejwagner-crimehistorian.com> has details on how to order the book (which also is available in Italian, Korean, German, Russian, Japanese, Spanish, and Braille, and in a Kindle edition and as an audiobook).
484. The Sussex Courier reported (Oct. 28) on Brian Pugh's efforts to promote Crowborough as the home of Arthur Conan Doyle: Brighton and Hove Buses have named one of their buses in honor of Sir Arthur. According to the company operations and commercial manager, "about 75 per cent of our buses are dedicated to local heroes like Thomas Kemp and Dusty Springfield." That's Brian Pugh in the photograph.
485. "Sublime Sherlocks: The Great Detective's Brainy Descendants" is an interesting interactive web-site reported by Tina Rhea. Wired offers 18 candidates at <www.wired.com/underwire/2010/10/best-sherlocks-ever>, and there are some amusing surprises among them.
486. Computers make it quite easy to produce personalized books, and a personalized edition of THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is available from Book By You <www.bookbyyou.com> for $49.95 (hardcover) or $29.95 (paperback); you get to select new names for Holmes, Watson, Lestrade, Irene Adler, and Mrs. Hudson, and you can create a free preview sample at the web-site.
487. James H. Bready ("The Disappearance of James Phillimore") died on Oct. 29. He served in the Army's Counterintelligence Corps in the European Theater during World War II, and in 1945 began his long career as a journalist with the Baltimore Sun; his enthusiasms were sports, Maryland's pre-Prohibition rye whiskey, and Sherlock Holmes. Jim was an early member of The Six Napoleons and served as its Gasogene in the 1950s; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1955.
488. There will be two "Sherlock Holmes Weekends" in Cape May, N.J., next year, on Mar. 16-18 and Nov. 2-4, and you can find out what happened this year at <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html?terms=sherlock>; information about next year's events will be available from 1048 Washington Street, Cape May, NJ 08204 (800-275-4278).

489. "The musical begins when Sherlock Holmes and his trusty partner Dr. John H. Watson are dispatched to solve the case of the Anderson family and a missing woman," according to an article in the Jeju Weekly about the Korean musical "Sherlock Holmes", which premiered in Anyang City on July 29 and went on to play in Seoul and Jeju. I am not aware of any previous Sherlockian theatrical production, musical or otherwise, in Korea, and there have been two articles (in English) about the musical in the Jeju Weekly, whose website is <www.jeuweekly.com>; search for [sherlock].

490. Nov 11 #3: Ken Ludwig's new comedy-mystery-thriller "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" (Mar 11 #3) opened its world premiere at the Cleveland Play House on Nov. 25; it's a murder mystery set in William Gillette's home, and it's wonderfully hilarious. You can see images of the set and costumes at <www.clevelandplayhouse.com>.
491. French Connection U.S. is promoting their fashion brand with a sweepstakes contest that's tied to "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" (the winner and a guest will be flown to New York for a preview of the film, and a shopping spree) <www.usa.frenchconnection.com/content/sherlock-holmes/index.htm>.
492. The Langham in London "lays claim to being instrumental in the creation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's most famous character, Sherlock Holmes," according to its web-site, and displays a commemorative Green Plaque (Mar 10 #3); the hotel also is offering a "Sherlock Holmes Package" celebrating the launch of the new film "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" (the package is available through Mar. 31). You get to stay in the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Suite and enjoy a gift from the Langham Book Butler, as well as an English breakfast <www.londonlanghamhotels.co.uk/rooms/sherlock-holmes-package.html>.
493. Dr. William R. Hanson has designed a colorful cachet for the stamp issued this year in honor of Mark Twain, who wrote "The Double-Barrelled Detective Story"; the artwork shows the mining camp in Hope Canyon in the Esmeralda region of California (where the story takes place in October 1900). $10.00 postpaid (to U.S. addresses), and you are requested to make payment in currency or by U.S. postal money order to Dr. Hanson at 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, NY 12801; for information on prices outside the U.S. contact him at <drhanson@localnet.com>.
494. The fall issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the The Baker Street Irregulars Trust newsletter) offers Peter Accardo's report on the completion of the BSI Archives cataloguing project, editor Mike Berdan's account of his visit to the Archives at the Houghton Library, and other news. All issues of the newsletter have been posted (the latest in full color) at the Trust web-site at <www.bsitrust.org>, and copies of the current issue are available on request from Marshall S. Berdan (2015 Main Street, Glastonbury, CT 06033) <editor@bsitrust.org>.
495. William Hyder, author of INTRODUCING SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GREAT DETECTIVE ACCORDING TO DOYLE (Oct 11 #4), now has an informative web-site about the book, and other things, at <www.introducingsherlockholmes.com>.
496. J. Warren Scheideman ("Count Von und Zu Grafenstein") died on Aug. 25. He taught English and American literature at De Paul University, and then at De Paul's School for New Learning; he was a member of Hugo's Companions and The Hounds of the Baskerville of Chicago, and wrote many learned articles for Sherlockian journals in the 1970s and 1980s. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982.

497. Nov 11 #4: Sherlock Holmes is (or at least will be) one of the characters in THE FIFTH HEART, a book that has not yet been written by Dan Simmons. Lenny Picker has noted that Simmons blogged about it in July 2010 <www.dansimmons.com/news/message/2010\_07.htm>; the blog offers an interesting look at how an author thinks about a book.
498. There are many Android Apps available for Google's Android phone, and you can explore them at <www.android-apps.com>; just search for [conan doyle] to find a number of free downloads, and a few more at modest cost.
499. Die Deutsche Sherlock Holmes Gesellschaft is celebrating the 125th anniversary of the first appearance of Sherlock Holmes in Beeton's Christmas Annwith a colorful calender (E12.50 plus shipping), and there's a preview at their at web-site <www.deutsche-sherlock-holmes-gesellschaft.de/?p=1205>; it's an interesting web-site, with lots of news about Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians in Germany.
500. Two sets of four Sherlock Holmes Marble Coasters with Sidney Paget illustrations ($39.95 each), cut from Botticino marble imported from Verona, are again available (along with other nice Sherlockiana) from The Strand Magazine (Box 1418, Birmingham, MI 48012) (800-300-6652) <www.strandmag.com>.
501. "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the Frozen City" is a new computer game designed for the Nintendo 3DS; it's due for release in 2012, but there are images available now at <www.gonintendo.com/?mode=viewstory&id=162111>.
502. Jim Ballinger has found Spineless Classics at Foyles in London; the company offers full-text books in four-point print on single sheets of quality paper, and with interesting silhouette artwork. Their titles include THE LOST WORLD and THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (£44.99 each unframed), and you get a 20% discount through Christmas if you say the magic word [scuttlebutt]; the concept is imaginative and attractive, and you can send orders to the company at The Granery, 4 High Street Eton, Windsor, Berks. SL4 6AS, England) <www.spinelessclassics.com/voucher/scuttlebutt>.
503. "Sherlock Holmes Neveben" [In the Name of Sherlock Holmes"] is a Hungarian film now in post-production and due for release next year. There's a oneminute teaser at <www.sherlockfilm.hu>. Click on the Facebook icon at the web-site to see a poster for the film.
504. Bill Crider, who contributes a "Blog Bytes" column to Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, has noted Tony Renner's interesting blog "Pfui", which can be found at <www.louderthannecessary.blogspot.com> and will be enjoyed by fans of Rex Stout and his work; Renner is reprinting contemporary reviews of Stout's work, as well as interviews with him and reviews written by him (one of them a review of M. F. K. Fisher's AN ALPHABET FOR GOURMETS).
505. Al Gregory spotted a report in the Thorne and District Gazette (Oct. 8) on a one-year suspension imposed on a teacher at the Hayfield School in Auckley, in South Yorkshire, for failing to follow the school's procedure for teaching and marking English coursework; omissions included teaching only THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES to pupils and failing to cover other Sherlock Holmes short stories. The teacher was later dismissed.

506. Nov 11 #5: WHO WAS JACK THE RIPPER?, by Hartley R. Nathan, is the result of his deep interest in the continuing mystery; there is discussion of Conan Doyle in the chapter on "Why Was the Ripper Not Caught?". The 88-page book costs $18.60 postpaid (and signed on request), and you can mail checks to Hartley (Minden Gross LLP, 145 King Street West #2200, Toronto, ON M5H 4G2, Canada).
507. Bryan Ford notes the Classic Tales Podcast <www.classictales.libsyn.com>, where B. J. Harrison reads (and well) classic tales that include "The Red-Headed League" and "Playing with Fire".
508. Visitors to the historic city of York can still raise a glass at the Brigadier Gerard, discovered by Ely Liebow some years ago (Aug 95 #2); the pub is named in honor of the famous racehorse ("the only English classic winner of the present century to have lost only one race in 18 or more starts"), and the horse was named in honor of Conan Doyle's swashbuckling hero. And Al Gregory has found the Brigadier Gerard Stakes, a flat race that is run each year at Sandown Park; the event was established in 1953, as the Coronation Stakes commemorating the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, and the race was renamed in 1973 in honor of the famous racehorse.
509. Raymond C. Murray first encountered forensic geology in 1973, when he was teaching geology at Rutgers University and received a request for assistance from a federal agent; he went on to co-author the first textbook (FORENSIC GEOLOGY) in 1975, and then alone wrote EVIDENCE FROM THE - EARTH: FORENSIC GEOLOGY AND CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION (Oct 04 #3), which now has a second edition, revised and expanded and with Sherlockian cover art (Missoula: Mountain Press, 2011; 240 pp., $16.00). It's an up-to-date review of the science, and gives due credit to Sherlock Holmes as the first forensic gewherer you'll find some Sherlockian artwork.

510. John Neville died on Nov. 19. He began his acting career in the 1950s, and performed at the Old Vic, alternating the roles of Othello and Iago with a young Richard Burton, and in films, and in 1972 emigrated to Canada to direct and act for the National Arts Centre Theatre Company; he continued to act in films such as "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen" and on television as "the well manicured man" in "The X-Files". He played Sherlock Holmes in film "A Study in Terror" (1965), on stage in the Royal Shakespeare Company revival of "Sherlock Holmes" in New York (1974) and in a Canadian production of the play (1975), and on radio in "The Incredible Murder of Cardinal Tosca" (1978).
511. "Sherlock Holmes and the Alien Abduction" is a new short story by Phillip Duke, available as an Amazon Kindle ebook ($0.99); Kindle software can be downloaded without charge to desktops and other devices in addition to the Kindle, and Amazon offers a free sample from the story.
512. Watson's Tin Box will host the fifth "Scintillation of Scions" at the Comfort Suites at Laurel Lakes, Md., on June 9, 2012, the intent is to bring together members of mid-Atlantic (and east-coast) Sherlockian societies for "an afternoon of fun, scholarship, and social time." It's an entertaining gathering, and additional information is available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724) <www.scintillation.org>.

513. Nov 11 #6: "A campaign is underway to turn one of London's most iconic but underwhelming roads into a thriving business quarter," according to a report in the Hampstead & Highgate Express (Sept. 18). The Portman Estate, hoping to turn the area into a Business Improvement District, wants to include Baker Street between Marylebone Road and Oxford Street as well as many surrounding roads. But the Baker Street BID is in the early stages: "consultation with local businesses is earmarked for early 2013.
514. "Pendergast thinks like Sherlock Holmes, fights like James Bond, and looks like Andy Warhol," Will Boisvert reported in a review of THE WHEEL OF DARKNESS (2007), perhaps the first time Holmes, Bond, and Warhol have appeared in the same sentence. FBI special agent Aloysius Xingu L. Pendergast will be found in a series of books written by Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child, who have an interesting web-site at <www.prestonchild.com>.
515. Michael Cox's A STUDY IN CELLULOID: A PRODUCER'S ACCOUNT OF JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES, first published by Rupert Books (May 00 #4), has been reissued (Bloomington: Gasogene Books, 2011; 222 pp., $28.95), and it's grand that the book's again in print. Cox was the producer of the Granada series from 1984 to 1991, and he offers insightful discussion of the entire series and a new "re-introduction" to the book, which includes a touching account of the memorial service for Jeremy Brett in 1995, some of Dame Jean Conan Doyle's comments on the series, and much else of interest. Those who own the first edition value it highly: if they have it, they keep it, and there are very few copies available on the used-book market, and at three-figure prices. Recommended.
516. The 20th and final chapter of Stephen Gaspar's pastiche "Cold Hearted Murder" is now available at <www.stephengaspar.blogspot.com>, along with the earlier chapters (he started posting the pastiche in January).
517. 4-D films are a relatively new phenomenon; they combine 3-D film with special effects in the theater, and tend to be shown in venues such as amusement and theme parks (although the films also can be screened without the special effects in normal theaters). "Sherlock Holmes 4D" is an 11-minute "comedy mystery adventure" being produced by Red Star 4D of Sheffield, England, authorized by the Conan Doyle Estate Ltd., according to Jon Lellenberg. There's a one-minute teaser available at <www.sherlockholmes4d.com>. No word yet as to when or where the film can be seen (and experienced).
518. Steve Emecz reports that MX Publishing will follow up on their "Great Sherlock Holmes Debate" (Sep 11 #5) with a monthly light discussion, the first one being scheduled on Dec. 14 from 8:00 to 10:00 pm GMT, open to all; you can register at <www3.gotomeeting.com/register/592595902>.
519. Some truly unusual Conan Doyle material will be included in a sale at Wellers Auctioneers on Dec. 3 <www.wellersthesurreyauction.com/Film.html>: lot 752 (estimated at £100-£150) is described in the catalogue as "a group of ladies bed jackets and undergarments of silk and cotton with lace and broderie anglaise, formerly the property of Lady Jean Conan Doyle of Windlesham, Crowborough, some bearing name tape 'Conan-Doyle', comprising: seven long bodices/nightdresses, three pairs of separate leg drawstring bloomers, two petticoats, and three bed jackets."
520. Nov 11 #7: "Meow'trage at Algonquin" was the headline on a story in the N.Y. Post on Nov. 23 about Matilda III, the latest of the Algonquin Hotel's free-ranging cats: the Department of Health told the hotel that live animals are not allowed in food-service establishments unless a patron needs a service dog; the Algonquin, which serves food in the lobby, has been forced to end a tradition that began in 1932. The Algonquin will close on Jan. 1 for four months for a $15-million renovation.
521. Daniel Corey's MORIARTY comic-book mini-series from Image (Jul 11 #1) has completed its first four-issue story ("The Dark Chamber"). also now available as a trade paperback ($14.99), and has begun a second story ("The Lazarus Tree"); his media company is DangerKatt, and you can see some of his work at his web-site <www.professorjamesmoriarty.com>.
522. The late Peter Woods' article on "The Lost Special" (an excellent detailed investigation of Conan Doyle's Apocryphal story) is one of the featured articles in the fall issue of Canadian Holmes (published by The Bootmakers of Toronto for its members); a subscription's included with membership ($35.00 a year). TDC Postal Station Box 1157, 77 King Street West, Toronto, ON M5K 1P2, Canada <www.sherlockian.net/bootmakers>.
523. "Sherlock Holmes: Voices of the Celts" is a new play that presents Holmes and Watson solving a mystery that involves the Celtic Sacred Book of Kells, "just in time for the Winter Solstice and Christmas," at the Walnut Street Theatre Studio 5 from Dec. 2 to Dec. 11; 825 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19107 (609-703-3906) <midsummernightplayers@comcast.net>.
524. Francie LeVillard is the great-granddaughter of the famous French detective who consulted with Sherlock Holmes (as Holmes reported in "The Sign of the Four"), and is a detective in her own right, on the Monterey Peninsula, and appears in mysteries written by Tony Seton and available as on-line serials at <www.montereymystery.com>.
525. Warner Bros. is hard at work publicizing "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" (and will be working even hard in December, when the film will open in Hong Kong on Dec. 15, and then in the U.S. and the U.K. on Dec. 16. And of course there are all sorts of colorful posters available on the Internet, including one from Hong Kong that shows Gladstone (the dog who lives at 221B Baker Street); needless to say, it looks much better in a larger size and in full color, and you can see it at <www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Wolvie09/news/?a=50072>.
526. There's also pleasant news about the BBC television series "Sherlock" that stars Benedict Cumberbatch: PBS-TV has announced that the second season's three new episodes will air in the U.S. beginning on May 6. Sorry: as far as I know, the BBC has not yet announced an air date for the U.K.
527. Peter C. Shumway's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND 'THE KISS OF DEATH' was published by BookSurge in 2005, and a second, slightly revised edition is available online at <www.epix.net/~pshumway/kod.htm>; the pastiche has Holmes and Watson investigating a series of bizarre murders committed by an evil and vindictive magician.

528. Nov 11 #8: Peter Calamai delivered the annual Cameron Hollyer Lecture (on "The Real World of Sherlock Holmes"), at the Toronto Public Library last year, and his remarks were published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; a limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now. The web-site's at <www.acdfriends.org>; or you can contact Cliff Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada) <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>, and the minimum donation (which includes three issues of their newsletter "Through the Magic Door) is $25.00. This year's lecture by Tom Ue ("Sherlock Holmes and Shakespeare") will be sent to members of the Friends next year. A few copies of past lectures (Steven Rothman on Christopher Morley in 2008 and Michael Dirda on Conan Doyle as an Essayist and Journalist in 2009) are available at $10.00 each.
529. THE PUNISHMENT OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Bob Burr and Philip K. Jones (London: MX Publishing, 2011; 292 pp., £11.99/E12.99/$18.95), is an astonishing anthology of Sherlockian humor, some of it Sherlockian directly and some by association only, including puns, jokes, spoonerisms, feghoots, shaggy dog stories, and the occasional feghoot; the majority of them were written or adapted by Burr, and all have been catalogued by Jones in his ever-expanding data base. The publisher's web-site is at <www.mxpublishing.com>.
530. Also from MX Publishing: Charlie Roxburgh's THE CASE OF THE RUSSIAN CHESSBOARD (2011; 108 pp., £6.99/E7.99/$9.95); the pastiche involves Holmes and Watson in the world of Russian radicals, idealists, and extremists in London, and it's a world full of treachery and conspiracies.
531. And: Thomas Bruce Wheeler's THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2011; 391 pp., (£13.99/E17.00/$22.95) is a greatly enhanced version of his THE NEW FINDING SHERLOCK'S LONDON (Jun 09 #5); there are discussions of each story, and the London locations mentioned in them, and listings of locations near each underground and railway station and along each underground line, plus a few walking tours. The enhancement comes with the e-book edition, which costs $9.00 to $10.00 and will run on desktops, tablets, phones, and what-not; it is an impressive introduction (for me, at least) to what can be done with modern technology: clicking on geographical coordinates in the book brings up Google maps and allows you to maneuver through 360-degree photographic street views.
532. And: Tracy Revels' SHADOWBLOOD: A NOVEL OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2011; 193 pp., £10.99/E12.99/$19.95) is a sequel to her SHADOWFALL (Oct 11 #2); Holmes and Watson are again in the world of wizards and wizardry, and in Florida, this time in pursuit of villains who in turn are in hot pursuit of the legendary Fountain of Youth.
533. Ryan Jacobson and Deb Mercier have taken an interesting approach to the Canon in their CAN YOU SURVIVE: SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Minneapolis: Lake 7 Creative, 2011; 157 pp., $8.95), which is written for readers aged 9 to 13; it's a "choose your path" book that combines three of the stories and offers readers opportunities to decide how to proceed. Their web-site's at <www.lake7creative.com>.
534. Dec 11 #1: One does hear of Sherlock everywhere: Paul Martin reports that Tim Johnson, curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, and the staff of the Brookings Public Library in South Dakota are collaborating on a four-month "A Life Explored" program on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in Brookings. Go to <www.brookingslibrary.org> and click on "Newsletter" for more information.
535. The official web-site for Frogwares' computer game "The Testament of Sherlock Holmes" (Jun 10 #5) is now live at <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com>; click on "Collection" to review five earlier games from Frogwares.
536. Further to the report (Oct 11 #4) about the "Sherlock" violin made by Steve Burnett from wood from the 170-year-old sycamore at Liberton Bank House in Edinburgh, musicians from the Royal Scottish National Orchestra performed on his new "Conan Doyle Quartette" (two violins, a cello, and a viola) at a concert that was broadcast on BBC-1's "The One Show" on Nov. 2; Burnett has a web-site at <www.burnettviolins.co.uk>, where you can listen to the musicians play a piece by Mendelsson. The web-site also offers images of his instruments, and audio and video of his "Sherlock" violin in performance.
537. Karen Ellery found Rikki Little's grotesque "Custom Zombie" artwork at his web-site at <www.etsy.com/shop/customzombie>; search for [sherlock] to see his "Sherlock Bones" and "Sherlock Holmes" prints. Little also does custom portraits for people who want to see what they'd look like as zombies.
538. Alan Sues died on Dec. 1. He began his acting career on stage and continued in vaudeville, and then appeared in films and on television, where he was best known for his comic roles on the long-running series "Rowan & Martin's Laugh In". Sues also played Moriarty in a touring company in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in 1976 with Robert Stephens as Holmes in Toronto and with Leonard Nimoy in Detroit, Cleveland, Los Angeles, Denver, and Chicago. Lee Gibson has reported that he saw one performance in Chicago in which Nimoy and Sues exchanged roles: Sues was "a very fine Holmes" and Nimoy "a better Moriarty than he was a Holmes."
539. THE DEAD WITNESS, edited by Michael Sims (New York: Walker & Company, 2011; 576 pp., $20.00), is aptly subtitled "a connoisseur's collection of Victorian detective stories," and he offers an insightful introduction and an excellent selection that includes old favorites (the first two chapters of A STUDY IN SCARLET), familiar authors such as Poe and Dickens, and many stories that will be new to many if not most readers.
540. Criminal Element is community web-site "featuring daily content for fans of the crime and mystery genres in all of their forms," and of course there's frequent Sherlockian content; you can sample their Sherlockian content at <www.criminalelement.com/features/series/sherlockiana?WTmc\_id=undefined>, where you'll find "Sherlock Season 2 Scenes" (clips from the new mini-series), Lyndsay Faye's "Testosterone and a Powder Keg of Glitter" (her review of "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows"), Cathy Zhu Chen's "Holmes Coping with Alzheimers Comedy Sketch: Depressing?" (her comments on a skit "That Mitchell and Webb Look"), and much more.

541. Dec 11 #2: Kim Newman describes his PROFESSOR MORIARTY: THE HOUND OF THE D'URBERVILLES (London: Titan Books, 2011; 488 pp., $14.95) as a "novel disguised as a collection," and the book is a fine demonstration of the fact that villains continue to attract excellent writers; the story is told by Col. Moran (some chapters are reprints, and some are new), and the book is full of interesting characters, some borrowed from other authors. It's all grand fun, and recommended.
542. And Newman's ANNO DRACULA (London: Titan Books, 2011; 547 pp., $14.95) is an expanded new edition of his earlier imaginative novel (Dec 92 #3); it's an alternate-universe novel, with considerable cross-over: Queen Victoria has married Vlad Tepes, who is ruling as Prince Consort and as Lord Protector, and Mycroft Holmes is far more involved in a resistance movement than his brother. The new material includes annotations, an alternate ending, and an excerpt from Newman's movie script. ANNO DRACULA was the first of a series, and Titan will be publishing expanded new editions of the next two titles, and a brand new fourth title.
543. Newman has an excellent web-site at <www.johnnyalucard.com>, and his essay on "Everything You Need to Know about Professor Moriarty" is available at <www.tinyurl.com/89oao4y>.
544. The Pawky Humorists, one of the more unusual of the Sherlockian societies, was founded by Peter G. Ashman in 1974, revived by Norman M. Davis in 1989, was revived again by Linda Crane this year in an electronic version to be found at Facebook; just go to <www.facebook.com> and search for [pawky humorists].

545. Reported: Barbara Roden's THE THAMES HORROR AND OTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is a new eBook published by the Ash-Tress Press; a collection of four stories, one of them new and the others reprints ($5.99 for Kindle, Nook, etc.) <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/ebooks.htm>
546. Digiview Entertainment has issued CDs of public-domain fiction, including (in 2006) CASE OF IDENTITY and THE RED-HEADED LEAGUE, nicely read by James Hadley; they're available inexpensively here and there on the Internet.
547. John Linsenmeyer offers a discovery for anyone who's investigation forensic or medico-legal aspects of the Canon: important textbooks written by Alfred Swaine Taylor (1806-1880), who has been called the father of British forensic medicine, are readily available (free) at <www.books.google.com>. Just search for [alfred swaine taylor].
548. The Wick Theatre Company will perform Tony Brownings' new dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" on Jan. 11-14 at the Barn Theatre (Southwick Street, Southwick, West Sussex BN42 4RE) <www.wicktheatre.co.uk>.
549. THE DRAGON TURN (Toronto: Tundra, 2011; 220 pp., $19.95) is the fifth book in Shane Peacock's series about "the boy Sherlock Holmes" (still on his own in London and learning how to be a detective, with the help of his friends Irene Doyle and Beatrice Leckie, and his mentor Sigerson Bell); the series is well written (and attractively produced by Tundra), and Peacock's website is at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.

550. Dec 11 #3: The Feb. 2012 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will be found on newsstands during the birthday celebrations, has a Sherlockian cover photograph by Kurt Paris, a pastiche ("Shikari") by James Lincoln Warren, a sonnet ("Immortal Londoners") by Donald A. Yates. and a Sherlockian cartoon by Bob Schochet. You can see some of Schochet's non-S'ian work at <www.dialanartist.com/portfolio/olist.htm?it=4&ar=176>.
551. Reported: a 25th anniversary edition of SCARLET IN GASLIGHT, the comic-book series and graphic novel written by Martin Powell and illustrated by Seppo Makinen (May 88 #5), from CreateSpace ($9.99); Sherlock Holmes vs. Dracula.
552. SPOT THE PLOT, by J. Patrick Lewis (San Francisco: Chronicle Books, 2009; 28 pp., $15.99), is an amusing "riddle book of book riddles" with Sherlockian artwork by Lynn Munsinger on the cover and on inside pages.
553. Some film costumes are worth more than others: Basil Rathbone's wool cape overcoat used in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" sold for $61,500 when Debbie Reynolds' collection of movie memorabilia was sold at auction (Jun 11 #6), but a brown shirt that was used by Patrick Macnee in "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976), estimated at £30.00-50.00 by Cameo Auctioneers in a sale on Dec. 6, went unsold.
554. John Baesch has reported an attractive deerstalker in a catalog from the J. Peterman Company (888-647-2555) <www.jpeterman.com>; it's item 2914 and costs $128. The catalog notes that "This is not the hat of an urban detective. But don't blame Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. It was the famed illustrator Sidney Paget who was a fan of the stylish 'fore and aft,' and sketched Sherlock in it for the Strand Magazine in 1881. It just sort of fit."
555. Deb Weissler, a fervent Sherlockian miniaturist (Jul 09 #6 and Jan 10 #5), has a colorful article about her Sherlockian room box in the October issue of Dolls House and Miniature Scene; you can see photographs of her excellent work at <www.tinuurl.com/7eoevgu>.
556. Arthur Twidle is perhaps best known for his illustrations of the Sherlock Holmes stories in The Strand Magazine, but he was a prolific artist; some of his non-Sherlockian art will be available at Leland Little Auction & Estate Sales on Jan. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/73g2vrq>.
557. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be produced at the Long Beach Playhouse, Feb. 25 to Mar. 24; 5021 East Anaheim Street, Long Beach, CA 90804 (562-494-1014) <www.lbplayhouse.org>.
558. Willis Frick reports that Cox has shut down Sherlocktron (along with everyone else's Personal WebSpace), explaining that declining usage of the service "has highlighted the need to focus our resources on other priorities, such as increasing our Internet speeds and providing new services." Willis quickly found a new host <www.sherlocktron.hostoi.com/Sherlocktron.html>.
559. Dec 11 #4: The Edinburgh Scotsman has reported (Dec. 22) that the family of Dr. Joseph Bell has donated all of his papers, and other material, to the Royal College of Surgeons; one item in the collection is the letter to Bell from Conan Doyle in which he wrote "It is most certainly to you that I owe Sherlock Holmes." The collection is part of an exhibition at the Surgeons' Hall Museum, and planning is underway for a special "Conan Doyle Day" in the New Year.
560. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times11-12.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, books and much more, and an opportunity to see a colorful rendition of one of Jim Vogelsang's "Olmcs 'n Watso" Christmas cards.
561. The modern version of The Strand Magazine, published by Andrew Gulli, continues to offer interesting (and occasionally Sherlockian) fiction and reviews ; the latest issue is #35 ($6.95) and includes Lyndsay Faye's new pastiche "The Adventure of the Vintner's Codex" (a new version of the case of Vamberry, the wine merchant).
562. A Wall Street Journal blog, kindly forwarded by Bob Katz, noted on Dec. 18 that wide-release franchise films failed to match what their previous installments earned, continuing a domestic box-office slump; the highest boxoffice receipts went to "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows", which grossed $39.6 million over the three-day weekend. "Sherlock Holmes" grossed $62.3 million on a "magical" weekend in 2009 when the Christmas holiday fell on a Friday and children were already out of school, according Dan Fellman, Warner Bros.' president of domestic distribution, and he was pleased with the reception of the sequel, which cost $125 million and attracted a 59% male audience.
563. <www.boxofficemojo.com> is a fine web-site for tracking how movies do (and have done) at the box office. As of Dec. 29, the new film had grossed $159 million world-wide. The web-site offers daily and weekly figures only for domestic gross: the first film in the franchise grossed $146.6 million in the first two weeks, and the second film grossed $110 million.
564. WaterTower Music has issued the soundtrack of "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" as a CD ($9.99) and as an MP3 download ($4.99). According to the Internet Movie Data Base, people who purchase the 18-track album will also be able to download three free additional tracks from the film, along with a video chronicling composer Hans Zimmer's trip to Slovakia to record the music of the Roma people.
565. And "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Good Music" is a blog by Anastasia Tsioulcas at <www.npr.org/blogs/deceptivecadence> [scroll down to the title of the piece]; she praises Zimmer's "clever score" and is pleased that for once "it's not just the villain who loves classical music."
566. National Public Radio <www.npr.org> has much of interest: you can listen to interviews on programs such as "All Things Considered" (Anthony Horowitz, Les Klinger, and Laurie King on Dec. 19), "Morning Edition" (Michael Sims on Dec. 22) and read blogs. Search for [sherlock holmes] or [conan doyle], and don't neglect older material in the archives.
567. Dec 11 #5: M. Diane Vogt's THE LITTLE BOOK OF BATHROOM CRIME PUZZLES (New York: MJF Books, 2005) is Sherlockian only for a small picture of a rubber duckie in Sherlockian costume on the front cover of the book, similar (but not identical) to the real rubber duckie in Sherlockian costume that was briefly in shops a few years ago. You can see the front cover of the book at Amazon, and elsewhere on the Internet images of the real rubber duckie (which seems not to be available for purchase anywhere).

568. For completists: Sherlockian artwork on the cover of David Levinson Wilk's REALLY CLEVER CROSSWORDS (New York: Puzzlewright Press, 2004; 95 pp., $8.95). The puzzles are full of wordplay, and the collection is described at Amazon as an "official MENSA puzzle book."
569. Anthony Horowitz's new pastiche THE HOUSE OF SILK (London: Orion Books, 2011; 304 pp., £18.99) (New York: Mulholland Books, 2011; 294 pp., $27.99) has been reviewed widely and promoted heavily, and he tells an interesting story that involves Holmes and Watson in two intersecting mysteries and a "dire conspiracy that threatens to tear apart the very fabric of society." The publisher has described the book as the first Sherlock Holmes novel to be authorized by the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. (the heirs of Dame Jean Conan Doyle), but of course it isn't. Horowitz is the creator of the television series "Foyle's War" and the author of the "Alex Rider" children's series, and his web-site's at <www.anthonhorowitz.com>.
570. Spotted at eBay: a publicity still from "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) signed by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce; the auction ends on Jan 3, and the opening bid is $6,000. It will be interesting, of course, to see if anyone bids.
571. Mary Losure's THE FAIRY RING: ELSIE AND FRANCES FOOL THE WORLD (Somerville: Candlewick Press, 2012; 181 pp., $16.99) is an interesting approach to the story of the Cottingley fairies: the book is written for children ages 10 and up, and it's carefully researched and tells the story of Elsie, Frances, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle well.
572. The Long Beach Shakespeare Company performed a reading of "The Blue Carbuncle" on Dec. 22, with Richard MacPherson as Holmes, and (thanks to the Internet) you can listen to a web-cast at <www.lbshakespeare.org/audio.php>.
573. "It is a truth universally acknowledged," Michael Dirda suggested, "that a restless reader in possession of a quiet evening must be in want of a mystery." That's the opening of his review in the Washington Post (Dec. 8) of P. D. James' new DEATH COMES TO PEMBERLEY, a mystery devised as a sequel to Jane Austen's PRIDE AND PREJUDICE, and all of Jane Austen's fans will know how appropriate his language is.
574. Detective novelist N. Narasimhaliah died on Dec. 25. He had written more than 550 detective novels, and according to stories in the Indian press he often said that while people described him as the Sherlock Holmes of Kannada, "they might have wanted to call me Arthur Conan Doyle."
575. Dec 11 #6: The second season of the television series "Sherlock" that stars Benedict Cumberbatch will begin on the BBC beginning on Jan. 1, and on PBS-TV on May 6, but people outside Britain don't have to wait that long to see the series if you can play region 2 DVDs: the British set will be released on Mar. 5 (£12.99), according to <www.amazon.co.uk>. There is a lot of information about "Sherlock" at <www.sherlockology.com>; the folks who maintain Sherlockology describe it as "a fan-site dedicated to the BBC drama Sherlock."
576. The Daily Telegraph reported (Dec. 30) that the first series has been sold to 180 countries, and provided a link <www.tinyurl.com/6q48eux> that allows you to watch a 3-minute video with Holmes and Watson speaking fluently in Italian, Russian, Spanish, and French.
577. It has been about 40 years since this newsletter was founded as quite informal "information sheets" mailed to John Bennett Shaw by way of sharing Sherlockian and Doylean gossip with him (the "about" being due to the fact that the earliest pages were not dated). The gossip was of course written on what some now blithely call a "steam typewriter" at a time when postage cost 8c an ounce, and the paragraphs were full of arcane abbreviations that John had no difficulty in understanding.
578. Soon there were other readers, and eventually actual subscribers, and then a more formal name, and the manual typewriter was succeeded by an electric and in March 1985 by a computer. Those who want more history are welcome to read the opening page at <www.sherlocktron.hostoi.com/scuttle.htm>.
579. Which of course brings us to the Internet, which in the early days was managed for the academic community by the National Science Foundation, which imposed on users a strict "acceptable use policy" intended to prevent commercial use of the Internet; somewhere in my archives there's a copy of the letter I wrote to the NSF asking if reports of things offered for sale by others was acceptable, and a reply confirming that the newsletter was not in violation of the rules.
580. Of course now the newsletter is full of URLs and a new jargon. And there are no doubt many people who are quite happy to read all of the gossip in bits and bytes. Certainly there are fewer people now who actually pay for a subscription: there were more than 300 subscribers to the newsletter in 1995 (when subscribers in the U.S. paid $8.90 a year), and fewer than 150 now.
581. How times change. I acquired my first videocassette a few years after the information sheets were launched, and my first VCR a few years later (the reason for that sequence being part of my occasional lecture on Sherlockian pornography). Now there are DVDs and streaming audio and video on the Internet, and of course electronic books and stories that are available only in that format, which makes things interesting for people who collect first printings of first editions. How do you collect first editions of e-books? What will book collectors be collecting 40 years from now?

1. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 158th birthday during the long weekend from Jan. 11 to Jan. 15. The festivities began with the traditional ASH Wednesday dinner sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at O'Casey's and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning, followed by the usual lunch at McSorley's).
2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Midtown Executive Club on Thursday evening was Dr. Lisa Sanders, author of a "Diagnosis" column for the N.Y. Times and the technical advisor for the television series "House, M.D."; the title of her talk was "Is Holmes Crazy As a Fox, or Just Plain Crazy?", and you will be able to read her paper in the next issue of The Baker Street Journal.
3. The William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's was well attended, as always, and featured Donny Zaldin and Hartley Nathan in a Sherlockian "Carnac the Magnificent" skit and the Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) in a Sherlockian tribute to the centenary of the sinking of the Titanic. The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the annual Jan Whimsey award (named in memory of his wife Jan Stauber) for the most whimsical piece in The Serpentine Muse last year; the winner (Karen Murdock, author of "Do You Write Like Arthur Conan Doyle?") received a certificate and a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Yale Club, with Les Klinger offering the preprandial first toast to Connie Kean as The Woman. The dinner's theme was "His Last Bow" (in celebration of the centenary of the beginning of Holmes' involvement in the case), and it featured the usual toasts and traditions, as well as papers and tributes and a hilarious "dramatic homage" by Paul Singleton and Scott Monty to the BSI's 2000 Year Old Man.
5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") presented the BSI Trust's first Benefactor's Medal to Glen Miranker, an editor's medal to Mary Ann Bradley for her work on the 2011 Baker Street Journal Christmas Annual (a tribute to Lenore Glen Offord), and a Two-Shilling Award to Henry Boote (for maintaining the BSI musical tradition launched by Harvey Officer in the 1940s and continued by Jim and Bruce Montgomery). And this year's Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures were presented to Mark Samuel Schwartz ("Thucydides"), Phil Bergem ("Birdy Edwards"), Helen Dorey ("Helen

- Stoner"), Peter Accardo ("Thornycroft Huxtable"), Akane Higashiyama ("Baritsu"), Don Hobbs ("Inspector Lestrade"), Donny Zaldin ("John Hector McFarlane"), and Mary Ann Bradley ("Mary Morstan").
6. "Jewels in the Canon" was the theme of the Gaslight Gala at the Manhattan Club, where the entertainment included toasts, old songs with new Sherlockian lyrics, skits, door prizes, a raffle, an auction, and a "Questionable Crossword" quiz that required punned answers in a "yell it out if you know it" format.

  7. Jan 12 #2: Some of the more fervent (or possibly hard core) Sherlockians have been known to gather after the dinners at O'Lunney's Irish Pub to honor long-standing traditions such as staying until at least 2:21; another tradition calls for newly-Investitured Irregulars to buy a round of tequila shots, and it has been reported that this year was no exception.
  8. On Saturday morning Covent Garden West (the dealers room at the Roosevelt Hotel) welcomed sellers and buyers, and authors and editors delighted to inscribe or sign their books. And The Beacon Society presented its annual Beacon Award (recognizing someone who introduces young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories) to William S. Dorn; the society has an excellent website <www.beaconsociety.com> where you can read excerpts from Bill's "Study Guide to Sherlock Holmes".
  9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon reception at the Association of the Bar of the City of New York offered entertainment, conversation, wining, and dining; the entertainment included a Sherlockian "Gallagher & Shean" duet performed by James Saunders and Henry Boote. Sonia Fetherston was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate accompanied by a check) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year (her article on "I Met Harry Murcher"). And the Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets for Maggie Schpak's handsome replica Lady Frances Carfax's antique Spanish jewellery, and an auction of literary and artistic donations to the Fund.
  10. The principal Saturday-evening event was the "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner arranged by The Curious Collectors of Baker Street at Kennedy's Irish Pub, and then on Sunday morning a goodly crowd gathered at the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' brunch at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant.
  11. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 11, 2013. And the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner likely will be on Jan. 19, 2013.
  12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; there will be much more detailed reports in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSI appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $38.50 (to the U.S.) or $49.00 (elsewhere); checks can be sent to the BSI (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077), and credit-card payments are welcome from foreign subscribers.
  13. You can also subscribe at the BSI web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSI, and information on the BSI's other publications and activities. And in the meantime, you can read Scott Monty's reports on the birthday festivities at his blog at <www.bakerstreetblog.com>.
  14. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2012 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).

  15. Jan 12 #3: Plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' running of The Silver Blaze will return to Saratoga Springs Race Track in upstate New York on Aug. 4; it will be a weekend gathering, and details will be available soon from Lou and Candace Lewis (2 Lookerman Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12603) (845-471-0296) <www.silverblazenymhomestead.com>.
  16. Plan farther ahead: registration is now open for the BSI's weekend conference in Los Angeles on Aug. 30-Sept. 3. "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" will be held at UCLA and will feature actors, producers, and directors, as well as presentations on screenwriting, casting, costuming, lighting, and sound. And screening of several rare and recently-restored films. Details at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/losangeles2012.html>.
  17. Alice Wright posted to the "Letters of Mary" mailing list noting an interesting post to the Earth Observing System blog at <www.tinyurl.com/7zx7oq6> by Eos Chater about what it was like teaching Benedict Cumberbatch how to portray Holmes as a violin player. She performs in the Bond String Quartet <www.bondmusic.net>.
  18. If you'd like to add Esperanto to your collection of Sherlock Holmes stories in translation, Don Hobbs has found LA PLANOJ DE BRUCE PARTINGTON (36 pp., €5.00 from Books on Demand GmbH at <www.amazon.de>).
  19. Don also has some nice news for those who want a translation in Piemontese (a language of the Piedmont region in northwest Italy): SHERLOCK HOLMES: EL MASTIN DIJ BASKERVILLE is available from <www.libreriauniversitaria.it> for €15.00; search for [9788889768389]. The number of languages for Canonical translations is now 90.
  20. Willis Frick continues to add material to Sherlocktron, which can be found at <www.sherlocktron.hostoi.com/Sherlocktron.html>, the latest being Phil Bergem's checklists of "Sherlock Holmes (and Holmes Related) Film and Television Programs" and "Non-Sherlockian Conan Doyle Films and Television Programs".
  21. "Felted Soap Sherlock Holmes" is handcrafted by Zoe Djukic at Sofino <www.etsy.com/shop/sofino>; it's a 4-ounce bar of sage and lemongrass soap encased in soft Merino wool (and you can reuse the pouch when the soap's gone); $18.00 plus shipping. The folks at Criminal Element suggest that "perhaps this fun, woolly Sherlock will wash away your iniquities."
  22. The Beacon Society has announced a Mar. 1 deadline for teachers, librarians, Sherlockian literary societies, and others apply for a Jan Stauber Grant, which funds (up to $250) development of a project that will introduce young people to the Canon. The application form, guidelines, and additional details are available at the society's web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
  23. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is a delightful parody that was written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007, and it will be produced by the New Jersey Repertory Company from Apr. 19 to May 20; 179 Broadway, Long Branch, NJ 07740 (732-229-3166) <www.njrep.org>.

  24. Jan 12 #4: Don Christian spotted a story on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered" (Jan. 2) that might be of interest to those who recall that Sherlock Holmes owned a Stradivarius: 17 blindfolded expert violinists were asked to identify whether an excerpt from Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D Major was played on a Strad or on a modern violin. Only three of the experts got it right. You can listen to the story, and take the test yourself, at <www.tinyurl.com/75hhehb>.
  25. Ronald Searle died on Dec. 30. He was a well-known cartoonist, caricaturist, and cover artist for newspapers and magazines in Britain, France, and the United States. Most famous, perhaps, for creating "The Belles of St. Trinian's" and "Molesworth", Searle also drew the sitting room at 221B Baker Street for the catalog of the Abbey House exhibition in 1951, reprinted in Punch (June 20, 1951); other Sherlockian work included an illustration in Punch (July 6, 1953) and a cartoon in The New Yorker (Dec. 16, 1991).
  26. The publicity still from "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939) signed by Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce that was offered at eBay with an opening bid of $6,000 (Dec 11 #5) went unsold when no one entered a bid.

27. Nice news for friends of Matilda (described by the N.Y. Times as the "Algonquin's Roaming Diva Cat"): after the Department of Health expressed concern about a live animal that isn't a service dog being present in a foodservice establishment (Nov 11 #7), the Algonquin has installed an electric fence that will ensure that Matilda stays in a safe section of the lobby. You can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/89sswdz>.

28. Jan 12 #5: Big Finish continues to issue excellent Sherlockian audio, the latest being THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, dramatized by Richard Dinnick and starring Nicholas Briggs as Holmes and Richard Earl as Watson, on two CDs ($23.91) and as a download ($12.99); PO Box 3787, Maidenhead, Berks. SE6 3TF, England) <www.bigfinish.com>. It's a full-cast recording, with featurette interviews with cast and crew.
29. Briggs and Earl also star in Big Finish recordings of THE FINAL PROBLEM AND THE EMPTY HOUSE, in George Mann's interesting pastiche THE REIFICATION OF HANS GERBER, and Brian Clemens 1988 play HOLMES AND THE RIPPER, each on two CDs and as downloads (same prices). Other similar sets available from Big Finish include their earlier recordings (Feb 10 #6) of Roger Llewellyn in David Stuart Davies' plays SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE LAST ACT (1999) and SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE DEATH AND LIFE (2008). They're all well done, and there are more to come (check their web-site).
30. Laurie R. King has reported on her Facebook page that the next Mary Russell novel (GAME OF SHADOWS) will be published in September. It's all about Fez (in Morocco), and she has noted that she had its title, which is central to the theme of the novel, long before she heard of the new Robert Downey Jr. movie, and she sees no reason to change her title.
31. Harvey Mackie's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is scheduled at the Jewel Box Theatre, Mar. 1-25. 3700 North Walker Avenue, Oklahoma City, OK 73188 (405-521-1786) <www.jewelboxtheatre.org>.
32. Friends of the late Bill Rabe will recall the "List of Words Banished from the Queen's English for Misuse, Overuse, and General Uselessness" that he launched in 1976. Lake Superior State University in Michigan continues the tradition, and there was a fine story about this year's list, with mention of Bill, on "All Things Considered" on National Public Radio on Jan. 1. You can listen to (and read) the story at <www.tinyurl.com/8ymo38m>. Thanks to Jon Lellenberg for noting the report.
33. Jonathan Cecil died on Sept. 22, 2011. He began his acting career in cabaret at Oxford with Dudley Moore and Alan Bennett, made his television debut in 1964, and went on to a long career, also acting on stage and screen and specializing in comic roles. He also was the Honeymoon Groom in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), but in the "naked honeymooner" segment that was cut from the film before it was released.
34. Ben Stephenson, controller of drama for the BBC refused earlier this month to confirm that there would be more than two seasons of the BBC's mini-series "Sherlock", and co-creator Steven Moffat told BBC News that there was ""no guarantee we'll be bringing him back." But as soon as the "Reichenbach" episode aired Moffat told fans "Yes, of course there's going to be a third series--it was commissioned at the same time as the second. Gotcha!"
35. Judith Freeman's useful index to The Serpentine Muse (published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes since 1975); the index is available from her by e-mail as an Excel spreadsheet <judith-freeman@hotmail.com>, and the ASH web-site <www.ash-nyc.com> has information on subscribing to the Muse (back issues are unfortunately not available).

36. Jan 12 #6: "What Scott Learned" was the headline on a story in the Washington Post on Jan. 3 <www.tinyurl.com/6u3wtz2>, about Robert Falcon Scott's ill-fated attempt to be the first to reach the South Pole. One of the photographs with the story shows Scott writing in his journal in a wooden hut at Cape Evans, with shelves of books behind him, and two books on his bed. One of the books he took with him to the Antarctic was Conan Doyle's THE GREEN FLAG AND OTHER STORIES OF WAR AND SPORT, and it's still there, preserved as the southernmost copy of a book written by Sir Arthur.
37. Anglofile, offering detailed coverage of British entertainment and formerly available by mail, now is a blog by Leslie King, and you can read her latest news at <anglofileplus.livejournal.com/9043.html>; she offers early reports on programs to come on PBS-TV and on BBC America.
38. Sarah Montague reports from time to time on Sherlockian affairs for WNYC-FM (New York), and this year she has honored Sherlock Holmes' birthday with a story about A STUDY IN SHERLOCK, the anthology edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger; she interviewed the editors and some of the contributors (including Neil Gaiman and S. J. Rozann), and you can hear her broadcast at <www.tinyurl.com/7sv7p2w>.
39. News from Don Izban: the Colonel Sebastian Moran Secret Gun Club will hold its quadrennial "Hunt for the Mongoose Named Moriarty" in Chicago on Feb. 29 (the event takes place only during Leap Years); contact Don (1812 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 06068) (847-292-1270) for more information.
40. Compliments to eagle-eyed Nick Utechin, whose letter to The Times (Jan. 19) had the headline "If One Is Paying Careful Attention, Inside One Sherlock Holmes One May Well Find...Another Sherlock Holmes"; Nick was grateful to Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss for their choice of the actor who played the perturbed gentleman in the Diogenes Club in "The Reichenbach Fall" (that's the third episode of the new "Sherlock" mini-series). The actor was Douglas Wilmer, who has played Holmes many times, and has just celebrated his 92nd birthday.
41. The Woodland Opera House Theatre Company is performing Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" through Feb. 12. 340 Second Street, Woodland, CA 95695 (530-666-9617) <www.woodlandoperahouse.org>
42. The Vigilante Theatre Company is performing Bruce Hurlbut's new play "House Arrest: The Curious Events Surrounding the Retirement of Sherlock Holmes" on tour in Montana, with a stop at Quinns Hot Springs Resort in Paradise on Feb. 11-12; their web-site's at <www.vigilantetheatrecompany.com>.
43. The Daily Telegraph reported (Jan. 13) that the one-bedroom flat just above Speedy's on North Gower Street in London is available for rent for £300 per week. The building is used for exterior shots for the BBC mini-series that stars Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman (interiors scenes are filmed elsewhere). The story noted that the estate agent's listing does not mention whether living in the flat will "give you preternatural observational powers, a doting landlady, or a network of homeless friends." The agent's listing at <www.mchughandco.com/Lettings/Letting.aspx#&&s=0> may still be viewed (if the flat has not already been taken).

44. Jan 12 #7: The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for this year's Edgar awards, which include Michael Dirda's ON CONAN DOYLE; OR, THE WHOLE ART OF STORYTELLING (best critical/biographical), Neil Gaiman's "The Case of Death and Honey" (best short story), and Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" and Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot" (competing head-to-head for best play); Neil's story appeared in the anthology A STUDY IN SHERLOCK. The winners will be announced at the MWA Gala Banquet in New York on Apr. 26.
45. Distinctive Dummies, founded in 2010, creates attractive 12" custom action figures for fans of science fiction, horror, and Hammer Films, and the last of those categories has brought them to Peter Cushing as Sherlock Holmes in the 1959 film "The Hound of the Baskervilles"). The figure costs $99.99 postpaid worldwide, and if you want to see it in full color you can visit their web-site at <www.distinctivedummies.net/the\_hammer\_collection.html>. If they're successful with Cushing, they hope to follow up with Basil Rathbone and Jeremy Brett.
46. Mill Creek Entertainment is planning to release a three-DVD set with all 26 episodes of the animated children's series "Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century" on Feb. 21 ($12.98), along with a single "best-of" DVD with 10 episodes ($9.98). And for completists: there will be different artwork on the boxes.

47. Sarah Greenwood, the production designer for both of Guy Ritchie's "Sherlock Holmes" films, will recreate her production studio for an exhibition at the Arts Gallery at the University of the Arts London, through Mar. 9; she has mocked up her studio, including research material, scripts, notebooks, drawings, schedules, and models. More information about the exhibition can be found at <www.tinyurl.com/78187hx>.
48. CBS announced plans for a modern-day "Sherlock Holmes" drama last year (Sep 11 #5), and the entertainment trade press has now reported (Jan. 17) that CBS has green-lighted the project, which is now called "Elementary" and is a step closer to actual production. The new pilot will have Holmes living in New York City.
49. Welcome to our new postage rates, which are now 45¢ per ounce (domestic), 85¢ (Canada), and $1.05 (international). The old rates were 44¢/80¢/98¢. The cost of printed envelopes also has increased, and the new subscription rates for the ink-on-paper version of Scuttlebutt are $11.70 (domestic) and $16.50 (Canada) and $18.90 (international). Electronically enabled readers can of course read the newsletter on-line without charge: searchable text of all issues since Mar. 1985 is available at Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" <www.members.cox.net/sherlock1/scuttle.htm>, and Scott Monty's archive of scanned images of issues since Jan. 2011 can be found at Scribd's web-site <www.scribd.com/collections/2854548/Scuttlebutt-from-the-Spermaceti-Press>.

50. Feb 12 #1: The Internet certainly makes things interesting (or frustrating) for people want to be surprised when they see films or television: web-sites have been flooded with discussion of the BBC's second series, and it's not going to be easy for American viewers who won't see the series until it is broadcast here in May to avoid spoilers. And then there are the DVDs, which are now available to anyone who can play region 2 DVDs on a computer or on a multiregion DVR. But it will be reasonably safe to read this newsletter, where you won't find anything about the shocking revelations in Laura Lyons' diaries in "The Hounds of Baskerville".
51. MovieViral.com is web-site that offers news and analysis of viral and ARG [alternate reality game] campaigns for films and other forms of entertainment, and they ran a story by Anne Kirn on Feb. 4 <www.tinyurl.com/78bpuyq> about the fan-based "Believe in Sherlock" movement launched after the finale of the BBC's second "Sherlock" television series.
52. And sales of Sherlock Holmes books have increased in Britain: a representative of Waterstone's (the nation's largest chain of book stores) has said, "The BBC's stunning adaptation has succeeded in making Holmes relevant to a new generation of readers. Whilst the original books may lack references to blogging and cyberspace, the stories remain utterly compelling."
53. THE GRAND GAME: A CELEBRATION OF SHERLOCKIAN SCHOLARSHIP: VOLUME TWO: 1960-2010, edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger, is a splendid companion to the first volume (Jan 11 #3), demonstrating how enjoyable it can be watching experts play the Sherlockian game; Klinger's introduction "Why We Write" explains the rules and notes correctly that "the Grand Game is alive and well!" 390 pp., $39.95 to the U.S./$49.95 elsewhere, plus shipping). The publisher's web-site is at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
54. Nicol Williamson died on Dec. 16 He began his acting career in repertory theater and joined the Royal Shakespeare Company in 1962, quickly becoming a highly-regarded star on stage, screen, and television, and was compared to Charles Laughton, Laurence Olivier, and Marlon Brando. His film roles included an appearance as Sherlock Holmes in "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976).
55. The "news" has been reported all over the Internet, but it originated with the [London] Sun, which is widely regarded as the least reliable newspaper published in the U.K.: "Guy Ritchie is making a third Sherlock Holmes movie --but this time it will be based in Hollywood." Needless to say, the story is credited to "a source."
56. "The Radio Adventures of Dr. Floyd" is an audio and video series created by Grant Baciocco and Doug Price for Dementia Radio in 2004 and now distributed via podcast; there were three 10-minute Sherlockian episodes, podcast on Oct. 13, 21, and 27, 2008, that are notable for the actor who played Sherlock Holmes: Stan Freberg; the first episode (#708) ends with a set-up and the story continues in episodes #709 and #710. You can listen to and download the programs at <www.doctorfloyd.com/media/season7>. Bill Anselm gets credit for discovering and reporting the series.

57. Feb 12 #2: Mike Kean reports that the Diogenes Club of Carmel-by-the-Sea will hold a special meeting in San Francisco on Nov. 10 aboard the SS Jeremiah O'Brien, the only surviving operational World War II Liberty ship. The gathering will include other Sherlockian societies in northern California, and all Sherlockians are welcome to attend; there will be a private tour of the vessel, cocktails, a catered dinner, and a program on "The Nautical Sherlock Holmes". Additional information about the event is available from Capt. Walter W. Jaffee <merships@yahoo.com>. And the ship has its own web-site at <www.ssjeremiahobrien.org>.
58. Michael Dirda's ON CONAN DOYLE; OR, THE WHOLE ART OF STORYTELLING has been nominated for an Agatha (best nonfiction) from Malice Domestic; the winners of the Agathas will be announced at the Malice Awards Banquet in Bethesda, Md., on Apr. 30. There's still time to register for the convention; their web-site's at <www.malicedomestic.org>.
59. The 2011 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 64 pages of scholarship, quizzes, and pastiches; the scholarship ranges from Stephen Adkins' "Is Sherlock Holmes a Drug Addict?" to Bill Mason's "Diagnosing 'The Resident Patient': Questions About a Sherlockian Tale". The annual costs $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.), checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles should be sent to Terri Haugen, 3606 Harborcrest Court NW, Gig Harbor, WA 98332. There's also news of a handsome Sherlockian giclee print by Gayle Holmes shown in full color at <www.gayleholmesfineart.com>; if you mention The Sound of the Baskervilles when you place your order, she will donate 10% of the proceeds to the society's treasury.
60. A limited-edition linocut print (38/75), signed in pencil, of Edward Bawden's frontispiece for the Folio Society edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (1987) was sold at Sworders Fine Art Auctioneers on Jan. 10, with an estimate of £400-£500; it sold, with a hammer price of £400.
61. Chris Martin, front man for the rock band Coldplay, and husband of Gwyneth Paltrow, has long enjoyed the Sherlock Holmes stories (Jun 05 #4), and (according to director Guy Ritchie) suggested Stephen Fry for the role of Mycroft in "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows".
62. Sherlockiana continues to appear in Japan, thanks to translations by Masamichi Higurashi; Mitch's latest are Carole Nelson Douglas' GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES (Tokyo Sogensha, 2 vols., ¥940 each), and Daniel Stashower's "The Second Treaty" for MYSTERIES! (v. 48, ¥1,200), which also has Mitch's essay on Sherlockian pastiches in 2000-2001.
63. Josef Skvorecky died on Jan. 3. He was a famous Czech writer and an energetic promoter and publisher of Czech literature. His SINS FOR FATHER KNOX (1989) was a delightful tribute to Ronald A. Knox; it's a collection of ten stories, each of which violates one of the "decatalogue" rules Knox invented for writing detective fiction (Skvorecky challenged his readers not only to identify the murderer but also to decide which rule had been broken).

64. Feb 12 #3: IN THE SHADOW OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Leslie S. Klinger (San Diego: IDW, 2011; 350 pp., $16.99), is a fine anthology of early stories about other detectives by authors who range from Thomas Bailey Aldrich (1862) to Arthur Conan Doyle (1898) to William MacHarg and Edwin Balmer (1910), with atmospheric artwork by Michael Manomivibul, and an introduction and (needless to say) annotations by the editor.

65. The Racine Theatre Guild will produce Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" on Apr. 13-22. 2519 Northwestern Avenue, Racine, WI 53404 (262-633-4218) <[www.racine theatre.org](http://www.racine theatre.org)>.
66. STARRETT SPEAKS: THE LOST RECORDINGS is a delightful new CD from the Wessex Press, with recently discovered recordings; there are 40 minutes of audio, including Robert Cromie's interview with Starrett and Orlando Park on WTTWTV in 1964), and Starrett's readings of his own Sherlockiana. $12.95 from the publisher (Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256) <www.wessexpress.com>.
67. Also from the Wessex Press (as the Gasogene Press): THE ILLUSTRATED SPECKLED BAND: THE ORIGINAL 1910 STAGE PRODUCTION IN SCRIPT AND PHOTOGRAPHS, edited by Leslie S. Klinger (104 pp., $19.95), offering the script of Conan Doyle's play (from Samuel French in 1912), photographs and discussion (from Playgoer and Society Illustrated, 1910), and a reprint of R. Dixon Smith's article on "The Story, the Play, and the Snake"; it's as close as you will ever get to the original production of the play, and great fun.
68. Judith Freeman's index to The Serpentine Muse (Jan 12 #5) is now available Sherlocktron <www.sherlocktron.hostoi.com/Serpentine.Muse.pdf>, along with the other material Willis Frick kindly makes available.
69. THE REALLY RAGGED SHAW: BEING THE EXPANDED RAGGED SHAW was published by David L. Hammer from his Gasogene Press in 1994 as a birthday tribute to John Bennett Shaw, offering splendid examples of the imagination and inspiration and humor to be found in the quizzes devised by the Sage of Santa Fe. It's now back in print with an additional new preface by Saul Cohen, from George Vanderburgh (176 pp., $20.00); Box 50, R.R. #4, Eugenia, ON N0C 1E0, Canada <www.batteredbox.com>.
70. Les and Carol Moskowitz, who discovered Sherlock Holmes pubs in France and Norway (Jun 11 #5), have continued their search and have added Australia to their life list, with the Sherlock Holmes Inn at 415 Collins Street in Melbourne (415 Collins Street <www.thesherlockholmes.com.au>.
71. Reported by Christopher Roden: CONAN DOYLE CONTRE SHERLOCK HOLMES, a new biography (in French) by Emmanuel Le Bret (Paris: Editions du Moment, 2011; 204 pp., €18.50).
72. BBC Books has published new tie-in editions of A STUDY IN SCARLET, with an introduction by Steven Moffat, and THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with an introduction by Mark Gatiss (£6.99 each), each with cover art from the "Sherlock" mini-series. The series will continue on Mar. 29 with THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (introduction by Steve Thompson), THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (introduction by Benedict Cumberbatch), and THE SIGN OF FOUR (introduction by Martin Freeman).
73. Feb 12 #4: Jim French's Imagination Theatre has been airing "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" for many years (Jun 98 #4), on many radio stations, on Sirius XM Book Radio <www.siriusxm.com/bookradio>, and on the Internet at <www.jimfrenchproductions.com>, where you can download single programs ($1.99), purchase CDs ($12.95), and listen to a weekly web-stream. And if you would like to see what radio drama is like before it's broadcast, 11 scripts from the series are available in M. J. Elliott's SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE AIR (London: MX Publishing, 2012; 340 pp., £14.99/€16.99/$22.95), with an interesting introduction and notes by the author. The publisher's web-site is at <www.mxpublishing.com>.
74. One sees Sherlock everywhere: Roland C. (of the Baskerville Hall Club) has noted a link to the three-minute official music video for Nabiha's single "Deep Sleep", which you can see at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=r0BDpG4k4M0>.
75. Ian Abercrombie died on Jan. 26. He began his stage career as a dancer in England in 1934, came to the U.S. in 1951, and acted on stage, screen, and television; best known as Elaine's demanding boss Mr. Pitt on "Seinfeld", he also played a train conductor in Stewart Granger's television version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1972) and Inspector Lestrade in the "Save Sherlock Holmes" episode of "Fantasy Island" (1982).
76. Clive Francis' play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be produced at the Lawrence Batley Theatre, Mar. 12-17; Queen's Square, Queen Street, Huddersfield, West Yorks. HD1 2SP (01484-430528) <www.thelbt.org>.
77. There's more news about the CBS "Elementary" project (Jan 12 #7), about a modern-day Sherlock Holmes living in New York City: according to the Hollywood Reporter (Feb. 14), Jonny Lee Miller (who played Jordan Chase in the Showtime series "Dexter") has been signed to play the title role. Benedict Cumberbatch was Miller's co-star on stage in London in "Frankenstein" last year, alternating the roles of Frankenstein and the monster, and now they both will be playing Sherlock Holmes. You can see them (briefly) in a oneminute promotion for "Frankenstein" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=0FEakGj-uA>.
78. So: what other films and television shows have had Holmes living in (rather than traveling to) cities other than London? Larry Hagman's "The Return of the World's Greatest Detective" (1976) is one. Any others?
79. "Sherlock Holmes Averts World War Using Mathematics" was the headline on a article by Jessica Hamzelou in the CultureLab blog of the New Scientist on Jan. 9: the producers of the film asked Oxford mathematicians Alain Goriely and Derek Moulton to write the equations seen on Moriarty's blackboard, and they also created the code in Moriarty's red pocket notebook, and wrote the lecture that Holmes attended in disguise. You can read all about it in the blog at <www.tinyurl.com/6p8egal>.
80. Radio Litopia is an interesting British web-site, and their series "Litopia After Dark" had a Sherlockian evening on Feb. 5 with a 54-minute interview with Bert Coules, who has dramatized a long series of Sherlockian (Canonical and extra-Canonical) broadcasts for BBC Radio. You can read all about it (and see a photograph of Bert) and listen to or download the program at <www.litopia.com/radio/the-man-behind-sherlock-holmes>.

81. Feb 12 #5: NINE LIVES OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, by Graham Holderness (London: Continuum, 2011; 215 pp., £18.99/$27.95) is an interesting literary biography in which Holderness uses a combination of critical essays and fictional narratives to explore nine aspects of Shakespeare's life and career. "The Adventure of Shakespeare's Ring" is a pastiche that has Holmes, Watson, Lord Alfred Douglas, and Oscar Wilde examining the possibility that Shakespeare was a homosexual.
82. Bruce Holmes died on Dec. 21. An early member of the Bimetallic Question of Montreal, he was an energetic philatelist and greatly enjoyed publishing Sherlockian pamphlets illustrated with carefully-selected and appropriate postage stamps and cancellations.
83. BMW has launched the Baker Street Mini (a special limited edition, which will go on sale on Mar. 1; the car will be priced from £16,365 in Great Britain and available world-wide. It's named for the area of London where Sherlock Holmes lived (one press report noted that Baker Street also is the name of a hit song by Gerry Rafferty, and suggested that the car might be come with a saxophone rather than a horn).
84. The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Mar. 30-Apr. 1, with a dinner at the Sheraton Four Points in Schiller Park, the annual running of The Silver Blaze at Hawthorne Race Course, and a Fortescue Honours brunch, and the registration form is available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
85. "Studying Sherlock Holmes" is the theme of this year's "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 20-21; their program will feature a tribute to "A Study in Scarlet" and "The Sign of the Four", and their mailing list is maintained by Kent Ross (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@gmail.com>.

87. The Sherlockian "Mr. Gallagher & Mr. Shean" duet performed by Jim Saunders and Henry Boote during the birthday festivities last month is now available to a wider audience, at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=cHYsnsL1VTo>.
88. The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers a "100 Years Ago" discussion by Dick Sveum of early Danish translations of the Canon and a "50 Years Ago" tribute by Julie McKuras to H. W. Starr and Ron Haydock, plus other new from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.

89. Feb 12 #6: SHERLOCK HOLMES ON SCREEN, by Alan Barnes (London: Titan Books, 2011; 320 pp., £16.99/$19.95) carries the accurate subtitle THE COMPLETE FILM AND TV HISTORY, and is a well-illustrated treasure trove of information; it's up to date through "Tom and Jerry Meet Sherlock Holmes" and the first "Sherlock" series from the BBC. The first version of Barnes' book was published in 2001, and the new edition has an enthusiastic foreword by Steven Moffat. It is a valuable reference book, and recommended. The publisher's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
90. Titan continues to extend its series "The Continuing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" with pastiches new and old. THE WEB WEAVER, by Sam Siciliano (394 pp., £7.99/$9.95) is new; the story's told by Holmes' cousin Dr. Henry Vernier and his wife Michelle, and offers an interesting mystery, tragedy, and romance.
91. The older pastiches are interesting as well: Richard L. Boyer's THE GIANT RAT OF SUMATRA (1976) has one of the more interesting (and perhaps improbable) identifications of the ferocious beast, and Sam Siciliano's THE ANGEL OF THE OPERA (1994) is an earlier tale told by Vernier, about Holmes' trip to Paris to confront the Phantom of the Opera (both 309 pp., £7.99/$9.95).
92. Titan's new and expanded edition of Kim Newman's ANNO DRACULA: THE BLOODY RED BARON (587 pp., £7.99/$14.95) is a sequel to his ANNO DRACULA (Dec 11 #12); the Diogenes Club (and Mycroft Holmes) have helped the British overthrow the Prince Consort Count Dracula, who is now providing assistance to the German armies in World War I. There's a very brief appearance by Sherlock Holmes, as well as an aftermath story set in 1923, annotations, and a screenplay Newman wrote for Roger Corman. Newman has a fine way with vampires and an imaginative skill with colorful language.
93. Titan also has reprinted two of the Harry Houdini mysteries written by Daniel Stashower: THE DIME MUSEUM MURDERS (2000) and THE FLOATING LADY MURDER (2000); the novels are set in the late 1890s, when Houdini was still trying to launch his career as an escapologist (and liked to quote from the Sherlock Holmes stories). Finally, "Imagine a person, tall, lean, and feline, high-shouldered, with a brow like Shakespeare and a face like Satan." That would be Dr. Fu-Manchu, the insidious villain created by Sax Rohmer; Titan has reprinted THE MYSTERY OF DR. FU-MANCHU (1913) and THE RETURN OF DR. FUMANCHU (1916) and plans to continue with twelve more novels.
94. Carole Nelson Douglas' "Irene Adler" novella THE PRIVATE WIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, previously anthologized in SEX, LIES, AND PRIVATE EYES (Jul 09 #6) is now available as an Amazon Kindle e-book ($2.99) from Wishlist Publishing; it's an amusing story, involving Holmes and Irene meeting the Prince of Wales in a house of ill repute.
95. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Dayna Nuhn's interesting (and timely) survey of Valentine's Day cards, reports on last year's "A Study in Scandal" conference, and other news from and about the collection; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.

96. Feb 12 #7: Daniel McGachey's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE IMPOSSIBLE CASES (Colusa: Dark Regions Press, 2010; 273 pp., $18.95) is a collection of five pastiches, echoing the unrecorded cases and with considerable emphasis on the supernatural. Dark Regions also has published William Meikle's SHERLOCK HOLMES: REVENANT (2011; 135 pp., $14.95); Holmes and Watson, on the run from the official police, travel to Scotland and back to London in pursuit of an evil genius with supernatural powers. The publisher has a web-site at <www.darkregions.com>.
97. John Baesch spotted a profile of Umberto Eco in the Sunday Times (Oct. 30) that reports that Eco was astounded by the success of his novel THE NAME OF THE ROSE, and that he regarded the film as a travesty.
98. "Remember kicking back in the 1890s? There was nothing better than relaxing with the latest Sherlock Holmes adventure in The Strand Magazine and a Gilbert and Sullivan cylinder on the phonograph." According to CNET story (Feb. 6), spotted by Bill Barnes. Michael Greensmith has made a Steampunk iPhonograph that will play music from your iPad. You can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/84xmruh>.
99. Joan Proubasta, who presides over Círculo Holmes, the Sherlockian society in Barcelona, has donated his Sherlockian collection to La Biblioteca Arús, and there's a 4-minute video showing the library's exhibition (and Joan) at <www.tinyurl.com/7e83xqz>.
100. The latest Sherlockian audio from Big Finish is THE TANGLED SKEIN, adapted by Richard Dinnick from David Stuart Davies' book (1992) and starring Nicholas Briggs as Holmes, Richard Earl as Watson, and Giles Watling as Count Dracula; on two CDs ($23.91) and as a download ($12.99); PO Box 3787, Maidenhead, Berks. SL6 3TF, England) <www.bigfinish.com>. It's a full-cast recording, with featurette interviews with cast and crew, and nicely done.
101. Noted by Greg Darak: MR. MAGOO: THE COMPLETE TELEVISION COLLECTION, 1960-1977, a new set of 11 DVDs from Shout! Factory ($79.97); the contents include the 30-minute NBC animated television series "The Famous Adventures of Mr. Magoo", in which "Mr. Magoo's Sherlock Holmes" (1965) featured Jim Backus (Mr. Magoo/Dr. Watson) and Paul Freas (Sherlock Holmes). Mr. Magoo also appears briefly in Sherlockian costume at the end of "Mr. Magoo's Dick Tracy and the Mob" (1965). If you're willing to settle for lower fidelity, both episodes are available on the Internet at YouTube <www.youtube.com>.
102. Greg also reports that LOOK I MADE A HAT, the second volume of Steven Sondheim's collected lyrics, includes "I Never Do Anything Twice" (the song he wrote for the film "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution"), and that an article in the spring issue of The Sondheim Review that lists Steven Sondheim's favorite films, one of which is "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1939); the magazine's web-site is at <www.sondheimreview.com>.
103. "People sometimes wonder why I belong to The Baker Street Irregulars," Michael Dirda wrote in his blog at the N.Y. Review of Books, adding that "the answer, of course, is elementary: friendship, collegiality, fellowship." A sentiment that applies equally to the wider world of Sherlockians; the blog can be read at <www.nybooks.com/blogs/nyrblog/2012/feb/02/sherlock-lives>.

104. Feb 12 #8: Joe McDonald reports that there will be a "Conan Doyle Weekend" in Haslemere (Surrey) on June 15-17, with events that include a performance of David Stuart Davies' play "Sherlock Holmes-The Last Act", a screening of Peter Cushing's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), presentations by Andrew Lane, Andrew Lycett, Catherine Cooke, and Roger Johnson, and a murder-mystery dinner. You can go to <www.haslemerehall.co.uk> and click on "Events" for more information.

105. The Machickanee Players will perform Tim Kelly's play "The Adventure of the Speckled Band" at the Park Avenue Playhouse from May 4 to May 13. 408 Park Avenue, Oconto, WI 54153 (920-834-4353) <www.machickaneeplayers.org>.
106. Alfred A. Levin ("Abe Slaney") died on Feb. 17. Fred was an organic chemist and an enthusiastic Sherlockian; with a special interest in the Reichenbach Falls (which he visited many times); he was an active member of many of the Sherlockian societies in the Chicago area, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1993.
107. Randall Stock continues to enhance the contents of his excellent "Best of Sherlock" web-site, which now offers an entry on another new book by Conan Doyle <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/diary-arctic-adventure.htm>. DANGEROUS WORK will feature the journal he kept in 1880 during his voyage to the Arctic aboard the SS Hope in pursuit of seals and whales, and it will be published this fall by the British Library in the U.K. and by the University of Chicago Press in the U.S.
108. Taz Rai's THE ART OF DEDUCTION: THE WAY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2011; 102 pp., $17.97) is an eBook that offers a detailed academic discussion of Holmes' use of rationality, logic, and observation, with examples from the Canon, by way of helping readers learn how to use Holmes' methods themselves. The author's web-site's at <www.artofdeduction.com>.
109. The Sherlockian Calendar, maintained Ron Fish and Ben and Sue Vizoskie at <www.sherlockiancalendar.homestead.com>, is an excellent list of upcoming Sherlockian events, for anyone who would like to know what's happening when (and where); you can contact Ron at <ronf404@aol.com> if you would like to have a meeting or conference listed.
110. Karen Ellery reports that the Ash-Tree Press is now offering three e-books: Barbara Roden's THE THAMES HORROR AND OTHER ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Dec 11 #2), David Stuart Davies' BENDING THE WILLOW: JEREMY BRETT AS SHERLOCK HOLMES (Mar 97 #2) ($9.99), and Stephen Clarkson's THE CANONICAL COMPENDIUM (Jan 01 #5) ($7.99); <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/ebooks.htm>.
111. Further to the report on Laurie R. King's next "Mary Russell" novel GAME OF SHADOWS, due in September (Jan 12 #5), Laurie reports on her blog that she will go to Japan in April to do research on what the country was like in 1924, when Russell and Holmes were there (between the earlier novels THE GAME and LOCKED ROOMS); the next installment of the Russell saga, not yet named, is due in 2014. Laurie's web-site is at <www.laurierking.com>.
112. Mar 12 #1: Baker St, a New York-based pop-rock band made up of former and current Columbia University students, has just released their third CD: Irregulars. You can download the album at <www.cdbaby.com/cd/bakerst>, and there will be an EP available there soon; you can find their music videos at YouTube, and their web-site is at <www.bakerstband.com>. Michelle Hutt, the band's songwriter, explains that they decided on the name because she has been a huge fan of the Sherlock Holmes stories since high school; they also feel that in some ways their musical style is a bit more like that of rock music in the UK right now.
113. Booktrack reports that its "enhanced" edition of "The Speckled Band" (with sound effects and a soundtrack) for reading on your iPhone, iPad, or iPod Touch (Sep 11 #4) has been downloaded more than 100,000 times, and is one of the most downloaded global eBooks of 2011. It helped, of course, that it was available without charge. Booktrack's books can now also be played on Androids, PCs, and Macs <www.booktrack.com>.
114. Lenny Picker has reported that Benedict Cumberbatch has played a young Rumpole of the Bailey on BBC Radio 4: "Rumpole and the Penge Bungalow Murders" (2009) and "Rumpole and the Family Pride" and "Rumpole and the Eternal Triangle" (2010) featured Timothy West as the older Rumpole, and they played the same parts in "Rumpole and the Man of God" and "Rumpole and the Explosive Evidence" in March.
115. SN2apps has released four "Sherlock Holmes Interactive Radio Apps" for the iPads (other devices to follow): the stories are "The Speckled Band", "The Speckled Band", "The Five Orange Pips", and "The Man with the Twisted Lip", and the apps ($2.99 each) come with radio scripts and dramatizations that star Edward Petherbridge and David Peart (from the fine Independent Radio Drama Productions series broadcast by National Public Radio in the 1990s), a map of London, colorful artwork, and a treasure hunt. There's more about the series at <www.sn2apps.com>, and the apps are available at Apple's apps store.
116. There's a Puffin Classics edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (London: Puffin Penguin, 2011; 243 pp., £6.99/$4.99) with a new introduction by Judith Kerr and cover art by Bill Sanderson.
117. "In the beginning there was Sherlock Holmes," according to someone who uses the on-line pseudonym daasgrll, "And from Holmes was brought forth House, played by Hugh Laurie. Who in Fortysomething as Peter Slippery was father to Rory Slippery, played by Benedict Cumberbatch. Who grew up to play Sherlock. And then my head exploded." Cindy Coppock spotted daasgrll's mash-up of all this at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=kXpyCa9IcEM>.
118. Bill Crider's monthly "Blog Bytes" column in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine recommends interesting sites such as "Stop, You're Killing Me" (maintained by Lucinda Surber and Stan Ulrich); it won an Anthony (best blog) at Bouchercon last year, and it lists more than 3,800 authors, with chronological lists of their books (more than 43,000 titles) and much more information, including lists for characters <www.stopyourekilllingme.com>.
119. Mar 12 #2: "The Black Swan is an inn of repute in the High Street," Watson wrote (in "The Copper Beeches"), and the Black Swan is one of the very few real hotels found in the Canon. According to an article in the Hampshire Chronicle (Feb. 10), Winchester's headless statue of a black swan is being repaired. A statue originally marked the Black Swan Hotel, which was demolished for road-widening in 1935, and then on the Black Swan Buildings office block that was built on the site of the hotel; the statue was damaged about ten years ago, and a new head and neck will be provided. But it's not the original statue, which fell to pieces in 1945, when members of the public raised £35 to pay a local craftsman to carve a new swan.
120. People like a good ghost story (well, perhaps people ought to like a good ghost story) and MX Publishing offers "IN THE NIGHT--IN THE DARK": TALES OF GHOSTS AND LESS WELCOME VISITORS (2011; 366 pp., £13.99); it's subtitled as "a complete ghostly crew and a full complement of ghastly passengers," and there's humor as well as horror and terror, although nothing Sherlockian, except that the author is Roger Johnson and the cover photograph is by Jean Upton. The book is full of grand stories and poems.
121. Marino C. Alvarez's A PROFESSOR REFLECTS ON SHERLOCK HOLMES also is available from MX Publishing (2012; 162 pp., £9.99); the author is a professor emeritus at Tennessee State University's College of Education and a member of The Nashville Scholars of the Three Pipe Problem, and the book is a collection of papers old and new, including an analysis of Eric L. Conklin's first Sherlock Holmes Mystery Painting (which you can see in full color at <www.ericconklin.com/sherlockholmes1.html> and a report on a trip to Trinity College Oxford to inspect the Ronald A. Knox papers and the Gryphon Club Book of Minutes.
122. MX Publishing has many pastiches: Wilfred Huettel's MARK OF THE BASKERVILLE HOUND (2011; 211 pp., £10.99) begins in 1982 with a retired New York police officer recounting his visit to Dartmoor and an encounter with a terrifying modern version of the hound. Kieren E. McMullen's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE IRISH REBELS (2011; £10.99) has Holmes and Watson in Dublin in 1916, deeply involved in espionage and the Irish Rebellion. Fred Thursfield's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE DISCARDED CIGARETTE (2012; 100 pp., £6.99) brings Holmes and Watson to a meeting with H. G. Wells, whose Time Machine has been used by a crafty art forger. Margaret Park Bridges' MY DEAR WATSON (2011; 217 pp., £9.99) was written in English and

- published in Japanese some years ago (Jan 99 #3) and is now available in English; Holmes is a woman (unknown to Watson and everyone else) and engaged in a desperate struggle with Constance Moriarty, daughter of the evil professor.
123. David Ruffle's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LYME REGIS HORROR, first published in 2009 (May 11 #4), has been reissued by MX Publishing in a second expanded edition (2012; 173 pp., £9.99); the title story has Holmes and Watson in Lyme Regis, pursuing the vampire Count Olana in 1896 (Bram Stoker's DRACULA was published in 1897), and there are additional short stories, poems, and fragments. Ruffle's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LYME REGIS LEGACY (2012, 174 pp., £9.99) offers more Sherlockian tales (with some non-Sherlockian ghost stories), and he's the editor of TALES FROM THE STRANGER'S ROOM (2012, 241 pp., £10.99), an anthology of pastiches, vignettes, and poetry written by members of the on-line forum <www.holmesian.net>.
124. Mar 12 #3: Michael Saler's AS IF: MODERN ENCHANTMENT AND THE LITERARY PREHISTORY OF VIRTUAL REALITY (New York: Oxford University Press, 2012; 283 pp., $27.95) is an interesting examination of the fantasy worlds created by authors ranging from Verne to Tolkien, with a delightful chapter ("Clap if You Believe in Sherlock Holmes: Arthur Conan Doyle and Animistic Reason") that discusses naive believers, ironic believers, and the strange behavior that's found in the world of Sherlockians.
125. The Hollywood Reporter confirmed (Feb. 27) that the CBS-TV pilot "Elementary" will feature Lucy Liu as Watson; she is currently starring as Officer Jessica Tang in the TNT television series "Southland"; Deadline Hollywood (Feb. 27) had details on the premise: Jonny Lee Miller stars as eccentric Brit Sherlock Holmes, a former consultant to Scotland Yard whose addiction problems led him to a rehab center in New York City; just out of rehab, he now lives in Brooklyn with "sober companion" Joan Watson, a former surgeon who lost her license after a patient died, while consulting for the NYPD.
126. Some reports have suggested that Lucy Liu will be the first female Watson. Well, not quite: there have been at least three (in films and on television). Care to identify them?
127. A later report has Aidan Quinn joining the cast of "Elementary" as Gregson, a captain in the NYPD who worked with Holmes previously at Scotland Yard. Quinn recently starred in the NBC-TV series "Prime Suspect".
128. E. W. Barton-Wright's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES SCHOOL OF SELF-DEFENCE: THE MANLY ART OF BARTITSU AS USED AGAINST PROFESSOR MORIARTY (Lewes: Ivy Press, 2011; 127 pp., £6.99) is an amusing compilation of his articles in Pearson's Magazine, with enhancements that include Marcus Tindal's "Self-Protection on a Cycle"; Bartitsu is mentioned in the Canon (misspelled as baritsu), and it probably is just as well that Violet Smith had not read Tindal's article.
129. THE MORIARTY PAPERS, compiled by Colonel Sebastian Moran (London: New Holland, 2011; 160 pp., £7.99), is collection of Moriarty's surviving papers in the form of a full color scrapbook, with entertaining marginal comments by Moran; it would appear that Moriarty was involved in most of Holmes' cases.
130. Don Hobbs reports that the total number of languages known to have at least one Canonical translation has reached 92, the latest being Breton, in which there's a translation KI AR VASKERVILLED (272 pp., €9.00 from Coop Breizh at <www.coop-breizh.fr>. Breton is a Celtic language spoken in Brittany, and Vaskerville is Baskerville in English.
131. "The book is a rather silly story about a governess and two haunted children. I am afraid that in it Mr. James exposes the extent of his ignorance. He knows little about children and nothing at all about governesses." Governess Hester Barrow, in Diane Setterfield's THE THIRTEEN TALE (2006).
132. There was a discussion of the phrase "jumping the shark" on the Letters of Mary e-mailing list (for fans of the Mary Russell books), and Kathy Elliott recommended <www.tvtropes.org>; it's a wiki "catalog of the tricks of the trade for writing fiction," and of course a search for [sherlock] brings up a long list of interesting commentary.
133. Mar 12 #4: Greg Darak has noted a Russian CD "Vladimir Dashkevich: Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson" issued by Bomba Music in Moscow in 2002 with tracks from the Russian television series (Dashkevich was the composer of the scores); copies of the CD turn up at eBay, and some of his music is available on the Internet for listening or download.
134. Jan Berenstain died on Feb. 24. With her husband Stan she created the Berenstain Bears in 1962, launching a series of children's books that became one of the most successful in children's literature; the series, with more than 300 books, has sold more than 260 million copies, and the Berenstain Bears have been seen in stage musicals, television series, videocassettes and DVDs, and as toys. THE BEAR DETECTIVES: THE CASE OF THE MISSING PUMPKIN was published in 1975, with Detective Brother and Detective Sister appearing in Sherlockian costume; they've been seen in many later books, and in a set of figurines issued in 1985.
135. Gayle Harris recommends the web-site Old Maps Online as an excellent portal for inspecting digital historical maps in libraries around the world. The URL is <www.oldmapsonline.org>, and one can explore Baker Street as well as a world of other locations.
136. According to a story in the Sussex Courier (Feb. 17), Crowborough historian Michael Tuffley has begun a campaign to erect a statue of Sherlock Holmes in the town, and hopes to raise £50,000 to cover the costs. But town councillor George Moss, noting that Crowborough already has a statue of Conan Doyle, felt there was no need for another statue, and that the money might be best spent elsewhere.
137. Philip K. Jones has compiled (and continues to compile) an excellent data base for Sherlockian pastiches, parodies, and related fiction; he had entries for 5,520 different items some years ago (Apr 06 #6), and his count now stands at more than 9,000. The data base is interesting and informative, and available on-line <www.michael-procter.com/holmes/_index.html>.
138. And who are the women who have played Watson? Joanne Woodward (Dr. Mildred Watson) in "They Might Be Giants" (1971), Jenny O'Hara (Doctor Watson) in "The Return of the World's Greatest Detective" (1976), and Margaret Colin (Jane Watson) in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes" (1987). There's a fourth, (though likely seen by fewer people): Gina Ryder (Dr. Emma Watson) in the pornographic film "The Secret of Harlot Hill" (2001).
139. The earlier question (Feb 12 #4) was about films and television shows (other than CBS-TV's "Elementary") that have had Holmes living in (rather than traveling to) cities other than London? Larry Hagman's "The Return of the World's Greatest Detective" (1976) is one, and Judith Freeman adds Anthony Higgins' "1994 Baker Street: Sherlock Holmes Returns" (1993) to the list.
140. Something else for fans of the Benedict Cumberbatch series: a four-minute montage of a scene from the first program, dubbed into four different languages <www.radiotimes.com/news/2012-02-25/je-m'appelle-sherlock-holmes>. And there's <www.benedictcumberbatch.co.uk/Sherlock/press.html>, reported by Karen Murdock; it's an unofficial fan-site with links to newspaper and magazine articles and much more.
141. Mar 12 #5: "At the main pilgrimage temple he paid his respects to the head Lama, who gave him 'a bag of tiny pills which would preserve me from every possible mischance.'" Spotted by John Baesch in the Daily Telegraph obituary (Jan. 31) for Augusto Gansser, a Swiss geologist who died at the age of 101. He visited Tibet in 1936, disguised as a Buddhist pilgrim, and he met the head Lama at Mt. Kailash. And his geological expertise was not limited to the Himalayas: another technical paper "The Roraima Problem, South America" was published in 1974.

142. "Sherlock & Shylock: The Sleuths of Venice" will be the theme of the No Fog Countries Meeting II, scheduled by Uno Studio in Holmes in Venice on Oct. 12-14; details at <www.unostudioinholmes.org/inglese/ing\_homepage.htm>, and you can expect wining, dining, lectures, tours, and a concert.
143. Mona Morstein's THE CHILDHOOD OF SHERLOCK HOLMES was first published by the Galde Press (Feb 00 #6), and it has been reissued by UCS Press in two volumes as THE HOLMES BOYS: SHERLOCK AND MYCROFT ($14.95 per volume); it's an imaginative and well-written history of the Holmes family, both parents and children, told by the butler who served them.
144. Tim Kelly died on Dec. 7, 1998. According to an obituary in Playbill, he was thought to be the most-published playwright in America, under his own name and at least four pseudonyms, writing more than 300 comedies, dramas, one-acts, mysteries, melodramas, children's shows, and musicals. His work continues to be popular in the amateur market: in 1998, the Pioneer Drama Service (one of his publishers) licensed more than 3,000 productions of his plays worldwide. His Sherlockian credits include more than a dozen plays, among them an adaptation of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" and dramatizations of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Speckled Band".
145. Titan's recent reprint of Sax Rohmer's THE MYSTERY OF DR. FU-MANCHU (Feb 12 #6) has at the end an interesting essay by Les Klinger on "Appreciating Dr. Fu-Manchu". A separate section "About the Author" notes the truly ironic fact that Rohmer died in 1959, "a victim of an outbreak of the type A influenza known as the Asian flu."
146. One assumes that many Sherlockians have ordered the British region 2 DVDs of the second series of the BBC's "Sherlock" (at least those Sherlockians who can play the DVDs on multi-region DVRs or computers). The box for the British DVDs carries a "12" rating ("Suitable only for persons of 12 years and over"), which is similar to the Motion Picture Association of America's "PG-13" rating ("Parents Strongly Cautioned: Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13"). But that's not because Lara Pulver is seen wearing nothing but a pair of Louboutins: the box for the British DVDs with the first series carries the same "12" warning.
147. Christopher Roden has reported that the Arthur Conan Doyle Society has received a message from the Parish Church of St. Oswald's Thornton in Lonsdale, Yorkshire, where Arthur Conan Doyle married Louisa Hawkins in 1885: St. Oswald's proposes to commission a special "Arthur Conan Doyle Plaque" to be affixed to the lych gate entrance to the church and graveyard, and hopes to raise £20,000 for the project, which will also enhance the church facilities with a new kitchen area and disabled toilet.
148. Mar 12 #6: "It Seems There's Gnome Place Like Holmes," according to a story in Radio Times (Mar. 9): Disney will start production this fall on "Gnomeo & Juliet: Sherlock Gnomes", a 3D animation that's a sequel to their "Gnomeo & Juliet" (2011); the new film is reported to have Gnomeo and Juliet enlisting the help of Sherlock Gnomes, the world's greatest ornamental detective, when gnomes start disappearing from the suburban gardens of England. Elton John will write songs for the film.
149. Thad Holt discovered an article in the Daily Telegraph about an exhibition at the Wandsworth Museum of photographs of historic London (including some striking scenes from the Victorian era <www.tinyurl.com/77oucy>).
150. This year is the 100th anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic, and William Seil's THE TITANIC TRAGEDY (London: Titan Books, 2012; 261 pp., £7.99/$9.95) is the latest addition to the publisher's series of reprints in its "The Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" series; the pastiche was first published in 1996 and has Holmes and Watson aboard the ship, on secret assignment by the government and facing an assortment of villains. The publisher's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
151. Further to the item about the "Conan Doyle Weekend" in Haslemere (Surrey) on June 15-17, there's a web-site at <www.haslemere.com/conandoyle> giving more information about events and lodging.
152. Peter Bergman died on Mar. 9. He was one of the four founders of the Firesign Theatre in 1966 (the Washington Post once described the Firesign experience as "an impolite talk show where the host has lost control"). The Sherlockian world welcomed their 1974 record "The Tale of the Giant Rat of Sumatra" (also known as "A Thrilling Mis-Adventure from 'The Cheque Book of Hemlock Stones'").
153. <www.bookshelfporn.com>, noted by Samantha Wolov, is a "photo blog collection of all the best bookshelf photos from around the world." Pay special attention to <www.bookshelfporn.com/post/1262757876>.
154. Those who wonder about Victorian slang may wish to read the story (spotted by Karen Rhodes) in the Daily Telegraph (Feb. 24) about the on-line availability of the 2nd edition of Francis Grose's A CLASSICAL DICTIONARY OF THE VULGAR TONGUE (1811) at Project Gutenberg <www.tinyurl.com/8a3c9ss>. And Darlene Cypser has noted a more recent resource: J. Redding Ware's PASSING ENGLISH OF THE VICTORIAN ERA: A DICTIONARY OF HETERODOX ENGLISH, SLANG, AND PHRASE (1909) <www.tinyurl.com/86wfxhk>.
155. Hellokids.com is an imaginative web-site reported by Karen Murdock: among the many features are print-out coloring pages with an assortment of British authors, including Conan Doyle <www.tinyurl.com/6rcnq7t>.
156. Ken Lanza reports that Holmes & Watson, a British-style pub in Troy, N.Y., will close on Apr. 13. The British-style pub opened in 1978 and has been sold to new owners and will reopen in June as Finnbar's Irish Pub. Holmes & Watson offered for some years a "world tour" prize to customers who tried all of the pub's approximately 100 draft and bottled beers within a year. Ken also reports that he was one of the pub's first customers.

157. Mar 12 #7: The BBC has reported that filming on the third "Sherlock" season will begin early next year. One reason for the hiatus, of course, is that the stars have other work: Benedict Cumberbatch is filming the next "Star Trek" movie and Martin Freeman is working on "The Hobbit". In the meantime, "Masterpiece" is running a count-down clock for the second season (which starts on May 6), with a variety of video and other links that include a "reader discretion advised" interview with Cumberbatch and a feature on Andrew Scott (who definitely is one of the more imaginative Moriarty's). The series will be released in the U.S. on Blu-ray and DVD on May 22 with the three new episodes, audio commentary for the first two, and a behind-the-scenes featurette ("Sherlock Uncovered").
158. The Browser bills itself as a "21st-century library of Writing Worth Reading", and one of its offerings is an interview with Michael Dirda about the world of Sherlockians and about his favorite Sherlockian and Doylean books <www.thebrowser.com/interviews/michael-dirda-on-sherlock-holmes>.
159. "Sherlock Holmes Complains about Fake Sherlock Holmeses" is an amusing twominute video spotted by Lloyd Rose at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/7jo7asj>.
160. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times12-3.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, books and much more, including news and views of society meetings, and a CD recording of the late Art Schroeder's audio drama "The Forgotten Victim" (the story of "The Speckled Band" as told by the snake).
161. "Steampunk Holmes: Legacy of the Nautilus" is a work-in-progress discovered by Karen Murdock at <www.steampunkholmes.com>; there's a two-minute trailer for a planned interactive book.

162. Martin Breese died on Feb. 23. He was an important figure in the world of magicians, as a historian and a publisher of books, CDs, and DVDs, and in 1995 began publishing a series of Sherlockian pastiches written by fellow magician Val Andrews and others; in 2005 he sold his mystery series to Antony J. Richards, but maintained his enthusiastic interest in magic.
163. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France now holds a record for the most frequent Sherlockian society publication: their attractive Ironmongers Daily News appears daily (in French) via the Internet, and you can subscribe at their web-site <www.sshf.com> without charge.
164. There are 166 scripts available for download from The Generic Radio Workshop's Vintage Radio Script Library <www.genericradio.com>, five from the long-running "Sherlock Holmes" series (1939-1947).
165. There seems to be no end to interesting uses of the Internet: companies are making full-length films and uploading them to YouTube for viewing or downloading without charge; you can even skip most of the commercials. One of the films is "Sherlock Holmes" (2011), length 77 minutes, produced by Anton Pictures, inspired by Universal's "The Woman in Green" (1945), directed by George Anton, with Kevin Glaser (Sherlock Holmes) and Charles Simon (Watson). You can find it at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=Vez-PSHIN5w>. Thanks to Thierry Saint-Joanis for his report on the film.

166. Mar 12 #8: Timothy M. Brenner's LUMINARIES (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2011; 252 pp., $9.99) involves Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Harry Houdini, and Orson Welles (all with psychic powers) in an alternate-history pursuit of a vicious serial killer; Welles is gifted with the power of mental telepathy, Houdini with telekinesis, and Conan Doyle can sense the history of objects by touching them, and they need all of those powers to defeat their adversary.
167. Neil Gaiman's pastiche "The Case of Death and Honey" was selected by editor Jonathan Strahan as one of the stories in THE BEST SCIENCE FICTION AND FANTASY OF THE YEAR, VOLUME SIX (Night Shade Books, 2011; 600 pp., $19.99); it is reprinted from the anthology A STUDY IN SHERLOCK (Aug 11 #2).
168. The Royal Mail's postage rates are going up on Apr. 30: first class (next working day) service will cost 60p (96¢) for 100g (3.5oz) and second class (third working day) will cost 50p (80¢). For our British readers, Americans pay 45¢ for the first ounce, 65¢ for 2 oz, 85¢ for 3 oz, and $1.50 for 4 oz.
169. Laurie R. King's PIRATE KING (Aug 11 #1) will be issued as a trade paperback by Bantam in April with some bonus material: a print version of BEEKEEPING FOR BEGINNERS (Jun 11 #3) and an excerpt from the next Mary Russell novel GARMENT OF SHADOWS; previously available only as an e-novella, BEEKEEPING FOR BEGINNERS is an imaginative look, from Holmes' point of view, at his first meeting with Russell.
170. Randall Stock continues to enhance the contents of his excellent "Best of Sherlock" web-site, where he has updated his census of copies of Beeton's Christmas Annual <www.bestofsherlock.com/beetons-christmas-annual.htm>; he has added a newly-reported copy at Tulane University, as well as new photographs and other information.
171. The limited-edition slip-cased set of THE GRAND GAME (with both volumes and FROM PIFF-POUFF TO BACKNECKE: THE FULL STORY) is now available for purchase from The Baker Street Irregulars; more information on the set and on prices will be found at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/grandgamelimited.html>.
172. "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" has now grossed $534.8 million worldwide ($186.8 million domestic and $348.0 million foreign), more than "Sherlock Holmes" (the first film in the franchise), which grossed $524.0 million worldwide ($209.0 million domestic and $315.0 million foreign); the films rank #83 and #87 in all-time world-wide box-office grosses.
173. Lyndsay Faye's first novel was the well-received pastiche DUST AND SHADOW (Feb 09 #2), and her second is THE GODS OF GOTHAM, just out from Amy Einhorn Books/Putman; it's set in New York City in 1845 and thus isn't Sherlockian. You can read an excerpt at <www.tinyurl.com/6tx5ecw>, and there is a review by Claire Toohey at <www.tinyurl.com/73uo8ll>. Lyndsay also is an energetic blogger: you can read her sprightly report on the BSI annual dinner at <www.tor.com/blogs/2012/03/inside-the-baker-street-irregulars>.

174. Apr 12 #1: The Exhibits Development Group has released an exhibition announcement for "Sherlock Holmes: The Science of Deduction", an interactive exhibition that will tour science museums from 2013 to 2016; the project, which is licensed by the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Estate Ltd., is impressive, and you can view the announcement at <www.tinyurl.com/6ou6hrs>. Click on the two links at the bottom of the blue field to see the concept document and the brochure. The tour will begin at the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland in 2013. If you would like to receive the company's e-mail announcements, send a request to Angela Noble <angelan@exhibitsdevelopment.com>.
175. Brad Keefauver's weird and wonderful "Sherlock Peoria" web-site celebrates its tenth anniversary on June 12, when Brad plans to shut it down. There's still time to visit the web-site <www.sherlockpeoria.net> and see how imaginative it is; his announcement of the impending post-Sherlock Peoria world was made in his blog on Mar. 4. The April issue of The Gaslight Gazette, published by The Survivors of the Gloria Scott, opens with an appropriately imaginative protest; ask editor David J. Milner at <openshaw@bellsouth.net> for an electronic copy of the issue.
176. Later: Brad reports that he has decided to keep his web-site up on the Internet for the foreseeable future, but will abandon the weekly updates, going for a more irregular format. Tune in to his web-site for news of what will happen.
177. Brad recommends the Baker Street Babes as the new face of Sherlockiana, and they're at <www.bakerstreetbabes.com>; they have a podcast, and a sprightly theme song: "They call us the Irregulars, but baby, we're always on time. Baker Street Babes always leave the rest of them behind. So when Scotland Yard, they send you home, you feel like you're losing your mind. If this quotidian world has got you cryin', won't you 221 be mine?"
178. Sorry about that: <www.sshf.com> is the correct URL for the web-site of The Société Sherlock Holmes de France, publisher of the Ironmongers Daily News (Mar 12 #7).
179. "Masterpiece" is working hard at promoting the second season of "Sherlock": there's a web-site <www.pbs.org/wgbh/masterpiece/sherlock>, and a Facebook page at <www.facebook.com/masterpiecepbs>, and there will be a live Twitter discussion during each of the three broadcasts, with the Baker Street Blog, the Baker Street Babes, Lyndsay Faye, and Les Klinger, @masterpiecepbs.
180. A BOOK, by Mordecai Gerstein (New York: Roaring Brook Press, 2009; 48 pp., $16.99), is a charming book to read to children; grown-ups will enjoy it as much as their kids, and (of course) there is Sherlockian artwork. Compliments to Jennie Paton for spotting the book.
181. "A Parliament of Lines" is the title of an exhibition at the City Art Centre in Edinburgh (May 15 through July 8), showing the work of 15 contemporary Scottish artists, one of them Marie Harnett, who creates miniature pencil portraits. Three of them show Robert Downey Jr., Jude Law, and Rachel McAdams, and you can see her portrait of Law at <www.tinyurl.com/d5eja7m>.
182. Apr 12 #2: The Fireman's Fund is one of the more unusual insurance companies: they're the go-to insurer for the American entertainment industry, and they once insured the Loch Ness monster. They paid the studio when the monster sank during filming of "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970); the monster still lurks at the bottom of the loch, awaiting discovery by some intrepid diver who doesn't know about the history of the film. The N.Y. Times had an interesting article (Mar. 24) about the company, but without any mention of the monster <www.tinyurl.com/7kenh3m>.

183. Don Hobbs has discovered a new language for Canonical translations: Friulan (spoken in the Friuli region of northeastern Italy): LIS AVENTURIS DI SHERLOCK HOLMES was published in 2009 by the Società Filologica Friulana, which has a web-site at <www.filologicafriulana.it>; search for [doyle].
184. Pamela Bruxner ("The British Government") died on Mar. 28. She was a medical secretary and was involved with several musical and literary societies; for many years she was meetings secretary of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and she edited or co-edited nine of the Society's expedition handbooks. Pam was an Honorary Member of the Society, and received her Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1998.
185. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is a delightful parody that was written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007; it will be performed by the Penguin Rep Theatre, May 18 through June 10. 7 Crickettown Road, Stony Point, NY 10980 (845-786-2873) <www.penguinrep.org>.
186. Add Uruguay to the list of countries that have Sherlock societies: Ana Fernández is the contact for The Blue Scarves' Society, and you can find them at <www.facebook.com/groups/368486129842276>. The name of the society is a tribute to the blue scarf that's worn by Benedict Cumberbatch in the BBC's "Sherlock" mini-series.
187. Murder Squad is a collective of five excellent British writers, and Martin Edwards has edited their BEST EATEN COLD AND OTHER STORIES (Stroud: Mystery Press, 2011; 190 pp., £6.99/$12.95); one of the 13 stories is Edwards' own Sherlockian pastiche "The Case of the Musical Butler".
188. Ted M. Cowell reports an article in the Daily Mail (Mar. 31) about "Sweeps, nomads, quacks, and crawlers: The exotic down and outs of Victorian London captured on camera in the 1870s" <www.tinyurl.com/7zfgxd5> with some striking photographs of what Holmes might have seen when he arrived in London as a young man.
189. Carolyn and Joel Senter offer an imaginative "Vamberry the wine merchant" corkscrew <www.sherlock-holmes.com/collect.htm#VWM> (with a hand-engraved handle) for $42.50. And other interesting Sherlockiana.
190. Hans Sodertalje has reported to The Baskerville Hall Club that Andrew Taylor's BÖCKER SOM FÖRÄNDRADE VÄRLDEN: 50 VIKTIGASTE BÖCKERNA GENOM TIDERN (published in Sweden in 2009) includes an essay on EN STUDIE I ROTT. For those who don't read Swedish, that's BOOKS THAT CHANGED THE WORLD: 50 MOST IMPORTANT BOOKS OF ALL TIME and (of course) A STUDY IN SCARLET. Scandinavian books can be ordered on-line at <www.adlibris.com>.

191. Apr 12 #3: The Bristol Riverside Theatre will present the world premiere of Allan Knee's play "Faery Tales", which the theater describes as "the true story" of the Cottingley Fairies (Conan Doyle sent the photographs to his good friend Harry Houdini, "pitting the two men, each famous for their own brand of bringing the fantastic to life, against each other in a war over reality and magic"), Jan. 29-Feb. 17. 120 Radcliffe Street, Bristol, PA 19007 (215-785-0100) <www.brtstage.org>. Conan Doyle and Houdini were involved with the Cottingley Fairies in the film "Fairy Tale: A True Story" (1997), but that wasn't true, either (there's no record of Houdini having been involved in the investigation). Knee's earlier play "The Man Who Was Peter Pan" (1998) was adapted for the film "Finding Neverland" (2004), in which Ian Hart was seen briefly as Arthur Conan Doyle.
192. The Eastbourne Herald has reported (Mar. 19) on how the locals are honoring Sherlock Holmes and his retirement at East Dean: there's a plaque, and a 6 km walk, and an informative web-site at <www.beachyhead.org.uk>; search for [sherlock holmes].
193. The film "Titanic" (1997) has been reissued as "Titanic 3D" as part of the commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the ship's sinking. It's not a compelling reason to see the film again, but: near the beginning, when the salvagers discuss whether 100-year-old Rose Calvert could be a survivor of the disaster, one of them says the other, "There's your first clue, Sherlock."
195. Those who fondly remember the grand gourmet Sherlockian dinners at the CIA (that's the Culinary Institute of America) may wish to attend the celebration of the 40th anniversary of The Hudson Valley Scientists in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., on May 27; the theme of the gathering will be "Sherlock Holmes on the Hudson River", and the dinner will be supervised by CIA award-winning chef Fritz Sonnenschmidt. Details are available from Lou and Candace Lewis (2 Lookerman Avenue, Poughkeepsie, NY 12601) <llewis@lewisgreer.com>.
196. Christopher Boone, narrator of Mark Haddon's award-winning best-seller THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (2003) is an autistic teenager who enjoys the Sherlock Holmes stories, and turns detective himself; the National Theatre in London has commissioned a dramatization of the novel, for performance starting in July.
197. "Cloud Lovers, Unite!" is the motto of the Cloud Appreciation Society, reported by Karen Ellery, and one of the attractive photographs at the society web-site shows "Sherlock Holmes' smoking pipe over Teglio, Italy." The URL is <www.cloudappreciationsociety.org/?s=sherlock+holmes&g=1>. According to a society press release there will be a Sherlockian cloud in CLOUDS THAT LOOK LIKE THINGS, by Gavin Pretor-Pinney (London: Sceptre, 2012; 112 pp., £12.99), due in April.
198. Apr 12 #4: "This house, built in 1881, and was once occupied by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," reads a plaque at 2151 Sacramento Street in San Francisco. The house was offered for sale in 1985 for $1.3 million (Oct 85 #2) and was sold in 1986 for just under $1 million (Jan 87 #2), and you can now buy one of the building's four apartments (with 3 bed bedrooms, 4 bathrooms, 2,528 square feet) for $2.5 million. But: Conan Doyle never lived in the house. He was a visitor, in June 1923, to meet Dr. Albert Abrams, who did live there. Abrams had invented a "radio heterodyne" that he used to detect cancer, syphilis, and other diseases, and Conan Doyle was greatly impressed; he discusses his visit to San Francisco, and Abrams, in OUR SECOND AMERICAN ADVENTURE (1924). He stayed at the Clift Hotel, which is much fancier now than it was then; the current rate for a standard room is $255 a night.
199. Tina Rhea spotted some interesting T-shirts at <www.redbubble.com>; search for [sherlock holmes].
200. I've noted in past issues that members of The Baker Street Irregulars have acted in films, and I suppose that children should not be ignored. Jenny Ashman (daughter of Peter Ashman) has played Madeline in "The Karaoke King" (2007), and has other credits at the Internet Movie Database.
201. "I love Sherlock Holmes. My life is so untidy and he's so neat." Dorothy Parker, interviewed by Marion Capron on "The Art of Fiction" in the Paris Review, summer 1956.
202. "Hercule et Sherlock" (1996) is a French film, available on DVD (in French, although there is a version subtitled in Spanish); "when a counterfeiter is captured, two of his thugs have to work with two counterfeit money-sniffing dogs named Hercule and Sherlock to find the lost cash." Credit Irene Mihklin for spotting the film.
203. The spring issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the The Baker Street Irregulars Trust newsletter) has Andy Solberg's report on the Trust's Oral History Project, Vinnie Brosnan's "A Collector Recollects", and other news of and about the Trust; all issues of the newsletter are available on-line at the Trust web-site <www.bsitrust.org>, and copies of the current issue are available from Marshall S. Berdan (2015 Main Street, Glastonbury, CT 06033) <editor@bsitrust.org>.

204. Peter Calamai recommends the Book Depository for buying in-print books from Britain; they're in Guernsey, and at <www.bookdepository.com>, and there's no charge for world-wide shipping to more than 100 countries.
205. The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic) describe themselves as Chicago's original, senior, and most singular Sherlockian society, and one of their annual dinners featured a presentation by fight director and coordinator Tony Wolf (a co-founder of the Bartitsu Society), who performed a demonstration and previewed his upcoming documentary "Bartitsu: The Lost Martial Art of Sherlock Holmes" (there's been no word on whether any Hounds were harmed during the demonstration). The DVD was released last year by Broken Art ($29.95), and it is nicely done indeed; the Bartitsu enthusiasts interviewed include authors Neal Stephenson and Will Thomas.
206. Apr 12 #5: Debbie Clark has reported Peter Tonkin's THE HOUND OF THE BORDERS (2003), which has Elizabethan sleuth Tom Musgrave on the Scottish borders in pursuit of the Barquest (a mythical hound of terrifying proportions); it's the third of four books in the his "Master of Defense" series, which has been described as "James Bond meets Sherlock Holmes meets William Shakespeare."
207. Plan well ahead: the Segal Centre for Performing Arts in Montreal will present a new Sherlockian play written by Greg Kramer and starring Jay Baruchel as as Holmes, May 5-26, 2013 <www.segalcentre.org>.
208. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France has reported on "L'extravagant mystère Holmes", a play written by Christian Chevalier and Christophe Guillon that premiered in 2010 and is still being performed by the Compagnie Kelanotre; their web-site at <www.kelanotre.com> has artwork, photographs, and a three-minute video.
209. Universal Pictures was founded on Apr. 30, 1912, and is now the oldest operating film producer and distributor in the United States. The UCLA Film & Television Archive is celebrating Universal's centenary with a seven-week film festival, showing films that range from "Traffic in Souls" (1913) to "Inglourious Basterds" (2009); details at <www.tinyurl.com/85vhvlp>. Alas: none of Basil Rathbone's "Sherlock Holmes" films made the list.
210. A new Russian television series "Sherlock Holmes" has been in the works for some time, from Central Partnership, which was described as Russia's largest independent film producer and distributor (Jun 08 #6); there were many delays, but Alexander Orlov has reported that the production of the series is now underway, starring Igor Patrenko (Sherlock Holmes) and Andrey Panin (Dr. Watson) in eight two-part stories. Additional information is available at <www.tinyurl.com/723crts> (the Russian version of Wikipedia); Google Translate is a useful (and free) program that helps you read all sorts of languages on-line.
211. The Journal of Speech, Language, and Hearing Research surely is one of the more unusual places to find "The Valley of Fear" cited. Karen Murdock discovered "Sherlock Holmes and the Strange Case of the Missing Attribution" (by Jamie Reilly and Jamie Fisher) in the Feb. 2012 issue: the authors note echoes of the story in "The Grandfather Passage", which is used by aphasiologists and others to elicit speech and reading errors. Copies are available from Prof. Reilly <jjreilly@phhp.ufl.edu>.
212. "You've Got Mail" is a weekly feature on the Houghton Library blog, and you can read Peter Accardo's report on an interesting letter from Christopher Morley to Edgar W. Smith at <www.tinyurl.com/7s2sl3y>. The letter is part of the Baker Street Irregulars Archive at the Houghton.
213. The next "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be on Nov. 2-4, with participants at work solving the mystery "Sherlock Holmes and the Trial of Moriarty's Challenge"; there also will be a performance of "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Norwood Builder" by the East Lynne Theater Company. Visit <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html> for more information on the weekend, or write to Box 340, Cape May, N.J. 08204.
214. Apr 12 #6 The Arthur Conan Doyle Weekend in Haslemere on June 15-17 (Feb 12 #8) now has its own web-site <www.haslemere.com/conandoyle>; Conan Doyle and first wife Touie rented Grayswood Beeches in Haslemere, and stayed at the Moorlands Hotel in Hindhead, before they moved into their new home, Undershaw, in the fall of 1897.
215. The Puzzle Society has "games for your brain" as its motto, and a web-site at <www.puzzlesociety.com>, and a long series of pocket-size themed Pocket Posh puzzle books, the latest of which is POCKET POSH: SHERLOCK HOLMES: 100 PUZZLES & QUIZZES (Kansas City: Andrews McMeel, 2012; 135 pp., $7.99), and the book offers interesting mental exercise for fans.
216. Steve Hockensmith's first story about Old Red and Big Red Amlingmeyer was published in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Feb. 2003), and he went on to write more stories and five novels about the two cowboys: Old Red is a devoted admirer of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and Big Red is his literate brother who reads the stories to Old Red as they appear in magazines in the 1890s. DEAR MR. HOLMES: SEVEN HOLMES ON THE RANGE MYSTERIES (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2012; 202 pp., $11.99) collects seven stories reprinted from EQMM and the anthology GHOST TOWNS (2010); there's lots of detection, oldest flavor, and humor, and even the title-page verso copyright information is funny. The author has a web-site at <www.stevhockensmith.com>.
217. The March issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers warm tributes to Norman Schatell by Julie McKuras and Don Pollock, "50 Years Ago" memories of John C. Hogan, and other new from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Richard J. Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.
218. Plnow (the "trusted network of private investigators") pitted 16 fictional private investigators against each other in a "March Madness" contest, and (as might be expected) Sherlock Holmes was the winner, matched in the finals against Magnum (who won a separate prize for "best private investigator mustache"). Details at <www.tinyurl.com/cp8eph1>.
219. Tyke and Teddie Niver continue to present their "Sherlock Holmes: An Evening with the Gillettes" at Gillette Castle and at other venues in Connecticut; more information is available at <www.sherlockholmesct.com>.
220. Acorn Media is continuing its evolution from distribution into content ownership and television production, recently acquiring a 64% interest in the Agatha Christie estate. They continue to offer a wide range of television series on DVDs at <www.acornonline.com>, and free episodes of many of their series at <www.acornonline.com/acornstv>, and if you purchase premium status ($24.99 a year) you can watch complete series on-line, and they're planning to make their service available to Roku and NOOK devices.
221. Daniel Corey's MORIARTY comic-book mini-series from Image (Nov 11 #7) will be turned into a stage musical, according to a Comic Book Resources story (Feb. 27) that said "it will be a very gritty and dark piece with a sense of high adventure" with music based in hard rock. Corey's media company is DangerKatt, and you can see his work at <www.professorjamesmoriarty.com>.

222. Apr 12 #7: Further to the report (Mar 12 #7) on "Steampunk Holmes: Legacy of the Nautilus" (the first in a "multi-channel" series that's going to be available both in print and electronically), the publishers are asking for financial support for the project; pledges start at $1.00, with premiums offered at various levels (the campaign ends on May 3). There's an interesting web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/blgusuz> with more information, artwork, and a five-minute video.

223. LUKOLI CHIKCHIKA APISA (a Choctaw translation of "The Speckled Band") was commissioned by Don Hobbs, who offers it as a 40-page pamphlet for $20.00 postpaid (to the U.S.); his address is 2100 Elm Creek Lane, Flower Mound, TX 75028 <221b@verizon.net>.
224. There's a nice assortment of new pastiches from MX Publishing, all of them (and more) available at their web-site <www.mxpublishing.com>: Tim Symonds' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE DEAD BOER AT SCOTNEY CASTLE (2012; 277 pp., £11.99) pits Holmes and Watson against the Kipling League, a sinister society that manages to outwit Holmes (who understandably did not want this account published). Dean P. Turnbloom's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE WHITECHAPEL VAMPIRE (2012; 246 pp., £10.99) has Holmes and Watson in pursuit of the Ripper, who is a sophisticated vampire who has fallen in love with the niece of Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir Charles Warren. Amy Thomas' THE DETECTIVE AND THE WOMAN (2012; 204 pp., £9.99) sends Holmes and a widowed Irene Adler to Florida during the Great Hiatus, meeting Thomas Edison and foiling complicated villainy.
225. Also from MX Publishing is Dan Andriacco's HOLMES SWEET HOLMES (2012; 260 pp., £10.99), a murder mystery in which the victim is writer-actor-director Peter Gerard, whose latest film "221B Bourbon Street" had Holmes and Watson in New Orleans in the 1920s and triggered a storm of protest from Sherlockian purists, one of whom may or may not be the murderer.
226. The winners of Edgars awarded by the Mystery Writers of America this year included Michael Dirda's ON CONAN DOYLE; OR, THE WHOLE ART OF STORYTELLING (for best critical/biographical) and Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot" (for best play).
227. "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" is an interview podcast by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder, and the latest episode (#41) runs 62 minutes and includes an interview with Lara Pulver, who plays Irene Adler in "A Scandal in Belgravia" (the first episode of the second series of "Sherlock", airing on PBS-TV on May 6). Listen to or download the podcast at <www.ihearofsherlock.com>; earlier episodes also are available, and there are no spoilers in Pulver's interview. It has been rumored that she was fully clothed during her interview, but Monty and Wolder weren't.
228. The Missing Three-Quarter has been to Japan. The manuscript, that is. The British Library sent "two major treasures" (the manuscript, and a copy of Shakespeare's First Folio) to Tokyo as highlights in an exhibition at the British Embassy, Apr. 23-25, promoting British culture and education.

229. May 12 #1: July 15 is the deadline for registration for "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" (the Baker Street Irregulars' conference in Los Angeles on Aug. 30-Sept. 3), which will feature actors, producers, and directors, and presentations covering screen-writing, casting, costuming, sound, and lighting. And screening of several rare and recently-restored films. Details at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/losangeles2012.html>.
230. The Ironmongers Daily News (published almost daily by the Société Sherlock Holmes de France) reports "Sherlock Yack" (2011), a French animated television series with 52 13-minute episodes. You can see artwork and watch a few episodes at <www.vodgratuite.cm/go/tf1/sherlock-yack-1334640800>.
231. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Gladstone's in Long Beach on Apr. 25, when visitors attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists were welcomed by members of the local Sherlockian societies. An article on forensic geology and Sherlock Holmes and Sherlockians appeared in the AAPG Explorer's April issue <www.aapg.org/explorer/2012/04apr/spotlight0412.cfm>. Our next dinners will be in Charlotte on Nov. 7, and in Pittsburgh on May 22, 2013.
232. Michael Procter died on May 3. He trained at the Royal Academy of Music in London and went on to specialize in Renaissance music; he was a performer, conductor, teacher, and editor and publisher, and his web-site's still active at <www.michael-procter.com>. Based in Germany, he was an energetic Sherlockian, this year founding the Sherlock Holmes Club of Carlsruhe; he also combined his two interests in an impressive monograph MELANCHOLIA IN MUSIC: THE POSTHUMOUS MOTETS OF ORLANDUS LASSUS, BY SHERLOCK HOLMES, published this year and available from Amazon in most countries.
233. Philip K. Jones' data base for Sherlockian pastiches, parodies, and related fiction now has more than 9,000 entries; previously hosted at Michael Procter's web-site, the data base is now available at Christopher and Barbara Roden's web-site <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/Sherlock.htm>.
234. Sherlockians who have attended the birthday festivities will recall, fondly or perhaps otherwise, West 44th Street institutions such as the Algonquin, the Iroquois, the Royalton, the Red Flame, and the N.Y. City Bar Association, will enjoy Alex Shoumatoff's long and interesting article "Positively 44th Street" in the June issue of Vanity Fair (alas, only a teaser's available at the magazine's web-site). There's history galore, and gossip and scandal, in the block between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, and Shoumatoff gives the reader a fine tour of the area.
235. Jon Lellenberg reports Arcadia Falcone's recent contribution to the Harry Ransom Center's "Cultural Compass" blog on "The Adventure of the Immortal Detective: Discovering Sherlock Holmes in the Archives" with a set of interesting images; they have a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual, Paget originals, manuscripts, and other nice material. You can read all about it at <www.utexas.edu/opa/blogs/culturalcompass/tag/baker-street-irreglars>.

236. May 12 #2: The Daily Telegraph reported (May 3) that Buckingham Palace insiders have said that Queen Elizabeth has taken part in a film that will be broadcast during the opening ceremony of the summer Olympics, bestowing a knighthood on James Bond (as portrayed by Daniel Craig). Jake Kerridge, the paper's crime critic, noted that two of Britain's most famous literary characters turned down knighthoods: one of them was James Bond, at the end of THE MAN WITH THE GOLDEN GUN, and the other was Sherlock Holmes, in "The Three Garridebs" (Kerridge also said that he didn't object to Britain "broadcasting to the world a film in which the monarch gives one of the country's highest honors to a bigoted manipulative satyromaniac"). You can watch the film when it airs on July 27.
237. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e_times12-4.html>, with news and offers of Sherlockiana from Classic Specialties, plus reports from other societies.
238. CBS-TV has scheduled its one-hour series "Elementary" (Mar 12 #3) at 10:00 pm on Thursdays in its fall line-up; you can watch a four-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=yrDVSxNycKc>. There's also a more recent five-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=ff-XiZzJLxw>. A helpful hint for people in countries where CBS-TV isn't available on television (if you have access to the Internet): American networks tend to make their series available on-line; see <www.cbs.com> for a sample of what's available now.
239. "The next I heard of Frank," Hatty Doran told Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson (in "The Noble Bachelor"), "he was in Montana, and then he was prospecting in Arizona, and then I heard from him from New Mexico." Our new stamps honor the 100th anniversary of statehood for Arizona and New Mexico; Montana's centennial was celebrated earlier (Jan 89 #5).
240. "Bloody Scotland", Scotland's first international crimewriting festival, Sept. 14-16 in Stirling, will have Ian Rankin as keynote speaker and many other writers on hand for the weekend event, which will include panels, workshops, a short-story contest, master-classes, and a Sherlock Holmes Dinner (on Sept. 15) with David Stuart Davies as the toastmaster. There's a website at <www.bloodyscotland.com>, and if you're asked for a password, it's [welcome].

241. George Anton's YouTube video "Sherlock Holmes" (Mar 12 #7), with Kevin Glaser as Holmes and Charles Simon as Watson, also is available commercially as a DVD ($19.99) and from Amazon Instant Video ($1.99).
242. Laurie R. King will be guest of honor at Malice Domestic 25 (May 3-5, 2013, at the Hyatt Regency in Bethesda, Md.); it's a long-running conference for mystery writers and readers, and it offers a fine opportunity to meet your favorite authors (and get them to sign their books for you). Details will be found (eventually) at <www.malicedomestic.org>, but you can register now (and that's advised if you want full registration including the Agatha banquet, at which attendance will be limited).
243. May 12 #3: "Masterpiece" promoted the second season of "Sherlock" with an excerpt screening, Q&A, and autograph reception in New York on May 2, with Benedict Cumberbatch, co-creator Stephen Moffat, and producer Sue Vertue, and there were 10,000 on-line applications for the 400 seats at the preview. You can watch a 48-minute video of the Q&A session at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=-MltF5YNPac>. Rebecca Eaton said that filming for the third season will begin in early 2013, and the series will air in the U.S. in 2013.
244. Karen Murdock spotted the "Locations" section of Sherlockology, where you can find out where scenes were shot for all six episodes of "Sherlock" (you can click on "Series 1" or "Series 2" and then on scenes to find out what's where). And the British Academy of Film & Television announced its BAFTA Television Craft Awards on May 13, with "Sherlock" winning in three categories for "A Scandal in Belgravia": best editing/fiction, best sound: fiction, and best writer (Steven Moffat).
245. And "Sherlock" co-creator Mark Gatiss, who also plays Mycroft, has revealed that his Mycroft has a real-life inspiration: "I'd just auditioned to play Peter Mandelson in a TV film and we'd already discussed how reptilian and Mandelsonian we wanted Mycroft to be." Mandelson is a Labour Party politician who has had a colorful and checkered career; a trusted advisor to Tony Blair, Mandelson was twice a member of Blair's cabinet and twice resigned amid accusations of corruption, and there's much more about him in an entry at Wikipedia.
246. Plan well ahead: Jeffrey Hatcher's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" will be performed at the Alley Theatre from May 24 to June 23, 2013. The theater is at 615 Texas Avenue, Houston, TX 77002 (713-220-5700) <www.alleytheatre.org>.
247. The Sell a Door Theatre Company will perform Tim Kelly's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Greenwich Theatre, July 2-8. Croom's Hill, London SE10 8ES, England (020-8858-7755) <www.greenwichtheatre.org.uk>.
248. "Sherlock Holmes awarded title for most portrayed literary human character in film & TV," Guinness World Records announced this month. According to Guinness, Holmes has been depicted on screen 254 times, by more than 75 actors, and Guinness adjudicator Claire Burgess commented that the title reflects Holmes' "enduring appeal and demonstrates that his detective talents are as compelling today as they were 125 years ago." The runner-up for the record was Hamlet, with only 206 appearances. But Holmes isn't the overall most portrayed literary character, according to Guinness: that title's held by the non-human Dracula who has been portrayed 272 times.
249. A novel that includes a papal exorcist in its list of characters promises to be interesting, and Gyles Brandreth's OSCAR WILDE AND THE VATICAN MURDERS (New York: Touchstone, 2012; 337 pp., $14.00) certainly fulfills that promise; it's the fifth in his series featuring Oscar Wilde and Arthur Conan Doyle as the detectives (Wilde, as always, is the better detective) in an imaginative mystery, narrated this time by Conan Doyle, that brings them to the Vatican in 1892. The next book in Brandreth's series will be OSCAR WILDE AND THE MURDERS AT READING GAOL.
250. May 12 #4: The television series "House, M.D." completed its long run on 21 with a one-hour retrospective special ("Swan Song") that included a brief segment with a Sherlockian discussion by Hugh Laurie (Gregory House) and series creator David Shore, and the final episode ("Everybody Dies") ended with an interesting echo of the Canon. Shore has often acknowledged that Holmes was part of the inspiration for House; the series has included occasional allusions over the years, among them the number of House's apartment: 221B.
251. "An Indian Sherlock" is the title of a possible Indian film project, based on British author Tarquin Hall's series of novels about Vish Puri, a modern Punjabi detective described as "India's Most Private Investigator". Anand Tucker has been signed to direct the film, which may star Anil Kapoor, and there seems to be nothing Sherlockian about the film other than the title.
252. A one-hour version of Jeremy Paul's play "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (commissioned by Jeremy Brett in 1988) will be performed at Theatre Asylum on June 9-24, during the Hollywood Fringe Festival. 6320 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles, CA 90038 (323-962-1632) <www.theatreasylum-la.com>.
253. THE SECRET ARCHIVES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: Allison & Busby, 2012; 285 pp., £19.99) is June Thomson's latest collection of pastiches, with seven new stories; she started her series of collections with THE SECRET FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Dec 90 #5), and continues to entertain her readers. There will be an American edition in September.
254. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France has noted a new film project: "Sherlock Holmes vs. Frankenstein" from Marteau Films Production, with filming scheduled to start this winter: "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson travel to Germany to investigate a strange case in the village of Darmstadt. Who is the mysterious scientist who digs up corpses and steals their limbs? Could these events be related to the nearby presence of Castle Frankenstein? Everyone is a suspect." Gautier Cazenave wrote the script and will direct, with Holmes and Watson played by Nicholas Rowe and Alan Cox, who played the same characters in the film "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985). You can see a colorful poster at <www.holmes-frank.com>.
255. Filming has been completed on the new Russian television series "Sherlock Holmes" (Apr 12 #5); the eight two-part programs are scheduled for broadcast next year.
256. Enid Schantz died on Aug. 12. She and her husband Tom launched the Aspen Bookhouse in 1970 and went on to publish a series of reprints of early pastiches from their Aspen Press, many of which were imaginatively illustrated by Enid. They continued to sell and publish books from The Rue Morgue in Boulder, Colo., and were delighted to meet old and new friends and customers at Bouchercon, Malice Domestic, and Left Coast Crime.
257. Jennie Paton discovered that an Australian company (Madman Entertainment) has released Roger Moore's "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976) on a region 4 (PAL) DVD (AU$19.95); it's available for the first time on DVD, and there is a special-feature audio-commentary interview with Moore recorded in Oct. 2011. Details at <www.madman.com.au/catalogue/view/16563>.
258. May 12 #5: The BBC reported (Apr. 23) on the opening of the Kent History and Library Centre in Maidstone, where researchers can consult documents that date back to 699 AD; one of the items on display is a ledger that shows that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was fined £10/9s for driving his car more than 20 mph in the Folkestone area.
259. Charles Higham died on Apr. 21. He was a poet, journalist, critic, and an energetic celebrity biographer who specialized in Hollywood figures such as Errol Flynn, Charles Laughton, and Cary Grant. Higham described Flynn as a bi-sexual Nazi spy, and Grant as a wife-beating closeted homosexual; some of his obituaries noted that one critic suggested that Higham's biography of Howard Hughes was so salacious that Higham "had reached the point where most of his subjects have slept with one another." His THE ADVENTURES OF CONAN DOYLE: THE LIFE OF THE CREATOR OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1976) was an exception: the book was not well researched and, without sex and scandal, it seemed to have bored its author.

260. "You Know My Methods: A Collector's Approach to the Sherlockian Canon" is the title of an exhibition at the Book Club of California in San Francisco from June 4 through Sept. 10; the exhibition celebrates the 110th anniversary of the publication of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and features rare items from the collection of Glen Miranker <www.bccbooks.org>.
261. I'm not aware of any Sherlockian connection for the prediction that the world will end on Dec. 21, but it's worth noting that Belgium has issued a souvenir sheet with five stamps that show a detail from the prophetic panel of the Mayan calendar. Why Belgium? Because the complete panel is in Brussels, on display at the Royal Museums for Art and History.
262. What's the most valuable modern Sherlockian periodical? A likely candidate is the first issue of Playboy, which included an excerpt from "The Sign of the Four"; it sold for 50¢ in Dec. 1953 and had a press run of 53,991 copies, and a copy sold at Heritage Auctions month for $8,365 (including the buyer's premium). That's up nicely from the $3,032 that a copy brought at an auction a few years ago (Sep 10 #6).
263. Christopher Boone, the narrator of Mark Haddon's award-winning best-seller THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (2003) is an autistic teen-ager who loves the Sherlock Holmes stories and turns detective himself; he will be played by Luke Treadaway in a dramatization by Simon Stephens at the National Theatre in London, July 24 through Sept. 12. There's more information at <www.nationaltheatre.org.uk>. Una Stubbs (Mrs. Hudson in the BBC's "Sherlock" mini-series, will play Mrs. Alexander.
264. May 12 #6: Scott Monty has reported that the Post-Meridian Radio Players' "Summer Radio Mystery Theatre" July 27-28 will offer new versions of three classic programs, including "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (adapted from the CBS Radio Mystery Theatre) in Somerville, Mass., on July 27-28. Details at <www.huboftheuniverseproductions.com>.
265. A high court judge heard arguments on May 23 in the Undershaw Preservation Trust's campaign to block conversion of Conan Doyle's home into flats (May 11 #3); the judge is expected to rule soon on whether the Waverly Borough Council properly considered a third-party offer to purchase the house.
266. There's a new version of the delightful parody of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that was written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007: it's a radio-theater adaptation that will be performed at the Bath Fringe Festival on June 4 <www.bathfringe.co.uk>. It was inspired by a performance with a live audience that was recorded for BBC Radio 4 in March; the program will air as the Saturday Drama on July 7. Nick Hern Books publish the original script and license it for amateur productions <www.nickhernbooks.co.uk>; the company also offers David Edgar's dramatization of Julian Barnes' novel ARTHUR AND GEORGE.
267. There was a flurry of publicity last month about the discovery in the John Murray Archives at the National Library of Scotland of Conan Doyle stories that were considered to be "not very good and not used as the quality was too poor." The stories, none of them unpublished, were found in a set of typescripts that likely were prepared for possible reprinting in THE CONAN DOYLE STORIES (1929); they've been republished since, in the volume of UNCOLLECTED STORIES (1982) edited by Richard Lancelyn Green.
268. "Forensic Firsts" begins on the Smithsonian channel on June 17 and the series offers an interesting look at how forensic sciences are used by detectives today <www.smithsonianchannel.com/site/sn/show.do?series=826>. They may even mention Sherlock Holmes.
269. Les Klinger reports that Ronald Unz has digitized The Bookman [London] and The Bookman [New York] the files are searchable, and of course contain much about Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle. <www.unz.org/Pub/BookmanUK> and <www.unz.org/Pub/Bookman>. Unz has digitized many other magazines that contain Sherlockiana and Doyleana.
270. "Good Bad Books" is the title of an essay by George Orwell in Tribune (Nov. 2, 1945) and reprinted SHOOTING AN ELEPHANT AND OTHER ESSAYS (1950); he acknowledges G. K. Chesterton for coining the phrase, which Orwell applies to "the kind of book that has no literary pretensions but which remains readable when more serious productions have perished." And his list of "obviously outstanding books in this line" includes "Raffles", "Dracula", "Uncle Tom's Cabin", and the Sherlock Holmes stories. Orwell had earlier written a Sherlockian parody "The Adventure of the Lost Meat-Card" for Eton College's Election Times (June 3, 1918), unmentioned in his essay, which can be read on-line at <www.orwell.ru/library/reviews/books/english/e-books>.

271. Jun 12 #1: The Undershaw Preservation Trust won its suit to prevent conversion of Conan Doyle's home into flats (May 11 #3) when a high court judge ruled that the Waverley Borough Council had not adequately met statutory requirements to pay special regard to the preservation of heritage assets and planning policy when it approved the developer's plans. The judge awarded £20,000 in legal costs to Trust founder John Gibson, and gave the Council time to consider whether to appeal; the Council later announced that it would not contest the decision, but Fossway, the developer, has decided to appeal.
272. Guy Ritchie is keeping busy while waiting to proceed with a third "Sherlock Holmes" film for Warner Bros. Trade journals report that he is working on a film version of "The Man from U.N.C.L.E." and on a proposed new version of "Treasure Island" (both for Warner Bros.).
273. The Book Club of California has more information about its celebration of the 110th anniversary of the publication of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES at the club's web-site <www.bccbooks.org/exhibit.htm>. The exhibition runs through Sept 10, and Glen Miranker reports that the material on display includes manuscript pages, original artwork by Sidney Paget and Frederic Dorr Steele, and Conan Doyle's Norwood notebook (1885-1896).
274. Philip K. Jones' data base for Sherlockian pastiches, parodies, and related fiction now has more than 9,200 entries; the data base is now available at Christopher and Barbara Roden's web-site <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/Sherlock.htm> and (with Philip's article "The Untold Tales--Analyzed") at Miguel Herrera Baena's web-site at <www.sherlock-holmes.es/database.php>.
275. Further to the item about Alex Shoumatoff's excellent article "Positively 44th Street" in the June issue of Vanity Fair (May 12 #1), Scott Monty has kindly provided a link to the article <www.tinyurl.com/75nen68>.
276. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times12-6.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, books and much more, including a tribute to Bob Burr accompanied by photographic proof that Bob does occasionally leave Peoria.
277. Qiu Xiaolong is the author of the political detective novel DON'T CRY, TAI LAKE (Minotaur, 2012), which was praised by Patrick Anderson in his review in the Washington Post (May 21); it's not Sherlockian, but Xiaolong reports that he was a teenager in China during the Cultural Revolution (1966-1976) when almost all literature was banned. He succeeded in borrowing a copy of the Sherlock Holmes stories from a friend, and to avoid getting into trouble read them concealed inside the red plastic cover of QUOTATIONS OF CHAIRMAN MAO. He has lived in the United States since 1988, and has a web-site at <www.qiuxiaolong.com>.

278. Clothes on Film <www.clothesonfilm.com> is an interesting web-site devoted to "examining costume and identity in movies; in May 2010 there was a twopart discussion by Chris Laverty of Robert Downey Jr.'s "Sherlock Holmes" (2009), and this month a two-part discussion of "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" (2011), with input from the film's costume designer Jenny Beavan.

279. Jun 12 #2: The 8th Annual Convention of The Reichenbachian Cliff-Divers is to be held in Peoria on Aug. 15-17, according to an announcement in the June issue of the Gaslight Gazette (published by The Survivors of the Gloria Scott); details of one of the more unusual Sherlockian gatherings are available by e-mail from Dave Milner <openshaw@bellsouth.net>. It's possible that this is a rescheduling of the convention announced for May 11-13 in Succasunna, N.J., in a message to the Sherlock Holmes Social Network <www.sherlockholmes.ning.com>.
280. Danish artist Nis Jessen has applied Sherlockian quotations to some of the illustrations in his spectacular edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET (Jul 05 #6), and you can see the results at his Facebook page <www.tinyurl.com/7bf2dl9>. His own web-site is at <www.jessen-gallery.dk>, and copies of his book are available: contact his wife Florida at <florida-jessen@jessen-gallery.dk>.
281. It's not Sherlockian, but it's a fine book for collectors: Miles Harvey's THE ISLAND OF LOST MAPS: A TRUE STORY OF CARTOGRAPHIC CRIME (2000) explores the story of Gilbert Bland Jr., whose cartomania doesn't seem all that far removed from bibliomania. The author's web-site is <www.milesharvey.com>.
282. "Writing Britain: Wastelands to Wonderlands" is a major exhibition at the British Library through Sept. 25, examining "how the landscapes of Britain permeate great literary works"; the section on "Wild Places: Terror of the Wild" includes THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. There's an interesting website at <www.bl.uk/whatson/exhibitions/writingbritain>.
283. The U.S. Postal Service has issued a set of stamps honoring four Great Film Directors: Frank Capra, John Huston, John Ford, and Billy Wilder, three of whom have Sherlockian connections. Billy Wilder directed "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), John Huston played Moriarty in "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976), and John Ford (billed as Jack Francis) played Watson in "A Study in Scarlet" (1914), directed by his older brother Francis Ford, who also played Holmes.
284. "Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows" ended its run in theaters in the U.S. on Apr. 12 after 112 days on screens in 3,703 theaters, according to the Box Office Mojo web-site; the film's world-wide gross is now stands at $543.8 million. "Sherlock Holmes" (the first Robert Downey Jr. film) ran for 126 days in 3,626 theaters in the U.S. and grossed $524.0 million world-wide.
285. The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; the summer issue has Susan Rice's discussion of "Lighthouses of the Past and Future" (about how young women have joined the Sherlockian world from the 1960s through the 2010s), and much more of interest; it's published quarterly and costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).

286. Jun 12 #3: An article in the Aberdeen Press & Journal (June 16) noted that Arthur Conan Doyle was born at 11 Picardy Place in Edinburgh, and that a plaque on another building on the street notes that on a certain date, on this very spot, nothing much happened. But the real focus of the article is on the building at 12 Picardy Place, where today one will find the Mark Greenaway Restaurant; Mark Greenaway earlier this year became the only Scottish chef to be awarded three rosettes from the Automobile Association for outstanding cuisine.
287. Anglofile is a blog by Leslie King, offering detailed coverage of British entertainment; she offers early reports on programs to come on PBS-TV and on BBC America at <anglofileplus.livejournal.com>; the blog's also on Facebook at <www.facebook.com/anglofileplus>
288. For those who don't already have the book (and there shouldn't be many of you), copies of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, edited by Jon Lellenberg, Daniel Stashower, and Charles Foley (May 07 #5) are available discounted to $4.98 at <www.daedalusbooks.com>. Thanks to Tina Rhea for the report.
289. Janet Rudolph has announced that Anthony Horowitz's pastiche THE HOUSE OF SILK (Dec 11 #5) has been nominated for a Macavity Award (best mystery novel) from Mystery Readers International/Mystery Readers Journal. Winners of the awards (named for T. S. Eliot's creation in OLD POSSUM'S BOOK OF PRACTICAL CATS) will be announced at Bouchercon in October.
290. Tumblr is an imaginative and useful web-site that at which people can post text, photos, links, music, and videos; it was founded in 2007 and now has more than 63 million posts a day in twelve languages, and of course some of the posts are from people who are "addicted to Sherlock." You can see what it's all about at <www.shaddicted.tumblr.com>.
291. "Enjoy the 100 Greatest Books of All Times and Never Have to Read a Word!" is the offer from the Library of Classics; for only $99.00 you receive the books in audio format and an MP3 player, and one of the books is THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES. Go to <[www.buythe classics.com](http://www.buythe classics.com)> to see the titles of all of the books.
292. Patricia Gore-Booth died on Feb. 2. She was born in Japan and educated in Australia, and returning to Japan when war broke out in Europe she went to work in the British Embassy assigned to work in Paul Gore-Booth's department. They were married in September 1940, interned by the Japanese, sent back to Britain, and then posted to the British Embassy in Washington, and she was with her husband during all his long diplomatic career, and during all his Sherlockian career. Their photograph, costumed as Sherlock Holmes and Irene Adler during the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's first Swiss Pilgrimage, appeared in The Times on May 1, 1968.
293. Catherine Cooke reports that Abbey House still stands at the site of 221B Baker Street, with the central facade and clocktower preserved. According to the developer, the overall site has 92 luxury residential units and 40 affordable units, with underground car parking, and there's a nice photograph at <www.flickr.com/photos/ddtmmm/3909629026>.

294. Jun 12 #4: "The Adventure of the Immortal Detective: Discovering Sherlock Holmes in the Archives" is the title of an interesting post by Arcadia Falcone to the Cultural Compass blog at the Harry Ransom Center at the University of Texas. The collection has some wonderful Sherlockian and Doylean material (including two pairs of his socks); you can read her post at <www.utexas.edu/opa/blogs/culturalcompass/2012/05/03/sherlock-holmes>, and the slide show is fascinating (there's a button to turn on captions).
295. ARMCHAIR MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is a new collection of pastiches by Alan Downing, available (without charge) via the Internet as PDF and Kindle files at <www.sites.google.com/site/armchairmysteries>.
296. There will be some intriguing Conan Doyle material at auction on July 10 at Swords & Sables <www.sworder.co.uk/index.php?\_a=viewBlog+blogId=17>. Mary Jakeman was working as a servant in Surbiton in 1909, when she applied for a position as lady's maid in the Conan Doyle household, and Conan Doyle's letter offering her the job ("The wages start at £26. The servants find their own beer or wine.") is included in the collection, along with other correspondence from the family (she left their employ in 1932) and photographs, and signed and inscribed books; she is mentioned in THE WANDERINGS OF A SPIRITUALIST (1921) and MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES (1924).
297. Richard Carpenter died on Feb. 26. He was acted on stage and television, and in the 1970s turned to writing for ITV and the BBC, becoming a popular and prolific screenwriter for children's television, including two of the four programs in the series "The Baker Street Boys" (1983).

298. Twickenham Film Studios has closed, one year short of celebrating 100 years of British film-making. Founded as St. Margaret's Studios in 1913, it was renamed in 1929 by the company's owners producer Jules Hagen and director Leslie Hiscott. Films made at Twickenham included the Beatles' "Help!" and "A Hard Day's Night", Michael Caine's "Alfie", Angela Lansbury's "The Mirror Crack'd", Meryl Streep's "The Iron Lady", and most of Arthur Wontner's Sherlockian films in the 1930s.
299. Further to the report (Dec 01 #4) on the "Hound of the Baskervilles effect" (the conclusion that fatal heart attacks and stress are linked in fact as well as fiction), Don Pollock has noted references to a "Hound of the Baskervilles pattern" <www.tinyurl.com/6nb6kp3>. It's a financial phenomenon, "when a pattern or anticipated behaviour in prices does not occur in spite of compelling recent evidence," and it seems to have been named by someone who thought that the dog that did nothing in the night-time was the Baskerville hound.
300. The latest Sherlockian audio from Big Finish is SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE PERFIDIOUS MARINER, on a CD ($14.07) and as a download ($7.99); PO Box 3787, Maidstone, Berks. SL6 3TF, England <www.bigfinish.com>. Nicholas Briggs stars as Holmes, and Richard Earl as Watson, with Michael Maloney as J. Bruce Ismay (the most hated man in England, blamed for the Titanic disaster); it's an intriguing mystery, and as always well-acted and recorded. There's a 30-minute podcast at the web-site, and downloadable copies of the company's monthly magazine Vortex, as well as information about their Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian recordings.

301. Jun 12 #5: The "casting thread" is pervasive on the Internet, where people often imagine various actors playing various characters, and in 2009 Regan Payne, a Canadian free-lance writer and director, was inspired by the first Robert Downey Jr. film to propose imaginative combinations of actors and directors for never-made Sherlock Holmes movies for each decade from 1929 to 1999 (for 1939, for example, he had Michael Curtiz directing William Powell as Holmes and Buster Keaton as Watson). The entire blog can be read at <www.tinyurl.com/cdauzud>.
302. Alyson Kuhn has an interesting (and well illustrated) report on "The Case of the Sherlockian Miranker" at the Felt and Wire web-site on the exhibition "You Know My Methods: A Collector's Approach to the Sherlockian Canon" at the Book Club of California in San Francisco (May 12 #5); you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/6q6jnuw>.
303. Benedict Cumberbatch, interviewed by TVLine (June 14), said that "I'll always do 'Sherlock'--it's something I'm not going to give up on," and that "there's no reason for us to stop if it's still being adored and we still enjoy doing it." Cumberbatch also said that he'd like to see Holmes getting older: "We're starting quite young. It's rare to see Holmes and Watson at the beginning of their relationship; we usually join them in their mid-to-late 40s or 50s. I've got a way to go. I mean, I'm only 35."
304. And "Getting Sherlock Holmes Right Onscreen" is the title of a perceptive essay by Michael Sragow at the New Yorker's "culture desk" blog, where he has nice things to say about the Cumberbatch/Freeman series, and about the Rathbone/Bruce films <www.tinyurl.com/7cbsd7>.
305. Last month President Obama awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom to 11-time Grammy winner Bob Dylan, noting that "there is not a bigger giant in the history of American music" (the medal is awarded "for having made especially meritorious contributions to the security or national interests of the United States, to world peace, or to culture or other significant public or private endeavours." In 1963 Dylan refused appear on "The Ed Sullivan Show" when CBS refused to allow him to sing "The Talking John Birch Society Blues" (the song's lyrics include a mention of Sherlock Holmes).
306. Caroline John died on June 5. She began her acting career on screen at the age of 15, performed on stage, and was best known for her role as Liz Shaw in the "Doctor Who" television series. She also had a supporting role in "Madame Sara" in "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" (1971), and played Laura Lyons in Tom Baker's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1982).
307. Karen Murdock reports the Craig Calvert has constructed 1:6 scale diorama of the sitting room at 221B, and there are lots of photographs at his website at <www.bakerstreetdiorama.com>.
308. Phil Bergem continues his research into matters Doylean, and has written an excellent article on "Residences of Arthur Conan Doyle"; there are detailed descriptions, contemporary maps, coordinates, and latitudes and longitudes (so you can use Google Earth to see what locations look like now). It is available as a PDF file at the "Conan Doyle" group at Yahoo (the file name is "ACD-residences") and by e-mail from Phil <pgbergem@gmail.com>.
309. Jun 12 #6: Daniel Stashower's THE HOUDINI SPECTER (2000) has been reissued by Titan Books ($12.95), completing his trio of "The Harry Houdini Mysteries"; as in THE DIME MUSEUM MURDERS and THE FLOATING LADY MURDER (Feb 12 #6), Houdini, beginning his career as an escapologist, succeeds in solving a well-written mystery. The books have passing mentions of Sherlock Holmes, and it's a pity there are only three in the series. The publisher's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
310. Christopher Challis died on May 31. He was a newsreel camera assistant as a teenager, and began his film career as a cinematographer in 1947 and went on to have a long association with Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, and became best known for his spectacular color work. He was director of photography for "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes".
311. An interesting photograph of Conan Doyle will be available at International Autograph Auctions on July 14-15; it's lot 529, estimated at £250-£350 <www.autographauctions.co.uk>. It shows a younger Conan Doyle, and is signed, and is particularly interesting because it was taken by Elliott & Fry of Baker Street (the photograph studio was at 56 & 56 Baker until 1919, when it moved to another location), and it is interesting because it shows that Conan Doyle was forgetful when he once told an interviewer that he did not recall evcall ever having been in Baker Street in his life.
312. Anthony Horowitz is keeping busy: he's writing new episodes for "Foyle's War" and working on a sequel to his pastiche THE HOUSE OF SILK that will not feature Sherlock Holmes. "The recent Robert Downey films are great," Horowitz said to the Yorkshire Post (June 12), but they're what I call Indiana Holmes and, what I really want to do is explore the world in which he lives. So it's set in 1890 and the main character is Watson. By that time he and Holmes were already working together, but I want to look at Watson's partnership with another younger detective." Thanks to Randall Stock for the report.
313. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France's Ironmongers Daily News has reported an amusing Russian parody of the Robert Downey Jr. and Benedict Cumberbatch versions of Sherlock Holmes at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=nlSHiBi\_yZM>, and with English subtitles at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=v10idzSEN4Q>.
314. Michael Kurland's VICTORIAN VILLAINY (Rockville: Wildside Press, 2011) is a collection of reprints of four short stories about Professor Moriarty, and they are written with style, imagination, and humor; $4.19 as a eBook, or $15.99 with Kurland's THE TRIALS OF QUINTILIAN in a trade-paperback reprise of the old Ace Double format (Quintilian was an early crime-solver, in the time of the Emperor Vespasian). Wildside specializes in mystery, fantasy, and adventure, and their web-site's at <www.wildsidebooks.com>. Kurland's own web-site's at <www.michaelkurland.com>; THE INFERNAL DEVICE, his first Moriarty novel, has been dramatized by James Geisel as a one-act play, and had its world premiere this month in South Bend, Ind.

Jul 12 #1:

315. Julian Barnes' ARTHUR & GEORGE (Sep 05 #5) was a novelized joint biography of Arthur Conan Doyle and George Edalji, well written and imaginative, and it was dramatized by David Edgar (Feb 10 #5); Edgar's script (London: Nick Hern Books, 2010; 131 pp., £8.99) offers a welcome opportunity to see how interesting and intelligent a good dramatization can be. The publisher also offers a script for the parody version of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES dramatized by Steven Canny and John Nicholson for Peepolykus (Apr 07 #3); the script (2012; 100 pp., £9.99) is delightful, and offers some pleasant surprises for those who have seen more recent productions of the play. The scripts are available from Nick Hern Books, 14 Larden Road, London W3 7ST, England <www.nickhernbooks.co.uk>.
316. Willis Frick reports happily that he now has a new URL for Sherlocktron, at <www.sherlocktron.com>; this should take care of problems people have been having when their ISPs blocked access to Sherlocktron at his previous host.
317. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Al Dawson's account of research into a Conan Doyle letter (now owned by the Collection) along a trail that involved Oscar Wilde and his wife Constance, Peter Calamai's tribute to Conan Doyle's story "The Three Correspondents", and news from and about the collection; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>. And the Friends will celebrate the centennial of "The Lost World" on Sept. 15, when Roy Pilot will deliver the 2012 Cameron Hollyer Lecture at the Library.
318. Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" will be produced at the Lakewood Playhouse, Sept. 14 through Oct. 14. 5729 Lakewood Towne Center Boulevard, Lakewood, WA 87488 (253-588-0042) <www.lakewoodplayhouse.org>.
319. Laurie R. King's GARMENT OF SHADOWS (New York: Random House, 2012; 264 pp., $26.00) is subtitled "A novel of suspense featuring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes," and it lives up to its billing. The new novel is set immediately after PIRATE KING (Aug 11 #1), and opens with Russell in dire peril in Fez. She (and Holmes) wind up deeply involved in Moroccan colonial politics and tribal warfare, and encounter some old friends from earlier days. The next Mary Russell novel will be set in Japan (before LOCKED ROOMS), and you can read about her research, and other things, in her "Mutterings" blog at <www.laurierking.com>.
320. Fans of Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes may want to attend a "twitter garden party" at the Russell-Holmes cottage on the South Downs on Aug. 19; details at <www.maryrussellholmes.com>, where you will find much more by and about Mary Russell, including a short story and some correspondence.
321. "Sherlock Holmes Through Time and Place" will be the theme of the next conference in Minneapolis, on Aug. 9-11, 2013, sponsored by the Norwegian Explorers, the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, and the University of Minnesota Libraries; if you'd like to be on their mailing list, contact Gary Thaden <norwegianexplorers@gmail.com>.

322. Jul 12 #2: "Campaigning for Statue of Sherlock" was the headline on a story in the Sussex Courier (July 6): Mike Tuffley wants to raise £50,000 for a statue of Sherlock Holmes to be erected in Crowborough; Tuffley believes that the statue will attract visitors from all over the world, and has created the Sherlock Holmes Trust Fund and is asking for donations (which can be made at any branch of Lloyds Bank).
323. Karen Murdock discovered an amusing custom vinyl decal for Macbooks, laptops, car windows, or other flat non-porous surfaces; created by Benjamin Daniels for Perfectly Aligned Decals, it measures 8.0 by 2.2 in. and costs $5.00; two more Sherlockian designs available, and many others for non-Sherlockians <www.tinyurl.com/76odguy>.
324. Andy Griffith died on July 3. He was a musician, a monologist, and then an actor. He starred on Broadway in "No Time for Sergeants" in 1955, and acted in films and on television, starring as Andy Taylor of Mayberry on "The Andy Griffith Show" and as Ben Matlock on "Matlock"; in one episode of the Matlock series he said "I've always felt that the wrong Holmes is taught in law school; it ought to be Sherlock and not Oliver Wendell," and in another episode he delivered a two-minute courtroom summation of the plot of "The Red-Headed League".
325. The parody of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007 will be performed at the American Heartland Theatre, Jan. 11 through Feb. 13; 2450 Grand Boulevard, Kansas City, MO 64108 (816-842-9999) <www.ahtc.com>.
326. Vinnie Brosnan is in search of information on two busts, of Holmes and Watson; they are 4 in. high, marked on the bases as made in London, and numbered. Who was the artist, and when were they sold, and by whom, and at what price? He's at <sherlockinla@cox.net> and would be happy to hear from anyone who can help.
327. Eric Sykes died on July 4. He began his entertainment career writing radio scripts, and went on to act and write on stage, screen, radio, and television, achieving renown both as a comic and character actor. He played Horace Harker in Granada's "The Six Napoleons" (1986).
328. "Solves that violin-case-need mystery that's been confounding you" is the slogan that Elderly Instruments uses for their elegant Baker Street Violin Case, spotted by Peter Ashman <www.elderly.com/accessories/items/221B.htm>.
329. The June issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota offers an appreciative tribute to Fred Levin by Tim Johnson, a "50 Years Ago" look at Elliot Kimball by Julie McKuras, and other news from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter are available from Dick Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455) <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>.

330. Jul 12 #3: Dale Fututani's new THE CURIOUS ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES IN JAPAN (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2011; 228 pp., $12.99) is an interesting collection of stories set in 1892-1893, when Holmes is living in disguise as the guest of a Japanese doctor, and solves a series of mysteries; the stories have fine local flavor, and it's intriguing to see how Holmes reacts to a thoroughly different culture and environment. The author's web-site is at <www.dalefututani.com>.
331. Conan Doyle's 'DANGEROUS WORK': DIARY OF AN ARCTIC ADVENTURE offers a welcome look at some of his earliest writing: the illustrated journal that he kept on the whaler Hope; he celebrated his 21st birthday during the voyage, and the journal is full of detail on what that sort of adventure was like. There's also much humor, directed at himself as well as at others, and the journal is reproduced in facsimile, with a transcript, letters he wrote to his mother during the voyage, and later articles and stories that reflect his experiences on the ship. Edited and annotated by Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower, the 368-page book will be published soon by the British Library (£25.00) and the University of Chicago Press ($35.00), and Randall Stock offers a fine discussion of the book, and the history of the journal (which was preserved in the family papers and is now owned by the British Library) at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/diary-arctic-adventure.htm>.
332. Jon and Dan will discuss and sign the book at the Centuries & Sleuths bookstore in Forest Park, Ill., on Sept. 29, from 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm; 7419 West Madison Street (708-771-7243).

333. Guy Adams had Holmes and Watson involved in the world of the supernatural in SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE BREATH OF GOD (2011), and he has turned to fantasy in SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARMY OF DR. MOREAU (London: Titan Books, 2012; 284 pp., $12.95), with an interesting celebration of both H. G. Wells and Conan Doyle. The author's web-site's at <www.guyadamsauthor.com>, and the publisher's at <www.titanbooks.com>
334. Titan continues to reprint Sax Rohmer's stories about Fu-Manchu (who "makes Professor Moriarty seem an under-achiever," according to Max Collins); THE HAND OF FU-MANCHU (266 pp., $9.95) is the third in the series, setting Sir Dennis Nayland Smith and Dr. Petrie against the Si-Fan.
335. "The movies you want at your local theater" is the motto of Tugg, a company that will help you set up a screening of John Barrymore's "Sherlock Holmes" (1922) and many other (non-Sherlockian) films. There's more information at their web-site <www.tugg.com>.
336. Sorry about that: ARMCHAIR MYSTERIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, the new collection of pastiches by Alan Downing (Jun 12 #4), is available (without charge) via the Internet at <www.sites.google.com/site/armchairmysteries>.
337. Ernest Borgnine died on July 8. He acted on stage and television and then on film, winning an Oscar for his role in "Marty" (1955), and liked to say that "You don't have to be tall, dark, and handsome to be a movie star, but I was the first one to prove it." Alas, there's no photograph known, but he played Watson (with Dennis Allen as Holmes) on television in a skit in the "Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In" series in 1973.

338. Jul 12 #4: Pam Verrey spotted YOUNG MISS HOLMES, CASEBOOK 1-2 (New York: Seven Seas, 2012; 384 pp., $16.99), the English translation of Kaoru Shintani's manga CHRISTIE: HIGH TENSION (2007-2008); Christie is the niece of Sherlock Holmes, and the book offers her versions of some of her uncle's recorded cases. There's a web-site with cover and interior artwork at <www.us.macmillan.com/youngmissholmescasebook12/KaoruShintani>; CASEBOOK 3-4 is due later this year.
339. Plan well ahead: Jeffrey Hatcher's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" will be performed at the Park Square Theater from June 7 through July 14, 2013; 20 West 7th Place, Minneapolis, MN 55102 (651-291-7005) <www.parksquaretheater.org>.
340. Evan Lewis' "Skyler Hobbs and the Rabbit Man" (a comic mystery about a modern would-be Sherlock Holmes) was published in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Feb. 2010), and won the Mystery Writers of America's Robert L. Fish Memorial Award (for best first short story by an American author); his "Skyler Hobbs and the Garden Gnome Bandit" is in the Sept.-Oct. issue of EQMM.
341. Jean M. White died on July 14. She started her career in journalism as a city desk reporter at the Washington Post in 1953, and worked for the paper for almost 30 years as a writer, editor, and reviewer, reporting often on Sherlockian books and on Sherlockians.
342. Total-E-Bound Publishing, obviously aware of the success of 50 SHADE OF GREY, has launched a series of Clandestine Classics, presenting "classics as they have never been seen before," and taking readers "behind the closed bedroom doors of our favorite, most beloved British characters. One of the classics, needless to say, will be A STUDY IN SCARLET, by A. C. Doyle and Sarah Masters, due later this year <www.total-e-bound.com>.
343. Sherlock at the Olympics? Not quite, but almost, if you were watching the BBC on July 27, when they aired a nice 4-minute video about London narrated by Benedict Cumberbatch <www.youtube.com/watch?v=rvK1X\_MdMN0>. Thanks to Debbie Clark for the report.
344. The Conan Doyle material owned by Mary Jakeman, who worked for the family from 1909 to 1932, brought nice prices at Swords on July 10 (Jun 12 #4). The star of the sale was a signed copy of the first American edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, estimated at £400-800, which was sold for £3,900 at the auction.
345. Smithsonian magazine's interesting "Design Decoded" blog had two Sherlockian entries in July, by Jimmy Stamp on "The Mystery of 221B Baker Street" (with splendid photographs of various recreations of the sitting-room), and by Sarah C. Rich on "The Deerstalker: Where Sherlock Holmes' Popular Image Came From" (with many images of items in Glen Miranker's collection); the blog is at <www.blogs.smithsonianmag.com/design/2012/07>.
346. Randall Stock continues to enhance the contents of his excellent "Best of Sherlock" web-site, where he has updated his census of original artwork by Sidney Paget: Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian illustrations, oil paintings, and watercolors <www.bestofsherlock.com/sidney-paget-original-art.htm>.

347. Jul 12 #5: Christopher Boone, the narrator of Mark Haddon's award-winning best-seller THE CURIOUS INCIDENT OF THE DOG IN THE NIGHT-TIME (2003) is an autistic teen-ager who enjoys the Sherlock Holmes stories, and turns detective himself; the National Theatre in London has commissioned a dramatization of the novel, and the production has been recorded and will be broadcast to selected theaters around the world in September. Information on the play, and on dates and venues for the broadcast, can be found at <www.nationaltheatre.org.uk>.
348. Sherlock at the Olympics? Actually, yes. If you count Wenlock, one of the two official mascots; the name honors the town in Shropshire that helped inspire the modern games. There are fiberglass statues of Wenlock in various costumes here and there in London, and Sherlock Wenlock can be found in Regent's Park. No word yet on whether there will be smaller figurines available as Olympic souvenirs.
349. Kelly Blau has reported Sherlockian artwork on the cover of the children's book SECRET AGENT SPLAT!, by Rob Scotton (New York: HarperCollins, 2012; 40 pp., $16.99); it's the latest title in his "Splat the Cat" series.
350. Donald J. Sobol died on July 11. He was a journalist and then an author, best known for his "Encyclopedia Brown" series of mysteries, for which he won a special Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America in 1976; Sobol described Encyclopedia Brown as "America's Sherlock Holmes in sneakers."
351. The Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium at the Newberry Library in Chicago on Sept. 29, starting at 9:00 am, is open to the public with no admission charge, and will feature Jon Lellenberg and Dan Stashower (on "Dangerous Work: Conan Doyle's Diary of Arctic Adventure"), Carter Lupton (on "Literary Icons of 1912: Prof. G. E. Challenger"), and Todd Rosenthal (on "Recreating Sherlock Holmes' Baker Street"). There's more information at <www.newberry.org/09292012-arthur-conan-doyle-sherlock-holmes-symposium>.
352. Simon Ward died on July 20. He began his acting career on stage, and went on to star in films and on television; best known for his role as Winston Churchill in the film "Young Churchill" (1972), he also played Stephen Barrow in an adaptation of "The Leather Funnel" (1973) in a British series of "Great Mysteries" hosted by Orson Welles on ITV.
353. YouTube's PBS Idea Channel has an amusing 6-minute video by Mike Rugnetta at <www.youtube.com/user/pbsideachannel?feature=watch> that offers his answer to the question "How Did Sherlock Holmes Pave the Way for 50 Shades of Grey?"
354. Berkswell Grange, the childhood home of Jeremy Brett, is for sale, offered for £1.68 million; the 17th-century house, a few miles outside of Coventry, has six bedrooms, 15.7 acres of grounds, and a brick in the wall bearing a child's handprint, authenticated by Brett as his own. The estate agent is Knight Frank <www.knightfrank.com/str120124>.
355. Jul 12 #6: Doc Watson died on May 29. Arthel Watson, blind almost from birth, became an outstanding acoustic guitarist, known for his baritone voice and vast repertoire of bluegrass, folk, country, and blues. He once explained that he acquired his nickname during a live radio broadcast in 1941 when the announcer asked for an easy nickname, and someone in the audience shouted "Call him Doc." His album "Elementary Doctor Watson!" was issued by Poppy Records in 1972 and has some fine tracks (but no Sherlockian significance other than the title).

356. The new series "Elementary" (with Jonny Lee Miller and Lucy Liu as Holmes and Watson) debuts on CBS-TV on Sept. 27 at 10:00 pm (on the east coast). And there's now an official web-site at <www.cbs.com/shows/elementary>.
357. My birthday party on the Mall on July Fourth featured the usual spectacular fireworks, although not as spectacular as in San Diego, where a faulty computer fired off twenty minutes of fireworks in twenty seconds; fortunately there were on barges, and no one was hurt. It was also nice to receive a few birthday cards, and an especially nice telegram (delivered, of course, via the postal service, as telegrams are now).

358. Aug 12 #1: The BBC/PBS "A Scandal in Belgravia" has received 13 nominations for primetime Emmy Awards from the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, including outstanding mini-series or movie, lead actor (Benedict Cumberbatch), supporting actor (Martin Freeman), and writing (Steven Moffat); the awards are to be announced on Sept. 23. It's possible that the producers decided to submit "Sherlock" as a mini-series rather than as a drama series to avoid competition with the extremely-popular "Downton Abbey".
359. "Why didn't you tell me about this reading thing? This reading business, Dad, I really recommend it. Maybe you should give it a try." A quote from the younger generation in Australia, in an opinion piece by the Dad in the Sydney Morning Herald, July 28 <www.tinyurl.com/cdtkyas>, written after his son saw the "Sherlock" mini-series and discovered that it was possible to read stories about Sherlock Holmes.
360. There's also a blog by Lynnette Porter <www.tinyurl.com/c8ztnmh> reporting on an Internet survey that generated some interesting numbers from fans of the mini-series: more than 68 percent have read Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes. And more than 70 percent read or write fanfiction, which suggests that at least a few people who prefer fanfiction to the originals, and possibly base their fanfiction on television or films, rather than the printed page.
361. Ely Liebow reported The Brigadier Gerard many years ago (Aug 95 #2); it is a pub in York, named not in honor of the hero of Conan Doyle's stories, but rather for the famous race horse (which was named for Conan Doyle's swashbuckling hero). It's not unique: there's another Brigadier Gerard in Eastleigh in Hampshire, and of course both can be found with a Google search.
362. Martin H. Greenberg died on June 25, 2011. He was the dean of the school of international studies at Florida International University, and the first director of graduate studies at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, and was a well-known editor in the fields of mystery, horror, and science fiction, winning an Ellery Queen Award from the Mystery Writers of America in 1995. Anthologies he helped edit included SHERLOCK HOLMES THROUGH TIME AND SPACE (1986), THE NEW ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1987), SHERLOCK HOLMES IN ORBIT (1995), HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS (1996), MORE HOLMES FOR THE HOLIDAYS (1999), MURDER IN BAKER STREET (2001), MURDER, MY DEAR WATSON (2002), GHOSTS IN BAKER STREET (2004), and SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA (2009).
363. The Wildclaw Theatre Company will present (one performance only) a dramatization of Neil Gaiman's pastiche "A Study in Emerald" during its "Masque of the Red Death Gala Benefit" at the Strawdog Theatre on Sept. 15. The theater's at 3829 North Broadway, Chicago, IL 60613 <www.wildclawtheatre.com>.
364. THE LOST CASEBOOKS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Donald Thomas (New York: Pegasus Books, 2012; 873 pp., $35.00), is a one-volume reprint of his earlier THE SECRET CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1997), SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE VOICE FROM THE CRYPT (2002), and THE EXECUTION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2008); he is one of the better authors of pastiches, and this collection offers 18 of his stories, some based on true crimes and others new inventions.

365. Aug 12 #2: Those who have access to the Internet likely have seen images inspired by the "Believe in Sherlock" movement launched after the finale of the BBC's second "Sherlock" mini-series (Feb 12 #1); the person who launched the movement was Mika Hallor, and you can read more about her at <www.tinyurl.com/cqnbwfg> and in an article in the summer issue of The Baker Street Journal by three members of the Baker Street Babes (Taylor Blumenberg, Jenn Eaker, and Amy Thomas), along with an imaginative report (by Leslie S. Klinger) on his discovery of a press account of the memorial service for Sherlock Holmes in 1891.
366. The BSJ appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $38.50 (to the U.S.) or $49.00 (elsewhere); checks can be sent to the BSJ (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077), and credit-card payments are welcome from foreign subscribers. You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSJ, and information on the BSJ's other publications and activities.
367. Great Britain has honored the 200th anniversary of the birth of Charles Dickens by issuing a set of attractive stamps that show some of his characters, drawn by Joseph Clayton Clarke. One of the stamps shows Mr. Pickwick, who is mentioned in the Canon: "There was something of Mr. Pickwick's benevolence in his appearance, marred only by the insincerity of the fixed smile and by the hard glitter of those restless and penetrating eyes." That's from Watson description of the worst man in London (Charles Augustus Milverton).
368. Bob Katz has noted an interesting "Literary Detectives Deathmatch" at the Huffington Post (Nov. 29, 2011) <www.tinyurl.com/coytdp9>. The challenge was posed by books editor Andrew Losowsky, and the responses are all his, including the imaginative finale between Miss Marple and Sherlock Holmes. You can click through the brackets to follow the battle.
369. NBC Today ran a four-minute segment titled "It's Elementary: On the Trail of Sherlock Holmes" from London on Aug. 2, with Keith Miller interviewing Roger Johnson and two of the Baker Street Babes (Kristina Manente and Katherine Ryan); you may still be able to see it at <www.tinyurl.com/cwnt98w>.
370. The Epilogues of Sherlock Holmes and the Turf Builders of Baker Street have organized another "no frills" version of The Silver Blaze on Oct. 6 at Monmouth Park in Long Branch, N.J. The organizers promise free handicapping, along with a warning: caveat bettor. Additional information is available from Peter McIntyre (732-765-1240) <psipete@optonline.net> and Kate Karlson <kkarlson@stny.rr.com>.
371. The Ironmongers Daily News (published almost daily by the Société Sherlock Holmes de France) reports a Spanish film "Holmes y Watson: Madrid Days" due for release by Atla Films on Sept. 7, with Gary Piquer as Holmes and José Luis Garci as Watson (in pursuit of Jack the Ripper). There's a two-minute trailer at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=U95o3Ee4Kno>. The film's listed at the Internet Movie Data Base and Wikipedia as "Holmes: Madrid suite 1890".

372. Aug 12 #3: "Join Sherlock Holmes at the Edgar Allan Poe Mystery Writers of America Awards Dinner" is the title of the 56-page dinner program published for the dinner on Apr. 26, and the contents include tributes by Dana Stabenow, Peter Abrahams, Donna Andrews, Jan Burke, Kristine Kathryn Rusch, Carole Nelson Douglas, Lyndsay Faye, Steve Hockensmith, Leslie S. Klinger, Laurie R. King, Toni L. P. Keiner, David Wright, Barbara Peters, SJ Rozan, and David Wright. The bad news is that it appears that the only way to acquire a copy is to beg, borrow, or steal one from a member of the MWA.

373. Smithsonian magazine's interesting "Design Decoded" blog (Jul 12 #4) continued its Sherlockian entries with Jimmy Stamp's "Sherlock Holmes and the Tools of Detection" and "A Modern Sherlock Holmes and the Technology of Detection" and Sarah C. Rich's "The Architecture of Memory"; you can find the entire series at <www.blogs.smithsonianmag.com/design/2012/08>.
374. Maria Konnikova, who is working on a Ph.D. in psychology at Columbia University, has written Sherlockian essays for the Scientific American blog (Sep 11 #6) and elsewhere, and you can read them all (and other non-Sherlockian pieces) at her interesting web-site <www.mariakonnikova.com>.
375. Philip José Farmer's imaginative science fiction included the world of the Wold Newton Family, which included Sherlock Holmes, Tarzan, and many other fictional characters, and THE OTHER LOG OF PHILEAS FOGG (1973) demonstrated just how complicated the affairs of the Family could be; dedicated to H. W. Starr, it included a reprint of Starr's article "A Submersible Subterfuge, or Proof Impositive" (first published by The Sons of the Copper Beeches). The book has been reissued (London: Titan Books, 2012; 306 pp., $9.95) with a helpful afterword and chronology by Win Scott Eckert, and the new edition is also dedicated to the members of The Hansoms of John Clayton of Peoria (where Farmer lived for many years). Titan plans to publish more titles in the Wold Newton series, and their web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
376. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club", previously scheduled at the Round House Theatre in Bethesda, Md., May 29-June 23, 2013, has been cancelled; the theater's new artistic director decided that Gina Gionfriddo's comedy "Becky Shaw" was more to his taste.
377. Carole Nelson Douglas (author of the Irene Adler series) will be inducted into the Texas Literary Hall of Fame on Oct. 19. Founded by the Friends of the Fort Worth Library in 2004, the Hall of Fame "honors authors whose body of work enhances Texas' literary heritage, is original and first published in this country, and has already been recognized for its literary significance."
378. Edinburgh's was recognized as the first "world city of literature" (Aug 04 #5) by UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization), and there are others now, including Iowa City, whose City of Literature web-site at <www.cityofliteratureusa.org/node/1> displays city resident Al Dawson's article in the latest issue of The Magic Door (Jul 12 #1). Iowa City also claims Nicholas Meyer, who graduated from the University of Iowa's Department of Theatre Arts and went on to write THE SEVENPERCENT SOLUTION and other pastiches.

379. Aug 12 #4: Darlene Cypser's THE CONSULTING DETECTIVE TRILOGY: PART I: UNIVERSITY (Morrison: Foolscape & Quill, 2012; 323 pp., $14.99) is a sequel to her THE CRACK IN THE LENS (Mar 11 #6); Holmes is now at university (Cambridge) and beginning the studies that led him to his career as a detective, and "The Gloria Scott" is only one of the mysteries he solves. Again, there's nice local flavor, interesting psychology, and good writing. Two more volumes are to come, covering the years until Holmes meets Watson.
380. ANOMALOUS, by Samuel Williams, Jr. (London: MX Publishing, 2012; 220 pp., £9.99), is a pastiche by a black author who involves Holmes and Watson with Steve Dixie and Lucy Hebron, and with Jack Johnson, Big Jim Colosimo, Johnny Torrio, Frankie Yale, Al Capone, in Chicago and in London.
381. William Windom died on Aug. 16. He had a long career as a character actor in films and on television, including playing Dr. Seth Hazlitt in more than episodes of the series "Murder, She Wrote". He also was Watson in a California Artists Radio Theatre production in the 1990s of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" with David Warner as Holmes and Samantha Eggars as Alice Faulkner.
382. The CART broadcast of "Sherlock Holmes" is available on CD ($20.00) and as an MP3 download ($10.00) at their web-site <www.cartradio.com>, along with their broadcast of Conan Doyle's "Selecting a Ghost" ($15.00/$7.50) (Jul 05 #1).
383. More Olympics: "26 Miles" is a new radio play written by Anthony Sergeant for the Wireless Theatre Company <www.wirelesstheatrecompany.co.uk>; it's fact and then fantasy about the Marathon in 1908, and Conan Doyle is mentioned twice. You can listen or download (there's no charge) at their website, where you'll also find their amusing "Sherlock Holmes Strikes Back!" (Sep 11 #3).
385. "There were one hundred and forty-three diamonds of the first water," Jonathan Small explained (in "The Sign of the Four"), "including one which has been called, I believe, 'the Great Mogul.'" The Great Mogul also was the title of any of the Muslim emperors of India from 1526 to 1857, during what is called the Mughal Empire. "Mughal India: Art, Culture, and Empire" will be on display at the British Library from Nov. 9 through Apr. 2. There's an illustrated announcement at <www.bl.uk/whatson/exhibitions>, and if you would like to see some of the Mughal treasures in the British Museum, there is an interesting web-site at <www.mughalindia.co.uk>.
386. Mary Loving has noted an announcement in the Marshfield News Herald (Aug. 13) that the University of Wisconsin/Marshfield/Wood County will present a "Sherlock Holmes learning cluster" in the fall semester, with three interconnected courses, a lecture series open to the general public, and a film series, plus a community read of "The Hound of the Baskervilles". There's more information at <www.tinyurl.com/96asmq4>.
387. Aug 12 #5: Robert E. Robinson ("The Hansom Cab") died on Aug. 11. He was an organic chemist and co-founder and president of Lindau Chemicals, and enthusiastic about classical music, opera, and Sherlock Holmes; he was program chairman for The Hansom Wheels of Columbia and wrote and he produced many plays for the society. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1986.
388. The A. D. Players plan to produce Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" at the Grace Theatre, Sept. 5-Oct. 7. 2710 West Alabama Street, Houston, TX 77098) (713-526-2721) <www.adplayers.org>.
389. If you have enjoyed seeing jellyfish in aquariums and think you'd like to have some of your own, they're available from Jellyfish Art, with tanks and food; they're not inexpensive, and the varieties offered do not include the lion's mane, but the company's web-site is at <www.jellyfishart.com>.
390. The Pittsburgh Irish & Classical Theatre will present Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" at the Charity Randall Theatre on Dec. 4-21, 2013. 4301 Forbes Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15260 (412-561-6000) <www.picttheatre.org>.
391. Michael Hecht will appear in "What I Learned from Sherlock Holmes" at the Stoughton Opera House on Oct 3. 381 East Main Street, Stoughton, WI 53589 (608-877-4400) <www.tinyurl.com/4bhbo8y>; according to the publicity, "Local visual and literary artist Michael Hecht explores the times and artistic influences that gave birth to the great detective," and Hecht's personal view is expressed through the writings of Poe, Darwin, Wilde, and great events including Krakatoa to the Oxford dictionary; visual pieces and music will also be utilized to tell this story." Thanks to Tom Drucker for spotting this unusual event, which is open to the public, with a free-will donation requested.
392. "Sherlock Holmes--A Study in Fear" is a new play, written by John Goodrum (based on "The Final Problem"), with Nicholas Briggs starring as Sherlock Holmes, to be performed on tour in Britain by the Rumpus Theatre Company from Sept. 11 to Oct. 27 <www.rumpustheatrecompany.co.uk/future.htm>.
393. More Sherlock Holmes at the Olympics: Kelly Blau noted a report in the N.Y. Times (Aug. 7) that the Kazakhstan women's synchronized swimming team (Anna Kulkina and Aigerem Zhexembinova) performed to music from "Sherlock Holmes" (the Robert Downey Jr. film); Zhexembinova explained that "we pretended to make pistols with our hands." Alas, they didn't qualify for the finals.

394. Finally, I've not heard from anyone who observed a Sherlockian quote amid all the newsprint that was used in the set designs during the closing ceremonies; of course we couldn't see it all watching NBC-TV, and what we did see wasn't all that legible.
395. Grubwithus (a social-networking web-site) will host Sherlock-themed dinners tied to the upcoming CBS-TV series "Elementary" on Sept. 13 in ten cities (New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston, Seattle, Dallas, and Atlanta) <www.tinyurl.com/8wvhw2f>; the meal (with an appropriate menu) costs $25.00 and includes a "free DVD screener" of the show.
396. Aug 12 #6: The Exhibits Development Group has announced additional venues for "Sherlock Holmes: The Science of Deduction", an interactive exhibition that will tour science museums starting in 2013 (Apr 12 #1); the tour begins at the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland, Oct. 10, 2013-Jan. 5, 2014, continuing at the Center for Science & Industry in Columbus, Feb. 6-Sept. 8, 2014, and then at the Dallas Museum of Nature and Science, Oct. 9, 2014, to Jan. 4, 2015, with an additional stop at the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., June 11-Sept. 6, 2015. Visit <www.exhibitsdevelopment.com/SherlockHolmes.html> for additional information about the exhibition.
397. Colin Mochrie, who appeared in the improv show "Whose Line Is It Anyway?" and is now on "Trust Us with Your Life" on ABC-TV, has written a book "Not Quite the Classics" due this fall from Penguin. "I take the first and last line of 12 famous novels and make up a different middle," he told USA Weekend (Aug. 3-5). "One is based on 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'; my story is how Sherlock Holmes decided he wants to be a stand-up comedian."
398. Darlene Cypser has reported the web-site goodreads, where there is a page <www.tinyurl.com/9yndugd> allowing people to rank their favorite Sherlockian pastiches. Not many people seem to be voting, although of course that may change as more Sherlockians start visiting the web-site; at the moment the winner (with 21 votes) is Luke Benjamin Kuhns' THE UNTOLD ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with Nicholas Meyer's THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION second (with 19 votes). Another list (Beyond Conan Doyle--Best of the Continuing Cases of Sherlock Holmes) <www.tinyurl.com/9m8pvse> has different results.
399. He's back! The statue of Sherlock Holmes is once again on view in Picardy Place in Edinburgh. Removed in 2009 because it blocked construction of a new tram line (Jul 09 #4), the bronze statue was commissioned by the Federation of Master Builders to mark its 50th anniversary in 1991, and has been reinstalled near the site of the house where Conan Doyle was born.
400. An intriguing item is coming up for auction at the Rock Island Auction Company on Sept. 9: the Waterloo Bravery Medal Awarded to Corporal Brewster, estimated at $3,500-6,500. It's a silver medal presented to Corporal Brewster from the officers of the Coldstream Guards, in fine condition, and the author of the catalog description was not able to confirm the link between the medal and Conan Doyle's character in "A Straggler of '15" (further research, the catalog notes, "could provide some interesting results"); there is more information at <www.rockisland.com/viewitem/aid/56/lid/3432>.
401. The web-site Badass Digest has reported (Aug. 14) that Paramount has asked Chris Columbus to "steer" a remake of their "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985); the original film, directed by Columbus, starred Nicholas Rowe and Alan Cox and had a total domestic gross of $19.7 million. "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" had a domestic gross of $39.6 million its first weekend. Paramount's plans likely fall into the "wouldn't it be a good idea" category of copycat films such as Columbia Pictures' announcement (Jul 08 #3) of a film starring Sacha Baron Cohen as Holmes and Will Ferrell as Watson.
402. Sep 12 #1: The London Organizing Committee of the Olympic Games is now auctioning memorabilia in hopes of recovering some of the £9.3 billion cost of the Games; the imaginatively decorated statue of Sherlock Wenlock (Jul 12 #5) has already been sold, for £6,520. The folks at Sherlockology have kindly posted photographs and an explanation of the 13 references to the Canon displayed on the statue <www.tinyurl.com/8m7c9kr>.
403. And there is one last note on the Olympics: viewers of the closing ceremonies will recall seeing sheets newsprint with quotations from the works of literary and cultural figures. One of them was Conan Doyle (represented by a quote from "The Hound of the Baskervilles"); this was not visible during the broadcast on NBC-TV in the U.S., and no one has reported seeing it in the U.K., and (alas) there seems to be no archive of official photographs of the more than 100 quotations.
404. Stuart M. Kaminsky's play "The Final Toast" (2008) will be performed by the St. Jude's Players Nov. 14-24. St. Jude's Hall (444 Brighton Road, Brighton, SA 5048, Australia (08-8296-2628) <www.stjudesplayers.asn.au>.
405. The official launch party for Laurie R. King's GARMENT OF SHADOWS (Jul 12 #1) was held this month at the Poisoned Pen Bookstore in Phoenix, and there is a 90-minute video at <www.livestream.com/poisonedpen/LRK> of Laurie interviewed by Poisoned Pen proprietor Barbara Peters.
406. The Hedgerow Theatre will present Paul Giovanni's "The Crucifer of Blood" (1978) from Oct. 4 to Nov. 5. 64 Rose Valley Road, Rose Valley, PA 19063 (610-565-4211) <www.hedgerowtheatre.org>.
407. "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" (the conference presented by the UCLA School of Television, Film & Theater and The Baker Street Irregulars over the Labor Day weekend) was thoroughly delightful. The speakers included John Landis and director-screenwriter Nicholas Meyer ("From Paper to Celluloid: Adapting Holmes for the Screen"), directors John Musker and Ron Clements ("The Great Mouse Detective"), author Lyndsay Faye ("The Women: Sex and Success in the Canon, the BBC, and Warner Brothers"), film historian Russell Merritt ("How Holmes Crashed the Silents Without His Boswell and Fell to Moriarty"), lawyers Betsy Rosenblatt and Jonathan Kirsch ("Intellectual Property and Copyright"), and many others, and had a chance to see a true film rarity (Eille Norwood's "The Sign of Four" accompanied by expert Philip Carli on piano) and the pilot episode of "Elementary" (with producer Rob Doherty on hand to tell stories and answer questions).
408. Those who want to know more about the conference can read tweets by Lyndsay Faye and others; just go to <www.twitter.com> and search for #UCLASherlock or @lyndsayfaye.
409. Mary Burke reports that Condé Nast Traveler offers a "Literary World Tour" of "7 Famous Authors' Homes You Can Visit" <www.tinyurl.com/9pb6jjd>. The list includes The Sherlock Holmes Museum ("Okay, so Sherlock Holmes is neither a writer nor a real person. But the character, created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, remains one of the literary world's most famous").

410. Sep 12 #2: The animated movie "Gnomeo & Juliet: Sherlock Gnomes" (Mar 12 #6) now has a director: John Stevenson, who directed "Kung Fu Panda". Elton John's Rocket Pictures is producing the film, and there are reports the production will start early next year, for a release in 2014. Gnomeo and Juliet enlist the help of Sherlock Gnomes, the world's greatest ornamental detective, to investigate why gnomes are disappearing from England's suburban gardens.
411. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" can be seen at the Nashville Children's Theatre through Oct. 7 (25 Middleton Street, Nashville, TN 37210) (615-252-4675) <www.nashvillechildrenstheatre.org>; and at the Repertory East Playhouse through Oct. 20 (24266 Main Street, Newhall, CA 91321) (611-288-0000) <www.repeastplayhouse.org>.

412. "The Virgin and the Book Dealer" is the theme for this year's NYC Vintage Paperback & Pulp Fiction Expo at the Holiday Inn (440 West 57th Street in New York) on Oct. 14; it's organized by Gary Lovisi (Sherlockian author and editor), and the guest authors will include Sherlockian pastichists Carolyn Bugge and Marvin Kaye <www.gryphonbooks.com>.
413. Jerry Nelson died on Aug. 23. He worked as a puppeteer with Bil Baird and then went to work for Jim Henson, creating Sherlock Hemlock and many other memorable muppet characters on "Sesame Street" and "The Muppet Show".
414. Betty G. Birney's MYSTERIES ACCORDING TO HUMPHREY (New York: G. P. Putnam's Son, 2012; 146 pp., $14.99) is a pleasant book for young readers; Humphrey is a hamster (in deerstalker on the dust jacket) who resides in room 26 of Longfellow School, and listens as the class learns about "an unsqueakably smart detective named Sherlock Holmes" and does some detecting on his own.
415. "The Murder of the World's Most Famous Detective" was an interesting pastiche published in 1908 (as "L'Assassinat de plus Célèbre Détective"), the first in a series of "fascicules" written by Antonin Reschal about the exploits of "Miss Boston: La seule détective-femme du monde entier"; the most famous detective was indeed Sherlock Holmes, and Miss Boston, with the help of Dr. Watson, captures the murderer. THE ADVENTURES OF MISS BOSTON: THE FIRST FEMALE DETECTIVE (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2012; 306 pp., $22.95) is a collection of eleven stories, translated by Nina Cooper, who also wrote an informative introduction. Miss Boston was of course not the only female detective in the entire world at the time, and Reschal knew (or cared) very little about American geography; Miss Boston's adventures take place in a New York that few of his readers had ever visited.
416. The publisher <www.blackcoatpress.com> also offers a nice list of books by Maurice Leblanc (and pastiches by others) about Arsène Lupin, including reprints of Sherlockian stories in Leblanc's THE PHANTOM BLONDE and THE HOLLOW NEEDLE in a new collection THE MANY FACES OF ARSENE LUPIN.
417. The Los Angeles Times web-site has an interesting set of photographs titled "Sherlock Holmes: Revealing the Detective's Place in Pop Culture", and it's well worth taking a look <www.tinyurl.com/coorjbr4>, because they have come up with some unusual items, including a reference to the Canon in the lyrics of the song "Waiting for Sex" by the English synth-pop duo Erasure.
418. Sep 12 #3: "The Art of Jonathan Barry" was exhibited this month at the No Grants Gallery in Dublin; Barry specializes in painting scenes from literary classics and has just turned his attention to the Canon. You can see his portrait of Sherlock Holmes (in full color) in an article noted by Karen Murdock in the Irish Times (Sept. 1) <www.tinyurl.com/9o5bn6b>.
419. Karen Murdock spotted a report that Benedict Cumberbatch will make a guest appearance on the next season of "The Simpsons" in an episode titled "Love Is a Many-Splintered Thing", playing both the British Prime Minister and a snake-like character; he was in Los Angeles for four months shooting "Star Trek 2" and asked the series producers if he could have a cameo role. And there was a report in the Daily Express (Sept. 8) that the next season of "Sherlock" will be the last, because Cumberbatch and Freeman are enjoying flourishing film careers. "It's a question of schedules," an unidentified source told the paper, "they will no doubt be signing off in style."
420. "Sherlock Holmes and a Most Irregular Tea Party" is an "interactive drama" being presented by the Milwaukee Entertainment Group at the Brumder Mansion through Oct. 14; 3046 West Wisconsin Avenue, Milwaukee, WI 53208 (414-388-9104) <www.milwaukeeentertainmentgroup.com>.
421. Stephanie Watson's ROBERT DOWNEY JR.: BLOCKBUSTER MOVIE STAR (Minneapolis: ABDO, 2012; 112 pp., $23.95) is part of ABDO's "Contemporary Lives" series (which also includes Justin Bieber, Eminem, Lady Gaga, Jay-Z, Kim Kardashian, Taylor Swift, and Justin Timberlake); it's written for younger read-, with many illustrations, and with two pages on Downey's "Sherlock Holmes". The publisher's web-site's at <www.abdopublishing.com>.
422. Lloyd Rose spotted an amusing Sherlockian birthday cake, which you can see in full color at "Police Boxes and Death Frisbies...and Aeroplanes Too" on Tumblr <www.tinyurl.com/8z3e284>.
423. Irene's Cabinet is the annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (62 pp.) celebrates the founding of the society with a series of reminiscences about the early days, and about founders that included Steve Clarkson and Paul Churchill (the third founder, Rod McCaslin has contributed his own essay), and Matt Rutkowski's winning essay for this year's Clarkson Prize, named in honor of the late Steve Clarkson and sponsored by the society for seventh-graders in Howard County, Md. The cost is $15.00 postpaid, from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).
424. Sorry about that: if you are planning to see Jeffrey Hatcher's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" at the Park Square Theater next year (Jul 12 #4), the theater is in St. Paul, not Minneapolis.
425. The panels have been announced for Bouchercon in Cleveland on Oct. 4-7, and one of them is "Elementary My Dear Cleveland" (How Sherlock Holmes Is Still Influencing Fiction Today) with Les Klinger, Michael Robinson, Dan Andriacco, Laurie King, Sara Paretsky, and Dan Stashower). Laurie will also be on a panel on "Our Inspirations" (What Books/Plays/ Films/TV Shows/Music Made Us the Writers We Are Today?). Go to <www.bouchercon2012.com> for the complete schedule.
426. Sep 12 #4: The delightful parody "The Hound of the Baskervilles" written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson in 2007 is being performed by the Virginia Repertory Theatre at the Hanover Tavern until Nov. 4. The tavern is at 13181 Hanover Court Courthouse Road, Hanover, VA 23069 (804-282-2620), and the company's web-site is at <www.va-rep.org>.
427. Karen Murdock noted a report that the Royal Western India Turf Club's "Live Legend Plate" was run at Pune on Sept. 9. Snow Mountain won the race, with Persian finishing second and Theology third, with Sherlock Holmes fourth. Sherlock Holmes is a three-year-old gelding, and you can see the race results at <www.racingpulse.in/Code/rupdate.aspx?pgId=34670>; there also is video at <www.indiarace.com/fullvedio.aspx?venue=Pune&date=09/12/2012>.
428. The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; the fall issue offers Bill Vande Water's report on his discovery of the ASH Constitution and Buy-Laws (now published some years after his report at one of their dinners), and Judith Freeman's refutation of the spurious document, accompanied by a reprinting (for the first time since 1975) of the actual ASH Bylaws (there seems never to have been an ASH Constitution). The Muse is published quarterly; $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
429. "Sherlock Holmes in Brentwood" is a new play-reading series scheduled next year; it's a Sunday-afternoon series of readings by professional actors in a concert-hall venue in Brentwood, Calif., curated by Les Klinger. Plays read in the first season will include Jeremy Paul's "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's dramatization of "The Speckled Band". The web-site's at <www.sherlockholmesinbrentwood.com>.
430. The Postal Service has celebrated the 150th anniversary of the birth of William S. Porter, who adopted the pseudonym "O. Henry" while an inmate at the Ohio State Penitentiary and went on to become a successful author. His Sherlockian parodies include "The Adventures of Shamrock Jolnes" (1911) and "The Detective Detector" (1917). And if you've ever wondered what that initial abbreviated, there's an answer, from O. Henry himself, in the N.Y. Times (Apr. 4, 1909): A newspaper once wrote and asked what the O stands for, and he replied, 'O stands for Olivier, the French for Oliver.'

431. "Cosplay" is an aspect of modern culture that has its own entry at Wikipedia; it's a shortening of "costume play" and is described as a type of performance art in which participants don costumes and accessories to represent a specific character or idea. Cosplayers often interact to create a subculture centered on role play. A broader use of the term applies to any costumed role play in venues apart from the stage, regardless of the cultural content.
432. If that sounds familiar, it certainly should: Sherlockians have been doing that for decades, especially The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, which has just returned from its latest pilgrimage to Switzerland. There was a report at the N.Y. Times on Sept. 17 <www.tinyurl.com/9c4bfwz>, and there is video from the BBC at <www.bbc.co.uk/news/magazine-19598997>.
433. Sep 12 #5: Don Libey's THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (San Francisco: Campbell & Lewis, 2012; 132 pp., $15.00) is an interesting approach to the Canon: the book was written by Holmes in 1929, after Watson's death, and it turns out that there were many things that Watson invented, including their address in London and the name of their landlady; the voice of Holmes is authentic, and his account of his life and career is intriguing.
434. Watson's Tin Box will host the sixth "Scintillation of Scions" at the Hilton Garden Inn in Hanover, Md., June 7-9, 2013; it's an entertaining gathering, and details are available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724) <www.scintillation.org>. They have moved to a new venue because they outgrew the old one, and registration is limited to 100.
435. John Addy's SHERLOCKIAN PICTURE PUZZLES: A MONOGRAPH ON ELIOT KEEN'S 1905 ILLUSTRATIONS (2012; 28 pp.) offers a fascinating look at puzzles published in the N.Y. Herald and other American newspapers; they're a type of rebus picture puzzle, and they appeared at a time when puzzles were quite different than they are today (the first "word-cross" puzzle appeared in the N.Y. World in 1913). Created for children, they will challenge today's adults. The book is available from The Musgraves (Anne Jordan, Hallas Lodge, Greenside Lane, Cullingworth, Bradford BD13 5AP, England) and costs £7.50 (UK)/£10.00 (Europe)/$25.00 (US+Canada)/$30.00 (rest of world), all postpaid.
436. "The Life and Times of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Creator (Literary Agent) of Mr. Sherlock Holmes" will be the theme for the next "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore from 10:00 to 1:00 on Nov. 3; the event is sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies, the library is at 400 Cathedral Street, and there is no charge to attend.
437. The Postal Service has honored Edgar Rice Burroughs and Tarzan; "Tarzan of the Apes" was first published in 1912. Philip José Farmer explained in TARZAN ALIVE (1972) that Tarzan was related to Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes, as well as many other members of the Wold Newton family, which originated when a radioactive meteor landed in Wold Newton, England, in the year 1795. The family's web-site <www.pjfarmer.com/woldnewton/Pulp.htm> has a fine introduction by Win Scott Eckert, and an image of Farmer's amusing calling card.
438. "It is said that one measure of the popularity of a public personality is the number of rumours and urban legends that have grown up around him" is how Cliff Goldfarb begins his article on "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Dorando Affair" in the 2012 issue of the Journal of Olympic History. He offers a definitive history (and refutation) of the oft-repeated story that Conan Doyle assisted Dorando across the marathon finish line at the Olympics in London in 1908, tracking the story back to 1948. Copies of the journal are available from Anthony Bijkerk <tony.bijkerk@planet.nl>.
439. Cliff also has an interesting article on "Winston Churchill and Arthur Conan Doyle" in Finest Hour: The Journal of Winston Churchill (summer 2012), explaining the relationship between the two "Great Britons". The magazine costs $5.95; Box 740, Moultonborough, NH 03254 <www.winstonchurchill.org>.
440. Sep 12 #6: The three-page manuscript of Conan Doyle's "Mr. Sherlock Holmes to his Friends" went to auction at Freeman's in Philadelphia on Sept. 20, estimated at $5,000-8,000. The essay was published in The Strand Magazine (Mar. 27) as "Mr. Sherlock Holmes to His Readers" and revised and reprinted as the preface to THE CASE BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES; Randall Stock has provided details on the manuscript, and on other items in the auction, at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/sherlock-friends-ms-freemans.htm>. The manuscript sold for $65,000 (plus buyer's premium, for a total of $80,500).
441. "Sherlock" co-creator Steven Moffat offered a hint about the second season of the series: "The critical words, I'd say, would be--Adler, Hound, Reichenbach." (Oct 10 #7). The teaser words for the third season are Rat, Wedding, and Bow (reported by the Guardian from the Sherlock Holmes Masterclass in Edinburgh on Aug. 24). Shooting for the new season is expected to begin in January, for broadcast in August (producer Sue Vertue is "determined" to close the gap between broadcast dates in Britain and the U.S.). Speculation on the teaser words is rife, of course; Benedict Cumberbatch marrying Lara Pulver is low on the list of explanations for Wedding.
442. And Pulver, who was seen (to put it mildly) as Irene Adler in "A Scandal in Belgravia" but wasn't at the Masterclass, has denied rumors on the blogosphere that she will be the first woman to play Doctor Who.
443. Don Hobbs, always in pursuit of new Sherlockian translations, has found a quote in Gallifreyan. The quote is "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth," and you can see the translation at <www.tinyurl.com/9v499hm>. Old High Gallifreyan was the language of the Time Lords; by the time of the Doctor, it had evolved into Modern Gallifreyan and Circular Gallifreyan. The Doctor, of course, is Doctor Who. And the artist is Vyctoria Hart (aka Phantoms Siren); you can see more of her work (and let her know if you would like to commission a different quote) at <www.tinyurl.com/8jav4ja>. And you can wear her artwork as a tattoo <www.tinyurl.com/0bub5nc>.
444. Peggy Perdue has reported that the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library now owns the autograph book in which Conan Doyle first saw the stick-figure alphabet that inspired the dancing men cipher (Jul 06 #4); the autograph book was discovered at an antiques fair in Norwich (Nov 08 #8) and was recently purchase by the Collection. There's an interesting and well-illustrated blog about the book at <www.tinyurl.com/9ely93c>.
445. Just in time for Halloween: Steve Rothman notes "The Valley of Fear" (which is billed as "America's Most Horrifying Woods") also offers the "Original Haunted Hayride" through Nov. 3 at the Phoenix Sport Club (301 West Bristol Road, Feasterville, PA 19053 (216-942-9787) <www.valleyoffear.com>; apparently not Sherlockian except for the name. And there are Sherlockian costumes at available at <www.partycity.com>, including an quite adult detective costume for women that costs more and covers less than their Sherlock Holmes costume for men. Finally, Jennie Paton spotted a "Sherlock Holmes Halloween Pumpkin Carving Stencil" at <www.tinyurl.com/9mqckby>.
446. Oct 12 #1: Carol McCleary's THE FORMULA FOR MURDER (New York: Forge/Tom Doherty, 2012; 336 pp., $24.99) is the third in her series of mysteries featuring Nellie Bly, the adventurous American journalist; investigating the apparent suicide of a friend, Nellie travels to London, and Bath and Dartmoor, in 1890, and becomes involved with H. G. Wells, Oscar Wilde, and Arthur Conan Doyle (who is conducting research on the legends of ghostly hounds). The author has a web-site at <www.carolmcclary.com>.
447. John Linsenmeyer noted a report in the N.Y. Times (Sept. 17) that the Regency Hotel will close on Jan. 1 for a wholesale renovation that could last an entire year. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinner was held at the Regency from 1972 through 1986.

448. "Sherlock Holmes Baffled" (1900) is credited as the first Sherlockian film (although it was made for a Mutoscope rather than a projector); how old is the first film known to have been shot in color?
449. It isn't new, but rather newly reported: there is an on-line "Great Mouse Detective" fan club at <www.fanpop.com/spots/the-great-mouse-detective>; it is an active web-site with 141 fans (at the moment) of the movie starring Basil of Baker Street.
450. Electronic cigarettes are a modern invention that give users a nicotine hit but are unaffected by bans on smoking, and Liberro (a British company) also offers electronic pipes; both can use the Holmes blend e-liquid, which has a "robust woody tobacco flavor" and is named in honor of Sherlock Holmes. Details at <www.liberro.co.uk>. Credit eagle-eyed John Baesch for spotting a mention of the blend in an advertising supplement in The Times (June 14).
451. Patricia Guy, author of BACCHUS AT BAKER STREET: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND VICTORIAN DRINKING LORE (Jan 08 #8), has an article on "Sherlock Holmes and Alcohol: Partners in Solving Crime" on-line at Wine-Searcher Magazine; go to <www.tinyurl.com/9tbgaqw>.
452. Robin Rigby reports that there will be a memorial service in London on Nov. 2 for Michael Procter, who died earlier this year (May 12 #1); details at his web-site at <www.michael-procter.com>.
453. Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BAKER STREET IRREGULARS series for readers ages 9-12, ended in 2010 with the fourth book THE FINAL MEETING (Orchard Books/Scholastic Press, 248 pp., $7.99); the series is interesting, with the Irregulars receiving as much attention as Holmes and Watson.
454. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France has reported on Chris Schweitzer, an imaginative artist who has created a spectacular set of Sherlock Holmes paper figures based on the BBC's "Sherlock" series available on five pages in full color at <www.employeepages.scad.edu/~cshweitz/BBC-SHERLOCK-7380.pdf>. And for those who are not dedicated fans of "Sherlock" there's a more traditional but nevertheless just as artistic set of eight figures for $10.00 postpaid <www.croganadventuresstore.blogspot.com/p/merchandise.html>.
455. Oct 12 #2: "The Real Sherlock Holmes" is a one-hour documentary that was broadcast by the History Channel in Canada on Sept. 28, but it did not air in the U.S., because the History Channel hasn't purchased the program. The program is aimed at a general audience and has commentary by Steve Doyle, Nick Utechin, E.J. Wagner, Mark Gatiss, and others. The production company is Storyline Entertainment, which will be happy to sell the documentary to a U.S. television channel. In the meantime, their web-site <www.realsherlock.com> offers a look what viewers outside Canada missed.
456. The first film shot in color was made in London in 1901 or 1902, and it has been preserved, and digitized, at the National Media Museum in Britain; you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/96bf9c7>. The first Sherlockian film shot in color was "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959).
458. The OScholars is "an electronic journal for the exchange of information on current research, publications, and productions concerning Oscar Wilde and his worlds," and there has been a call for papers (3000 to 4000 words) for a special issue devoted to Conan Doyle, edited by Sarah E. Maier; the deadline for abstracts (250 words) is Dec. 1, and more information is available at <www.call-for-papers.sas.upenn.edu/node/47971>.
459. The Postal Service has issued a set of stamps honoring "The Solitary Cyclist" (well, not really, but it does seem that way). Which leads to the question: who was the solitary cyclist? Violet Smith or Bob Carruthers? There is an answer to the question, and those who don't know the answer are invited to read the story and decide for yourselves (but if you read the story in THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, don't read the annotations, because Les Klinger gives the answer, which will also be revealed in this issue of my newsletter).
460. Don Petkus has noted that Skeletons in the Closet (the store operated by the Los Angeles County Coroner's Department) still offers Sherlockian merchandise, including T-shirts with a skeleton in Sherlockian costume (in black or white); they also sell a mug with a Sherlockian design. 1104 North Mission Road, Los Angeles, CA 90033 <www.lacoroner.com>.
461. Doug Wrigglesworth reports that Terry Fallis' UP AND DOWN (Toronto: Douglas Gibson, 2012; 432 pp., $22.99) is a humorous novel whose Canadian protagonist is a serious Sherlockian and bibliophile.
462. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's pilgrimage to Switzerland (Sep 12 #4), and as usual with the Society's excursions, there was a handsome handhandbook published: RETURN TO THE REICHENBACH: A SHERLOCK HOLMES SWISS ACCOUNT BOOK (2012, 114 pp.) is an excellent gathering of scholarship, artwork, and humor, and the postpaid cost is £17.50 (to the U.K.)/€20.00 (to Europe)/£25.00 (elsewhere) from the Society <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.
463. Oct 12 #3: The September issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has the "Sherlockian Memories" of Donald Yates, a "50 Years Ago" tribute to Henry T. Folsom and his Canonical chronologies by Julie McKuras, and other news from and about the collections. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Dick Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>).
464. Randall Stock reports the discovery of one more page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" to be offered at auction at Christie's in New York on Dec. 7. Randall has a detailed description of the page at his web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/9ppyvz8p>.
465. Jim Weiss continues to offer his excellent recordings younger audiences as CDs ($13.95) and MP3 downloads ($10.95): SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR CHILDREN ("The Mazarin Stone"/"The Speckled Band"/"The Musgrave Ritual"/"The Blue Carbuncle") and MYSTERY! MYSTERY! ("The Red-Headed League" and tales by Chesterton and Poe); Greathall Productions, Box 5061, Charlottesville, VA 22905 (800-477-6234) <www.greathall.com>. And there's Sherlockian artwork at the home page of his web-site.
466. John Longenbaugh's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" will be performed at the Taproot Theatre from Nov. 16 through Dec. 29; the theater is at 204 North 85th Street, Seattle, WA 98103 (206-781-9707) <www.taproottheatre.org>.
467. Titan continues to reprint Sax Rohmer's stories about Fu-Manchu (who "makes Professor Moriarty seem an under-achiever," Max Collins has noted); DAUGHTER OF FU-MANCHU (236 pp., $9.95) is the fourth in the series, setting Sir Dennis Nayland Smith and Dr. Petrie against the evil Fah Lo Suee in 1913. And Titan has other non-Sherlockian series, including Kevin J. Anderson's alternative histories: THE MARTIAN WAR: A THRILLING EYEWITNESS ACCOUNT OF THE RECENT ALIEN INVASION involves H. G. Wells with Dr. Moreaux, Dr. Cavor, T. H. Huxley, and Percival Lowell, on Earth, the Moon, and Mars (342 pp., $12.95). The publisher's web-site is at <www.titanbooks.com>.
468. Mark Alberstat's 2012 Sherlock Holmes Calendar is illustrated with artwork from The Strand Magazine, and displays important Sherlockian birthdays and William S. Baring-Gould's dates for the cases. US$15.00 postpaid, and his address is: 46 Kingston Crescent, Dartmouth, NS B3A 2M2, Canada.
469. Who was the solitary cyclist? Bob Carruthers. The manuscript of the story is titled "The Adventure of the Solitary Man", a discovery made by Andrew Jay Peck, whose article "The Solitary Man-Uscrip" was published in The Baker Street Journal (June 1972) and won Andy the Morley-Montgomery

- Award for the best paper published in the BSJ that year. His article was reprinted by The Baker Street Irregulars in "A REMARKABLE MIXTURE" (Jan 08 #3), still available at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> ($35.00 plus shipping).
470. David Haugen (of The Sound of the Baskervilles) reports that Mimi Noyes is organizing a Seattle Sherlock Convention to be held Nov. 3-4. The convention focus will be on the BBC series, but there will also be panels on the Canon, and on "After ACD" pastiches; details at <www.sherlock-seattle.org>.

471. Oct 12 #4: MX Publishing <www.mxpublishing.com> continues to publish interesting Sherlockiana: SHERLOCK'S HOME: THE EMPTY HOUSE, edited by Steve Emecz (2012; 224 pp., $16.95) is an anthology of pastiches, poems, and vignettes from participants of <www.sherlockology.com>, issued in support of the Undershaw Preservation Trust, with additional contributions from supporters of the Trust who include Mark Gatiss, Douglas Wilmer, Stephen Fry, and many others well known to Sherlockians. Completists may want to have the Russian translation, to be published soon by Amphora; you can watch a 3-minute television news report at <www.ntv.ru/novosti/344118>.
472. Also from MX Publishing is P. C. Martin's STEAMPUNK HOLMES: LEGACY OF THE NAUTILUS (2012; 142 pp., $14.95); it's a steampunk retelling of "The Bruce-Partington Plans" featuring Sherlock Holmes, a bionic Dr. Watson, and Sherlock's sister Mycroft (steampunk's a modern Victorian science-fiction genre generally set in alternative universes). There's much more about steampunk projects at <www.steampunkholmes.com>.
473. And: Fiona-Jane Brown's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ADVENTURE OF THE JACOBITE ROSE (2012; 87 pp., $10.95) is the script for a two-act play that involves Holmes and Watson with Mycroft and forgers and thieves. Charlotte Smith's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MURDER AT LODORE FALLS AND OTHER MINOR TALES (2012; 154 pp., $12.95) has Holmes and Watson battling a villainous gang with evil plans afoot (the minor tales are Christmas vignettes rather than cases).
474. And: a reprint of Steven Seitz's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE PLAGUE OF DRACULA (2012; 178 pp., $18.95), first published in 2006; Holmes is appropriately skeptical about the supernatural, but quite mistaken.
475. Henry Zecher and Gay Zurich offer ideas for Christmas: Henry's biography of William Gillette, and Gay's artwork on personalized cartoons and magnets; go to <www.artandsoulinc.com> and "Product Search" for [sherlock].
476. Ken Rozek reports a new set of eight stamps from Liechtenstein that honors famous figures from classical literature, all drawn by Swiss artist Oskar Weiss, and one of them being Sherlock Holmes; the cost of the set is 8.00 CHF (that's Swiss francs, for a total of about $8.55) and their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/8hk6783>.
477. Randall Stock's gift-buyer's guide to the "Best 2012 Sherlock Holmes Books and Movies" <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm> will be posted at his web-site on Nov. 3.
478. Jacques Barzun died on Oct. 25, aged 104. He was a highly-regarded scholar with wide-ranging interests, and he was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 2003. One of his special interests was detective fiction, and he was co-author of A CATALOGUE OF CRIME (1971), a classic survey of the genre that won a special Edgar Award from the Mystery Writers of America; he also contributed often to The Baker Street Journal, wrote Sherlockian clerihews, and in SIMPLE AND DIRECT: A RHETORIC FOR WRITERS (1975) revealed that "to keep a bull pup" was, in the 1880s, British army slang for "to have a bad temper" (a revelation for which many Sherlockians have vainly sought supporting evidence).

479. Oct 12 #5: Sherlock Holmes' 158th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 11, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:30 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> or Evy Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you are coming to the event.
480. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on Thursday on the 2nd floor of the Midtown Executive Club (40 West 45th Street); Kim Newman, author of ANNO DRACULA (1992), THE MAN FROM THE DIOGENES CLUB (2005), and PROFESSOR MORIARTY: THE HOUND OF THE D'URBERVILLES (2011) will be the speaker. $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below); tickets will not be sold at the door.
481. The Baker Street Babes will present a new birthday-festivities event: their "Daintiest Thing Under a Bonnet Charity Ball" at 8:00 pm at the Salmagundi Club at 47 Fifth Avenue (between 11th and 12th Streets), offering a buffet dinner, cash bar, and entertainment; formal attire and Sherlockian costume are strongly encouraged. The cost is $45.00, and proceeds will benefit the Wounded Warriors Project; more information at <www.bakerstreetbabes.com> or from Lyndsay Faye <lyndsay@bakerstreetbabes.com>.
482. Otto Penzler will hold his traditional open house on Friday from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
483. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $47.00 for chicken or salmon ($52.00 for prime rib). Checks can be sent to Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221b@gmail.com>.
484. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (800 Seventh Avenue at 52nd Street); checks for $78.00 (payable to Will Walsh) should be sent to Becky Robare at 111 North 9th Street #300, Philadelphia, PA 19107 (917-817-1608). The Gala web-site has more information at <www.gaslightgalanyc.wordpress.com>.
485. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and at the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised if you wish to attend these events.
486. If you want to send seasonal souvenirs or other mementos to be included in the various dinner packets you should send 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 100 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919), and 18 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material must be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15.
487. Oct 12 #6: On Saturday a wide range of Sherlockiana will be available from vendors in the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) in the Vanderbilt Suite (on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel at 45 East 45th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; you can contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> for information about dealers' tables.
488. The Beacon Society will hold their annual meeting from 10:00 to 11:30 am in the Roosevelt Hotel, where they will present their annual Beacon Award recognizing the efforts of individuals to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people. Details at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>.
489. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:30 to 4:30 at a Delmonco family midtown restaurant (to be named later); there will be hors d'oeuvres (adequate but not replacing lunch or dinner) and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks). And, of course, the usual (or perhaps unusual) entertainment; the cost is $69.00 (details below) or $79.00 after Nov. 26 or at the door.

490. For those who wish to continue partying, there are as yet no plans (firm or infirm) for sporting events at Kennedy's or other venues on Saturday evening; stay tuned (as they say) for a further report.
491. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am to 2:00 pm at the Irish Rogue (356 West 44th Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues); $20.00 payable by cash or check at the door. As always, the brunch is open to all, but space is limited; details about a fine way to end a long weekend are available from Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032) <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
492. Arrangements have been made for a block of rooms at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) at a special tax-free rate of $199.00 per night (single or double room); the special rate is available only for reservations made through the Baker Street Irregulars by Nov. 19. In addition, there may be some rooms available at the Yale Club (50 Vanderbilt Avenue) at a special tax-free rate of $200.00 per night (details on both below); guest cards for the Club's second-floor lounge are available to all Sherlockians.
493. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Roosevelt Hotel and the Yale Club, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and click on BSI Weekend, or contact Mary Ann Bradley <mabmfw@aol.com>.
494. Mary Ellen Rich kindly continues to advise about hotels that offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.hotels.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.quikbook.com>; special rates also are available at <www.travelzoo.com/top20/82851294-890255>. You will be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (and you should not forget about non-optional extras such as almost 20% in state and city taxes).
495. Oct 12 #7: The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
496. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and <www.bsiweekend.com>. News of additional events will be found in this newsletter, and at the web-sites.
497. "Sherlock & Shylock: The Sleuths of Venice" (the second conference arranged by the No Fog Countries) (Spain, Italy, and France) was an splendid gathering, thanks to hard work by members of Uno Studio in Holmes, who welcomed visitors as far-flung as Australia, Canada, Japan, and the U.S. The major event at the conference was the launch of SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: VIAGGIO IN ITALIA-ITALIAN JOURNEY, edited by Gianluca Salvatori, Enrico Solito, and Roberto Vianello; the book is a carefully-researched exploration of two albums of postcards and photographs devoted to Conan Doyle's visits to Italy, purchased at the auction at Christie's in 2004 by Richard J. Sveum. Everything in the book (Rome: Bobi Bazlen; 146 pp., E30.00) is presented in both Italian and English. You can purchase the book directly from the publisher (using PayPal) <info@bobibazlenservice.it>. Recommended.
498. One of the nice things about eBooks is that they're a fine way to keep authors' books in print. The late Stuart Kaminsky wrote 24 novels about Toby Peters (described by Kaminsky as "the anti-Philip Marlowe"), and they are all available from Otto Penzler's Mysterious Press; two of them are of particular interest: THE HOWARD HUGHES AFFAIR (1979), in which Basil Rathbone does some detecting, and HE DONE HER WRONG (1983), which involves a Sherlockian society called The Engineer's Thumbs. $7.99 each on-line, and you can see all of the titles at <www.mysteriouspress.com>.
499. Electronic publishing also helps readers find short fiction, such as Roger Johnson's pastiche "The Adventure of the Grace Chalice" (first published in 1997 in THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES ADVENTURES), now available in a Kindle edition for $1.20.
500. Richard H. Miller ("The Grice Patersons in the Island of Uffa") died Oct. 21. He served the U.S. Army (nuclear artillery) and in the U.S. Naval Reserve (intelligence, although he sometimes claimed to be in charge of disposing of all enemy mines discovered in New Mexico), and he worked for many years as lawyer at the Los Alamos National Laboratory. Dick was one of the founders of The Brothers Three of Moriarty, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982.

501. Nov 12 #1: There's more information about the birthday festivities in New York in January: the Beacon Society will meet in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel from 10:00 to 11:15 am on Saturday, Jan. 12. Details at their web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>.
502. Chrys Kegley of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will once again host The Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians Dinner on Saturday at 6:00 pm at Pete's Tavern (129 East 18th Street, between Irving Place and Third Avenue); $45.00 (including tax and tip) for two drinks and dinner, and the details are available from Chrys (18014 Sherman Way #275, Reseda, CA 91235) (818-675-5399) <ckegley@socal.rr.com>.
503. And a reminder: seasonal souvenirs or other mementos intended for various dinner packets should be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15: 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 100 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919), and 18 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278).
504. Amanda L. Goode's SHERLOCK CLYDE AND THE CHICKEN CAPER (Randy Goode, 2008; 64 pp., $11.96) is an amusing mystery for young readers: Clyde is a retired draft horse who lives on a south Texas ranch and investigate why chickens are going missing at an alarming rate. Available at <www.lulu.com>.
505. Scotland Yard is for sale. Not Great Scotland Yard, the original home of the Metropolitan Police, but rather New Scotland Yard, which has served as police headquarters since 1967; it also houses the Home Office Large Major Enquiry System (HOLMES). The police hope to save more than £500 million a year from an annual budget of £3.6 billion, and expect to receive as much as £150 million for the building after they move to a smaller building near Whitehall.
506. Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be presented by the Greenville Little Theatre from Feb. 2 to Mar. 9, 2013. The theater is at 444 College Street, Greenville, SC 29601 (864-233-6238) <www.greenvillelittletheatre.org>.
507. Nicholas Utechin's AMAZING & EXTRAORDINARY FACTS: SHERLOCK HOLMES (Newton Abbott: David & Charles, 2012; 140 pp., £9.99) is an informed and informative exploration of the Canon and its major characters, of its author and of what other authors and actors have brought to the Sherlockian world, all explained for general readers with style and occasional humor; it's a fine gift for people who have read the Sherlock Holmes stories and want to know more about them.
508. Bouchercon 2012 in Cleveland was quite successful, by all reports, with an agenda that included a Sherlockian panel ("Elementary, My Dear Cleveland"). Bouchercon 2013 ("A New York State of Crime") will be held in Albany Sept. 19-20, Bouchercon 2014 ("Murder at the Beach" in Long Beach on Nov. 13-16, and Bouchercon 2015 (no slogan as yet) in Raleigh on Oct. 8-11. Their websites are at <www.bouchercon201x.com> (substitute a numeral for the x).

509. Nov 12 #2: Nielsen's "live plus same day" data credited the "Elementary" pilot episode with 13.4 viewers, winning its network time slot, and the series has continued to do well, with most newspaper and Internet reviews quite favorable. According to CBS, the series is up 17% over the same time period last year for adults aged 18-49 (the prime target for such shows), and the network has ordered the "back nine" for the series, for a total of 22 episodes. CBS also has announced that a special episode of the series will receive the coveted post-Super Bowl time slot on Feb. 3. The previous Super Bowl had an estimated 111.3 viewers, and about 38 million of them stayed tuned in to watch the next program.
510. KY TEYLU BASKERVILLE is the latest language for Canonical translations reported by Don Hobbs; the language is Cornish, and the book is available at <www.amazon.com> (232 pp., $16.95). Don notes that there now are 98 languages with at least one translation.
511. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at the King's Kitchen in Charlotte on Nov. 7, welcomed by Fred Mende (founder of The Saxe-Coburg Squares of Mecklenburg County). The city is named in honor of Charlotte of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and there's a Sherlockian connection: she was Queen Consort of the United Kingdom, married to George III, the monarch whose folly Holmes mentioned (in "The Noble Bachelor").
512. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times12-10.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, books and much more.
513. Kelly Blau has kindly forwarded Diane Birnberg's colorful article on "Life at 221B Baker Street" in the Sept.-Oct. issue of Dollhouse Miniatures; she and her husband have a complete house, based on books, films, and television. $6.95 ($5.95 digital) (886-606-6587) <www.dhminiatures.com>.
514. It has been many years since the "Mazarin" stone was identified (BSJ, Sept. 1974, p. 141-145) as a 78.96-carat yellow diamond that was then among the crown jewels of Iran, and it's nice to learn that it is still in Teheran, one of the "Iranian Yellows" described in a catalog published by the Iran Chamber Society and available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/268kwn>.
515. There will be some yellow diamonds available at auction at Sotheby's in New York on Dec. 5, including a 47.14-carat diamond formerly in the collection of the Duchess of Windsor, part of a diamond pendant necklace estimated at $1,500,000-2,000,000, and (if you want something a bit bigger) a 52.73 diamond ring estimated at $3,000,000-4,000,000.
516. Nicole Marie Charlotte Pierette Jeanne Schneider Milinaire-Russell, Dowager Duchess of Bedford, died on Sept. 6. Nicole Milinaire was associate producer for Sheldon Reynolds' 1954 television series "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes". After her marriage to the Duke in 1964 she helped make Abbey the most popular stately home in Britain, and her NICOLE NOBODY: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THE DUCHESS OF BEDFORD (1974) has a short chapter dealing with her work with Reynolds.

517. Nov 12 #3: The November issue of Ineffable Twaddle (the monthly newsletter of The Sound of the Baskervilles has news of Richard Milner's acquisition of the contents of a safe deposit box that had belonged to Sir Arthur Conan. There were two pistols, one of them originally purchased by Conan Doyle's brother Innes in 1893, and both weapons were left with Conan Doyle's solicitors in 1921 when the Firearms Act first became law. You can read more about the discovery at <www.soundofthebaskervilles.com>.
518. The newsletter also has a report of some interesting cufflinks that feature pages from a copy of a Sherlock Holmes adventure ($34.50) available at Etsy <www.tinyurl.com/a5nakgp>.
519. "Will Arsène Lupin Meet Sherlock Holmes in Hollywood Return?" was the headline on a blog by Graham Fuller on Nov. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/b5uvfa7>. "Lupin is known as being to the French what Sherlock Holmes is to the Englishspeaking world," according to Liza Forman <www.tinyurl.com/ar97hzl>; Lupin encountered Holmes in stories written by Maurice Leblanc, and the new film (tentatively titled "Arsene Lupin AKA Once a Thief") is "set up at Warner Bros." (and is not yet even listed at the Internet Movie Data Base, which means that it hasn't reached the "in development" stage).
520. Nice news for Canonical chronologists: Jody Baker has reported a new "complete chronology" for Sherlock Holmes; it was prepared by Chris J. Miller and is available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/7qcpwxk>. He includes a link to an interesting essay by David Richardson on "Some Chronological Crankiness" via the Wayback Machine, something that people may recall from "The Rocky and Bullwinkle Show". Today's Wayback Machine is a digital time capsule created by the Internet Archive in San Francisco, with more than 150 billion web pages from 1996 onward; it's a splendid way to recapture material from defunct web-sites.
521. Jody also has posted to The Hounds of the Internet a warm tribute to Christopher Morley, explaining that "Morley (and that little band of intellectual ruffians with whom he associated) set a tone that still exists today. They were a literate, talented, free-spirited, fun loving bunch of devotees who held nothing Canonical to be sacred. Everything was subject to their humor and became the objects of their spoof. They had their fun. It was clean fun, with refinement and civility. It is among the highest forms of entertainment."
522. Edward R. Hamilton, who specializes in remaindered books, offers interesting Sherlockian and Doylean books, DVDs, and CDs at nicely discounted prices; you can request a catalog (Box 15, Falls Village, CT 06031) or visit his web-site <www.hamiltonbook.com>.
523. Fossway, the developer that owns Undershaw, where Arthur Conan Doyle lived from 1897 to 1907, has been denied permission to appeal a high court ruling that the house may not be converted into flats (Jun 12 #1). The Don't Go Into the Cellar theater company will offer a free performance of their oneman show "Ho Ho Holmes" (which they describe as "Holmes in time for Christmas with some seasonal Sherlockian capers") at the Devil's Punchbowl Hotel in Hindhead on Dec. 23, in support of the Undershaw Preservation Trust; additional information available at <www.saveundershaw.com>.
524. Nov 12 #4: Harry Stephen Keeler, according to Google Books, is to some an overlooked genius, and to others the Ed Wood of detective fiction. And his novel THE RIDDLE OF THE TRAVELING SKULL (1934) features Milo Payne, who appears with a "long-beaked Sherlockholmsian cap" (noted by Paul Williams in Ineffable Twaddle, the monthly newsletter of The Sound of the Baskervilles). Keller apparently invented the word (with that spelling).
525. Paul Kurtz died on Oct. 20. He was a noted secular humanist and for decades debunked paranormal phenomena and pseudoscience; he founded the Center for Inquiry and the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, and in 1969 created Prometheus Books, which published books by Martin Gardner, Isaac Asimov, and many others.
526. Jim Webb spotted Beth Carswell's essay "Great Gumshoes: A Guide to Fictional Detectives at the AbeBooks.com <www.tinyurl.com/d4febqq>, with a report (courtesy of The Guardian) on an essay written by Agatha Christie in 1945 at the behest of the Ministry of Information in which she praised the excellence of British crime fiction, with lavish praise of Conan Doyle, and harsh comments about her won Hercule Poirot (with whom she had become bored to tears). You can read the Guardian article at <www.tinyurl.com/bysomda>, but to read Christie's essay you'll need to buy a copy of the new

- reprint of the collaborative novel ASK A POLICEMAN, recently published by Harper-Collins with the first-ever publication of her essay in the U.K. (according to The Guardian, it was first published in a Russian magazine in 1947).
527. David Marcum's THE PAPERS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES has been published by George Vanderburgh (2011; 311 pp., $25.00); the collection of nine pastiches has Holmes and Watson visiting Tennessee (where the author lives) and solving cases in England, with one of them explaining a family connection between Holmes and Solar Pons. The publisher's address is Box 50, R.R.4, Eugenia, ON N0C 1E0, Canada <www.batteredbox.com>.
528. And for a newer generation who may not be familiar with Solar Pons, you can consult Bob Byrne's web-site at <www.solarpons.com> and Charles Prepolec's discussion at <www.bakerstreetdozen.com/pons.html>.
529. Sabrina Herrera reports that "Doctor Who: The Great Detective" is the title of a "prequel" to the next Christmas Special "The Snowmen" (which will air in Britain on the BBC and in the U.S. on BBC America on Dec. 25); you can read all about it (and watch the 4-minute prequel and a trailer at the BBC web-site <www.tinyurl.com/bty67z5>. The current "Doctor Who" is created by Mark Gatiss and Steven Moffat, so it's understandable that there seem to be at least a few echoes of Sherlock Holmes in the upcoming Christmas Special.
530. When in London: the Geological Society of London will mark the centenary of the reading of Charles Dawson's "Pitdown Man" paper to the Society with a one-day conference on Dec. 18. There will be tours of the Natural History Museum's "Pitdown Centenary Exhibit" in the morning, and the papers in the afternoon will include David Martill's "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Pitdown Forgery"; details at <www.tinyurl.com/cow6fkx>. In 1994 Martill and Eberhard Frey described and named "Arthurdactylus conan-doylei" from a fossil found in northeastern Brazil (Aug 95 #6 and Sep 95 #2); it's a pterodactyl with a wing-span of 4.6 meters.
531. Nov 12 #5: Joe Fay (the manager of rare books at Heritage Auctions) "will attempt to solve the mystery of why one man from Flower Mound owns 3,000 books he can't read," in Dallas on Dec. 11 at 6:00 pm. The man in question is Don Hobbs, the "maniac collector" who specializes in Canonical foreign translations and will speak at the event; additional information is available from Heritage Auctions (800-872-2467) <rsvp@ha.com>.
532. Further to the report on "Sherlock & Shylock: The Sleuths of Venice" (Oct 12 #7), those who attended the conference were fortunate to have escaped a more recent extreme weather event: <www.tinyurl.com/cmpwmbh>.
533. Titan Books <www.titanbooks.com> continues to reissue Philip José Farmer's science fiction and fantasy: A FEAST UNKNOWN (303 pp., $12.95) is an introduction to the non-Sherlock world of Lord Grandrith and Doc Caliban (Farmer's versions of Tarzan and Doc Savage), with much sex and violence, and a Postscript by Theodore Sturgeon, and a new Afterword by Arthur C. Sippo.
534. The Strand Magazine offers a full-color Sherlockian calendar for 2013, with more than a hundred illustrations, including original artwork ($19.95). Go to <www.tinyurl.com/dxrh7w> for more information.
535. Roger Johnson and Jean Upton's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES MISCELLANY (Port Stroud: History Press, 2012; 223 pp., £9.99) has an appreciative foreword by Gyles Brandeth and entertaining descriptions of how interesting Sherlockians and Sherlockiana can be; it's an excellent introduction for beginners, and old hands will also find it a valuable guide to what admirers of Holmes and the Canon have done and are doing.
536. "The Arthur Conan Doyle Appreciation Society" is a new play written by Steven Canny and John Nicholson (who wrote "The Hound of the Baskervilles" for Peepolykus in 2007) and performed by Nicholson, Javier Marzan, and Gabriel Quigley at the Traverse Theatre, Dec. 4-22; according to the theater, "this riotous show fuses lecture, storytelling, slapstick comedy, and lightningfast costume changes to explore some pretty big ideas" about Arthur Conan Doyle and his life and work. 10 Cambridge Street, Edinburgh EH1 2ED, Scotland (0131-228-1404) <www.traverse.co.uk>.
537. Another Christmas show coming up is "Sherlock Holmes: The Panto-Crime" at St. Ambrose Church Hall in Leyland, Dec. 4-8. The St. Ambrose Players are presenting "a highly traditional Christmas pantomime" in which Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer is kidnapped by Toyland's evil Mrs. Moriarty, and Santa calls in Holmes and Watson to solve the crime. Moss Lane, Leyland, Lancs. PR25 4XA, England (0743-243-286) <www.stambroseplayers.co.uk>.
538. Keep an eye out for "The Starving Games", a new film now in production by the Safran Company; according to Variety (Oct. 22), it's a parody of "The Hunger Games", "The Avengers", "Sherlock Holmes", and "Harry Potter".
539. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France has found Heroes and Villains Miniatures, who offer a pair of attractive miniature busts of Holmes and Watson (€39.95), sculpted in resin at 1/12 scale by Raúl García Latorre; the company is in Spain, and their web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/c8xcxa3> has detailed instructions for assembling and painting the busts.

540. Nov 12 #6: Richard Lancelyn Green's copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual is now on display at the City Museum of Portsmouth, by way of celebrating the 125th anniversary of the publication of "A Study in Scarlet"; the City Council's press release at <www.tinyurl.com/apn7vl8> has a photograph of museum volunteer Aneta Martiskova wearing appropriate fingernail polish and lipstick. The copy of Beeton's will be exhibited until Jan. 31; Randall Stock has more about this copy at <www.tinyurl.com/az4m9ka>.
541. The Wrap (a web-site covering Hollywood) has reported on plans for a remake of "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985); Chris Columbus wrote the screenplay for the original film and will produce the remake for Paramount. The studio is "in talks with" Evan Spiliotopoulos to write a new script.
542. Tina Rhea spotted "Skull Panda Loves Everything" (a web-site that features Sam Logan's imaginative cartoons) and an amusing approach to the Canon published on Oct. 26 <www.skullpanda.com/post/34346166573>.
543. "The Sussex Vampire" wasn't a vampire, but there have been quite a few vampires in Sherlockian pastiches, starting in 1973, according to Bill Mason's list at <www.sherlockian.net/pastiches/vampires.html>.
544. "Jack the Ripper: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery Musical" had a two-performance run in Australia this month; the show is described as "the gothic, grizzly Jack the Ripper story, set in the backdrop of the seedy 'Arse End of London' Music Hall, investigated by a humorous Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson" and is scheduled at the Adelaide Fringe on Feb. 23 and Mar. 2 and 9. There is Facebook page [fans of jack the ripper a sherlock holmes mystery] with lots of photographs.
545. Alan Rettig spotted an imaginative two-minute animation ("The Case of the Broken Lamp") created by Alberto Beguierie, a student at the Ringling College of Art & Design in Sarasota, who offers a combination of film noir and youthful fun <www.vimeo.com/42728658>.
546. John R. Lavas has published a lavish "collector's centenary edition" of THE LOST WORLD in a limited edition of 300 copies (US$115.00 plus shipping from New Zealand) with color illustrations and additional essays by other authors on topics such as "The Geology of the Lost World" and "The Lost World in Popular Culture"; more information is available from the publisher (Box 14-421, Panmure, Auckland 1741, New Zealand) <j.lavas@auckland.ac.nz>.
547. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France has reported a Benedict Cumberbatch Mask that "will transform you into an English film, television, and theater actor" (£3.49), at <www.mymask.co.uk/benedict-cumberbatch-177p.asp>.

548. Larry Hagman died on Nov. 23. He began his long career as an actor on the stage and went on to star in television, best known for his roles as Capt. Tony Nelson on "I Dream of Jeannie" (1965-1970) and as J. R. Ewing on "Dynasty" (1981-1989), he also played Sherlock Holmes in the television film "The Return of the World's Greatest Detective" (1976).

549. Dec 12 #1: There's more information about the birthday festivities in New York in January: the Clients of Adrian Mulliner will hold a Junior Bloodstain in the Park Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel at 11:15 am on Saturday, Jan. 12. There will be a performance of "The Riddle of the Starving Swine", a play written by Gayle Lange Puhl, adapted by William Hyder, and with puppets created by Ken Vogel.
550. And those heading to New York may find some useful hints in Scott Monty's handy-dandy guide for newbies and veterans <www.bit.ly/bsitips>.
551. The Baker Street Irregulars will issue a new version of the electronic Baker Street Journal in January: the eBSJ v2 will be on sale on Saturday during the birthday festivities in Covent Garden West (that's the dealers room in the Roosevelt Hotel's Vanderbilt Suite) for $149.95 (or $49.95 to owners of the old BSJ CD-ROM who bring and surrender disk 4); the new DVD has all issues through 2011 on one disk, and will be more easily searchable. Go to <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/pdf/ebsj-cd-trade-in.pdf> for more information on the eBSJ v2. After the birthday festivities the new DVD will be available by mail at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/ebooks/ebsj.html> (the trade-in expires on May 1).
552. "Confessions of a Bookplate Junkie" (reported by Don Hobbs) is a blog that offers Lew Jaffe's "random thoughts from a passionate bookplate collector" <www.bookplatejunkie.blogspot.com>, and on Nov. 25 he displayed images of five bookplates showing fingerprints. One of the bookplates (with Frederic Dorr Steele artwork) is from S. Davis Levin's "A. Conan Doyle Collection" and is dated as early 20th century. A Google search has turned up a letter dated 1937 in which he said that he had been collecting bookplates for more than thirty years; does anyone know of him as a Conan Doyle collector?
553. SCARLET IN GASLIGHT was a comic-book series, written by Martin Powell and illustrated by Seppo Makinen and published by Eternity Comics in 1987 and 1988, with Sherlock Holmes engaged in a battle against Count Dracula. Now there's a 25th-anniversary reprint as a graphic novel (Los Angeles: Pulp 2.0 Press, 2011), with remastered artwork and an introduction by Win Scott Eckert, an interview with Powell.
554. James O'Brien's THE SCIENTIFIC SHERLOCK HOLMES: CRACKING THE CASE WITH SCIENCE AND FORENSICS (New York and Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2012; 172 pp., $29.95) offers an informed review of forensics both in the Canon and at the time the stories were written; O'Brien is a chemist, and pays particular attention to that area of forensics, offering a rebuttal to Isaac Asimov's claim that Holmes was a "blundering chemist" (in Science Digest in 1980).
555. O'Brien ends his book with a brief but entertaining discussion of Charles L. Scamahorn, whose "Probaway--Life Hacks" blog includes detailed explanations of how Conan Doyle was a prolific hoaxster, responsible for Piltdown Man, Sir Francis Drake's Plate. and the Kensington Rune Stone, and in addition was Jack the Ripper; go to <www.probaway.wordpress.com> and search for [conan doyle].

556. Dec 12 #2: John Bennett Shaw once gained fame, or perhaps notoriety, when he explained at an annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars why he had decided that the Canon was unsuitable for younger readers, and his paper ("To Shelve or to Censor") was published in Shades of Sherlock in Aug. 1971; Tina Rhea spotted a more recent list of "the top 10 suggestive lines from the Sherlock Holmes canon" can be found at the "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog at <www.tinyurl.com/c8jexy7>.
557. There will be a sequel to A STUDY IN SHERLOCK, an anthology of "stories inspired by the Holmes Canon" edited by Laurie R. and Leslie S. Klinger (Aug 11 #2); the new volume will be IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, due from Bantam in the fall of 2013. Laurie listed the authors whose stories will be in the new book at her web-site on Nov. 18 <www.laurierking.com/blogs>.
558. Spain Rodriguez died on Nov. 23. He was an influential radical cartoonist, a founder (with Robert Crumb) of ZAP Comix, and an important contributor to underground comics. He also illustrated five Canonical stories in SHERLOCK HOLMES' STRANGEST CASES (Nov 01 #2).
559. Jean Marie Whaley has reported "Epic Rap Battles of History" is a series of short videos you can view at YouTube; the latest being "Batman vs. Sherlock Holmes" <www.youtube.com/watch?v=17CLiZuiBkQ>. Parental warning: there are crude lyrics involved.
560. The fall issue of For the Sake of the Trust (the The Baker Street Irregulars Trust newsletter) has Greg Darak's report on 1940s correspondence between Edgar W. Smith and Basil Rathbone, plus other news of and about the Trust; past issues of the newsletter can be read on-line at the Trust website <www.bsitrust.org>, and the current issue is available from Mike Berdan (2015 Main Street, Glastonbury, CT 06033) <editor@bsitrust.org>.
561. "Descent Into Madness: The Truth About Mary Russell" is the title of David Marcum's quite different view of the relationship between Holmes and Russell, presented as a pastiche that you can read on-line at Carolyn and Joel Senter's "Classic Specialties" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/czf42ax>.
562. The page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at auction at Christie's in New York on Dec. 7 (Oct 12 #3) sold for $158,500 (including the buyers premium), twice as much as the last page from the manuscript that sold at auction for $78,000 (Nov 04 #4). Randall has a detailed description of the page at his web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/9pyvz8p>.
563. The electronic journal Ripperologist continues to cast a wide net: the December issue (#129) has an interesting article ("Taken as Magnificent: The Lydia Manton Affair") by Robert Linford, David O'Flaherty, and John Savage, that discusses in some detail a royal scandal involving Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence. The Duke of Clarence, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales, is one of the many people suspected of being Jack the Ripper, and there's a Sherlockian connection: the solicitor George Lewis, who had royal connections, was present at the inquest into the death of Miss Manton and is mentioned in "The Illustrious Client" (a case that some Sherlockians believe involved the Prince of Wales). For information about subscriptions, you can contact editor Eduardo Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.

564. Dec 12 #3 Last year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture was presented at the Toronto Public Library by Tom Ue (on "Sherlock Holmes and Shakespeare"), and his remarks were published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; a limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now. The web-site (with PayPal and credit-card capability) is at <www.acdfriends.org> or you can contact Cliff Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>; the minimum donation (which includes three issues of their newsletter "Through the Magic Door") is $25.00. This year the lecturer was Roy Pilot (on "The Lost World") and his talk will be sent to members of the Friends next year.
565. "Sherlock Holmes, Past and Present" is the title of a conference planned by Jonathan Cranfield and Tom Ue at Senate House in London on June 21-22; they have issued a call for papers (with a deadline of Jan. 15), and more information is available at <www.filmint.nu/?p=6377>.
566. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times12-11.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, books and much more, including a report on a recent conference in Seattle (there are plans for a second one next year), and news that there might be a 25th-anniversary Canonical Convocation and Caper in Door County next September.
567. Ken Ludwig's play "Postmortem" (involving a mystery at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme, Conn.) will be performed by the Minstrel Players at Houghton Hall (on Long Island), Nov. 13-21 (120 Main Street, Northport Village, N.Y. 11768) (631-732-2926) <www.minstrelplayers.org>.

568. Penguin has relaunched its Penguin English Library ("100 of the best novels in the English language") in attractive new covers, all of the books priced at £5.99. And one of those novels is THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. But they also are not taking the limitation seriously: another of their titles is THE FIVE ORANGE PIPS AND OTHER CASES.
569. COMPLETE WORKS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, with an introduction by Robert Ryan, has been published by Simon & Schuster. It's available without charge at Amazon, and can be read by anyone who has a Kindle, or Kindle software installed on your computer <www.amazon.com/dp/B00AHE20W0>.
570. As noted earlier (Apr 12 #6) Steve Hockensmith's story "Water Indian" (featuring Old Red and Big Red Amlingmeyer) was first published in the anthology GHOST TOWN, edited by Martin H. Greenberg and Russell Davis (New York: Pinnacle Books, 2010; 336 pp., $6.99); there are 15 original stories (the others non-Sherlockian) by authors who include Loren D. Estleman and Louis L'Amour.
571. Peter Calamai reports that Stella Bella Wines (Margaret River, Australia) is selling a range of Skuttlebutt wines that have reached Canada, and perhaps soon will be available in the U.S.; their Shiraz/Cabernet 2008 is reviewed at WineCompanion.com as a "hedonistic style offering year-in, yearout enjoyment." Skuttlebutt seems to be a variant spelling of Scuttlebutt, but (not for the faint-hearted) there's a seriously different definition at <www.urbandictionary.com/define.php?term=skuttlebutt>.
572. Dec 12 #4: "The Magical Illustration of Arthur Rackham" a nice tribute to the artist at Abebooks.com <www.tinyurl.com/ctgzx2>, but they don't mention Rackham's illustrations for a book that's of marginal Sherlockian interest: Christopher Morley's WHERE THE BLUE BEGINS (1922), which was written by the founder of The Baker Street Irregulars and is available from dealers at prices ranging up to $3575 <www.tinyurl.com/cj5v9e3>.
573. Benedict Cumberbatch has been nominated by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for a Golden Globe Award for best actor in a miniseries or motion picture made for television. The awards ceremony will be broadcast by NBCTV on Jan. 13.
574. Roger Johnson and Jean Upton report an impressive "Ronald Searle Tribute" blog by Matt Jones at <www.ronaldsearle.blogspot.com>; Jones' entry on Apr. 27, 2009, about Searle's involvement with the Festival of Britain, includes two versions of his wonderful depiction of the recreation of the sittingroom at 221b Baker Street.
575. The autumn issue of The Magic Door celebrates the 100th anniversary of "The Lost World" and includes fine articles by Dayna Nuhn, Doug Wrigglesworth, Peggy Perdue, and others, all devoted to Professor Challenger. Copies of the newsletter are available on request from Cliff (as above). The Friends will celebrate the science of Arthur Conan Doyle on May 4, when the Hollyer Lecturer will be Bernard Lightman.
576. Craig Wichman's STANDING IN THE SPIRIT AT YOUR ELBOW: A HISTORY OF DICKENS' CHRISTMAS CAROL AS RADIO/AUDIO has been published by Bear Manor Media (238 pp., $19.95) <www.tinyurl.com/bsgtr95>; Wichman has played Scrooge, and so has Basil Rathbone, and the book includes recollections by Rathbone (Edith Meiser wrote the script) and many others. Signed copies are available from the author <quicksilverrt@aol.com>; $25.00 postpaid.
577. What if Conan Doyle had named his detective something other than Sherlock, like Keith or Francis, asked a blogger on the web-site of the Topeka Capital-Journal (May 26). Well people would be saying "No kidding, Keith" or "No fooling, Francis."
578. Ronald A. Knox is well known to Sherlockians for his landmark paper "Studies in the Literature of Sherlock Holmes", but he did much more, including translating the Bible from the Latin Vulgate into English. Ann Lewis has reported a web-site at <www.knoxbible.com> for a work that was approved for liturgical use and endorsed by Pope Pius XII.
579. Ken Ross has posted video at YouTube showing nine minutes of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London in action against the P. G. Wodehouse Society in their first cricket match, in 2001 <www.tinyurl.com/buqde9m>; the video includes footage showing the appropriately costumed spectators.
580. Next year's "Sherlock Holmes Weekends" in Cape May, N.J., will be on Mar. 15-17 and Nov. 1-3; there will be a new mystery to solve, and a performance by the East Lynne Theater Company. More information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts & Humanities (Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204) (800-275-4278 ext 185) <www.capemaymac.org>.
581. Dec 12 #5: The Feb. 2012 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will be found on newsstands during the birthday celebrations, has Sherlockian artwork on the cover, pastiches by Howard Engel, Terence Faherty, and Amy Myers, a birthday tribute by editor Janet Hutchings, and reviews by Steve Steinbock of new Sherlockian books.
582. F. Andrew Leslie's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" will be produced at the Cloverdale Performing Arts Center from Feb. 22 through Mar. 3. The theater is at 209 North Cloverdale Boulevard, Cloverdale, CA 95425 (707-894-2214) <www.cloverdaleperformingarts.com>.
583. "Department of Celebrities Wearing Deerstalkers" ... who's the celebrity?
584. "Sharing Sherlock: The Story of a Pompey Lad" is a project that has won a £90,000 grant from Britain's Heritage Lottery Fund. The Conan Doyle Collection in Portsmouth will create a new on-line exhibition and run 30 outreach and education workshops for schools and local residents, and produce 10 touring exhibitions for local communities.
585. AudioGO (a new name for BBC Audiobooks) now offers the entire Canon, read unabridged (and very well) by Derek Jacobi, on CDs and as downloads; their web-site is at <www.audiogo.co.uk>. THE LOST WORLD also is available, both read unabridged by Matthew Rhys and as a radio dramatization broadcast by the BBC in 1975, plus many Sherlockian pastiches by other authors. There also is a great deal of Sherlockian and Doylean audio offered as downloads at Amazon's <www.audible.com>.
586. Booger is back! Curtis Armstrong (BSI 2006, as "An Actor and a Rare One") starred as Booger in "Revenge of the Nerds" (1984), and he will return in "King of the Nerds" (an unscripted eight-episode series on TBS cable), and he and Robert Carradine will host a competition for nerdy hopefuls competing for a $100,000 prize. The series starts on TBS on Jan. 17.
587. Dec 12 #6: "Mr. Culverton Smith is in," Watson was told (in "The Dying Detective"). Donald A. Redmond, in his SHERLOCK HOLMES: A STUDY IN SOURCES (1982), was unable to determine a source for the name Culverton Smith, and it's unusual indeed. A Google search reveals a song "Culverton Smith is the Boogie Man" at YouTube (but it's Sherlockian), and there was a Culverton Smith who graduated from Holmes Elementary School in Spring Lake, Mich., in the class of 1904, according to the web-site <www.classmates.com> (but one must be skeptical). Now Bob Katz has reported Culverton Smith as a character (played by Muriel Hutchinson) in the movie "Another Thin Man" (1939).
588. So who's the celebrity wearing a deerstalker? "Elton John dining al fresco with his cat at Caribou Ranch, Colorado, 1974," in a photograph spotted and kindly forwarded by Samantha Wolov.
589. Gail H. Curry's THE MINIATURE SHERLOCK HOLMES: A SOURCE BOOK FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES BOOKS PUBLISHED IN MINIATURE FORMAT (2011; revised and reprinted in 2012; 36 pp., $25.00 postpaid) is exactly what the subtitle promises, covering both the Canon and Sherlockiana, with many full-color illustrations, from 1915 (Little Leather Library) to 2010 (Peter and Donna Thomas). Completists may be unhappy to discover that there are three variants of John Bennett Shaw's THE WHOLE ART OF DETECTION, but that's an indication of how widely the author has spread her net. Gail Curry-Books, 12016 Ballantine, Overland Park, KS 66213.

590. Get out your running shoes: Kate Karlson reports that there will be a London Bridge Half Marathon and 5K on Apr. 13 (that's the old London Bridge at Lake Havasu, Ariz., rather than the new London Bridge in London). Details are available at <www.londonbridgehalf.com>. You get to see the bridge as one of the locations filmed for "The Return of the World's Greatest Detective" (1976), which starred Larry Hagman as Sherman Holmes. And if you run in the 5K you may see Kate as well.
591. This newsletter has come a long way from the ancient days when it was produced on a typewriter and distributed as photocopies: for one thing, it now costs more to print and mail (and the subscription price will increase next year to reflect a slight increase in printing costs). And making the newsletter available on the Internet has reduced the number of subscribers (the print run of more than 300 in 1985 is now fewer than 150). The electronic edition started as text posted free to two electronic mailings lists, and now, thanks to the wizardry of Randall Stock, it is also published scanned, with illustrations in full color and with live links, at two web-sites: one of them Willis Frick's Sherlocktron <www.sherlocktron.com/scuttlebutt.htm>, and the other The Red Circle of Washington <www.tinyurl.com/d8uoo8o>. As for the future, god only knows (there are no plans for a podcast, nor for a live-action video edition at YouTube).
592. And Kate Karlson, who presides over The Turf Builders of Baker Street, offers an enthusiastic tip on Bridgetta at Aqueduct on Jan. 13, for the punters who have any money left at the end of the birthday festivities.

1. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 159th birthday during the long weekend from Jan. 9 to Jan. 13. The festivities began with the traditional ASH Wednesday dinner sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at O'Casey's and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning, followed by the usual lunch at McSorley's.
  2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Midtown Executive Club on Thursday evening was Kim Newman, author of ANNO DRACULA, THE HOUND OF THE D'URBERVILLES and other fine fantasies, who discussed the many incarnations of the evil Prof. Moriarty; and as with previous distinguished speakers, you will be able to read his paper in The Baker Street Journal.
  3. The next event that evening was a new one: a "Daintiest Thing Under a Bonnet Charity Ball" hosted by the Baker Street Babes at the Salmagundi Club, where a capacity crowd enjoyed a buffet dinner, music, a pop quiz, serious costumery, and an auction, all benefiting the Wounded Warriors Project; go to <www.tinyurl.com/awzf46m> to see lots of photographs, including Lyndsay Faye as Robert Downey Jr. as Sherlock Holmes.
  4. The William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's was well attended, as always, and featured a performance of two scenes from "A Requiem for Sherlock Holmes" (a new play written by Gregg Oliver Bodine), and an appearance by Mr. and Mrs. Gillette (who were impersonated by Tyke and Teddie Niver). The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the annual Jan Whimsey award (named in memory of his wife Jan Stauber) for the most whimsical piece in The Serpentine Muse last year; the winner was Melinda Caric (author of "An Open Apology to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle"), and the award was a certificate and a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop offered the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  5. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI's annual dinner at the Yale Club, with Sue Vizoskie offering the preprandial first toast to Elaine Coppola as The Woman. The dinner's theme was tributes to past leaders of the BSI, and it featured the usual toasts and traditions, as well as papers and tributes and musical entertainment.
  6. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") presented editor's medals to John Bergquist, Andy Solberg, Bob Katz, and Sonia Fetherston, and the Two-Shilling Award to Michael Kean, and Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures) were awarded to Rosane McNamara ("Lady Mary Brackenstall"), Mark Levy ("Don Juan Murillo"), Tom Horrocks ("Colonel Sebastian Moran"), Stefano Guerra ("Count Negretto Sylvius"), Philip Cunningham ("Abe Slaney"), Daniel Moss ("Culverton Smith"), Jan Burke ("The Most Winning Woman"), and Frank Saksena ("Jonathan Small").
  7. "Adventure" was the theme of the Gaslight Gala at the Manhattan Club, where the entertainment included toasts (musical and otherwise), theatrics (from a script written by Dean Clark), scholarship (edifying and amusing), music, and an auction.

8. Jan 13 #2: Some of the more fervent (or possibly hard core) Sherlockians have been known to gather after the dinners at O'Lunney's Irish Pub to honor long-standing traditions such as staying until at least 2:21; another tradition calls for newly-Investitured Irregulars to buy a round of tequila shots, and it has been reported that this year was no exception.
  9. On Saturday morning Covent Garden West (the dealers room at the Roosevelt Hotel) welcomed sellers and buyers, and authors and editors delighted to inscribe or sign their books. And The Beacon Society presented its annual Beacon Award (recognizing someone who introduces young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories) to Shannon Carlisle, an accelerated learning teacher in Franklin, Tenn.; the society's web-site is at <www.beaconsociety.com>. The Beacon Society also awards Jan Stauber Grants, funded by contributions and a $1,000 matching fund pledged by Al Gregory.
  10. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon reception at Delmonico's Kitchen offered entertainment, conversation, wining, and dining; the entertainment included Al and Betsy Rosenblatt's traditional irreverent recap of the year's events (Sherlockian and otherwise), and Peter Calamai was announced as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate accompanied by a check) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year (his article on "Why He Isn't Sir Sherlock Today"). The Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets for Maggie Schpak's handsome replica of Mrs. Hudson's chatelaine (the tickets were sold by Elaine Coppola, Peggy Perdue, and Linda Hunt), and an auction of alcoholic and artistic donations to the Fund.
  11. The principal Saturday-evening event was the "Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner arranged by The Curious Collectors of Baker Street at Kennedy's Irish Pub, and then on Sunday morning a goodly crowd gathered at the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' brunch at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant.
  12. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 17, 2014. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner likely will be on Jan. 11, 2014.
  13. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; there will be much more detailed reports in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSI appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $38.50 (to the U.S.) or $49.00 (elsewhere); checks can be sent to the BSI (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077), and credit-card payments are welcome from foreign subscribers.
  14. You can also subscribe at the BSI web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSI, and information on the BSI's other publications and activities.

15. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@earthlink.net> offers (by e-mail only) his 2012 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).

16. Jan 13 #3: "Doctor Who: The Snowmen" (Nov 12 #4) did indeed have Sherlockian echoes, undoubtedly thanks to Steven Moffat, who wrote the script. You learn how Conan Doyle got the idea for his stories, and Matt Smith, as the Doctor, is seen in Sherlockian costume. And there's more to be found in the annotated look at the show (with lots of spoilers) by Alan Kistler at SpinOff Online <www.tinyurl.com/d2zq6yy>. And you've seen Richard E. Grant (Dr. Simeon) before: he played Holmes in "Encounters: The Other Side" on BBC 2 in 1992.
17. The new eBSJ v2 is now available: a DVD with all issues of The Baker Street Journal through 2011 in PDF format, and it's nicely done indeed. The price is $149.95, but there's a trade-in offer open (through May 1) to those who already have the old BSJ CD-ROM set (send in your old disk #4 and the price of the DVD is only $49.95); more information and some helpful hints can be found at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/ebooks/bsj.html>. Don't neglect the link to Randall Stock's helpful "Tips for using the eBSJ".
18. The latest volume in the Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series is THE WRONG PASSAGE, edited by Robert Katz and Andrew Solberg, with a facsimile of the original manuscript of "The Golden Pince-Nez", a careful transcript, annotations, history, commentary, and artwork. Manuscripts bring you close to the moment of creation when an author writes a story, and the accompanying history and scholarship are fascinating, informative, and occasionally surprising. 248 pp., $35.00; details, including the table of contents and a brief excerpt, are at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/wrongpassage.html>.
19. Robert Veld's THE STRAND MAGAZINE & SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE TWO FIXED POINTS IN A CHANGING AGE (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2012; 100 pp., $24.95) is a detailed and carefully-researched exploration of the many Sherlockian aspects of The Strand Magazine, including its publisher, editors, and illustrators; it's a grand story, and told well indeed. Box 68308, Indianapolis, IN 46256 <www.wessexpress.com>.
20. Gasogene also has published Nicholas Utechin's "OCCASIONALLY TO EMBELLISH" (319 pp., $18.95), which is modestly subtitled "some writings on Sherlock Holmes"; it's a collection of reprints of some of Nick's literate and often humorous scholarship, from 1969 through 2009. There are new postscripts to many of the pieces, and the book offers a fine look at how much fun can be found in Canonical criticism.
21. Paul Herbert has reported something that surely sets a record for the most extreme application of esoteric non-Canonical knowledge to something Sherlockian: Ben Lindbergh's "Overthinking It: The Craziest Half-Inning in History" is his analysis of the televised baseball game that Holmes and Watson watched in the opening episode of "Elementary" on CBS-TV. Posted on-line at Baseball Prospectus <www.tinyurl.com/9wad2vz> on Jan. 18, the piece is well worth a visit.
22. There will be a full-length reading of Greg Oliver Bodine's new play "A Requiem for Sherlock Holmes" (previewed at the William Gillette Luncheon) by the WorkShop Theater Company in the Jewel Box Theater on Mar. 10 at 6:00 pm (no charge, and reservations not needed); 312 West 36th Street (4th floor), New York, NY 10018) <www.workshoptheater.org/node/2263>.

23. Jan 13 #4: Maria Konnikova's MASTERMIND: HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Viking, 2013; 273 pp., $26.95) uses the Canon well to explain to lay readers how Sherlock Holmes thinks, and how readers can follow his methods to improve their own thinking. She is working on a doctorate in psychology at Columbia University and has written for periodicals that include Scientific American and the N.Y. Times; her book is instructive, insightful, and entertaining. And recommended. She also has an interesting web-site at <www.mariakonnikova.com>.
24. James E. Smith II ("Winner of the Jackson Prize") died on Dec. 24. After serving in the U.S. Army during World War Two, he had a long career as a psychiatrist for the Baltimore County Circuit Court. Jim was an enthusiastic member of The Six Napoleons, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1998.
25. The 2012 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 70 pages of scholarship, quizzes, and pastiches, including the late Michael Doyle's script for "Henry Baker--Your Goose Is Cooked", James Romnes' discussion of "Sherlock's Armoire: Wearable Victoriana", and Steve Duke's "ACD in Melbourne". The annual costs $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.), checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles should be sent to Terri Haugen, 6710 51st Street Court West, University Place, WA 98467.
26. Kindle users can pretend they're reading a real book if they conceal their Kindle in a vintage book cover that's offered by Signals (Box 2599, Hudson, OH 44236) (800-699-9696) <www.signals.com> for $49.95; one of them (HN3982) being the cover of SHERLOCK HOLMES SELECTED STORIES published by the Oxford University Press in 1951. They're made in Britain by the Manor Bindery and their web-site's at <www.klevercase.co.uk>.
27. Admirers of Bert Coules' dramatizations of the entire Canon with same actors as Holmes and Watson (and if you're not, you should be) can visit his excellent new web-site at <www.merrisonholmes.com>; it's full of information about the background, the shows, the stars, and much more.
28. Further to the mention of John Bennett Shaw's classic paper "To Shelve or to Censor" (Dec 12 #2), it's nice indeed that the paper is available online at <www.shadesofsherlock.org/SOS18.pdf>. The Three Students Plus and Shades of Sherlock editor Bruce Kennedy had great fun in the long-ago days of the junior scions.
29. 221b Con ("a con for all things Sherlockian") has been announced for Apr. 13-14, 2013, at the Holiday Inn Select in Atlanta, arranged by Taylor Blumenberg (one of the Baker Street Babes), and an energetic committee; there's more information at their web-site <www.221bcon.com>.
30. The next "Sherlock Holmes Weekend" in Cape May, N.J., will be on Nov. 2-4, with participants at work solving the mystery "Sherlock Holmes and the Trial of Moriarty's Challenge"; there also will be a performance of "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Norwood Builder" by the East Lynne Theater Company. Visit <www.capemaymac.org/tours/winter/special/sherlock.html> for more information on the weekend, or write to Box 340, Cape May, N.J. 08204.

31. Jan 13 #5: The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; the winter issue offers Gayle Lange Puhl's report on the history of the Criterion Restaurant, which was frequented not only by Dr. Watson but also by Adam Worth, and Patricia Guy's account of the Sherlockian conference in Venice last year. Published quarterly, the Muse costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
32. A handsome four-volume boxed set of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES is available from Thomas & Mercer/Amazon in their "Heirloom Collection" for $78.96 ($2.99 Kindle), with attractive full-color illustrations by Jacqui Oakley. Thomas & Mercer is named for the streets that flank Amazon's headquarters in Seattle.
33. Peter Tremayne's AN ENSUING EVIL AND OTHERS (New York: St. Martin's Minotaur, 2006; 331 pp., $15.99) is a collection of 14 historical mysteries by the author of the "Sister Fidelma of Cashel" mysteries; five of the stories are reprints of Sherlockian pastiches set in Ireland (Tremayne believes that Holmes' background was Anglo-Irish).
34. Don Izban confirms that there will be a 25th-anniversary Canonical Convocation and Caper in Door County, Wis., in September or October; more information will be available this summer, and if you'd like to be on his mailing list, he's at 1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068.

35. The "Apollo Lunar Surface Journal" (an on-line record of the surface operations on the Moon from 1969 to 1972, edited by Eric M. Jones and Ken Glover) will be found at <www.nasa.gov>; search for [sherlock crater] to find Jones' account of "The Valley of Taurus-Littrow" with details on the Apollo 17 landing site and on the crater names. Other links include the Mission Transcripts: the last (and longest) contains discussion by Jack Schmitt (in the landing module on the Moon) and Joe Allen (at CapComm in Houston) that still holds the record for the longest-distance conversation about Sherlock Holmes. Thanks to Janice Portante, who reported about the NASA web-site in The Northumberland Dispatch (published by The Northumberland Fusiliers).
36. An exhibition on "Murder in the Library: An A-Z of Crime Fiction" opened at the British Library this month, and will run through May, offering a "journey through the development of crime and detective fiction," with Sherlock Holmes of course included (the manuscript of "The Retired Colourman" will be on display). There's more information about the exhibition and exhibition events at <www.tinyurl.com/cga7vjk>, and Randall Stock has much about the manuscript at <www.tinyurl.com/bbr7zmj>.
37. One of my nicer Christmas presents was an imaginative one-of-a-kind "Sherlock Holmes" figurine sculpted by Deana Demko, who creates "little replicants" hand-made to order <www.littlereplicants.com>.
38. Ginger Aldrich continues to expand her Ocular Helmsman ("A Vade Mecum Upon the Personal Effects & Environs of Mssrs. Sherlock Holmes & John H. Watson of 221B Baker Street for the Victorian Layman"), and now includes scans of all of the public-domain Canon published in The Strand Magazine, in the Archives at <www.jadedcompass.com/ocular\_helmsman>.

39. Jan 13 #6: Robert C. Burr ("The Rascally Lascar") died on Jan. 9. He was a chemist, and worked for the Dept. of Agriculture; Bob claimed "curmudgeon" as both his vocation and avocation, and happily (almost) never left Peoria. He was an energetic member of The Hansoms of John Clayton and an editor of their journal Wheelwrightings, and for many years Bob presided over his own Plugs & Dottles. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1987, and in 1990 "Robbie Burr" (attending the annual dinner as a life-size photograph) received the Irregular Ha'penny and the Investiture "The Trap Door" from The Baker Street Irregulars.
40. The Mystery Writers of America have announced the nominees for this year's Edgar awards. Among them: Lyndsay Faye's non-Sherlockian THE GODS OF GOTHAM (best novel), James O'Brien's THE SCIENTIFIC SHERLOCK HOLMES (best critical/ biographical), and Peter Blake's "Elementary: Child Predator" and Steven Moffat's "Sherlock: A Scandal in Belgravia" (best TV episode teleplay). Winners will be announced at the MWA Gala Banquet in New York on Apr. 26.
41. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times13-1.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, and commentary and challenges.
42. There are many Sherlockian blogs, including Leah Cummins Guinn's "The Well-Read Sherlockian" <www.wellreadsherlockian.com>; her "12th Night Giveaway" contest featured (on Jan. 1) an amusing publicity photograph of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce "rehearsing with the truly vicious Baskerville stunt doubles." Mary Loving won the photograph, and reported on it to The Hounds of the Baskerville.
43. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE QUEEN OF DIAMONDS, by Steve Hayes and David Whitehead (London: Robert Hale, 2012; 223 pp., £18.99), is a pastiche from two authors of westerns (Hayes also co-wrote the script for the 1979 film "Time After Time"); essentially a western set in Sherlockian London, with Holmes and Watson in pursuit of outlaws.
44. This year's "Sherlock Holmes Weekends" in Cape May, N.J., will be on Mar. 15-17 and Nov. 1-3; there will be a mystery ("Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Anima Orbis") to solve, and performances by the East Lynne Theater Company, and more information is available from the Mid-Atlantic Center for the Arts & Humanities (Box 340, Cape May, NJ 08204) (800-275-4278 ext 185) <www.capemaymac.org>.
45. Judith Freeman's useful index to The Serpentine Muse (published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes since 1975); the index is available from her by e-mail as an Excel spreadsheet <judith-freeman@hotmail.com>, and the ASH web-site <www.ash-nyc.com> has information on subscribing to the Muse (back issues are unfortunately not available).
46. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2012" has the theme "Deception", and the essays range from Ray Riethmeier's "A Double Deception" (about the "Mycroft" novel A TASTE FOR HONEY) to Phil Bergem's "Thoughts of Refuges in London" (about Holmes' hideaways). The 54-page booklet is available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122); $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).

47. Jan 13 #7: The December issue of the quarterly newsletter of The Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota has Julie McKuras' seasonal commentary on Sherlockian Christmas cards, Dana Richards' discussion of Conan Doyle's involvement with divorce reform, and other news from and about the collections; copies of the newsletter are available on request from Dick Sveum (111 Elmer L. Andersen Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN 55455 <sveum001@tc.umn.edu>).
48. Theodore G. Schulz ("The Amateur Mendicant Society") died on Jan. 24. Ted served with merit in the U.S. Army and then worked in education; he was in the Army in the Far East when he began corresponding with Edgar W. Smith in 1957, and was a member of The Illustrious Clients and then of many of the societies in the San Francisco Bay area. He also presided over The Praed Street Irregulars, succeeding Luther Norris as Lord Warden of the Pontine Marshes, founded The Old Soldiers of Praed Street; he proudly named his son William Sherlock Schulz, and was an energetic and generous collector with a legion of friends world-wide. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1961, and the BSI's Two-Shilling Award in 1986. There is much more about Ted at his fine web-site at <www.tedschulz.com>.
49. Dr. William R. Hanson designed a nice cachet for last year's stamp honoring John Huston, showing him as Moriarty (in "Sherlock Holmes in New York" and Humphrey Bogart (who was directed by Huston in "The Maltese Falcon"). The first day cover costs $10.00 postpaid (in the U.S.) with payment in currency or by U.S. postal money order sent to him at: 78 West Notre Dame Street, Glens Falls, 12801.
50. The Saturday Review of Literature has returned, and it's very nice to see it again: it was in its pages that The Baker Street Irregulars first came to the attention of literate readers, since Christopher Morley was one of the editors, and the Jan. 2013 issue (edited by George Fletcher, Jon Lellenberg, Don Pollock, and Phil Shreffler) offers some interesting history and reviews. $5.00 postpaid from Donald Pollock (521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305).
51. Facebook is a social networking service that was launched in 2004 and now boasts more than 1 billion users, and Scott Monty maintains a growing list of "Sherlockian Entities on Facebook" at <www.tinyurl.com/azuk87m>, and of course allows you to add your group or page to the data-base.
52. "To India with Sherlock Holmes" is the theme of the next pilgrimage by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London, from Feb. 17 to Mar. 2, 2014; the tentative agenda includes a Victorian bathing party, a Holmes cricket match, a screening of an Indian-made Sherlock Holmes film, and a day at the races in Calcutta or Mumbai. Louise Nicholson <indianicholson@nyc.rr.com> will be glad to provide more information; a preliminary announcement of the event us at <www.sherlock-holmes.org/india.php>, and you can see details of some of her non-Sherlockian tours at her web-site <www.louiseindia.com>.

53. Jan 13 #8: Doug Wrigglesworth reports that Peggy Perdue has selected some spectacular material from the Toronto Reference Library's Arthur Conan Doyle Collection for the new exhibition "Adventures with Sherlock Holmes: Life and Times of the Master Sleuth" in the library's new exhibition gallery through Mar. 10 <www.tinyurl.com/acvekyj>.
54. The Veterans History Project (part of the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress) has added 14 scans of cartoons by Norman Schatell to its web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/ad8jndt>; the full-color cartoons are not Sherlockian, but instead date from his service in the U.S. Navy from 1943 to 1946. Norm served as a gunner's mate in the Pacific, and it is delightful to see another aspect of his artistic humor.
55. Thanks to the Société Sherlock Holmes de France you can watch one minute of Fox Film Corp. silent newsreel footage of Conan Doyle and his family (Lady Doyle and their children Adrian, Jean, and Denis) on June 24, 1922, as they prepared to return to Europe on board the Adriatic after the tour that he wrote about in OUR AMERICAN ADVENTURE (1923). You can watch the video at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/a3adfvp>, and read what the French wrote about it in their Ironmongers Daily News <www.tinyurl.com/aytnko>. They were also filmed by Pathé in New York in April, but that footage has been lost.
56. Welcome to our new postage rates, now 46¢/ounce (domestic) and $1.10 (international); the old rates were 45¢ (domestic), 85¢ (Canada and Mexico), and $1.05 (overseas). Printing costs also have increased slightly, and the new subscription rates for the ink-on-paper version of this newsletter are $12.25 (domestic) and $20.00 (international).
57. Electronically enabled readers can read the newsletter on-line free: text of all issues from Mar. 1985 can be found at Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" <www.tinyurl.com/b6nka8l> and scans of issues from 2012 at "Sherlocktron" and the Red Circle of Washington's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/d8uo08o>. The increase in postage rates came as a surprise to anyone who didn't see the brief Associated Press report on an announcement from the Postal Service in October 2012.
58. The next meeting of The Red Circle of Washington will be on Friday, March 8; our guest speaker will be drama critic and author Lloyd Rose, who will discuss "Sherlock Holmes on Television in the 21st Century". Details about the meeting will be found at the society's web-site <www.redcircledc.org>, which also has a link to the Smithsonian magazine excerpt from Dan Stashower's new book THE HOUR OF PERIL: THE SECRET PLOT TO MURDER LINCOLN BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR.
59. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) will honor the world's first forensic geologist with dinner at the Spaghetti Warehouse in Pittsburgh on May 22, when local Sherlockians will have a chance to meet geologists who are in town for the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; if you would like to attend the festivities, just let me know.
60. Feb 13 #1: Sorry about the calendar error: for those who want to plan ahead, The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will (correctly) be held on Jan. 17, 2014. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner likely will be on Jan. 11, 2014.
61. And another correction: Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@verizon.net> offers by (by e-mail only) his 2013 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, and the recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
62. The Baker Street Journal's web-site is well worth exploring, for selections from the BSJ, news about new publications by The Baker Street Irregulars, and the recent statement by Mike Whelan about "A World of Sherlockians" at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/sherlockians.html>.
63. "And it is always 1895," as Vincent Starrett wrote in his classic sonnet; it's certainly 1895 this year, since the 1895 calendar works for 2013.
64. Noted by Pam Verrey: Kaoru Shintani's YOUNG MISS HOLMES CASEBOOK 3-4 (New York: Seven Seas, 2012; 384 pp., $16.99); the second volume of the English translation of her manga CHRISTIE: HIGH TENSION (2007-2008). Christie is the niece of Sherlock Holmes, and the book offers her own versions of some of her uncle's recorded cases.
65. <www.contactmusic.com> has reported that the Nielsen numbers show that the episode of "Elementary" broadcast after the Super Bowl scored 20.8 million viewers (with a 7.8 rating for adults 18-49), making it the highest-rated entertainment broadcast of the year. But it's far from being the highest-rated post-Super-Bowl broadcast; that was an episode of "Friends" that had 42.9 million viewers in 1999. "Downton Abbey" on PBS-TV during the Super Bowl drew 6.6 million viewers on Sunday, the highest-rated program broadcast at the same time as the Super Bowl, which had 108.4 million viewers.
66. Dhanil Ali's new play "The Curse of Sherlock Holmes" is about Jeremy Brett: "We find Jeremy entering the Maudsley psychiatric hospital. The combined strain of playing Holmes coupled with the death of his wife sees his mental health deteriorate as fiction blurs with reality." The play will tour from March 6 through 30 in Blakemere, Chester, Liverpool, Shrewsbury, and Warrington, and there's a web-site for the tour at <www.tinyurl.com/bggxesm>.
67. David Stuart Davies' 1992 pastiche THE TANGLED SKEIN: SHERLOCK HOLMES MEETS COUNT DRACULA (with a foreword by Peter Cushing) is now available as a Piccadilly Publishing e-book ($2.99) at the usual U.K. and U.S. web-sites.
68. Department of "what might have been": Douglas Wilmer, in a video interview in 2002, recalled that after he declined the second "Sherlock Holmes" series for the BBC in 1968, they offered the role to Eric Porter (who turned it down), and then to John Neville (who turned it down), and then to Peter Cushing (who agreed); John Neville had played Holmes in "A Study in Terror" (1965), and Eric Porter eventually played Moriarty in the Granada series.

69. Feb 13 #2: "Sherlock Holmes Nevében" [In the Name of Sherlock Holmes] is a Hungarian film (Nov 11 #4) that premiered in 2011; "the movie follows two boys, Holmes and Watson, in their investigation into the disappearance of the city's children that eventually leads to a dark journey into the supernatural." The film has a web-site at <www.sherlockfilm.hu> and Greg Darak has reported a soundtrack CD released by Howlin' Wolf Records at <www.howlingwolfrecords.com> ($13.95).
70. Phillip Bergem has updated his two extensive checklists of Sherlockian and Doylean films and television programs, annotated for date, country, actors who played Holmes and Watson (or Conan Doyle), production company, and alternate titles; they're available by e-mail from Phil <pgbergem@gmail.com>, and at Willis Frick's "Sherlocktron" <www.sherlocktron.com>.
71. Fans of the BBC's "Sherlock" will enjoy Guy Adams' SHERLOCK: THE CASEBOOK (London: BBC Books, 2012; 160 pp., £14.99); it's a fully illustrated examination of the first six programs in the series, imaginatively written with great humor in the voice of Watson. There will be an American edition from It Books/HarperCollins ($17.99), due in July.
72. Maria Konnikova's web-site <www.mariakonnikova.com> offers much about her new book MASTERMIND: HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 13 #4), including a blog with links to audio and video of her appearances on tour promoting the book; you can also listen to her interview for the London Guardian "Science Weekly" podcast at <www.tinyurl.com/argmbwl>.

73. Plan ahead: PBS-TV has announced plans for a two-hour special on "How Sherlock Holmes Changed the World" to air this fall; the program "will reveal for the first time the astonishing impact that Holmes has had on the development of real criminal investigation and criminal techniques." The press release is at <www.tinyurl.com/bc282lr>.
74. WINTER AT DEATH'S HOTEL, by Kenneth Cameron (London: Orion, 2011; 389 pp., £7.99) is set in New York in 1896, when Louisa Conan Doyle has accompanied her husband on a trip to the United States, where she becomes involved in investigating a series of murders; there's good description of New York at the end of the century, but it's a brutal book, not for the faint-hearted. And yes, he actually toured in 1894, and Louisa stayed home, but that was before Teddy Roosevelt became commissioner of police in New York City, as he is in this book.
75. THE PERILS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Loren D. Estleman (Blue Ash: Tyrus Books, 2012; 208 pp., $24.95), is a collection of short stories (and one amusing play), almost all reprinted from various Sherlockian anthologies. The play (subtitled "A Comedy in One Unnatural Act") has been performed many times by Sherlockian societies.
76. "Mr. Selfridge" is the title of a new British (ITV) series that begins on PBS-TV on Mar. 31; it's the story of the "flamboyant and visionary American founder" of the department store in London. In the seventh episode Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (played by John Sessions) visits the store for a Sherlock Holmes book signing. Go to <www.tinyurl.com/aa2guym> to see what Sessions looks like as Conan Doyle.

77. Feb 13 #3: Planning for the "Sherlock Holmes, Past and Present" conference in London on June 21-22 (Dec 12 #3) continues apace. "My Particular Friend" (an interesting blog by Jennifer Petkus) shows a colorful poster at <www.tinyurl.com/bdnf2ed>, and advance information for participants is available from Jonathan Cranfield <j.l.cranfield@ljmu.ac.uk>.
78. "Search over 21,790,000 old New York State historical newspaper pages" is the offer from Old Fulton NY Post Cards <www.fultonhistory.com/Fulton.htm>, and while I can't vouch for the 21,790,000 the data-base is delightful.
79. Fred Dannay was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars, and with his cousin Manfred Lee wrote as Ellery Queen; you can see their sons Richard Dannay and Rand Lee in a nice 2-minute video tribute to Queen posted by Otto Penzler at his Mysterious Press web-site <www.tinyurl.com/afgznqf>.
80. Otto also has been nominated for an Edgar (best critical/biographical) from the Mystery Writers of America (Jan 13 #6) for his editing of IN PURSUIT OF SPENSER: MYSTERY WRITERS ON ROBERT B. PARKER AND THE CREATION OF AN AMERICAN HERO.
81. "The Sherlock Holmes Society of London 1959-1974" is a wonderful set of two DVDs issued in PAL format by the Society last year, and available only to members; it's a collection of films featuring members of the Society, made between 1959 and 1974, plus a collection of film coverage of the Society's first pilgrimage to Switzerland in 1968. If you're not already a member, you can join the society at their web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org> or by writing to David Jones, The North Wing, Groton Place, Groton Street, Groton, Boxford, Sudbury CO10 5EE, England, and the DVD set costs £16.50 (UK)/£17.00 (Europe)/$36.00 (elsewhere), from Robert Ellis, 13 Crofton Avenue, Orpington, Kent BR6 8DU, England <shs1221b@aol.com>.
82. "Sherlock Holmes in Brentwood" is a new play-reading series curated and introduced by Les Klinger (Sep 12 #4), and their first production will be Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band" (1910) at the Contrapuntal Performance Hall in the Brentwood area of Los Angeles on Mar. 23. Details at their web-site <www.sherlockholmesinbrentwood.com>.
83. The March-April issue of Harvard Magazine has an excerpt from Maria Konniova's MASTERMIND: HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK HOLMES, with imaginative artwork by Boris Kulikov; it won't reproduce well here, but you can see it in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/a4a4dd5>.
84. Oscar Ross spotted news reports that the Café Royal is open again on Regent Street in London, now as a luxury five-star hotel <www.hotelcaferoyal.com>. Hotel publicity claims that Conan Doyle was a patron of the restaurant, and he may well have been; it was outside that Café Royal that Sherlock Holmes was attacked by two men armed with sticks (see "The Illustrious Client").
85. Kent Ross reports that "The Untold Tales from the Tin Dispatch Box" will be the theme of the next "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 6-7, and there will be a meeting of The Wigmore Street Post Office on Apr. 5; the mailing list's maintained by Kent (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@gmail.com>.

86. Feb 13 #4: Donald Thomas has earned a well-deserved reputation as the author of excellent pastiches, both short stories and novels, and his new novel DEATH ON A PALE HORSE: SHERLOCK HOLMES ON HER MAJESTY'S SECRET SERVICE (New York: Pegasus Books, 2013; 346 pp., $25.95) offers an exciting account of Holmes and Watson's struggle against Sir Augustus Moran's elder son Rawdon Moran, even more dangerous a foe than his younger brother.
87. Fans of Laurie R. King have a new e-book available: LAURIE R. KING'S SHERLOCK HOLMES (2013) is a collection of reprints of eight essays ($2.99 for just about every device on the market). And MRS. HUDSON'S CASE (2012) is a short story in which Mrs. Hudson stars as the detective ($0.99).
88. Don Hobbs' SHERLOCKING: AN ADVENTURE IN AESTHETIC SHERLOCKIAN REALISM is a collection of amusing drawings inspired by Chaim Koppleman, who defined the genre as "the oneness of opposites" (such as showing people in places they never visited), and the 216-page book is available from Don for $29.99 plus shipping ($4.00 to the U.S., more elsewhere); 2100 Elm Creek, Flower Mound, TX 75028 <221b@verizon.net>.
89. And Don continues to update "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes" (Jan 11 #7), now with 98 foreign languages (plus 8 versions of English such as Braille and Pitman Shorthand), showing covers in color and bibliographic information; the bibliography on CD costs $15.00 postpaid (to the U.S.) or $20.00 (elsewhere), or free to anyone who reports something not already in the bibliography).
90. The Beacon Society awards annual Jan Stauber Grants of up to $350 to help fund development of projects that will introduce young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories; the deadline for applications is May 1, and there is more information at <www.beaconsociety.com/JanStauberGrant.html>.
91. Steven Dietz's play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be produced at the Douglas Morrisson Theatre through Mar. 10 (22311 North Third Street, Hayward, CA 94546 (510-881-6777) <www.dmtonline.org>.
92. "Holmes & Watson Save the Empire: A Musical Mystery" (with book and lyrics by Jahna Beecham and Malcolm Hillgartner, is being performed at the First Impressions Theatre through Mar. 11; 4360 Gallant Avenue, North Vancouver, BC V7G 1L2, Canada (604-929-9456) <www.firstimpressionstheatre.com>.
93. Foyles, founded 110 years ago, has long been a landmark in London for book collectors and book buyers, offering more than 200,000 books in its flagship five-story building on Charing Cross Road, and it soon will be moving, just down the street, into better-designed premises. Graham and Lissa Muscatine, owners of Politics and Prose bookstore in Washington, have recently blogged about "The Bookstore of the Future", reporting on a conference that was arranged by Foyles to consider how bookstore can survive; you can read their report at <www.politic-prose.com/bookstore-future>.
94. An additional reason to visit the Toronto Reference Library's web-site for its exhibition "Adventures with Sherlock Holmes: Life and Times of the Master Sleuth" <www.tinyurl.com/acvekyj> is the Virtual Exhibit; you can click on that link and see some excellent images of material that's on display.

95. Feb 13 #5: SHERLOCK HOLMES IN PARIS, by Séamus Duffy (Encino: Black Coat Press, 2013; 255 pp., $20.95) offers three pastiches, two from the unrecorded cases; Black Coat has published quite a few pastiches over the years, and is now making them available as e-books, including Frank J. Morlock's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE GRAND HORIZONTALS (Mar 07 #1), Brian Stableford's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE VAMPIRES OF ETERNITY (Feb 09 #6). and two translations from the French by Morlock: SHERLOCK HOLMES VS JACK THE RIPPER and SHERLOCK HOLMES VS FANTOMAS. Details at <www.blackcoatpress.com> about these and other Sherlockian and Doylean titles.
96. The Shard is the informal name for the tallest building in London (in fact, in Europe) at 1,016 feet and with 72 floors of offices, restaurants, hotel rooms, residences, and observation lounges. And it costs £25.00 to get to the top floor, according to Will Pearson, who provides a 360-degree virtual tour at <www.tinyurl.com/74xk7ew>, where you can maneuver with your mouse and zoom in and out, and it's well worth a visit. Thanks to Dean Clark for reporting this.
97. "There is nothing new under the sun," Sherlock Holmes said (in "A Study in Scarlet"), but those who visited the dealers room during the birthday festivities in New York definitely saw something new (even if it was more than 70 years old). Javier Doria of Madrid displayed (and hoped to sell) a pair of metal plates apparently created in 1940 to celebrate Macmillan's publication of Vincent Starrett's 221B: STUDIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES. There's no firm information on the history of the plates, but there's some speculation on "The Mystery of the Two Irregular Plates" at Jon Lellenberg's Archival History web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/ajv9k6s>.

98. Feb 13 #6: THE BAKER STREET TRANSLATION, by Michael Robertson (New York: Minotaur, 2013; 278 pp., $24.99) is the third in his series of novels about Reggie Heath, a London barrister who has offices in the building at 221B Baker Street, and a lease that requires him to answer Sherlock Holmes' mail; this time Reggie and his brother Nigel and actress Laura Rankin are involved in a case that opens with a rich American who wants to bequeath her fortune to Sherlock Holmes and develops into a race to prevent an attack on a royal event. As with the first two books in the series, THE BAKER STREET LETTERS (Jun 09 #3) and THE BROTHERS OF BAKER STREET (Feb 11 #4), the story is imaginative and well told.
99. Howard Ostrom is an enthusiastic collector of autographs of actors who have played Holmes and Watson, and (thanks to the wonders of the Internet) you can tour his collection at <www.tinyurl.com/cano7js>. He has almost all of the usual suspects, and some surprising and interesting candidates as well.
100. Les Klinger has filed a lawsuit against the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate, asking a federal court to rule that the characters of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John H. Watson are no longer protected by federal copyright laws, and that writers, filmmakers, and others are free to create new stories about Holmes and Watson without paying license fees to the owners of the remaining copyrights on the stories. Les has a web-site at <www.free-sherlock.com> with more information about the suit, and Jennifer Schuessler's report for the N.Y. Times "ArtBeat" blog can be read at <www.tinyurl.com/brd6owa>.
101. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times13-2.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, commentary and challenges, and limited quantities of old Sherlockian lapel pins.
102. Frogwares Studio has announced that "Crimes & Punishments: Sherlock Holmes" will be the next title in its series of Sherlockian computer games. There are six games in the series so far, the most recent being "The Testament of Sherlock Holmes" <www.sherlockholmes-thegame.com>.
103. For those who want to emulate Tonga: David Haugen notes that BLOWGUN TECHNIQUES: THE DEFINITIVE GUIDE TO MODERN AND TRADITIONAL BLOWGUN TECHNIQUES, by Anante P. Marinas Sr. (2010), is offered discounted to $7.95 from Edward R. Hamilton <www.tinyurl.com/aeojn9o>.
104. Winston Churchill is of interest to Sherlockians and Doyleans for many reasons, among them the five letters from Churchill to Conan Doyle in the family papers sold at auction in 2004. And according to Rex Stout, Churchill "knew the Holmes stories fairly well and thought them 'perfect entertainment.'" While there's no Sherlockian connection to the widespread belief that Churchill kept secret a warning that German bombers were to bomb Coventry during World War Two in order to protect his secret intelligence, an interesting article by Peter J. McIver at the Churchill Centre and Museum web-site <www.tinyurl.com/2appa76> shows that the often-repeated story is not at all true.

106. Conan Doyle's home at 12 Tennyson Road in Norwood, where he lived from 1891 to 1894, went to auction last month, estimated at £875,000; bidding reached £725,000, and the property didn't sell. The house, which displays a Greater London Council blue plaque noting that Conan Doyle lived there, was converted for use as a residential care home in the 1990s; according to an Internet post by the South Norwood Tourist Board, a company that provided autistic care "did a bunk a year ago, leaving the place empty," and the house is now an "absolute horror of a tip," divided into "cell-like one-room bedsits in a disgusting condition." The photographs below show the house as it was in 2007 (photographed by Roger Johnson), and as it is today.
107. The auction house then advertised the property as available for £750,000; it is quite likely that a buyer would be interested only in the land, and that the house is a tear-down. The official blue plaque was installed on May 18, 1973, and was reported in The Times on May 19 in an article imaginatively headlined "Case of the Left-Handed Arsenal Bricklayer".
108. The manuscript of Conan Doyle's poem "Ypres" will be offered at auction at Bonhams in London on Apr. 10, estimated at £1,500-2,000. Details from the catalog at <www.tinyurl.com/crrg342>. Owned by Dame Jean Conan Doyle, it was last at auction in 2006, when it sold for £1,080 (including the buyer's premium). Randall Stock has information about the manuscript at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/200603bonhams.htm>.
109. Members of the Japan Sherlock Holmes Club have awarded the society's annual Sherlock Holmes Grand Prize to Jon Lellenberg, Dan Stashower, and Charles Foley, the editors of ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (translated into Japanese by Masamichi Higurashi and published by Toro Shorin); over the past 35 years the winners of the Grand Prize have almost all been Japanese.

110. Mar 13 #2: TO KEEP THE MEMORY GREEN, a collection of essays by friends and colleagues honoring the memory of Richard Lancelyn Green, was the published by The Quartering Press (a joint venture by The Baker Street Irregulars and The Sherlock Holmes Society of London) (Aug 07 #4). It was a splendid tribute, and copies found discovered in the BSI's warehouse are now available for $15.00 (half-price) plus shipping from the BSI; goto the BSI web <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>; click on [items for sale] and then on [deal table]. Also available at the web-site is the lapel pin designed by Maggie Schpak for the "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" conference at UCLA last September ($15.00).
111. The script for Dhanil Ali's new play "The Curse of Sherlock Holmes" (Feb 13 #1) has been published (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 106 pp., £7.99/£8.99/ $10.95); it's an imaginative presentation of Jeremy Brett hospitalized and unable to distinguish between fiction and reality <www.mxpublishing.com>.

112. Richard Briers died on Feb. 17. He had a long career as an actor on stage, screen, radio, and television, appearing as Hector MacDonald in 23 episodes of the BBC television series "Monarch of the Glen" (2000-2005), and on BBC Radio 4 in 11 episodes of "Two Pipe Problems" (2007-2012) as retired actor (and self-styled Sherlock Holmes) William Parnes.
113. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London continues to offer interesting events <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/events.php>, including cricket matches on May 4 and June 23, and a running of the Silver Blaze Wessex Cup on June 18.
114. Aziz Bin Adam has discovered A. J. Low's SHERLOCK SAM AND THE MISSING HEIRLOOM IN KATONG (Singapore: Epigram Books, 2012; 105 pp., $510.59); Sherlock Sam is Singapore's greatest kid detective, assisted by a robot Watson, and there's a second volume SHERLOCK SAM AND THE GHOSTLY MOANS IN FORT CANNING. Sherlock Sam has a blog at <www.sherlocksam.wordpress.com>.
116. The Chorley Little Theatre will present a new dramatization of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES by Mark Jones, June 17-22. Dole Lane, Chorley, Lancs. PR7 2RL, England (01257-264362) <www.chorleylittletheatre.com>.
117. Sabina Carpenter and John Quincannon, private detectives in San Francisco in the 1890s, are the protagonists in short stories and novels written by Marcia Muller and Bill Pronzini; their latest is THE BUGHOUSE AFFAIR (New York: Forge/Tom Doherty, 2013; 269 pp., $24.99), which offers lots of local color and an imaginative appearance by a rival detective who claims to be Sherlock Holmes.
118. Thanks to Tom Drucker for a copy of Lisa Berglund's interesting article "'I Am Lost Without My Boswell': Samuel Johnson and Sherlock Holmes" in The Age of Johnson: A Scholarly Annual (Dec. 2012); the article's not available online, and the journal is published by AMS Press, Brooklyn Navy Yard, Bldg 292 #417, 63 Flushing Avenue, Brooklyn, NY 11205.

119. Mar 13 #3: The next annual STUD-Watsonian Weekend will be held in and near Chicago on Oct.25-27, with a dinner, the 54th annual running of The Silver Blaze, and a Fortescue Honours brunch. Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106) <szdiamond@comcast.net> will be happy to send you a reservation form.
120. "You are in for an absolute stonker!" Benedict Cumberbatch said after the read-through for the first program in the new series of "Sherlock" for the BBC (there's more than one meaning for "stonker" according to the on-line Urban Dictionary); filming on the new series began on Mar. 18. And there's some additional news: Cumberbatch has said that he and Martin Freeman have signed to make a fourth series, and that he'd love to do a fifth series.
121. "Lego Sherlock Holmes Outed in Lego City: Undercover?" was the headline on a report from NowGamer on Mar. 14 that suggested that "Lego Sherlock Holmes could be the next licensed Lego game coming from Travellers Tales, according to teasers in Lego City: Undercover." And now for some explanation: "Lego City: Undercover" is a new action-adventure video game designed for the Wii U video-game console from Nintendo. NowGamer's Alex Evans spotted Lego's (Sherlockian) Detective (Sep 11 #4) on a billboard in the background of a scene in the new game, and asked Nintendo if a Sherlock Holmes game would be coming next; Nintendo declined to comment. You can read the full story (and see a better screenshot) of the billboard) at <www.tinyurl.com/a3rsgwp>.
122. Don Libey, author of THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Sep 12 #5) and Don and Joanne Yates have launched an imaginative enterprise: 221B Cellars, which each year will offer bottles of limited first edition wines. Their web-site at <www.221bcellars.com> is well worth exploring, and there's an essay contest offering the winner a bottle of the 2103 vintage.
123. Don Libey also is a bookseller, and is offering items from Don Yates' Sherlockian collection at <<http://www.tinyurl.com/a2m28o3>>.
124. Credit Philip J. Atwell for the discovery that some of the Moriarty's were good guys, including C. C. H. Moriarty, author of POLICE LAW: ARRANGEMENT OF LAW AND REGULATIONS FOR THE USE OF POLICE OFFICERS (1929), written, according to the author, "with the view of assisting police officers in attaining a working knowledge of the law that they have to enforce." Cecil Charles Hudson Moriarty distinguished himself at Trinity College in Dublin, and joined the Royal Irish Constabulary in 1902, advancing to the rank of Chief Constable in 1935; he retired in 1941 and died in 1958, and his book went through 24 editions, the latest published in 1981.
125. Rex Stout is famous for creating Nero Wolfe (who many Sherlockians like to believe is the son of Sherlock Holmes), but Stout was an excellent writer before Nero Wolfe; some of Stout's earlier stories have been reprinted as e-books by Otto Penzler's Mysterious Press <www.mysteriouspress.com>, and they're well worth a look. The same is true of the Mysterious Bookshop's monthly newsletter, which always offers Sherlockiana; you can sign up for the newsletter at <www.mysteriousbookshop.com>.

126. Mar 13 #4: You now have a chance to buy Baskerville Hall (one of them, at any rate): Baskerville Hall (formerly Clyro Court) near Hay-on-Wye is available for an asking price of £3 million, according to a story at Wales Online <www.tinyurl.com/c75benv>. The mansion (presently used as a hotel) has nine bedroom suites, five principal reception rooms, and much more; the agents are Russell Baldwin & Bright, and there's a detailed description, with many photographs, at <www.tinyurl.com/d6v84bu>. The Baskerville family lived there from 1839 to 1945, and the owners have said for many years that Conan Doyle visited the family often, finding inspiration there for his story (the family asked Conan Doyle to change the setting so that they wouldn't be overrun by tourists).
127. Ben Langley's comedy "Ha Ha Holmes! The Beast of the Blistervilles" (Mar 11 #1) has been retitled "Ha Ha! Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" and will tour in Britain beginning Sept. 14; details at <www.hahaholmes.com>. Thanks to Oscar Ross for the report.
128. SHERLOCK HOLMES: HIS GREATEST CASES (London, White's Books, 2009; 501 pp., £19.95) is an attractive collection, with "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and Conan Doyle's selection of "the twelve best Sherlock Holmes stories," an afterword by Andrew Lycett, and a handsome binding illustrated by Michael Kirkham.
129. A new edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES in two volumes from Barnes & Noble (2012, $6.98 per volume) has introductions and afterwords (different in each volume) and annotations by Christopher and Barbara Roden.
130. "The Ghost of Sherlock Holmes" is 28-page PDF file offered by magician Paul Voodini at <www.readerofminds.co.uk> for £5.00; described as "a compendium of Sherlock Holmes-inspired bizarre and story-telling magic utilizing playing cards, pendulums, and other common objects," the booklet includes both patter and instructions on how to do the magic.
131. After 17 episodes, the CBS-TV series "Elementary" is averaging 11.02 million viewers, with a rating of 2.35 in the important age 18-49 demo, beating all the other programs in its Thursday-evening time slot.
132. The Huntsville-Madison County Library in Huntsville, Ala., has chosen THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES for its month-long "community read" in April, with book discussions, film screenings, and imaginative events for adults, teens, and children and family. Their web-site <www.guides.hmpl.org/cr13> offers an overview of what they have planned.

133. Frank Thornton died on Mar. 16. He had a long career on stage and in films and television, and was best known as Captain Peacock in the television series "Are You Being Served?" (1972-1985); he also played the one-armed doorman at the Diogenes Club in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970).
134. The Popular Culture Association met in Washington this month, and the program included a session on "Sherlock" with papers by Rebecca McLaughlin ("A Study in Sherlock"), Nancy Steffen-Fluhr ("The Semiotics of Desire: Billy Wilder as Sherlock Holmes"), and Rachele Hansen ("Sherlock Holmes"). More anon, if someone reports on the session.

135. Mar 13 #5: And there's more news about the BBC series "Sherlock": Mark Gatiss has revealed the title of the opening episode of the third season. Fans of the series will recall that the second season ended with "The Reichenbach Fall" and the next season will begin with a delightful and thoroughly appropriate pun: "The Empty Hears".
136. John Aidiniantz, who founded the Sherlock Holmes Museum in Baker Street in 1990, is the target of a lawsuit brought by his mother Grace Riley and her daughter Jennifer Decoteau over who is entitled to almost £2 million in admission fees collected in the last two years; the High Court has issued an injunction freezing his assets, including £535,000 that he kept in a safe in his home. The case is scheduled to be heard in May. According to a report in The Times (Feb. 28), when the women found last October that only 22p remained in the Museum's bank account, Mrs. Riley withdrew £175,000 from the bank account of Rollerteam Limited (an Aidiniantz company that deals in the "operation of arts facilities"), and her assets also have been frozen.
137. Morpheus Graffiti will present "The Revenge of Sherlock Holmes" (Leslie Bricusse's revision of his "Sherlock Holmes: the Musical") at Hoxton Hall from Apr. 10 to May 10. 130 Hoxton Street, London, N1 6SH, England (020-7684-0060) <www.hoxtonhall.co.uk>.
138. Jan Read died on Nov. 29, 2012. He began his career as a scriptwriter in 1949, and is best known for helping create the character of Dixon of Dock Green, who was featured in a BBC television series that ran for more than twenty years; he also wrote the scripts for Peter Cushing's "The Man with the Twisted Lip" and "The Retired Colourman" (1965).
139. The Royal Family visited the Baker Street Station this month, celebrating the 150th anniversary of the London Underground, and they were welcomed by Sherlock Holmes (or someone dressed like him), as you can see (briefly) in video posted by the Times of Malta (Mar. 20) <www.tinyurl.com/c9cmdv3>.
140. Al and Julie Rosenblatt have just discovered on the Gotham Radio Theatre, a bit too late for their production of "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Speckled Band" this month. Their web-site <www.gothamradiotheatre> is well worth exploring: click on "Sherlock Holmes!" for information on a previous Sherlockian production ("Redheads and Bohemians"), and on "More" and then on "Podcasts" to hear their podcast of the earlier show.
141. Does anyone know if Julian Wolff's many interests included Lewis Carroll? I've been asked about a bookplate that apparently has Julian's signature, with artwork and verse from "The Walrus and the Carpenter".
142. Ken Ludwig's comedy-mystery-thriller "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" had its world premiere in Cleveland in November 2011, winning an Edgar (best play) from the Mystery Writers of America, and it now has its second production, at the Asolo Repertory Theatre; it opened on Mar. 27 and runs through May 12. It's a new (and much better) version of his earlier play "Postmortem" (about a murder at William Gillette's home in Hadlyme), and highly recommended. 555 North Tamiami Train, Sarasota, FL 34243 (941-351-8000) <www.asolorep.org>. There's a preview of the play in the Sarasota Herald-Tribune (Mar. 23) at <www.tinyurl.com/cy9yswk>.

143. Mar 13 #6: Mark Catley's new play "Sherlock Holmes: The Best Kept Secret" will have its premiere at the West Yorkshire Playhouse on May 18 through June 8 (Mycroft is arrested for treason, and Holmes, assisted by Watson and Irene Adler, must save Mycroft's life); Playhouse Square, Quarry Hill, Leeds LS2 7UP, England (0113-213-7700) <www.wyp.org.uk>. After the premiere the play will tour to Woking, Cardiff, and Manchester.
144. Brian W. Pugh's A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (May 09 #5) was a valuable resource for those interested in Conan Doyle's life and work, and a new revised and expanded edition (London: MX Publishing, 2012; 267 pp., £14.99/£16.99/$22.95) is even more valuable, with a detailed index, citations of sources, excellent illustrations, and an impressive list of the many statues and plaques that honor Conan Doyle, his daughter Jean, Holmes, and Watson in Britain, the U.S., Australia, Japan, France, Italy, Russia, and Switzerland <www.mxpublishing.co.uk> <www.mxpublishing.com>.
145. Also from MX Publishing: Charlotte Anne Walter's 56 SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES IN 56 DAYS (2012; 184 pp., £9.99); the author of BAREFOOT ON BAKER STREET (2011) has collected her blogs about the short stories, and has added comments on the long stories, and has made some interesting choices in rating the stories for best and worst. Kevin McMullen's THE MANY WATSONS (2012; 149 pp., £7.99) is a collection of 53 essays about actors who have played Watson on stage, screen, radio, television, and YouTube; some of them male and some female, some major and some minor, but all offering a nice reminder of the different ways in which Watson has been portrayed. Luke Benjamin Kuhns' SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE CASE OF THE CRYSTAL BLUE BOTTLE (2012, 38 pp., £6.99) is a graphic novel, with illustrations and artwork from a dozen Internet contributors.
146. And: THE LOST STORIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Tony Reynolds (2012; 210 pp., £9.99); the first edition was published in 2010 with eight pastiches, and this second edition includes one additional story. THE ART OF DEDUCTION: A SHERLOCK HOLMES COLLECTION, edited by Hannah Rogers (2013; 176 pp., £9.99), is a collection of vignettes, artwork, and poems. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TEXAS ADVENTURE, by Dicky Neely (2012; 110 pp., £6.99), brings Holmes and Watson to Texas, via Portsmouth, New Orleans, and Corpus Christi, and lets them play cowboy. SHERLOCK HOLMES: HAVE YOURSELF A CHAOTIC LITTLE CHRISTMAS, by Gwendolyn Frame (2012; 125 pp., £6.99); a collection of Christmas advent-calendar vignettes.
147. "Devotees of Sherlock Holmes are a famously obsessive bunch," according to Jennifer Schuessler, in her follow-up story in the N.Y. Times on the lawsuit Les Klinger filed against the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate (Feb 13 #6). You can read the new story at <www.tinyurl.com/aoubs3t>.
148. eBay can be addictive, especially since it operates in more than 30 countries. If you can't find what you're looking for at <www.ebay.com>, there also are <www.ebay.co.uk>, <www.ebay.fr>, <www.ebay.dk>, <www.ebay.de>, and many more. Thanks to Walt Colby of The Baker Street Breakfast Club for the reminder about how wide-spread eBay is.

149. Apr 13 #1: Boris Berezovsky died on Mar. 23. A Russian tycoon who became wealthy during the privatization of Soviet assets during the 1990s, and was one of the "political oligarchs" who picked Vladimir Putin as the head of the Russian state; Berezovsky then fell out with Putin, fled to London, sought political asylum, and then aligned himself with other critics of Putin. Nikita Khrushchev's son Sergei once said that Berezovsky was "the Professor Moriarty of the 21st Century" (Feb 00 #2). The police consider his death to be "unexplained," and have launched an investigation.
150. "He had a remarkable gentleness and courtesy in his dealings with women," Watson wrote of Holmes (in "The Dying Detective"). Of course that's only one side of the coin: Watson continued with "He disliked and distrusted the sex." And then Watson went on to write that Holmes "was always a chivalrous opponent." So much contradiction in two sentences.
151. Tina Rhea has spotted some interesting "wallpaper": a montage of 30 people who have portrayed Sherlock Holmes (with pop-up identifications) created by Mark C. Robinson, at <www.tinyurl.com/d8xu4ma>. Similar wallpaper with 30 Watsons will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/ctoka4k>.

152. The Geographic Names Information System maintained by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names now contains entries for more than 2 million features in the U.S., 37 of them named Sherlock (or variants thereof). The data base also shows 11 features named Sherlock in other countries, and you can search for Sherlock (or any other name) at <www.tinyurl.com/d6nvf6p>.
153. If you're planning a trip to Hungary: there's now a Sherlockian society in Budapest. Zsófia Marinczák <zmarinczak@gmail.com> is the contact for the Hungarian Sherlock Holmes Club.
154. There has been plenty of news for television fans. The "Elementary" series has been renewed by CBS (not surprising considering how well it has done in the ratings). And Martin Freeman's long-time partner Amanda Abbington will be in the first episode of the new season of "Sherlock" in a role that will "significantly impact" the lives of Watson and Holmes, which has triggered a flood of suggestions that she will play Mary Morstan, which seems to be quite likely, since it has been revealed that the title of the second episode in the season will be "The Sign of Three".
155. Sarawen Perfume Art sells a set of four "Sherlock Holmes Inspired Perfumes" ($48.50 for all four in 5-ml bottles); the names of the scents are "Logical Delusion", "Logical Deduction", "Scandal in London", and "Tea with Watson", and their web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/cdgct8t> has an artistic photograph of the bottles.
156. Conan Doyle knew Eugen Sandow and Harry Houdini, and is mentioned in John F. Kasson's HOUDINI, TARZAN, AND THE PERFECT MAN: THE WHITE MALE BODY AND THE CHALLENGE OF MODERNITY IN AMERICA (New York: Hill and Wang, 2001; 286 pp., $18.00); Sandow was "the perfect man" (and an inspiration for Angelo Siciliano, who is better known as Charles Atlas), and Kasson offers an interesting exploration of turn-of-the-century sociology.
157. Apr 13 #2: Reported by Andrew Malec: PETER CUSHING: THE COMPLETE MEMOIRS (London: Titan, 2013; 424 pp., £19.99); a reprint of his memoirs (AN AUTOBIOGRAPY and PAST FORGETTING) with extensive new material from his private collection (there's an American edition due from Signum). And: PETER CUSHING: A LIFE IN FILM, by David Miller (London: Titan, 2013; 1,928 pp., £18.99); with previously unpublished correspondence and new interviews with Cushing's friends and colleagues. Cushing has portrayed both Sherlock (on screen and in television) and Conan Doyle (in television).
158. Tina Rhea has reported some spectacular color photographs of jellyfish published by The Guardian (Feb. 26) at <www.tinyurl.com/a8e2s7m>; half of them are lion's manes.
159. Forecast by Roger Johnson: FORGOTTEN STARS, by Jonathan Croall (from Fantom Films in June, £16.99); a biography of his father John Stuart, who played Sir Henry Baskerville in Robert Rendell's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1932). Fantom also sells a recording of PATRICK TROUGHTON: THE BIOGRAPHY, by Michael Troughton (£17.99); about his father, who played the second Doctor Who, and Mortimer Tregennis in Douglas Wilmer's "The Devil's Foot" for the BBC-1 (1965).
160. Roger edits The District Messenger, a newsletter that was launched in 1982 as the "grapevine service" of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London; it's available free via e-mail <rojerjohnson@yahoo.co.uk>, and all of the back issues are archived at <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/district.php>. It's an excellent round-up of what's going on in the Sherlockian and Doylean world in Britain and elsewhere.
161. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times13-4.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, limited quantities of old Sherlockian lapel pins, and a link to color photographs of Denny Dobry's spectacular full-scale reproduction of the sitting-room at 221b Baker Street.
162. Frank Mentzel has reported Adagio Teas at <www.adagio.com>, where you can search for [sherlock] and find a wide range of teas (including one called "Moriartea") inspired by the BBC "Sherlock" series.
163. "Sometimes I wake up and think, I want to look like Sherlock Holmes today," British cover girl Edie Campbell told Vogue (Mar. 27), "and other times I want to look like a witch from Macbeth." Alas, no pictures are available showing just how she's inspired by Baker Street or Scotland.
164. Noted by Marsha Pollak: Simon Rich's pastiche "The Adventure of the Spotted Tie", in his collection THE LAST GIRLFRIEND ON EARTH (New York: Reagan Arthur Books, 2013; 224 pp., $19.99).
165. W. P. Lawler's MYSTERY AT ST. ANDREWS (2012; 241 pp., $14.95 postpaid) is a pastiche written by a golf enthusiast for golf enthusiasts; Watson visits St. Andrews and plays a lot of golf (there's a glossary by way of assistance for ordinary folk) and with Holmes and Irene Adler becomes involved in a battle against evil-doers. Available from the author: Bill Lawler, 208 Hilltop Drive, West Wyoming, PA 18644 <rankambill@comcast.net>.
166. Apr 13 #3: Basil Copper died on Apr. 4. He was a writer, journalist, and editor, and had a long relationship with August Derleth's Arkham House. Copper was the author of many macabre stories and novels, and mysteries, and extended the world of Derleth's Solar Pons, editing (and revising) THE SOLAR PONS OMNIBUS (1982) and writing his own series of stories about Solar Pons.
167. Catherine Cooke has discovered a new "Sherlock" (a centralized knowledge management system launched last year by the National Health Service's Business Services Authority). The new system has won an award from the Customer Contact Association, and you can read about "Sherlock" at <www.tinyurl.com/d5j96ha>; extra points to anyone who can figure out just how it works.
168. The manuscript of Conan Doyle's poem "Ypres" at auction at Bonhams in London on Apr. 10, and estimated at £1,500-2,000 (Mar 13 #1), sold for £5,250 (including the buyer's premium). Randall Stock has more detailed information about the manuscript, and its history, at his "Best of Sherlock" website at <www.bestofsherlock.com/ref/200603bonhams.htm>.
169. Hugh Ashton's TALES FROM THE DEED BOX OF JOHN H. WATSON MD (Torrance: Inkbeans Press, 2012; 140 pp., $8.99) offers three pastiches, two of them inspired by the Unrecorded Cases. Information on Ashton, and on other Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian titles, is at <www.tinyurl.com/cb63453>.
170. It has been quite a while since we have seen a Sherlockian story for children, David Ruffle's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MISSING SNOWMAN fills the bill nicely; it's a sentimental story with charming illustrations by Rikey Austin (London: MX Publishing, 2012; 32 pp., £6.99/£7.99/$9.95). The publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.co.uk> and <www.mxpublishing.com>.
171. Also from MX Publishing: THE DETECTIVE, THE WOMAN, AND THE WINKING TREE, by Amy Thomas (2013; 197 pp., £9.99), is a sequel to her THE DETECTIVE AND THE WOMAN (Apr 12 #7) and has Holmes and Watson paying a visit to Irene Adler in Fulworth, and the three of them solving a complicated local murder mystery. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE BULGARIAN CODEX, by Tim Symonds (2012; 168 pp., £7.99); Holmes and Watson on a scenic journey to Sofia, with lots of local color and with a grotesque mystery to solve. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND YOUNG WINSTON: THE JUBILEE PLOT, by Mike Hogan (2013; 243 pp., £9.99), has Holmes and Watson, assisted by twelve-year-old Winston Churchill, foiling a fiendish (and complicated) plot during Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee; the web-site is at <www.mikehoganbooks.co.uk>.
172. And: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE EDINBURGH HAUNTING, by David Wilson (2012; 210 pp., £9.99), has Holmes and Watson solving a mystery in Edinburgh, where Watson's cousin has invited them so that they can meet Dr. Joseph Bell, who wants to meet the man who is using Bell's methods (Holmes, of course, wants to meet the man who is using Holmes' methods in the practice of medicine); their meeting is unfortunately brief, but nicely done. THE 1895 MURDER, by Dan Andriacco (2012; 227 pp., £9.99), is the third in his series about Jeff Cody and Sebastian McCabe, and

173. Apr 13 #4: LAURIE R. KING'S SHERLOCK HOLMES (2013; 213 pp.) is a welcome collection of eight essays and introductions, all of them previously published, but not necessarily in easily accessible sources; $2.99 as an e-book, $9.95 at stores with print-on-demand Espresso Book Machines, and signed copies are available from Bookshop Santa Cruz. Details at her web-site at <www.laurierking.com>.
174. "Benefit Presents the Curious Case" is the title of a Sherlockian 2-minute video promotion uploaded to YouTube on Feb. 11 <www.tinyurl.com/c6w7tv2>. The Chinese version was uploaded on Mar. 11 <www.tinyurl.com/cuzebek>.
175. BOBBY BASKERVILLE SOLVES A CASE, by Richard L. Kellogg, illustrated by Gary Kato (Fort Collins: Airship 27, 2013; 28 pp., $9.99), is another fine book for young readers, with an interesting story and attractive artwork. Bobby (needless to say) wants to be a detective, and (of course) succeeds.
176. The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has Chris Redmond's discussion of the Canonical and other aspects of THE PARASITE, Donny Zaldin's exploration of the "dancing men" cipher (the Collection now owns young John Gilbert Cubitt's album, which offered inspiration for the cipher), and much more new from and about the Collection; copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
177. The Promethean Theatre Ensemble will perform "A Study in Scarlet" from May 3 to June 1. Athenaeum Theatre, 2936 North Southport Avenue, Chicago, IL 60647 (773-935-6860) <www.prometheantheatre.org>; it's a new dramatization by Paul Edwards.
178. Novel Poster offers interesting "book posters", one of them being a framed silhouette of Sherlock Holmes composed of the entire text of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" ($40.00) <www.tinyurl.com/bva4znm>.
179. The John H. Watson Society, which "seeks a level of equality in scholarship and enthusiasm for the life and work of John H. Watson, M.D.," will publish a scholarly journal "The Watsonian" twice a year; the society's web-site at <www.johnhwatsonociety.com> has information on dues and such. Don Yates is the founding chairman <info@johnhwatsonociety.com> (the web-site notes that "it's always 1895; there are no telephones yet," and they'll welcome submissions for the journal).
180. Philip K. Jones' data-base for Sherlockian pastiches, parodies, and related fiction now has more than 10,000 entries; it's available at Miguel Herrero Baena's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.es/database.php> and Christopher and Barbara Roden's web-site <www.ash-tree.bc.ca/Sherlock.htm>.
181. MC Black reports that the "Sherlock Holmes: Past and Present" conference at the University of London on June 21-22 (Feb 12 #3) now has its own web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/czy3ft9>. And his Detective Walks is offering a guided walk during the evening of June 20 to places mentioned in the Canon and of importance in Conan Doyle's life; more information is available on request from MC at <mc.black@hardknott.org>.

182. Apr 13 #5: The Croydon Advertiser reported (Apr. 15) that plans have been submitted to Croydon Council to turn Conan Doyle's former home in Norwood into a 12-bedroom apartment building. The building, which was described (Mar 13 #1) as an "absolute horror of a tip," divided into "celllike one-room bedsits in a disgusting condition," did not sell when bidding reached £725,000 at auction earlier this year, and it's now on the market with an asking price of £750,000. Some locals, as might be expected, want the house to be restored to a one-family home; according to a British realty web-site, one-bedroom apartments on Tennison Road are available priced from £162,995 to £164,950 (multiply by 12 to see what a 12-apartment building might be worth). A five-bedroom semi-detached house on Tennison Road is available for £379,950.
183. The Illustrious Clients News reports that two Sherlockian rooms, created by Laverne Sullivan, are being showcased at the Museum of Miniature Houses in Carmel, Ind.; go to <www.museumofminiatures.org/exhibits.html> and scroll down to find links to photographs of Holmes sitting-room and bedroom.
184. Stephanie Osborn reports that 221bCon ("a con for all things Sherlockian") in Atlanta on Apr. 13-14 (Jan 13 #4) was thoroughly successful: they filled the convention hotel and alternate hotels, and wound up with about 1,000 on hand; their web-site's at <www.221bcon.com>. There's an article about the convention at <www.tinyurl.com/c6l3zwwj>. Brad Keefauver also was on hand for the festivities, and blogged about it several times at Sherlock Peoria <www.sherlockpeoria.blogspot.com>; check April, and look for the 221B Con entries.
185. One of the interesting items owned by the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library is the diary kept by Conan Doyle's wife Jean on their trip to Canada in 1914. And thanks to the wonders of modern technology you don't need to travel to Toronto to read the diary, which has been scanned and is available at <www.tinyurl.com/bn7x4x2>. There's a sliding bar at the top that allows you to navigate from page to page, image notes you can click on for more information, and a button at the top that brings up a transcript of each page. It's a fine example of what libraries can do to display material on the Internet.
186. The Royal Mail's set of stamps honoring Eminent Britains that was issued in 2009 included Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and this month's set honoring Great Britons includes Peter Cushing (who was born in 1913). He played Sherlock Holmes three times, in the film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), in a BBC television series (1968), and in the television film "The Masks of Death" (1984); he was scheduled to play Holmes for the fourth time, in a sequel ("The Abbot's Cry"), but he retired in 1987, explaining that it was time to "nail my toupee to the wall." Cushing also played Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the television film "The Great Houdinis" (1976).
187. ENCOUNTERS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by George Mann (London: Titan Books, 2013; 352 pp., $14.95), is an imaginative anthology of pastiches by authors from the worlds of steampunk, fantasy, and science fiction; the stories involve notables such as Sir Richard Burton and Raffles, Mrs. Hudson as a detective, and a Martian.
188. Apr 13 #6: OSCAR WILDE AND THE MURDERS AT READING GAOL, by Gyles Brandreth (New York: Touchstone, 2013; 327 pp., $18.00), is the sixth in his series about Wilde and Conan Doyle (who is mentioned only occasionally this time); the story is told by Wilde, who has been convicted and imprisoned, and solves a series of murders at Reading Gaol. It's a dark story, with a detailed view of how brutal prison life was in Britain at the end of the 19th century, and it's imaginative and well-written, with a surprising twist as a finale. The story ends the arc of Wilde's life, but there may be more books in the series: Brandreth has said that eventually "it's back to Oscar and Arthur. I think it has to be." And the next book will be well worth waiting for.
189. THE AYLESFORD SKULL, by James P. Blaylock (London: Titan Books, 2013; 425 pp., $14.95), is an entertaining adventure in which Arthur Conan Doyle is one of the supporting characters (on behalf of the good guys, of course); steampunk is a modern Victorian science-fiction genre generally set in alternative universes, and you'll find much more about steampunk projects at <www.steampunkholmes.com>.
190. "Sherlock Hemlock: World's Greatest Detective" is an interesting article by Ryan Dosier at the Mystery Scene web-site <www.tinyurl.com/dxafgan>. It's reprinted from Dosier's blog The Muppet Mindset ("the go-to blog for everything Muppet") <www.themuppetmindset.blogspot.com>, where there's lots more about Sherlock Hemlock, and other Muppets such as Baskerville the Hound and Spamela Hamderson.

191. Irving Kamil ("Monsieur Oscar Meunier, of Grenoble") died on Apr. 26. Irv wrote often for The Baker Street Journal and Baker Street Miscellanea, and was for many years one of the sparking plugs for Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers. Irv and Selma travelled widely over the years, creating ad hoc Sherlockian societies at the Great Wall of China, on the Amazon, and in Sicily, Thailand, New Zealand, Vietnam, Jordan, Antarctica, the Galapagos, and other exotic locales, and he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1981.
192. Andrew Lane, who has written five books in his YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES series, has turned his attention to Young Calum Challenger, who is the great grandson of Professor George Edward Challenger. LOST WORLDS (London: Macmillan, 2013; 357 pp., £5.99) is the story of an expedition into the Caucasus in search of a supposedly mythological creature in hopes that its DNA will be useful (and that it can be protected); the book's principal characters are mostly teenagers, occasionally in dire peril, and the story's well told.
193. THE BEST OF THE STRAND MAGAZINE, with an introduction by Andrew Roberts, is a digital book from Endeavour Press (£2.99/$3.99) that offers a fine essay on "The Story of the Strand" (the street rather than the magazine) and text (without illustrations) of a dozen articles and stories, including "Silver Blaze" and an article on "A Night in an Opium Den" that was published not long before Conan Doyle wrote "The Man with the Twisted Lip".

194. May 13 #1: The deadline for the trade-in offer for the new eBSJ v2 has been extended to June 15; the DVD has all issues of The Baker Street Journal through 2011 in PDF format, and is nicely done indeed. The price is $149.95, but there is a trade-in offer open to those who already have the old BSJ CD-ROM set (send in your old disk #4 and the price is only $49.95); more information is available at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/ebooks/ebsj.html>. Don't neglect the link to Randall Stock's helpful "Tips for using the eBSJ".
195. The Baker Street Irregulars are going to publish a biography of Bliss Austin, which will be written by Sonia Fetherston; readers of The Baker Street Journal will be familiar with her work, and she invites Sherlockians worldwide to share personal reminiscences of Bliss with her. Sonia's e-mail address is <soniafetherston@comcast.net>.
196. There's a lot to be found at YouTube, including an amusing French animation "Les Dalton contre Sherlock Holmes" ["The Daltons vs. Sherlock Holmes"], an episode from the series "Les Nouvelles Aventures de Lucky Luke" (broadcast on France 3 on Sept. 23, 2001 <www.tinyurl.com/cns42zx>).
197. Further to the report on the British stamp honoring Peter Cushing as one of the "Great Britons" (Apr 13 #5), the stamp is a composite: the portrait is a studio publicity photograph for "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), obtained from a commercial archive (not identified here because they wanted to be paid to let you see the photograph, and I ain't gonna give them publicity), with the background imagery showing the Baker Street address added for the stamp. Cushing doesn't wear such a hat in the film, but he can be seen wearing one in posters.
198. Nancy J. Parra's GLUTEN FOR PUNISHMENT (New York: Berkley, 2013; 304 pp., $7.99) is the first in her "Baker's Treat Mystery" series (a cozy mystery series set in a gluten-free bakery), apparently non-Sherlockian except for the nicely punned series title. Her web-site's at <www.nancyjparra.com>.
199. Ray Harryhausen died on May 7. His stop-motion photography was a staple of fantasy and science-fiction films for decades, in a career launched when at the age of four he saw Willis H. O'Brien's work in "The Lost World" (1925); "I always remember the dinosaur falling off the cliff," Harryhausen said in an interview in 2001. He also made some brief test footage at the end of the 1970s for a new version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" that was to star Peter Cushing.
200. Further to the review of Andrew Lane's LOST WORLDS (Apr 13 #6), there's a colorful web-page for the book at <www.panmacmillan.com/lostworlds> with attractive artwork, imaginative links, a game, and much more.
201. "You know a talk on a new book isn't going to go well when the crowd comes clutching a pile of your old DVDs," Anthony Horowitz told the Sunday Telegraph (Mar. 4, 2012), discussing what he described as a "recent disastrous Sherlock Holmes tour." Horowitz was touring to promote his pastiche novel THE HOUSE OF SILK, but his fans were more interested his television series "Foyle's War". Thanks to John Baesch for the report.

202. May 13 #2: The Exhibits Development Group has announced the world premiere of The International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes at the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland on Oct. 10. There's a website at <www.sherlockholmesexhibition.com> with a link to a press release on the exhibition, which will tour ten cities in North America before touring overseas. The forward schedule already also includes Columbus, Ohio; Dallas, Texas; and Santa Ana, Calif.
203. The Sub-Librarians Scion of The Baker Street Irregulars will hold a meeting in Chicago on June 30, from 4:30 to 5:30 pm, during the annual meeting of the American Library Association. Additional information is available from Marsha Pollak <mpollak@sunnyvale.ca.gov>.
204. BENEDICT CUMBERBATCH: BEHIND THE SCENES, by Neil Simpson, is a digital book from Endeavour Press (£1.99/$2.99) that includes discussion of his life and his career, including but not limited to his work in "Sherlock".
205. "What is your favorite book?" "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." From a Q&A interview in The Guardian (Apr. 19) with Carla Bruni-Sarkozy, formerly a model and a folk singer, and now the wife of former French president Nicolas Sarkozy. Thanks to Jim Ballinger for the report.
206. Further to reports on Conan Doyle's former home at 12 Tennyson Road in Norwood (Apr 13 #5), previously unsold at auction and then listed at £750,000 by the auctioneer (Barnett Ross), the property is now listed at their website as "sold after"; no word as yet as to plans for the house by the new (unidentified) owner. It's possible that the new owner is Revivit Walker, from Bromley, who asked Croydon Council to approve plans to turn the house into a 12-bedroom apartment building.
207. Two Sherlockian works have won Edgars from the Mystery Writers of America this year: James O'Brien's THE SCIENTIFIC SHERLOCK HOLMES (best critical/ biographical), and Steven Moffat's "Sherlock: A Scandal in Belgravia" (best TV episode teleplay).
208. The Sherlockian Calendar, maintained Ron Fish and Ben and Sue Vizoskie, has a new URL <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>; it's an excellent list of upcoming Sherlockian events, for anyone who would like to know what's happening when (and where); you can contact Ron at <ronf404@aol.com> if you would like to have a meeting or conference listed.
209. "Great Lives" is a 30-minute series broadcast by BBC Radio 4. On Apr. 30 host Matthew Parris talked with Gyles Brandreth and Andrew Lycett about Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and it's nice indeed that the BBC keeps the series up for listening at their web-site <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b01s4g7j>.
210. The Telegraph recently blogged about "Ten British TV Shows That Crossed the Pond," and one of them was "Coupling" (described as "the raunchy, semi-auto-biographical sitcom based on the writer Steven Moffat meeting his wife Sue Vertue"). When it was adapted for the American audience in 2003, the series "was deemed to be too sexually explicit" and was cancelled by NBC-TV with just four episodes broadcast. Moffat is better known now as the creator of the BBC-TV series "Sherlock", which is produced by Vertue.
211. May 13 #3: The seventh episode of "Mr. Selfridge" has now been seen in the U.K. and the U.S., with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (played by John Sessions) coming to the store for a book signing, and he was happy to sign THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES for Agnes Towler; it was a copy of the American edition, the "special limited edition" reprint (stated to be the fourth impression) published by Grosset & Dunlap. And yes, the book says it's the fourth impression. Then he inscribed for Rose Selfridge THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (apparently the British edition) and THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD (apparently the first British edition).

212. The series was inspired by Lindy Woodhead's biography SHOPPING, SEDUCTION & MR. SELFRIDGE, published in Britain in 2007 and now available as a reprint from Profile Books (£8.99) and Random House ($16.00). Conan Doyle is mentioned only in passing, as a friend of Sir Oliver Lodge (a fellow-spiritualist who was given his own reserved table in the store's Palm Court Restaurant).
213. A bit more about the third season of "Sherlock": according to a VH1 report (May 12), Benedict Cumberbatch has said that there's a possibility that the new programs will be broadcast simultaneously in the U.K. and the U.S., so viewers in the U.S. may not have to wait to see the new series.
214. Jonny Lee Miller's "Elementary" has ended its season on CBS (no discussion here of what happened, since it's still being broadcast in Britain). The series averaged 10.8 million viewers and was the most-watched new series, which certainly pleased the network: work already is underway on the second season, which will open with Holmes and Watson in London. The DVD set for the first season ($69.99 for the 24 episodes) is now available for pre-order ($48.99 at Amazon).
215. And Variety reported (Apr. 30) that CBS Interactive will produce an on-line series "Baker Street Irregulars" based on "Elementary" that's due this fall and follows "a motley crew of characters who assist the modern-day Sherlock in solving cases with their unique talents," to air on <www.cbs.com>, where you can already watch "Elementary" and play a "3 Truths and a Lie" game to "see if you have what it takes to keep up with Sherlock."
216. Don Hobbs bought the late Fred Levin's collection of foreign translations of the Canon, and is now offering some duplicates for sale. An illustrated sales list is available by e-mail from Don <221b@verizon.net>.
217. Martin Wallace is developing a computer game based on Neil Gaiman's Holmes/ Lovecraft pastiche "A Study in Emerald" (which won a Hugo award) for Treefrog Games <www.treefroggames.com>; there are links to the company's page at Facebook, and a two-minute video trailer for the game. And if you have wondered what his library looks like, go to <www.tinyurl.com/y8v15xw>.
218. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at the Spaghetti Warehouse in Pittsburgh on May 22, welcomed by members of The Fifth Northumberland Fusiliers, with the toasts including a birthday tribute to Arthur Conan Doyle. Our next dinners will be in Denver on Oct. 30, and in Houston on Apr. 9.
219. May 13 #4: The American edition of Guy Adams' SHERLOCK: THE CASEBOOK (Feb 13 #2) will be titled THE SHERLOCK FILES: THE OFFICIAL COMPANION TO THE HIT TELEVISION SERIES, due from It Books in July; it's a fully illustrated examination of the first six programs in the series, imaginatively written and with great humor, in the voice of Watson.
220. "London in 1927" is six minutes of nostalgic color footage uploaded to the Internet by Tim Sparke, and kindly reported by John Linsenmeyer, who notes that that was the year in which the last four Sherlock Holmes stories were published <www.vimeo.com/7638752?>.
221. The second Can-Am Silver Blaze event will be held on July 13-14 in Toronto. with a buffet luncheon and the race at Woodbine Racetrack, a special story meeting, and a breakfast and tour of Toronto; more information is available from Donny Zaldin (416-565-9555) <donaizaldin@rogers.com>.
222. I'd like to hear from anyone who subscribes to the N.Y. Review of Books and can supply a copy of Michael Dirda's "Not So Elementary, Watson" (May 9); the full text is hidden behind a paywall at the magazine's web-site.
223. Further to the item on the pair of metal plates displayed by Javier Doria during the birthday festivities in New York (Feb 13 #5), it turns out that there are three plates: one of the pair is reported to have been sold to a collector, and the other two were offered at auction in England this month, estimated at £30,000-£50,000 and £5,000-£10,000; they attracted no bids at all. Jon Lellenberg has written about all three of the plates at his Archival History web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/ajv9k6s>; anyone interested in purchasing the unsold plates can contact Richard Westwood-Brookes at Mullock's at <rchrwdstwdbrks8@googlemail.com>.
224. Scott Monty notes that Copper Beech Farm is available for purchase. It's not in Hampshire, but rather in Greenwich, Conn., and it's the most expensive property for sale in the U.S. (the asking price is $190 million). You can read a Wall Street Journal story (May 17) <www.tinyurl.com/ocfgh75> and see a slide show at <www.tinyurl.com/pdt47rn>; 50.5 acres and a 12-bedroom Victorian mansion that needs work. And there are lots of copper beeches.
225. You can add The Netherlands to the list of countries with active Sherlockian societies: The Baarn Baskervilles meet in Baarn, and Jan-Just Middel is their contact. Cornelis Helling founded and presided over The Crew of the S.S. "Friesland", which was active until he died in 1995. Willis Frick's Sherlocktron web-site <www.sherlocktron.com> offers just-updated lists of 901 Sherlockian societies (419 active and 482 inactive) with names and addresses of contacts for the active societies.
226. Willis also has revised his listings of Sherlockian purveyors and Sherlockian publications; new information and corrections can be reported to him at <sherlock1@cox.net>.
227. Dorothy Ramsey is offering an extensive collection of Sherlockian books and memorabilia, asking $1,500 for the entire collection. Anyone interested is invited to request an e-mail copy of her color-illustrated description; her address is <dorothyramsey@gmail.com>.
228. May 13 #5: Otto Penzler, proprietor of the Mysterious Bookshop, continues to publish a monthly Mysterious Bookshop Newsletter, always with a "Sherlock Holmes" section offering new, old, and rare books, pamphlets, and magazines, and of course other non-Sherlockian but interesting material; go to <www.mysteriousbookshop.com> and click on "Newsletter" to see the latest issue.
229. "Quote Investigator: Dedicated to Tracing Quotations" is a useful web-site maintained by Garson O'Toole <www.quoteinvestigator.com>; there's nothing by Conan Doyle, but the web-site has imaginative Sherlockian artwork.
230. There's lots of news from the world of the theater: Greg Kramer's new play "Sherlock Holmes" (starring Jay Baruchel as Holmes) opened in Montréal on May 5 (Apr 12 #5) and quickly sold out the entire run (including two additional performances).
231. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" opened at the Alley Theatre in Houston on May 24, and will run through June 23 <www.alleytheatre.org>. Dramatists Play Service (440 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 10016) (212-683-8960) <www.dramatists.com> has published the script ($8.00); the play premiered in Tucson (Mar 11 #4) and was nominated for an Edgar from the Mystery Writers of America.
232. "Magic! Mystery! Romance! Adventure! Fairies! A master detective in a ridiculous hat!" That's the description of a new play "Sherlock Holmes" performed by the Pantaloons Theater Company <www.thepantaloons.co.uk> on tour in England beginning at Burton Constable Hall in Hull on June 9.
233. It's not necessarily the farthest-flung Sherlockian theatrical performance, but the Silent Hands Creative Circle will present Ed Lange's play "Sherlock Holmes' Secret Life" at the Lionel Wendt in Colombo, Sri Lanka, June 14-16 <www.silent-hands.com/creative_circle.php>; the poster artwork shows a fine assortment of Sri Lankan actors in costume for the play. And the play also is scheduled at the Tillamook Theater in Tillamook, Ore., Aug. 30-Sept. 15. <www.tillamooktheater.com>
234. The Theatre at the Mill will present an outdoor version of "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" (in a new dramatization by Laura Turner) in Mossley Hill Civic Square in Newtownabbey (near Belfast) on July 4. Details at <www.theatreatthemill.com>.
235. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the fine parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) will be presented by Cut to the Chase at the Queen's Theatre in Hornchurch, East London, Oct. 16-Nov. 17 <www.queens-theatre.co.uk>.

236. C. P. Stancich's play "Sherlock Holmes and John Watson's Body" premiered in Lafayette, Colo., last year, and will be performed again at the Camino Real Playhouse, Oct. 18 through Nov. 3; 31176 El Camino Real, San Juan Capistrano, CA 92675 (949-489-8082) <www.caminoarealplayhouse.org>.
237. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (a new dramatization by David Pichette and R. Hamilton Wright) will have its world premiere at the Seattle Repertory Theatre, Nov. 15-Dec. 15 <www.seattlerep.org>.
238. May 13 #6: "Hammer Housing Estate of Horror" was the headline on a story from the Daily Mail (Apr. 27), at hand from Roger Johnson: the owner of Bray Studios in Berkshire has announced that the iconic location is no longer viable for movie-making and wants to build up to seven homes on the site. The "Hammer" is Hammer Films, and Bray Studios is where many of their films, including "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959) were made.
239. Department of What Might Have Been: Benedict Cumberbatch, in an interview with Amber M. Ray published in Metro New York (May 6), said that HBO wanted to air "Sherlock" but turned it down because there were only three episodes and "we do series."
240. Litographs <www.litographs.com> demonstrates the wonders of modern technology: literary T-shirts ($34.00) and posters ($29.00) offering artistic designs created from the text of books, including THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES. Kindly reported by Tina Rhea.
241. The spectacular edition of A STUDY IN SCARLET that was published by Hakon Holm in 2005 with the original text from Beeton's Christmas Annual and more than 600 striking illustrations by Danish artist Nis Jessen (Jul 05 #5) has been reissued (with 200 illustrations) as a printed book (€43.95) and in a Kindle edition (€29.99). But the only way to order it appears to be from Amazon in Germany <www.tinyurl.com/pa3fjpv> (there's no cost for shipping for a Kindle edition).
242. There was a Steampunk World's Fair in Piscataway, N.J., May 17-19, according to Steve and Linda Morris, with all sorts of events, including Professor Moriarty's Deadly Dinner (with four seatings) and a Bartitsu Workshop; go to <www.steampunkworldsfair.com> and search for [sherlock] and [doyle] and [moriarty]. Bartitsu (and Sherlock Holmes) also made the front page of the Wall Street Journal (May 24) <www.tinyurl.com/oxnvrwn>.
243. And there was discussion of bartitsu (and baritsu) in "Timeshift: Everybody Was Kung Fu Fighting: The Rise of Martial Arts in Britain" (a one-hour television program broadcast by BBC-4 on Feb. 24). Of particular interest was the voice-over statement that the first mention of baritsu in print was in The Times. Thanks to Catherine Cooke for tracking down an article on "Japanese Wrestling at the Tivoli" about an exhibition by instructors at "Mr. Barton-Wright's school of physical culture in Shaftesbury-avenue, where the 'baritsu' system of self-defence is taught," published Aug. 23, 1901 (much earlier than the appearance of "The Empty House" in The Strand Magazine in Oct. 1903).
245. Jun 13 #1: The Canadian one-hour series "Murdoch Mysteries" is now in its sixth season and is popular in Canada and Britain (but still not available in the U.S.); it's set in Toronto in the 1890s and stars Yannick Bisson as Inspector Murdoch. Geraint Wyn Davies appeared as Arthur Conan Doyle in two episodes in 2008 (Jan 09#1), and he returns in "A Study in Sherlock" (broadcast in Canada on Jan. 28); the program also features Andrew Gower as a man claiming that he is Sherlock Holmes.
246. A new Sherlock Holmes comic's due from Madefire, with an adaptation of "The Greek Interpreter" by Liam Sharp and Bill Sienkiewicz; you can see a sample of their artwork in full color at <www.tinyurl.com/lu3a8h7>; Madefire is a company that creates and markets "motion books" that are downloaded as apps for the iPhone and iPad.
247. Gary Lovisi notes that the 25th Anniversary Annual NYC Collectable Paperback & Pulp Fiction Expo will be held on Oct 13 at the Holiday Inn at 440 West 57th Street in New York. Go to <www.gryphonbooks.com> for details on authors who will attend, and on his Sherlockian and other books.
248. There was a bit of publicity in the British press about a Twitter exchange: "Sherlock" co-creator Mark Gatiss tweeted "Isn't Roger Moore wonderful in The Man Who Haunted Himself? I have such a soft spot for the film." Moore (who played Holmes in "Sherlock Holmes in New York") responded with "@Markgatiss thank you. I might be equally wonderful in Doctor Who or Sherlock if asked." And Gatiss tweeted "My life is complete! Will be in touch. My dad was once mistaken for you by two old ladies in Whitley Bay!" Fans were excited, with one tweeting "You mean Roger Moore playing Sherlock Holmes in a Doctor Who episode? Awesome idea."
249. Colin Dexter's amusing pastiche "A Case of Mis-Identity" (in which he offered an amusing analysis of the Canonical case that Holmes may or may not have solved correctly) was published in WINTER'S CRIMES 21 (1989) and reprinted in MORSE'S GREATEST MYSTERY AND OTHER STORIES (1993). Now Jennifer Reeve's story "A Case of Mis-Identity" has been published in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (Aug. 2013); it's an imaginative tribute to Dexter, sent to EQMM at his suggestion.
250. "Great Reverence at the Famous" is the title chosen by Scott Monty (who has a talent for finding appropriate Canonical quotes) for his blog about last month's birthdays of three legendary Sherlockian actors; you can read this entry in his Baker Street Blog at <www.tinyurl.com/ls9pu5a>.
251. A comment on the finale of "Elementary" on-line at the Stabley Times (May 21) from Jerry Miller, who knows much more about modern technology than I do: "Sherlock Holmes and Watson make a breakthrough in a case by deducing that a series of unrelated iPhone 5 units may be connected because they've been jailbroken in order to run the same homebrew app to communicate with Moriarty. And while it was a small aside in the plot, it marked the first time the word 'jailbreak' has been used on a mainstream TV drama in reference to the iPhone 5 hacking group." If you want to know more about this, you can read the story at <www.tinyurl.com/mb4efs2>.
252. Jun 13 #2: Bev Wolov discovered the Lavolta Press <www.lavoltapress.com>, which publishes books of historical clothing patterns. FASHIONS OF THE GILDED AGE, VOLUME 1 ($49.00) contains "160 authentic women's patterns for Victorian reenactment and theatrical costuming, suitable for Old West/Wild West; Oregon Trail; British-Zulu Wars; Victorian teas, dances, and weddings; Sherlock Holmes events; and productions of operettas by Gilbert & Sullivan and Johann Strauss II" ($49.00). And THE VOICE OF FASHION ($42.00) offers "79 patterns for women's styles from 1900 through 1906, suitable for Edwardian garden parties; teas and weddings; ragtime dances; historic house tours; Sherlock Holmes and steampunk events; and productions of plays by Chekhov and Shaw" ($42.00). And they have more titles for anyone interested in the Sherlockian era.
253. "Bloody Scotland" is Scotland's international crime-writing festival, and it's scheduled for Sept. 13-15 in Stirling. The program is available online at <www.bloodyscotland.com>; nothing Sherlockian or Doylean (so far).
254. Paul Jones had some predictions about possible plot twists in the next season of "Elementary" in the Radio Times (May 29), one of them that Jonny Lee Miller will swap roles with Benedict Cumberbatch: they've alternated roles before (in the National Theatre's play "Frankenstein"), and "Benedict Cumberbatch's detective will be taking over Miller's New York beat while he in turn joins forces with a very confused John Watson." You can read more of the predictions at <www.tinyurl.com/qbcxstm>.

255. Don Pollock has reported Redbubble <www.redbubble.com>, where you'll find all sort of artwork on T-shirts, iPhone cases, stickers, posters, and much more. A recent search turned up 3,501 hits for [sherlock holmes], 239 hits for [conan doyle], 201 hits for [irene adler], 50 hits for [baskervilles], and 3 hits for [scuttlebutt].
256. Olaf Maurer has reported that the Deutsche Sherlock-Holmes-Gesellschaft has launched a competition, in company with the Sherlock Holmes Museum in Meiringen and Haslital Tourism, offering an attractive prize to anyone who can solve all of the clues to the Canonical tales hidden on or associated with John Doubleday's life-sized statue of Sherlock Holmes at Meiringen. There is more information (in German) at <www.sherlock-gesellschaft.de>, and (in English) at <www.sherlock-holmes-gesellschaft.ch>. This isn't an easy competition: according to Olaf, the current record holder is Michael Meer, who has solved 54 of the 60 clues.
257. SHINee is a South Korean contemporary R&B boy group, and the lead single on their fourth EP is "Sherlock" (which was an instant success when it was released in 2012). It's at YouTube at <www.tinyurl.com/k8j9fts> along with other videos by the band. Thanks to Aziz Bin Adam and Les Klinger for reporting the song.
258. Jean Stapleton died on May 31. She had a long career as an actor on stage, screen, and television, and was best known for her role at Edith Bunker in the 1970s television series "All in the Family"; she also appeared as busybody investigator Miss Tweed in a production of the murder-mystery musical "Something's Afoot" that was broadcast by Showtime in 1984, singing "I owe it all to Agatha Christie and Arthur Conan Doyle."
259. Jun 13 #3: Noreen Malone reported in the New Republic (May 23) that Amazon keeps track of which passages Kindle readers have highlighted the most and #19 on the list is from THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: "I have no data yet. It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts." The most-highlighted book, of course, is THE HOLY BIBLE. You can consult the lists at <www.kindle.amazon.com/most\_popular>.
260. Neil Patrick Harris (perhaps best known for four seasons in the title role in the television series "Doogie Howser, M.D.") hosted the Tony Awards in New York this month and won high praise. The photograph shows him with his partner David Burka in costume at the themed mystery wedding of Becky Bailing and Kris Lythgoe on Apr. 27.
261. David Marcum has reported that THE PAPERS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, a collection of pastiches, one explaining the family connection between Holmes and Solar Pons (Nov 12 #4) has been reissued by MX Publishing in two volumes at $16.95 each.
262. Holmes and Watson in a new film (sort of): "Dom Hemingway" will star Jude Law as a safecracker known for his profane and dangerous ways, and Richard E. Grant as his partner Dickie. Jude Law plays Watson in the Warner Bros. "Sherlock Holmes" series, and Grant played Holmes in "Encounters: The Other Side" in 1992 (and Mycroft in "Sherlock" and Stapleton in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 2002). The film is due for release in 2014.
263. Scott Monty has reported that his Sherlock Holmes Social Network, which has been on-line since 2007, will be shutting down as of July 15 because of the increasing amount of spam and fake accounts <www.sherlockholmes.ning.com>. But there's an alternative: his Sherlock Holmes Community at Google+; all that's required is a Google account <www.bit.ly/SHCommunity>.
264. Tim Johnson, curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota, blogs from time to time, and more than occasionally on matters Sherlockian or Doyleans. He has perpetrated a Sherlockian pastiche for the "Three-Minute Fiction" competition was announced on "All Things Considered" on National Public Radio, and while he didn't win, you can his blog about the pastiche at <www.tinyurl.com/lp9nmq2>. He also has blogged with pleasure about a Doylean competition he did win <www.tinyurl.com/kqkxxwu>; it would appear he was the only competitor, but it's a grand story.
265. "Baker Street Irregulars: Hanging on for Dear Life" is a CD issued by Atomic Mouse Recordings in 2006 and available at <www.amazon.com> ($11.53); you can also purchase individual tracks on-line. The Baker Street Irregulars is described on Myspace as the "nom de guerre" of Brian McKnight's one-man; none of the tracks are Sherlockian but he explains the Sherlock Holmes has always been one of his heroes, and he was mesmerized when at the age of 12 he saw the HBO broadcast of Frank Langella in the Gillette play.
266. Jun 13 #4: The "Algonquin Round Table Mysteries" (a series of novels from J. J. Murphy) are set in the Algonquin Hotel in New York during the 1920s and feature Dorothy Parker, her fellow members of the Round Table, and others including William Faulkner in MURDER YOUR DARLINGS; Harry Houdini in YOU MIGHT AS WELL DIE; and Arthur Conan Doyle in A FRIENDLY GAME OF MURDER (New York: Penguin/Obsidian, 2013; 316 pp., $6.99); Murphy takes some liberties (but has fun) with the Algonquin as well as with its famous (and infamous) inhabitants <www.roundtablemysteries.com>.
267. Sonia Fetherson notes that Matt Laffey has reported that The Spectator has created an archive of issues from 1828 to 2008, searchable on-line without charge. The Spectator published many items of interest to Sherlockians and Doyleans; it's intriguing that a search for [sherlock holmes] produces 221 hits.
268. Admirers of "Sherlock" and admirers of "Elementary" argue (sometimes strenuously) about the merits of one series or the other; occasionally the argument is amusing, as with a post by Jack Moore to BuzzFeed last year. Obviously, CBS was not persuaded.
269. Andrew Lane, who turned his attention to the great grandson of Professor George Edward Challenger in LOST WORLD (Apr 13 #6), launched his earlier YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES series with DEATH CLOUD (Jun 10 #3); there are five titles in the series, the latest being FIRE STORM (London: Macmillan, 2011; 344 pp., £12.99/$17.99) and SNAKE BITE (London: Macmillan, 2012; 312 pp., same). Lane has said that he plans to continue the series, and there is an interesting web-site at <www.youngsherlock.com>.
270. The Sherlock Holmes Society of India (Mar 05 #5) now has an on-line journal Proceedings of the Pondicherry Lodge, with 60 pages and nicely done. There's a link at the society's homepage <www.sherlockholmessociety.in>.
271. "The Adventure of the Mysterious Safe" is the title of an imaginative project devised by Shannon Carlisle, an accelerated-learning elementary-school teacher in Nashville; she was this year's winning of The Beacon Society's Beacon Award, and you can read all about the project in a special edition of Joel and Carolyn Senter's Sherlockian E-Times <www.tinyurl.com/mv374q3>.
272. There's a north-of-the-border equivalent of the BBC America cable channel: BBC Canada (which is showing the CBS-TV series "Elementary"), and of course there's a BBC Canada Shop offering (among other things) a Sherlock Holmes Coaster Set (#16903) decorated with Sherlockian silhouettes, discounted to $19.99 <www.tinyurl.com/k52886f>; kindly reported by Jack Winn.
273. Shane Peacock's BECOMING HOLMES ends his series about Sherlock Holmes as a young man, and it has been nominated for an Arthur Ellis Award (best juvenile/ young adult) from the Crime Writers of Canada; the awards are imaginatively named after the "nom de travail" of Canada's official hangman. The author has a web-site at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.
274. Jun 13 #5: The Serpentine Muse continues to offer news from, about, and by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes; the summer issue has Evy Herzog's imaginative "Toast to Spring Cleaning" and Brad Keefauver's enthusiastic report on 221BCon in Atlanta; next year's convention will be held

- Apr. 4 to 6 <www.221bcon.com>. The Muse is Published quarterly, and costs $15.00 a year from Evelyn A. Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230).
275. "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" (a podcast created by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder) now has 53 episodes, the latest of them being a 61-minute program featuring an interview with Tom Francis, who chairs the Baker Street Irregulars Trust, which collects and archives primary material about the history of the BSI and its members. You can listen to or download the podcast at <www.ihearofsherlock.com>; earlier episodes also are available.
276. Gary Thaden has discovered just the thing for Sherlockian bathrooms: "No Shit Sherlock Lavatory Mist" sold by Blue Q ($11.99), with a light lemon and cedar scent and suitable "for crime scenes of all types and sizes"; their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/om9p8jl>.
277. Thomas Wheeler, the author of THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Nov 11 #8), has used Google Maps Engine to create an imaginative map of the London area with icons for some of the sites in his book; you can zoom in and out using the icons at the lower right, and navigate with your mouse. Ask him <londonsecrets@london.com> to share it with you.
278. Viator ("travel with an insider") offers various guided tours, including a "Sherlock Holmes Film Location Tour in London": the two-hour walking tour, which is led by a film-expert guide, visits film sites from "Murder by Decree" to "Sherlock" ($15.36) <www.tinyurl.com/mt385ch>.
279. AIDE-DE-CAMP TO CONAN DOYLE: THE BOER WAR DIARY OF CHARLES BLASSON, by Ken Cooper (London: Createspace, 2013; 64 pp., £6.99), is the diary of a young medical student who served as one of the dressers in the privately-funded Langman Field Hospital during the Boer War in South Africa, where he served under Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle and was for a time his secretary. Ken Cooper found the diary in his wife's family papers, and his annotated transcription offers a fascinating account of what the war was like for the British who fought in it, and a look at Conan Doyle himself.
280. MX Publishing has now sponsored four Great Sherlock Holmes Debates on the Internet since the first one was held on Nov. 10, 2011 (the latest was held on June 8 this year). Colorful slides from all four debates are available at <www.slideshare.net>, and recordings of the second and third can be seen at <www.youtube.com>; just search for [great sherlock holmes debate].
281. Scott Monty reports that his Sherlock Holmes Social Network will shut down in July, because of the growing number of spammers and the cost of keeping the site running; if you have content at the site you'd like to keep, you need to download it now, because the site will be deleted. But there's a substitute: the Sherlock Holmes Community <www.bit.ly/SHCommunity>.
282. Jun 13 #6: With regard to Les Klinger's lawsuit against the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate (Feb 13 #6), asking a federal court to rule that the characters of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John H. Watson are not protected by federal copyright laws, and that writers, filmmakers, and others can use the characters in new stories without paying any license fees to the owners of the remaining copyright on the stories, Les has posted a brief update at his web-site at <www.free-sherlock.com>: "The Arthur Conan Doyle Estate has failed to file a formal appearance or any other responsive pleading in the matter within the time granted to it. We are considering our next actions in the case and will keep you posted."
283. Scott Monty has a "Holmes on Facebook" link at the top of the opening page of his Baker Street Blog, where you can find a list (with links) and a form you can use to report additions <www.bakerstreetblog.com>. There seems to be no end to Sherlockian social networking.
284. The First Annual John H. Watson Society Treasure Hunt will be launched at noon on Aug. 1; details at the society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/lhrk8ob> (you don't need to be a member to participate).
285. The Book Depository offers lists of Top Heroes and Top Villains (as voted by customers) <www.tinyurl.com/lq7payx>, and of course Holmes and Moriarty are near the top of their lists; what's really interesting is whether you can identify all of the heroes and villains.
286. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times13-6.html>, offering Sherlockiana, old and new, and reports from society's near and far.
287. The Bay Area Sherlock Con, now in its second year, will be held on Aug. 17 at Santa Clara University in California <www.bayareasherlockcon.com>; it's a "fan-run celebration of Sherlock Holmes" and there's additional information at their Tumblr site <www.bayareasherlockcon.tumblr.com>.
288. Further to the report (May 13 #6) on the British television program "Timeshift: Everybody Was Kung Fu Fighting: The Rise of Martial Arts in Britain" that included discussion of bartitsu and baritsu, Aziz Bin Adam notes that it's available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=St0-JDpJAIQ>.
289. The new CD "Twisted Tales" (Chops not Chaps, $15.00) is a collaboration between the late rock keyboardist Ray Manzarek and blues slide guitarist Roy Rogers, and the lead track is a new song "Just Like Sherlock Holmes" (which you can sample or purchase as a download at <www.amazon.com>).
290. Ladbrokes opened a betting market on who will be the next Doctor Who (Matt Smith, the current Doctor, leaves the series at the end of this year), and the early front-runner (at 3/1) was Rory Kinnear (Bill Tanner, M's Chief of Staff, in the current "James Bond" films). But not far behind (at 6/1) was Benedict Cumberbatch (who of course is well known to Steven Moffat and Mark Gatiss (co-creators of both "Doctor Who" and "Sherlock"). When the odds on Kinnear dropped to 2/1, Ladbrokes suspended betting. Rory Kinnear's father was the late Roy Kinnear, who played Moriarty's assistant in "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975)

291. Jun 13 #7: "MAD" is a 15-minute animated series that airs on the Cartoon Network, and offers parodies similar to those in its namesake magazine, and on June 17 the program included an amusing 3-minute spoof of the CBS series "Elementary" (with Mary Poppins helping Watson and Gregson investigate the mysterious disappearance of Sherlock Holmes. You might be able to see the segment at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/msq9xkn>, if it's still there (if not, you can search for "Umbrellamentary").
292. More theater news: Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" opened at the Park Square Theater in St. Paul, Minn., on June 7 and will close on July 14 <www.parksquaretheater.org>; there's a 2-minute video trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/mf3olkn>.
293. Laura Turner's new outdoor version of "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" (May 13 #5), first performed by the Chapterhouse Theatre at Wentworth Castle Gardens in Barnesley, is now touring in Great Britain and Ireland. The full schedule's at <www.chapterhouse.org>.
294. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is being performed at the Hackmatack Playhouse in Berwick, Maine, through July 6 <www.hackmatack.org>. And at the Lakeview Arts Barn in Bobcaygeon, Ont., through July 6 <www.lakeviewartsbarn.com>. And it's being performed at the Seaside Repertory Theatre in Santa Rosa Beach, Fla., through Aug. 3 <www.seasidereptheatre.wordpress.com>. For those who want to plan far in advance, it has been scheduled by Theatre Works at the Mountainview Center for the Performing Arts in Palo Alto, Calif., on Apr. 2-27 <www.theatreworks.org>.
295. "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" (Steven Dietz's play) is being performed at the Pierson Playhouse in Pacific Palisades, Calif., through July 14 <www.theatrepalisades.org>. And at the Commonwealth Theatre in Lanesboro, Minn., through Oct. 28 <www.commonwealththeatre.org>.
296. Don't Go Into the Cellar <www.dontgointothecellar.com> is a Victorian theater company performing in Britain; click on "What's On" to find dates and venues for their tours of "The Singular Exploits of Sherlock Holmes" (from July 11), "Holmes Alone" (from Oct. 12), and "Ho Ho Holmes" (from Nov. 23).

297. Radio Spirits continues to offer a wide variety of old-time radio programs on CDs, some Sherlockian but most non-Sherlockian, and the company's catalogue and web-site are well worth inspection (3107 Wallingford, CT 06494) (800-833-4248) <www.radiospirits.com>. They also have a blog, and an archive of their own radio broadcasts.
298. Go to YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/nso9d4r> to hear 35 minutes of a longer recording of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" issued on a CD by Verglas Music (Feb 02 #6); words and music are by Clive Nolan and Oliver Wakeman, and the narrator is Robert Powell, who also plays Dr. Watson (Powell was Sherlock Holmes in the BBC radio broadcast of "A Study in Scarlet" in 1974, and on stage in a touring production of "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" in 1993).

299. THE LIGHTER SIDE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (London: MX Publishing, 2013, 289 pp., £18.99/€22.99/$29.95) offers an extensive look at the Sherlockian artwork of Norman Schatell; compiled by his son Glenn, the book is a splendid tribute to a truly imaginative artist whose artwork appeared in many Sherlockian publications and on envelopes of the letters he sent to his correspondents. You'll see for yourself why his friends waited impatiently for his letters, and miss receiving them now. There's also a trade paperback edition. "Let me recommend this book," as Sherlock Holmes once said.
300. EAST WIND COMING, by Yuichi Hirayama and John Hall (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 233 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95), is a welcome collection of their articles and essays first published in the Shoso-in Bulletin, the Baker Street Journal, and other Sherlockian periodicals, many of them offering interesting Japanese insights into the Canon.
301. Article IV of the Constitution of The Baker Street Irregulars states that the "duties of the Commissionaire shall be to telephone down for ice, White rock, and whatever else might be required and available." White Rock still is available for purchase, although Psyche (the company's symbol of purity since 1894) is rather more decorous now than she was when Elmer Davis wrote the Constitution. You can see a slide show at <www.whiterockbeverages.com> and (explore the section for Collectors) see video of Ernie Kovacs' brief encounter with Psyche.
302. CBS Consumer Products has announced that they have licensed Titan Publishing Group to create a series of original novels, that will be released in 2014. The novels will be new stories, tie-ins to the CBS television series "Elementary"
303. Wilfrid de Freitas has noted an interesting article in the London Evening Standard (June 6) <www.tinyurl.com/o6v6f5p> about Simon Wright, who was arrested for violating an Asbo [anti-social behaviour order] that banned him from begging in London. He has been earning £50,000 a year as a beggar and lives in a £300,000 flat in Fulham, happily following the example that was set by Neville St. Clair.
304. If you're considering a trip to India in August, the Sherlock Holmes Society of India is holding its annual meeting in Mumbai on Aug. 24-25; details at their web-site <www.sherlockholmessociety.in>.
305. The second annual Sherlock Seattle Convention will be held at the Broadway Performance Hall on Oct. 4-6; the guests of honor will be Laurie R. King, Les Klinger, and Lee Eric Shackleford, and there will be panels, cosplay, and other entertainment <www.sherlock-seattle.org>.
306. Alan Barnes' "Sherlock Holmes Suite" for jazz octet and narrator was first performed at the Appleby Festival in Cumbria in July 2002 and then issued as a two-CD set from Woodville Records (WVCD102); the CD set's still available at <www.amazon.co.uk>, and the tracks as downloads from Amazon in the U.K. and the U.S.. Barnes has a talent for swing, and pays tribute to Duke Ellington; you can listen to the music free at <www.tinyurl.com/o8ntrt4>.

307. Jul 13 #2: "A Curious Night at the Theatre" was a one-night fund-raising gala in aid of two charities (the National Autistic Society and Ambitious about Autism) at the Apollo Theatre in London on July 1, and the evening included an imaginative live-and-video sequel to the National Theatre production of "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time" (dramatized from the novel by Mark Haddon). Luke Treadaway again played Christopher Boone, whose regular game of Tetris was invaded by Doctor Who (Matt Smith), who sent Christopher on a mission to combat the evil Moriarty (Andrew Scott); needing help, Christopher turned to the Queen (Helen Mirren), who granted access to the computer wizardry of Q (Ben Whishaw). And if the names of the supporting actors are familiar, it's because they have played the same roles on screen and television; Jude Law also was in the play, not as Watson but rather as Christopher's supply teacher.
308. THE SAGE OF SANTA FE: THE ADVENTURES AND PUBLIC LIFE OF JOHN BENNETT SHAW, by Susan Rice and Vinnie Brosnan (Oceanside: Sherlock in L.A. Press, 2013), is a delightful and nicely illustrated 28-page tribute to a man who was admired by more than one generation of Sherlockians, and justly so; available for $7.00 postpaid from Vinnie (1741 Via Allena, Oceanside, CA 92056).
309. The Hungarian Sherlock Holmes Club (Apr 13 #1) now has two web-sites, one of them in Hungarian <www.sherlock-sorozat.hu>, and the other one in English <www.sherlockian-sherlock.com>.
310. The Museum of London has scheduled a major exhibition on Sherlock Holmes to open next autumn. According to a story in The Times (June 26), "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first scribbled notes about Sherlock Holmes" may be among the exhibits; Alex Werner, head of history collections at the museum, said that he hopes to obtain permission to show the author's manuscript notebooks in which the detective first appeared, as well as manuscripts for some of the stories.
311. Thomas Wheeler's imaginative interactive map of the London area (Jun 13 #5) is now available at Google Maps Engine <www.tinyurl.com/n2dweuu>; you can zoom in and out using the icons at the lower right, and navigate with your mouse to see information from his THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.
312. Basil Rathbone continues to be popular, and is well represented on the Internet: "The Great Baz" <www.thegreatbaz.wordpress.com> is delightful blog maintained by Neve Rendell.
313. Allen J. Hubin likely has read more crime fiction than anyone else, alive or dead: his CRIME FICTION IV: A COMPREHENSIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY 1749-2000 has been undated to 2010 and includes 143,200 books, 79,200 stories, and 5,100 movies, and it's a treasure for anyone interested in the genre. He began publishing his bibliography in "The Armchair Detective" (which he launched as a fanzine in 1967) and told the story of his work in a splendid article on "My Life Crime Fiction" in Janet Rudolph's magazine Mystery Scene. You can read the article at the magazine's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/ly8x5xd>. The bibliography is available in a CD edition ($49.95) from Locus Magazine <www.locusmag.com>. The current (summer) issue of Mystery Scene includes Joseph Goodrich's "Nicholas Meyer: An Appreciation" and Carole Nelson Douglas' "Why Can't They Get Irene Adler Right?" (not available on-line).
314. Jul 13 #3: Catherine Cooke reports that Abbey House, for years the headquarters of the Abbey National Bank, now is the Park View Residence, and it's quite grand <www.parkviewresidence.co.uk>. Its flats are available for rental from Knight Frank <www.tinyurl.com/mjhuolb> at £5,416 to £6,608 per month. Abbey House was the site of the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition during the Festival of Britain in 1951.
315. Donna Andrews has a continuing series about Meg Langslow (a successful decorative blacksmith and amateur sleuth), all with nicely punned titles (including COCKATIELS AT SEVEN, SOME LIKE IT HAWK, and OWLS WELL THAT ENDS WELL). the 15th title in the series is THE HEN OF THE BASKERVILLES (New York: Minotaur, 2013; 308 pp., $24.99), in which livestock is stolen from a country fair (the owners aren't really named

- Baskerville, but many people do think so). There's a murder, and other mysteries, and a Sherlockian allusion or two in the book, which has amusing cover art. The author's at <www.donnaandrews.com>.
316. Martin Freeman and Benedict Cumberbatch weren't in San Diego to attend Comic-Con, but they sent an amusing 4-minute video in which Cumberbatch revealed how he survived the fall from the roof of Bart's at the end of the second season; it may still be seen at <www.tinyurl.com/p3wehot>. You can also watch Digital Spy's 4-minute video interview with Steven Moffat, Sue Vertue, and Mark Gatiss at <www.tinyurl.com/mfaq6p8>. They were on a panel together, and according to the Los Angeles Times (July 18), they confirmed that there will be a wedding coming up: "Hot off the presses from 110 years ago, John does get married," Moffat said, "We hoped that you wouldn't sneak ahead and read the books." They also explained why Andrew Scott was seen on the set during filming of "The Empty Hearse": Moriarty's in the episode, as a corpse (Gatiss said that "it was cheaper to get Andrew Scott than a mannequin").
317. Andrew Malec has recommended Stephen J. Gertz's blog Booktryst (subtitled "a nest for book lovers") <www.booktryst.com>; the postings are only occasionally Sherlockian or Doylean, but they're interesting nonetheless.
318. "Desert Island Discs" has been broadcast by the BBC since 1942: each week distinguished guests are asked to choose eight pieces of music they'd take if they were castaways on a desert island. They also get to choose a book, which occasions Sherlockian allusions by some castaways, who include violinist Itzhak Perlman, the Right Reverend David Jenkins (Bishop of Durham and the guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London), Mark Gatiss, and most recently Beryl Vertue (founder and chairman of Hartwood Films, the company that produces "Sherlock" for the BBC). It is especially nice that there is an on-line archive of more than 1,500 programs at <www.tinyurl.com/6cs8hsp>. Search for [conan doyle] you'll get nine hits.
319. One of Beryl Vertue's music choices was David Arnold's "SHERlocked" played by the London Session Orchestra; the piece was written for the second season of "Sherlock" and is available on a soundtrack CD and as an MP3 download from on-line booksellers.
320. Jul 13 #4: Andrea Ross has reported an intriguing project carried out by Ariane DeVere (aka Callie Sullivan), who has posted transcripts for all episodes of the BBC "Sherlock" television series at her Live Journal web-site <www.tinyurl.com/oul7sek>. The pilot for the series and the special features from the DVD are included in the transcripts, which will be quite helpful for those who aren't quite sure just what people are saying in the series.
321. Reggie Musgrave died on June 24. An enthusiastic member of both The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and The Poor Folk Upon the Moor, he was formerly Roger Matthews. Not liking his original name he changed it to that of the character he often impersonated when the Society held its costumed excursions. As far as I know, he's the only person to be that devoted to the Canon.
322. Jody Baker's the contact for The Friends of a Soldier Named Murray, a Sherlockian society at an assisted-living facility in Chattanooga, Tenn., and he's happy to offer support and assistance to anyone who planning to start such a society elsewhere. He's at <josiahbaker@bkhcw.com>.
323. Simon Corble's two-act play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" was first performed in an outdoor venue in Britain in 1995, and the script's now available (London: MX Publishing, 2012; 109 pp., £7.99/€8.99/$10.95); Corble's introduction explains how the play came to be written, and why it differs from the book. It can be interesting indeed to read scripts when you have already read the story.
324. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND PHILOSOPHY: THE FOOTPRINTS OF A GIGANTIC MIND, edited by Josef Steiff (Chicago: Open Court, 2011; 376 pp., $19.95), is part of a long series on Popular Culture and Philosophy that presents essays written by academic philosophers about icons of popular culture. Holmes certainly is one of those icons, and the essays explore the stories, pastiches, film, and television.
325. David Miller's PETER CUSHING: A LIFE IN FILM (London: Titan, 2013; 192 pp., £18.99/$24.95) is both a biography and a filmography, and it's entertaining and informative, with (of course) discussion of his appearances as Sherlock Holmes and as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. There's an interesting photograph in the book (page 77) that shows Peter Cushing on the set of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 1958 with Stanley Mackenzie (identified only as a member of the Sherlock Holmes Society) and Humphrey Morton (who acted with Cushing in a touring company in "Private Lives" in 1942). Stanley Mackenzie was an enthusiastic collector and stage manager for the Royal Shakespeare Company revival of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in 1973, and Morton was the founder and chairman of The Milvertonians of Hampstead.
326. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND FRANKENSTEIN'S DIARY (Sutton: Severn House, 2013; 183 pp., $28.95) is the fourth in Barry Grant's series; Sherlock Holmes, frozen in a Swiss glacier for 90 years, has been revived and is again detecting in London, assisted by James Wilson, a correspondent invalidated home after an assignment in Afghanistan. This time they're in pursuit of (and under attack from) tabloid king Gerald Gurloch, who seems to be corrupting, blackmailing, or hacking everyone in sight.
327. Jul 13 #5: Jennie Paton has discovered a new (well, new to me) Sherlockian genre: a video of Rebecca van Tassel performing her strip-tease "Elementary My Dear Watson" at India Starr's Cabaret Nouveau in Leicester; the finale is properly (or improperly) S'ian, and there's a 4-minute video is available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/kwef8l2>.
328. Jennie has found something else new: a surviving print of the one-reel silent film "Burstup Homes' Murder Case" (1913), starring Fraunie Fraunholz in the title role <www.youtube.com/watch?v=RDb16rCGnB8>; you get to watch the first 6 minutes twice, but then the film's complete.
330. There was a lot of discussion on the Internet about the title of the third episode of the third season of "Sherlock": the title of the first episode is "The Empty Hearse" and the second episode will be "The Sign of Three"; Steven Moffat gave fans a clue for the third episode earlier ("Bow"), and the BBC announced there would be clues planted in reruns of the second season in the U.K. And so there were: the clue in the first episode was the word "HIS", leading to conclusions about "His Last Bow". A delay in the repeat broadcast of the third episode led the producers to reveal the full title in the second episode: it's "His Last Vow".
331. Marc Simont died on July 13. He was a noted author, but was best known as an illustrator of children's books; his artwork appeared in nearly a hundred books, and he was a winner of the Caldecott Award and the illustrator of the first 20 titles in Marjorie Weinman Sharmat's "Nate the Great" series about a boy who enthusiastically follows in Sherlock Holmes' footsteps.
332. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE NEEDLE'S EYE, by Len Bailey (Nashville: Thomas Nelson, 2013; 302 pp., $15.99), is subtitled "The World's Greatest Detective Tackled the Bible's Ultimate Mysteries"; Holmes, Watson, and (for one mystery) Mrs. Hudson time-travel to Biblical times to offer the author's own textual criticism and disputation.
333. There's nothing Sherlockian about Laurie R. King's TOUCHSTONE (2008), and it's unlikely that there will be anything S'ian about its upcoming sequel THE BONES OF PARIS, but her publicity campaign for the new book includes a thoroughly imaginative and amusing 6-minute video; you can read about the book (and watch the video) at <www.tinyurl.com/ln3eq7z>.

334. Some of you are accustomed to seeing announcements of meetings of The Red Circle of Washington as part of the newsletter, but (edging into the 21st century) we now have an electronic mailing list, which you are welcome to join; requests to me, please, at <blau7103@comcast.net>.
335. Since it's summer, there's lots of theater coming up, here and there. The East Haddam Stage Company is presenting "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Speckled Band" (a 30-minute live-action radio drama using the script from William Gillette's 1930 broadcast) at Gillette Castle in East Haddam, Conn., through Aug. 11 <www.tinyurl.com/m43smbm>.

336. Jul 13 #6: Chris Hibbs' play "The Curious Case in the Colony: A Sherlock Holmes Adventure" is being performed in the Newman Wine Vaults, Provincial Historic Site, in St. John's, Newfoundland, through Aug. 18 as part of the Shakespeare by the Sea Festival <www.tinyurl.com/k5qghuu>.
337. "Sherlock Holmes and the Charleston History Mystery" is an audience-participation parody being performed at the Black Fedora Comedy Mystery Theatre in Charleston, S.C., through Aug. 30 <www.tinyurl.com/mdoasno>.
338. Two scenes from Greg Oliver Bodine's "A Requiem for Sherlock Holmes" were performed during the William Gillette Luncheon during the birthday festivities, and the complete play was presented at a sold-out staged reading last March; there will be three readings of the latest version of the play, with Paul Singleton starring as Holmes, at the Workshop Theater Company in New York on Aug. 8-10 <www.requiemforsherlockholmes.com>, and reservations are recommended <www.theaterworkshop.org/node/2358> although there's no charge to attend the show.
339. The Porters of Hellsgate will present Gus Krieger's new two-act play "Sherlock Through the Looking-Glass" (based on the works of Arthur Conan Doyle and Lewis Carroll) at the Whitmore Theatre in North Hollywood, from Aug. 16 to Sept. 22 <www.whitmorelindleytheatrecenter.com>; if you don't find the play at the web-site, the theater's phone number is 818-679-6160).
340. Broken Holmes Productions will offer Robin Johnson's comedy "Broken Holmes" during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe at the Space on the Mile on Aug. 19-24 <www.brokenholmes.co.uk>.
341. Ed Lange's play "Sherlock's Secret Life" will be performed at the Barn Community Playhouse <www.tillamooktheater.com> in Tillamook, Ore., from Aug. 30 through Sept. 15.
342. "Sherlock Holmes--Knight's Gambit" (a new play by Paul Falzone) is scheduled at the Cider Mill Playhouse in Endicott, N.Y., Sept. 19 through Oct. 13 <www.ciderhillplayhouse.org>. And by the Oldcastle Theatre Company in Bennington, Vt., Sept. 27-Oct. 13 <www.oldcastletheatre.org>. And at the Bickford Theatre at the Morris Museum in Morristown, N.J., Oct. 24-Nov. 10 <www.morrismuseum.org>.
343. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled by the Spotlight Players Theatre Troupe at the Meridian Habitat Community Center in Puyallup, Wash., Sept. 28-Oct. 5 <www.valleyartsunited.org/Spotlight_Players.html>.
344. Chris Bange's "Sherlock Holmes: The Case of the Hansom Cab Killer" will be performed at The Gladstone in Ottawa on Oct. 15-26 <www.thegladstone.ca>.
345. And you can plan farther ahead: two Sherlockian plays will be presented by Vertigo Theatre in Calgary next year: Chris Gibbs' "Antoine Feval" on Jan. 15-25, and Clive Francis' dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" from May 10 to June 8 <www.vertigotheatre.com>.

346. Aug 13 #1: Catherine Cooke reports that the Sherlock Holmes Collection has moved from the Marylebone Library to the Westminster Reference Library, and that its new postal address is "Sherlock Holmes Collection (Third Floor), Westminster Reference Library, 35 St. Martin's Street, London WC2H 7HP, England. She has also posted to the "Irregular Observations" blog an amusing account (nicely illustrated) of "The Case of the Leicester Square Furniture Van" at <www.wcclibraries.wordpress.com/category/irregular-observations>.
347. Spotted by Marsha Pollak: PRACTICAL CLASSICS: 50 REASONS TO REREAD 50 BOOKS YOU HAVEN'T TOUCHED SINCE HIGH SCHOOL, by Kevin Smokler (Amherst: Prometheus Books, 2013; 300 pp., $18.00); with a 7-page chapter on "The Work/Life Balance of Sherlock Holmes".
348. "A Triceratops Skull, a Giant Robot, and a Fantastic Flying Machine: Christie's Displays Lots for Out of the Ordinary Sale" read the headline on the Independent's story (Aug. 5) on an auction scheduled in London on Sept. 5. The "fantastic flying machine" is the Waxflatter Ornithopter used in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985); it's estimated at £50,000 to £80,000.
349. Judith Freeman has prepared a useful guide to "How to Start and Run a Sherlockian Group"; available on request <judith-freeman@hotmail.com>.
350. The Daily Telegraph ran a colorful photograph of a lion's mane jellyfish in a story (July 30) on hundreds of thousands of jellyfish having descended on Britain; the Marine Conservation Society conducts an annual national jellyfish survey, and is asking people to report jellyfish sighting. People are warned, however, that the lion's mane has a powerful sting, and anyone taking part in the survey should look but not touch jellyfish that they see.
351. The Hungarian Sherlock Holmes Club has discovered an on-line "how to draw" web-site at <www.drawingnow.com> that offers a helpful tutorial on "how to draw Sherlock Holmes" <www.tinyurl.com/mvqcpmu>.
352. Gayle Lange Puhl's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE FOLK TALE MYSTERIES, published by George Vanderburgh in 2012, is a 192-page collection of imaginative pastiches inspired by children's folk tales and nursery rhymes (plus a Wodehouse pastiche), and with cover and interior art by Gayle. $25.00 postpaid (signed or inscribed on request), available from Gayle at 501 South Madison Street #12, Evansville, WI 53536.
353. Frogwares has released a 2-minute trailer for its new computer game "Crimes & Punishments" (the next title in its series of Sherlockian computer games) <www.tinyurl.com/mr258kk>; I have never played any of these games, but the graphics continue to improve, and are now truly spectacular.
354. Peter G. Ashman ("Peter Steiler, the Elder") died on Aug. 5. He was a lawyer in the Washington area, and a member of The Red Circle, and then a District Court Judge in Alaska, serving rural communities and especially Alaskan Natives. Peter founded The Pawky Humorists in 1974, but unfortunately never was able to complete his projected magnum opus "The Annotated Schlock Homes"; his Investiture was awarded by The Baker Street Irregulars in 1982.

355. Aug 13 #2: Douglas G. Greene has presided over Crippen & Landru for many years, and his recently-updated web-site is well worth a look <www.crippenlandru.com>. He specializes in publishing collections of mystery short stories, often previously uncollected and sometimes previously unpublished, and he offers a treasure trove for those who enjoy the genre. He will soon issue the first edition in English of Balduin Grollers' DAGOBERT, SLEUTH OF OLD VIENNA (1910); Dagobert Trostler was one of "The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes" in the fine 1970s television series that was based on anthologies edited by Hugh Greene.
356. Les Klinger spotted an advertising campaign by Steimatsky (Israel's largest bookstore chain) with the slogan "The Right Book Will Always Keep You Company" (and needless to say, one of the right books is the Sherlock Holmes stories).
357. Harry Houdini's A MAGICIAN AMONG THE SPIRITS (1924) included discussion of his relationship with Conan Doyle; Houdini was not satisfied with the book, cut by the publisher to 75,000 words from the nearly 175,000 words that Houdini wrote, and he soon began work on a revised edition that was unfinished when he died in 1926. The 409-page typed manuscript, hand-corrected and signed, was previously owned by magician Milbourne Christopher, and offered at RR Auctions on July 17, estimated at $40,000-$50,000, but it went unsold. The manuscript was published in facsimile, edited and introduced by his widow Maurine, in 1996.

358. The spring issue of For the Sake of the Trust (The Baker Street Irregulars Trust newsletter) celebrates the tenth anniversary of the Trust, with looks back and forward, and an announcement that the newsletter will be available electronically, both at the web-site <www.bsitrust.org> and by e-mail. If you would like to be added to the e-mailing list, you can send a request to <trust221b@gmail.com>.
359. "Evaline and Mina didn't mean to get into the family business" is the hook for Colleen Gleason's THE CLOCKWORK SCARAB (San Francisco: Chronicle Books, 2013; 350 pp., $17.99), and it's an imaginative proposition: Evaline Holmes is the niece of Sherlock, and Mina Stoker is the sister of Bram, and their adventures are set in a steampunk Victorian London. The book is a youngadult novel aimed at teen-age girls, with romance, villainy, plenty of reasons for a sequel, and a web-site <www.stokerandholmes.com>.
360. "Click to Play: Web Adaptations of Sherlock Holmes" is the title of a recent essay by Kristina Manente at the Baker Street Babes blog. It's easy enough to see (and sometimes difficult to escape) various television series, but there's an entirely different genre available on the Internet: web series. Kristina's blog <www.tinyurl.com/kpkz3e4> has interesting comment on and links to three current series.

361. Aug 13 #3: The latest issue of the electronic journal Ripperologist notes a BBC report that Ian Brady, convicted Moors Murderer, has told a mental health tribunal that he used "method acting" to be classed insane. Speaking of the media, Brady asked, "Why are they still talking about Jack the Ripper after a century?" His answer was "Because of the dramatic background, the fog, cobbled streets. Mine's the same ... Wuthering Heights, Hound of the Baskervilles." Brady, convicted in 1966, wants to be transferred from a psychiatric hospital to a Scottish prison. For information on how to subscribe to Ripperologist, you can contact editor Eduardo Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
362. Reported by Al Gregory: ESTUDIO EN ESCARLATA, a commemorative translation of the story as it appeared in Beeton's Christmas Annual, published last year by Debolsillo in Barcelona (€95) <www.tinyurl.com/bs7gwlk>.
363. A bibliographic query received from Nick Utechin: Helan Halbach published a new edition of William Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" in 1974, using the original plates for the 1935 edition; according to the 1974 edition's limitation statement, there were 1,000 copies, 250 of them numbered, and some of the copies are thought to have been sold accompanied by an original plate used to produce the new edition. Nick has the plate for page 85 (acquired separately from the book), and a dealer in California is offering a copy of the book with the plate for page 182; plates certainly were made available, although not necessarily with copies of her edition. Nick would like to hear from anyone who has an original plate, and about how the plate was acquired <highfieldfarmhouse@yahoo.co.uk>.
364. William and Helen Gillette (impersonated by Tyke and Teddie Niver) traveled on the Essex Steam Railway & Riverboat on Aug. 17 and 18, and you can watch a short promotional video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=6JoawaS3R>.
365. Jonathan Cranfield and Tom Ue, who presided over an academic conference on "Sherlock Holmes, Past and Present" in London earlier this year, have issued a call for papers for a similar symposium titled "Challenger Unbound" in London on Dec. 9; the symposium will be "dedicated to re-evaluating the narratives, their author, the wider culture that he inhabited, and the legacy of his work for the twentieth and twenty-first centuries." Details are available from <j.l.cranfield@ljmu.ac.uk> and <ue\_tom@hotmail.com>.
366. You still have time to register for Bouchercon 2013 ("A New York State of Mind") in Albany, Sept. 19-22 <www.bcon2013.com>; this is the 44th annual event, named in honor of the late Anthony Boucher, and always a lot of fun. There will be a panel on "And So It Goes: Beyond Doyle and Holmes" (panelists are Terence Faherty, Lyndsay Faye, Les Klinger, and Michael Robertson, moderated by yours truly).
367. Thomas Wheeler's imaginative interactive map of the London area (Jun 13 #5) now includes information from Bernard Davies' guidebooks; the map is available at Google Maps Engine <www.tinyurl.com/n2dweuu>, where you can zoom in and out using the icons at the lower right, and navigate with your mouse to see information from Wheeler's THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.

368. Aug 13 #4: Bill Barnes has reported on a new discovery about Conan Doyle's visit to Australia in 1920: his visit to Penfolds Winery near Adelaide. Conan Doyle mentioned visiting a winery in WANDERINGS OF A SPIRITUALIST (writing that his children were "wildly excited over the possibility of concealed snakes") but didn't identify the winery. Members of the Sherlock Holmes Society of South Australia (aka The Unscrupulous Rascals) have identified Penfolds and found a visitor's book with the signatures of Conan Doyle and his wife in the National Museum of Australia in Canberra. The book has been loaned to the South Australian Museum in Adelaide, where there will be champagne reception on Sept. 9. Penfolds still produces excellent wine, including Grange shiraz, Australia's most expensive wine (the 2008 vintage costs AU$785.00 per bottle).
369. Carole Nelson Douglas' essay on "Why Can't They Get Irene Adler Right?" is now online at <www.mysteryscenemag.com>, along with other interesting content published in Janet Rudolph's magazine.
370. Finding excellent Sherlockian books that one can't read easily can be frustrating, but if you're reasonably fluent in Swedish, you'll enjoy Mattias Boström's FRÅN HOLMES TILL SHERLOCK (Stockholm: Pirat Förlaget, 2013; 514 pp., SEK 195). The title translates as FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK, and Mattias reports on his research into Conan Doyle, and Sherlock Holmes, early and more recent Sherlockians, Sherlockian societies in various countries, pastiches, and stage, screen, radio, and television, and he's thoroughly up to date, with discussion of Sherlockiana on the Internet Holmes and the BBC's "Sherlock" television series. Readers in other countries will find sources for ordering the book at <www.tinyurl.com/n4jg2pf>.
371. "Elements of the Elementary" was an exhibition of modern multi-media art at White Lady Art in Dublin this month. There's information about the exhibition at Facebook <www.tinyurl.com/kczpm7w>, and Oscar Ross has noted interesting videos at <www.tinyurl.com/l8sqfoe> and <www.youtube.com/kl3oy4v>. His web-site for The Crew of the S.S. May Day <www.thessmayday.co.uk> is a fine way to keep up with what's going on in Northern Ireland and elsewhere.
372. William Gillette's (non-Sherlockian) play "Too Much Johnson" has been made into films in 1919, directed by Donald Crisp, and again in 1938, directed by Orson Welles for a planned Mercury Theatre stage-and-screen production; the play was performed briefly without the film, which has never been seen by the public. A copy of the film was discovered in Italy in 2008 and has been restored, and the film will have its world premiere at the Pordenone Silent Film Festival on Oct. 9, and its U.S. premiere at the George Eastman House in Buffalo on Oct. 16. The restoration was supported by the National Film Preservation Foundation, which hopes to make the film available on the Internet later this year.
373. Laurie R. King's next (and non-Sherlockian) novel will be THE BONES OF PARIS, a sequel to TOUCHSTONE (2008), and her promotion campaign is underway; details at <www.tinyurl.com/murcwzr>. The launch party will be on Sept. 10 in San Francisco, and then she'll be touring (including Bouchercon in Albany). Laurie has not abandoned Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes, and is now writing the next novel in that series; Russell and Holmes will visit Japan, and there's information about that at <www.laurierking.com>.

374. Aug 13 #5: The Baskerville Hall Club's DÖDEN PÅ EXCELSIOR is a collection of Swedish translations of nine of P. G. Wodehouse's Sherlockian writings, together with interesting contemporary illustrations, a foreword by Bengt Malmberg, and an afterword by Tomas Prenkert; it's available ($6.00 plus $5.00 for shipping to the U.S.) from Anders Wiggström (Byggmästarvägen 29, SE-16832 Bromma, Sweden <wiggstrom@telia.com>. Wouldn't it be nice (hint, hint) if a similar collection were available in English?

375. It's not the Blue Carbuncle, but a 7.59-carat round brilliantcut internally-flawless blue diamond called the "Premier Blue" will be offered at auction by Sotheby's in Hong Kong on Oct. 7; according to a story in the N.Y. Times (Aug. 19) Sotheby's expects the stone to bring about $19 million, a record per-carat price for any diamond.
376. Peter Capaldi will be the next Doctor Who, succeeding Matt Smith, who will leave the series at the end of this year. Earlier this year (Jun 13 #6). Ladbrokes' odds on Benedict Cumberbatch were 6/1 (the odds on Capaldi were 20/1, but rose to 5/1 before the announcement).
377. You can visit <www.cbs.com/shows/elementary> for official news of the second season of "Elementary" (which premieres on Sept. 26); there are firstlook photographs from filming on location in London, and (at various websites) more on-set fan photos.
378. Aziz Bin Adam has reported a 56-minute speech delivered on July 4, 2011, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle via trance medium Arthur Kakalani Pacheco at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ljapt3t>; you can read transcripts of more messages from Conan Doyle at <www.tinyurl.com/lby62xv>.
379. Aziz also has noted a Comedy Central television series "Drunk History" in which "booze helps bring out the truth of our nation's history," with historical reenactments presented by inebriated storytellers; on Aug. 13 the program included a 3-minute segment on Houdini and Conan Doyle and Spiritualism, which you can watch at <www.tinyurl.com/lIg6gl3>.
380. Oscar Ross has kindly forwarded the Sherlockology link to the imaginative teaser for the third season of "Sherlock" that aired this month at the end of the BBC repeat of "The Reichenbach Fall" <www.tinyurl.com/mfbbhbh>.
381. ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS (the excellent annotated collection of letters he wrote to his mother and others) has been discounted to $4.95 by Edward R. Hamilton <www.tinyurl.com/n3zs49j> for the hardbound edition, and to £0.85 by Bibliophile Books <www.tinyurl.com/lklz2mx> for the paperbound edition. Value for money indeed.
382. VOYAGE OF THE BLUE CARBUNCLE, by Carl L. Heifetz (Denver: Outskirts Press, 2013; 45 pp., $8.95) is subtitled "journey into a parallel universe," and it's exactly that: an homage to the worlds of Star Trek and Holmes. Commander S. Verner, the chief science officer on the space-exploration ship Clipper, has a blue carbuncle acquired by an ancestor in or about 1899, and it has mysterious powers; there's also an appearance by space pirate Sebastian Moran, a bit of sex, and a successful conclusion.

383. Aug 13 #6: Barry Grant's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SWEDISH ENIGMA (Sutton: Severn House, 2012; 180 pp., $27.95) is the third in his series of four novels featuring the original Sherlock Holmes (no longer frozen in a Swiss glacier) and his modern-day assistant James Wilson; there is more Wilson than Holmes (just as Holmes wasn't on hand for much of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES), with two mysteries to be solved; a gigantic hound (not at all supernatural) makes a brief appearance.
384. Snoo Wilson died on July 3. He was an anarchic playwright in the vanguard of British theater from the end of the 1970s onward; earlier he is reported to have worked on a script for the Royal Shakespeare Company revival of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1974), and then he wrote two plays about Conan Doyle: "In Defence of Fairies" (1997) starred Simon Callow, and "Moonshine" (1999) featured Robin Soans in the same role.
385. The Norwegian Explorers and Sherlock Holmes Collections' conference "Sherlock Holmes Through Time and Space" in Minneapolis was thoroughly successful, with 156 people on hand for the festivities (plan ahead for the next conference in the summer of 2016). The St. Paul Pioneer Press had a nice article (Aug. 12) about the gathering <www.tinyurl.com/l6vflnv> with a link to an audio recording of the Red-Throated League's performance of the Edith Meiser script for "Sherlock Holmes and the Monster of Gyre" (1944) as a radio play. The Minnesota library's "Continuum" interviewed Les Klinger during the conference, and posted a 6-minute video <www.tinyurl.com/kq3ujnf> at their web-site.
386. One of the souvenirs of the conference was J. RANDOLPH COX: A SHERLOCKIAN FESTSCHRIFT, a 137-page book nicely edited by Philip Bergen, with tributes to and writings by Randy, a long-time member of the Explorers. It's available from Phil (3829 172nd Avenue NW, Andover, MN 55304); $13.00 postpaid.
387. And if you'd like to see what you missed, Mike McCoy digitized and posted the 16-page conference program <www.twl.sh/174FdNC>.
388. Barbara Mertz died on Aug. 8. She was an Egyptologist and a prolific writer, with many series in print; better known as Elizabeth Peters and Barbara Michaels, she once joked that "Peters supplies me with a comfortable living, Michaels buys me lily ponds and gazebos." She acknowledged that her Elizabeth Peters series about Amelia Peabody Emerson owed much to the Canon, and as Barbara Michaels she wrote OTHER WORLDS (1999), a novel in which Frank Podmore, Nandor Fodor, Harry Houdini, and Arthur Conan Doyle suggest (and briefly debate) possible solutions to two unsolved ghostly 19th-century mysteries.
389. The Bay Area Sherlock Con (Jun 13 #6) featured a panel with Mike Kean, Randall Stock, and Marsha Pollak, and the Nerdophiles blog had a long article about the event <www.tinyurl.com/lboz6uq>.
390. There's an intriguing 4-minute trailer for the new "Sherlock Holmes" series due soon on Russian television, and it may or may not be available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/mu36nzk>. If this link has been taken down, you may still be able to find it the trailer, since it comes and goes. The series stars Igor Petrenko as Holmes, and Andrei Panin as Watson.

391. Aug 13 #7: Imagine Sherlock Holmes applying for a license as a private detective. The BBC reported (July 31) that Britain's Home Office has announced that it wants to "ensure rigorous standards" in an industry where "rogue investigators" have been infringing privacy. Private investigators will be required to be licensed by the Security Industry Authority beginning in the autumn of 2014.
392. If you're seeking an excuse to watch the colorized version of Basil Rathbone's "The Woman in Green" (1945), it was on "Classic Movies with Ron McCloskey" on Aug. 1 on Edison TV (New Jersey) with a four-segment interview with Al Gregory <www.tinyurl.com/k7czbbp>.
393. "The Arthur Conan Doyle Experience" was a display of drawings and paintings from the scrapbook kept by Charles Altamont Doyle at the Arthur Conan Doyle Centre in Edinburgh, which also is the home of the Edinburgh Association of Spiritualists <www.25palmerstonplace.com>. The Edinburgh Evening News had an article about the exhibit on Aug. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/l2uxf8s>.
394. David Marcum's THE PAPERS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, published earlier with nine pastiches (Nov 12 #4) is again available (edited and revised) from MX Publishing in two volumes (£9.99/€12.99/$16.95 each); Volume I (194 pp.) has six pastiches and Volume II (200 pp.) has three. Holmes and Watson visit Tennessee (where the author lives), and solve cases in England, with one of story explaining a family connection between Holmes and Solar Pons. There will be a book launch for both volumes at the Sherlock Holmes Plaza Hotel in Baker Street in London on Sept. 26; the author will be on hand for a Q&A session <www.eventbrite.co.uk/event/7835495177>, and other authors as well.
395. Also from MX Publishing: Mike Hogan's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MURDER AT THE SAVOY AND OTHER STORIES (2013; 213 pp., same prices); five stories, with a bit of Gilbert & Sullivan, and with Holmes challenged to a duel, arrested for murder, and brought in to solve a mystery at Windsor Castle (not all in the same story).

396. Al Gregory found a Wooster Sherlock Frame at Home Depot, and it might be of interest to fans of Sherlock Holmes as well as Bertie Wooster. Or not: it is a professional paint roller frame, widely available at hardware stores and on the Internet; if you'd like to see just how professional it is, you can watch a 4-minute video at <www.tinyurl.com/kmc9juo>.
397. The Epilogues of Sherlock Holmes and the Turf Builders of Baker Street have organized their third "no frills" version of The Silver Blaze on Sept. 21 at Monmouth Park in Long Branch, N.J. Additional information is available from Peter McIntyre (732-765-1240) <psipete@optonline.net> or Kate Karlson (607-669-4653) <kkarlson@stny.rr.com>
398. The Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium at the Newberry Library in Chicago on Oct. 12, starting at 9:30 am, is open to the public with no admission charge, and will feature David Spadafore (president of the library) on "Working with the Kittle Collection", Jon Lellenberg on "A. Conan Doyle: A Nineteenth-Century Man", and a team from Exhibits Design Group on "Recreating Sherlock Holmes' World" for the exhibition opening soon in Portland; more information at <www.newberry.org/programs-and-events>.

399. Aug 13 #8: There was a panel about "Sherlock" at Comic-Con International in San Diego on July 18, with Mark Gatiss, Steven Moffat, and Sue Vertue, with video at YouTube <www.youtube.com>; search for [comic-con 2013 sherlock heidi] to find all three parts of the video. There also was a less-official "Nerd HQ" conversation with the trio; there's a 57-minute video at <www.tinyurl.com/kgrrmm3q>.
400. Reported: Margarlit Fox, in her THE RIDDLE OF THE LABYRINTH: THE QUEST TO CRACK AN ANCIENT CODE (New York: Ecco, 2013; 384 pp., $27.99), uses Conan Doyle's dancing men to explain principles of cryptographic analysis.
401. Elizabeth Shipe's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Final Vow" will be performed by the Milwaukee Entertainment Group at the Brumder Mansion in Milwaukee from Sept. 20 to Oct. 13 <www.milwaukeeentertainmentgroup.com>.

410. Sep 13 #1: The first volume of Les Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES is now available as an e-book in various formats, including Kindle and Nook, and the second and third volumes presumably will follow, making things easier for those who don't want to lug the print editions around with them. But not much cheaper: the Kindle version costs $25.14, and version for the Nook $22.99. You can read all about it at <www.lesliesklinger.com> (the second volume of the short stories is coming soon).
411. Sorry about that: here's a repeat of the item about the Frogwares computer game (Aug 13 #1) with the correct URL: Frogwares has released a two-minute trailer for its new computer game "Crimes & Punishments" (the next title in its series of Sherlockian computer games) <www.youtube.com/mr258kk>; I have never played any of these games, but the graphics continue to improve, and are now truly spectacular.
412. And the video of Tyke and Teddie Niver impersonating the Gillettes (Aug 13 #3) was taken down from the web-site before the end of August.
413. Kent Ross reports that "The Ambience & Residents on Baker Street" will be the theme of the next "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 27-27, 2014; Kent (721 Hartford Road, Springfield, OH 45503) (678-464-8321) <kenthross@gmail.com> maintains the mailing list.
414. All eight of Carole Nelson Douglas' novels about Irene Adler and Sherlock Holmes are now available as e-books, and with readers' guides. The titles are GOOD NIGHT, MR. HOLMES; THE ADVENTURESS [GOOD MORNING, IRENE]; A SOUL OF STEEL [IRENE AT LARGE]; ANOTHER SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA [IRENE'S LAST WALTZ]; CHAPEL NOIR; CASTLE ROUGE; FEMME FATALE; AND SPIDER DANCE.
415. A. J. Wright has noted Sherlock's Mystery Dinner Theatre in Columbus, Ga. <www.sherlockscolumbus.com>; they don't seem to have any Sherlockian plays in their repertoire, but there's S'ian artwork in their logo.
416. Declan Hughes' dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" was broadcast by RTÉ Radio (Irish Republic) in two one-hour parts on Oct. 24 and 31, 2010, with Robert O'Mahoney as Holmes and Owen Roe as Watson. You can find two web-sites where you can buy downloads by searching for [declan hughes baskervilles].
417. Thomas F. Hanratty's THE SINGULAR ADVENTURE OF CHARLES GOODFOOTE (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2012; 292 pp., $13.46) is subtitled "a thrilling tale of a perilous escapade set in the old west," and it's that with bells on; it also features a young Sherlock Holmes, who's in the U.S. to help Pinkerton agent Goodfoote pursue a villain, and who learns quite a bit from Goodfoote during the pursuit.
418. "Lost Land of the Volcano" (a three-part series broadcast by BBC-1 on Sept. 8-22, 2009) featured Mount Bosavi in New Guinea, where an expedition discovered a giant rat. The series is available in segments at YouTube, and you can see the Bosavi giant rat in two segments: <www.tinyurl.com/ln4m5bz> and <www.tinyurl.com/mf9ows6>.

419. Sep 13 #2: There are two versions of the set of DVDs for the first season of the CBS series "Elementary": the six-disk set available from Amazon and elsewhere ($27.99) and a seven-disk set available only from Target (also $27.99). The seventh disk has bonus additional features: "Elementary" Supersized; CBS Launch Promo: Behind the Scenes; Photo Montage; and Actor Biographies.
420. Jerry Margolin is offering original art that shows five actors who have played Sherlock Holmes by artist SanJulian ($1500); go to <www.tinyurl.com/nxkuu7q> to see a much better (and larger) image, and you can contact Jerry at <221bee@comcast.net>.

421. Stuart Palmer was a member of The Baker Street Irregulars (his amusing essay "The I-O-U of Hildegard Withers" ran in The Baker Street Journal (Jan. 1948), discussing the great debt that Hildegard Withers owed to Sherlock Holmes). Otto Penzler's Mysterious Press is reissuing Palmer's work as e-books, and 17 titles are available (some about Withers and some not) <www.tinyurl.com/mdw334r>. The web-site has some interesting links, among them "In Search of the Classic Mystery Novel" (which last month reviewed A STUDY IN SCARLET).
422. Susan Dahlinger noted a report in The Bookseller (Nov. 30) that A. P. Watt, the world's first literary agency (founded in 1875), has been acquired by United Agents; Arthur Conan Doyle was a client of Watt for many years.
423. "Before Sherlock: The Novel Art of Detection" is an event scheduled at the Old Swan Hotel in Harrowgate on Oct. 27 <www.tinyurl.com/pnfwvfr>; the list of speakers includes Nick Rennison, author of SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE UNAUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY (2005) and Robert Ryan, author of the pastiche DEAD MAN'S LAND (2013).
424. Wilfrid de Freitas is selling material from Don Redmond's collection; you can ask Wilfrid for a sales-list <wilfrid@defreitasbooks.com>.
425. Douglas Kerr's CONAN DOYLE: WRITING, PROFESSION, AND PRACTICE (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2013; 273 pp., $55.00) suggests that "Arthur Conan Doyle was, arguably, Britain's last national writer," an intriguing concept that is explored in six sections: Sport, Medicine, Science, Law and Order, Army and Empire, and Spirits. Kerr is knowledgeable and interesting, and offers informed insights into Conan Doyle's life and career.
426. It can be interesting indeed when people you know only as names in credits turn out to be famous, or infamous, or sometimes both, as is the case with Harry Alan Towers: MR. TOWERS OF LONDON: A LIFE IN SHOW BUSINESS (Albany: BearManor Media, 2013; 157 pp., $19.95) is his autobiography (subtitled "a life in show business"). Sherlockians may remember him as the producer of the 1954 radio series that starred John Gielgud, Ralph Richardson, and Orson Welles, the and two films in the 1992 television mini-series "The Golden Years of Sherlock Holmes" with Christopher Lee and Patrick Macnee, and as writer and producer of the 1994 television mini-series "The Lost World" starring John Rhys-Davies as Challenger. Towers knew and worked with just about everyone in the business during six-decades career, and tells enjoyable stories about them.

427. Sep 13 #3: "Sherlock Holmes and the Stolen Emerald" had its world premiere at a theater in London in June; the delightful 6-minute silent comedy was written by Céline Terranova and funded by an IndieGoGo campaign; you can see the promotion for the campaign at <www.tinyurl.com/ml67b8t> and see trailers for the film and the sequel at <www.stolenemerald.com>, where you can also order a DVD or a download of the film.
428. The blurb reads: "A desolate moor, a diabolical dog in need of a muzzle, and some inbred locals; Sherlock Holmes is really up against it," from imprint Pulp! The Classics for their new edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES (Harpden: Oldcastle Books, 2013; 192 pp., £5.99). They reissue classics with new covers in a pulp fiction style, with a dash of wry humor," in this case with a cover showing Rathbone and Bruce, and a promise of "Murder...Mystery...Walkies."
429. Further to the mathematics behind "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadow" (Feb 12 #4), Alain Goriely and Derek E. Moulton wrote about their work for Warner Bros. in the Apr. 2012 issue of SIAM News (the Newsjournal of the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics) <www.tinyurl.com/l6ub8gs>.
430. Turns out that Rebecca van Tassel (Jul 13 #5) is only one of the Sherlockian strippers at YouTube: Lauren Langley has uploaded the 9-minute "A Study in Pink: A Sherlock Holmes Burlesque" at <www.tinyurl.com/5r2ncv>.
431. For admirers of Dr. John H. Watson: "Before speaking of present day English writers, I must first pay tribute to Conan Doyle, the pioneer of detective writing, with his two great creations Sherlock Holmes and Watson---Watson perhaps the greater creation of the two. Holmes after all has his properties, his violin, his dressing gown, his cocaine, etc., whereas Watson has just himself--lovable, obtuse, faithful, maddening, guaranteed to be always wrong, and perpetually in a state of admiration! How badly we all need a Watson in our lives!" Agatha Christie, in her article "Detective Writers in England" (written in 1945 at the request of the Ministry of Information for publication in a Russian magazine), published in English for the first time as the Preface to a new edition of the Detective Club's collaborative novel ASK A POLICEMAN (London: Harper, 2013; 312 pp., £7.99); the novel was first published in 1933.
432. Hartley Nathan appeared (with deerstalker, pipe, and magnifying glass) on the cover of the September issue of Canadian Lawyer Magazine, and (together with Cliff Goldfarb) in an article "The Penang Lawyer" reporting on their Sherlockian and lawyerly work <www.tinyurl.com/nl8t7yv>.
433. A fine example of what can be done with Internet technology is an interactive map for "The Bruce Partington Plans" (reported by Diane Gilbert Madsen) <www.mapbox.com/tutorial-sherlock>.
434. "The Many Faces of Sherlock" will be the theme for the next "Saturday with Sherlock Holmes" at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore from 10:00 to 1:00 on Nov. 2; the event is sponsored by the local Sherlockian societies, the library is at 400 Cathedral Street, and there is no charge to attend. You can see the flier at <www.tinyurl.com/lvrcl9v>.

435. Sep 13 #4: There have been many changes in London since the time of Sherlock Holmes, including the skyline: a 37-story skyscraper under being built at 20 Fenchurch Street is reflecting sunlight at such intense levels that cars are being melted. For more about what's being called the "solar death ray" just run a Google search for [walkie talkie tower].
436. There hasn't been a really good dog toy for Sherlockians (and Sherlockian dogs) since "The Hound of the Baskervilles by A Collie Dog" (Feb 89 #5), but a "Zombie Foot Dog Toy" certainly ought to qualify; it's made by GAMAGO ($9.99) and is available at Amazon and elsewhere. The label carries the warning "Not a Toy" (but with an image of a baby, suggesting that the company feels babies need more protection than pets).
437. The admirers of Brigadier General Sir Harry Flashman VC, whose papers were edited by George MacDonald Fraser, may be shocked to discover that Flashman "was nothing more than a Paris-based remittance man and a plagiarizing fraud," according to the writings of Captain Jasper Speedicut, whose papers have been found and are being edited by Christopher Joll. THE SPEEDICUT PAPERS: BOOK 1 (1821-1848): FLASHMAN'S SECRET (Bloomington: AuthorHouse, 2013; 290 pp., $31.70/£23.47) was reported by John Baesch as reviewed in The Times on Apr. 1 by Thomas Arnold (if you're worried about the date of the review, it may help that the book is available from Amazon and Barnes & Noble). Speedicut's web-site is at <www.tinyurl.com/nyr3lfu>.
438. "Sherlock Holmes Nevében" [In the Name of Sherlock Holmes"] is a Hungarian film that premiered in 2011 (Feb 13 #2); it will have its British premiere (with English subtitles) on Oct. 12 during the Cinemagic International Film & Television Festival for Young People in Belfast. There's a trailer (also with subtitles) at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=H\_pPUCQ\_Ig8> and a web-site for the film at <www.sherlockfilm.hu>.
439. News from the Toronto Film Festival: the next project for Bill Condon (director of the new Wikileaks movie "Fifth Estate") will be "A Slight Trick of the Mind" with Ian McKellen as a retired Sherlock Holmes, and a screenplay by Jeffrey Hatcher based on Mitch Cullin's novel (Apr 05 #2), and BBC Films is a co-producer. Hatcher wrote "The Duchess" (2008), in which Keira Knightly starred as Georgina, Fifth Duchess of Devonshire. If you'd like to see what McKellen looked like playing Sherlock Holmes in 2002, there is an image at <img-www.theonering.net/images/170302-snlmckellen30.jpg> showing him in the "Hot Air Balloon Mystery Theater" skit that aired on Saturday Night Live" on Mar. 16, 2002.

440. Scott Monty has announced that his long-running "The Baker Street Blog" is merging with his web-site "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" (the last official post to the blog was on Aug. 28); you can read his announcement about the merger at <www.tinyurl.com/ktsqnpny>. "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" was founded as a podcast in 2005 and has become far more than that; it is now billed as "News and Information About Sherlock Holmes in Popular Culture," and that's just what it is (the only word missing from the description is "Timely"). Scott and his contributors do an excellent job of making interested news and commentary available on the Internet.

441. Sep 13 #5: John Baesch has forwarded a report in the Daily Telegraph (Apr. 4) on the campaign by the South Norwood Tourist Board to rename one of its two lakes Conan Doyle Lake; the board also want South Norwood to be declared the true Lake District, on the grounds that its great literary hero is far more popular than Wordsworth.
442. John also spotted a report in The Times (June 17) that the Policy Exchange think tank closing 30 of Britain's best-known but run-down prisons, including Dartmoor in Princetown, selling them to developers, and replacing them with huge prison "justice villages" holding up to 3,000 inmates.
443. "Great myths turn on simple pairs," Adam Gopnik wrote in the Sept. 9 issue of The New Yorker, "God and Lucifer, Sun and Moon, Jerry and George-- and so an author who makes a vital duo is rewarded with a long-lived audience. No one in 1900 would have thought it possible that a century later more people would read Conan Doyle's Holmes and Watson stories than anything of George Meredith's, but we do."
444. "Cocktail Party Physics" is the Scientific American blog by Jennifer Oullette, who discussed "Sherlock Holmes and the Dynamics of an Asteroid" (Aug. 27) with particular attention to the film "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows" <www.tinyurl.com/mua6bjm>.
445. Further to the bibliographic query (Aug 13 #3) about the plates that were used to produce Helan Halbach's edition of Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" in 1974, Nick Utechin has heard from a few people who own plates (Rudy Faist, Jim Vogelsang, Bob Hess, and the dealer 221Books, has located nine plates (including his own). Nick will report in more detail on his discoveries in the Baker Street Journal, but there are many more of the book's 191 plates to be found in other hands; he's at <highfieldfarmhouse@yahoo.co.uk>.
446. "Elementary, My Dear Holmes!" is a new computer game under development by Victory Square Games after a successful Kickstarter campaign that wound up raising more than $50,000 from on-line contributors; you can read about the game, and the campaign, at <www.tinyurl.com/mvwwwpaw>.
447. David Frost died on Aug. 31. He was a British journalist and broadcaster, perhaps best known for his groundbreaking interview with former president Nixon. Frost skyrocketed to renown as the host of the BBC television series "That Was the Week That Was" in 1962-1963; this caricature by Nicolas Bentley, published in the Sunday Telegraph, show Holmes and Watson examining Frost, presumably hoping to determine the reason for his rise to fame. The original artwork may still be available from dealer Peter Harrington (£400) <www.tinyurl.com/nzyzor9>.
448. John Cox is "wild about harry" (that's the name of his blog, which is all about Harry Houdini. Cox has blogged about the Houdini/Conan Doyle segment that was broadcast on "Drunk History" last month (Aug 13 #5), with a nice photograph showing the two families relaxing on the beach in Atlantic City in 1922 <www.tinyurl.com/ll3qqmh>. He also has reported that the History channel has greenlit a four-hour Houdini mini-series, with Adrien Brody as Houdini and a script written by Nicholas Meyer <www.tinyurl.com/lrw9285>.

449. Sep 13 #6: Plan well ahead: the Wessex Press has announced "From Gillette to Brett IV: Basil, Benedict, and Beyond" at Indiana University in Bloomington on Sept. 12-14, 2014 <www.wessexpress.com/html/g2b4.html>. Steve Doyle and Mark Gagen have attracted enthusiastic audiences for their past three conferences; the web-site has a link to show you what went on at the third one in 2011.
450. Fans of Benedict Cumberbatch and "Sherlock" will welcome Lynnette Porter's BENEDICT CUMBERBATCH: IN TRANSITION (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 347 pp., £12.99/€14.99/$18.95; subtitled as "an unauthorized performance biography," the book is an informative and carefully-researched discussion of all his work as an actor, and his relationship with his fandom, which includes both Sherlockology <www.sherlockology.com> (for the series) and Cumberbatchweb <www.benedictcumberbatch.co.uk> (for the actor). The 412 sourcenotes demonstrate the depth of the research, and the results are interesting indeed.
451. THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. JAMES PHILLIMORE, by Dan Andriacco (MX Publishing, 2013; 240 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95) is the fourth book in his series about Jeff Cody (in London for the second half of a honeymoon) and Sebastian McCabe (in London to debate Holmes-vs-Poe); there are two Phillimores (one of them Canonical and one quite modern), more than two murders, and some interesting sleuthing. The author's entertaining (and Sherlockian) blog is at <www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com>.
452. Andriacco also is the co-author (with Kieran McMullen) of MX Publishing's THE AMATEUR EXECUTIONER (2013; 175 pp., £7.99/€8.99/$11.95), which is set in London in 1920 and features American reporter Enoch Hale, Wiggins (now a Chief Inspector in Scotland Yard), various literary and political figures, and Holmes, Watson, and others familiar from the Canon. There's a series of murders, and plenty of mystery.
453. Matthew J. Elliott has written scripts for Sherlockian radio, some reprinted last year in SHERLOCK HOLMES ON THE AIR (Feb 12 #4), and pastiches; six atmospheric pastiches, first published in S'ian magazines and anthologies, have been collected in SHERLOCK HOLMES IN PURSUIT (MX Publishing, 2013; 182 pp., £7.99/€8.99/$12.95).
454. More from MX Publishing: Fred Thursfield's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MYSTERY WRITER (2013; 196 pp., £8.99/€10.99/$14.95); the story is set in 1920 and told by Watson's widow Mary, and involves her mystery-writer friend, both Holmes brothers, and World War skullduggery. Ross K. Foad's HOLMES IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS (2013; 161 pp., £7.99/€8.99/$12.95) has Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes and Irene Adler solving a series of Christmas murders: it's a print version of a seven-part video produced by the author, available at YouTube (search for the title).
455. Foad has created much more than his Christmas story, and has written about it all in MX Publishing's THE STORY AND SCRIPTS BEHIND NO PLACE LIKE HOLMES (2013; 231 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95): his web-site <www.nplh.co.uk> offers links to all his videos, as well as (click on "More") to the Howard Ostrom Holmes and Watson Collection, showing the results of his 30 years of collecting autographs of the people who have portrayed them on stage, screen, radio, television, and in other media.
456. Sep 13 #7: Brad Keefauver has kept his promise to stop updating his "Sherlock Peoria" web-site (Apr 12 #1), which is still available at <www.sherlockpeoria.net> if you want to explore its archives, but "Sherlock Peoria" continues as a blog <sherlockpeoria.blogspot.com>, where Brad continues to report on topics that range from "Plan 221 from Outer Space" to "Irene Adler in a pile of naked ladies".
457. The Waxflatter Ornithopter used in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985) was estimated at £50,000 to £80,000 last month at Christie's (Aug 13 #1), and the final price was £55,875 (which includes the buyer's premium); the Triceratops skull sold for £193,875.
458. The John H. Watson Society has announced the names of winners of its First Annual Treasure Hunt (Jun 13 #6): the Open Team competition was won by the Sound of the Baskervilles (of Seattle) with a perfect score, and the Open Individual competition by Denny Dobry with 98 out of a possible 100. You can find details at the society's web-site <www.johnhwatsonociety.com> and see the questions and answers; the questions for the Second Annual Treasure Hunt will be posted on May 1 (the contest will end on May 31).

459. The DVD set for "Sherlock: Season Three" has already been listed at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/q563yzt>, where you can pre-order the set (for $23.99) and read amusing comments ("Amazon, Thou Hast Forsaken the Fangirls" and "What a Twist!") by reviewers.
460. PBS-TV's two-hour special on "How Sherlock Holmes Changed the World" (Feb 24 #2) will air in two parts on Nov. 19 and 26. The program "will reveal for the first time the astonishing impact that Holmes has had on the development of real criminal investigation and criminal techniques," and there's more information about the program at <www.tinyurl.com/bc282lr>.
461. "The Baskerville Beast" is a British musical written by Teddy Hayes, first performed in 2004, and a script and full musical score are now available to amateur theatrical groups. There's more information, including a 3-minute video trailer at their web-site <www.thebaskervillebeast.co.uk>.
462. There was a charity auction on eBay (benefiting Kidscape) last month offering naming rights in Anthony Horowitz's sequel to "House of Silk" (which is due next year); there were 49 bids and the winning bid was £3,700 (about $5,723); that ensured that winner's character will meet Sherlock Holmes (a bid of more than £5,000 would have gotten the character killed off). But: one should note that in an interview with The Sunday Times (Mar. 24) Horowitz said that he has given up writing about Sherlock Holmes, and that the sequel won't have Holmes in it ("it is quite a dark thriller set after the supposed death of Sherlock Holmes at the Reichenbach Falls). In an interview in the Observer (Sept. 14) Horowitz said that "Sometimes you just have to rewrite a book: the new Sherlock Holmes novel wasn't working, so 42,000 words in I'm back to the beginning."
463. Oscar Ross has noted a Lego recreation of the sitting-room at 221B at the Lego CUUSOO web-site <www.tinyurl.com/nlb5a8a>. CUUSOO is a Japanese partner of the Lego Group ("cuusoo" reported means "wish" in Japanese), and you can search the web-site for [sherlock] to see some other interesting work.

464. Sep 13 #8 With regard to Les Klinger's lawsuit against the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate (Jun 13 #6), asking a federal court to rule that the characters of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John H. Watson are not protected by federal copyright laws, and that writers, filmmakers, and others can use the characters in new stories without paying license fees to the owners of the remaining copyright on the stories, the Estate has filed to oppose the motion, and Les has filed his response. All the documents in the case (and many of the reports in the press) are available at <www.free-sherlock.com>.
465. Y CYLTH BRITH is the newest addition to the list of foreign languages into which a Sherlock Holmes story has been translated; it's "The Speckled Band" in Welsh, and the translation, arranged by The Deerstalkers of Welshpool, was featured by BBC News Mid Wales on Aug. 31. The report (and some audio of a bit of the story read in Welsh) is at <www.tinyurl.com/owuvtj3>, and you can order the pamphlet (£6.00 plus shipping) from Roy Upton-Holder, the head of the Welsh society <ruptonholder@onetel.com>.
466. And as usual there's no shortage of Sherlockian dramatics, old and new:
467. Brandon Palmer's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Whitechapel Murders" is being performed by the Byers-Evans House Theatre Company in Denver through Oct. 12 (303-620-4933).
468. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" is being performed at the Fort Gordon Dinner Theatre in Fort Gordon, Ga., through Oct. 12 <www.fortgordon.com/theatre/php>.
469. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the fine parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is being presented by the Theater Project at the Burgdoff Center in Maplewood, N.J., through Oct. 13 <www.thetheaterproject.org>.
470. Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" can be seen the Ankeny Community Theatre in Ankeny, Iowa, Oct. 4-20 <www.ankenycommunitytheatre.com>. And at the Fountain Hills Theater Mainstage in Fountain Hills, Ariz., Oct. 25-Nov. 10 <www.fhtaz.org>.
471. John DeGaetano's "Sherlock Holmes 10 Minute Plays" will be at the Leicester Square Theatre in London, Oct. 2-5 <www.leicesterquaretheatre.com> and at the Kings Head Theatre in Islington, Oct. 8-12 <www.kingsheadtheatre.org>. The author's web-site is at <www.johndegaetanoproductions.com>, and there's a book with nine plays available at Amazon and elsewhere, and some videos at YouTube.
472. Ken Ludwig's Edgar Award-winning comedy-mystery-thriller "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" can be seen at the Summit Playhouse in Summit, N.J., Nov. 1-16 <www.summitplayhouse.org>.
473. Theatre Mill will present Max Gee's new adaptation of "The Speckled Band" at the Treasurer's House in York, Nov. 14-24, and at Ripley Castle in Harrogate, Nov. 26-28 <www.theatre-mill.co.uk>.

474. Oct 13 #1: Nick Utechin has noted evidence that the debate over whether the Sherlock Holmes stories qualify as literature has ended, at least according to The Times, whose recent (Sept. 17) "quick guide to everything you should know about culture" includes 25 books "that changed the course of literature." The chronological list starts with THE ILIAD and goes on to include A STUDY IN SCARLET.
475. Don Libey's THE BIOGRAPHY AND AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Santa Rosa: Campbell & Lewis, 2013; 238 pp., $17.00) offers both Mycroft's MY BROTHER, SHERLOCK and Sherlock's MONTAGUE NOTATIONS (Sep 12 #5). Just as Sherlock Holmes showed that there's a great deal of invention in Watson's writings, Mycroft Holmes explains that his brother is similarly unreliable.
476. Bouchercon 2013 in Albany was enjoyable, including the Sherlockian panel. Bouchercon 2014 ("Murder at the Beach" will be held in Long Beach, Nov. 13-16; Bouchercon 2015 (no title yet) in Raleigh, N.C., Oct. 8-11; Bouchercon 2016 ("Down in New Orleans") in New Orleans, Sept. 15-18; Bouchercon 2017 ("Passport to Murder") in Toronto, Oct. 12-15; and Bouchercon 2018 ("Crime in the Sunshine") in Saint Petersburg, Sept. 13-16.
477. "A Stout Heart in the Great Cesspool: Arthur Conan Doyle in London" was the title of an interesting lecture given by Richard Burnip at Gresham College on July 2, 2012, part of a series on "Literary London Crime"; thanks to the wonders of modern technology, there's audio, video and a transcript available at <www.tinyurl.com/n8vgbq5>.
478. "Sherlock Phone-Box Shrine Desecrated" was the eye-catching headline on the story on the Londonist web-site (Sept. 14) that "one of London's most cherished fan sites has been stripped bare" <www.tinyurl.com/ol552o7>. The fan site is red phone box outside St. Bart's Hospital, where fans of "Sherlock" left cards, ribbons, graffiti, and other mementos after Holmes jumped from the roof of the hospital at the end of the second series. A "cultural vandal" removed most of the messages, according to the story, and "the naked phone box is bereft of its individuality" (one assumes that it wasn't naked for very long).
479. D. A. Joy's MURDER IN WHITECHAPEL: THE ADVENTURE OF THE POST MORTEM KNIFE (Domnall Publishing, 2013; 481 pp., $15.25) has Holmes and Watson solving the mystery of Jack the Ripper, and includes retellings (with some differences from the Canon) of the end of "The Greek Interpreter" as well as four other recorded and unrecorded cases from the time of the Ripper.
480. The results of Howard Ostrom's investigation of the first Sherlockian movie that actually was filmed ("Sherlock Holmes Baffled" was created to be shown on Mutoscopes) have been published at the Baker Street Babes' web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/msg89lg>; the film in question is "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes (or Held for a Ransom)", released by Vitagraph in 1905. Filmographers have long tended to rely on earlier filmographers, and there's a lengthy list of film resources that identify Maurice Costello as the actor who play Holmes; Howard explaining in detail why it couldn't have been Costello, and suggests who the actor really was.

481. Oct 13 #2: There's nothing truly Sherlockian in Mark Leibovich's dishy new book THIS TOWN, but nevertheless there's a connection: Roxanne Roberts and Amy Argetzinger had an item about the book in their column "The Reliable Source" in the Washington Post <www.tinyurl.com/onqddsp> mentioning his account of a book party Tammy Haddad hosted for the son of Michelle Obama's chief of staff Susan Sher. The host actually was Jill Biden, and the party was at the official home of vice president Joe Biden; the book's author was Susan Sher's son Graham Moore, and his book was THE SHERLOCKIAN (Nov 10 #8). Roberts and Argetzinger's earlier item on the book party can be found at <www.tinyurl.com/oskb6gf>. There's more about the party, and the book, and the author, at his web-site <www.thesherlockian.com>.
482. The Museum of London's major exhibition on Sherlock Holmes (Jul 13 #2) will open on Oct. 14, 2014, and close on Apr. 12, 2015; there's a web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/mp263ux>.
483. Further to the item (Jun 13 #7) about Radio Spirits <www.radiospirits.com>, the company offers two sets of CDs of particular interest, each with program notes by Bill Nadel: "The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (16 programs starring Tom Conway and Nigel Bruce) and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (16 programs starring John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson (at $31.95 each).
484. John Moffatt died on Sept. 12, 2012. He had a long career as an actor, on stage, screen, radio, and television; in the 1980s he was a member of the BBC's Radio Drama Company, and played both Holmes (in "Sherlock Holmes vs. Dracula" in 1981) and Watson (with Roy Marsden in a series written by Grant Eustace, and with Dinsdale Landen in "Sherlock's Last Case" all in 1987).
485. Oscar Ross spotted a British web-site maintained by Penny Golightly, whose motto is ("who cares if we're broke, let's have fun anyway"), and has provided some helpful hints on a "221B Baker Street Makeover on a Budget with Argos" <www.tinyurl.com/m5jfggb> for anyone who wants to decorate a living room in the style of the sitting room seen in the BBC's "Sherlock" television series (Argos is a British on-line shopping web-site).
486. Anthony Hinds died on Sept. 30. He had a long career in the film business, and in the 1950s was one of the founders of Hammer Films. He was the producer of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), and he also dramatized the story as a three-act play performed by the Steeple Aston Players in 1982.
487. Pierre Decourcelle adapted William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" as a fiveact play performed in Paris in 1907 (the fifth act was provided by Decourcelle); if you'd like to see (or download) the television film "Une aventure de Sherlock Holmes" based on the play (as broadcast by ORTF in 1967), it is available at <www.ina.fr>, along with other interesting Sherlockian and Doylean video.
488. PBS-TV's two-hour special on "How Sherlock Holmes Changed the World" aired on the National Geographic channel in Britain on Oct. 8, giving Holmesians a leg up on Sherlockians, who won't see the program until it airs on PBS-TV in the U.S. in two parts on Nov. 19 and 26. There's more information about the program at <www.tinyurl.com/bc282lr>.
489. Oct 13 #3: The "Knickerbocker Classics" (from Race Point Publishing) now includes THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES, clothbound and in a slip case, with an insightful (as might be expected) foreword written by Daniel Stashower (2013; 1,200 pp., $35.00/£20.00). Dan says he's very pleased to be able to give his two boys an edition of the Canon that has a foreword by their old man.
490. TeeFury is an interesting retailer: their T-shirt designs are available for only one day <www.teefury.com>. "The Science of Deduction" (with artwork by Megan Lara) was sold on Sept. 16. You can vote to bring designs back, but of course you need to visit the web-site daily to find out if the design's available again. Or you can go to her web-site <www.tinyurl.com/lnssnk9> and buy the design on clothing or as a print or stickers.
491. Bryan Talbot, a well-known British comic-book artist, has designed the colorful new Sherlock Holmes Society of London Christmas Card. Packets of ten cards cost £7.50 postpaid to the U.K., £8.50 to Europe, and £12.00/$20.00 to the U.S.; details at the Society web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>.
492. You can see more of his artwork at his web-site <www.bryan-talbot.com>.
493. "There is as much sense in Hafiz as in Horace, and as much knowledge of the world," Sherlock Holmes said (in "A Case of Identity"). Michael Dirda gave high marks to FACES OF LOVE: HAFEZ AND THE POETS OF SHIRAZ, translated from the Persian by Dick Davis (2013) in a review in the Washington Post (Sept. 18) <www.tinyurl.com/o4aknw7>. And yes, there's more than one way to spell the name of the 13th-century poet.
494. It's always nice when long-lost Sherlockian films are discovered, and even nicer when they're made available on DVD, as is the case with "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1914); it's a German silent film, directed by Rudolf Meinert, with Alwin Neuss as Holmes. It's available, or soon will be, with English subtitles, from Editions Filmmuseum <www.edition-filmmuseum.com>.
495. Ruth Berman has reported Eleanor Arnason's science-fiction pastiche "Holmes Sherlock: A Hwarhath Mystery" available on-line <www.tinyurl.com/kdxphwd> and reprinted in Gardner Dozois' anthology THE 30TH ANNUAL YEAR'S BEST SCIENCE FICTION (St. Martin's Press, 2013); the Hwarhath first appeared in her novel RING OF SWORDS (1993), and she has written a series of stories about them.
496. If you'd like to see what a splendid copy of the first British edition of THE LOST WORLD in dust jacket looks like, go to <www.tinyurl.com/mstucyu>; it went to auction at Swann Galleries in New York on June 20, estimated at $6,000-9,000, and it sold for $22,800 (including the buyer's premium).
497. The Speckled Band of Boston will present a special event, open to the public, on Nov. 15 at Harvard University in Cambridge: there will be a sherry reception at the Houghton Library and a viewing of treasures from the H. W. Bell Speckled Band Collection, cocktails and dinner at the Harvard Faculty Club, and a presentation by Daniel Posnansky on "Frederic Dorr Steele, The Baker Street Irregulars, and Vincent Starrett: A Perfect Storm". More information is available from Richard Olken <speckledband@comcast.net>.
498. Oct 13 #4: Irene's Cabinet is the annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (62 pp.) offers an interesting mix of Sherlockian and Doylean poetry and prose, including Andrew Vetsch's amusing analysis of the Cumberbatch/Freeman "The Blind Banker", Andrew L. Solberg's thoughts about the future of the S'ian world, and Jisoo Choi's winning essay for this year's Clarkson Prize, named in honor of the late Steve Clarkson and sponsored by the society for seventh-graders in Howard County, Md. The cost is $15.00 postpaid, from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).
499. Catching up: John O'Connell's THE BASKERVILLE LEGACY (Feb 11 #6) also has a trade paperback edition as BASKERVILLES: THE MYSTERIOUS TALE OF SHERLOCK'S RETURN (London: Short Books, 2012; 190 pp., £7.99) (New York: Marble Arch, 2013; 190 pp., $16.00); it's an extremely fictionalized account of how Conan Doyle and Fletcher Robinson wrote HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES.
500. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times13-10.html>, offering Sherlockian news, commentary, and discussion.
501. Compliments and congratulation to retired Court of Appeals Judge Albert M. Rosenblatt: on Sept. 26 the Dutchess County Courthouse was dedicated in his honor. Al served as Dutchess County assistant district attorney, district attorney, and county judge from 1964 to 1981, and then in the state judiciary and on the Court of Appeals until he retired in 2006.
502. Anyone interested in Canonical birds will welcome Phil Attwell's report of the "Tweet of the Day" on BBC Radio 4. You can hear (and hear about) more than a hundred British birds, including a cormorant, a storm petrel, and a ringed plover <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b01s6xyk>.

503. The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" (Aug 13 #8) opened at the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland on Oct. 10, and closes on Jan. 5; there's a colorful web-site at <www.sherlockholmesexhibition.com>. The exhibition is scheduled next at the Center of Science and Industry in Columbus, Ohio, opening on Feb. 6 and closing on Sept. 8. There was a 3-minute report on KOIN-TV on Oct. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/kfh9u36> (Conan Doyle's great-grand-nephew Richard Doyle was on hand to open the exhibition).
504. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) has its focus on Donald Redmond, whose personal papers have been donated to the Collection: Chris Redmond writes about his father's work on the Library's "Bigelow Index" (he also indexed The Baker Street Journal for many years), and Peggy Perdue describes his work in and for the Collection. Copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
505. Further to the item (Sep 13 #5) on the campaign by the South Norwood Tourist Board to name a local lake in honor of Conan Doyle, the board now proposes the name Lake Conan (keeping the tradition of giving lakes one-word names) <www.southnorwoodtouristboard.com>, but has opened a poll to allow you to vote on various names <www.micropoll.com/a/mpview/1143074-3806016>.

506. Oct 13 #5: "How Benedict Cumberbatch and Alan Turing Helped a Writer Find Success in Hollywood" was the title on a long report by E. A. Hanks on Buzzfeed (Sept. 27) <www.tinyurl.com/ktagu5a>, noted by Samantha Wolov. The writer is Graham Moore, author of the pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (2010), and the screenplay is for the film "The Imitation Game" (due next year, starring Cumberbatch as Turing).
507. The late Robert Joynt wrote five pastiches published in Neurology, and an unfinished sixth pastiche was found on his computer, and there's now a contest to complete the story (the deadline is Nov. 11). Details and the text can be found at <www.neurology.org/content/81/11/1018.full>, with links to the first five stories.
508. It's probably merely a coincidence, but many viewers of the first episode of the second season of CBS-TV's "Elementary" noted that one of the commercials also was briefly Sherlockian <www.tinyurl.com/k5cl2hb>; for those who haven't read "The Second Stain" (or don't remember the story), Eduardo Lucas was the secret agent found murdered in his flat in Godolphin Street.
509. Jack Tracy, when he died in 1996, left behind many frustrated customers, as well as a wealth of interesting stories; many of those stories can be found in Phil Dematteis' "The Strange Life and Death of Jack Tracy" (a paper Phil delivered at a recent meeting of The Hansom Wheels and available at their web-site) <www.hansomwheels.com>.
510. Ales Kolodrubec has posted a nice tribute to John Bennett Shaw at the website of the Ceska spolecnost Sherlock Holmese, on the occasion of the centenary of John's birth on Oct. 10, 2013 <www.tinyurl.com/lve5qvo>. If you aren't fluent in Czech can read it in English (thanks to Google Translate) at <www.tinyurl.com/mv5gwgu>.
511. Benedict Cumberbatch was on the cover of Time magazine (Oct. 28), but only on the cover of the international edition. Concerned "about what it says for feminism," he no longer refers to his female fans as Cumberbitches, suggesting that "Cumberbabes might be better". He was inside the U.S. edition, but not the cover. Radio Times provided its readers with a 1-minute video of the shoot <www.tinyurl.com/nl7xulu>, and there's much more about him at <www.benedictcumberbatch.co.uk>.
512. If you're wondering what Time magazine thought was more important for its domestic edition, the cover showed "The United States of Texas" (by way of highlighting a long story on "Why Texas Is Our Future" that was subtitled "It's not an accident that three of the five fastest-growing cities are in Texas. It's more like destiny."
513. HOUNDS OF THE BASKERVILLES: FROM DEMON DOGS TO SHERLOCK HOLMES (New Brunswick: Global Communications, 2012; 273 pp., $17.06.) is edited by Timothy Green Beckley, who says he is "a friend of all things weird and unknown," and explains that "since an early his life has more or less revolved around the paranormal." The book includes accounts of phantom black dogs in Britain, Canada, the United States, and other countries; a reprint of the story by Conan Doyle, and other related material.
514. Oct 13 #6: Sherlock Holmes' 159th birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 17, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:30 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> or Evy Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you are coming to the event.
515. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 2nd floor of the Midtown Executive Club (at 40 West 45th Street); the speaker will be James O'Brien, author of THE SCIENTIFIC SHERLOCK HOLMES (2012); his book won an Edgar (best critical/biographical) from the Mystery Writers of America. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you should reserve early (details below); tickets will not be sold at the door.
516. The Baker Street Babes' "Daintiest Thing Under a Bonnet Charity Ball" will start at 8:00 pm at The Players (16 Gramercy Park South), offering appetizers, live music, toasts, a costume competition, prizes, and an auction; the cost is $35.00, and the proceeds will benefit the Wounded Warriors Project (last year's event raised nearly $3,000 for the project). More information be posted soon at <www.bakerstreetbabes.com>.
517. Otto Penzler's traditional open house on Friday from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
518. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue (at 19th Street), with entertainment (an original presentation) provided by the Friends of Bogie's; the cost is $47.00 for chicken or salmon ($52.00 for prime rib). Send checks to Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221b@gmail.com>.
519. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street at Seventh Avenue); details are available from Becky Robare (111 North 9th Street #300, Philadelphia, PA 10107 (917-817-1608) <robareowl@gmail.com>.
520. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and at the Gaslight Gala, and early reservations are advised if you wish to attend these events.
521. If you want to send seasonal souvenirs or other mementos to be included in the various dinner packets you should send 175 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 100 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919), and 18 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material must be mailed to arrive by Dec. 16.

522. Oct 13 #7: On Saturday a wide range of Sherlockiana will be available from vendors in the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) in the Vanderbilt Suite (on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel at 45 East 45th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; you can contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> for information about dealers' tables.

523. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be at 10:00 am in the York Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel, where they will present their annual Beacon Award recognizing individuals' efforts to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people; details are at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner will hold a Junior Bloodstain, also in the York Suite, at 11:15 am, with Wodehousean entertainment.
524. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:30 to 4:30 in the second-floor lounge at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); there will be a cocktail-party buffet and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks), and the usual (perhaps unusual) entertainment; the cost is $69.00 (details below) or $79.00 after Nov. 29 or at the door.
525. For those who wish to continue partying, there are as yet no plans (firm or infirm) for sporting events at Kennedy's or other venues on Saturday evening; stay tuned (as they say) for a further report.
526. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold their informal buffet brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 am until "the last egg is exterminated" at Harley's Smoke Shack and BBQ at 356 West 44th Street (between Eighth and Ninth Avenues); $20.00 payable by cash or check at the door. The brunch is open to all, but reservations are requested; details about a fine way to end a long weekend are available from Lyndsay Faye (450 West 162nd Street #25-E, New York, NY 10032) <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
527. Arrangements have been made for a block of rooms at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) at a special tax-free rate of $189.00 per night (single or double room); the special rate is available only for reservations made through the Baker Street Irregulars by Nov. 22. Guest cards for the Club's second-floor lounge are available to all Sherlockians.
528. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Roosevelt Hotel and the Yale Club, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> after Nov. 8 and click on BSI Weekend, or contact Mary Ann Bradley <mabmfw@aol.com>.
529. Other hotels offer reasonable (as defined by New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.hotels.com>; you will be wise then to check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (do keep in mind that there are non-optional extras such as almost 20% in state and city taxes).

530. Oct 12 #8 The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
531. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>. News about additional events will be found in next month's issue of this newsletter.
532. Howard Ostrom and Ray Wilcockson have a well-illustrated article on "Voices from the Darkness: A Look at African-American Sherlock Holmes" available at Ross K. Foad's "No Place Like Holmes" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/kpa28ad>, and it's not just Sherlock Holmes: they start with Conan Doyle's campaign against what he called "The Crime of the Congo" and his invitation to referee the heavyweight contest between Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson, and includes detailed coverage of films, television, records, and Internet video.
533. Save the date: Marcus Geisser reports that there will be a conference honoring Conan Doyle's visits to Davos (in Switzerland) on Sept. 26-28, 2014. Save another date: the Baker Street Irregulars Trust will sponsor a conference at Harvard University on June 5-7, 2015, focusing on the bibliophilic aspects of Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle, with the possibility of field trips to Boston and Vermont. Save still another date: the BSI will hold a conference celebrating Sherlock Holmes and the Arts in mid-September 2016 at the Chautauqua Institution in far southwestern New York state. Details on all of these will be reported when they're available.
534. Those who pursue the Canon in other languages will welcome a first Klingon translation: "The Blue Carbuncle" (Minneapolis: 221T Press, 2013; 31 pp., $13.74); the translation is by Bing, with assistance from Karen Ellery, and you can order from Lulu <www.tinyurl.com/mtspvkt>.
535. Madeleine George's new play "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" will be produced at the Playwrights Horizons Mainstage Theater in New York, Nov. 17-Dec. 29 <www.playwrightshorizons.org>; this Watson is "trusty sidekick to Sherlock Holmes, loyal engineer who built Bell's first telephone, unstoppable super-computer that became reigning "Jeopardy!" champ, and amiable techno-deweeb who, in the present day is looking for love." There's a five-minute video about the play's background at <www.tinyurl.com/phd7ahv>.
536. Finally, nicely in time for holiday hinting (or shopping), Randall Stock's annual informative nominations for "the best Sherlock Holmes books and DVDs of the year" is on-line at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm>.

537. Nov 13 #1: There's more information about the birthday festivities in New York in January: The Gaslight Gala (open to all Sherlockians and their friends) has a new venue: The Dover Parlour (228 Thompson Street, located between Bleeker and West 3rd Streets in Greenwich Village); the event will run from 7:00 to 11:00 pm on Friday, with a cost of $105 for dinner, entertainment, and open bar (discounted to $75 for people younger than 21). Details are available from Becky Robare (111 North 9th Street #300, Philadelphia, PA 10107 (917-817-1608) <robareowl@gmail.com>.
538. Saturday-morning visitors to the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) will be able to buy books (some signed or inscribed) from the collection of the late Ted Schulz, with proceeds kindly donated by Vinnie Brosnan to the Baker Street Irregulars Trust. The books will be on sale at Bob Hess' table.
539. Chrys Kegley of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will host The Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians Dinner on Saturday at 6:00 pm at O'Lunney's Times Square Pub (145 West 45th Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues); $47.00 (including tax and tip) and the details are available from Chrys (18014 Sherman Way #275, Reseda, CA 91235) (818-675-5399) <ckegley@socal.rr.com>.
540. It's not quite a birthday-festivities event, but everyone surely will want to be home in time to watch the U.S. premiere of the third season of "Sherlock" on PBS-TV on Jan. 19. The first episode will of course reveal just how Benedict Cumberbatch survived his fall from the roof of St. Bart's.
541. There's an exhibition on "Edgar Allan Poe: Terror of the Soul" at the Morgan Library (225 Madison Avenue at 36th Street) that includes some of the authors he influenced, one of them being Conan Doyle, who's represented by the first page of the manuscript of Chapter XI of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (on loan from the Berg Collection of the N.Y. Public Library). Also on display is a copy of Poe's "Tamerlane" with a mention of the article "Have You a Tamerlane in Your Attic" (but Greg Darak reports, without mention of the author of the article: Vincent Starrett).
542. MC Black suggests that anyone coming to London for the annual dinner of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London (on Jan. 11) may be interested in one of his Detective Walks. He offers a discounted price of £5.00 to readers of this newsletter, and he's at <mcb@detectivewalks.co.uk>.

543. Tina Rhea spotted a report on Chironius challenger, a newly-named species of snake that was found at Maringma Tepui in the Pakamaraima Mountains on the Guyana-Brazil border. The species was named by Philippe J. R. Kok in 2010 in honor of Professor Challenger, and you can read all about it at the Reptile Database <www.tinyurl.com/lbtrpu6>.
544. It's not Sherlockian, but here's your chance to see Christopher Lee, accompanied by sexy back-up dancers and a goblin, singing about booze in an effort to corrupt an alcoholic super-hero into falling off the wagon. It's a clip from an Australian musical comedy "The Return of Captain Invincible" (1983), kindly made available by Dread Central <www.tinyurl.com/mth3vr3>.
545. Nov 13 #2: Benedict Cumberbatch continues to be busy: he'll play Lt. Col. Percival Fawcett in the film "The Lost City of Z" (based on the book by David Grann). Fawcett spent many years trying to find a lost civilization hidden in the Matto Grosso in Brazil, and on his last expedition, in 1925, he vanished, never to be heard from again. He met Conan Doyle in 1910, and you can read more about them in THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD, by Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin (1996): they quote from Fawcett's memoirs EXPLORATION FAWCETT (eventually published in 1953). He was in London to lecture about his exploration of the Ricardo Franco Hills, and later wrote: "They stood like a lost world, forested to their tops ... So thought Conan Doyle when later in London I spoke of these hills and showed photographs of them! He mentioned an idea for a novel on Central South America and asked for information, which I told him I should be glad to supply. The fruit of it was his 'Lost World'."
546. Gerald N. Wachs ("Sir James Saunders") died on Nov. 8. Jerry was a dermatologist who presided over the annual recertification examination of The Sir James Saunders Society (the professional society for Sherlockian dermatologists), co-author of the definitive bibliography of Tom Stoppard, and a collector whose interests ranged from 19th-century English poetry to Sherlockian lapel pins. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1995.
547. Further to the mention of the Canadian one-hour television series "Murdoch Mysteries" (Jun 13 #1), it's now available in the United States on the Ovation channel as "The Artful Detective". It's nicely done, set in Toronto in the 1890s, and stars Yannick Bisson as Inspector Murdoch. Geraint Wyn Davies has appeared as Arthur Conan Doyle in four episodes ("Elementary, My Dear Murdoch", "Belly Speaker", "A Study in Sherlock", and "Return of Sherlock"), with the last two also featuring Andrew Gower as a man who claims that he is Sherlock Holmes.
548. Tim Federle's TEQUILA MOCKINGBIRD: COCKTAILS WITH A LITERARY TWIST (Philadelphia: Running Press, 2013; 148 pp., $15.00) contains atmospheric illustrations by Lauren Mortimer and amusing instructions and recipes for cocktails such as "The Blizzard of Oz", "The Malted Falcon", and "Romeo and Julep", and "The Adventures of Sherbet Holmes" (which combines berry sherbet, Champagne, ginger ale, and blueberries).
549. SHAATJ! That's "Sherlock Holmes and All That Jazz" (now under the auspices of The Sherlockians by Invitation Only Society), and there will be an extravaganza held in Davenport, Iowa, birthplace of Dixieland great Bix Beiderbecke, in July or August 2014. If you would like to be on their mailing list, contact Donald B. Izban (1012 Rene Court, Park Ridge, IL 60068).
550. Jim Weiss continues to offer his excellent recordings for younger audiences and has added THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES to his list ($13.95 on CD). It is nicely done, as are his earlier SHERLOCK HOLMES FOR CHILDREN ("The Mazarin Stone"/"The Speckled Band"/"The Musgrave Ritual"/"The Blue Carbuncle") and MYSTERY! MYSTERY! ("The Red-Headed League" and tales by Chesterton and Poe); you can listen to samples at his web-site <www.greathall.com>. There are many non-Sherlockian tales in his catalog (Greathall Productions, Box 5061, Charlottesville, VA 22905 (800-477-6234)).
551. Nov 13 #3: "Sherlock Holmes in Brentwood" (the new play-reading series curated and introduced by Les Klinger) was launched earlier this year with Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band" (Feb 13 #3), and will continue with Bonnie MacBird's dramatization of "The Blue Carbuncle" at the Contrapuntal Performance Hall in Brentwood (Los Angeles) on Dec. 8. Details at their web-site <www.sherlockholmesinbrentwood.com>.
552. Barbara Hicks died on Sept. 6. She had a long career on stage, screen, and television in supporting roles, not all of them serious (her obituaries in the British press noted that Mel Brooks considered her the funniest woman he had ever met). She also played Emily Garrideb in Granada's "The Mazarin Stone" (1994).
553. Ann Treneman's FINDING THE PLOT: 100 GRAVES TO VISIT BEFORE YOU DIE (London: Robson Press, 2013; 307 pp., £12.00/$16.99) offers a delightful tour of what she calls the "dead interesting" inhabitants of British graveyards, including Conan Doyle (the cover photographs show her at his grave-site); her essays are informative and interesting, and her choices range from the famous to the infamous, from the well known to those who ought to be.
554. If you remember Cliff Notes and Monarch Notes (happily used for many years by pre-Internet students), you won't be surprised that there now are Mojo Notes <www.watchmojo.com>, noted by Andrew Vetsch. Their book videos include "The Hound of the Baskervilles" <www.tinyurl.com/k8x928l>.
555. Alan Rettig has reported on his visit to Moriarty, N.M. (which now proudly calls itself "the crossroads of opportunity"); the city has a web-site, at <www.cityofmoriarty.org>, but the Frontier Saloon has vanished, and there isn't even an historical plaque honoring the site of the Moriarty Memorial Manure Pile invented by John Bennett Shaw. What the town does have (and this would surely please John) is the Sierra Blanca Brewing Company, which has a web-site <www.sierrablancabrewery.com> and craft beer that "is brewed in the wild west and is out of this world!" (according to the company, not Alan). But Alan did try a bottle of Rodeo Cold lager, right off the line, and describes as a very good lager from a most charming brewery.
556. Don Pollock has reported that the Easton Press has announced a new edition of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES <www.tinyurl.com/kg4n27s>; leather-bound, with new illustrations by Matthew Stewart, signed by the artist, and limited to 1,200 copies ($267.00).
557. The manuscript of "The Marriage of the Brigadier" has been added to the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library; it's the last of the stories he wrote about the Brigadier Etienne Gerard, and the manuscript was one of many Conan Doyle manuscripts owned by William Randolph Hearst. Randall Stock offers more information about the manuscript at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mo37d9m>.
558. There's a short list of actors who have played Sherlock Holmes and who also have played actors who have played Sherlock Holmes. One of them is Christopher Plummer, who starred as John Barrymore in "Barrymore" (which ran for more than seven months on Broadway in 1997). The play was filmed in 2011, and it will air on "Great Performances" on PBS-TV on Jan. 31.
559. Nov 13 #4: Matt Laffey offers all sorts of Sherlockian comment and information at his "Always 1895" web-site, including an interesting discussion of "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes" (the play written by Jeremy Paul for Jeremy Brett and Edward Hardwicke <www.tinyurl.com/kehjv6p>. Look for the link (in the first paragraph) to an audio recording of the play, as performed by Brett and Hardwicke.
560. SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. DRACULA (1978) was Loren D. Estleman's first Sherlockian pastiche, and he has now edited the anthology SONS OF MORIARTY AND MORE STORIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Blue Ash: Tyrus Books, 2013; 207 pp., $24.99), which includes his own title novella and reprints of seven fine older pastiches by others ranging from Arthur Conan Doyle (1896) to Lenore Carroll (2002).

561. Otto Penzler has edited THE BIG BOOK OF CHRISTMAS MYSTERIES (New York: Vintage Crime/Black Lizard, 2013; 672 pp., $25.00); it's billed on the cover as "the most complete collection of Yuletide whodunits ever assembled," and it contains 60 stories, five of them Sherlockian. One of them (of course) is "The Blue Carbuncle" with others by Peter Todd, S. C. Roberts, Edward D. Hoch, and Gillian Linscott.
563. "Nova: Cold Case JFK" aired on PBS-TV on Nov. 13, examining whether modern forensic science can uncover fresh clues about the assassination of President Kennedy; Greg Darak reports that at the end of the program one of the investigators says, "if you rule out that which is impossible, that which remains, no matter how seemingly improbable, is the truth." There was no mention of the source of the quote, and it's possible that it's now getting to be part of cultural literacy (things people are expected to know), along with "Moriarty" and "the dog in the night-time" (often seen now without any mention of Sherlock Holmes). You may still be able to view the program online at <www.pbs.org/wgbh/nova/tech/cold-case-jfk.html>.
564. "Willkommen to Reichenbach Hall" is the motto of Reichenbach Hall, noted by Will Walsh at 5 West 37th Street in New York <www.reichenbachall.com>. He has not yet found anything Sherlockian on the menu, but is investigating.
565. The two-hour special on "How Sherlock Changed the World" aired on the National Geographic channel in Britain on Oct. 8, and it will be broadcast by PBS in the U.S. on Dec. 17 (delayed from the November dates that were originally announced). You can go to <www.tinyurl.com/bc282lr> for more information about the program.
566. The Crime Writers' Association (the British equivalent of the Mystery Writers of America) is celebrating its 60th anniversary and has polled its members to determine the Best Ever Crime Writer: the winner was Agatha Christie (Conan Doyle came in second). Christie's THE MURDER OF ROGER ACKROYD won as Best Ever Crime Novel (THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES came in third, behind Christie's MURDER ON THE ORIENT EXPRESS). "Sherlock Holmes" did win as The Best Ever Crime Series.
567. Nov 13 #5: Alexander Orlov reports that the new Russian "Sherlock Holmes" series, with Igor Petrenko as Holmes and Andrei Panin as Watson, premiered his month. You can see many of the episodes [look for the (approximately) 90-minute links] at <www.tinyurl.com/ovo9nmv>; it's all in Russian, of course, but one hopes that when the series is released on DVDs there will be subtitles in English. The programs may also be available at YouTube. The episodes were broadcast in Russia in two parts, each 45 minutes, four days a week (Monday through Thursday), which explains why they are so quickly on the Internet.
568. Rebecca Eaton has presided over the PBS/WGBH "Masterpiece" series for more than 25 years, and she has many excellent stories to tell in MAKING MASTERPIECE (New York: Viking, 2013; 300 pp., $29.95); her memoirs cover both her life and her career as an Emmy award-winning producer (of "Masterpiece Theatre" and "Mystery!"), and her behind-the-scenes stories, Sherlockian and otherwise, are a delight.
569. It's official: the "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" (currently at the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry in Portland) (Oct 13 #7), will open at the Center of Science and Industry in Columbus, Ohio, on Feb. 8 and close on Sept. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/k3sapom>.
570. Basil Rathbone often wore an iconic deerstalker as Sherlock Holmes, but not always: he's sometimes seen in a tweed hat (as in "Spider Woman" and other Universal films). That hat (authenticated) was auctioned by Premiere Props on Nov. 23; estimated at $5,000-$8,000, and it sold for $1,000.
571. Phil Attwell reports that the Royal Mail has conducted a survey of possible themes for postage stamps for the next three years, and one of them is "Famous Hoaxes" (with the Cottingley Fairies, the Piltdown Man, and the Loch Ness Monster as examples).
572. Benoit Guilielmo has noted "Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Primary References in the Early Works of P. G. Wodehouse (through 1922)"; it's an interesting survey by John Dawson <www.madameulalie.org/articles/pgwconandoyle.html> of the writings of an author who knew Conan Doyle and greatly admired his work (Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian).
573. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE KNAVE OF HEARTS, by Steve Hayes and David Whitehead (London: Robert Hale, 2013; 224 pp., £19.99), brings Holmes and Watson to France, solving an intricate mystery that involves Jules Verne and his family, and a dastardly political plot.
574. Peter Melonas offers interesting Sherlockian artwork, by various artists, at <www.fineartamerica.com/art/all/sherlock+holmes/all> (there are nearly 200 images to inspect).
575. "Coin of the Canonical Realm" is a 55-page monograph by Nicholas Utechin, to be published in mid-December by The John H. Watson Society; it's a detailed discussion of Canonical coins and notes (illustrated in full color), and comparisons of "then and now" values. $9.00 (plus shipping) and there is more information at the society's web-site <www.johnhwatsonsonociety.com>.
576. Nov 13 #6: The fanatic completist may (or may not) welcome a report from Mark Hime in Bibliotopus catalog 51 (2013) that the much rarer (earlier?) of two states (issues?) of the first issue of Playboy has page 3 numbered; he's asking only $9,000 for a presentation copy (with page 3 numbered) sent by Hugh Hefner to John Basil in 1955 from Playboy's editorial file, accompanied by a letter typed by Janet Pilgrim and signed by Hefner. This issue's important to Sherlockian collectors because it contains an excerpt from "The Sign of the Four". Hime also notes that Playboy codified two ideas: "that sex was the poor man's private jet, and that while sexual innocence is enchanting in young people, it's a needless aberration in mature adults." His catalogs are entertaining and instructive, and available at his web-site <www.bibliotopus.com>.
577. The John H. Watson Society has published the first issue of its semi-annual journal "The Watsonian", with 152 pages of comment, commentary, reminiscences, and bibliographic research, and it's an excellent tribute to a man who does not always receive the attention he deserves. Membership in the society (including the journal) costs $40.00 for two years, and its web-site's at <www.johnhwatsonsonociety.com>.
578. "The Empty Hears" (the first episode of the new season of "Sherlock") will be screened at the British Film Institute in London on Dec. 15, and lucky ticket-holders will also be able to see a live Q&A session with some of the actors in the series; tickets to the screening sold out almost instantly, of course. The BBC has not yet announced an air date for the series (as we went to press), but there seems to be a strong possibility that it will be Jan. 1 (well before the U.S. launch on Jan. 19). Needless to say, the Internet will be full of news about "The Empty Hears" as people tweet live from the screening on Dec. 15, and comment quickly on blogs and such, with or without spoiler alerts. One wonders whether purists will decide to shun the Internet, to avoid reading spoilers, so that they can be surprised when the series actually airs.
579. "A Dickens of a Murder" (an interactive murder-mystery dinner-theater production) takes place after the events of "A Christmas Carol" with Ebenezer Scrooge a changed man, but when he doesn't show up at a Christmas party and is found dead, audience members assist none other than Sherlock Holmes in finding the murderer. The show's performed by Without a Cue Productions at the Resorts Casino in Atlantic City, N.J. <www.resortsc.com> and at Fisher's Tudor House in Bensalem, Pa. <www.fisherstudor.com> through Dec. 21.
580. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the fine parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) will be performed at Playhouse on Park in West Hartford, Conn., Dec. 4-22 <www.playhouseonpark.org>. And at the Straz Center for the Performing Arts in Tampa, Fla., Jan. 8 to Feb. 2 <www.strazcenter.org>.

581. Next year's "Sherlock Holmes Weekends" in Cape May, N.J., will be on Mar. 14-16 and Nov. 7-9; there will be a mystery to solve, and performances by the East Lynne Theater Company of Gayle Stahlhuth's radio-theater dramatization of "The Copper Beeches" <www.eastlyntheater.org>.
582. Dec 13 #1: A federal judge has issued a declaratory judgment in Les Klinger's lawsuit against the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate (Sep 13 #8), ruling that Holmes, Watson, and other story elements that appear in the 50 stories now in the public domain can be used freely by others without permission from the Estate. Story elements that appear only in the ten stories still protected by copyright cannot be used by others without permission. IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, an anthology of new stories edited by Les and Laurie R. King and originally scheduled for publication this year without payment of a licensing fee to the Estate, is now scheduled for 2014. You can read all the details about the lawsuit and the decision at <www.free-sherlock.com>, and there was a story in the N.Y. Times on Dec. 28 <www.tinyurl.com/mmssof9>.
583. More information is available about "Alpine Adventures: Arthur Conan Doyle and Switzerland", the conference planned by The Reichenbach Irregulars in Davos on Sept. 26-28; they promise a weekend devoted to "an author, a skier, a detective--and a ghost." The society's web-site is at <www.221b.ch>, and the full program for the conference is at <www.tinyurl.com/lzvxxqk>.
584. BelTA (the Belarusian Telegraph Agency) reported (Dec. 3) on plans to build a Sherlock Holmes house in the town of Orsha <www.tinyurl.com/kyydo8h>; the story quotes Oleg Shchukin, director of the company Protege By, which has designed the building and is seeking investors for the project. Alexander Orlov has kindly provided links to the company's web-site <www.protege.by> and to details <www.tinyurl.com/lgnambd>; it's all in Russian, but Google Translate is extremely helpful.
585. It's official: the third season of "Sherlock" will begin on BBC One on Jan. 1, and the announcement was as imaginative as other publicity for the series: tweets to #sherlocklives alerted fans to a handsome black hearse being driven through London with a flower arrangement spelling out "Sherlock" and "01 01 14". The title of the season's first episode is "The Empty Hearse".
586. This is going to create an interesting situation for at least some American viewers: those who don't want spoilers, so that they can be surprised when the series begins on PBS-TV on Jan. 19. Not only will the Internet be full of comment, and perhaps bootleg uploads to YouTube and other web-sites, but there will be Brits at the birthday festivities who will have seen the series, and may or may not kindly refrain from revealing secrets.
587. In the meantime, on Dec. 24 the BBC broadcast a spectacular 7-minute teaser ("Many Happy Returns") for the series (without spoilers); you can watch it at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=JwntNANJCOE>. And PBS-TV has scheduled a one-hour special "Unlocking Sherlock Holmes" for Jan. 12, offering interviews with writers and actors; if you don't want to wait until Jan. 12, the program is available on-line at <www.video.pbs.org>
588. Admirers of Aunt Clara may be interested in Svend Ranild's Danish translation "Min Tante Claras Meriter" in the latest issue of Sherlockiana (published by the Sherlock Holmes Klubben i Danmark), available on request from Svend at <sr@ranild.dk>. There's colorful artwork, and you don't need to worry about learning a new melody.

589. Dec 13 #2: Compliments to David Milner, who reports in the December issue of The Gaslight Gazette (published by The Survivors of the Gloria Scott) on something new under the sun, so to speak: there actually is a blue garnet, which will be of interest to those who have discussed whether the Blue Carbuncle was a sapphire or a diamond; according to Wikipedia, the blue garnet was first found in the 1990s in Bekily, Madagascar, and is also known in the United States, Russia, Kenya, Tanzania, and Turkey. However: blue garnets seem to be a color-change garnet variety, similar to the beryl variety alexandrite; you can see the wide range in color of blue garnets at <www.tinyurl.com/m7vavhu>.
590. Episodes of the new Russian "Sherlock Holmes" television series can still be seen (in Russian) at <www.tinyurl.com/ovo9nmv>, and Tina Rhea has noted that the older Livanov/Solomin series (with English subtitles) can be seen on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/3d22ahf>.
591. Samantha Wolov spotted "Elementary My Dear Watsonville" (a pizza with red sauce, mozzarella, artichokes, and tomato) offered by Escape from New York Pizza in San Francisco; the restaurant is 90 miles from Watsonville.
592. LitKids offers imaginative literary artwork by Matt Hinrichs, including a portrait of Sherlock Holmes on actual pages from the Canon ($15.00) <www.tinyurl.com/lpjqpdpj>.
593. Admirers of pastiches surely realize that the Sherlock Holmes stories aren't the only stories to be pastiched. Sebastian Faulks, authorized by the Wodehouse heirs, has written JEEVES AND THE WEDDING BELLS, was favorably reviewed by Christopher Buckley in the N.Y. Times on Dec. 1 <www.tinyurl.com/ls5my43>. But Scott Daniels has reported other less favorable reviews, by Isaac Chotiner in the New Republic <www.tinyurl.com/myabna7> and by Alexandra Petri in the Washington Post <www.tinyurl.com/lbt43fy>, neither of the reviews being at all fond of fan fiction, authorized or otherwise.
594. From Stephen Booth's DEAD AND BURIED (2012): "Even Sir Arthur Conan Doyle had once said: 'All this country is hollow. Could you strike it with some gigantic hammer it would boom like a drum.'" And where will that quote be found?
595. Dan Crowe, when he was editor of the literary magazine Zembla, asked a series of living authors to interview their dead literary heroes. Ian Rankin, creator of Inspector Rebus, chose Arthur Conan Doyle; the interview, first published in 2004, has now been reprinted in the collection DEAD INTERVIEWS (London: Granta, 2013; 202 pp., £12.99). It's not the first time that Rankin has channeled Conan Doyle, who's featured in Rankin's short story "The Acid Test" in the winter 1998-99 issue of Edit (the University of Edinburgh magazine) <www.tinyurl.com/kjnpf3b>.
596. The fall issue of "For the Sake of the Trust" (the newsletter of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust) has news about the Trust, and about recent additions to the Archives at the Houghton Library, and it's available both at the Trust web-site <www.bsitrust.org> and by e-mail; if you would like to be on the mailing list, send a request to <trust221b@gmail.com>.

597. Dec 13 #3: Further to the item (Oct 13 #4) about the campaign by the South Norwood Tourist Board to arrange for the naming of a local lake in honor of Conan Doyle, Jason E. Cooper has reported that the lake will be (unofficially) named Conan Doyle Lake on Feb. 1 (he hopes to persuade the local council to make things official). He also has launched a fund-raising effort to commission a sculpture of Conan Doyle to be displayed in the center of South Norwood <www.gofundme.com/5en97s>.
598. Oscar Ross reports that his daughters Andrea and Deborah spotted an attractive "Sherlock Chair" offered at Next in Belfast (Next is a chain with many branches in the U.K. and Europe), available in a wide range of fabrics and colors, including Darwin (fabric) and Espresso (color) <www.tinyurl.com/m9g8yfd>.
599. "Wholock: Sherlock Meets the Doctor!" is an imaginative 6-minute crossover video produced by John Smith, who explains his concept as: "Months after an encounter with a mysterious 'Doctor', Sherlock becomes obsessed with discovering more about this impossible man...until the man makes an unexpected return." You can watch it at <www.tinyurl.com/lm3ya9z>, along with a spectacular 5-minute "VFX Breakdown" showing the sort of thing that can be done with modern technology. It has been reported that the BBC was so impressed with the video that they authorized it.
600. "All this country is hollow. Could you strike it with some gigantic hammer it would boom like a drum." It isn't all that often that one finds an author quoting Conan Doyle from something other than the Canon. This quote's from "The Terror of Blue John Gap".

601. Neil Gaiman's pastiche "A Study in Emerald" has inspired a board game, designed by Martin Wallace for Treefrog Games ($75.00/€55.00/£48.00); details at <www.treefroggames.com/a-study-in-emerald>.
602. "The Quiet Man" is one of the 25 films in this year's list of additions to the Library of Congress' National Film Registry (an archive of American motion pictures "earmarked for preservations because of their cultural, historic, or aesthetic significance"). It's a fine film, and it has a remote Sherlockian connection: when the locals arrive at the newlyweds' cottage, they sing "Mush, Mush" (the music's now used by Sherlockians when they sing "We Never Mention Aunt Clara").
603. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times13-12.html>, offering Sherlockian news, commentary, and discussion.
604. Peter O'Toole died on Dec. 14. He began his acting career with the Bristol Old Vic in 1955, played a small part in the television series "The Scarlet Pimpernel" in 1956, and won fame for "Lawrence of Arabia" in 1962, the film for which he won the first of his eight Oscar nominations. In 1963 he was considered by Billy Wilder for the title role in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (eventually released starring Robert Stephens in 1970), and he played Holmes on stage in a touring production of "Dead Eyed Dicks" (1976). He also provided the voice of Holmes in four animations of the long stories (1983), and played Conan Doyle in "FairyTale: A True Story" in 1997.

605. Dec 13 #4: Further to the report (Mar 11 #2) on the statue of a black swan that adorns Winchester's Black Swan Building Block, the Southern Daily Echo has noted that there's now a polished steel plaque that explains that the building is the site of the Black Swan Hotel, which Holmes and Watson visited in "The Copper Beeches".
606. DEATH BY MISADVENTURE (North Charleston: Beach Reeds, 2013; 136 pp., $9.99) is a new pastiche by Steve Leadley that involves Holmes and Watson with a mysterious murder, Nicolas Tesla, and Russian anarchists.
607. Mike Hogan's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND YOUNG WINSTON series continues; THE GIANT MOLES (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 203 pp., £9.99) has Holmes, Watson, and a precocious 13-year-old Churchill involved in a investigation of missing papers, a mad doctor, and (possibly) giant moles. Hogan's web-site is at <www.mikehoganbooks.co.uk> and the publisher's at <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
609. Another interesting video is a "Saturday Night Live" skit "The Robert Goulet Holiday Special" broadcast on Dec. 8, 2001; Jennie Paton has found it at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=P1m8nO8nVuk>.
610. Warren Dunn, a managing partner of Thomson OPI LLP, is seeking investors in a new project "Sherlock Holmes and the Canary Girls" (initially a play to be produced in English and Mandarin, and then possibly a film or television series); contact Dunn <warren@thomsonopi.com> to request a prospectus and director's statement.
611. The Literary Gift Company <www.literarygiftcompany.com>, spotted by Michele Kaminski has an assortment of appropriate gifts; just search for [sherlock] and [baskervilles] and [conan doyle].
612. J. Randolph Cox still teaches "Sherlock Holmes": one two-hour class a week for eight weeks in January and February at the Cannon Valley Elder Collegium in Northfield, Minn.; he reports that the class filled on the first day of registration.
613. Older collectors will remember Sherlock's Home, Chris Caswell's bookstore in southern California in the 1980s and 1990s; he's now selling old and new items at Etsy <www.etsy.com/shop/aSherlockshome?ref=si\_shop>.
614. Chris Gay's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE FINAL REVEAL (Manchester: Susea Press, 2013; 60 pp., $10.00) is Watson's account of his last meeting with Holmes, and the background to a case that Holmes was never able to solve.
615. "I like artifacts," Glen Miranker told a reporter for Forbes Magazine, and you can see some of those artifacts in the photogallery accompanying an article in Forbes Magazine, including a $15.00 copy of THE CASE-BOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES that he now confesses is "the world's costliest book." You can read the article on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/pqypnvh>.

616. Dec 13 #5: Nancy J. Parra's GLUTEN FOR PUNISHMENT (2013) stars Toni Ryder, "who inherits the family homestead and brings her gluten-free bakery to Oiltop's Main Street only to discover that owning a gluten-free bakery can be murder." It's Sherlockian only in that it's the first in a projected series of Baker's Treat mysteries. The author has a web-site at <www.nancyjparra.com>.
617. BBC Books is continuing its series of tie-in editions of the Canon: THE RETURN OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (introduction by Mark Gatiss) and HIS LAST BOW (introduction by Steven Moffat) with "Sherlock" cover art were published this month (£6.99 each).
618. Tacit Theatre will present a new dramatization of "A Study in Scarlet" by Lila Whelan and Greg Freeman at the Southwark Playhouse in London, Mar. 19 through Apr. 12 <www.southwarkplayhouse.co.uk>. Tacit also will provide a series of 20-minute podcasts starting on Jan. 19: the "Sherlock Holmes Series" will offer discussions with Sherlockian experts, and the theater website's at <www.tacittheatre.co.uk>.
619. Otto Penzler's THE BIG BOOK OF CHRISTMAS MYSTERIES (2013) had a brief review in the newspaper insert Parade magazine (Dec. 22), with a link to an on-line version of "The Blue Carbuncle".
620. Judith Freeman's useful index to The Serpentine Muse (published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes since 1975), now complete through 2013, is now available <judith-freeman@hotmail.com> as an Excel spreadsheet; the ASH web-site at <www.ash-nyc.com> has information on subscribing to the Muse.
621. SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE MASTER ENGRAVER, by Ross Husband (Norfolk: Glen Ross Editions, 2013; 449 pp., £11.95/$16.95), has Holmes and Watson involved in thwarting a thoroughly complicated plot to flood Britain with counterfeit currency printed from the Bank of England's own plates on authentic paper; there's murder and mayhem and atmosphere, and two sample chapters from the next installment in a series with the overall title "The Revival of Sherlock Holmes"
622. "The Case of the Scarlet Membrane" was a skit burlesquing Holmes and Watson broadcast on "Saturday Night Live" on Apr. 8, 1978, starring Michael Palin as Holmes and Dan Aykroyd as Watson. Janice Portante reports that the skit is available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/la2lu4s>.
623. Wilfrid de Freitas' new sales-list for material from Don Redmond's collection (with writings on the writings, society publications, and monographs) will be available in January <wilfrid@defreitasbooks.com>.
624. Howard Ostrom's enthusiastic interest in Sherlockian silent films extends far beyond his research into who played the title role in "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (1905): his interesting (and well illustrated) 20-part essay "Silent Sherlock" is available on-line in the "Original Essays" section of the "Diogenes Club Library" at Ross K. Foad's extensive "No Place Like Holmes" web-site <www.nplh.co.uk/original-essays.html>. His five-part essay "The Original Baker Street Babes" discusses the many women who have played Holmes and Watson, and have worked as directors and writers.

625. Dec 13 #6: "Chinese fans go potty for the BBC's Sherlock," according to an article in Radio Times (Dec. 9). After British prime minister David Cameron set up a profile on the Chinese social media site Sina Weibo, the most popular message posted was "Please urge Sherlock crew to be quick! They have had us waiting for two years for every season!" He replied that he couldn't tell the BBC what to do, since it's an independent company, and suggested that "of course people can always go back and read the original Conan Doyle stories, which are wonderful." The Chinese call Benedict Cumberbatch "Curly Fu" (because of his curly hair and a shortening of his name in Chinese) and Martin Freeman "Peanut" (because the Chinese version of his name Hua Sheng" sounds like the Mandarin word for the nut). Thanks to Oscar Ross for spotting and reporting this news.
626. The Feb. 2014 issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, which will be found on newsstands during the birthday celebrations, has Sherlockian artwork on the cover, pastiches by Terence Faherty and Evan Lewis, a birthday tribute by editor Janet Hutchings, and reviews by Steve Steinbock of new Sherlockian books.
627. Vinnie Brosnan ("That Gap on the Second Shelf") died on Dec. 28. He issued his first mail-order catalog from "Sherlock in L.A." in 1982, and over many years helped collectors near and far expand their collection. Vinnie began publishing Sherlockiana in 1985, was active in many Sherlockian societies in southern California, and received his quite appropriate Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 2011.
628. MORIARTY RETURNS A LETTER (New York: Minotaur, 2013; 262 pp., $24.99) continues Michael Robertson's series of novels about Reggie Heath, the London barrister who has offices in the building at 221B Baker Street, and a lease that requires him to answer Sherlock Holmes' mail; this time Reggie and his fiancée Laura Rankin are pursued by a vicious killer, amidst fun and games galore.
629. There were some interesting items in Bonhams' ("What Dreams Are Made Of: A Century of Movie Magic" auction in New York on Nov. 25: the wool tweed suit worn by Richard Greene in the "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939) sold for $1,625 (including the buyer's premium), and the wool tweed jacket worn by Basil Rathbone in the same film sold for $13,750 (the same jacket went for $11,685 in 2011, in an auction of Debbie Reynolds' collection). Someone paid $461,000 for the 1940 Buick Phaeton that was seen in "Casablanca" (1942), and the star of the sale was an authenticated Maltese Falcon, which sold for $4,085,000.
630. Lots of theater upcoming in Texas: Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" at will be performed at the Dallas Theater Center, Apr. 25 to May 25 <www.dallastheatercenter.org>; Dennis Rosa's "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" at the First United Methodist Church in Dallas, May 16-24 <www.fumcdal.org>; and Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" at Rover Dramawerks in Plano, Sept. 11-27. Plano <www.roverdramawerks.com>

1. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 160th birthday during the long weekend from Jan. 15 to Jan. 19. The festivities began with the traditional ASH Wednesday dinner sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at O'Casey's and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning, followed by the usual lunch at McSorley's.
  2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Midtown Executive Club on Thursday evening was James O'Brien, author of THE SCIENTIFIC SHERLOCK HOLMES: CRACKING THE CASE WITH SCIENCE & FORENSICS (2013); the title of his talk was "Reassessing Holmes the Scientist", and you will be able to read his paper in the next issue of The Baker Street Journal.
  3. The William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's was well attended, as always, and the Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton, Sarah Montague, and Andrew Joffe) entertained their audience with a tribute to an aged Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the annual Jan Whimsey Award (named in memory of his wife Jan Stauber) honoring the most whimsical piece in The Serpentine Muse last year; the winners (Susan Rice and Mickey Fromkin) received certificates and shared a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
  4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI annual dinner at the Yale Club, where John Linsenmeyer proposed the preprandial first toast to Marilyn Nathan as The Woman. The dinner agenda featured the usual toasts and traditions, and an energetic and amusing debate on whether the Constitution and Buy-Laws of the BSI should be amended (the decision was that the 80-year-old document will serve quite well for another 80 years).
  5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") presented the BSI's first Edgar W. Smith Intrepid Irregular Award to Les Klinger; A Tip of the Deerstalker Awards to Andy Peck, Mitch Higurashi, Susan Rice, Don Curtis, and Maggie Schpak; and a Two-Shilling Award to Randall Stock. This year's Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures) were presented to Peter McIntyre ("Arthur Cadogan West"), SJ Rozan ("The Imperial Palace of Peking"), Chris Music ("Wagner Night at Covent Garden"), Sonia Fetherston ("The Solitary Cyclist"), Mark Alberstat ("Halifax"), Jacquelynn Morris ("The Lion's Mane"), and Terry Hunt ("The Something Hunt").
  6. An enthusiastic crowd attended this year's Gaslight Gala at the Manhattan Club, where the agenda included Karen Wilson's parody-song-arama "The Sign of the Sussex Hound in the Cardboard Box", a performance (by Nick Martorelli and Tiffany Knight) of Gayle Lange Puhl's skit "How Much Is That Hound Dog in the Window", and much much more.
  7. Some of the more fervent (or perhaps hard core) Sherlockians gathered after the dinners at O'Lunney's Irish Pub to honor long-standing traditions such as staying until at least 2:21; another tradition calls for newly-Investitured Irregulars to buy a round of tequila shots.
8. Jan 14 #2: On Saturday morning Covent Garden West (the dealers room at the Roosevelt Hotel) welcomed sellers and buyers, and authors and editors delighted to inscribe or sign their books. The Beacon Society presented its annual Beacon Award (recognizing those who introduce young people to the Sherlock Holmes stories) to Timothy S. Greer; the society has an excellent web-site at <www.beaconsociety.com>. And the Junior Bloodstain of The Clients of Adrian Mulliner featured "The Riddle of the Hunted Hound" (a new play by Gayle Lange Puhl, performed by Ken Vogel's hand puppets).
  9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon reception at the Yale Club offered entertainment, conversation, wining, and dining; the entertainment included a performance of a short play written by Jerome Coopersmith, and Anastasia Klimchynskaya was honored as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (an attractive certificate accompanied by a check) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal last year. The John H. Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of raffle tickets for Maggie Schpak's attractive handcrafted assortment of jewelry and other memorabilia inspired by "The Valley of Fear", and an auction of edible, oenological and artistic donations to the Fund.
  10. The principal Saturday-evening event was the annual "Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner arranged by Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street at O'Lunney's Times Square Pub, with 54 on hand for the festivities, and on Sunday morning a goodly crowd gathered at the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' brunch at the Oldcastle Pub & Restaurant.
  11. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 9, 2015. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner likely will be on Jan. 17, 2015.

12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; there will be much more detailed reports in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSJ appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $38.50 (to the U.S.) or $49.00 (elsewhere); checks can be sent to the BSJ (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077), and credit-card payments are welcome from foreign subscribers.
13. You can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which also has interesting features such as some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, articles from recent issues of the BSJ, and information on the BSJ's other publications and activities.
14. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@verizon.net> offers (by e-mail) his 2014 edition of "The ABC of the BSJ" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).
15. There were, needless to say, a treasure trove of new books available in the dealers room, but you'll need to wait until next month to read reviews. In the meantime you can find many of the books at the web-sites of publishers such as the Baker Street Journal <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> and the Gasogene Press <www.wessexpress.com>.

16. Jan 14 #3: Further to the report (Dec 13 #1) on the decision in Les Klinger's lawsuit against the Arthur Conan Doyle Estate (Sep 13 #8), the ruling has received lots of publicity in the press and on the Internet. Sutin, Thayer & Browne (the Estate's law firm) has announced that they will appeal the decision to Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals; you can read their press release at <www.tinyurl.com/myqx8wj>.
17. The torrent of stories about the lawsuit included one in the Sunday Express (Jan. 12) <www.tinyurl.com/ntk4jmv>, notable for a colorful (and undated) photograph of Andrea Reynolds Plunket, presumably seen at home in Livingston Manor, N.Y.; Andrea continues to claim control of the characters, despite a series of court rulings against her.
18. "Sherlock Enters Top Baby Name List" was the headline on a story in Radio Times (Dec. 2), spotted by Oscar Ross. The Office for National Statistics has released its lists of baby names in England and Wales in 2012, and yes, Sherlock is on the list, with 5 babies, in a tie for 3,416th place. Harry ranked first (with 7,168 babies), and for girls it was Amelia (with 7,061 babies). One should note that all it took to make the lists was 3 babies with the same name (which does make it a stretch for Radio Times to use the word "top"). You can find the lists at <www.tinyurl.com/k4vykmz>.
19. In plenty of time for Christmas (or any other occasion, for that matter): "Handmade Geeky Goodness!" is the motto of Ursula and Olive, an Etsy shop maintained by Darlene Belisle, who offers Sherlockian (and Doylean) lockets, earring, and magnifying glasses <www.ursulaandolive.etsy.com>. She'll also do custom orders, such as Moriarty or Benedict Cumberbatch.
20. Leonard Cochran ("Cardinal Tosca") died on Mar. 30, 2013. He worked in advertising, served in the Air Force, and in 1956 became a Dominican Friar; he was ordained as a priest in 1962, and went on to a long career in education. He was published in The Baker Street Journal in 1967 and 1972, and was an active members of Hugo's Companions in Chicago; he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1973.
21. Chuck Schaden "Speaking of Radio" web-site offers some 200 interviews with the people responsible for radio's "golden age" (and much else that's worth exploring) <www.speakingofradio.com>; one of the interviews (99 minutes) is with Himan Brown, who produced more than 30,000 radio shows over seven decades (including series such as "Inner Sanctum Mysteries", "The Adventures of the Thin Man", and "Bulldog Drummond"). His "CBS Radio Mystery Theater" was launched in 1974 and ran for nine years; it won a Peabody Award, and of course included many Sherlockian and Doylean stories. The series has its own web-site <www.cbsrmt.org> with information about and downloads of the programs.
22. "Holmes & Moriarty" is a 9-page PDF file offered by magician Paul Voodini at <www.readerofminds.co.uk> for £1.50; all you need to perform the trick is a deck of cards and some practice. And learning the patter, of course. Note that the real secret of magic is not what the magician does (you can easily find explanations of this in books and on-line); the real secret is how the magician does the trick, and that includes the story the magician tells, all of which requires imagination and practice.

23. Jan 14 #4: The Grillparzer Club of the Hoboken Free State (which commemorates the life and work of Christopher Morley) has published the first issue of its newsletter Hoboken Nights, with 16 pages, a report on the first annual Morley birthday lunch (on May 15, 2013, in New York), toasts, commentary, and photographs. Society membership includes two issues of the newsletter and costs $15.00 a year per household; Harrison and Linda Hunt (113 North Street, Catskill, NY 12414).
24. This month's trivia question is: what film, now in theaters nationwide, has actors who have played Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and Mycroft Holmes?
25. Well, the long wait is over, for all those who wondered about how Sherlock survived the fall, and about how Watson met and married Mary Morstan, and about other things. The BBC blocked access to the series from outside the United Kingdom, but of course there are work-arounds: Hola! <www.hola.org> and TunnelBear <www.tunnelbear.com> work well with most operating systems, come highly recommended, and are free downloads, and of course this sort of thing was quite popular with Yanks who didn't want to wait for the series to air in the U.S. No spoilers here, since some people won't yet have seen the series.
26. The overnight ratings for "The Empty Hearse" in the U.K. were 9.2 million viewers, and a 33.8% share (of those who were watching television); these were highest ratings of any of the seven episodes. Add 3.5 million viewers who watched the episode in the following week after recording it; the 12.7 million total doesn't include people who watched the episode on-line at the BBC web-site. The BBC did a fine job of promoting the new series, and Nick Utechin has reported that The Times gave the debut of "The Empty Hearse" a page-3 news story, a four-star review, a leader [editorial], and an amusing allusion in a political cartoon.
27. Overnight ratings for "His Last Vow" in the U.K. were 8.8 million viewers, and 31.9% share; for "The Empty Hearse" the numbers were 8.8 million viewers and a 32.1% share. The 12-month average for the time slot on BBC-1 was 4.9 million, and a 19.7% share, so both the BBC and the production company obviously are delighted with the audience response to the series.
28. There were all sorts of interesting homages to the Canon in the series, and the producers had some fun with casting: in "The Empty Hearse" there was a scene with Sherlock's parents visiting him, and his parents were played by Benedict Cumberbatch's parents Wanda Ventham and Timothy Carlton. In "His Last Vow" the young Sherlock Holmes was played Louis Moffat, son of series co-creator Steven Moffat.
29. And if you'd like to see more of Appledore (the evil Charles Augustus Magnussen's home), it's really the £30 million Swinhay House, the home of Sir David McMurtry. The Daily Mail had a well-illustrated story (Jan. 14) on the house <www.tinyurl.com/lhtosk9>.
30. As for the future, Steven Moffat has said that he and Mark Gatiss have already planned the future of the series. "We plotted out the whole of series four and five." And they hope that there won't be as long a wait for the fourth season as there was for the third.

31. Jan 14 #5: SHERLOCK HOLMES IN THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, by Jennifer Adams, illustrated by Alison Oliver (Layton: Gibbs Smith, 2013; 22 pp., $9.99), is one of the titles in an imaginative BabyLit "Sounds Primer" series that's intended to help parents introduce the concept of sounds to their children. The sounds are for the toddlers, and the "literature" for the parents, by way of keeping them entertained <www.babylit.com>. The artwork's also available on prints and totes, and other authors in the series include Tolstoy, Dickens, Stoker, Melville, and Shakespeare.

32. I asked what film, now in theaters nationwide, has actors who have played Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and Mycroft Holmes? "The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug") stars Benedict Cumberbatch as Smaug, and Martin Freeman as Bilbo Baggins.
33. Ray Betzner's new "Studies in Starrett" blog <www.vincentstarrett.com> is a delightfully lively exploration of Vincent Starrett and his Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian work. Those who visited the Morgan Library's exhibition on "Edgar Allan Poe: Terror of the Soul" and viewed the three copies of TAMERLANE AND OTHER POEMS (only 12 copies are known to exist) can learn from Ray about Starrett's connection with one of them.
34. Bob Byrne's "The Solar Pons Gazette" has returned, after a five-year hiatus, at <www.solarpons.com>, offering 44 pages about August Derleth and his delightful homage, which Vincent Starrett once described as "the best substitute for Sherlock Holmes known."
35. There now are 171 scripts available as free downloads from the Radio Script Library of the Generic Radio Workshop <www.genericradio.com>, six from the long-running "Sherlock Holmes" series (1939-1947).
36. Sabina Carpenter and John Quincannon, private detectives in San Francisco in 1895, return in Marcia Muller and Bill Pronzini's THE SPOOK LIGHTS AFFAIR (New York: Forge/Tom Doherty, 2013; 250 pp., $24.99), once again accompanied by Sherlock Holmes (or a man who claims to be Holmes), this time as a minor supporting character in an entertaining mystery.
37. The latest issue of Carolyn and Joel Senter's The Sherlockian E-Times will be found at <www.sherlock-holmes.com/e\_times14-1.html>, offering Sherlockian news, an explanation of a Sherlockathon, an announcement of the opening on Feb. 8 of the "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" in Columbus, Ohio, after a successful run in Portland, and news that the annual Sherlock Holmes/Arthur Conan Doyle Symposium in Dayton, Ohio, has been relaunched by The Agra Treasurers as "Holmes, Doyle, & Friends" on Mar. 14-15. More information on the goings-on in Dayton is available from Martin Arbagi, whose e-mail address is <martin.arbagi@gmail.com>.
38. The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" will run through Sept. 1 in Columbus, and then move to the Saint Louis Science Center in Saint Louis, Mo., from Oct. 9 through Jan. 4. It's scheduled next at the Perot Museum of Science & Nature in Dallas, Texas, opening Feb. 2, 2015, and at the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., opening June 11. The exhibition web-site's at <www.sherlockholmesexhibition.com>, and the web-site for the Coumbus visit is at <www.cosi.org/exhibits/sherlock>.

39. Jan 14 #6: I know: I asked what film, now in theaters nationwide, has actors who have played Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and Mycroft Holmes, and the answer was ("The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug"). But I didn't identify the actor who has played Mycroft Holmes; it's Stephen Fry, who played the Master of Lake-town (as well as Mycroft in the film "Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows").
40. "Hound of the Baskervilles" is a three-minute band composition written by Mekel Rogers and based on the final chase scene; designed for middle-school bands (because that's when students often read the story), it is available at <www.tinyurl.com/lchkydx>, where you can also listen to the piece.
41. It didn't take long: the new Russian "Sherlock Holmes" television series, with Igor Petrenko as Holmes and Andrei Panin as Watson, is being subtitled in English. The first episode ("221B Baker Street"), broadcast in Russia on Nov. 18-19, was uploaded with sub-titles on Jan. 12, and you can watch it at <www.tinyurl.com/p733zry>.
42. Not for the squeamish: the blog of Barts Pathology Museum, which has an illustrated entry on the effects of wearing Victorian corsets, a discussion of The Death Salon, and much more, including a section on "Barts and Sherlock Holmes" <www.potts-pots.blogspot.co.uk>.
43. Further to the mention of John Dawson's "Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Primary References in the Early Works of P. G. Wodehouse (through 1922)" (Nov 13 #5), the web-site Madame Eulalie's Rare Plums <www.madameeulalie.org> has a link not only to the article (click on Notes & Lists), but also to text of all of those early works (click on Items by Publication). It's nice indeed to have Wodehouse's pre-1923 writings so readily available.
44. HOMES AND DR. WILLIAMS, by Roy S. Purcell (Bloomington: Xlibris, 2013; 339 pp., $26.99), stars Stanley Homes (whose boyhood hero was Sherlock Holmes) and his companion Dr. Williams (a veterinarian). Homes opens a detective agency, with disastrous results, and the book is full of broad (very broad) humor.
45. Don Hobbs has discovered Novial, an artificial language devised by the Danish linguist Otto Jespersen in 1928. Similar to Esperanto and Ido, Novial seems to have no translations of the Canon, but there is a study guide for THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES on-line <www.en.wikibooks.org/wiki/Novial>.
46. Watson's Tin Box will host the seventh "A Scintillation of Scions" at the Hilton Garden Inn in Hanover, Md., June 6-7. It's an entertaining gathering of local and far-flung Sherlockians, with a fine list of speakers, and details are available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724) <www.scintillation.org>. The event sold out last year, so you're advised to register sooner rather than later.
47. "Going Shopping, Honey? Be a Dear and Pick Up My Arsenic." That was the headline on the N.Y. Times preview of "American Experience: The Poisoner's Handbook" (broadcast by PBS-TV on Jan. 7). The program was based on Deborah Blum's book, which was published in 2010 with the imaginative subtitle "Murder and the Birth of Forensic Medicine in Jazz Age New York".

48. Jan 14 #7: Jayantika Ganguly describes THE HOLMES SUTRA (London: MX Publishing, 2014; 120 pp., £6.99/€7.99/$9.95) as a birthday gift for Sherlock Holmes, and for those who now thinking about the KAMA SUTRA, it should be noted that a sutra is a collection of aphorisms; Jay is general secretary and editor for The Sherlock Holmes Society of India, and she presents 160 aphorisms from the Canon and from other sources, with commentary, and with an imaginative "Holmes Mania Quotient Test".
49. SHERLOCK HOLMES: STUDIES IN LEGACY, by Luke Benjamen Kuhns (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 247 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95), has four short stories about Holmes and Watson's battle against a mysterious evil organization, and two bonus stories, one of which sets them in pursuit of Frankenstein's monster.
50. The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2013" has the theme "Anniversaries" and the authors range from Randy Cox ("My First Meeting with the Norwegian Explorers") to Dick Caplan ("An Anniversary Theme?") to Ruth Berman ("Sherlockian Governesses"). The 54-page booklet, edited by Timothy Reich, is available from John Bergquist (3665 Ashbury Road, Eagan, MN 55122); the cost is $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
51. Further to the mention (Dec 13 #5) of the link in Parade magazine to an online version of "The Blue Carbuncle" (on Dec. 22), the link received about 3,000 hits, presumably from people who hadn't read the story before (or had and were happy to have an easy way to read it again).
52. Otto Penzler has reported Gabe Hasbash's blog at Publishers Weekly (Jan. 8) about "The 9 Best Books That Don't Exist" <www.tinyurl.com/qyo83tp>, one of them being Prof. James Moriarty's THE DYNAMICS OF AN ASTEROID. Wikipedia has an entry for the book, and another for A TREATISE ON THE BINOMIAL THEOREM.
53. David Greenlee is offering his collection of Sherlockiana (with more than 300 books, booklets, pamphlets, magazines, cassettes, and records) as one lot, and a list is available from him at <sdgcollection@xemaps.com>.

54. Nicholas Utechin's COIN OF THE CANONICAL REALM is the first monograph from The John H. Watson Society; 50 pages, with an interesting discussion of the Canonical coins and notes and with full-color illustrations, and "then and now" comparisons of values. $9.00 plus shipping, and you can order at the society's web-site <www.johnhwatsonociety.com>.
55. An addendum to the obituary for Peter O'Toole (Dec 13 #3). He was reported to have been considered as a possible Holmes in three films: "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976), and "Murder by Decree" (1979).
56. Dramatic Publishing offers interesting Sherlockian and Doylean scripts, including "The Hound of the Baskervilles: A Comic Thriller Starring Shirley Holmes and Jennie Watson" (by Kent R. Brown), "The Death and Life of Sherlock Holmes" (by Suzan L. Zeder), "The Sign of the Four" (by Dr. Shanghai Low), "The Very Great Grandson of Sherlock Holmes" (by Bill Majeski), and "The Lost World" (by Nat Segaloff and John de Lancie for "Alien Voices"). 311 Washington Street, Woodstock, IL 60098 <www.dramaticpublishing.com>.
57. Jan 14 #8 The Times has reported (Dec. 3, 2013) that the Royal College of Surgeons in Edinburgh has received a £2.7 million grant to redevelop its Surgeons' Hall Museum. The displays are to include the letter to Joseph Bell from Conan Doyle in which he wrote that "It is most certainly to you that I owe Sherlock Holmes." And a leather wallet made from the skin of the infamous murderer William Burke (as in Burke and Hare).
58. News from Laurie R. King, in the latest issue of her newsletter (News and Nonsense), which you can read at <www.tinyurl.com/klescba>. The title of the next Mary Russell novel is DREAMING SPIES; set in Japan and Oxford, it is due in Feb. 2015. Laurie has also published a Kindle edition of her BA thesis (FOOLISH WISDOM, 1977) and her MA thesis (FEMININE ASPECTS OF GOD, 1984), with a new introduction (Laurie calls herself a recovering academic, and you can see what she's recovering from); 99¢ at <www.amazon.com>.
59. The BBC now offers a "Sherlock: The Network" iPhone and iPad app, with more than 30 minutes of new video content, games, and a mystery to solve. £2.99 in the U.K. and $4.99 in the U.S.; details at <www.sherlockthenetwork.com>.
60. The New York Society Library (at 53 East 79th Street) has an exhibition on "From the Western Front and Beyond: The Writings of World War One" through Nov. 15 that displays books by members of the Wellington House, described as "a secret arm of the British Foreign Office" that included Conan Doyle and 25 other well-known authors "who were recruited, to create propaganda on behalf of the Allied forces," according to an article in DNAinfo New York (Jan. 24). "Wellington House" was the informal name of the War Propaganda Bureau.
61. A. Brad Schwartz's interesting contribution to the blog "Sounding Out!" on Jan. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/lce34zc> discusses and contrasts (with audio) Orson Welles' performances as Holmes and Moriarty, and explores the influences of the Canon on Welles' career.
62. Some additional news about the BBC series "Sherlock": The Wrap has reported that Benedict Cumberbatch, executive producer Stephen Moffat, and his wife producer Sue Vertue were at the Television Critics Association press tour on Jan. 20. Moffat said that Ben Stephenson, head of drama at the BBC, has commissioned the series for 50 years, and that it will continue "until Benedict gets too famous." Vertue commented that "he gets precious and just doesn't want to do it," and Cumberbatch said that he's not in any danger of burning out in the role, as some of his predecessors had, noting that "I'm younger than any of them were or are."
63. Welcome to our new postage rates, now 49¢/ounce (domestic) and $1.15 (international); the old rates were 46¢ (domestic) and $1.10 (international). The new subscription rates for the ink-on-paper version of this newsletter are $12.50 (domestic) and $20.50 (international). You're also welcome to read the electronic version without charge (and with illustrations in color and live URLs) at the Red Circle's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/d8uoo80> or at Willis Frick's Sherlocktron <www.tinyurl.com/kl9gcll>.

64. Feb 14 #1: A bit more on the birthday festivities: "Baker Street Irregulars Turns 80" was the headline on the story by Peter Cannon's story in Publishers Weekly (Jan. 22) <www.tinyurl.com/lmogyj5>. And Amanada Hopluch's story on "Sherlockians Gather as Americans Get the Chance to View the Latest BBC Series" ran in the Guardian (Jan. 19) <www.tinyurl.com/ks5e4bq>.
65. The title of The Baker Street Journal's 2013 Christmas Annual is "Disaster at the New Century" (it's now in the hands of subscribers to the BSJ, and not otherwise available unless you can find it at eBay or wherever), and it offers the text of Ouida Rathbone's "Sherlock Holmes: A New Play in Three Acts" (1953), published for the first time ever, with a fine introduction by Nicholas Utechin. The 2014 Christmas Annual will be Elaine and Jonathan McCafferty's tribute to Douglas Wilmer, also available only to subscribers to the BSJ. $38.50 (to the U.S.) or $49.00 (elsewhere) for four issues and the Annual; checks can be sent to the BSJ (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077), and credit-card payments are welcome from foreign subscribers; you can also subscribe at the BSJ web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
66. The latest volume in the Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series is IRREGULAR STAIN, edited by Robert Katz and Andrew Solberg, with a facsimile of the original manuscript of "The Second Stain", an annotated transcript, history, commentary, and artwork. The commentary includes Bob Katz's explanation of why Lancaster Avenue is second only to Baker Street in importance for Sherlockians, a facsimile of the only known galleys for a Sherlock Holmes story, and an explanation by John Baesch and William Walsh of their belief that Holmes attended Haverford rather than Oxford or Cambridge. 188 pp., $39.95; details, including the table of contents and a brief excerpt, are at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/stain.html>.
67. Also from the BSI is THE REMARKABLE CHARACTERS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, edited by Joel M. Silver; it's the proceedings of a conference at the Lilly Library in 2009 that focused almost entirely on Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian work, and it's nice indeed to have a chance to read some excellent papers. 138 pp., $35.00; details at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/characters.html>. The books can also be ordered by mail (checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) from Michael H. Kean, 3040 Stoa Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93593; shipping costs for one book are $5.95 (to the U.S.)/$22.95 elsewhere, and for two books are $7.45/$27.95.
68. "Oggy et les cafards: Le film" ["Oggy and the Cockroaches: The Film"] is a French animation <www.tinyurl.com/lnl2wx9> that had its premiere in France last year and is scheduled in the U.S. on June 27. Jennie Paton discovered a 26-minute Sherlockian sequence at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ltyb3hq>. If you want to see the entire film, it's at <www.tinyurl.com/kntjau9>.
69. "Sherlock Holmes Is Alive and Well!" notes a recent blog from the University of Texas <www.tinyurl.com/kp8vcz2>, offering excellent scans of some of the rare items at the Harry Ransom Center. Images of original Sherlockian artwork by Sidney Paget are spectacular, showing how much was lost when the engraving were made. Last year the center launched a new on-line collection that includes Holmes highlights (links are provided in the blog).
70. Feb 14 #2: Many admirers of Sherlock Holmes also admire Nero Wolfe, whose creator Rex Stout was an excellent writer as well as an enthusiastic Sherlockian; Stout's Nero Wolfe series has been continued by Robert Goldsborough, whose most recent book is MURDER IN THE BALL PARK, just published by the Mysterious Press <www.tinyurl.com/kfwag2d>. There was a long interview with Goldsborough by J. Kingston Pierce at his blog The Rap Sheet on Jan. 21 <www.therapsheet.blogspot.com>.
71. THE ONE FIXED POINT IN A CHANGING AGE: A NEW GENERATION ON SHERLOCK HOLMES (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2014; 271 pp. $24.95) is a resounding refutation of the often-seen lament that a younger generation of Sherlockians has nothing to offer the Sherlockian world beyond youth and enthusiasm; edited by Kristina Manente, Maria Heischhack, Sarah Roy, and Taylor Blumberg, and with an apt introduction by Laurie R. King,

- the essays collected in the book offer insightful scholarship into the Canon as well as its modern manifestations. It also is interesting to see how many of the sources cited are from Internet archives, blogs, and YouTube; "the times they are a-changin'" for scholars, too.
72. Also from Gasogene: Ann Margaret Lewis' THE WATSON CHRONICLES: A SHERLOCK HOLMES NOVEL IN STORIES (2014; 283 pp., $22.95), with six connected stories that begin in 1900 as Holmes contemplates retirement and offer an interesting view of Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes, and Watson; the stories are told with sentiment and imagination. Gasogene is at Box 63808, Indianapolis, IN 46268 <www.gasogenebooks.com>.
  73. The admirers of Jules Verne are dedicated indeed: the North American Jules Verne Society <www.najvs.org> is publishing a long series of his books, plays, and articles, many translated into English for the first time. BANDITS & REBELS (Albany: BearManor Fiction, 2013; 214 pp., $19.95) includes his "The Siege of Rome" (a historical adventure in the tradition of Alexandre Dumas), with series editor Brian Taves' comment that Verne, in 1857, reviewed a painting with that title by Horace Vernet, noted as a relation of Sherlock Holmes.
  74. Conan Doyle also admired Verne's works, and read some of them in French at Stonyhurst at the age of 14, encountering the Nautilus long before he wrote "Danger!" (1914). BANDITS & REBELS also has the first story ("San Carlos") Verne wrote about submarines, long before he wrote TWENTY THOUSAND LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA.
  75. Steve Kious' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CRATER LAKE ADVENTURE (Mechanicsburg: Sunbury Press, 2013; 132 pp., $9.99) has Holmes and Watson to Paris in 1896 to solve a mystery for Jules Verne, and then Holmes, Watson, and Verne visit Oregon to investigate a mysterious flying machine; lots of local history and geography.
  76. One of the nice films screened at the "Sherlock Holmes: Behind the Canonical Screen" conference at UCLA in 2012 was Eille Norwood's silent "The Sign of Four" (1923); Jennie Paton has reported that you can see some clips from the film at <www.vimeo.com/84890479>. Russ Merritt notes that there also are clips from "The Bruce-Partington Plans" (which suggests that additional films have been found).
77. Feb 14 #3: Maria Konnikova's MASTERMIND: HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 13 #4) has been nominated for an Agatha (best nonfiction) at Malice Domestic. Also nominated in the same category is Daniel Stashower's THE HOUR OF PERIL: THE SECRET PLOT TO MURDER LINCOLN BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR (Dan has explained that he was not able to persuade his publisher to include a mention of Sherlock Holmes in the book).
  78. Benedict Cumberbatch has recorded a segment for "Sesame Street" appearing with his arch-nemesis Murray-arty; there's no word on when the segment will air, but in the meantime you can watch it at <www.youtube.com/pf6gfkfb>.
  79. Further to the mention (Jan 14 #5) of Bob Byrne's web-site for admirers of Solar Pons <www.solarpons.com>, he also has a mailing list for occasional announcements about Solar Pons; if you'd like to be on his mailing list, he is at <bob@solarpons.com>.
  80. The second issue of the resurrected Saturday Review of Literature was published in January, edited by George Fletcher, Jon Lellenberg, Don Pollock, and Phil Shreffler, and with what they describe as "history, mystery, and science," including reviews and an interesting article by Elizabeth T. Gray Jr. (on "A Case of Identity: Holmes and Hafiz"). $5.00 postpaid from Donald Pollock (521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305).
  81. "Your Friend Elle" has offered some imaginative Sherlock Holmes Party Ideas at her web-site <www.tinyurl.com/lhsz8ks>, with a ReichenBingo Falls game and a cake decorated to match the wallpaper at 221B Baker Street.
  82. Terminally cute? Waffles is a ginger cat who has his own web-site and many fans, including someone who has supplied artwork showing Waffles dressed as nine different characters in the "Sherlock" series; you can find "Sherlick Holmews" at <www.tinyurl.com/m3yrlhh>.
  83. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ADVENTURE OF THE MODERN CINDERELLA, by Thomas Owen (Amazon Digital Services, 2013; 53 pp., $5.95), presents Holmes and Watson in an Edwardian version of the classic fairy tale.
  84. John Aidiniantz, who founded the Sherlock Holmes Museum in Baker Street in 1990, is in the news again: according to the Daily Mail (Jan. 18) he is using money from the Sherlock Holmes Museum in a bid to win a reversal for a convicted murderer <www.tinyurl.com/l6s7qaa>. Last year he was sued by his mother Grace over control of almost £2 million in admission fees from the Museum (Mar 13 #5), but he has now told the paper he had settled the case and is good terms with his mother.
  85. When in Houston: there's a new Baker Street Pub & Grill in Cypress (a suburb of Houston) <www.tinyurl.com/mykkboa>, offering 40 taps with about 96 different beers, and a lengthy happy hour.
  86. Further to earlier mentions of a Lego minifigure of Sherlock Holmes (Sep 11 #4) and someone's Lego recreation of the sitting-room at 221B (Sep 13 #4), a CNET story (Feb. 4) reports that Lego is considering the possibility of a set of "Sherlock" minifigures as one of six Winter Lego Review qualifiers. And they're colorful indeed <www.tinyurl.com/k3cgdtf>.
87. Feb 14 #4: Phil Attwell has reported some news from a story in Radio Times (Feb. 8) about the magazine's Covers Party: "Doc Martin" stars Caroline Catz and Martin Clunes had a new project to announce: they're making Julian Barnes' book ARTHUR AND GEORGE into a two-parter for ITV, coming out in 2015. None of the other entertainment web-sites have anything about this, but we'll see if anything develops.
  88. Kelly Blau spotted a story headlined "His Friends Know Him as Petrowskiconicovick" in the N.Y. Times (Feb. 1) <www.tinyurl.com/mlpg8pn> that reports that other Brazilians are oddly named: "A strange name like Sherlock Holmes da Silva, pronounced SHARE-Lockee WHOLE-mess in Brazil, certainly does have a distinctive ring to it."
  89. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) honors the Brigadier Gerard, celebrating the Library's acquisition of the manuscript of "The Marriage of the Brigadier" with articles by admirers of one of the most interesting characters created by Sir Arthur. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
  90. The 2012 Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture was presented at the Library by Roy Pilot (on "The Lost World Revisited"), and his remarks have been published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; a limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now. Their web-site at <www.acdfriends.org> has PayPal and credit-card capability), or you can contact Cliff Goldfarb (addresses above); the minimum donation of $25.00 brings three issues of their newsletter and a copy of the 2013 Memorial Lecture (by Bernard Lightman on "Conan Doyle and the Scientific Naturalists").
  91. The Library will celebrate the opening of its new Arthur Conan Doyle Room on May 9, and Lyndsay Faye will deliver this year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture ("Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Storytelling and the Passion of the Narrator"); details at <www.acdfriends.org/events.htm>.
  92. When in Reading: Denny Dobry has for many years welcomed those who want to visit his splendid recreation of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street in his home in Reading, Pa. <www.facebook.com/221binReading>, and he is holding an open house on Apr. 26, 1:00 to 6:00 pm. You can contact him to RSVP and to ask for directions <dendobry@ptd.net>.
  93. Barbara Hicks died on Sept. 6. She had a long career in supporting roles, and many fans (her obituary in The Times, noted that Mel Brooks considered her the funniest woman he had ever met); she played Emily Garrideb in Granada's "The Mazarin Stone" (1994).

94. Andrew Malec has noted Denis Gohin's splendid archive of illustrations by Frederic Dorr Steele, Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian, and in full color, on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/lnuolf6>, and that there is additional Steele artwork in the Cabinet of American Illustration at the Library of Congress web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/laau5r5> and at Paul Giambarba's web-site devoted to "100 Years of Illustration and Design" <www.tinyurl.com/l3nsglx>.

95. Feb 14 #5: Plans to name a South Norwood lake in honor of Conan Doyle (Dec 13 #3) were unofficially successful, with 100 supporters gathering on Feb. 1 for a ceremony that also included enjoy Morris dancing and poetry. The Croydon Council's head of public safety refused to give formal approval, but the South Norwood Tourist Board is nevertheless proud of Lake Conan Doyle.
96. "The Ambience & Residents on Baker Street" will be the theme of this year's "Gathering of Southern Sherlockians" in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Apr. 26-27; details are available from Kent Ross at <kenthross@gmail.com>. The Wigmore Street Post Office will also meet in Chattanooga on Apr. 25; their contact is Dave Milner <dmycroft@bellsouth.net>.
97. Some who visited New York for the birthday festivities were able to see the spectacular "Edgar Allan Poe: Terror of the Soul" exhibition at the Morgan Library, where one could view three of the twelve known copies of the first edition of TAMERLANE AND OTHER POEMS, quite likely together for the first time since they were printed in 1827. Many items displayed were from the collection of Susan Jaffe Tane, who contributed "A Poe Collector's Memoir" to the catalog; she's a fine writer and an interesting collector, and you can learn more about her at <www.tinyurl.com/mh5fzo7> (click on "biographies" and "exhibition catalog introduction").
98. "Sherlock Holmes Returns from the Dead" was the headline on a France24 story (Jan. 2) <www.tinyurl.com/myy4wpn>, notable for a delightful photograph of Ed Johnson performing as a living statue near King's Cross Station in London. There's video at YouTube of the opening ceremony of the living-statues area in King's Cross Square on Sept. 26 <www.tinyurl.com/ln84785>. Careful readers will recall that the station is mentioned by Sherlock Holmes in the Canon: "King's Cross Station," said he (in "The Missing Three Quarter"). There's another important series of stories that mention King's Cross, where Harry Potter and his friends board the Hogwarts Express, and where fans can now have their pictures taken at Platform 9-¾.
99. If you're wondering about which king was commemorated at the cross, it was King George IV, whose statue stood from 1830 to 1845 at the crossroads of Gray's Inn Road, Pentonville Road, and New Road (now known as Euston Road). And there are allusions to him in the Canon: he served as the Prince Regent before becoming king and the Regency is mentioned in three stories.
100. The Beacon Society <www.beaconsociety.com> offers Jan Stauber grants of up to $500 to fund development of programs that will introduce young people to Sherlock Holmes; the deadline for grant applications is May 1; details are available at the web-site and from Alan Devitt <adevitt@comcast.net>.
101. Oscar Ross spotted an article in The Sunday Times (Jan. 26) about a pair of teenage sweethearts who ran away from Stonyhurst College to the Dominican Republic, where they lived off their parents' credit cards until the police traced them to the five-star Punta Cana resort. What's of interest is that Stonyhurst now costs £30,000 a year; Conan Doyle attended the school from 1867 to 1875 (no one seems to know what it cost at that time).

102. Feb 14 #6: Simon Vance, winner of many awards for his audiobooks, has recorded more than 700 books over the last 20 years, and you can sample some of them at his web-site <www.simonvance.com>; Of particular interest to Sherlockians is his new THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (Grand Haven: Brilliance Audio, 2013; 50 CDs, 59 hours, $99.99). It's unabridged and nicely done indeed: Vance has an excellent voice and pays careful attention to the text and the various characters.
103. "Baker Street Vienna" is a Sherlock Holmes convention planned for June 14-15 in (of course) Vienna <www.bakerstreetvienna.at>; the convention will be bilingual (German and English), and registration is open now.
104. The CBS-TV series "Elementary" is about to set some records: when the second season ends, Jonny Lee Miller and Lucy Liu will have played Holmes and Watson 48 times (more than any actors on film and television); Jeremy Brett played Holmes 41 times in the Granada series. "Elementary" also will have aired for 48 hours (another record); the Granada series ran for 46 hours. And it's possible that there's a third record: according to the Hollywood Reporter (Feb. 14), the network will receive about $3 million per episode from a just-signed agreement that covers cable (WGN America), subscription-video-on-demand (Hulu Plus), and an unnamed broadcast component.
105. Anthony Hinds died on Sept. 30. He had a long career in the film industry, and made Hammer Studios famous for a series of horror films that often featured Peter Cushing and Christopher Lee; one of them was "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959). Hinds also wrote a three-act dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1982), and (as John Elder) the script for "The Masks of Death" (1984).
106. NPW (the retail division of Natural Products and Worldwide) <www.npw.co.uk> has created an amusing set of "Great Literary Moustaches" (£4.95) that anyone can wear, thanks to the adhesive backing; look for them on-line at Amazon. Conan Doyle is at the right in the second row (and the others are Shakespeare, Kipling, Hemingway, Twain, and Orwell).
107. Vincent J. Cirillo's interesting discussion of "Arthur Conan Doyle: (1859-1930): Physician During the Typhoid Epidemic in the Anglo-Boer War (1899-1902)" in the Journal of Medical Biography (Feb. 2014) covers new ground in Conan Doyle's medical career; copies are available by e-mail from the author <vjcirillo@optonline.net>.
108. Further to British prime minister David Cameron's discussion of "Sherlock" (Dec 13 #6), The Times reported (Jan. 29) he was interviewed on BBC Radio 2 and said that he had received the boxed DVD set of "Elementary" from Father Christmas. "That was good of Father Christmas," he added, "Good pick."
109. That earlier item noted that the headline on a story in Radio Times (Dec. 9) read "Chinese fans go potty for the BBC's Sherlock." That seems to be true: according to the Shanghai Daily (Jan. 25), after "The Empty Hearse" debuted on the video web-site Youku.com the program was viewed more than 5 million times in the first two hours. And there now is a cafe named Sherlock on Ruijin Road South in Shanghai.

110. Feb 14 #7: WHO THINKS EVIL, by Michael Kurland (New York: Minotaur, 2014; 286 pp., $25.99), is the latest in his delightful series about Professor Moriarty, offering great fun as well as a good story. Sherlock Holmes appears as a supporting character, and so does Mycroft, but as usual it's Moriarty who's responsible for solving the mystery. The author's website is at <www.michaelkurland.com>.
111. The Sherlock Holmes Hospitality Group owns five pubs in Edmonton (Alberta) <www.sherlockshospitality.com>: Duggan's Boundary Pub, the Rose and Crown Pub, and three pubs all called The Sherlock Holmes. Their first Sherlock Holmes pub was opened in 1985.
112. Laurie King and Dan Stashower discussed "The Enduring Popularity of Sherlock Holmes" on "The Kojo Nnamdi Show" on WAMU-FM on Feb. 13, and you can listen to a podcast (and read a transcript) at <www.tinyurl.com/k8kwp7s>.
113. Sid Caesar died on Feb. 12. A master of television sketch comedy on "The Admiral Broadway Review" (1949), "Your Show of Shows" (1950-1954), "Caesar's Hour" (1954-1957), and "Sid Caesar Invites You" (1958), he went on to star on stage and screen; he was nominated for an Emmy every year from 1951 to 1958, and won the award twice. There's a report that when Basil Rathbone appeared on "Sid Caesar Invites You", Caesar introduced him as "Sherlock Holmes".

115. Lisa Daniely died on Jan. 24. She made her film debut in "Lilli Marlene" (1951) and went on to a long career with roles that included Queen Elizabeth II in "Princess in Love" (1996). She also played Nancy Barclay in the Granada version of "The Crooked Man" (1984).
116. A company called Nightlight Designs offers an imaginative Sherlock Holmes Pub Nightlight ($17.99 with light) <www.tinyurl.com/m5xy7jm>; you can also find it at Amazon.
117. Jennie Paton spotted an interesting 56-minute video interview with Benedict Cumberbatch at BAFTA New York on Feb. 13 <www.vimeo.com/87020140>; he discusses "Sherlock" and much more. BAFTA is the British Academy of Film and Television Arts, which holds events in New York from time to time.
118. Asked about the future of "Sherlock" in an interview with Assignment X on Jan. 31, co-creator Stephen Moffat said that "I can envision doing it for a while--quite a while." He added that eventually he'll stop doing "Doctor Who" but he imagines that "we'll come back and do 'Sherlock' fairly often for many years, rather than very often for a few years." You can read the entire interview at <www.tinyurl.com/kfwgctg>. Assignment X also offers an interview with Benedict Cumberbatch on Jan. 24 <www.tinyurl.com/lrts36q>.

119. Feb 14 #8 The Portsmouth City Council has been reported to be considering a proposal to create a £25 million "world-class visitor attraction" in the city. According to the Portsmouth News (Feb. 17), Steve Pitt, of Portsmouth Cultural Partnership, which came up with the idea, said "what we are talking about is a world-class Sherlock Holmes experience." There was a flurry of publicity in the British press, but there was no confirmation of actual planning for the project other than the publicity.
120. Joseph W. Moran ("Sir Augustus Moran, C.B.") died on Feb. 18. Joe was an actuary for the N.Y. Life Insurance Co., a Fellow of the Society of Actuaries, and for more than 30 years a member of The Three Garridebs. He delighted in defending the memory of the much maligned Col. Sebastian Moran. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1991.
121. Pop-up books can be delightful works of art, and there is now one that is properly Sherlockian: THE ILLUSTRATED SHERLOCK HOLMES (San Diego: Canterbury Classics, 2013; 58 pp., $19.95) is nicely illustrated in full color by Chris Coady and contains two stories ("A Scandal in Bohemia" and "The Blue Carbuncle") with eight splendid pop-up creations. Recommended.
122. SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ESSENTIAL MYSTERIES IN ONE SITTING, by Jennifer Kasius (Philadelphia: Running Press, 2013; 207 pp., $5.95), offers capsule summaries in a miniature edition (2½ by 3 in.) of a dozen Canonical tales, along with descriptions of the characters and settings.
123. Also from the Running Press: Denis O. Smith's THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF THE LOST CHRONICLES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2014; 503 pp., $13.95), with a dozen nicely plotted stories (most of them new). There's a British edition from Constable & Robinson (£8.99).
124. Some theater news: L. Don Swartz's new dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is being performed at the Ghostlight Theatre in North Tonawanda, N.Y. through Mar. 9 <www.starrynighttheatre.com>. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is on at the Gulfshore Playhouse in Naples, Fla., through Mar. 16 <www.gulfshoreplayhouse.org>. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Jersey Lily" is being produced at Theatre Suburbia in Houston, Tex., through Mar. 22 <www.theatresuburbia.org>. Stephen Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" has been scheduled at the Chatham Playhouse in Chatham, N.J., Mar. 7-22 <www.chathamplayers.org>. Tim Kelly's dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is scheduled at Loyola University New Orleans, Mar. 14-22 <www.tinyurl.com/l9q5emb>, and his adaptation of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" will be produced in Owasso, Okla., Apr. 10-12 <www.octok.org>.
125. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (aka The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) will honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at the Black Labrador in Houston on Apr. 9, when local Sherlockians will have a chance to meet geologists who are in town for the annual meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists; if you would like to attend the festivities, just let me know.

126. Mar 14 #1: Sorry about that: it's on May 3 that the Toronto Public Library will celebrate the opening of its new Arthur Conan Doyle Room, with Lyndsay Faye delivering this year's Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture ("Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Storytelling and the Passion of the Narrator"); details can be found at <www.acdfriends.org/events.htm>.
127. The saga continues: the Conan Doyle Estate has filed its appeal against the judge's ruling (Dec 13 #1) that Les Klinger (and everyone else) can use the Sherlock Holmes characters and story elements in the 50 stories now in the public domain without permission from the Estate, arguing that the judge's ruling was erroneous. You can read the Estate's brief (53 pages, plus 35 pages of appendix) at <www.free-sherlock.com>; click on "Court Filings" and then scroll down to the last entry. And yes, it's called a Brief (I've no idea how long a document can be before the lawyers no longer are allowed to call it a brief). Les Klinger's brief is due the first week in April, and the Estate gets to file a reply, and Les then files a reply to the reply. Oral arguments may take place in May.
128. Computer games get only passing mentions here, because I don't play them, but Frogwares Studio has a continuing series, the most recent being "Crimes & Punishments: Sherlock Holmes"; you see what they're like at YouTube, because people have made videos walking you through the games; if you'd like to see the previous game in the series, go to <www.youtube.com> and search for [testament of sherlock holmes walkthrough].
129. Having said that, Maureen Mosher recommends a simpler game called "Sherlock Holmes Escape" available (without charge) at Nickelodeon's Addicting Games web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mk82nju>.
130. Tom and Marie O'Day noted a report from Michael Allan Mallory at the DOROTHY-L mailing list linking to Denise Martin's interesting story on "Steven Moffat Explains the Origins Sherlock's Best-Man Speech" on-line in Vulture (Jan. 27) <www.tinyurl.com/knzhy7m>.
131. "The Secrets of Sherlock's Mind Palace" is the title of an interesting discussion by Sarah Zielinski, who suggests that the memory technique was invented by the ancient Greeks; you can read the piece on-line at the Smithsonian magazine web-site <www.tinyurl.com/lrtua6y>.
132. Don Hobbs continues to update his "The Galactic Sherlock Holmes"; the January edition has now with 100 foreign languages (and 9 versions of English such as Braille and Pitman Shorthand), showing covers in color and bibliographic information; the bibliography on a CD costs $15.00 postpaid (to the U.S.)/$20.00 (elsewhere), or free to those who report something not already in the bibliography).
133. "Sherlock Holmes Under the Magnifying Glass" is the Smithsonian Associates title for what they call "A Conan Doyle Birthday Celebration" scheduled at the Ripley Center in Washington on May 22. Dan Stashower will discuss both Holmes and Conan Doyle, and Scott Sedar will read from some classic Conan Doyle works. Tickets are available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/mkpwof2>.
134. Mar 14 #2: A collection of John Lennon manuscripts will go to auction at Sotheby's in New York on June 4. According to a story in the N.Y. Times (Feb. 25), the material is from the collection of Tom Maschler, who in the 1960s was the literary director of Jonathan Cape, Lennon's publisher in Britain. The highlight of the material is the manuscript of "The Singulare Experience of Miss Anne Duffield" (a parody that was published in A SPANIARD IN

- THE WORKS in 1965, and featured Shamrock Wolmbs and Doctored Whopper), with an estimate of $70,000. And Lennon's original artwork for the illustrations for the story also will be in the sale. You can read the parody on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/7sfdvrl>.
135. Ray Majors has written a new song "The 7% Solution" on an album of the same name, released on Jan. 14 by Angel Air Records as a CD (£9.35/$18.41) and as an MP3 download. Now in his 5th decade as a guitarist, Majors has survived stage 3 throat cancer, and having experienced the numbing qualities of painkillers during his treatment, recalled Sherlock Holmes' recreational use of cocaine.
  136. Wikipedia Portals are useful entry points to Wikipedia content, and there now are 1,132 portals on Wikipedia, one of them Sherlockian; you can find the Holmes Portal at <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Portal:Sherlock\_Holmes>, and it's well worth exploring.
  137. The Royal Mail has issued a set of ten stamps honoring the 150th anniversary of Middlesex County Cricket Club; it was in 1877 that Lord's Cricket Ground in St. John's Wood became the club's permanent home ground, and it remains the club's home today. Lord's, of course, has special significance for Sherlockians: in 1946 Dorothy L. Sayers wrote (in her Foreword to UNPOPULAR OPINIONS) that "The rule of the game is that it must be played as solemnly as a county cricket match at Lord's." You can see an image of the sheet of stamps at <www.tinyurl.com/kbcdk6q>.
  138. "Urlach Holmes" is "the greatest football detective" in an amusing 5-minute segment that aired on Fox Football Daily on Mar. 4, starring Brian Urlacher (who played 13 seasons with the Chicago Bears) <www.tinyurl.com/ljfc3b>. Thanks to Jennie C. Paton, who spotted the video.
  139. Ken Lanza spotted a mention of an interesting collectible: "Walther. Carl Walther" is the title of an article by Mark Keefe in the American Rifleman (Oct. 2013) <www.tinyurl.com/mdxx7bq>. According to Keefe, in 1979 a company called Umarex made a blank-firing revolver sold in a book-shaped package with a magnifying glass and paid the Conan Doyle heirs 25¢ for each set sold; according to the Umarex web-site <www.tinyurl.com/l69mwfj>, where you will find an image of the set, it sold at a rate of 80,000 a year.

140. Mar 14 #3: Readers will have noted that I make use of <www.tinyurl.com> to avoid the long strings of characters (letters and numerals) in URLs. The company uses 33 characters, so there are some 42 billion encoded URLs available; they're not going to run out soon. They're certainly useful: I see that I used 24 of them in the February issue. TinyURL, launched in 2002, was the first company to offer this sort of service, but there are many others in the field now.
  141. Further to reports on the film "Gnomeo & Juliet: Sherlock Gnomes" announced by Rocket Pictures some time ago (Mar 12 #6 and Sep 12 #2) as a sequel to their "Gnomeo and Juliet" (2011), the company filed a trademark application for "Sherlock Gnomes" last year, and the Conan Doyle Estate is opposing it.
  142. The new film, still "in production," was reported to have Gnomeo and Juliet enlisting the help of Sherlock Gnomes, the world's greatest ornamental detective, when gnomes start disappearing from the suburban gardens of England.
  143. Ross Husband died on Jan. 2. His pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE MASTER ENGRAVER (Dec 13 #5) was the first of six novels in a planned series titled "The Revival of Sherlock Holmes".
  144. The Pioneer Drama Service <www.pioneerdrama.com> continues to publish plays for production by schools and community theater groups: their first was Tim Kelly's "Sherlock Meets the Phantom" (1975), and their latest is Craig Sodaro's "The Secret Case of Sherlock Holmes" (2012).
  145. Playscripts Inc. <www.playscripts.com> offers two scripts: "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" (by Katie Forgetting) and "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror" (adapted by Marcia Milgrom Dodge and Anthony Dodge from Nicholas Meyer's novel); $8.99 each.
  146. Further to an earlier report of a Sherlock Holmes slot machine (Dec 10 #1), Dan Andriacco has spotted one of the machines at a casino in the U.S.; the machine's made by Aristocrat <www.aristocrat-us.com/#!sherlock/c1102>.
  147. The latest Sherlockian audio from Big Finish is a set titled THE ORDEALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, containing four one-hour adventures ("The Guttering Candle", "The Gamekeeper's Folly", "The Bermondsey Cutthroats", and "The Sowers of Despair"); the stories are written by Nicholas Barnes and performed by a cast that includes Nicholas Briggs as Holmes and Richard Earl as Watson. They're nicely done indeed, and are available as 4 CDs ($48.87) and as a download ($25.00); P.O. Box 3787, Maidenhead, Berks. SL6 3TF, England, or <www.bigfinish.com>. The web-site also has downloadable copies of the company's monthly magazine Vortex, as well as information about their other Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian recordings.
  148. Peter A. Ruber ("Camden House") died on Mar. 6. He was an executive with the advertising agency Kenyon & Eckhardt in the 1960s, when his enthusiasms included Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, Vincent Starrett, and August Derleth; he edited and published four issues of The Baker Street Gasogene in 1961 and 1962, and continued with a series of pamphlets and books that culminated with THE LAST BOOKMAN, a tribute to Starrett published in 1968. He received his Investiture from Baker Street Irregulars in 1964.

149. Mar 14 #4: "The Musical Sherlock Holmes: A Bloody Game" was performed at the BBC Theater in Sinsa-dong, Korea, with 36 performances in March, directed by Noh Woo-sung and starring Song Yong-jin and Kim Do-Hyun (alternating as Holmes) and Lee Young-Mi (Jane Watson); you can read about it in the Korea JoongAng Daily <www.tinyurl.com/n77e7hh>. It's the second Sherlock Holmes musical in Korea: "Sherlock Holmes: The Secret of the Anderson Family" was performed in 2011 (Nov 11 #2); there's a 3-minute clip from that show available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ll2bu6y>.
  150. Alexander Orlov has noted an entry at KinoPoisk (it's also at the Internet Movie Data Base) about "Sherlock Holmes and the Saint Ax Colossus" (scheduled for 2015; there's little information there other than mentions of the company Adventurous Arts, Doug Elliott (producer), and Aaron Webster (producer and writer), and no information at all found anywhere else.
  151. "A Cottage on Dartmoor" (aka "Escape from Dartmoor") is a British 87-minute 1929 silent film notable for some gloomy exteriors shot on Dartmoor; it was spotted by Greg Darak on a DVD issued by Kino International (2007); the DVD also has "Silent Britain" (2006), an 88-minute documentary produced by the British Film Institute for BBC-4. "Silent Britain" is notable for a 2-minute segment about Oswald Stoll and the Eille Norwood films, with a tinted and toned clip from "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1921); the BFI owns a copy of the film, but has not released it on cassette or DVD.
  152. Larry Millett's latest mystery novel is STRONGWOOD (Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2014; 265 pp., $24.95); it's a complicated and interesting story, nicely told with excerpts from newspapers, trial transcripts, diaries, and letters: Addie Strongwood is on trial for murder in 1904, and her lawyer is assisted by Shadwell Rafferty and his friends Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. The author's web-site is at <www.larrymillett.com>.
  153. It's not Sherlockian, but: "Bees Saal Baad" [Twenty Years After] is an Indian 158-minute film produced by Geetanjali Pictures and released in 1962. It's obvious that Dhruva Chatterjee, who wrote the story, was familiar with THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, and you can see for yourself, since the film is available (with subtitles) on a Bollywood Entertainment DVD, and in Hindi only from other companies.
  154. The Leeds Teaching Hospitals Charitable Foundation is attempting to set a world record for the largest gathering of people dressed as Sherlock Holmes <www.sherlockworldrecord.com>; the challenge will be held at Temple Newsam in Leeds on Aug. 31 to help raise funds for a new Yorkshire Brain Research Centre, and you can read more about it at their web-site, where you can also enter a raffle to win signed memorabilia from the "Sherlock"

- television series. Thanks to the Baker Street Babes for the alert; their interesting web-site and podcast can be found at <www.bakerstreetbabes.tumblr.com>.
155. Barry S. Brown's MRS. HUDSON IN THE RING (Santa Fe: Sunstone Press, 2014; 266 pp., $22.95), is the third in his "Mrs. Hudson of Baker Street" series, in which Mrs. Hudson does the real detecting, with assistance from Holmes and Watson, this time in a case involving old-style boxing, Lillie Langtry, and murder (Mrs. Hudson gets to go undercover, so to speak, as the Jersey Lily's ladies maid).

156. Mar 14 #5: Steampunk is a modern Victorian science-fiction genre generally set in alternative universes, and it includes some interesting pastiches: one of them is SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE CASE OF THE MAN-MADE VACUUM, by Roy C. Booth and Nicholas Johnson, from the Harren Press (2014; 78 pp., $5.39), in which a mechanically enhanced Holmes appears with Jack the Ripper and the Baroness von Frankenstein.
157. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES ANIMATED COLLECTION, released by Liberation Entertainment in 2007 ($29.99) is a boxed set of the four animated versions of the long stories that were produced in Australia in the 1980s by Burbank Films, with Peter O'Toole providing the voice of Sherlock Holmes. Slightly cheaper at Amazon, with a chance to save some money on all four DVDs.
158. Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" continues to offer interesting content, including podcasts recorded by Scott and Burt Wolder. Their latest podcast (#62) is "Inside the BSI Weekend" <www.tinyurl.com/p3zoqm6> and it includes interviews with people who attended the birthday festivities in New York, among them Art Levine (who has been attending the Baker Street Irregulars' annual dinners since 1954).
159. Vaughn Entwistle's THE REVENANT OF THRAXTON HALL (New York: Minotaur, 2014; 322 pp., $25.99) is the first novel in his series taken from "the paranormal casebooks of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," and it involves Conan Doyle (who is dealing with readers upset by his decision to kill off Sherlock Holmes) and Oscar Wilde in an investigation of a murder that hasn't yet been committed and that involves Daniel Dunglas Home, and to Society for Psychical Research, some weird goings on in the English countryside. The author has a web-site at <www.vaughnentwistle.com>.
160. "Solves Circus Murder! Who killed Felipe, the Lion Tamer? Even the indefatigable Sherlock Holmes is worn with worry because of the important yet stubborn supernatural clue!" That's the promotion for a Rathbone/Bruce radio program, sponsored by the Petri Wine Company, in a newspaper advertisement possibly published in 1944. But which program was it? Which program involved the murder of Felipe?
161. Now offered at the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.tinyurl.com/kac3ros> is "The Texas Set" ($185.00); the limited-edition boxed set contains copies of BOHEMIAN SOULS and THE WRONG PASSAGE (about the two manuscripts at the University of Texas) in special bindings, together with a pamphlet with indexes to the two books.
162. Francine Kitts has reported "Sherlock's Great Afghan Adventure Mystery Read & Knit-Along" created by Susan Woodley at Ravelry; it's a year-long project with a different pattern each month inspired by one of the stories, and you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/jvu2y72>.
163. The Cedars Spiritualist Church in Ipswich, where Conan Doyle attended seances in the 1920s, was offered at auction on Mar. 5, estimated at £500,000 to £700,000, according to the Daily Mail (Feb. 24); the newspaper story has pictures of the building <www.tinyurl.com/ktgnabf>. The building went unsold at the auction, but was sold afterward for £500,000; you can see more images at the auction-house web-site <www.tinyurl.com/oefmgr6>.

164. Mar 14 #6: Clarissa Dickson Wright died on Mar. 15. She became famous on the irreverent cooking show "Two Fat Ladies" broadcast by the BBC and the Food Network from 1996 to 1999, when her partner Jennifer Paterson died (Aug 99 #3); she also appeared on "Clarissa and the Countryman" from 2000 to 2003, and her BBC News obituary <www.tinyurl.com/mk5416e>, reported by Scott Monty, included a photograph of her wearing a deerstalker.
165. The Two Fat Ladies enjoyed traveling on a motorcycle and sidecar for their programs. Scott recalls that in the episode "Barristers at Lincoln's Inn" Clarissa said "Turn into Queer Street, Jennifer," to which Jennifer replied "They probably call it Gay Street now." "Not that sort of queer," Clarissa explained, "It's because the bankruptcy courts are here." And that reminded Scott of Lestrade telling a constable (in "The Second Stain") that "It's lucky for you, my man, that nothing is missing, or you would find yourself in Queer Street."
166. "Nothing on Earth Can Hold Houdini" opened at the Axis Theater in New York on Feb. 27, and runs through Apr. 5 <www.axiscompany.org>; it's a new play by Randall Sharp, and stars George Demas (Houdini) and Spencer Aste (Arthur Conan Doyle), and has received favorable reviews in the N.Y. Times (Mar. 7) and elsewhere. Thanks to Ray Betzner for the report.
167. "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" (a new play by Ken Ludwig) is to have its world premiere next year at the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., Jan. 16-Feb. 22 <www.arenastage.org> and then moves to the McCarter Theatre Center in Princeton, N.J., Mar. 10-29 <www.mccarter.org>.
168. Another new play is "Sherlock Holmes & the Ice Palace Murders" (dramatized by Jeffrey Hatcher from the novel by Larry Millett) scheduled for its world premiere at the Park Square Theatre in Minneapolis, June 19-July 19, 2015 <www.parksquaretheatre.org>.
169. And there's lots more theater to report: Jerry R. Montoya's comedy "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is being performed by the Children's Theatre of California at the B Street Theater in Sacramento, Calif., through Apr. 13 <www.bstreettheatre.org>. Jahanna Beecham and Malcolm Hillgartner's musical "Holmes and Watson Save the Empire" is due at the Evergreen Cultural Centre in Coquitlam, B.C., Apr. 1-5 <www.evergreenculturalcentre.ca>. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" will be performed at George Fox University in Newberg, Ore., Apr. 3-13 <www.georgefox.edu>.
170. Stephen Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" has two productions coming up: at the State Theatre in Bay City, Mich., from Apr. 24 to May 4 <www.baycityplayers.com>, and at the Coronado Playhouse, in Coronado, Calif., Apr. 11-May 18 <www.coronadoplayhouse.com>. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" will be performed at the Playhouse in the Park in Cincinnati, Sept. 20-Oct. 12 <www.cincyplay.com>. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Jersey Lily" is scheduled at the Royal Manitoba Theatre Centre in Winnipeg, Oct. 1-25 <www.mtc.mb.ca>.
171. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is a new British play performed by the Chapterhouse Theatre Company; it opens at Lacock Abbey, nr. Chippenham, on June 13 and then tours in Britain and Ireland <www.chapterhouse.org>.

172. Mar 14 #7: Sherlock Holmes is returning to Japanese television, this time as a puppet, and as a 15-year-old high-school student. According to a story in the Japan Times (Mar. 22), Koki Mitani, a popular playwright and director, is preparing a 20-episode series for NHK. Bunta Inone designed the puppets, and there are images and more information on the series at <www.tinyurl.com/p5g5qpm>. The first three shows were broadcast as a preview in March, and the next three will be seen in August; the entire series will air in October. Mitch Higurashi has kindly reported that you can see additional images at <www.nhk.or.jp/sh15>; click on the four blue boxes below the large image.
173. Marlene Aig's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LUFTON LADY (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 95 pp., £6.99/€7.99/$9.95) is a welcome reminder of a fine writer who died far too young; set in 1878, it's a tale of a younger and more romantic Holmes, nicely told, and with an appreciative forward by written by Susan Dahlinger. The publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and at <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.

174. Also from MX Publishing: Matthew J. Elliott's THE IMMORTALS: AN UNAUTHORIZED GUIDE TO SHERLOCK AND ELEMENTARY (2013; 208 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95) is an interesting analysis/critique/comparison of the first two seasons of "Sherlock" and the first season of "Elementary"; the author notes that the whole book is a spoiler, and so it is, but it will be enjoyed by those who enjoy the series.
175. And there's more: Stephen Seitz's NEVER MEANT TO BE (2013; 122 pp., £6.99/ €7.99/$9.95) involves time traveler Cynthia Kenyon, who has a complicated romantic relationship with Watson. IS THAT MY HOLMES? and IS THAT MY WATSON? are amusing rhymed picture books written by Andrew Murray, with artwork by Deakin Brook (2013; 24 pp., £6.99/€7.99/$9.95 each), that are inspired by recent film and television versions of Holmes and Watson. Eddy Webb's WATSON IS NOT AN IDIOT (2013; 201 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95) is not a rehabilitation of Watson (who doesn't really need one any more), but rather (as it's subtitled) "an opinionated tour of the Sherlock Holmes canon" that offers insights into the stories. Luke Benjamen Kuhns' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE HORROR OF FRANKENSTEIN is a graphic novel with artwork by Marcie Klinger (2013; 32 pp., £7.99/€8.99/$10.95).
176. And Clair Daines' SHERLOCK HOLMES: A STUDY IN REGRET (2013; 242 pp., £6.99/€7.99/$9.95) has Holmes and Mary Watson in pursuit of villains led by Col. Moran, who shot and killed Watson at the Reichenbach; the conclusion of the two-part series will be THE FINAL SOLUTION. W. P. Lawler's MYSTERY AT ST. ANDREWS (2013; 246 pp., £9.99/€12.99/$16.95) is a reissue of the pastiche published in 2012 (Apr 13 #3); Watson, Holmes, Irene Adler, and much golfing. Andrew Murray's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES QUIZ BOOK (2013; 164 pp., £8.99/€10.99/$12.95) offers 100 10-question quizzes on the Canon, television, and films.
177. Andrew Clark has reported an interesting item from BBC News in Pictures on Feb. 26 <www.bbc.com/news/in-pictures-26339275> with a slide show of hybrid images of London street scenes (some of them at Canonical locations). The images are from Museum of London's "Streetmuseum" app, which is explained at <www.tinyurl.com/bvbnfca> and is available at the iPhone App Store.
178. Mar 14 #8 I suggested earlier that Watson doesn't really need rehabilitation any more. Nigel Bruce wasn't the first or the last actor to portray Watson as "boobus Britannicus" or Holmes' "rather stupid friend" (a phrase that Conan Doyle used in the Fox Movietone film interview (1929) after he had seen earlier Sherlock Holmes films). Younger generations of Sherlockians have been introduced to Watson by actors such as Robert Duval, David Burke, Edward Hardwicke, Jude Law, Martin Freeman, and Lucy Liu, all of whom present a Watson much closer to the Watson found in the Canon.
179. The Huffington Post reported on Mar. 11 that Benedict Cumberbatch would be appearing as a celebrity guest at the Wizard World Minneapolis Comic Con on May 2-4, setting off a flurry of interest and an almost instant denial from the convention. But there are lots of other celebrities appearing at the convention <www.wizardworld.com/home-minneapolis.html>.
180. C. Michael Forsyth's SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE AND HARRY HOUDINI IN THE ADVENTURE OF THE SPOOK HOUSE (Freedom's Hammer, 2014; 173 pp., $13.46) involves Conan Doyle and Houdini and the medium Eva C. in an investigation of multiple murders and a haunted house in Virginia; Eva Carrière was a prominent spiritualist who was investigated by both Conan Doyle and Houdini, and she has an interesting entry at Wikipedia.
181. One of the nicest things about the Internet is that it makes it possible to offer access to archives; Ted Bergman has done that quite nicely providing access to a wide variety of his work, Sherlockian and non-Sherlockian, in Swedish and in English <goto.glocalnet.net/tedbe> (there are some excellent photographs of his model of 221B Baker Street).
182. Marc Pastor's BARCELONA SHADOWS was first published in Catalan in 2008, and has now been translated into English (London: Pushkin Press, 2014; 265 pp., £12.99/$18.95); it's fiction, but based on the story of the very real Enriqueta Martí, who was a child murderer, kidnapper, and procurer of children who victimized Barcelona until she was arrested in 1912. It's a gripping novel, often grotesque and chilling, not for the faint of heart; it's also an excellent police procedural, but Sherlockian only because Inspector Moisès Corvo has read about Holmes.
183. The Domino Lady, a masked heroine who first appeared in the May 1936 issue of Saucy Romantic Adventures, appeared with Sherlock Holmes in a story by Nancy Holder in Lori Gentile's anthology DOMINO LADY: SEX AS A WEAPON (Aug 09 #6); they're together again in a two-issue comic-book mini-series DOMINO LADY/SHERLOCK HOLMES from Moonstone Entertainment (2013; $3.99 each) with artwork by Reno Maniquis <www.moonstonebooks.com>.
184. Moonstone also has published SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE CROSSOVER CASEBOOK (2012; 300 pp., $18.95); edited by Howard Hopkins, the anthology has 14 pastiches by authors such as Win Scott Eckert, Joe Gentile, Barbara Hambly, Christopher Sequeira, and Martin Powell, involving Holmes with characters who include Lawrence of Arabia, Harry Houdini, Calamity Jane, Arsene Lupin, and Dr. Thorndyke.

185. Apr 14 #1: The saga continues: Les Klinger filed his brief in opposition to the Conan Doyle Estate's appeal against the ruling (Dec 13 #1) that Les (and everyone else) can use the Sherlock Holmes characters and story elements in the 50 stories that are now in the public domain without getting permission from the Estate, and the Estate has responded; all of the filings are available at Les' web-site <www.free-sherlock.com>; click on "Court Filings" and then scroll down to the last entries. There will be oral arguments in the case in Chicago on May 22.
186. The DFN Charitable Foundation has announced that it has exchanged contracts to purchase Undershaw (the former home of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle), and will create "the schools at Undershaw" with Undershaw as the upper school and an existing school, Stepping Stones in Hindhead as the junior school; the goal of the schools will be to create a 'gold standard' special-needs school for children and young adults who have mild learning and physical difficulties, and there's more information at <www.dfnfoundation.org>. And there's a 5-minute video at <www.youtube.com/watch?v=D8x0MUAI5cw>.
187. The foundation was established this year by David Forbes-Nixon, co-founder, chairman, and chief executive of Alcentra, a company that works "with investors around the world to help them make the most the market opportunities.
188. Some treasures from the late Norman Nolan's collection will be offered at auction at Christie's in New York on June 19: the manuscript of "The Adventure of Black Peter", the original artwork for Sidney Paget's illustration showing Holmes and Watson in the railway carriage (in "Silver Blaze"), and a pair of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's surgical scissors. Christie's web-site is at <www.christies.com>; if you'd like to be on their mailing list for an announcement of the auction, you should ask Diane Nolan at <n2913@aol.com>. And Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" report on the items will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/mgwh55r>.
189. The question was: "Who killed Felipe, the Lion Tamer?" (Mar 14 #5), asked in an advertisement for one of the Rathbone/Bruce radio programs. And the answer seems to be: no one. Alexander Orlov has reported that "Under the Big Top" was broadcast on Nov. 6, 1944, and you can listen to the program at <www.tinyurl.com/lc5a4fp>. What's really interesting is that there's no Felipe, the Lion Tamer in the story: victim of the murder is Giselle, the tightrope walker.
190. Caroline Bryan Atkins has found an interesting Sherlockian game available (free) at Google Play <www.tinyurl.com/qb9exsa>; there's a lot more Sherlockian material at the web-site, which is well worth exploring.

191. The Internet reverberated earlier this month with news of new photographs of fairies: the Manchester Evening News reported that Manchester lecturer John Hyatt had photographed what appeared to be fairies in the Rossendale Valley, and that the photographs would be exhibited at the Whitaker Museum in Rossendale <www.tinyurl.com/q58gn86>. The story was published on Apr. 2, which suggests that the announcement was made on Apr. 1. Caveat lector.
192. Apr 14 #2: Fergus Hume's THE MYSTERY OF A HANSOM CAB (1886) isn't at all Sherlockian, but it's an interesting example of a truly popular Victorian mystery novel: it was self-published in Australia by the author, who sold all the rights for £50 and then watched sales rise to a reported 375,000 copies by the end of 1887, when A STUDY IN SCARLET made far less of an impression on readers. The State Library of New South Wales is reported to hold the only known copy of the first edition. Michael Dirda's perceptive review of a new edition of the book from Text Classics was published last month in the Washington Post last month <www.tinyurl.com/k7zun7j>.
193. The amusing comment that "Though he might be more humble, there's no police like Holmes" is credited to Conan Doyle's brother-in-law E. W. Hornung; but what is the source? When and where did he say or write it?
194. Mickey Rooney died on Apr. 6. He was born Joe Yule Jr., went on stage as a toddler in his parents' vaudeville act, and made his first appearance in films in at the age of six. The next year, in 1927, he made the first of his Mickey McGuire short films, and took half of his acting name from his role in the series; he went on to a long career as an actor, and never retired. In "Mickey the Detective" (1928) he ran a detective school, planning "to make Sherlock Holmes look like a cross-eyed house detective." You can see the film (in two parts) at <www.youtube.com>, as well as an excerpt from "Mickey's Disguises" (1933), which includes an amusing bit with Sherlockian artwork.
195. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France's web-site has much to offer, including "The Conan Doyle Encyclopedia" <www.sshf.com/encyclopedia> which will reward those who explore it thoroughly. One such item is an entry for "Le Quadrille des Diamants" (a French television program that was broadcast in 1957), with a link to the film at <www.ina.fr>; it's based on Conan Doyle's "The Story of the Jew's Breastplate" and new to Doylean filmography.
197. Howard Ostrom's extensive research on "The Original Baker Street Babes" is available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/qyooq7g>, offering a survey of women actors, directors, and writers who have been involved in presenting Sherlockian drama, and you can see an interesting four-part video documentary based on his research at <www.tinyurl.com/p6qwz4d>.
198. Curtis Armstrong continues to appear on television, currently guest-starring as God's scribe Metatron in "Supernatural" (a series broadcast by the CW Television Network series). In the episode "Meta Fiction" (Apr. 15) he quotes from the Canon; the episode may still be available at the web-site for the series <www.cwtv.com/series/supernatural>, and it will surely repeat. Curtis reports that Robbie Thompson (the writer) tweeted during the East Coast feed of the show that he put the quote in because he had heard that Curtis was a Sherlockian. The show wound up seven minutes long, so it had to be cut; he was afraid that Holmes would wind up on the cutting-room floor, and was delighted when he didn't.

199. Apr 14 #3: The April issue of Laurie R. King's "News and Nonsense" offers news for fans of Mary Russell: THE MARY RUSSELL COMPANION will be published as an e-book in May, there's a Laurie R. King Channel at You-Tube, and you can see an image of the cover of the next Mary Russell novel, DREAMING SPIES. You can read the newsletter at <www.tinyurl.com/l7xdj5r>.
200. Don Libey reports that last year's 221B Cellars "A Study in Scarlet" vintage is no longer available (unless you know someone who is willing to share a bottle); this year's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" vintage will be ready soon; you can read all about it, and order, at <www.221bcellars.com>.
201. The Washington Post has held a Peeps Diorama Contest since 2007, and this year's winners can be seen at <www.tinyurl.com/mml1bxb>. The St. Paul Pioneer Press, however, has been running a contest since 2003, and this year's winner, accompanied by a story written by Seth Johnson and Candace Okeson, was Sherlockian: "The Adventure of the Speckled Cand(y)". You can read the story, and see the diorama, at <www.tinyurl.com/n3xucq4>.
202. JEWEL OF THE THAMES: A PORTIA ADAMS ADVENTURE, by Angela Misri (Fierce Ink Press, 2014; 243 pp., $11.99) is the first of a series featuring a 19-year-old Canadian girl who when her mother dies in the 1930s discovers that she is the granddaughter of Dr. Watson, inherits 221 Baker Street, and acquires a mysterious (and generous) guardian who takes Portia to London, where she studies the journals and books she finds in the house, and shows a talent for detective; it's nicely done, with some interesting twists and turns.
203. Apr 14 #4: Further to the earlier mention of Baskerville the Hound (Apr 13 #6), there is a nice blog about his debut on "The Muppet Show" on Oct. 18, 1976 (with a link to "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Disappearing Clues") on Scott Monty's web-site "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/nwos386>. Credit where credit is due: Jim Henson (Rowlf) as Sherlock Holmes, and John Loveday (Baskerville the Hound) as Watson.
204. Dave Thompson's SHERLOCK HOLMES FAQ (Milwaukee: Applause Books, 2014; 283 pp., $24.99) promises "all that's left to know about the world's greatest private detective," and offers a well-illustrated and sometimes irreverent guide to Conan Doyle, the Canon, selected pastiches, Sherlockian drama, and the world of Sherlock Holmes.
205. More about Lego minifigures of Sherlock Holmes (Feb 14 #3): Maureen Mosher notes some interesting videos at <www.youtube.com>; just search for [lego sherlock].
206. Further to the item on the three mysterious metal plates discovered by Javier Doria (May 13 #4), one of them, honoring Sherlock Holmes and the publication of Vincent Starrett's 221B: STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES, went unsold at Heritage Auctions on Apr. 2, estimated at $15,000; the plate still is available (for $9,375), and there are images and a detailed description at <www.tinyurl.com/ow4ejs3>.
207. PwC (the new brand for PricewaterhouseCoopers) is a professional services and auditing company with headquarters in London; Jennie Paton has spotted their new amusing Sherlockian commercial at <www.vimeo.com/89868475>.
208. "Here at Oxford University Press we occasionally get the chance to discover a new and exciting piece of literary history," said an announcement on the OUP blog at the beginning of the month. "Never before published, our editorial team has acquired 'The Mystery of the Green Garden,' now believed to be Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's first use of the Sherlock Holmes character in his writing. Written during Doyle's time at Stonyhurst College before entering medical school, the short story displays an early, amateur style of writing not seen in his later published works." You can read the complete announcement at <www.tinyurl.com/nsp35v9>.
209. J. C. Jones' THE SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES AND COMBUSTION SCIENCE is a splendid example of how much fun experts can have using their expertise to analyze the Canon (and in this case also the Apocrypha and a few pastiches). A few of the pieces in this collection were first published as letters in The Sherlock Holmes Journal, but most of them are new, and all are interesting. For information on how to purchase the book, you can contact the author at <j.c.jones@abdn.ac.uk>.

210. WATSON AND HOLMES is a new comic-book mini-series created by Brandon Perlow and Paul Mendoza, and written by Karl Bollers; there are six issues so far ($1.99 each), and a graphic novel WATSON AND HOLMES: A STUDY IN BLACK that combines the first five issues (2013; $16.99). Holmes and Watson are African Americans living and battling criminals in modern-day Harlem, and the series offers strong and colorful artwork by Rick Leonardi and Larry Stroman; you can see samples at <www.newparadigmstudios.com>.
211. Apr 14 #5: Steve Moore died on Mar. 16. He was a co-founder of The Fortean Times, and claimed he "was obviously destined to be either a werewolf or a lunatic." He also worked as an editor and a writer, and according to his obituary in The Telegraph (Apr. 13), produced the SHERLOCK HOLMES & DOCTOR WATSON ANNUAL (1979), a tie-in for Sheldon Reynolds' television series starring Geoffrey Whitehead and Donald Pickering.
212. Still another playscript: John Longenbaugh's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" premiered in Seattle in 2010, and the script is available from the Dramatists Play Service <www.dramatists.com> ($8.00); the company has published other Sherlockian plays over the years.
213. "Nevada Barr on Addiction" is an amusing and intriguing (although non-Sherlockian) essay at the Mystery Scene web-site <www.tinyurl.com/lr9o4jk>.
214. No one seems to be able to identify the source of E. W. Hornung's "Though he might be more humble, there's no police like Holmes," but we have it on good authority that the comment was Hornung's: Dan Stashower reports that Conan Doyle (in the chapter "Some Notable People" in his autobiography MEMORIES AND ADVENTURES) quotes Hornung's "criticism upon my Sherlock Holmes." Conan Doyle also describes Hornung as "a Dr. Johnson without the learning but with a finer wit," and added that "No one could say a neater thing, and his writings, good as they are, never adequately represented the powers of the man, nor the quickness of his brain."
215. The 55th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze (the world's oldest and still-active annual Sherlockian horse race) will be held on Oct. 18 at the Hawthorne Race Course; if you'd like to attend the festivities, details are available from Susan Diamond <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
216. Tony Gray died on Apr. 14. A member of what the Telegraph called "the most famous trio of musical clowns in London" in the 1950s and 1960s, he and his partners were credited with inspiring Monty Python. He also acted in films and television, appearing (according to the Telegraph obituary) in an uncredited walk-on role in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970).
217. Ray Celestin's THE AXEMAN'S JAZZ (London: Mantle, 2014; 426 pp., £19.66) is set in New Orleans in 1919, when Ida Davis (a fledgling Pinkerton employee who's a fan of Sherlock Holmes), young Lewis Armstrong (still on his way to becoming a famous musician), and a vivid cast of characters all are in pursuit of a fiendish serial killer in a city described with a fine sense of place and time.
218. For readers in Maryland (and for the amusement of readers elsewhere): this year's "Search for Unclaimed Property" features Sherlock Franchot in print and at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/nrkafv4>. Peter V. Franchot is the Comptroller of Maryland.
219. Rick Etchells' FINDING SHERLOCK HOLMES IN AMERICA is an e-book travel guide to the United States, offering a state-by-state guide to Holmes-named cities and places, bookstore, societies, and much more, available for $3.95 at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/kgghpa46>, where you can review the opening pages, which will take you through Arkansas and into California.
220. Apr 14 #6: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BLACK WIDOWER, by Keiran McMullan (London: MX Publishing, 2013; 189 pp., $16.95) offers an interesting approach to the Canon: Holmes, in 1908, investigates the deaths of Watson's three wives, hoping to prove his friend is not a murderer. The publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>. THE WIDOW OF DARTMOOR, by Warwick Downing (2014; 234 pp., $16.95), is an imaginative courtroom drama: the Widow of Dartmoor is Beryl Stapleton, who now is the wife of a nobleman and on trial for murdering Prof. Christian Vandeleur; her barrister's Jeremy Holmes, the nephew of Sherlock Holmes, and the story is full of twists, turns, and surprises.
221. Also from MX Publishing: P. James Macaluso Jr. has used Legos to illustrate A SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA, THE RED-HEADED LEAGUE, and A CASE OF IDENTITY in full color (each $9.95); it's an imaginative concept, and done well. David Marcum's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND A QUANTITY OF DEBT (2013; 183 pp., $19.95) is a novel-length addition to his earlier short stories in THE PAPERS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Aug 13 #7); Holmes and Watson investigate (and succeed in solving) a 50-year-old murder.
222. And there's more: John Worth's THE MAKING OF A MAN (2013; 249 pp., $16.95) echoes both Dickens and the Canon, offering the story of how young Shiloh Coombs survives the squalor and perils of the East End to become Sherlock Holmes. Peter A. Andersson's THE COTSWOLDS WEREWOLF AND OTHER STORIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2014; 214 pp., $16.95) presents one long pastiche and four short ones, set in the country and in London. Fiona James-Brown's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE AFFAIR OF THE CONTENTIOUS CONTRALTO (94 pp., $10.95) is set in 1910, when Holmes and Watson attend Irene Adler's final performance and meet her daughter Sophie, solving a terrible murder.
223. The Dali Museum in St. Petersburg, Fla., which is devoted to the philosophy and art of Salvador Dali, offers lectures called "Coffee with a Curator". On May 7 the curator will be Elise Trucks, speaking about "Dali, Freud, & Sherlock Holmes"; details at <www.tinyurl.com/mummzgx>.
224. Alexander Orlov has reported from Russia on what is perhaps the strangest sort-of-Sherlockian film ever produced: "Selden: Deep in the Grimpen Mire" (2010). There's some comment (in Russian) at <www.tinyurl.com/m9xop4e> and a trailer made in 2008 at <www.tinyurl.com/mdzrov>, and Bill Barnes found the complete film (66 minutes) at <www.tinyurl.com/n4narya>. Described as a "bio-pic" of Selden, it's notable for showing a lot of Selden but not the Hound, nor Holmes or anyone else from the Canon other than (in a very brief glimpse) Barrymore. It's an amateur film, directed by Dmitry Lesnikov and starring Maxim Sveshnikov as Selden, it was uploaded to YouTube on Jan. 16, 2012.
225. Marsha Pollak reports The Sub-Librarians Scion of the Baker Street Irregulars in the American Library Association will meet on June 30, during the annual conference of the ALA, this year in Las Vegas, with Laurie R. King as the guest speaker. Marsha will be delighted to provide more information <mlpollak@earthlink.net>.

226. May 14 #1: The saga continues: the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals heard oral arguments on May 22 (by interesting coincidence, Conan Doyle's birthday), in Leslie S. Klinger (Plaintiff-Appellee) vs. Conan Doyle Estate Ltd. (Defendant-Appellant); the judges were Richard Posner, Joel Martin Flaum, and Daniel Anthony Mannion and each side was allowed 15 minutes in which to present and defend their arguments. You can listen to the arguments at the court website <www.tinyurl.com/ogswbd6>, and you can read comments by Brenda Rossini (who attended the proceedings) at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/ptf4yqu>. There's no predicting how long it will take for the court to render its decision in the case.
227. It was interesting to hear Judge Posner ask Les Klinger's attorney Jonathan Kirsch whether Les was "the author of the annotated volumes," because Posner reviewed THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES for The New Republic (Oct. 11, 2004), and offered a decidedly unfavorable opinion of the scholarship and pseudo-scholarship detailed in the annotations.
228. Congratulations to Daniel Stashower, who makes it look easy. This month he won the Mystery Writers of America's Edgar (best fact crime) and Malice Domestic's Agatha (best non-fiction work) for THE HOUR OF PERIL: THE SECRET PLOT TO MURDER LINCOLN BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR. Dan also won an Edgar and an Agatha in 2008 for ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS, and in 2000 for TELLER OF TALES: THE LIFE OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE; it's rare for an author to win more than one award the same year. Ever rarer is a hat trick: Dan also won an Anthony at Bouchercon in 2008.

229. Sorry about that: material from Norman Nolan's collection (Apr 14 #1) will be offered at auction at Christie's in New York on June 19 (which gives you more time to get ready to bid). Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" report on the items will be found at <www.tinyurl.com/mgwh55r>, where you can see just how spectacular Sidney Paget's original artwork is (the engraved versions in The Strand Magazine are nowhere near as nice).
230. The Wessex Press has announced that Mark Gatiss will be a special guest at "From Gillette to Brett IV: Basil, Benedict, and Beyond" at Indiana University in Bloomington on Sept. 12-14, 2014. Steve Doyle and Mark Gagen have attracted enthusiastic audiences for their past three conferences, and registration is now open <www.wessexpress.com>. Fans of the BBC series "Sherlock" will know that Gatiss has series credits as co-creator, producer, actor, and writer. Other special guests are Paul Annett, first director of the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" series, and Michael Hoey, son and biographer of Dennis Hoey, who played Lestrade in the Rathbone/Bruce films.
231. Aziz Bin Adam has discovered the British Library's English and Drama blog, with an entry on "The Spirit Voice of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle" and links to the recording Conan Doyle made in 1930 for His Master's Voice, and to the recording made in 1934 during a seance at the Aeolian Hall; you can listen to both recordings at <www.tinyurl.com/on5k32l>. BBC Radio 4 broadcast a 30-minute program ("What Grandad Did in the Dark") on Jan. 4, 2002, and you can listen to the program at <www.tinyurl.com/ng6a9p9> (but the Conan Doyle recording isn't included in the program).

232. May 14 #2: LADIES, LADIES: THE WOMEN IN THE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Patricia Guy and Katherine Karlson (Sep 07 #3), is now available from Amazon as an e-book ($2.99) <www.tinyurl.com/m5sr4ko>; it's intriguing anthology of essays, poems, music-hall songs that mention Sherlock Holmes (and some that don't), by way of examining "topics ranging from libations to libido, perfumes to prejudice, in the context of the Sherlock Holmes stories."
233. <[www.somethingisgoingto happen.net](http://www.somethingisgoingto happen.net)> is a blog started in May 2012 by Janet Hutchings, editor of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, and it is full of interesting posts by Janet and other EQMM authors. Needless to say, some of the posts are Sherlockian, and they're easy to find by searching the blog for [sherlock] and [conan doyle]. Kenneth Wishnia has written a two-part piece about "Conan Doyle's Sly Subversion of English Society", and in March Dana Cameron contributed "Solving for Sherlock Holmes" (she was preparing for a panel on "Sherlock Holmes and TV" at Boskone, and starting to write a Sherlockian pastiche).
234. If you've never heard of Boskone, it's the longest-running science-fiction convention in New England; it attracts more than a thousand fans and professionals, and this year's was its 52nd gathering. Science-fiction fans have been convening far longer than mystery fans, by the way: Worldcon (the World Science Fiction Convention) was launched in 1939, and the first Bouchercon was held in 1970.
235. Charles A. Adams ("The Winter Assizes at Norwich") died on May 18. Charlie taught English literature at Norwich Free Academy in Connecticut for almost 40 years; he was a long-time member of The Men on the Tor, founded and led The Winter Assizes at Norwich, and he received that as his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1990.
236. SHERLOCK: EVERY CANON REFERENCE YOU MAY HAVE MISSED IN BBC'S SERIES 1-3, by Valerie Estelle Frankel (Sunnyvale: LitCrit Press, 2014; 196 pp., $9.99), is a detailed exploration of "Sherlock" (all nine episodes and the mini-episode), discussion allusions to and echoes of not only the Canon but also other films and television series, accompanied by commentary by Mark Gatiss in print and on DVDs. The author's web-site's at <www.vefrankel.com>.
237. The attractive young lady is 23-year-old Rebecca Case, and her costume consists entirely of body paint, the handiwork of an artist known as Pashur, according to an article in LA Weekly (May 22); she is part of a triptych, with Watson and a foggy London night on the backs of two other girls (not photographed for the article) available at <www.tinyurl.com/pt96lts>. You can see more of Pashur's work at <www.canvasalive.com>.
238. Nicholas Utechin's "OCCASIONALLY TO EMBELLISH" (Jan 13 #3) has won the Tony & Freda Howlett Literary Award, which is awarded by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London for the best piece of Holmesiana published in the preceding year; it's a collection of reprints of some of his literate and often humorous scholarship, with new postscripts to many of the pieces, and it is still available from the Gasogene Press ($18.95) <www.wessexpress.com>.
239. May 14 #3: Alexander Orlov has reported two Canonical stories translated into Lidepla (Lingwa de Planeta). Lidepla is a worldlang (international auxiliary language), and you can read both stories on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/kdydb53> and <www.tinyurl.com/la7lrsg>. There's more information about Lingwa de Planeta at <www.lingwadeplaneta.info>.
240. And Don Hobbs found Dave Mcleod, who has translated part of "A Scandal in Bohemia" into Occidental <www.page30.com/search/label/Sherlock%20Holmes>.
241. Ian Schoenherr has responded to my query about E. W. Hornung's "Though he might be more humble, there's no police like Holmes" (Apr 14 #5), noting a stanza in Harry Graham's poem "The Policeman" in FAMILIAR FACES (1907):
- He may not be as bright, forsooth,
As Dr. Watson's famous foil,---
Sherlock, that keen unerring sleuth
Immortalised by Doyle,
And Patti who, where'er she roams,
Asserts "There's no Police like Holmes!"
242. Harry Graham also wrote a long poem "Sherlock Holmes" in MORE REPRESENTATIVE MEN (1905). Both poems can be read on-line at Project Gutenberg. Ian also discovered Ogden Nash's "Macbeth Has Murdered Sleep? or Don't Make Me Laugh" (1933), which ends with the quatrain:
- I've watched with fascinated eyes
Detectives fall, detectives rise,
And racing through a thousand tomes,
Reflect, There's no police like Holmes."
243. Nash's poem was published in the N.Y. Herald Tribune (July 16, 1933) and in HAPPY DAYS (1933). The complete poem's at <www.tinyurl.com/lwxjj8v>. Ian also is enthusiastic about Howard Pyle, and has blogged about Pyle and Conan Doyle at <www.tinyurl.com/m985796>, and about his interest in Sherlock Holmes at <www.tinyurl.com/kkhlcua>.
244. "When Arthur Conan Doyle tried to kill off Sherlock Holmes in 1893," Gregory Cowles wrote in the N.Y. Times Book Review (May 25), "readers objected so strenuously that Doyle--after trying to mollify them with a prequel--finally gave in and resurrected the character as a cross-dressing mixed martial artist played by Robert Downey Jr."

245. ITV has commissioned a three-part dramatization of Julian Barnes' novel ARTHUR & GEORGE about Arthur Conan Doyle and George Edalji (Sep 05 #5); Conan Doyle will be played by Martin Clunes (star of the "Doc Martin" series) and the script will be written by Ed Whitmore ("Silent Witness" and "Waking the Dead"). Production is set to begin this fall.
246. There's now a Dancing Men Brewery in Happsburgh (where Conan Doyle was inspired to write "The Dancing Men") and needless to say there's web-site at <www.dancingmanbrewery.co.uk> with an amusing video (click on "Follow the Dancing Man"); the brewery is located at the Hill House Inn (formerly Hill House, where Conan Doyle stayed with the Cubitt family in 1905).
247. May 14 #4: Ruth Voboril is a fine example of what can happen when one becomes an enthusiast: not old enough (as some of us are) to have watched the original broadcasts of Ronald Howard's "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" in 1954, she found the series (thanks to the wonders of DVD), and after much work has created an excellent web-site devoted to Howard's life and career <www.sherlockhoward.homestead.com>.
248. Francis M. Nevins' ELLERY QUEEN: THE ART OF DETECTION (Baltimore: Perfect Crime Books, 2013; 362 pp., $19.95) is described on the cover as "the story of how two fractious cousins reshaped the modern detective novel," and it's that and much more. "Ellery Queen" was the pseudonym adopted by Frederic Dannay and Manfred B. Lee, and the name of their detective, but Dannay and Lee were far more than authors of books, short stories, and radio scripts; they edited classic anthologies, and Dannay, an inspired collector, was the founder and first editor of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine (and a member of The Baker Street Irregulars). Nevins' book is a thorough biography, and includes detailed discussion of their books, stories, and scripts.
249. If you're wondering about the "fractious" in the description of the relationship between Dannay and Lee, it's a mild adjective when one is able to take a closer look at the conflicts between the two authors. You get that closer look in BLOOD RELATIONS, also published by Perfect Crime (2012, 150 pp., $14.95); edited by Joseph Goodrich, it's a selection of their letters to each other from 1947 to 1950, offering a fascinating at how they created excellent work in the midst of mutual conflict. The publisher's web-site is at <www.perfectcrimebooks.com>.
250. Richard L. Kellogg's BARRY BASKERVILLE RETURNS (Fort Collins: Airship 27, 2014; 34 pp., $10.99) is his latest entertaining story for young readers, attractively illustrated by Gary Kato; Barry wants to be a detective, and (of course) succeeds in solving a case.
251. "The Many Lives of Sherlock Holmes" is a session scheduled at DashCon, in Schaumburg, Ill., on July 11-13; Schaumburg is near Chicago, and they are expecting more than 3,000 people at the convention (which is billed as "For Tumblr Users, by Tumbler Users"); three of the Baker Street Babes will be on hand, and there's more information at <www.dashcon.org>.
252. "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die" is the title of the Museum of London's major exhibition, opening on Oct. 14 and closing on Apr. 12, 2015. The official announcement on May 20 gathered lots of publicity in the press, and the exhibition's web-site is at <www.tinyurl.com/mp263ux>. They are seeking patrons for the exhibition, and you can read about that at <www.tinyurl.com/mptwx7v>. Exhibition visitors will see the Sidney Paget portrait of Conan Doyle (1897), the manuscript of "The Empty House", and much more.
253. Further to the report (Mar 14 #7) about Koki Mitani's 20-episode Japanese television puppet series, Mitch Higurashi reports that the first three programs will be released on DVD on July 16. There's an announcement (in Japanese) at <www.dogpatch.jp/smph/news/nhk/25140>; it's helpful, of course, to have Google Translate installed on your computer.
254. May 14 #5: The spring issue of "For the Sake of the Trust" (the newsletter of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust) has news about the Trust, and about recent additions to the Archives at the Houghton Library, and it is available both at the Trust's web-site <www.bsitrust.org> and by e-mail; if you would like to be on the mailing list, send a request to Mike Berdan at <editor@bsitrust.org>.
255. Charles Marowitz died on May 2. He directed and wrote plays, led theater companies, and was a drama critic and an author of books about acting theory. Using the pseudonym Matthew Lang he wrote a one-act play "Sherlock's Last Case" (which was based on the Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce films rather than the Canon, which he admitted he never read before writing his play), first performed in London in 1974. Then using his own name he added a second act to the play; the new version was first performed in Los Angeles in 1984 and in Washington and New York in 1987 with Frank Langella and Donal Donnelly as Holmes and Watson. Spoiler alert: Holmes turns up in the second act as a Holmes imposter, and Langella appeared disguised as Tom Baker as Holmes in the BBC's 1984 production of "The Hound of the Baskervilles"; non-Sherlockians who attended the play understandably were puzzled by the reaction from Sherlockians who recognized the echo.
256. "I was obsessed with Sherlock Holmes as a young kid," said Laura Linney, in an interview in the Guardian (May 8). "You know how some people are into Dungeons and Dragons? I was into Sherlock Holmes. I loved the atmosphere of the stories. I loved the intrigue, his personality." She'll play Mrs. Munro, Sherlock Holmes' housekeeper in the film based on Mitch Cullen's A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (with Ian McKellen as Holmes).
257. The National Literacy Trust is working with Wild in Art on a "Books About Town" project planned to create trails of benches shaped as open books in London. The Sherlock Holmes BookBench was designed by Valerie Osment and is now in production, sponsored by the Conan Doyle Estate, and at the end of the summer all of the benches will be auctioned to raise funds for the Trust. There's a project web-site at <www.booksabouttown.org.uk>.
258. Don Hobbs was interviewed by Scott Monty and Burt Wolder for their "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog ("Sherlock Holmes in Translation" is episode 64), and you can hear the 72-minute interview at <www.tinyurl.com/kdtfsdc>. Scott and Burt also have a colorfully-illustrated report on "Bow Ties for Sherlock Holmes Fans" <www.tinyurl.com/knpoccc> showing some of the offerings by Beau Ties of Ltd. of Vermont.
259. May 14 #6: Steimatsky (Israel's largest bookstore chain) continues to run imaginative Sherlockian advertisements (Aug 13 #2), and their latest can be seen at the Mediabistro web-site <www.tinyurl.com/numsmjf>. Scott Monty was reminded of a different artistic advertising campaign from Colsubsidio Libraries, which he reported on at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/mw97r7q> on Apr. 13, 2012.
260. Charlton Heston (1923-2008), added this year to the "Legends of Hollywood" series, played Sherlock Holmes in "The Crucifer of Blood" on stage (1980) and television (1991).
261. Sublibrarian A. Davenport Lomax, a friend of Dr. Watson, consults Sherlock Holmes about a rare (and dangerous) volume in Lyndsay Faye's THE GOSPEL OF SHEBA, the latest in the series of short bibliomysteries published by Otto Penzler's Mysterious Bookshop <www.tinyurl.com/m6rxzbz>; it's an imaginative pastiche, nicely written and with occasional touches of romance, available in a limited signed and hard-bound edition ($100.00 or $50.00) and a paperback edition ($4.95), and (eventually) as an e-book.
262. Ron Brackin's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEADLY ILLUSION (Little Elm: Weller & Bunsby, 2013; 106 pp. $9.99) has Holmes and Watson, assisted by Charles Dodgson, investigating robbery and murder, and encountering the magician John Neville Maskelyn and Jules Verne. The author's web-site is at <www.ronbrackin.com>.
263. The John H. Watson Society has published the second issue of its semi-annual journal "The Watsonian", with 173 pages of scholarship, puzzles, commentary, and other research by its members. There's more information about the society, and it's journal, at <www.johnwatsonsociety.com>.

264. Angela Buckley's THE REAL SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE HIDDEN STORY OF JEROME CAMINADA (Barnesley: Pen & Sword, 2014; 157 pp., $34.95) is the biography of a Manchester policeman who began his career as a police constable in 1868 and had risen to the rank of superintendent of the city's police force when he retired in 1899 and became a private detective. Two volumes of his memoirs were published as TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF DETECTIVE LIFE in 1895 and 1901, and was widely celebrated in the local press, so his story's hardly hidden, but he was a dedicated and skilled police officer, and his story offers a vivid picture of what life was like in Manchester in the Sherlockian era.
265. "Plunging into 'the Full Tide of Human Existence': The Charing Cross Neighborhood in the Sherlock Holmes Adventures" is the latest of seven interesting scholarly papers Leslie Katz has posted to the Social Science Research Network, and you can find them all at <www.tinyurl.com/m7k8fsu>.
266. Alexander Orlov has noted <www.aparchive.com>, the film and video archive of the Associated Press, where you can easily search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] and find "Holmes Lives Again", a British Movietone Newsreel (Jan. 8, 1953) showing Carlton Hobbs in costume as Sherlock Holmes unveiling the plaque at the Criterion. You can rank search results by "relevance" or "newest first" or "oldest first" (the most interesting ranking), And wait hopefully for more material to be digitized.
267. May 14 #7: Brian W. Pugh continues to revise his A CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE OF SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Mar 13 #6); the third edition (London: MX Publishing, 2014; 303 pp., $24.95) delightful and valuable as a resource for information about the life and work of Conan Doyle. The chronology starts in 1755 (the birth of James Doyle) and ends in 1998 (the memorial service for Dame Jean), and there are splendid photographs (old and new), a list of statues and plaques around the world, a new section detailing his Arctic voyage in 1880, careful citations of sources, and much more. The publisher's colorful web-sites can be found at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
268. Also from MX: Diane Gilbert Madsen's THE CONAN DOYLE NOTES: THE SECRET OF JACK THE RIPPER (2014; 346 pp., $28.95) is the latest in her series featuring insurance investigator DD McGill, this time involved in a hunt for the manuscript of THE WHITE COMPANY, in which Conan Doyle accidentally inserted his notes about his (and Dr. Joseph Bell's) identification of the Ripper; one of the characters is Chicago rare-book dealer Tom Joyce (conveniently echoing the real Chicago rare-book dealer Thomas J. Joyce), and many others have names taken from the Sherlock Holmes stories. The author has a website at <www.dianegilbertmadsen.com>.
269. And there's more: Phil Growick's THE REVENGE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2014; 294 pp., $8.95) is a sequel to THE SECRET JOURNAL OF DOCTOR WATSON; Holmes encounters the Romanovs, the Mafia, Sidney Reilly, David Lloyd George, Doug Fairbanks, and Mary Pickford. John A. Little's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MUSICAL MURDERS (2014; 149 pp., $11.95) is set in 1925, with Holmes and Watson back in practice, assisted by the next generation (Jasper Lestrade and Lily Hudson), and in pursuit of a bizarre serial murderer connected to the Bloomsbury Group ("musical" being urban slang for "homosexual"). THE POISONED PENMAN, by Dan Andriacco and Kieran McMullen (2014; 172 pp., $11.95), is a sequel to their THE AMATEUR EXECUTIONER (Sep 13 #6); it's 1922 in London, and Enoch Hale and Dorothy L. Sayers are pursue the murderer of Langdale Pike (again, Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes are involved in the mystery).
270. And still more: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EINSTEIN'S DAUGHTER, by Tim Symonds (2014; 193 pp., $14.95) takes Holmes and Watson to the Balkans to investigate persistent rumors that Albert Einstein had an illegitimate daughter Lieserl. Dean P. Turnbloom's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BODY SNATCHERS (2014; 322 pp., $18.95) is a sequel to his earlier SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE WHITECHAPEL VAMPIRE (Apr 12 #7); this time the vampire's in New York, pursued by local detectives, and of course by Holmes and Watson. John Heywood's THE INVESTIGATIONS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (2014; 201 pp., $14.95) offers six short pastiches set both in London and the countryside.
271. Dan Andriacco has written four books about Jeff Cody and Sebastian McCabe, the latest being THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. JAMES PHILLIMORE (Sep 13 #6), and he now has added a short story ("The Revengers") that's available (free) as a Kindle e-book at <www.amazon.com> and in other formats if you join MX's Sherlock Holmes Books newsletter <www.tinyurl.com/k6lrz62>. Dan's entertaining (and Sherlockian) blog is at <www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com>.
272. Jun 14 #1: The saga continues: the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals has issued its final judgment in the Conan Doyle Estate's appeal of the lower-court decision in Les Klinger's lawsuit against the Estate: Judge Castillo ruled in favor of Les, and the Appeals Court affirmed the ruling, also awarding costs, which Les will now be able to recover from the Estate. All the filings and decisions are available at Les' web-site <www.free-sherlock.com>; just click on "Court Filings" to find earlier documents in the case. The Estate also has commented on the judgment in a press release at <www.tinyurl.com/nf4eldo>, saying that the Estate is considering an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.
273. "Sherlock Holmes Attracts 69 Million Viewers in China Despite Being Banned in Country for Being Too Risque" was the headline on one report; the third season of "Sherlock" was banned by the government's censors from the Chinese Central Television network and other channels, but still found an audience thanks to video web-sites.
274. The three Sherlockian and Doylean lots at auction at Christie's on June 19 brought nice prices: the manuscript of "The Adventure of Black Peter" (estimated at $250,000-350,000) sold for $317,000 (including buyer's premium), the original artwork for Sidney Paget's illustration showing Holmes and Wat Watson in the railway carriage (in "Silver Blaze") (estimated at $40,000-60,000) sold for $112,500, and the pair of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's surgical scissors (estimated at $5,000-7,000) sold for $4,625. And it has been reported that both the manuscript and the artwork went to the same bidder (present at the auction). Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" report on the items is at <www.tinyurl.com/mgwh55r>.
275. The Baker Street Irregulars have organized excursions to the Vermessa Valley (2004), the Country of the Saints (2008), and the University of California in Los Angeles (2012), and (hold the dates) the next event will be a conference at the Chautauqua Institution in western New York on Sept. 16-18, 2016. Details to come.
276. The collection of John Lennon manuscripts brought good prices at Sotheby's in New York on June 4 (Mar 14 #2). The manuscript of "The Singularge Experience of Miss Anne Duffield" (a parody that was published in A SPANIARD IN THE WORKS in 1965, and featured Shamrock Wolmbs and Doctored Whopper), was estimated at $50,000-70,000 and sold for $209,000 (including the buyer's premium), and illustrations for the story also sold well above estimates.
277. A new Sherlockian society for numismatists and coin collectors will hold an organizational meeting in Rosemont, Ill. (near Chicago), on Aug. 9, during the American Numismatic Association's World Fair of Money. Details available from Greg Ruby <greg@gregrubyconsulting.com>.
278. "Metal Knight" is a new digital album from Charlemagne Productions featuring songs by Christopher Lee, who at 92 years old still has a fine voice; there's a sample at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/msng5b9>, kindly reported by Alexander Orlov. It's not Sherlockian, but still nicely done. And there's an interesting web-site at <www.charlemagneproductions.org>.

279. Jun 14 #2: Henry Cauvin's THE KILLING NEEDLE (New York: Locked Room International, 2014; 152 pp., $15.99) features an amateur detective skilled at observation, deduction, and forensic science, who occasionally takes drugs, and whose story is told by a doctor who becomes his friend and associate. This all may sound familiar, but he's not Sherlock Holmes; instead he's Maximilien Heller, and the book was first published in French in

- 1871, leading to speculation that it may have inspired Conan Doyle to create his own similar detective. The translation is by John Pugmire, whose web-site <www.lockedroominternational.com> is devoted to English translations of foreign-language locked-room mysteries. THE KILLING NEEDLE is an interesting mystery, French rather than English, and of course Conan Doyle (who read and spoke French) might well have been familiar with it.
280. Ron De Waal suggests that Les Klinger seems to have set a record (some time ago). THE NEW ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES, which weighs 15.8 pounds, likely is the heaviest Sherlock Holmes book or set ever published. Of course the single issues of The Strand Magazine that contain the 58 stories published in the magazine would weigh more, but they include a lot of non-Sherlockian material.
281. When in Russia: Alexander Orlov has reported a Sherlock Holmes restaurant/ bar/museum in Obninsk (62 miles southwest of Moscow); their web-site is (in Russian) at <www.sherlockbar.ru>.
282. William Freeman's DICTIONARY OF FICTIONAL CHARACTERS (1963) contains brief entries for the names of "20,000 characters from over 2,000 literary works --novels, short stories, poems, plays, and operas--by 500 British and American authors," and it's a frustrating and intriguing book. Frustrating because there's no author index, so one can't easily locate all of the characters created by a particular author. And intriguing because it's impossible to figure out why particular characters were or were not chosen. The major characters from Conan Doyle's best-known books are included, not only the stars of the Canon, but also from the Challenger and Gerard stories and from THE WHITE COMPANY, SIR NIGEL, RODNEY STONE, and UNCLE BERNAC, and with some of the minor characters from those novels. But Freeman appears not to have read THE VALLEY OF FEAR: Birdy Edwards and Jack Douglas are missing, and the only McMurdo listed is Bartholomew Sholto's servant in THE SIGN OF FOUR.
283. Samantha Wolov noted a Facebook reference to a hair salon in Chico, Calif., called Shear Locks Home; it's not there any more, but there is a Shear Lock Home in Delhi, Iowa, a Shear Lock Combs in Edmonton, Alberta, and a ShearLock Combs West in St. Charles, Mo. <www.shearlockcombs.com>.
284. Howard Ostrom's five-part essay on "The Original Baker Street Babes" at the No Place Like Holmes web-site <www.tinyurl.com/qyooq7g> (Dec 13 #5) has now been supplemented by Lexi Wolfe's four-part video documentary at YouTube; go to <www.youtube.com/watch?v=VH7FfQJ47co> for the first part, with links at the right to the other three parts. Howard's latest essay is about the many Russian presentations of Sherlock Holmes on stage, screen, and television, available at <www.tinyurl.com/qd3mu5e>; "From Russia with Love" was written with assistance from Alexander Orlov and others and it demonstrates how valuable Internet archives in other countries and languages can be.

285. Jun 14 #3: Lenny Picker has reported the just-released direct-to-DVD film "Baby Geniuses and the Treasures of Egypt" ($14.99); there's a trailer at YouTube <www.youtube.com/k6g4y8r>. "An adorable group of talking baby detectives travel to the deserts of Egypt to track down the naughty baby-criminal mastermind Big Baby and his partner, the supervillain Moriarty (Jon Voight).
286. The BBC's "Sherlock" series is thoroughly popular world-wide, and if you'd like to see a grand example of youth, energy, and enthusiasm, take a look at the video of the "I Am Sherlocked Dance Mob" performed earlier this year in St. Petersburg <www.youtube.com/watch?v=cqIFjX3lpz0>. Thanks to Alexander Orlov for reporting the video.
287. Tom Wheeler has expanded his THE LONDON OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Nov 11 #8) into five "New Generation Travel" e-books with active Internet links now available from Amazon Digital Services <www.amazon.com>; just search for [thomas bruce wheeler]. He also offers an impressive set of presentation notes for "The London of Sherlock Holmes" with color photographs and active links; it will run on any computer that has Microsoft Word installed, and it's available on request from Tom <londonsecrets@europe.com>.
288. Not only "Fleet-street was choked with red-headed folk," John Bergquist has suggested, after spotting a news report about what happened in Montréal on May 3, when ginger-haired Celine Dompierre, who wanted to foster a greater sense of community among those who shared her hair color, used Facebook to organize a gathering in a park on Mount Royal. You can find stories (and video) with a Google search for [redheads montreal].
289. Fran Martin reported in the June issue of The Petrel Flyer (the newsletter of The Stormy Petrels of B.C.) that her daughter Becky had interviewed Dan Aykroyd, who said that his great-grandfather corresponded with Conan Doyle. Asked if he was a Holmes fan, Aykroyd replied, "Oh yes. Absolutely, sure. Who isn't, really?" Go to <www.tinyurl.com/odbqb6n> to read the entire interview. It should be noted that Aykroyd played Watson in "The Case of the Scarlet Membrane" (a skit broadcast on "Saturday Night Live" in 1978).
290. The protagonist of Steven Galloway's THE CONFABULIST (New York: Riverhead, 2014; 304 pp., $27.95) is Martin Strauss, the man who killed Harry Houdini (twice); the novel's an imaginative and interesting tale of magic and magicians, espionage, and murder, and it includes a fictionalized account of Houdini's meetings with Conan Doyle.
291. The second annual "Holmes, Doyle, and Friends" symposium will take place in Dayton, Ohio, on Mar. 21, 2015, and more information is available from Martin Arbagi <martin.arbagi@gmail.com>.
292. The Second Annual John H. Watson Society World Invitational Canonical Treasure Hunt will be launched at noon on Aug. 1 as a challenge to Sherlockian teams and individuals world-wide; Don Libey promises that this year's challenge will be more difficult than last year's. The rules and regulations are available at <www.tinyurl.com/ndaamme>. Don also announced on June 17 that the society's journal The Watsonian will also be available as a digital edition; details at <www.johnhwatsonociety.com/index.html>.

293. Jun 14 #4: "Enduring War: Grief, Grit, and Humour" is the title of a British Library exhibition (open through Oct. 12) that commemorates the centenary of the First World War <www.tinyurl.com/mgjfkf2>; one item on display is the letter Conan Doyle wrote to his mother in 1917 about his son Kingsley: "I do not fear death for the boy for since I became a convinced spiritualist death became rather an unnecessary thing, but I fear pain and mutilation very greatly." There's also a link to the Library's World War One web-site, which has images of the manuscript original of Conan Doyle's "Petition in Support of Roger Casement" <www.tinyurl.com/n974fae>.
294. The second vintage from 221B Cellars honors "The Hound of the Baskervilles" with a Sonoma County Zinfandel and an attractive label; as last year, it's a limited first edition wine, and you can read all about it, and order your bottles, at <www.221bcellars.com>. Don Libey and Don and Joanne Yates obviously are having fun with their project.
295. Benedict Cumberbatch briefly had green hair, according to Claire Pritchard-Jones. She's the make-up artist for the BBC series "Sherlock" and appeared this month at the Sherlock Holmes Convention in Vienna. You can read all about it (and much more) in a Radio Times story <www.tinyurl.com/lf7otms>; don't neglect the link in the second paragraph to the Q&A, which is really just a report on the stories she told.
296. Alexander Orlov has noted <www.attaboyclare.com>, a web-site maintained by Adam Roche and devoted to classic movies and old-time radio, with interesting podcasts, three of them with Basil Rathbone material.
297. The Undershaw Set is now available from the Baker Street Irregulars Press <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/undershaw.html>. The slip-cased set contains signed, numbered, and specially-bound copies of two books: Michael Dirda's ON CONAN DOYLE: OR, THE WHOLE ART OF STORYTELLING (Oct 11 #2) and Joel Silver's THE REMARKABLE CHARACTERS OF ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE (Feb 14 #1); all profits from the set will go to the Undershaw Preservation Trust to help preserve Conan Doyle's former home.

298. Congratulations (again) to Dan Stashower, whose THE HOUR OF PERIL: THE SECRET PLOT TO MURDER LINCOLN BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR has been nominated for a Macavity (best nonfiction) by Mystery Readers International. The book also has won the Mystery Writers of America's Edgar (best fact crime) and Malice Domestic's Agatha (best non-fiction work).
299. Patricia Guy's BACCHUS AT BAKER STREET: SHERLOCK HOLMES & VICTORIAN DRINKING LORE (Nov 95 #6), now available as an e-book ($2.99), presents an expert's examination of the wine, beer, and spirits found in the Canon, and the brewers, vintners, barkeepers and wine-merchants, with flavor and humor and an occasional surprise; it's another fine example of how useful e-books can be bringing interesting books to a new generation of readers.
300. Eli Wallach died on June 24, after a long career on stage and screen. He acted for more than 60 years. He was best known for his role as the bandit Tuco in "The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly" (1965), he titled his memoirs THE GOOD, THE BAD, AND ME: IN MY ANECDOTAGE (2005); he also played Napoleon Bonaparte in the film "The Adventures of Gerard" (1970).
301. Jun 14 #5: Edith Pargeter (as Ellis Peters), best known for her long series of Medieval mysteries starring Brother Cadfael, also wrote imaginative short stories and novelettes for newspapers, magazines, and anthologies; her THE TRINITY CAT AND OTHER MYSTERIES (Norfolk: Crippen & Landru, 2006; 262 pp., $19.00), part of Crippen & Landru's "Lost Classics Series", includes one (almost) Sherlockian story that was inspired by one of the Canonical tales. The publisher specializes in collections and anthologies of short stories, with a web-site at <www.crippenlandru.com>.
302. UNDILUTED HOCUS-POCUS: THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MARTIN GARDNER (Princeton University Press, 2013; 233 pp., $24.95) is a delightful book. Gardner, who died in 2010 (May 10 #5), grew up in Tulsa with John Bennett Shaw, and had many enthusiasms, including Sherlock Holmes, and in these memoirs he tells grand stories about John and the many other interesting people he Gardner met during his long career as a writer and debunker of the paranormal and supernatural.
303. A brief story about the wonders of a computerized world: it took me three visits to the Maryland Motor Vehicles Administration, and two to the Social Security Administration, to renew my driver's license, because the MVA has to confirm my identity with the SSA. And someone at the SSA had typed my name into their system as Blaie. But now I'm officially me.
304. It's well known among Sherlockians, and more and more among others (thanks to the efforts of Cliff Goldfarb) that it wasn't Conan Doyle who assisted Dorando Pietri across the finish line at the 1908 Olympics in London. But it's less well known that it was Pietri's ordeal that inspired a young man in New York to write his first complete song, about an Italian barber who sells his barber shop and bets all the money on Pietri. The songwriter was Irving Berlin; there seems to be no recording of the song on the Internet, but the lyrics of "Dorando" are available at <www.tinyurl.com/kq6q5xv>.
305. Jennie Paton reports that "The Final Problem" (the seventh program in the Russian television series that stars Igor Petrenko and Andrei Panin) is now available with English subtitles at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/lh7fyd8>. One more to go to complete the series with subtitles.
306. Credit Thierry Saint-Joanis for noting a report that the Baker Street tube station is being refurbished, which will involve removal of tiles showing a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes. Cleshar Contract Services is doing the work <www.tinyurl.com/ozoocvd> and plans to reinstall some of the tiles in a few areas, and send the rest of the tiles to auction to benefit Sparks, a children's benefit medical research charity <www.sparks.org.uk>. You can read all about it in French and English, and see colorful images of the station, at <www.tinyurl.com/odauxne>.
307. Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" continues to offer interesting content, including podcasts recorded by Scott and Burt Wolder. Their latest podcast (#65) is "Art in the Blood" <www.tinyurl.com/ndfy6l3>; they interviewed Tom Richmond (described as one of the "usual gang of idiots" at Mad Magazine), and they offer a full-color view of Richmond's panorama of eight actors who have portrayed Sherlock Holmes (prints are available from the artist) and a series of links that portray more of his work.
308. Jun 14 #6: Fans of Sherlockian poetry will welcome the news that there are a few copies of Ellay Aitcheson's ACD MYSTERY SONNETS, issued by the Hansom Press in 1998) still available, with "Five and twenty sonnets culled from the Canon". You can order the booklet from Len Haffenden (1026 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, BC V7P 3C6, Canada) for $15.00 postpaid, with checks payable to Len, please.
309. "Dr. Watson and Mr. Holmes" (recorded by the Spirits of Rhythm for Decca in 1934) has been available on the Internet for some time (Oct 01 #2), but now there's something new, spotted by Alexander Orlov: the song accompanied by clips from the Granada series, at <www.tinyurl.com/lbtvlp8>.
310. Since it's summer, there's lots of theater coming up, here and there. The East Haddam Stage Company will repeat last year's production of "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Speckled Band" (Jul 13 #5); it's a 30-minute live-action radio drama using the script from William Gillette's 1930 broadcast) at Gillette Castle in East Haddam, Conn., July 5 through Aug. 11 <www.tinyurl.com/kag2zqm>.
311. "Sherlock Holmes and the Whitechapel Murders" (adapted by Jeremy Holstein from William S. Baring-Gould's "Jack the Harlot Killer") will be one of the three plays in "Summer Radio Mystery Theatre: Super Sleuths" at Responsible Grace Church in Somerville, Mass., on July 11-19 <www.tinyurl.com/m8mcbta>. The other super sleuths are Hercule Poirot and Lady Molly of Scotland Yard. "Jack the Harlot Killer" is a chapter in Baring-Gould's biography SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET (1962).
312. "Sherlock Holmes: The Pantomime" with words by Jenny Gilbert will be performed at the Playhouse Theatre in Glen Eden, New Zealand, from July 12 to 25 <www.playhousetheatre.co.nz>.
313. The Rumpus Theatre Company will offer "Sherlock Holmes: The Scandal of the Scarlet Woman" (based on "A Scandal in Bohemia") at the Fairfield Halls in Croydon on Sept. 18-20 <www.fairfield.co.uk>, and at the Chelmsford Civic Theatre in Chelmsford, Oct. 16-17 <www.chelmsford.co.uk/sherlock-holmes>.
314. "Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Irregulars" is a new play by Eric Coble, based on a series of four graphic novels by Tony Lee and Dan Boulton, due for its world premiere by First Stage at the Todd Wehr Theater in Milwaukee from Oct. 17 to Nov. 15 <www.tinyurl.com/q8a7hsz>.
315. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Jersey Lily" is scheduled by the Kirk Players in Mundelein, Ill. Mar. 27-29, 2015 <www.kirkplayers.org>.
316. The news of the British play comes from Roger Johnson's excellent newsletter The District Messenger, which is published by The Sherlock Holmes Society of London and offers excellent coverage of what's going on in Britain, Europe, and elsewhere; it's available without charge by e-mail and at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk/district.php>. His e-mail address is <rojerjohnson@yahoo.co.uk>.

Jul 14 #1:

317. The saga continues: Les Klinger has applied to the Court of Appeals to recover his expenses in his lawsuit against the Conan Doyle Estate, quoting the Court's statements that the Estate's argument lacked "any ground known to American law," and that the appeal "borders on the quixotic." He is requesting about $68,000 for expenses for the entire case. The Estate then asked the Court of Appeals to stay its ruling that only the characters and story elements in the last ten stories are protected, while the Estate asks the U.S. Supreme Court to hear the case, because recent "movies and television shows demonstrate that the Sherlock Holmes character is more popular than ever," and because allowing "the Court's opinion to have

- immediate effect will have a chilling effect on the Estate's ability to manage" promotion and development of the character through licensing agreements."
318. The Court of Appeals denied the Estate's motion for a stay, and the Estate then asked Elena Kagan (the Supreme Court's Circuit Justice for the Seventh Circuit) to delay implementation of the Court of Appeals decision while the Estate petitions the Supreme Court to review the case; Justice Kagan dismissed the request without comment, and the Court of Appeals decision remains in effect while the Supreme Court decides whether to accept a petition that the Estate has said it plans to submit in a few months. The Supreme Court receives about 10,000 petitions a year, and accepts (and hears oral arguments) in about 75 to 80 cases. As always, you can read the documents in the case at <www.free-sherlock.com>.
319. It's time for a challenge (repeated from Oct 88): A non-Sherlockian friend reports recently riding in a taxi driven by a man who said that there were only four people in the Sherlock Holmes stories who smoked pipes. Who were they? The answer's in this month's issue.
320. The Kent & Sussex Courier reported (June 14) on a fire at Windlesham Manor, formerly the home of Conan Doyle and now a home for the elderly. An alarm was raised at 12:44 am: smoke was reported in one of the rooms, and three fire engines were sent from Crowborough and Uckfield. One person was taken to hospital suffering from smoke inhalation and several others were checked over by ambulance crews. Brian Pugh heard from the manager that there was only minor damage to one of the rooms.
321. "Mad Movies with the L.A. Connection" (a syndicated television series that aired in 1985 and 1986) spoofed old movies by editing them to fit a 30-minute slot and overdubbing new dialogue. The series included new versions of "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon" and "Dressed to Kill" that are now available on-line at <www.madmoviesonline.com>; they went on to parody "The Woman in Green" in 1993, available at their web-site ($3.79).
322. "Anna May Wong: In Her Own Words" (2013) aired on PBS this year, and it's worth watching for a repeat. The one-hour documentary was written by Yunah Hong, with quotes from her letters, and you can watch a six-minute preview at <www.tinyurl.com/m6nrzd5>. She was a fine actress, and the documentary includes a production still showing her as Mrs. Pyke in Reginald Owen's "A Study in Scarlet" (1933); she also was parodied earlier in the marionette burlesque "Herlock Sholmes in Be-a-Live Crook, or Anna Went Wrong" (1930).
323. Jul 14 #2: Taxi drivers are not always experts. At least seven people who are named in the Canon smoked pipes (as you might have discovered from the entry for "tobacco" in Jack Tracy's THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA SHERLOCKIANA). Sherlock Holmes, of course, and Dr. Watson. John Straker also smoked a pipe ("Silver Blaze"), and so did Grant Munro ("The Yellow Face"). Thaddeus Sholto smoked a hookah ("The Sign of the Four"), and Isa Whitney smoked opium ("The Man with the Twisted Lip"). Peter Carey owned a tobacco pouch ("Black Peter"). But: who's the eighth person named in the Canon who appears to have smoked a pipe? The answer will be found on the next page.
324. The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" was a fine excuse for a visit to Columbus, Ohio, where it's open through Sept. 1 at the Center of Science and Industry. COSI (pronounced coh-seye, so that it's not mistaken for the restaurant chain) is very much a hands-on museum, which makes it a fine venue of the exhibition, which is a well-designed combination of artifacts and hands-on activity.
325. The exhibition consists of three rooms, the first devoted to London, Arthur Conan Doyle, Joseph Bell, and Sherlock Holmes, with displays that include a copy of Beeton's Christmas Annual for 1887, original manuscripts, and artwork by Sidney Paget and Frederic Dorr Steele. The second room has a fine recreation of the sitting-room, and an opportunity to investigate a mystery (designed by Dan Stashower) that offers young and old first-hand experience with observation and deduction. And the third room is devoted both to modern times and to the collectibles that fascinate Sherlockians; the displays include costumes and props from modern films (Downey) and television series (Cumberbatch and Miller), and items such as the Czarina's specially-bound copies of the Canon from John Bennett Shaw's collection, and copies of the old and new series of The Baker Street Journal.
326. There's lots to see and do, and the exhibition is thoroughly engaging (and was well-attended). The labels are easily read (nice for people who have extremely-middle-aged eyes), and visitors can learn a lot (if they want to) about Victorian times and the Sherlockian world. There's a fine video introduction to the exhibition by Conan Doyle's grand-nephew Richard), and an assortment of videos showing modern forensics (including an explanation of forensic toxicology by Marina Stajic). Bottom line: go if convenient--if inconvenient, go all the same.
327. The exhibition's scheduled next at the Saint Louis Science Center in Saint Louis, Mo., from Oct. 9 through Jan. 4, 2015; then at the Perot Museum of Science & Nature in Dallas, Texas, opening Feb. 2; at the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., opening on June 11; the Denver Museum of Nature & Science, in Denver, Colo., opening Oct. 15; and at the Pacific Science Center in Seattle, opening Oct. 13, 2016. The exhibition web-site's at <www.sherlockholmesexhibition.com>, and the web-site for Columbus is at <www.cosi.org/exhibits/sherlock>.
328. The Bolton News reported (June 8) that "Burnt Copies of the Bible and Sherlock Holmes" were found next to a torched 10-foot wizard's chair in Tonge Moor. The wizard's chair was installed in a woodland playground near Bolton (in Lancashire); there has been no further word on whether the vandals have been apprehended, nor (of course) why they chose those two Canons.
329. Jul 14 #3: Jim Browner ("The Cardboard Box") is the eighth person named in the Canon who appears to have smoked a pipe. And not because the cardboard box was a "yellow, half-pound honeydew box," since he could, after all, have obtained the box anywhere. There is much better evidence. What's that better evidence? Again, the answer's on the next page.
330. "We just think Holmes is really cool, but having always been attracted to the darker side of life, Moriarty just stood out as a basis for our music. He is clever, devilish and unrepentant--what more do you want from a band?" The British two-man band is called Moriarty [that's their spelling], and the musicians are Jordan Macneil West and Matthew Partridge; they're based in Devon, and their web-site's at <www.moriarty.co.uk>. They have an EP ("Lord Blackwood") and a new album ("The Devil's Child"), and a 30-minute documentary at YouTube <www.youtube.com/watch?v=5y8k73POMm4>.
331. Here's Ian McKellen as the 93-year-old Sherlock Holmes in "Mr. Holmes" (that's the new title for the film based on Mitch Cullin's A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND), now filming and scheduled for release next year.
332. "It's Queen Vic, Talking Statue, on the Line" was the headline in the Sunday Times (July 6) on a story spotted by Oscar Ross: the Talking Statues Speak Their Minds project, which will run for a year starting on Aug. 19, allows people with smartphones to hear what statues have to say. Anthony Horowitz wrote the script for the statue of Sherlock Holmes outside the Baker Street tube station, and the recording is by British actor Ed Stoppard (son of Tom Stoppard). Best known for his role as Henryk in "The Pianist" (2002), Stoppard also played Sir Hallam Holland, the Foreign Office diplomat who inherited 165 Eaton Place, in the latest "Upstairs Downstairs" series.
333. Pennie Mae Cartawick's series of almost two dozen pastiches offers a good demonstration of what can be done with digital publishing: all of them are available for Amazon Kindle (99¢ each), and there are collections for Kindle and on paper, and readings at Amazon and Audible (which you can sample on-line). The author has a blog at <www.tinyurl.com/l8y7h5f> with news and promotions and special offers.
334. Andrew Page ("Lord Saltire") died on May 10, 2013. He became interested in Sherlock Holmes during his high school years, and in 1971 became an energetic author, editor, and publisher, receiving his investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1974. He went on to a career as a teacher of high - school English and then community college mathematics; there is much more about his contributions to the Sherlockian world in The Baker Street Journal's 2003 Christmas Annual, which was devoted to what was called the Junior Sherlockian Movement.

335. It was 125 years ago that J. M. Stoddart invited Arthur Conan Doyle and Oscar Wilde to dinner at the Langham Hotel and commissioned both authors to write stories for Lippincott's, and the Sherlock Holmes Society of London will honor the event at dinner in the Grand Ballroom at the Langham on Aug. 30; consult the Society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/pns2xza> for more information on The Stoddart Dinner.

336. Jul 14 #4: Oscar Ross has noted a BBC news story about Britain's Foreign and Commonwealth Office showing at least one program from the "Sherlock" series at a film festival held in Pyongyang in 2012, in hopes of "encouraging change" in North Korea. The episode wasn't "The Empty Hearse" (which the BBC explained involves Holmes identifying a British minister and peer as a North Korean spy who attempts to blow up Parliament); that episode hadn't been filmed, and wasn't broadcast until Jan. 1, 2014.
337. The better evidence for Jim Browner having been a pipe-smoker is found in The Strand Magazine, where Sidney Paget illustrated Jim Browner smoking a pipe. D. Martin Dakin seems to be the first person to have mentioned this in print (in A SHERLOCK HOLMES COMMENTARY).
338. The 198 competitors in the Tour de France started this year's event in Leeds, England (the cycling race covers 3,664 kilometers in four countries over three weeks before ending in Paris), and the Associated Press provided this photograph of a man dressed as Sherlock Holmes with cycling fans in Leeds.
339. Sam Siciliano's THE GRIMSWELL CURSE (London: Titan, 2013; 233 pp., £7.99/ $9.95) is a sequel to his THE WEB WEAVER (Feb 12 #6); the narrator is Sherlock Holmes' cousin Dr. Henry Vernier, who with his wife Michelle (also a doctor), assists Holmes in investigating the case of a young woman who may be subject to a long-standing family curse.
340. There was more original artwork by Sidney Paget at auction last month, at Reeman Dancie Auctioneers in Colchester <www.tinyurl.com/ncnvfoz>: an oil-on-canvas painting of sheep on a hillside, was estimated at £100-150 but went unsold.
341. Ray Betzner's "Studies in Starrett" blog <www.vincentstarrett.com> continues to offer interesting commentary, including his recent "Found and Lost: The Manuscript of THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES" (the manuscript did exist, and may still, and of course Ray would like to hear from the owner). Ray also has blogged about Starrett's THE PRIVATE LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, reprinting (and commenting) on three reviews from the 1930s, with colorful illustrations that include the seldom-seen dust jacket of the first British edition.
342. Kelly Blau has noted THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES as a "personalized literary classic" offered by Signals <www.tinyurl.com/qy5my4n>. You're able to change the names of one to six major characters, and add a personal dedication on the opening page ($39.95).
343. Val Biro died on July 4. He was a prolific children's author, artist, and illustrator, perhaps most famous for a series of 37 picture books about a car he called Gumdrop. Nick Utechin has noted that Biro's work appears on covers of John Murray paperback editions of THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, and TALES OF BRIGADIER GERARD, as well as in Fanny Cradock's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COOKBOOK. Some of his covers and original artwork can be seen at <www.abebooks.com>; just search for [biro sherlock] and [biro gerard] as author.

344. Jul 14 #5: Steve Emez at MX Publishing has posted a statement by Norman Stromsoy, the project manager for the Stepping Stones School's restoration of Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, with details on their plans for the house. He also hopes that the Undershaw Preservation Trust "will want to use the new facilities to hold events to celebrate the life and times of Conan Doyle," and that he looks forward to "welcoming you to Undershaw in the autumn of 2015 when you will be able to see for yourself what has been achieved. The full statement's at <www.tinyurl.com/mhl356x>.
345. John Michael Gibson (the founder and director of the Undershaw Preservation Trust) has said that he welcomes the latest developments but is concerned "that the stables that have stood for 120 years that housed Doyle's horse Brigadier and his carriage and the well that he drew his water from may be lost in the new plans." And he filed an appeal asking for a review of the English Heritage decision to continue the Grade II listing for Undershaw; you can read the text of his appeal at <www.saveundershaw.com>.
346. An upgrade of the listing would have imposed strong controls over development that could have caused problems for the school's conversion of Undershaw into a school, but English Heritage denied the appeal, concluding that "the interest conferred on the building by its association with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is not sufficient to warrant upgrading given its modest architectural quality."
347. Escape Hunt is a chain of themed game rooms; the Sherlock Holmes room opened recently at the Concorde Hotel & Shopping Mall in Singapore. Each room is meant for two to five players, who have an hour to solve a mystery and escape from the room <www.singapore.escapehunt.com> (the young ladies likely were posing for a publicity photo).
348. The BBC announced (via Twitter at 2:21 pm on July 2) that shooting will begin in January on a "Sherlock" special, and that shooting for the next season will begin later next year; the special is likely to air at Christmas in 2015, with the next season starting the following year. Scott Monty had details on the BBC's tweeting at his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" website <www.tinyurl.com/pzok5pt>.
349. "Celebrity Deathmatch" was a 30-minute claymation series that was broadcast by MTV cable, and on July 20, 2000, the program included a 5-minute segment "Sherlock Holmes vs. Jack the Ripper" that's now available on Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/o84j379>. Note: it's not for the faint of heart.
350. Orion Books launched its publicity campaign for Anthony Horowitz's second pastiche with a giveaway of advance proofs of "Moriarty" to twelve of the "most influential names in the book world" at the Rookery Hotel in Clerkenwell this month, according to a story in The Bookseller (July 16). But there were more than twelve influential people at the event, and 100 proof copies bound in velvet and lettered in silver, and Arifa Akbar reported on the party for the Independent (July 17) <www.tinyurl.com/kzweckm>. There has been no report (so far) of one of the copies for sale, but it shouldn't take long.

351. Jul 14 #6: THE GRAPHIC NOVELS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES is an attractive series of individual short stories, adapted by Vincent Goodwin and illustrated by Ben Dunn (Minneapolis: Magic Wagon/ABDO, 2010-2013, each with 48 pp., $20.95), intended for young readers, and nicely done indeed. There are 18 titles in the series, and you can see cover artwork at the company's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/oyxvm7l>.
352. The colorful Gold Bubble "Sherlock Holmes Collection" received lots of publicity this month. The California company, inspired by the BBC's "Sherlock" television series, used the wallpaper, the mind palace, the front door of 221B, and the iconic Belstaff Millford coat for themes Milford coat. There are additional images at the company's web-site at <www.goldbubbleclothing.com>, and more publicity photographs at <www.images.google.com>; search for [gold bubble sherlock] to see this image and many others.
353. Otto Penzler notes that the Mysterious Bookshop has published his annotated bibliography of first editions of mystery fiction set in the world of books (1849-2000). BIBLIOMYSTERIES ($75.00) includes 130 full-color photographs or rare or especially interesting dust jackets and covers, and is limited to

- 200 signed and numbered copies. And there is Sherlockian content: not only Vincent Starrett's THE UNIQUE HAMLET, but also books by Robert Richardson, August Derleth, Christopher Morley, S. C. Roberts, and others.
354. "Whom do you consider your literary heroes?" "The author of the plays attributed to William Shakespeare; I am also a great fan of A. Conan Doyle." John Paul Stevens, former Supreme Court justice, in a "By the Book" interview in the N.Y. Times (Apr. 6), spotted by John Baesch.
355. MediaWeek reported (July 22) that BBC Worldwide, the commercial arm of the BBC, generated sales of £1.04 billion in the year that ended Mar. 31, due to the popularity of series such as "Doctor Who" and "Sherlock" (which has been licensed to 224 territories). BBC Worldwide's pre-tax profit for the year was £126.5 million.
356. Benedict Cumberbatch and John Malkovich will star together in a new movie: "Penguins of Madagascar" (animated in 3D and scheduled for a Thanksgiving release): Cumberbatch provides the voice for Agent Classified, a wolf who's head of an animal spy organization that teams up with the penguins to save the world from the evil octopus Dr. Octavius Brine (voiced by Malkovich).
357. THE DISAPPEARANCE OF MR. JAMES PHILLIMORE (Sep 13 #6) was the most recent title in Dan Andriacco's series about Jeff Cody and Sebastian McCabe, and his next book (ROGUES GALLERY) will have two novellas and three short stories. He has launched a crowd-funding campaign to get the book published, and you can read about it at <www.pubslush.com/books/id/2568>. He is using Pubslush, which says it is "the gateway to the literary world" and a "niche crowd-funding platform," and it's an interesting concept. His entertaining Sherlockian blog is at <www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com>.
358. Jul 14 #7: Phil Attwell spotted a story in Radio Times (July 22) about the revival on BBC Radio 4 of the 30-minute series "Dead Ringers" on which impressionists will parody various public figures, including Benedict Cumberbatch as Sherlock Holmes; the first of six weekly episodes aired on July 30; the series can be heard on-line, but you may need to spoof the BBC into thinking you're in the UK (there are programs such as Hola! that help one do this) <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b04brr99>.
359. A dastardly crime reported on the blotter of the police department on Bainbridge Island, Wash. (July 10): Someone stole a cell phone from a vehicle at the Day Road Park-and-Ride lot. The car owner had left the doors to his Honda unlocked at the time of the prow. The pipe was glass and shaped in a "Sherlock Holmes style." It was in a brown leather case. The phone and pipe were valued at approximately $230.
360. There were 113 people on hand at University College in London on July 19, all of them wearing Sherlockian costume, to celebrate Benedict Cumberbatch's 38th birthday and to try to set a Guinness World Record for the most people gathered in one place dressed as Sherlock Holmes. Roger Johnson and Jean Upton were on hand for the festivities, and you can see them (briefly) in a video report by Charlotte Pamment, available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/q2736r3>. She has other interesting (although non-Sherlockian) video on the Internet, one being a report on an upside-down house in London <www.vimeo.com/86097204>.
361. The event was organized to raise awareness of the National Literacy Trust, and Roger Johnson has posted pictures from the gathering, and of the Sherlock Holmes BookBench (May 14 #5), at <www.tinyurl.com/ntoek3p>. You can click on each image to read Roger's captions.
362. "Madame Tussaud ain't in it," Sam Merton said (in "The Mazarin Stone"), but Sherlock Holmes (well, Benedict Cumberbatch) will be on display for visitors to Madame Tussauds in London beginning in October. You can see colorful photographs of him being measured for his waxwork figure in a Radio Times story (July 21) <www.tinyurl.com/qyztel>. Cumberbatch was among the celebrities at Comic-Con in San Diego; the Guardian reported (July 25) that Hall H (the largest venue, with a capacity of 6,500) was filled completely, with many attendees dressed in Sherlockian costume, "despite this being a presentation that had nothing to do with the show whatsoever."
363. WinTrillions Casino offers a wide range of on-line games; based in Cyprus, it's the gaming division of Ledonford Gaming Services (licensed in Alderney, which is one of the Channel Islands). The casino's slot-machine-style games include one called "Sherlock Mystery", which you can find (with many other games) at <www.wintrillionscasino.com>.
364. If you'd like to spend a night at the Abbey Grange, Nick Utechin has found an Abbey Grange Hotel in Llangollen (you need to speak Welsh to be able to pronounce that properly): <www.abbey-grange-hotel.co.uk>. Completists may wish also to stay at the Abbey Grange Hotel in Nuneaton; their web-site's at <www.pierresrestaurant.co.uk>. There's also an Abbey Grange Church of England Academy in Leeds <www.abbeygrandacademy.co.uk>.

365. Jul 14 #8 Spotted by Nick Utechin: I Love Mel (which "started out life as a few badges that were made and handed out to make Mel Elliott feel better after her boyfriend dumped her") offers a "Colour Me Good: Benedict Cumberbatch" unofficial colouring book (£7.50) and other merchandise honoring the "Sherlock" television series <www.tinyurl.com/nuw9mo6>.
366. Upcoming theater: Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes & the Case of the Jersey Lily" is running at the Cortland Repertory Theatre in Cortland, N.Y., through Aug. 9; their web-site's at <www.cortlandrep.org>. And the play's scheduled by the Richmond Hill Players in Geneseo, Ill., Oct. 2-12; their web-site's at <www.rhplayers.com>.
367. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is being performed at the B Street Theatre in Sacramento, Calif., through Aug. 10 <www.bstreettheatre.org>. And it will be produced at the Actors' Theatre in Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 5-14; their web-site is at <www.theactorstheatre.org>.
368. Chris Hibbs' "The Curious Case in the Colony: A Sherlock Holmes Adventure" is on at the Newman Wine Vaults in St. John's, Newfoundland, through Aug. 16 <www.tinyurl.com/k5qghuu>.
369. "Sherlock Holmes: A Working Hypothesis" is a new interactive (audience-participation) play written by Alexander Wright that will be produced by the Flanagan Collective and the York Theatre Royal in York, Aug. 11 to Sept. 21 <www.yorktheatreroyal.co.uk> <www.theflanagancollective.co.uk>.
370. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Drury Lane in Oakbrook, Ill., from Aug. 28 to Oct. 19; the theater website's at <www.drurylaneoakbrook.com>. And it will be produced by the Minstrel Players at Houghton Hall, Trinity Episcopal Church, in Northport Village, N.Y., Oct. 25-Nov. 2 <www.minstrelplayers.org>.
371. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" runs at the Randall L. Jones Theatre at Southern Utah University in Cedar City, Utah, Sept. 20 to Oct. 18 <www.bard.org>. And at the CAT Theater in Henrico, Va., Oct. 24-Nov. 8 <www.richmondvatheater.com>.
372. Greg Oliver Bodine's "A Requiem for Sherlock Holmes" will be performed as a reading in the Sundays@Six series at the Jewel Box Theatre in New York on Sept. 21 <www.workshoptheater.org>.
373. The British publisher Titan Books has a nice run of pastiches in print, and 29 of them are listed at Titan's web-site <www.titanbooks.com>, along with an interesting blog about how their covers are designed. Not listed is ELEMENTARY: THE NEXT VICTIM, a pastiche spin-off from the CBS television series, first announced for Sept. 30 and now scheduled for May 26, 2015. They haven't said who the author is, and the book's not available for pre-order at Amazon and Barnes & Noble. Fans of the series are now waiting patiently for the debut of the third season, scheduled for Oct. 30.

374. Aug 14 #1: The saga continues: 7th Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Richard Posner has ordered the Conan Doyle Estate to pay Les Klinger the full $30,679.93 requested to cover his costs in the Estate's appeal of the lower court decision that copyright protects only characters and story elements unique to the ten stories still under copyright. As always, you can read the documents in the case at <www.free-sherlock.com>. Judge Rubén Castillo has not yet decided on Les' request for $39,123.44 to cover his costs in the original case. According to a Reuters dispatch (Aug. 5) Estate lawyer Benjamin Allison said that he will appeal both of the Appeals Court rulings to the Supreme Court.
375. "Masterpiece Mystery" started a new season of "Poirot" on July 30 on PBSTV, with a dramatization of "The Big Four" by Mark Gatiss and Ian Hallard; the program was quite different from the book and had none of the Canonical echoes found in the book (but there was a new Doylean echo). The season will complete David Suchet's appearances as Poirot in every major literary work by Christie that features the famous Belgian detective: 70 episodes over 25 years, and there are brief clips from all of them available at <www.agathachristie.com/poirot-tv>.
376. The Florence Freedom are a Frontier League professional baseball team based in Florence (near Cincinnati), Ohio, and on July 26 they presented a Sherlock Holmes Night that featured actors from the Murder Mystery Theater Company acting out a "Take 'em out at the ball game" Murder Mystery Theater, and the team wearing Sherlock Holmes Baseball Caps, which also were available for purchase by fans. They're now out of stock, but you can see photographs at <www.tinyurl.com/nyv97fk>.
377. At long last Sherlockians have a reason to watch "Downton Abbey" (not that most Sherlockians are not watching the series already): Richard E. Grant, who played Sherlock Holmes in "The Other Side" (a television program broadcast by BBC-2 in 1992), will appear in four episodes of "Downton Abbey" as Simon Bricker, an art historian and houseguest of the Crawley family (Grant said in an interview that "my knees will be taken off" if he reveals anything else about his character).
378. If you'd like to own a fancy car: Silverstone Auctions' Salon Privé Sale on Sept. 4 will include a 1931 Pur Sang Bugatti Type 51 estimated at £150,000-£170,000. The catalog notes that Bugatti's cars were bought and raced by elite customers such as Achille Varzi, Marcel Lehoux, Jean Pierre Wimille, Louis Chiron, and Arthur Conan Doyle. And yes, it's quite likely that it was Adrian Conan Doyle who was among their elite customers. You can read more about the car at <www.tinyurl.com/lghpesh>.
379. Alan Rettig has discovered Gutenberg Labo, a Japanese font foundry that has created a nice Dancing Men font that's available as a free download, and of course far more accessible than the first Dancing Men reported in my newsletter many years ago (Mar 92 #5). If you'd like to install the Gutenberg Labo font on your computer, it's at <www.tinyurl.com/q8sv652>. Alas, there seems to be no program that can be used to translate dancing men into something more easily readable.

380. Aug 14 #2: The British Film Institute has launched a search for a copy of the first feature-length Sherlock Holmes film made in Britain, now high on the BFI's list of most-wanted films. This year is the centenary of the release of "A Study in Scarlet" (1914), directed by George Pearson and starring James Braginton as Holmes, and the BFI would love to hear from anyone who has a copy of the film.
381. It's not the first feature-length Sherlock Holmes film, however. That was "Der Hund von Baskerville" (A German film released a few months earlier in 1914), directed by Rudolf Meinert and starring Alwin Neuss as Holmes; that film also is not known to have survived. If you find either film in your basement or attic, keep in mind that they were made on nitrate film, which is extremely flammable (it has essentially the same chemical composition as gun cotton), and may even auto-ignite.
382. For those who haven't figured out the Doylean reference in the television adaptation of "The Big Four": Conan Doyle self-experimented with the drug gelsemium, and in 1879 wrote about the results in the British Medical Journal; the unusual poison used in the television episode was gelsemine.
383. The new owners of the Crowborough Cross Pub, located in the heart of Crowborough, asked residents of the town to consider new names for the establishment, including Willet's Cross, the Red Cross Inn, and the Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; in June the owners announced that they had decided to keep the name the Crowborough Cross. But you can still have a drink (or two) at the Conan Doyle in Edinburgh.
384. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has provided details on the next rover NASA will send to Mars, in 2020; the press release is at <www.tinyurl.com/oxrv26g>. The payload proposals include a spectrometer called SHERLOC (an acronym for Scanning Habitable Environments with Raman and Luminescence for Organics and Chemicals); go to <www.tinyurl.com/onfxzqxq> to read the Jet Propulsion Laboratory's detailed description of SHERLOC. The instrument, named by deputy principal investigator Rohit Bhartia, is indeed a tip-of-the-deerstalker to Sherlock Holmes: if you look closely at the shadow cast on the surface of Mars, you will see a thoroughly familiar profile. It should be noted that NASA has not asked people to rename the instrument so that the acronym will end with the letter K.
385. Brandon Daniel spotted the Kings Wild Project (a collection of products designed and produced by artist Jackson Robinson) <www.tinyurl.com/15g62m2>; search for [sherlock] to see their sets of attractive Sherlock Holmes playing cards (and a dealer's coin). The decks have nicely and appropriately decorated boxes, backs, court cards and jokers, and you can see excellent images at the web-site.
386. Aug 14 #3: Watson's Tin Box will host the eighth "Scintillation of Scions" on June 12-13, 2015, at the Sheraton Baltimore-Washington Airport. It's an entertaining gathering of both local and far-flung Sherlockians, with a fine list of speakers. More information's available from Jacquelynn Morris (3042 Old Channel Road, Laurel, MD 20724); the Scintillation sold out last year, and has moved to a slightly larger venue, but you are advised to register sooner rather than later <www.scintillation.org>.
387. I'm not sure that 221b Con ("a con for all things Sherlockian") in Atlanta in 2013 was the first of its kind, but there have been more since then, including GridLOCK DC, in Alexandria, Va., this month <www.gridlockdc.com>, when 195 fans turned out for the fun and games. Some of the conventioners were old hands, but the vast majority were young (high school, college, and professional) and female, and fans of film and television (both "Sherlock" and "Elementary"); informal polling at panels revealed that about half had not (yet) read all of the Canon. There was some imaginative cosplay, table games (including Nea Dodson's Sherlockian version of Fluxx, and an assortment of vendors, and it was nice to find a younger generation interested in the Canon as well as in its dramatizations. The older generation(s) had a chance to learn some new vocabulary, including "headcanon" (Baring-Gould's SHERLOCK HOLMES OF BAKER STREET is headcanon); "cosplay" is costume play, and you can look Fluxx up at Wikipedia.
388. On Oct. 14 Great Britain will issue a set of stamps honoring eight significant Prime Ministers; one of them being William Gladstone, who held the office four times, and is believed by some Sherlockian scholars to have been the real Lord Bellingier (in "The Second Stain").
389. Michael A. Hoey died on Aug. 17. He was the son of Dennis Hoey, who played Lestrade in Universal's "Sherlock Holmes" series, and had a long career in Hollywood as an editor, director, and writer. His memoirs ELVIS, SHERLOCK & ME were published in 2007 (with the subtitle "How I survived growing up in Hollywood"), and his SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE FABULOUS FACES (2012) was an affectionate look at the supporting actors in what he called "William Roy Neill's stock company."

390. Winston Churchill also is in the British set of stamps honoring significant Prime Ministers. He served in office twice, corresponded with Conan Doyle, and appears as a character in many Sherlockian pastiches. John McAleer reported in his biography REX STOUT that in Dec. 1931 Stout, then a prospective bridegroom, had "a night out with the boys" at a private club where Churchill was one of the guests (at half-past one, Stout remembered, Churchill "was sipping bourbon and discussing Sherlock Holmes with me and three other men." According to Stout, "Churchill knew the Holmes stories fairly well and thought them 'perfect entertainment.'"
391. Jennie Paton reports that the eighth and final program in the Russian television series that stars Igor Petrenko and Andrei Panin is now available with English subtitles at YouTube; it's their version of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and has little to do with Conan Doyle's story, but there are two nice jokes at the end <www.tinyurl.com/q7pe7n4>.
392. Aug 14 #4: There was some discussion on the Hounds of the Internet mailing list this month about the failure of many histories of science fiction to credit Conan Doyle for writing in THE LOST WORLD about explorers finding dinosaurs alive and well in modern times, and Denny Dobry reported that Edward Douglas Fawcett's book SWALLOWED BY AN EARTHQUAKE (1894) also included an encounter live dinosaurs (in an underground world). It is interesting that Conan Doyle met Fawcett's brother, the noted explorer Col. Percy H. Fawcett, in 1910; there's more about this in Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin's THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD (1996) and in David Grann's THE LOST CITY OF Z (2009).
393. The next book to be published by the Baker Street Irregulars Press will be SHERLOCKIAN SATURDAYS AT THE PRATT, edited by William Hyder; it's a selection from the many papers (both scholarly and pseudoscholarly), presented at the annual gatherings at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore from 1980 to the present. The book will be available for order ($21.95) starting Sept. 10 <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
394. Strictly for the purists (and there are at least a few left): spelling usage now calls for optical CDs and DVDs being discs, and magnetic floppies being disks.
395. Stewart McPherson's LOST WORLDS OF THE GUIANA HIGHLANDS (2008) is now out of print, but it received an enthusiastic review in Country Life (Jan. 7, 2009), at hand from John Baesch. The tepuis at Mount Roraima are thought to be as close as one can get now to the Lost World of Conan Doyle.
396. Alexander Orlov has reported a nicely Sherlockian excuse to visit Saint Petersburg: a map of locations where scenes were filmed for the Russian series starring Vasili Livanov and Vitali Solomin. It's interactive (you can click on locations to bring up imagery <www.221b.ru/geo/geo-spb.htm>, and of course it's helpful if you can read Russian (but Google Translate is as always a useful assistant).
397. Photography is not permitted at the "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" (now at COSI in Columbus, Ohio), but exceptions are made: you can see a slide show, thanks to WHY?Y's Artworks, at <www.tinyurl.com/qgtrfpw>, and get an idea of how well designed the exhibition is.
398. The summer issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) honors the new Arthur Conan Doyle Room, with descriptions of the room and of the festivities that celebrated the opening. You can request a copy of the newsletter from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
399. I don't recall any mention of Joseph Joachim by Sherlockian scholars, but there seems to be a connection, noted by John Baesch: John Fowler wrote a letter to the BBC Music Magazine (Christmas 2013) pointing out that Joachim was a violin virtuoso, and the first to record music for unaccompanied violin; he made five recordings in 1903, one of them being the recording heard by the villains in "The Mazarin Stone". If you'd like to hear some of the recordings, there's a web-site at <www.josephjoachim.com>.

400. Aug 14 #5: MX Publishing continues to offer interesting pastiches. David Ruffle's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE LYME REGIS TRIALS (2012; 125 pp., $9.95) brings Holmes and Watson back to back to the coastal town for an investigation of mysterious goings-on (there's also an account of what happened in the Grosvenor Square furniture van). Charlotte Anne Walters' CHARLIE MILVERTON AND OTHER SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES (2014; 138 pp., $11.95) is a retelling of five Canonical tales, set in modern times. Amy Thomas' THE DETECTIVE, THE WOMAN, AND THE SILENT HIVE (2014; 192 pp., $16.95), the third in her series about Irene Adler, has her coming to London in search of Holmes' assistance involving a mystery triggered by one of Holmes' old cases. Fred Thursfield's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ESCAPE ARTIST (2014; 200 pp., $14.95) has Watson's widow Mary and Sherlock Holmes in New York, and assisting Harry and Bess Houdini in solving a mystery created by a villainous spiritualist. The publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
401. Also from MX: Mike Hogan's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE SKULL OF KOHADA KOHEIJI AND OTHER STORIES (2013; 193 pp., $16.95) has five macabre mysteries, with one of them involving a seance also attended by Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle. SHERLOCK HOLMES AND YOUNG WINSTON: THE DEADWOOD STAGE (2012; 226 pp., $16.95) is the first of Hogan's four novels that feature Holmes, Watson, and their new assistant: 12-year-old Winston Spencer-Churchill, who is a quick learner, precocious (as might be expected), and often amusing; Hogan's web-site is at <www.mikehoganbooks.co.uk>. J. Andrew Taylor's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ELEMENT OF SURPRISE: THE WORMWOOD SCRUBS ENIGMA (2012; 140 pp., $9.95) begins with a locked snow-covered field mystery: two headless prison guards are found near Wormwood Scrubbs, with no traces of a perpetrator; Holmes and Watson discover the solution.
402. The Ice Bucket Challenge has gone viral. It's intended to raise awareness of and collect funds for research on ALS (amyotrophic lateral sclerosis), and Benedict Cumberbatch has participated: there's a 3-minute video available at YouTube <www.youtube.com/o7vhy6k>.
403. Lyndsay Faye (who is proud of her Investiture in The Baker Street Irregulars as "Kitty Winter") has some interesting things to say about her namesake at the Baler Street Babes web-site <www.tinyurl.com/pzzxu69>.
404. The Langham Hotel, mentioned more than once in the Canon, and the site of the famous dinner at which Conan Doyle was commissioned to write "The Sign of the Four", is offering an "exclusive commemoration package for Sherlock Holmes aficionados." Their "Sherlock Holmes Package" costs £329 per night for two people, including an English breakfast and two tickets to the exhibition at the Museum of London, and you can upgrade to the Arthur Conan Doyle suite at £529 per night. Read all about it at the hotel's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/paszmv4>, where you may (or may not) still find the hotel media center's statement that it was at the Langham that "the famous series of Sherlock Holmes mysteries was born."
405. Empire Online reported (Aug. 21) that Nicholas Rowe, who starred in "Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985), will appear again as Holmes in "Mr. Holmes" (the new title for "A Slight Trick of the Mind"). Ian McKellen stars in the new film as an aged Holmes, and Rowe will have a cameo as a younger Holmes.

406. Aug 14 #6: Fans of Jeremy Brett and David Burke and Edward Hardwicke (and the Granada series) will welcome the news that the entire series has now been released by MPI Home Video on Blu-ray ($59.98 for the disc with the first 13 episodes). Blu-ray is a digital optical-disc data-storage format that provides higher definition and requires a special player.
407. HOW TO THINK LIKE SHERLOCK, by Daniel Smith (New York: MJF Books, 2012; 192 pp., $15.95), is a do-it-yourself guide to improving "your powers of observation, memory, and deduction" (with riddles and tests and solutions).

408. The 55th annual running of The Chicago Silver Blaze will take place at the Hawthorne Race Course on Oct. 18. All the details are available from Susan Z. Diamond (16W603 3rd Avenue, Bensenville, IL 60106); her e-mail address is <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
409. The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" opens at the Saint Louis Science Center in Saint Louis, Mo., on Oct. 9, and their web-site's up and running <www.slscc.org/sherlock-holmes>.
410. "I have done a new cat," T. S. Eliot once wrote, "modeled on the late Professor Moriarty, but he doesn't seem very popular, too sophisticated, perhaps." That was in a letter to Frank Morley, cited by David E. Chinitz in A COMPANION TO T. S. ELIOT (John Wiley and Sons, 2009, p. 231). Thanks to Alexander Orlov for noting this direct reference to "Macavity the Mystery Cat", which actress Kelsey Williams reads (with artwork from various sources) in a YouTube video uploaded <www.tinyurl.com/q8k9poq> by Ross K. Foad.
411. Thomas Mengert's THE CONFESSIONS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE THEOLOGICAL ODYSSEY OF THE GREAT DETECTIVE: VOLUME 1: THE WAGER AT REICHENBACH FALLS (Keypoint: Victorian Gentlemen's Press, 2014; 230 pp., $24.95) is the first of seven volumes offering an alternative account of the adventures of Holmes and Watson, with a lot of philosophy (religious and otherwise). The complete work will total more than 820,000 words (more than the Canon itself); there's a sample from the book, and two video interviews with the author, at <www.tinyurl.com/owhjfkb>.
412. The Stanford Theatre in Palo Alto, Calif., opened in 1925 and is still operating, carefully restored, complete with Wurlitzer organ, and screening a full schedule of classic films <www.stanfordtheatre.org>. On Thursdays and Fridays into October they're showing weekly double features pairing the Fox and Universal "Sherlock Holmes" and Fox "Charlie Chan" films.
413. Internet fandom is awash with hopeful comment about a possible "Doctor Who" cross-over with "Sherlock" (Stephen Moffat and Mark Gatiss are showrunners for both series), and that may or may not happen, some day. In the meantime, there were Sherlockian echoes in "Doctor Who: The Snowmen" (broadcast on Dec. 25, 2012), and Les Klinger was the first to report many additional echoes in "Deep Breath" (the new season's first episode, broadcast on Aug. 23; Madame Vastra, the Victorian lizard lady, and Inspector Gregson are involved, and there are mentions of the Conk-Singleton forgery case and the Camberwell poisoner. If you're able to watch the BBC on-line, there's an 11-minute "Doctor Who Extra: Deep Breath" <www.tinyurl.com/mnofkjf> with a brief glimpse of a deerstalker (but not on the Doctor).

414. Aug 14 #7: There are many options available to authors who don't care if their work is not published in what now are called "dead tree books" by the many people who are happy to use e-books. One of those options is BookBaby, with an interesting web-site <www.tinyurl.com/qjdve2y>; it's a partner of Booktrack, which has published an "enhanced" version of "The Speckled Band" (Mar 12 #1).
415. Ray Betzner's "Studies in Starrett" blog <www.vincentstarrett.com> is well worth visiting frequently: his most recent entries are a two-part piece on "The World's Most Famous Bookplate" (and it's a fine example of how much an energetic researcher can discover).
416. Howard Ostrom, continuing his research on Sherlock Holmes on stage, screen, and television, has a new two-part essay ("Who's on First, It's Not So Elementary") about the first Sherlock Holmes performers in more than 40 countries; it's nicely illustrated, and you can read it at Ross K. Foad's "No Place Like Holmes" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/mwdhy5g>.
417. Walter Harmidarow's THE FINAL SOLUTION (Oakville: LTDBooks, 2001; 155 pp., $18.99) pits Holmes and Watson against Moriarty; Holmes is found red-handed at the scene of murder, and Watson suffers personal tragedy, but they eventually prevail. It's out of print, but copies are available from the author for $15.00 <walterharmidarow@bell.net>.
418. L.A. Theatre Works recorded "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (dramatized by David Pichette and R. Hamilton Wright) in June, with Seamus Dever as Holmes and Geoffrey Arend as Watson, and you'll be able to purchase a CD or download at their web-site <www.latw.org> on Sept. 15. The national broadcast is scheduled for Oct. 25, when they'll also stream the show at their website; details at <www.latw.org/radio.html>.
419. The Sherlock Breakfast Club and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street are planning an "All-Holmes' Eve" celebration in Brentwood (a suburb of Los Angeles) on Oct. 25, with food, a costume party and contest, and entertainment, ranging from strictly Canonical to wildly imaginative. Details will be announced at their Meetup web-page <www.tinyurl.com/ltxaumq>.
420. "The Carlton Club will find me," said Sir James Damery (in "The Illustrious Client"). The Carlton Club was founded in 1832, and now offers reciprocity to members of 137 clubs in 36 countries; if you'd like to see what it looks like now, visit the web-site <www.carltonclub.co.uk>. John Baesch spotted a handsome advertisement for the Carlton in Country Life (Oct. 9, 2013).
421. The Common Core standards, widely used for teaching language, literature, and mathematics, have received a lot of publicity, some favorable and some unfavorable. If you would like to see how Sherlock Holmes was used in this year's New York Regents High School Examination in English Language Arts, it's nicely available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/nld46rc>. Try your hand at testing your reading comprehension of something written by Arthur Conan Doyle. Or Langston Hughes. Or Carl Sagan. Thanks to Christopher Blau for finding the link to the exam. A Washington Post web-site blog (June 27) <www.tinyurl.com/n8doqxc> offers an explanation by two state educators of why they think the new exam is not a good test of college readiness.

422. Aug 14 #8 The BBC's "Sherlock" television series collected four Creative Arts Emmy Awards from the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences ("His Last Vow" was nominated in the Miniseries or Movie category): Cinematography, Single-Picture Editing, Music Composition, and Sound Editing. And Primetime Emmy Awards were won by Benedict Cumberbatch (Best Actor), Martin Freeman (Best Supporting Actor), and Best Writing (Steven Moffat).
423. And there's no shortage of productions of Sherlockian plays, some old and some new. Ken Ludwig's Gillette play "Postmortem" (recently rewritten as the comedy "The Game's Afoot") is being performed at the Tater Patch Players Theatre in Jasper, Ga., until Sept. 6 <www.taterpatchplayers.org>.
424. The West End Studio Theatre in Santa Cruz, Calif., has included "Sherlock Holmes" in its schedule of classes, starting Sept. 10; it's a "teen production" for grades 7-12, and there will be public performances on Dec. 5-6, at the Broadway Playhouse <www.westperformingarts.com>.
425. "Sherlock Holmes and the Canary Girls" (a new play by Keith Digby and John Clark) will be produced at the Kenton Theatre in Henley-on-Thames on Sept. 18-27 <www.kentontheatre.co.uk>.
426. "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror" (dramatized by Anthony Dodge and Marcia Milgrom Dodge from Nicholas Meyer's novel) will be performed at Theatre Burlington in Burlington, Ont. <www.theatreburlington.on.ca> Sept. 19-Oct. 4.
427. "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" (a new dramatization by Philip Grecian) will be performed at the Break Room Restaurant and Dinner Theater in Topeka, Kan., Sept. 19-27 <www.breakroomdowntown.com>.
428. "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" (a new dramatization by Richard Rose) will be produced at the Barter Theatre in Abingdon, Va., from Sept. 25 to Oct. 12 <www.bartertheatre.com>.
429. The LifeHouse Theater will produce Tim Kelly's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in Redlands, Calif., Oct. 25-Nov. 16 <www.lifehousetheater.com>.

430. The East Haddam Stage Company will perform "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Speckled Band" at the Oliver Wolcott Library in Litchfield, Conn., on Oct. 29.
431. "Sherlock Holmes and the Masters of Crime" (a new play by C. P. Stancich) is scheduled by the Theatre Company of Lafayette at the Mary Miller Theatre in Lafayette, Colo., Oct. 31-Nov. 23 <www.tclstage.org>.
432. The Lamplighters Music Theatre specializes in productions of Gilbert & Sullivan, and this year's champagne gala and auction will be a satire titled "Sherlock Who?, or A Scandal in Barataria" at the Palace of Fine Arts Theatre in San Francisco, Nov. 2, and at the Mountain View Center for the Performing Arts on Nov. 9 <www.lamplighters.org>.

433. Sep 14 #1: The saga continues: the Conan Doyle Estate has filed a petition for a Writ of Certiorari with the U.S. Supreme Court, asking it to review the 7th Circuit Court of Appeals decision that copyright protects only characters and story elements unique to the ten stories still under copyright. As always, you can read the documents in the case at <www.free-sherlock.com>. The Supreme Court receives about 10,000 petitions a year, and accepts (and hears oral arguments) in fewer than 100 cases.
434. Alan Rettig has reported a nice discovery by his friend Bruce Louiselle: a Sherlock Holmes Pub in the Grand Hotel in Hellesylt (a small village on the west central coast of Norway <www.tinyurl.com/qyyypmu>).
435. The "Victorian Fiction" section of the latest issue of the electronic journal Ripperologist has E. W. Hornung's "Gentlemen and Players" (edited with an introduction and notes by Eduardo Zinna). Hornung, Conan Doyle's brother-in-law, created Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman, and Zinna offers both a fine review of Hornung's life and work, and nicely helpful annotations to the story. Ripperologist is devoted to all aspects of Jack the Ripper (who is mentioned in Hornung's story); for information on how to subscribe, contact editor Eduardo Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
436. It's "Erie's downtown party headquarters! The home of rock-n-roll!" according to the Facebook page for Sherlock's/Park Place in Erie, Pa. The photographs at Yelp suggest that it's a lively venue.
437. More and more Sherlockian societies are using web-sites to make their history available, among them the Pleasant Places of Florida <www.ppopf.net>; click on "Publications" to see scans of their newsletter Communications all the way back to the first issue (Mar. 1972), as well as their round-robin pastiches and much more.
438. The latest result of Howard Ostrom's continuing Sherlockian exploration is "Talk to the Animals, Sherlock; or, Animalary, My Dear Watson " (a nicely illustrated exploration of the animals who have portrayed Sherlock Holmes in various media); it's amusing and instructive to see how many different animals have appeared in Sherlockian roles. You can read it for yourself at <www.nplh.co.uk/animalry.html>.
439. Oscar Ross reports an upcoming event at the Belfast Comedy Festival on Oct. 3: Crazy Cat Comedy will present "No Sith, Sherlock" (billed as "an intergalactic night of Star Wars themed murder mystery comedy") that apparently is Sherlockian only for the punning title <www.tinyurl.com/my8hgwa>.
440. The John H. Watson Society has announced the names of winners of its Second Annual Treasure Hunt (Jun 14 #3): the Open Team competition was won (again) by the Sound of the Baskervilles (of Seattle) with a perfect score, and the Open Individual competition by Denny Dobry (also again). You can find the details at the society's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/pq4hyfz>, and the questions (and answers) at <www.tinyurl.com/osorwt6>. Next year's event will be launched at noon on Aug. 1, 2015, and almost certainly will be even more difficult than this year's competition.

441. Sep 14 #2: There were 443 people dressed as Sherlock Holmes at Temple Newsam in Leeds on Aug. 31 to help the campaign to raise funds for the Yorkshire Brain Research Centre, setting a new Guinness World Record.
442. Steven Moffat and Sue Vertue sent a video message that's available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/n98x3cj>, and contributed a signed copy of the script for "The Empty Hearse" as a prize for the "best dressed Sherlock". There are lots of photographs accompanying the report by the Daily Mirror (Aug. 31) <www.tinyurl.com/qe9x8f2>.
443. SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. HARRY HOUDINI is a new five-issue comic-book mini-series due from Dynamite Entertainment in October. Anthony Del Col and Conor McCreery are the writers, and Carlos Furuzono the artist, and the web-site is at <www.tinyurl.com/n8xy63>.
444. "Celtic New Bhoys Murarak Wakaso Posts Bizarre Tribute to Sherlock Holmes After Mistaking Detective Outfit as Parkhead Tradition" was the headline on a story in the Glasgow Daily Record (Aug. 31): Wakaso, newly arrived from Ghana to join Glasgow Celtic, thought he was shown in local costume in a fan's photoshopped photograph, and reposted it on Instagram.
445. Translating some of the strange words: Celtic is the Glasgow football team, bhoys is a Celtic fan (or tough or thug), and football, of course, is what Americans call soccer. Instagram, now owned by Facebook, is a service that allows people to share video and photographs on social media.
446. The second season of "Elementary" has been released (discounted to $39.84 at Amazon). And there's a "Elementary 2015 Wall Calendar" (discounted to $13.49).
447. William Gillette's (non-Sherlockian) play "Too Much Johnson" has been made into films in 1919, directed by Donald Crisp, and again in 1938, directed by Orson Welles for a planned Mercury Theatre stage-and-screen production; the play was performed briefly without the film, which was never shown to the public. But a copy of the film, discovered in Italy in 2008, has been restored (Aug 13 #4), and (thanks to the National Film Preservation Foundation) a 66-minute work print of the film now is available on the Internet, with informative film notes by Scott Simmon, at <www.tinyurl.com/msppnrk>.
448. The Museum of London exhibition "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die" opens on Oct. 14 <www.tinyurl.com/mp263ux>, and there already is tie-in merchandise: Christys' Hats and Lovat Mill have launched a new tweed inspired by Sherlock Holmes, and deerstalkers are available at Christys' web-site <www.tinyurl.com/kfasfqo>. And there's an interesting blog, with a short trailer, at <www.tinyurl.com/k48o8z8>.
449. There now are six books in Andrew Lane's YOUNG SHERLOCK HOLMES series, the latest being KNIFE EDGE (London: Macmillan, 2013; 356 pp., £12.99), which brings Sherlock back to England, where he continues his struggle with the Paradol Chamber. The next book in the series will be STONE COLD, due this month. Lane has a web-site <www.youngsherlock.com>, where you'll also find information about his LOST WORLD, which features Caleb Challenger (grandson of Professor George Edward Challenger).
450. Sep 14 #3: Many of you will now have seen "Houdini" (the television film that aired in two two-hour episodes on the History Channel this month), but some of you have not, so I will avoid spoilers, except to say "don't believe everything you see." Nicholas Meyer's script draws heavily from THE SECRET LIFE OF HOUDINI: THE MAKING OF AMERICA'S FIRST SUPERHERO, by William Kalush and Larry Sloman (2006), which presents problems if you know a lot about Houdini and are annoyed when fiction is mixed with fact. Conan Doyle is in the film, played by David Calder; Lady Doyle is played by Linda Marlowe.

451. John Cox comments on the film in great detail at his excellent web-site at "Wild About Harry" <wildabouthoudini.com>; there are a lot of spoilers, so you might want to see the film before going to the web-site. He notes that an extended version of the film was broadcast in Britain; American who want to see the additional 26 minutes will need to buy the two-disc DVD set.
452. Further to the report (Mar 04 #2) on THE MCGOVAN CASEBOOK: EXPERIENCES OF A DETECTIVE IN VICTORIAN EDINBURGH, by James McGovan [a pseudonym of William C. Honeyman], a story by Tom Hunt in the Wellington Dominion Post (Sept. 6) <www.tinyurl.com/pr5649u> tells of a direct link between Honeyman and Conan Doyle: Norval Scrymgeour wrote in The Scotsman (Nov. 1930) about a meeting with Conan Doyle: "He told me that when a student at Edinburgh University he read with zest the detective stories of James McGovan, and although he did not say so, I took it that these then immensely popular sensations, as much as the queer foible of his teach teacher, the eccentric Bell, influenced him towards evolving the logical processes that in time flowered in the Sherlock Holmes stories." THE MCGOVAN CASEBOOK, reissued in 2003, is still in print.
453. Kudos to Bev Wolov for spotting the "Sherlock Coffee" mug (and for giving it to me as a birthday present). It may still be available at eBay <www.tinyurl.com/k7jr7ec>.
454. Maxim Jakubowski, a prolific author and editor of anthologies, has issued a call for submissions to THE MAMMOTH BOOK OF PROFESSOR MORIARTY ADVENTURES, to be published by Constable Robinson; visit his blog <www.tinyurl.com/meza8ke> for more information.
455. Fans of 2048 (the fairly addictive computer game that runs on smart phones as well as computers) may not know that there are versions of the game keyed to the BBC series "Sherlock" easily found on-line, one of them at <www.tinyurl.com/nzd8qg2>. If none of the versions available suits you, there's a link that allows you can make your own.
456. "How Watson Learned the Trick" (an amusing story handwritten by Conan Doyle in 1922 in the miniature book now found in the Queen's Dolls' House Library at Windsor Castle) will be published for the first time as a miniature book on Oct. 2, by Walker Books in collaboration with the Royal Collection Trust (£12.99); you can read the announcement at <www.tinyurl.com/mcp6w27>, and see images of the new edition on-line at the web-sites of Amazon, Waterstones, and other retailers.
457. Sep 14 #4: William Atkins' THE MOOR (London: Faber & Faber, 2014; 371 pp., £18.99) is a delightful book: the moors encompass much more than Dartmoor, and Atkins writes vividly about the landscape and the people who have lived in and on it, with passing mentions of Conan Doyle and Fletcher Robinson and Baring-Gould. The "names on the land" are fascinating, and so is the land itself.
458. Don Hobbs (aka The Maniac Collector), not content with merely pursuing foreign translations of the Canon, also blogs about them, and other things, at Inspector Lestrade's Blotter Page <www.tinyurl.com/qamstup>.
459. Petr Kopl's SHERLOCK HOLMES: A SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA (London: MX Publishing, 2014; 159 pp., $16.95) is an imaginative comic-book adaptation of more than one story, with spectacular full-color artwork and a preface by Aleš Kolodrubec. First published in Czech and now translated into English, it's a welcome sample of Kopl's "Victoria Regina" series. He has an interesting web-site at <www.petrkopl.cz> (if your computer runs Google Translate you can pretend you're fluent in Czech, and if it doesn't you can pretend you are); the publisher's at <www.mxpublishing.com> <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
460. Another MX title is PROJECT TWO, TO ONE, BE: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND A HOUSE OF LIGHT, SHADOWS, AND VIEWS (2014; 162 pp., $16.95); edited by Carrie Carlson and Lynn Gale, it's an anthology of tributes to Undershaw, with a foreword by Laurie R. King, and essays, photographs, and artwork by other supporters of the campaign to preserve Conan Doyle's home.
461. This Sherlock Holmes is a 3-year-old Appaloosa gelding, resident in Sunnyside, Wash., and offered for sale this month for $550; his owner says she named his because of his "serious and inquisitive personality." You can see more photographs at <www.tinyurl.com/nxsb9x3>.
462. Further to the report (Nov 12 #1) that Scotland Yard was to be sold, it has gone on the market with an asking price of £250 million (significantly more than the £150 million reported previously). And City Hall hopes that the sale might raise more than £300 million, according to a story in the Guardian (Sept. 2). But it's not the historic Great Scotland Yard, but rather New Scotland Yard, which has served as police headquarters since 1967.
463. There has been quite a bit of publicity for Russell Edwards' new book NAMING JACK THE RIPPER, who turns out to be Aaron Kosminsky, at least according to the author. Donald Rumbelow, who has a long record of expertise in Jack the Ripper research, is skeptical, and Lyndsay Faye, who did a lot of research for her pastiche DUST AND SHADOW (2009) is even more so, and explains her objections at her blog <www.tinyurl.co/kj8p4ak>.
464. "The history of the mega franchise as we've come to recognize it--a bundle of different intellectual properties or a story world that is used across multiple mediums--arguably began with Sherlock Holmes." According to David Forbes, who also suggests that Conan Doyle's resurrection of Sherlock Holmes was a response to "the Victorian version of a hashtag Twitter campaign." This from an essay he posted on Sept. 8 at the Forbes web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/k93zeax>.

465. Sep 14 #5: Further to the discussion of Joseph Joachim (Aug 14 #4), Laura Kuhn has noted that the violin virtuoso is mentioned by Jeremy Brett in the Granada series: in "The Resident Patient" Holmes says that he made a slight error in recalling Joachim's credenza in the Beethoven Violin Concerto (Holmes and Watson had seen and heard Joachim in concert the previous evening).
466. Sarah-Lambert Cook presides over a "Pen, Lens, and Paintbrush" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/px5hvyr>, where she reported (Sept. 11) on her recent visit to the Reichenbach Falls, with lots of colorful photographs, including one showing an amusing "Sherlock cut-out" available at the Falls for those who want their picture taken there in Sherlockian costume.
467. FAN PHENOMENA: SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Tom Ue and Jonathan Cranfield, is the latest in a series that's published by Intellect Books (Bristol/Chicago, 2014; 153 pp., £15.50/$22.00); the contributors examine the many ways that enthusiasm for the Sherlock Holmes stories has been manifested over the years: there are interviews with authors who include Anthony Horowitz, Ellie Ann Soderstrom, and Jonathan Barnes; plus interesting articles such as Russell Merritt's carefully-researched "Holmes and the Snake Skin Suits: Fighting for Survival on 50s Television" (history for which the world is now prepared). You'll find the publisher's web-site at <www.intellectbooks.com>.
468. "He's the Sherlock Holmes of entertainment, if Sherlock Holmes had a flair for comedy." That's forensic mindreader Colin Cloud, whose web-site is at <www.colincloud.com>.
469. Alfred Weiner wants to sell an assortment of Sherlockiana (including a set of 16-2/3 rpm recordings of Basil Rathbone reading four stories, issued by the Audio Book Co. in 1958); he's at <almar@stny.rr.com>, and you can request a copy of his sales list from him.
470. Irene's Cabinet is the annual anthology edited by Beth Austin for Watson's Tin Box, and this year's issue (50 pp.) offers (as always) an interesting mix of Sherlockian and Doylean poetry and prose, including Hanna Al-Kowski's imaginative winning essay for this year's Clarkson Prize, which honors the late Steve Clarkson and is sponsored by the society for seventh-graders in Howard County, Md. It's nicely done, including the cover art: Holmes' certificate of proficiency from the British Bee-Keepers' Association (from the collection of the late Paul Churchill). The cost is $15.00 postpaid, from Beth Austin (9455 Chadburn Place, Gaithersburg, MD 20886).

471. People who fondly remember the Livanov/Solomin television series will enjoy the insights in Zlata Serysheva's blog "The Amazing Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and His Friend the Soviet Censorship" <www.tinyurl.com/nqa785b>.
472. Admirers of Conan Doyle know that his grandfather John Doyle was noted for his political caricatures (signed with his pen name HB). He was a painter as well, and an oil-on-canvas painting of a moonlit landscape, attributed to him, will be at auction at Auctionata in Berlin on Oct. 6, with a starting bid of £3,000 <www.tinyurl.com/lo6dxh9>.

473. Sep 14 #6: BBC Home Entertainment is getting ready to release a "Sherlock Limited Edition Gift Set" ($197.50) in a Blu-ray/DVD combination, with the first three seasons, new commentary, never-before-seen outtakes, a deleted scene, busts of Holmes and Watson, and two collectible art cards. And it's discounted to $138.25 at Amazon.
474. I reported (Aug 14 #2) on the British Film Institute's search for a copy of "A Study in Scarlet" (1914), noting that it wasn't the first feature-length Sherlock Holmes film, and that "Der Hund von Baskerville" (1914), released a few months earlier, was not known to have survived. But it has survived: a copy was found in the Moscow film archive, and has been screened at European films festivals, but the film is not yet available on commercial DVD; Russell Merritt, who has seen the film, reports that it's "arguably the zaniest "Hound" ever made" and that "you won't soon forget Holmes disguised as Stapleton struggling with Stapleton disguised as Holmes in a fight broken up by Barrymore hidden in a suit of armor."
475. One wonders what Conan Doyle would have thought about the campaign for the independence of Scotland (he did, after all, favor Home Rule for Ireland). W. Gordon Smith, in a tribute to the late Eddie Boyd, recalled a story that Boyd once told on a weekly program broadcast by BBC Scotland: "Once upon a time there was a Scotsman, and Englishman, and an Irishman. His name was Conan Doyle."
476. But there's also Holmes' comment about a quartering of the Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes (in "The Noble Bachelor"). If this month's vote had been for independence, that would have launched consideration of revising the Union Jack to remove Scotland's blue, leaving only red and white.
477. Marvin E. Aronson ("Penrose Fisher") died on Sept. 6. He was chief medical examiner in Philadelphia from 1971 to 1985, and then was a medical consultant. Marv was a long-time and dedicated member of The Sons of the Copper Beeches, and drew upon his expertise in forensic pathology in his contributions to The Baker Street Journal and in his article on "Sherlock Holmes: Father of Forensic Pathology" in Transactions & Studies of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia (July 1978). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1968.
478. "He Who Laughs: Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Serial Chuckler" is the title of Joe Queenan's essay in the Weekly Standard (Sept. 15), and it's a piece that would have delighted John Bennett Shaw. There are quotes from Leigh Ashton-Hinds' THE HOUSE OF SUPPRESSED MIRTH: CHUCKLING IN LATE-VICTORIAN LITERATURE, and Adele Piggott-Gynne's SHERLOCK HOLMES, BOOTYMASTER, and you can read it all at <www.tinyurl.com/qqf9q4se>.
479. The Waverley Borough Council has voted unanimously to approve plans to convert Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, into a school (Jul 14 #5). John Michael Gibson appeared at the hearing to testify against the proposal, but his opposition was in vain. Norman Stromsoy, CEO of Stepping Stones, said at the hearing that the school's plans for Undershaw had the backing of two of Conan Doyle's relatives, one of them his great nephew Richard Doyle, who wrote in a letter to the school that "I don't believe that Undershaw should be preserved in aspic, but lived in and laughed in."

480. Sep 14 #7: Broadway World ran a report (Aug. 28) that Sherlock Holmes may be headed to Broadway: Tony Award nominated producer Antonio R. Marion ("Big Fish" and "Evita") is said "to be shepherding the project that is currently in the development stage." The new play will be accompanied by a live orchestra, and the show is rumored to have workshop productions planned for this fall both in New York and the U.K.
481. Sarah Rosenbaum spotted the Olde Book Pillow Classics at ThinkGeek; one of them is Sherlockian ($17.99) <www.thinkgeek.com/product/1545/?srp=1>, and it "will look great in your reading nook."
482. There has been a lot of Internet publicity for "The Great Ace Attorney" (an addition to the Japanese Nintendo 3DS series from Capcom); the new game is set in the Meiji period, and Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are in the cast of characters. You can see artwork at <www.capcom.co.jp/dai-gyatuken> (the text's in Japanese) and read comments at <www.tinyurl.com/qdvtvxw> (in English). There's a trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/n4puuse>.
483. This may be a first for Sherlockian collectors: Warpzone Prints uses a 3D printer to make an assortment of "geeky themed cookie cutters," and Holmes and Watson are included (based on the BBC's "Sherlock" series). There's a Sherlock Profiles Cookie Cutter Set ($7.00), and a Sherlock Portraits Cookie Cutter Set ($10.00) <www.warpzoneprints.com>.
484. The Wessex Press' conference "From Gillette to Brett IV: Basil, Benedict, and Beyond" at Indiana University in Bloomington on Sept. 12-14 went quite well, by all accounts. See the blog at <www.tinyurl.com/qbyqj34> for details on the festivities, and Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog for longer reports by Tim Greer, Ann Margaret Lewis, and Ray Betzner <www.ihearofsherlock.com>.
485. The Barbican Centre in London says it "exists to inspire people to discover and love the arts," and it has a wonderful series of "Landmark silent films about the world's greatest detective" next year: they'll screen Eille Norwood's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1921) on Feb. 15, three short films from his series for Stoll (1921-1923) on Mar. 8, and his "The Sign of Four" (1923) on Mar. 29. Their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/owkf24p>.
486. Hayakawa Shobo, one of Japan's leading publishers of mysteries, has a cafeteria called Christie on the ground floor of their building; it's named for one of their authors, of course, but occasionally it is renamed for temporary exhibitions honoring other authors, and this year it was the Pub Sherlock Holmes from July 30 to Aug. 29, when because it was so popular, it was extended to Sept. 12. Mitch Higurashi advised them on the exhibition, the food menu and cocktails, and items offered for sale; there's a colorful report on the Pub at the Dramafever web-site <www.tinyurl.com/q9zj2jt>.
487. Derham Groves, who teaches architecture at the University of Melbourne set his students the task of designing a Conan Doyle Mystery Theatre last year, and the results of his students' work have been published as SPARKS 4; the 106-page booklet has the details of the assignment, and photographs of the imaginative results. Derham <derham@unimelb.edu.au> will be happy to send you a copy of the booklet.

488. Sep 14 #8 THE PHILOSOPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Philip Tallon and David Baggett (Lexington: University Press of Kentucky, 2012; 206 pp., $40.00), is part of the Press' "The Philosophy of Popular Culture" series; the academic articles range from Dorothy L. Sayers' "Aristotle on Detective Fiction" to Andrew Terjesen's "Was It Morally Wrong to Kill Off Sherlock Holmes?", with some interesting stops along the way.
489. L.A. Theatre Works recorded "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (dramatized by David Pichette and R. Hamilton Wright) in June (Aug 14 #7), with Seamus Dever as Holmes and Geoffrey Arend as Watson, and it's now available on two CDs ($29.99) or as a download ($4.99) at <www.store.latw.org>. It's an energetic, interesting, and amusing production. The set includes a 10-minute "live audience talkback" with Les Klinger; there will be a national broadcast on Oct. 25, when they also will stream the show at their web-site; details at <www.latw.org/radio.html>.
490. And as usual, there's theater on-going and upcoming: The Red Monkey Theater Group will present "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure of the Speckled Band" (a new dramatization by Tal Aviezer), at the College of Mount Saint Vincent in Riverdale, N.Y., Oct. 4-18 <www.redmonkeytheater.org>.
491. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot" is running at the McLean Community Center in McLean, Va., through Oct. 12 <www.mcleanplayers.org>. It also will be produced at the Boathouse Theatre in Blenheim, New Zealand, Nov. 27-Dec. 6 <www.boathousetheatre.co.nz>, and at the Carpenter Square Theatre in Oklahoma City, from Nov. 28 through Dec. 20 <www.carpentersquare.com>.

492. "Sherlock Holmes" (a new dramatization by Jeff Sanders) is playing at the Northwest Children's Theater in Portland, Ore., through Oct. 26; their website's at <www.nwcts.org>.
493. "Holmes and Watson: A Scandal in Bohemia and The Final Problem" (dramatized by Terry McCabe) will be performed at the City Lit Theater in Chicago, Nov. 7-Dec. 14 <www.citylit.org>.
494. C. P. Stancich's new play "Sherlock Holmes: Assassins at Sea" will be performed at Camino Real Playhouse in San Juan Capistrano, Calif., Nov. 14-23 <www.caminorealplayhouse.org>.
495. Craig Hewlett's pantomime "Young Sherlock Holmes and the Case of Dick Whittington's Cat" is scheduled by Morpheus Theatre in Calgary, Alta., Dec. 5-14 <www.morpheustheatre.ca>.
496. Jamie L. Robledo's "Watson: The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes" will be performed at the Dorset Playhouse in Dorset, Vt., Mar. 6-15, 2015 <www.dorsetplayers.org>.
497. Dennis Rosa's "Sherlock Holmes and the Curse of the Sign of the Four" will be performed at the Spokane Civic Theater in Spokane, Wash., Apr. 10 to 26, 2015 <www.spokanecivictheater.com>.

498. Oct 14 #1: "Alpine Adventures: Arthur Conan Doyle and Switzerland" was delightful; the Reichenbach Irregulars presented a splendid conference in Davos last month <www.tinyurl.com/lzvxxqk>, and provided a welcome excuse for sightseeing. My first visit to Switzerland was in 1966, to attend the party that Adrian Conan Doyle gave to inaugurate the Château de Lucens, and this time I was able to see much more, including both Reichenbach Falls, spectacular scenery, and both Sherlock Holmes Museums.
499. And yes, there are two Reichenbach Falls, one of them where Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty met for the last time, and the other at Giessbach, where Jeremy Brett battled Eric Porter in the Granada series. As for the two Sherlock Holmes Museums, they are both delightful: one is in Meiringen <www.sherlockholmes.ch>, and the other in Lucens <www.tinyurl.com/n2atqwx>, where one can view the sitting-room formerly at the Château as well as some fascinating relics of Conan Doyle and his family.
500. This year's Sherlock Holmes Society of London's Christmas Card is as usual both interesting colorful, showing a poster for the first London production of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes"; you can see an image and order the card at <www.tinyurl.com/nveom62>
501. IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, edited by Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger (New York: Pegasus, 2014; 260 pp., $24.95), is a welcome sequel to their earlier anthology A STUDY IN SHERLOCK (Aug 11 #2), again with stories that were "inspired by the Holmes Canon" and that range from the Victorian era to very modern times, with Michael Dirda's "By Any Other Name" well worth the price of admission.
502. The Mysterious Bookshop is publishing a limited edition of IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, specially bound and signed by all contributors; $150.00 for the numbered edition <www.tinyurl.com/mlaghw4>. A more expensive lettered edition is already sold out.
503. Prose 'n Cons, a new quarterly edited by Stephanie Hoover "for fans of mystery, crime, and suspense," costs $14.00 per year (digital)/$29.00 per year (print and digital); the 38-page first issue (fall/winter 2014) includes an article by E.J. Wagner ("The Field of Forensic Science...and What We Must Do to Improve It"), an interview with Ian Kern about The Mysterious Bookshop <www.prose-n-cons.com> (Box 4921, Harrisburg, PA 17111).
504. "221B Baker Street: Fictional Evaluation" is an interesting estimation by Natalie Grigson of the price of Sherlock Holmes' apartment if it were offered for sale today <www.tinyurl.com/mtqu88f>. £1,691,028, in case you're in the market, and she explains why.
505. Michelle Spring and Laurie R. King, both quite successful authors (Spring is British and King is American), have edited CRIME AND THRILLER WRITING: A WRITERS' & ARTISTS' COMPANION (London: Bloomsbury, 2013; 279 pp., $25.95); it's an interesting and useful guide that they describe as "a collection of Things We Wish We'd Known When We Started," and it includes both their own suggestions and commentary by 26 guest contributors.

506. Oct 14 #2: Further to the items on metal plates apparently created in 1940 by way of celebrating Macmillan's publication of Vincent Starrett's 221B: STUDIES IN SHERLOCK HOLMES, displayed by Javier Doria during the birthday festivities in New York (Feb 13 #5 and May 13 #4): two of the plates were offered at Heritage Auctions in Beverly Hills on Oct. 8, estimated at $9,200-$13,800, and sold for $7,187.50 each (including the buyer's premium). There are images and descriptions of the plates at the Heritage Auctions web-site <www.tinyurl.com/kooucgs> and <www.tinyurl.com/nejtllj>. A third plate was sold to a private collector last year.
507. "Sherlock Holmes Character Held on Forgery Charge" was the headline on the story at the KOIN-TV web-site on Sept. 12 <www.tinyurl.com/mequlw9> about Quentin G. Stanhope, who was being held in Portland, Ore., on first-degree forgery, first-degree theft, and identity theft charges. Quentin G. Stanhope is a "spy character in a Sherlock Holmes book," the story explained, but didn't say which Sherlock Holmes book. It didn't take authorities long to identify the perpetrator as Gerard Marcel Beaudoin III, who had been using the Stanhope alias since 2005. A story in the Lincoln County Dispatch (Sept. 16) noted that a large collection of Sherlock Holmes literature was found in Beaudoin's home and office. Beaudoin is now being held in Lincoln City jail on $2 million bond.
508. The third Sherlock Seattle Convention will be held at the Broadway Performance Center in Seattle, Jan. 9-11 <www.sherlock-seattle.org>; the guest of honor, mentalist Joe Riggs (known as "The Real Sherlock Holmes"), has his own web-site at <www.theworldofjoeriggs.com>.
509. Reported: Leslie S. Klinger's THE NEW ANNOTATED H. P. LOVECRAFT (New York: Liveright, 2014; 928 pp., $39.95); Lovecraft was a fine writer of weird and supernatural fiction, as well as a friend of August Derleth and an admirer of Sherlock Holmes. Neil Gaiman has suggested that "Annotator Les Klinger is the man you want to have by your side, as you explore the Lovecraftian Darkness."
510. Donald A. Redmond ("Good Old Index") died on Oct. 22. Described by his son Chris as a library scientist, Meccano genius, churchman, and family patriarch, Don was the author of SHERLOCK HOLMES: A STUDY IN SOURCES (1982) and SHERLOCK HOLMES AMONG THE PIRATES (1990), and for many years prepared the annual indexes for The Baker Street Journal. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1969, and their Two-Shilling Award in 1994.
511. If you are still wondering which Sherlock Holmes book Quentin G. Stanhope can be found in, there actually are four, although the character does not have a middle initial. Stanhope is a British spy in four of Carole Nelson Douglas' "Irene Adler" novels, appearing first in IRENE AT LARGE (1992).
512. Curtis Armstrong's fans will recall that he quoted from the Canon (as God's scribe Metatron) in the "Meta Fiction" episode of the CW series "Supernatural" (Apr 14 #2). He guest-starred again in the "Reichenbach" episode on Oct. 14, but hopes that the episode title promised Sherlockian content were not fulfilled. Curtis explains that "the author of the script had read an article which mentioned that I was a BSI, and put it in as a private joke."

513. Oct 14 #3: Some years ago (Jun 11 #5) The Mysterious Press and Open Road launched MysteriousPress.com, offering a long list of new and classic crime, mystery, suspense, and espionage. The Mysterious Press.com Classic list includes the first eight volumes of the Canon, with a new introduction by Otto Penzler aimed at very casual readers; it's the same introduction in each volume. Go to <www.tinyurl.com/new38aw> to see all of the 44 titles now available in the series.

514. Irwin F. Deutsch ("The Intricate Matter from Marseilles") died on Sept. 8. He wrote a Letter to Baker Street at the age of 15, published in the Baker Street Journal in 1948, founded The Reigate Squires of Scarsdale, N.Y., and went on to be a lawyer in Washington and New York before moving to Florida. Irv received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1962.
515. A (non-Sherlockian) watercolour by Sidney Paget of "figures on a path" will be offered at auction on Nov. 5 <www.tinyurl.com/pez69f3>.
516. The Museum of London's exhibition "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die" opened on Oct. 17; there was a lot of publicity in the press and on television for the first major Sherlock Holmes exhibition in London since the Festival of Britain in 1951, and the new exhibition offers a chance to view some wonderful things. Randall Stock offers an overview at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/qbvql43>, with links to video and recommended news articles, and the Museum has its own web-site at <www.tinyurl.com/mj3nldl>. The exhibition is open through Apr. 12, and the Museum's shop <www.museumoflondonshop.co.uk> offers a wide range of Sherlockian merchandise.
517. "Start the Week" is a 45-minute series broadcast by BBC Radio 4; their program "Crime Stories and Ghost Stories" (Oct. 13) featured a panel that included Alex Werner (Head of the Museum of London's History Collections; you can listen to the broadcast at <www.tinyurl.com/opoo3nv>).
518. BBC Radio 4 Extra is celebrating the exhibition with "The Holmes Service" a (a series of broadcasts on Saturdays from Oct. 18 to Nov. 15, featuring repeats of dramatizations and documentaries); they will also be available for listening on-line <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/p028l4f2>. Other Sherlockian and Doylean programs will be found in the series "In Search of Sherlock" at <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/p0285193>.
519. If you're wondering about the Sherlock Holmes exhibition during the Festival of Britain in 1951 was like, a delightful 3-minute video can be seen at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/nu458so>; you can see Denis Conan Doyle and Arthur Wontner, and Jean Conan Doyle (in glasses, behind the left shoulder of the Mayor of Marylebone).
520. "Sherlock Holmes, Unlikely Style Icon" is the title of an article spotted by Alice Wright in The Atlantic (Oct. 27) <www.tinyurl.com/nfy4xuh>, with discussion of the many ways Holmes has influenced (and continues to influence) fashion, with links to articles in other magazines, comments on Watson's wardrobe (well, Lucy Liu's wardrobe), and an interesting and colorful 15-minute video about the new Sherlock Holmes tweed commissioned by the Museum of London.
521. Oct 14 #4: "The Sting of Death" (1955), a one-hour dramatization for television of H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY that featured Boris Karloff as Mr. Mycroft, is included in the three-DVD set SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE ARCHIVE COLLECTION, and it's now, spotted by Keith Stump and reported by Michael Halm, also available on-line at <www.hulu.com/watch/121619>.
522. Daniel P. Griffin ("General de Merville") died on Apr. 25, 2012. He was a product marketing manager in the Norden Division of United Aircraft and pioneered in the field of analog to digital conversion. He contributed to our literature, was appointed Ambassador Cockroach in the Worshipful Company of Ailing Cockroaches (a literary society that honored Guy Gilpatrick's "Glencannon" series), and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1968.
523. The University of Nebraska at Omaha has issued a call for papers for "Lippincott's Legacy" (a literary conference honoring the 125th anniversary of the publication of "The Sign of the Four" and "The Picture of Dorian Gray" scheduled for May 29-31; it's open to academicians and enthusiasts, and the deadline for submissions is Feb. 20; additional information about the conference is available at <www.lippincottslegacy.org>.
524. Rodney A. Mannion ("Shoscombe Old Place") died on Sept. 23, 2013. He was a physician, and entered the world of Sherlockians thanks to one of his patients, Jay Finley Christ. A member of Hugo's Companions and The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic), Dr. Mannion was awarded his Investiture by The Baker Street Irregulars in 1969.
525. William Gillette's silent film "Sherlock Holmes" (1916) has long been considered the Holy Grail for Sherlockians, and at long last it has been discovered: a nitrate dupe negative, with French flash titles and color annotations, was found in the vaults of the Cinémathèque française, and it is now being restored in collaboration with the San Francisco Silent Film Festival. Russell Merritt reports that there are mysteries yet to be solved, including how and when the film got to France (since trans-Atlantic shipping was at a minimum during the war), and whether it actually was shown in France (at the end of one reel there's an announcement that the film was to be shown as a four-part weekly serial. The European premiere will be at a film festival in Paris in January, and the American premiere (with English titles) will be at a film festival in San Francisco in May.
526. The Green Bag, a law journal based in Washington, publishes an annual "Almanac & Reader" of good legal writing, each year with additional material. The theme for the additional material in 2015 will be "The Norwood Builder" and they have issued a call for annotations on the story, with a deadline of Dec. 24. Details at <www.greenbag.org/callNBldr.pdf>.
527. The new miniature-book edition of Conan Doyle's parody "How Watson Learned the Trick" (Sep 14 #3) is a delightful production, even though it's not a true facsimile: to avoid over-using the original book and damaging it, just enough pages were scanned to capture all of the letters needed, and a special font was created to produce the new miniature book. Randall Stock has prepared an excellent web-page on both the original and the new editions at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/n9369dr>.
528. Oct 14 #5: Arthur Morrison created Martin Hewitt to fill the gap created in the pages of The Strand Magazine after Holmes and Moriarty perished at the Reichenbach; Hewitt, the first of many "rivals of Sherlock Holmes," appeared in 25 stories published in the Strand, Windsor Magazine, and London Magazine. David Marcum has concluded that Hewitt actually was Sherlock Holmes, beginning his career in 1876, has "Holmes-ed" and edited the stories in three volumes of SHERLOCK HOLMES IN MONTAGUE STREET (London: MX Publishing, 2014; 237/243/241 pp., $16.95 per volume); it's an interesting proposition, and he has carried it out well. The publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
529. More from MX: Derrick Belanger has edited two volumes of A STUDY IN TERROR: SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE'S REVOLUTIONARY STORIES OF FEAR AND THE SUPERNATURAL (2014; 274+288 pp., $16.95 each); the non-Sherlockian stories, with interesting introductions and commentary (including Chuck Davis on "Aviation and the Horror of the Heights"; the editor on "Arthur Conan Doyle and the Mary Celeste Mystery" and "The Making of the Modern Mummy"; and Joel K. Jensen on "Horror and The Mystery of Cloomber").
530. Petr Macek's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE ADVENTURE OF THE COLD-SERVED REVENGE (2014; 227 pp., $16.95) opened with Watson summoned by Mrs. Hudson to Fulworth to provide medical assistance to Holmes, who has suffered a coronary; he recovers, and they are launched on an investigation that takes them from Venice to Scotland in pursuit of a mysterious villain.
531. Charles Press has edited A BEDSIDE BOOK OF EARLY SHERLOCKIAN PARODIES AND PASTICHES (2014; 352 pp., $19.95), an anthology that offers a welcome selection from the almost 400 parodies and pastiches published during Conan Doyle's life. Sherlockians today use the word "pastiche" to include a multitude of sins: actual pastiches, and parodies, and homages. This anthology shows how much fun people had with Sherlock Holmes, from 1891 onward.
532. David Ruffle's HOLMES AND WATSON: END PEACE (2012; 119 pp., $9.95) presents Watson in 1929, in hospital and at the end of his life, in a warm and reminiscent conversation with Holmes; it's a nice concept, well written. Geri Schear's A BIASED JUDGEMENT: THE SHERLOCK HOLMES DIARIES: 1897

- (2014; 319 pp., $18.95) is Holmes' own account of a complicated case that involves a dire threat to the Empire, and some surprises; the attempt to capture the voice of Holmes is quite successful. Daniel D. Victor's THE FINAL PAGE OF BAKER STREET (2014; 229 pp., $14.95) has a young Raymond Chandler serving as Billy, and assisting Holmes and Watson in solving a mystery in 1903.
533. Thomas M. Russo ("The Boscombe Valley Mystery") died on Apr. 18. He had a 40-year career in the U.S. Air Force and was a member of the P.O.B.O.B. Motorcycle Club, Hugo's Companions, and The Hounds of the Baskerville (sic). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1983.
534. The Sherlock Holmes Exhibition at the Museum of London isn't the only literary attraction in London at the moment: the British Library's "Terror and Wonder: The Gothic Imagination" is running through Jan. 20. Billed as "the UK's biggest ever Gothic exhibition," it traces the history of the Gothic movement over 250 years <www.tinyurl.com/nveom62>; one of the 200 objects on display is a vampire-slaying kit.

535. Oct 14 #6: Sherlock Holmes' 161st birthday will be celebrated on Friday, Jan. 9, with the traditional festivities in New York, but the first formal event will be The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' ASH Wednesday dinner starting at 6:30 pm at O'Casey's (22 East 41st Street); attendees pay their own checks, but you should let Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221bee@gmail.com> or Evy Herzog (301 Warren Avenue #203, Baltimore, MD 21230) <herzogbaesch@aol.com> know if you are coming to the event.
536. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker Lecture begins at 6:15 pm on the 2nd floor of the Midtown Executive Club (at 40 West 45th Street); the speaker will be Alan Bradley, co-author of MS. HOLMES OF BAKER STREET (2004), the thoroughly controversial "truth about Sherlock Holmes", and the author of the award-winning "Flavia de Luce" series <www.flaviadeluce.com>; the sixth volume (THE DEAD IN THEIR VAULTED ARCHES) was published last January. The lecture will cost $11.00; seating is limited, and you're advised to reserve early (details below); tickets won't be sold at the door.
537. The Baker Street Babes invite one and all to their "Daintiest (Bee) Under Your Bonnet Charity Ball/Sussex Flapper Party" which starts at 8:00 pm at The Players (16 Gramercy Park South), offering a buffet dinner, cash bar, live music, prizes, toasts, and entertainment, with formal attire and Sherlockian costume strongly encouraged. The cost is $45.00, and proceeds will benefit the Wounded Warriors Project. More information is available from Lyndsay Faye <lyndsay@bakerstreetbabes.com> and at the Babe's web-site at <www.bakerstreetbabes.com>.
538. Otto Penzler's traditional open house on Friday from 11:00 to 5:00 at the Mysterious Bookshop, at 58 Warren Street (between West Broadway and Church Street) in Tribeca; the 1, 2, and 3 trains stop at the Chambers Street station (one block from the shop). If you get lost, the bookshop's telephone number is 212-587-1011.
539. The William Gillette Memorial Luncheon starts at noon, at Moran's Chelsea Seafood Restaurant at 146 Tenth Avenue at 19th Street; the cost is $47.00 for chicken or salmon ($52.00 for prime rib). Checks can be sent to Susan Rice (125 Washington Place #2-E, New York, NY 10014) <susan221b@gmail.com>.
540. The Baker Street Irregulars will gather at 6:00 pm at the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street and just north of Grand Central Station); attendance is by invitation only. The Gaslight Gala (which is open to all Sherlockians and their friends) will provide dinner and entertainment at 6:30 pm at the Manhattan Club (201 West 52nd Street at Seventh Avenue); $85.00 (checks or PayPal), and details are available from Christopher Zordan (184 Blew Court, East Brunswick, NJ 08816 <gaslightgal@gmail.com>; information about the Gala is at <www.gaslightgalanyc.wordpress.com>.
541. If you want to send seasonal souvenirs or other mementos to be included in the various dinner packets you should send 170 copies (for the BSI) to Al Gregory (118 South Prospect Street, Verona, NJ 07044), 100 copies (for the Gaslight Gala) to Carol Fish (Box 4, Circleville, NY 10919), and 18 copies (for The Women) to Mary Ann Bradley (7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278); your material must be mailed to arrive by Dec. 15.
542. Oct 14 #7: On Saturday a wide range of Sherlockiana will be available from vendors in the Merchants Room (Covent Garden West) in the Vanderbilt Suite (on the second floor of the Roosevelt Hotel at 45 East 45th Street) from 9:00 am to noon; you can contact Ralph Hall (2906 Wallingford Court, Louisville, KY 40218) (502-491-3148) <bugmanhall@aol.com> for information about dealers' tables.
543. The Beacon Society's annual meeting will be at 10:00 am in the York Suite at the Roosevelt Hotel, where they will present their annual Beacon Award recognizing individuals' efforts to introduce Sherlock Holmes to young people; details are at their web-site <www.beaconsociety.com>. The Clients of Adrian Mulliner will hold a Junior Bloodstain, also in the York Suite, at 11:15 am, with Wodehousean entertainment that will include the premier performance of "The Riddle of the Refurbished Room". Additional information is available from Elaine Coppola <emcoppol@syr.edu>.
544. The Baker Street Irregulars' annual reception, open to all Sherlockians and their friends, will be held from 1:15 to 4:15 in the grand ballroom on the 22nd floor of the Yale Club at 50 Vanderbilt Avenue (across the street from just north of Grand Central Station); there will be a cocktail-party buffet and an open bar (wine, beer, juice, and soft drinks), and the traditional (and perhaps unusual) entertainment; the cost is $69.00 (details below) or $79.00 after Nov. 29 or at the door. A warning for drivers: the Yale Club block of Vanderbilt Avenue is only one lane only due to construction, and one-way only northbound.
545. For those who wish to continue partying, Chrys Kegley of The Curious Collectors of Baker Street will host The Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians Dinner at 6:00 pm at O'Lunney's Times Square Pub in a private room on the second floor (145 West 45th Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues); additional details are available from Chrys (18014 Sherman Way #275, Reseda, CA 91235) (818-675-5399) <ckegley@socal.rr.com>.
546. The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold their informal buffet brunch on Sunday, at a venue yet to be determined; it's open to all, and more information will be available in the next issue of this newsletter.
547. Space is limited at the William Gillette Luncheon and at the Gaslight Gala on Friday, and early reservations are advised if you wish to attend these events.
548. Arrangements have been made for a block of rooms at the Roosevelt Hotel (45 East 45th Street) at a special tax-free rate of $179.00 per night (single or double room); the special rate is available only for reservations made through the Baker Street Irregulars by Nov. 22. Guest cards for the Club's second-floor lounge are available to all Sherlockians, and it's a fine venue for socializing and relaxing.
549. And here are the details: if you've not already received Mike Whelan's announcement and reservation form (including prices) for the Roosevelt Hotel and the Yale Club, the Thursday lecture, and the Saturday reception, visit the Baker Street Journal web-site <www.bakerstreetjournal.com> after Nov. 8 and click on BSI Weekend, or contact Mary Ann Bradley <mabmfw@aol.com>.

550. Oct 14 #8 Other hotels offer reasonable (according to New York landlords) rates, but it's a mark of the 21st century that the best offers are to be found on the Internet, at web-sites such as <www.priceline.com>, <www.tripadvisor.com>, <www.travelocity.com>, <www.expedia.com>, and <www.hotels.com>; you will be wise if you then check the hotel's web-site and ask for the best rate (do keep in mind that there are non-optional extras such as almost 20% in state and city taxes).

551. The Dr. John H. Watson Fund offers financial assistance to all Sherlockians (membership in the BSI is not required) who might otherwise not be able to participate in the weekend's festivities. A carefully pseudonymous John H. Watson presides over the fund and welcomes contributions, which can be made by check payable to John H. Watson and sent (without return address on the envelope) to Dr. Watson, care of The Baker Street Irregulars, at 7938 Mill Stream Circle, Indianapolis, IN 46278; your letters are forwarded unopened, and Dr. Watson will acknowledge your generosity. Requests for assistance should also be mailed (quickly) to Dr. Watson at the same address.
552. And if you can't remember where you put your copy of all of this, detailed information about the birthday festivities is available on the Internet at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>. News about additional events will be found in next month's issue of this newsletter.
553. Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson appear in a political advertisement supporting the North Dakota Clean Water, Wildlife, and Parks Amendment (aka Measure 5) that would amend the state constitution to earmark five percent of the state's oil extraction tax revenue for environmental protection. You will find arguments pro and con at Ballotpedia <www.tinyurl.com/ppd6y8c>, where all content must be "neutral, accurate, and verifiable," and you can watch the 1-minute video at <www.tinyurl.com/lu39tdh>.
554. Sherlockians of a certain age fondly recall the appearance of Laura Lyons as Playboy's "Miss February 1976"; she now is Laura Aldridge, featured in New York magazine (Oct. 20) in Noreen Malone's article on "The View from a Centerfold" <www.tinyurl.com/kh7fa5g>.
555. Lloyd W. Brown Jr. died on Oct. 13. Bill was a professor of journalism at the University of South Carolina, a stalwart member of The Hansom Wheels, and the author of a long series of one-act radio plays, filled with broad humor and excellent puns, performed by the society and published in three volumes over the years as THE UNKNOWN SHERLOCK HOLMES.
556. Jennie C. Paton has noted that Tom Baker's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1982) has been issued as a commercial DVD ($30.99) with audio commentary by Baker, and an image gallery <www.tinyurl.com/o6grsky>. The DVD is from Australia, and in PAL format.
557. Finally, nicely in time for holiday hinting (or shopping), Randall Stock's annual informative nominations for "the best Sherlock Holmes books and DVDs of the year" is on-line at <www.bestofsherlock.com/sherlock-gifts.htm>.

558. Nov 14 #1: There's more information about the birthday festivities in New York in January: The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes will hold an informal brunch on Sunday, from 11:30 to 3:00, at the Churchill Tavern (45 East 28th Street); $25.00 payable by cash or check at the door. The brunch is open to everyone, but reservations are requested: e-mail to <lyndsayfaye@hotmail.com>.
559. The Supreme Court has denied the Conan Doyle Estate's petition asking them to consider the Estate's appeal of a lower court's decision that copyright protects only the characters and story elements unique to the ten stories still protected by copyright. The denial was not unexpected: the Supreme Court receives about 10,000 petitions each year and accepts fewer than 100 cases. You can read the documents in the case at <www.free-sherlock.com>. John Rabe interviewed Les Klinger for KPCC-FM's "Off-Ramp" on Nov. 3, and you can listen to a 6-minute audio at <www.tinyurl.com/q2klxlw>; look for the "Listen Now" button at the right.
560. The October issue of the electronic journal Ripperologist has Neil Bell's interesting article "'So Help Me God': Becoming a Victorian Policeman" (it wasn't all that easy to become a policeman in the 1880s), Adam Wood's kind remembrance of Camille Wolff (who died on Sept. 4, aged 102, and whose Grey House Books was a great resource for Sherlockian collectors), and Jon Rees' guest editorial "'Eighteen Out of Twelve Apostles Are Buried in Spain': The Problem with Ripper Relics" (with discussion of Russell Edwards' new book NAMING JACK THE RIPPER). Ripperologist is devoted to all aspects of Jack the Ripper (who is mentioned in Hornung's story); for information on how to subscribe, contact editor Eduardo Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk>.
561. Sorry about that: the article on "The Field of Forensic Science...and What We Must Do to Improve It" in Prose 'n Cons (Oct 14 #1) was written by Stephanie Hoover.
562. There were rumors in 1991 of a Sherlock Holmes television series starring Stephen Fry as Holmes and Hugh Laurie as Watson, and a more valid report in 2004 of pilot script for a television series that never was produced, but of course it's well known that Hugh Laurie's performance as Gregory House was modeled after Holmes, and that Stephen Fry played Mycroft in the film "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows". "Fry and Laurie Reunited" was a 69-minute program that was broadcast on cable television in Britain in 2010, and now available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/p2fqarr>.
563. Reported: Michael Sims, The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker in Jan. 2011, has edited THE PHANTOM COACH (New York: Bloomsbury USA, 2014; 320 pp., $17.00); it's subtitled "a connoisseur's collection of Victorian ghost stories," and includes Conan Doyle's "The Captain of the Pole-Star".
564. Congratulations (again) to Dan Stashower, who won an Anthony Award at Bouchercon for THE HOUR OF PERIL: THE SECRET PLOT TO MURDER LINCOLN BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR (best critical or non-fiction work), making this his second hat trick (he also won the Mystery Writers of America's Edgar and Malice Domestic's Agatha for the book). His first hat trick came in 2008, for ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A LIFE IN LETTERS.
565. Nov 14 #2: Arthur Conan Doyle lectured at the Norwich Free Academy in Connecticut in 1894, and he paid a return visit to Norwich on Nov. 1, impersonated by Jeff Bradway in an imaginative program arranged by The Men on the Tor. You can read more about the event (and see some video) at <www.tinyurl.com/lnzolfx> and <www.tinyurl.com/maxmx4x>.
566. Ian Fraser died on Oct. 31. He was a director, composer, and conductor for musicals on stage and television, winning 11 Emmy Awards, and he was musical supervisor for Ron Moody's "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (1988).
567. It isn't often that a brief announcement in The Times results in worldwide headlines, but this one, published on Nov. 5, certainly did: "Forthcoming Marriages: Mr. B. T. Cumberbatch and Miss S. I. Hunter. The engagement is announced between Benedict, son of Wanda and Timothy Cumberbatch of London, and Sophie, daughter of Katharine Hunter of Edinburgh and Charles Hunter of London." They were photographed together at a French Open tennis match in June <www.tinyurl.com/o4famgv>.
568. Thanks to the wonders of digitization, you can read Conan Doyle's interesting article on "Mr. Stevenson's Methods in Fiction" (published in The National Review, Jan. 1890, and reprinted in The Living Age (Feb. 15, 1890) at <www.tinyurl.com/mlkkmqn>.
569. "I just wish it could take selfies and sign autographs," said Benedict Cumberbatch, when he was unveiled at Madame Tussauds last month. His waxwork appearance was deas "premiere ready" by Tussauds.
570. Anthony Richards reports two new items from Baker Street Studios Limited: Roger Riccard's pastiche SHERLOCK HOLMES & THE CASE OF THE TWAIN PAPERS and J. P. Sperati's game A SHERLOCK HOLMES MONOPOLY. The publisher's web-site is at <www.baker-street-studios.com>.
571. BBC Radio 4 now makes its programs available on-line for four weeks, so you have a chance to listen to Sir Ian McKellen reading "The Valley of Fear" as abridged by Neville Teller in ten 15-minute episodes; the "Book at Bedtime" series began on Nov. 10 <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b04nrqsr>. BBC Radio 4 also broadcast Val McDermid reading from her new book FORENSICS: THE ANATOMY OF CRIME in five 10-minute episodes in their "Book of the Week" series beginning on Nov. 10 <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b04nrh0s>.

572. People who have made presentations over the years at Bob Thomalen's "Autumn in Baker Street" gathering can now purchase CDs with video of their presentations for $10.00 postpaid; contact Francine Kitts at <fkitts@aol.com>.
573. THE BOARDWALK, edited by Nancy Sakaduski (Lewes: Cat & Mouse Press, 2014; 223 pp., $15.95), is an anthology of the winning stories from the Rehoboth Beach Reads Short Story Contest sponsored by Browseabout Books for fiction or non-fiction related to Rehoboth Beach in Delaware. Joseph Crossen won first place with "The Case of the Artist's Stain"; the artist Howard Pyle (who illustrated some of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories) spent many summers in Rehoboth Beach, and Holmes and Watson visit to solve a case of forgery. The publisher's at <www.catandmousepress.com>.
574. Nov 14 #3: Alan Rettig has reported a "Literary London Map" created by the graphic artist Dex in collaboration with interior designer Anna Burles: it's a graphic rendition of the city's literary history, with Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson duly honored. Their shop is Run for the Hills <www.runforthehills.bigcartel.com>, and they also offer an imaginative "A Study in Sherlock".
575. Alan is the extremely helpful web-master for the Red Circle of Washington's web-site, where he has reported on his discovery of two Sherlockian quizzes at an on-line dating web-site called OkCupid that uses a math-based matching system to help you find other people who share your interests. You'll find the details in the Inner Circle at <www.redcircledc.org>.
576. The new movie "Paddington" is being promoted all over London with 50 life-size (3'6") statues of Paddington Bear, designed by celebrities. Benedict Cumberbatch's statue is, as might be expected installed near the Museum of London, home of the ongoing exhibition "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die". The statues will eventually be auctioned to benefit charity. Paddington Bear first appeared in 1958, and is featured in more than 20 books written by Michael Bond, and Paddington Bear has his own web-site at <www.paddington.com>.
577. The statues of Paddington Bear will be auctioned by Christie's on-line at their web-site from Dec. 10 to Jan. 15, with bids starting at £500; you can sign up for further information at <www.tinyurl.com/q7on235>.
578. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at Mahony & Sons in Vancouver on Oct. 22, welcomed by members of The Stormy Petrels of British Columbia. Our next meetings will be in 2015 in Denver on June 3, and Baltimore on Nov. 4.
579. Raphael Ravenscroft died on Oct. 19. He played the saxophone solo on the original 1978 track of Gerry Rafferty's "Baker Street" and reportedly was paid only £27 for the session, with a check that bounced. Ravenscroft went on to work with icons such as Pink Floyd, Abba, and Marvin Gaye; in 2011 he recorded a tribute "Forgiveness" to commemorate Rafferty's funeral. Christopher Roden reported in 2000 that he had heard from Rafferty that he had titled the song in reference to the street in London.
580. Sergei Magnitsky, a Russian lawyer who alleged that Russian state officials had carried out large-scale theft, died in prison in Moscow in 2009 after being held without trial for eleven months <www.tinyurl.com/yg6735m>; his death received world-wide publicity, and eventually resulted in enactment of the Magnitsky Act in the U.S., which imposed sanctions on Russian officials believed to be responsible for his death <www.tinyurl.com/c7s3gs9>. Alexander Orlov reports a 25-minute documentary ("The Letter M") narrated by Vasily Livanov (who won high praise as Sherlock Holmes in the 1979-1986 Russian television series); the "M" is Moriarty, and the video presents arguments for a complicated world-wide conspiracy managed by William Browder (a noted critic of Vladimir Putin). There's a voice-over translation into English, and you can the video at <www.tinyurl.com/qyw452k>.
581. Nov 14 #4: The "Books About Town" project (May 14 #5) that created trails of benches shaped as open books in London was quite successful, raising £251,000 for the National Literary Trust when the BookBenches were auctioned on Oct. 7; the highest bid for a bench was £9,500 (for Jeeves and Wooster). The Sherlock Holmes BookBench brought £4,000. There's a project web-site at <www.booksabouttown.org.uk>.
582. Sir Sidney Chapman died on Oct. 9. He was a Tory member of parliament for many years, and his obituary in The Times noted that he could claim to have planted the seed that led to the growing of more than 20 million trees in Britain over five decades, and that he had sponsored the annual dinner of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London in the House of Commons, adding that "many deerstalkers were in evidence," and that "by the end of the evening a pall of pipe smoke would envelop the tables."
583. Just the thing for your favorite Sherlockian: the Valextra Sherlock Holmes Bag. Valextra, based in Milan offers a redesigned briefcase protected by a patented three-dial safe-style lock, for only £3,900; there's a nice photograph at the Financial Times' web-site <www.tinyurl.com/nfqnbvp>.
584. There's an addition to the list of Sherlock Holmes/Doctor Who crossovers: "Exterminentry" is the title of the artwork on a mug created by Carol Mallas that shows Doctor Who's Daleks as Holmes and Watson; it's available ($11.46 plus shipping from the U.K.) at Etsy <www.tinyurl.com/lnlpd2f>.
585. The BBC Books series of tie-in editions of the Canon has now reached seven volumes, each with "Sherlock" cover art and introductions that are both interesting and entertaining (£4.99 each): the introductions are by Benedict Cumberbatch, Martin Freeman, Mark Gatiss, Steven Moffat, and Steve Thompson (who has written three episodes). It's nice to see the BBC using the television series to attract readers to the original stories. Still to come: THE VALLEY OF FEAR and THE CASEBOOK OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.
586. An alert for Los Angelenos: Les Klinger will be featured at a book-reading and signing for IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES at Contrapuntal Hall in Los Angeles on Dec. 13; tea, cookies, and champagne. It's free, but reservations are recommended. Details at <www.lesklingersigning.bpt.me>.
587. Steve Tribe offers the background and inside story of the BBC's "Sherlock" television series, complete with interviews with the principals, color photographs on every page, images of deleted scenes, and much more, in SHERLOCK: CHRONICLES (London: BBC Books, 2014; 320 pp., £25.00); it's a splendid book, and a grand way to understand and how much enthusiasm, and hard work, the creators, cast, and crew have brought to the series, and why it is so popular. Recommended.
588. Production is underway on ITV's three-part dramatization of Julian Barnes' novel ARTHUR & GEORGE (May 14 #3). The cast includes Martin Clunes as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Arsher Ali as George Edalji, and Hattie Morahan as Jean Leckie, and the Daily Mail ran a story on Nov. 12 with colorful on-set photographs of Clunes in costume <www.tinyurl.com/nhrawe>.
589. Nov 14 #5: Daniel Smith's excellent THE SHERLOCK HOLMES COMPANION: AN ELEMENTARY GUIDE, first published in 2009 (Feb 10 #4), now has a second edition (London: Aurum Press, 2014; 224 pp., £16.99/$27.99), brought up to date; it's an interesting, attractive, and useful book, with summaries for each of the stories, essays on Conan Doyle, Holmes, and the Canon, interviews with actors and authors, and splendid artwork and illustrations, many in full color. It's nicely done indeed, and suitable for both beginners and old hands. Recommended.
590. Here's the logo for Shopping Sherlock, an on-line shopping app that "instantly finds the best deals and lowest prices on millions of products"; the app is free, but there's also a system of usage and team commissions if you want to become an affiliate and persuade others to be affiliates, so it's a shopping pyramid scheme. Details at <www.shoppingsherlock.com>.

591. William Bruce Briggs died on June 11. Bill was an engineer, a sports fan, and an enthusiastic Sherlockian, presiding over McMurdo's Camp, which was both a Sherlockian society and an extensive and imaginative web-site that's still live and well worth exploring <www.mcmurdoscamp.wordpress.com>.
592. David Stuart Davies will be one of the speakers (on "221B Baker Street") at the Crime Writers Festival in New Delhi, Jan. 17-18; their web-site is at <www.crimewritersfestival.com>.
593. Chris Caswell, former owner of the Baker Street Emporium, now offers a variety of Sherlockiana at Sherlock's Home at Etsy, one of his items being an (empty) bottle of Sherlock's Claret commissioned by the Emporium in 1995; <www.tinyurl.com/kxvzxba>. The magic word "Scuttlebutt" will get you a 10% discount.
594. People who buy British books should keep the Book Depository in mind: owned by Amazon, it offers Amazon-style discounts and free shipping to the U.S., and this is quite useful for books like Steve Tribe's SHERLOCK: CHRONICLES (Nov 14 #4), which so far doesn't have an American edition. See for yourself at <www.bookdepository.com>.
595. Evy Herzog reports that the Easton Press is offering a leather-bound signed edition of Nicholas Meyer's THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION for $99.00; details at <www.tinyurl.com/k7vqokq>. You can search for [sherlock holmes] to see other Sherlockian titles.
596. WHITE FIRE, by Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child (New York: Grand Central Publishing, 2013; 368 pp., $27.00), is the seventh in their series of suspense novels about FBI special agent Pendergast; it begins with their account of the dinner at which Arthur Conan Doyle met Oscar Wilde, proceeds to modern-day Colorado, and involves (among other things) a search for the manuscript of the long-lost last Sherlock Holmes story.
597. The Spanish artist Marco Navas is offering a "Sherlockians" collection of twelve 7-cm figurines of Sherlock Holmes, Dr. Watson, and others from the Canon, hand-crafted in resin and hand-painted for €35.00 each; details at <www.marconavas.com> or by e-mail <marconavas@telecable.es>.

598. Nov 14 #6: And there's plenty of theatrics to consider: Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot; or Holmes for the Holidays" is being performed at the Barn Community Playhouse in Tillamook, Ore., through Dec. 6; their website's at <www.tillamooktheater.com>. And at the Rochester Repertory Theatre, Rochester, Minn., through Dec. 6 <www.rochesterrep.org>, at the Vertigo Theatre, Calgary, Alta., through Dec. 7 <www.vertigotheatre.com>, at the Knoxville Downtown, Knoxville, Tenn., through Dec. 14; their web-site is at <www.theatreknoxville.com>. Also at the Santa Paula Theater Center, Santa Paula, Calif., until Dec. 21 <www.santapaulatheatercenter.org> and the Live Theatre Workshop, Tucson, Ariz., through Dec. 28 <www.livetheatreworkshop.org>. It's also coming up at TheatreWorks, Milford, Conn., Dec. 5-Jan. 3 <www.theatreworks.us>, and at Community Players, Beatrice, Neb., Dec. 11-14 <www.beatricecommunityplayers.com>.
599. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is being performed at the Lower Columbia College's Rose Center in Longview, Wash., through Dec. 6 <www.lcc.ctc.edu>. And it's scheduled at the Doris Harper-White Community Playhouse in Flagstaff, Ariz., Jan. 30-Feb. 15, 2015 <www.theatrikos.com>.
600. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" is being produced at the Repertory East Playhouse in Santa Clarita, Calif., through Dec. 13 <www.repeastplayhouse.org>.
601. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is being performed at the Austin Playhouse in Austin, Texas, through Dec. 21; their web-site's at <www.austinplayhouse.com>.
602. John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" is playing at the Chemainus Theatre Festival in Chemainus, B.C., through Dec. 22 <www.chemainustheatrefestival.ca>.
603. Bob and Barry Cryer's new play "Mrs. Hudson's Christmas Corker" is set in the kitchen at 221B Baker Street, and will be presented at Wilton's Music Hall in London, Dec. 2-31 <www.wiltons.org.uk>. The subtitled of the play is "Your Goose Is Cooked, Mr. Holmes..."
604. "Sherlock Holmes in Brentwood" (the new play-reading series curated and introduced by Les Klinger) will reprise Bonnie MacBird's version of "The Blue Carbuncle" at the Contrapuntal Performance Hall in Brentwood (Los Angeles) on Dec. 6 and 7 <www.brownpapertickets.com/event/940506>.
605. "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" will be performed at the Owen Street Community Arts Centre in Atherstone (Warwickshire), Dec. 11-12; presented by the Leading Players, written by R. Sandland and J. Kitchen, and adapted by Dawn Teagles <www.oscacentre.co.uk>.
606. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" will have its second production at the McCarter Theatre Center in Princeton, N.J., Mar. 10-29, 2015 <www.mccarter.org>.

607. Dec 14 #1: Breaking news (as CNN and other networks like to proclaim): The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes have announced that their ASH Wednesday dinner at 6:30 pm on Wednesday, Jan. 7, will be held at Annie Moore's (50 East 43rd Street, between Madison and Vanderbilt Avenues). O'Casey's, established in 1974 and where the ASH have met for years, has abruptly closed.
609. Welcome news for people who don't read Swedish: Mattias Boström has reported that the German publisher Bertelsmann has purchased translation rights for his FRÅN HOLMES TILL SHERLOCK [FROM HOLMES TO SHERLOCK] (Aug 13 #4) and that a German translation is underway. And there are plans for a translation into English with publication possible in 2016.
610. TopFoto <www.topfoto.co.uk> is a British agency that offers access to some three and a half million images, many of them quite interesting; search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] to see what's available.
611. Alexander Orlov has reported "The Return of Mukhtar", a Russian 45-minute television series (2007) about a police investigation team that includes a brave and loyal dog (Mukhtar); one of the episodes was called "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and Alexander reports many Sherlockian allusions in the program, which you can view (in Russian) at <www.tinyurl.com/n8d2nqr>.
612. "He was always Sherlock Holmes-ian. He was Basil Rathbone. In other words he was always musing about something." Adam West, in an interview reported by Digital Spy (Nov. 12), occasioned by the release of the Blu-ray set of "Batman: The Complete TV Series".
613. The Museum of London has posted some nice video at YouTube, by way of publicizing their on-going exhibition <www.tinyurl.com/ns8s66n>, including an interesting three-minute "Sir Ian McKellen on Sherlock Holmes".
614. Bob Byrne presides over an interesting blog called "Black Gate: Adventures in Fantasy Literature" and casts his net widely, recently posting on "The Public Life of Sherlock Holmes: Solar Pons" <www.tinyurl.com/mjudnrk>, including a link to his Solar Pons web-site <www.solarpons.com>, where you'll find the latest (Nov. 2014) issue of The Solar Pons Gazette.

615. P. D. James died on Nov. 27. Highly regarded for her mystery novels featuring Chief Inspector Dalgleish, she also wrote science fiction, a sequel to Jane Austen's PRIDE AND PREJUDICE, an introduction to the Random House/Vintage Books edition of THE COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES (2009), and an interesting chapter about "The Tenant of 221B Baker Street and the Parish Priest from Cobhole in Essex" in her TALKING ABOUT DETECTIVE FICTION (2009).
616. Dec 14 #2: Graham Moore's pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (Nov 10 #8), published in Britain as THE HOLMES AFFAIR (Feb 11 #1), was a N.Y. Times best seller; if you have been wondering what he has been doing since then, he has written the screenplay for "The Imitation Game" (the new film that stars Benedict Cumberbatch as Alan Turing).
617. Heuer Publishing <www.hitplays.com> offers scripts of four Sherlock Holmes plays. Three of them are two-act plays by C. P. Stanchich: "Sherlock Holmes and the Devil of Doomsmoor" (2008), "Sherlock Holmes and the Spinsters of Blackmead" (2010), and "Sherlock Holmes: John Watson's Body" (2012); $7.50 each. And Roy C. Booth's 10-minute one-act play "The Unmasking of Sherlock Holmes" (2007) can be read without charge at their web-site.
618. Tom Tierney died on July 12. Credited in his N.Y. Times obituary as having almost single-handedly revived the lost art of paper-doll making, he created more than 400 paper-dolls books, including a delightful SHERLOCK HOLMES PAPER DOLLS (2009); it's still in print and available at <www.amazon.com>.
619. Col. Percy H. Fawcett, who met Conan Doyle in 1910 and then disappeared into the Amazon jungle, is discussed by Roy Pilot and Alvin Rodin's THE ANNOTATED LOST WORLD (1996) and David Grann's THE LOST CITY OF Z (2009); Radio Times reported earlier this year that Benedict Cumberbatch will star in the film based on Grann's book, with production scheduled to begin early next year in Belfast.
620. Stu Shiffman died on Nov. 26. He was an inspired artist who contributed to the worlds of Sherlock Holmes and of science fiction, an enthusiastic member of The Sound of the Baskervilles in Seattle, and for many years a frequent poster to The Hounds of the Internet, for whom he created an impressive logo <www.sherlockian.net/hounds>.
621. Holmes on the Range (previously known as The Desert Prospectors of Arizona) have created a magnifying-glass tie/lapel pin for the society with Sherlock Holmes' initials on the handle; it's 20 mm long and available to everyone for $5.00 postpaid (or in exchange for a pin from another society). Bob StClair <bobstclair@gmail.com> will be happy to provide more information.
622. Further to the report (Mar 11 #6) that the Roundabout Theatre Company production of Cole Porter's musical "Anything Goes" includes a scene in which the hero, trying to escape capture aboard ship, appears on deck in disguise with Inverness, deerstalker, calabash pipe, and an absurd beard, there is video of the entire show at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/m3ajjt>; the 2-minute Sherlockian scene stars at 57:13.
623. The Scottish Book Trust celebrated Book Week Scotland last month by asking people to vote in an on-line poll for the nation's favorite literary character, and the winner was Francis Crawford of Lymond, followed by Begbie, Detective Inspector Rebus, and then Sherlock Holmes. Frances Crawford appears in the late Dorothy Dunnett's Lymond Chronicles, and it is possible that there was a campaign by fans of Crawford, who was described as an exile, a scholar, a soldier, a musician, a master of disguise, an outlaw, and a noble, in six novels set in 16th-century Europe.
624. Dec 14 #3: George Sturm ("Neil Gibson") died on Nov. 25. He was a special agent for the FBI, and enthusiastic about both Sherlock Holmes and the Civil War, writing for The Baker Street Journal about a Civil War antecedent for the Porlock cipher. George also was a dedicated member of Mrs. Hudson's Cliffdwellers, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1979.
625. Kelvin I. Jones has written and published a long list of books and articles about Sherlock Holmes, and about horror, supernatural, and crime, over the years, and many of them are available now as e-books. There are descriptions and much more at his web-site <www.cunningcrimebooks.co.uk>.
626. Ashvin Rajan reports that there's a biography of Prof. Moriarty on-line in the MacTutor History of Mathematics Archive <www.tinyurl.com/pgcck4v>, and (thanks to the wonders of digitization) you can read H. W. Gould's article "The Case of the Strange Binomial Identities of Professor Moriarty" (1972) <www.tinyurl.com/myywbcl>, and Bradley E. Schaefer's article on "Sherlock Holmes and Some Astronomical Connections" (1993) <www.tinyurl.com/ox3tjo3>.
627. Sherlock to the rescue: KLM's commercial shows how they use a dog detective to find owners of forgotten items left on planes <www.tinyurl.com/mxd22s3>. The commercial was spotted by Eric Blau, but (alas) it's only a commercial: KLM doesn't really have a dog who really does that.
628. The late John Ruyle, a delightful humorist and a skilled printer who wrote, printed, bound, and published a long series of parodies that featuring Turlock Loams and Dr. Fatso, also presided over the Quaker Street Irregulars and is sadly missed. THE CANON OF TURLOCK HOLMES, with commentary by Ray and Greta de Groat and an introduction by Michael Kean, offers a nice look at John's delightful work, and it has been published by George Vanderburgh (203; 262 pp., $30.00). The publisher's address is Box 50, R.R.4, Eugenia, ON N0C 1E0, Canada <www.batteredbox.com>.
629. "Wait Wait...Don't Tell Me" is an amusing series broadcast by National Public Radio, and Samantha Wolov reports that the program that aired on Nov. 8 was partly Sherlockian: "Elementary, My Dear (Dale) Watson" featured country singer Dale Watson answering questions about Sherlock Holmes. You can listen to the program at <www.tinyurl.com/l6hl7cz>.
630. The California Artists Radio Theatre was founded more than 50 years ago by Peggy Webber, who worked with Rathbone and Bruce on their old radio series, and adapted, produced, and directed the CART productions of Gillette's play "Sherlock Holmes" and Conan Doyle's story "Selecting a Ghost" (Jul 05 #1). Those recordings, and many other non-Sherlockian productions, are available on CDs and as downloads at their web-site <www.cartradio.com>.
631. Alexander Orlov has reported that Yuri Grymov's dramatization of "The Lost World" is now playing in Moscow (in Russian), and it's grand that the Internet makes both information and a video preview so easily available: the URLs are <www.tinyurl.com/jwkrw4w> and <www.tinyurl.com/maytw86>. Google Translate will help with the text. This isn't the first dramatization of the story: there's at least one other, by Nobby Dimon, and it was performed at the Queen's Theatre in Hornchurch in 2003 <www.tinyurl.com/m6oej7a>.
632. Dec 14 #4: Samuel M. Gerber ("The Final Problem") died on Jan. 9. He had a long career with the American Cyanamid Company, specializing in the chemistry and technology of dyes, and it was his enjoyment of Sherlock Holmes, he explained, that led to his interest in forensic chemistry. He lectured often on "Sherlock Holmes, Chemist" and edited CHEMISTRY AND CRIME: FROM SHERLOCK HOLMES TO TODAY'S COURTROOM (1983), and co-edited MORE CHEMISTRY AND CRIME: FROM MARSH ARSENIC TEST TO DNA PROFILE (1997). He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1980.
633. The artist Charles Wysocki (1928-2002) specialized in Americana, and there is a web-site at <www.charleswysocki.com> that shows his work. His print "Hound of the Baskervilles" was published in 1997 (Sep 10 #7), and now is available as a 1000-piece jigsaw puzzle ($13.95).

634. Collectors may own one or both of the editions of THE BLUE CARBUNCLE published by The Baker Street Irregulars in 1948. Christopher Morley's introduction is delightful, and so is a discovery reported by William R. Cochran in the December issue of The Camden House Journal (published by The Occupants of the Empty House): a book dealer once offered a copy of the trade edition, noting that "A contemporary member of the BSI reveals, in a long inscription, that the BSI remaindered these volumes at $1.00 each and he is thus sending them as Christmas cards." The inscription is dated in 1950, but the dealer didn't identify who it was wrote it. Does anyone have one of these Christmas-card copies?
635. Jerry Margolin spotted Sherlockian cover art on the reissue CD album "Has Anyone Here Seen Sigfried?" recorded by a progressive rock band called Pavlov's Dog in 1977 but not released officially until 2007; also available as MP3 downloads, the songs can be sampled at Amazon.
636. Arguments about the preservation of Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, continue: the DFN Foundation plans to convert the house into a school (Sep 14 #6), but the BBC reported (Dec. 14) that English Heritage has said that a proposed extension might mean the building "no longer warranted its listed status," and the Victorian Society also has opposed the conversion. David Forbes-Nixon said in response that "we can do something very special to preserve the existing house," adding that "we can create the best special needs school in the south of England and it would be a wonderful site to do that." The BBC story <www.tinyurl.com/kguv8jf> includes a rendering of the house and the proposed extension.
637. The WCRS [Written Communications Radio Service] RadioStage presented original radio dramas for a radio reading service for the blind between 2000 and 2004, including "The Sherlock Holmes Assignment" (30 minutes). The program was written by Michael Elliott and David Binkley, and you can listen to it at <www.reallybadmovie.weebly.com/daves-radio-plays.html>.
638. The Sherlockian Calendar, maintained by Ron Fish and Sue and Ben Vizoskie, is at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>; it's a helpful list of upcoming Sherlockian events, for anyone who would like to know what's happening when and where; you can contact Ron at <ronf404@aol.com> if you would like to have a meeting or conference listed.
639. Dec 14 #5: "The Rivals" is a 30-minute series that began on BBC Radio 4 in 2011: "Inspector Lestrade was made to look a fool in the Sherlock Holmes stories," and he is now writing his memoirs while working with Holmes' rivals. Phil Attwell reports four new programs, beginning on Dec. 31 with Ernest Bramah's "The Knight's Cross Signal Problem"; you can listen to all four of the new programs at <www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b04vkmhh>, and you can purchase earlier programs from iTunes.
640. There's now a trade paperback edition of Michael Robertson's MORIARTY RETURNS A LETTER (New York: Minotaur, 2014; 263 pp., $15.99); it's the fourth in his series about Reggie Heath, the London barrister who has offices in the building at 221B Baker Street, and a lease that requires him to answer Sherlock Holmes' mail (Dec 13 #6), and it's nicely done indeed.
641. Ian Stewart's PROFESSOR STEWART'S CASEBOOK OF MATHEMATICAL MYSTERIES (New York: Basic Books, 2014; 307 pp., $16.99) is his third collection of mathematical puzzles, tricks, curiosities, and problems, many of them involving Hemlock Soames and Dr. John Watsup, who live across the street from Holmes and Watson and add a lot of humor. Here's your chance to learn all about hexakosioihexekontahexaphobia, and much more.
642. Alexander Orlov has noted the BBC Genome Product <www.genome.ch.bbc.co.uk>, which "contains the BBC listings information which the BBC printed in Radio Times between 1923 and 2009," and will be useful to those who want to track down programs broadcast by the BBC in those years.
643. The Beeman's Christmas Annual for 2014 is a 36-page booklet offering tributes to the late Wally Walthen and a series of scholarly papers devoted to "The Musgrave Ritual", all by members of The Occupants of the Empty House; the cost of the Annual plus all twelve issues of The Camden House Journal for 2015 is $21.00 postpaid, and checks (payable to the society) should be sent to: The Camden House Journal, Box 21, Zeigler, IL 62999.
644. Further to the report (Sep 14 #7) that producer Antonio R. Marion was said developing a new Sherlock Holmes play, he has now announced that "Sherlock Holmes" will be coming to Broadway in 2017: the play will be written by Rachel Wagstaff and Duncan Abel and will offer "a new and deeply theatrical exploration of the mind of the famous detective, while remaining faithful to the mysterious world created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle."
645. Robert Veld, author of the excellent THE STRAND MAGAZINE & SHERLOCK HOLMES (Jan 13 #3), is now researching copies of the Royal Edition of the Strand; at least three issues are known (Mar. 1891, Dec. 1892, and Dec. 1893), and he would appreciate hearing from anyone who owns these or other issues of the Royal Edition (which was printed on heavy paper and specially bound). His e-mail address is <robveld@bigpond.com>.
646. Warren Randall has formed a new Sherlockian society, The Khyber By-Passers, with membership open to those who have undergone heart surgery, know someone who has done so, and (at the request of Bob Katz) are pathologists or share the society's morbid interests. Warren notes that the actions of Violet de Merville caused her father to suffer a broken heart, thus justifying the name of the society. You can contact Warren at <whurdy@aol.com>.

647. Dec 14 #6: Further to the report (Sep 14 #4) about the pending sale of New Scotland Yard, the site has been sold to Abu Dhabi Investment Group for £370 million, well over the asking price of £250 million, and the site will become a "mixed-use residential development." It's not the historic Great Scotland Yard, well-known to Sherlock Holmes; New Scotland Yard has served as police headquarters since 1967. Proceeds from the sale will be invested in new technology for police officers, including body cameras and tablet computers.
648. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Beverly: Rockport Publishers, 2014; 320 pp., $25.00) is the latest in the publisher's "Classics Reimagined" series, offering a dozen cases colorfully illustrated by Sophia Martineck. Visit her web-site <www.martineck.com/e/projekt.php?number=170> to see her imaginative approach to the stories.
649. Jennie Paton has noted the latest from World Wrestling Entertainment: Sherlock Holmes vs. Vladimir Putin. Well, actually, it's from Ultimate Destiny Wrestling; you can watch the video at <www.tinyurl.com/kt6xazj>.
650. In case you're seeking a belated Christmas present for a Sherlockian collector: a copy of the Bazaar Number of The Student (Nov. 20, 1896) with the first appearance of Conan Doyle's parody "The Field Bazaar" will be offered at auction at Lyon & Turnbull in Edinburgh on Jan. 28, estimated at £1,000-£1,200, with a starting bid of £900 <www.tinyurl.com/nrmbsq7>.
651. David Harnois has recorded "A Scandal in Bohemia" for his "I Am Lost Without My Boswell" web-site <www.iamlostwithoutmyboswell.com>, where you can listen to the 44-minute dramatized reading; it's nicely done, and "The Red-Headed League" is scheduled for January.
652. "Thank you Arthur Conan Doyle for creating the enigmatic character of Sherlock Holmes. It has always been an inspiration to us." That's from the opening credits of the new Indian film "Samrat & Co."; you can see a trailer at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/p9tbksc>, and while the DVD (in Hindi with English subtitles) is not yet available here, you might find it at eBay. The film's an interesting modern mystery, with hints of Robert Downey Jr., Benedict Cumberbatch, and even a bit of Tony Shalhoub.
653. "Includes a rules & solutions book, case cards, a detective's notebook, & an egg timer," according to the box that contains THE SHERLOCK HOLMES PUZZLE CASE (New York: Sterling Innovation, 2014; $12.95); the case cards present 120 puzzles and riddles, and they make for a nice parlor game.

654. SHERLOCK HOLMES: A SELECTION OF HIS GREATEST CASES (London: Arcturus, 2014; 372 pp., $24.95) offers "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and a dozen short stories, with some of Sidney Paget's illustrations and an appreciative introduction by Martin Edwards; cloth-bound and in a handsome slipcase.
655. Judith Freeman's useful index to The Serpentine Muse (published by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes since 1975) is available from her by e-mail as an Excel spreadsheet <judith-freeman@hotmail.com>, and the ASH web-site <www.ash-nyc.com> has information on subscribing to the Muse (back issues are unfortunately not available).

656. Dec 14 #7: The Order of Canada was established in 1967 to recognize outstanding merit or distinguished service, and one of its newest members is Peter Calamai, who was honored "for his achievements as a science journalist and for his contributions to the cause of literacy." Congratulations to Peter Calamai, now C.M. as well as B.S.I.
657. INVESTIGATING SHERLOCK HOLMES: SOLVED & UNSOLVED MYSTERIES (Oakville: Mosaic Press, 2014; 239 pp., $17.95) is a collection of Sherlockian scholarship by Hartley R. Nathan and Clifford S. Goldfarb (with assistance from Joseph Kessel and John Linsenmeyer), and it's nice indeed to have the results of their investigations conveniently available; they have focused on the many Jewish aspects of the Canon, with side trips into lawyering, restaurants, and weaponry, and they present their discoveries with careful attention and with considerable humor.
658. Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" continues to offer interesting content, including podcasts recorded by Scott and Burt Wolder. Their latest podcast (#72) was posted on Blue Carbuncle Day, and they invite you to celebrate a belated Christmas by listening to "The Sherlockian Tannenbaum" at <www.tinyurl.com/mwppqcu>.
660. Paul Laudiero's amusing SH*T ROUGH DRAFTS (San Francisco: Chronicle Books, 2014; 135 pp., $12.95), is subtitled "pop culture's favorite books, movies, and TV shows as they might have been, and The Classics include one-page alternatives for "The Speckled Band", "The Red-Headed League", and "The Hound of the Baskervilles".
661. Colin Mochrie, most famous for his appearances on the television improvisation program "Whose Line Is It Anyway?", has obviously enjoyed writing NOT QUITE THE CLASSICS (New York: Diversion Books, 2013; 192 pp., $14.99); he bookends the first and last lines of classic books and poems around his own versions, one of which ("A Study in Ha Ha") is Sherlockian.
662. Fred Thursfeld's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE TERRIBLE SECRET (London: MX Publishing, 2012; 183 pp., $14.95) offers a capsule history of the First World War, and an account of Holmes' pursuit of an exotic dancer in hopes of retrieving the dire scientific secret she received from a Swiss patent clerk in Zurich. Mike Hogan's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE SCOTTISH QUESTION (2014; 196 pp., $14.95) involves Holmes and Watson in a pursuit of the long-lost Crown of Scotland and a battle against Scots nationalists. And Gary Lovisi's THE MYSTERY SURROUNDING WATSON'S LOST DISPATCH BOX (2014; 152 pp., $9.95) is a story set in modern Boston, where a bookstore owner finds an author's copy of The Strand Magazine and what appears to be a page torn from Watson's diary, and quickly becomes involved with drug dealers and corrupt politicians and police; he's assisted by a street-smart young man, and they use Sherlockian methods in their investigation. The publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and at <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.

663. Dec 14 #8 The Guardian reported (Dec. 10) that BBC Worldwide (the commercial arm of the BBC) has struck a deal with Kuwait-backed London Resort Company Holdings that allows BBC programs and characters to be "brought to life" at a new £2 billion theme park and holiday resort that's planned to be built by the Thames estuary in north Kent, scheduled to open in 2020. The Guardian's story was headlined "Sherlock World?"
664. And as usual, there's Sherlockian theater afoot: Michael Mendenian and John Weagly's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Goose" is playing at the Raven Theatre in Chicago through Jan. 4 <www.raventheatre.com>.
665. Katie Forgette's play "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" is being performed at the Jericho Arts Centre in Vancouver, B.C., through Jan. 10 <www.jerichoartscentre.com>.
666. Daniel and Tom Clarkson's "Potted Sherlock" ("all 60 Sherlock Holmes stories in just 80 elementary minutes") is running at the Vaudeville Theatre in London through Jan. 11 <www.pottedsherlock.com>.
667. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" will be produced at B Street Theatre in Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 6 through Feb. 7 <www.bstreettheatre.org>; this Watson is the "trusty side-kick to Sherlock Holmes, loyal engineer who built Bell's first telephone, unstoppable supercomputer that became reigning "Jeopardy!" champ, and amiable techno-deweeb who, in the present day is looking for love." There's a five-minute video about the play's background at <www.tinyurl.com/phd7ahv>.
668. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Flint Community Players in Flint, Mich., Jan. 29-Feb. 8; their web-site is at <www.flintcommunityplayers.com>. Also at Theatre 98 in Fairhope, Alaska, July 23-Aug. 2, 2015 <www.theatre98.org>, and at the Cannery Stage in Penticton, B.C., Nov. 12-Dec. 15, 2015 <www.manyhatstheatre.com>.
669. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is scheduled at the Doris Harper-White Community Playhouse in Flagstaff, Ariz., Jan. 30 to Feb. 15, 2015 <www.theatrkos.com>. Also at the Magenta Theater in Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 25-Oct. 10 <www.magentatheater.com>.
670. Anthony and Marcia Milgrom Dodge's "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror" is scheduled by the Cortland Repertory Theatre in Cortland, N.Y., July 29-Aug. 6, 2015 <www.cortlandrep.org>.
671. "The Modern Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" offers an interesting approach to the Canon, with the Jet City Improv responding to an audience member's presentation of a mystery; the theater is in Seattle, and performances are from Jan. 8 to Feb. 13 <www.tinyurl.com/oqljxxc>.
672. Alden Nowlan and Walter Learning's "The Incredible Murder of Cardinal Tosca" on the schedule at the Scarborough Guild Theatre in Scarborough, Ont., Jan. 9-24 <www.theatrescarborough.com>.

Jan 15 #1:

1. Sherlockians (and Holmesians) gathered in New York to celebrate the Great Detective's 161st birthday during the long weekend from Jan. 7 to Jan. 11. The festivities began with the traditional ASH Wednesday dinner sponsored by The Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes at Annie Moore's, and continued with the Christopher Morley Walk led by Jim Cox and Dore Nash on Thursday morning, followed by the usual lunch at McSorley's.
2. The Baker Street Irregulars' Distinguished Speaker at the Midtown Executive Club on Thursday evening was Alan Bradley, co-author of MS. HOLMES OF BAKER STREET (2004), and author of the award-winning "Flavia de Luce" series; the title of his talk was "Ha! The Stars Are Out and the Wind Has Fallen" (his paper will be published in the next issue of The Baker Street Journal).

3. The William Gillette Luncheon at Moran's Restaurant was well attended, as always, and the Friends of Bogie's at Baker Street (Paul Singleton and Andrew Joffe) entertained the audience with an updated version of "The Sherlock Holmes Cable Network" (2000). The luncheon also was the occasion for Al Gregory's presentation of the annual Jan Whimsey Award (named in memory of his wife Jan Stauber), which honors the most whimsical piece in The Serpentine Muse last year: the winner (Jenn Eaker) received a certificate and a check for the Canonical sum of $221.17. And Otto Penzler's traditional open house at the Mysterious Bookshop provided the usual opportunities to browse and buy.
4. The Irregulars and their guests gathered for the BSI annual dinner at the Yale Club, where Paul Martin proposed the preprandial first toast to Inez Bergquist as The Woman. The dinner's agenda featured the traditional BSI toasts and rituals, Michael Dirda's report on Langdale Pike's participation in the Civil War and other important events, Terry Hunt's tribute to Christopher Morley, and David Stuart Davies' one-man multi-voice performance of an unrecorded but almost Canonical episode at Baker Street and elsewhere.
5. Mike Whelan (the BSI's "Wiggins") presented the BSI's Tip of the Deerstalker Awards to Marsha Pollak, Ralph Hall, George McCormack, and Jim Saunders, and a Two-Shilling Award to Mary Ann Bradley. This year's Birthday Honours (Irregular Shillings and Investitures) were awarded to Bill Mason ("White Mason"), James O'Brien ("Knowledge of Chemistry.--Profound"), Chrys Kegley ("Rachel Howells"), Kiyoshi Arai ("The Shoso-in Near Nara"), Emily Miranker ("Lady Hatty St. Simon"), Kristina Manente ("Grace Dunbar"), Marino C. Alvarez ("Hilton Soames"), and Jeffery Hart ("Henry Baker").
6. An enthusiastic crowd attended this year's Gaslight Gala at the Manhattan Club, where the agenda featured toasts, music, a show-and-tell by Bob Zatz ("On Dr. Watson's Guns"), and theatrics that included performances of William Gillette's "The Painful Predicament of Sherlock Holmes" and some original skits, and much more.
7. Some of the more fervent (or perhaps hard core) Sherlockians gathered after the dinners at O'Lunney's Irish Pub to honor long-standing traditions such as staying until at least 2:21; another tradition calls for newly-Investitured Irregulars to buy a round of tequila shots.

8. Jan 15 #2: On Saturday morning Covent Garden West (the dealers room at the Roosevelt Hotel) welcomed sellers and buyers, and authors and editors delighted to inscribe or sign their books. The Beacon Society held its annual meeting, and the Junior Bloodstain of The Clients of Adrian Mulliner featured Gayle Lange Puhl's new play "The Riddle of the Refurbished Room" (performed by Ken Vogel's hand puppets).
9. The BSI's Saturday-afternoon reception at the Yale Club offered entertainment, conversation, wining, and dining; Timothy S. Greer was honored as the winner of the Morley-Montgomery Award (a check accompanied by an attractive certificate) for the best contribution to The Baker Street Journal in 2014. The John H. Watson Fund benefited from energetic sales of tickets for the raffle prize (the set of five medals handcrafted by Maggie Schpak for The Curious Collectors of Baker Street), and an auction of attractive donations to the Fund.
10. The main Saturday-evening event was the annual "Very Irregular Lost in New York with a Bunch of Sherlockians" dinner arranged by Chrys Kegley and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street at O'Lunney's Times Square Pub, with 54 on hand for the festivities, and on Sunday morning a goodly crowd gathered at the Adventuresses of Sherlock Holmes' brunch at the Churchill Tavern.
11. A final note for those who want to plan ahead: The Baker Street Irregulars' next annual dinner will be held on Jan. 15, 2016. The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner likely will be on Jan. 9, 2016.
12. I've not reported on everything, I hasten to add; there will be much more detailed reports in the spring issue of The Baker Street Journal. The BSI appears quarterly, and subscriptions (four issues plus the Christmas Annual) cost $39.95 (to the U.S.) or $52.00 (elsewhere); payment by credit card or PayPal is welcome, or you can pay by check sent to the BSI (Box 583, Zionsville, IN 46077).
13. You can also subscribe at the BSI web-site at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>, which has interesting features such as articles from recent issues of the BSI, some of the papers written by winners of the Morley-Montgomery Awards, and information on the BSI's other publications and activities.
14. The title of The Baker Street Journal's 2014 Christmas Annual is "The Only Actor Who Ever Got It Right" (it's now in the hands of BSI subscribers, and not otherwise available unless you can find it at eBay or wherever), and it is a warm tribute to Douglas Wilmer, now 95 years old, and it includes his speech to the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's annual dinner in 1994.
15. The BSI's 2015 Christmas Annual will be a 40th-anniversary tribute to Nicholas Meyer's THE SEVEN-PER-CENT SOLUTION, both the book and the film; the Annual, edited by Steven Doyle, will commemorate the spark that ignited the great Sherlockian "boom" of the 1970s.
16. Al Gregory <gaslightandfog@verizon.net> offers (via e-mail) his 2015 edition of "The ABC of the BSI" (an alphabetical listing of Investitures, with recipients, from "Abbey Grange" to "Young Stamford") and "The Florin Society" (couples in which both spouses have received Irregular Shillings).

17. Jan 15 #3: OUT OF THE ABYSS is the latest volume in the Baker Street Irregulars Manuscript Series (2014; 229 pp., $39.95); edited by Andrew Solberg, Steven Rothman, and Robert Katz, it offers a facsimile of the original manuscript of "The Empty House", an annotated transcript, interesting commentary on both the manuscript and the story, artwork by Frederic Dorr Steele on the dust jacket, and a nice surprise if you (carefully) remove the dust jacket to inspect the cloth binding. Details, on the book, including the table of contents and one of the articles, are available at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
18. Sonia Fetherston's PRINCE OF THE REALM: THE MOST IRREGULAR JAMES BLISS AUSTIN (2014; 174 pp., $21.95) is the second volume in the BSI's biographical series, and it's a fine tribute to a fascinating man who was a collector, scholar, and mentor, and a good friend to many Sherlockians.
19. Also from the BSI is SHERLOCKIAN SATURDAYS AT THE PRATT, edited by William Hyder (2014; 192 pp., $21.95), offers a splendid survey of three decades of Canonical scholarship from the annual gatherings at Baltimore's Enoch Pratt Free Library. All of the BSI's books can be ordered using the BSI web-site or by mail (checks payable to The Baker Street Irregulars) from Michael H. Kean, 3040 Stoa Road, Pebble Beach, CA 93593; shipping for one book costs $5.95 to U.S./$22.95 elsewhere. Add $1.50/$5.00 for each additional book in the same shipment.
20. THE DRURY LANE THEATRE MYSTERY is Dennis Hoey's only screenplay, unproduced and only now published, found by Michael A. Hoey after his father died, and now available accompanied by Michael's account of his father's life and career, and a description and history of the Drury Lane (Indianapolis: Gasogene Books, 2014; 85 pp., $12.95) <www.gasogenebooks.com>. Dennis Hoey had a long career on stage, screen, radio, and television, almost always as a supporting character in roles that included Inspector Lestrade in Universal's "Sherlock Holmes" series, and of course Holmes, Watson, and Lestrade are all involved in Hoey's mystery at the Drury Lane.
21. One of the nicest things about modern technology is that it offers access to so much information, as can be seen easily in Gasogene's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND CONAN DOYLE IN THE NEWSPAPERS, VOLUME 1, 1881-1892, edited (and annotated) by Mattias Boström and Matt Laffey (2014; 306 pp., $32.95). They've scoured digitized archives and extracted and reprinted a treasure trove of articles that offer a fascinating look at what was to be found in print in those years, including (for example) the first commentary on the many mistakes in "Silver Blaze" (and the critics were not at all kind). There will be more volumes to come in the series, and that's nice news indeed for anyone who want to see just how valuable an institution the Press can be.

22. Also from Gasogene: 221 BBC, by Bert Coules (2014; 297 pp., $22.95) is an expanded and revised second edition of the 76-page booklet published by the Northern Musgraves in 1998, and it will be welcomed by all those who have enjoyed Bert's work on the BBC's radio series, which not only was the first (and the only) series to have dramatized all of the Canon but also was extended by Bert to include 15 apocryphal stories. Bert tells grand stories about how the series was made, and has a fine chapter ("Sherlock Speaks!") in which he discusses earlier appearances of Holmes and Watson on radio.
23. Jan 15 #4: Wipro Ltd. is a global information technology, consulting, and outsourcing company based in India, and The Times of India reported (Dec. 23) that Wipro has developed a cognitive computing system the company has named Holmes (as in heuristics and ontology-based learning machines and experimental systems). The newspaper wondered whether Wipro's Holmes would partner with IBM's Watson. It should be noted that IBM's Watson has nothing to do with the Canon; its name honors Thomas J. Watson, for many years the head of IBM.
24. There's no shortage of Sherlockian commercials, now on the Internet as well as on television; here's one from Sephora <www.tinyurl.com/l3ah2f4>, noted by Samantha Wolov.
25. The statues of Paddington Bear (Nov 14 #3) were sold at auction at Christie's web-site, but Sherlock Paddington, designed by Benedict Cumberbatch, was one of the select number of statues that were sold in a by-invitation-only live auction before the on-line event. The hammer price for Sherlock Paddington was £17,000 (not the most expensive Paddington, which was a W2 1RH bear designed by artist Tracey Quinn that sold for £58,000). You can see images of all the bears at <www.tinyurl.com/nt7qtqe>.
26. Further to the report (Oct 14 #8) of the new commercial DVD of Tom Baker's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1982), the voice-over commentary by Baker includes his recollection of playing both Holmes and Moriarty on stage, in the same play. And so he did, which qualifies him for the list of actors who have played both roles.
27. Alexander Orlov has been exploring the Associated Press' digitized archives and has found a nice photograph of the passport Sir Arthur Conan Doyle used when he visited the front during World War One <www.tinyurl.com/q2lfsmk>; it should be noted that the descriptive text isn't accurate.
28. Andrew Lane's YOUNG SHERLOCK: STONE COLD (London: Macmillan, 2014; 307 pp., £12.99) is the seventh in his imaginative series; Sherlock now is a student at Oxford, but quickly becomes involved with bizarre crimes and criminals. And Lane has a second novel about Caleb Challenger, grandson of Professor George Edward Challenger: LOST WORLDS: SHADOW CREATURES (London: Macmillan, 2014; 320 pp., £12.99) has Caleb and his friends still in pursuit of supposedly mythological creatures, and still in conflict with a sinister corporation that wants to exploit them. The books are nicely written and the stories well told, and both series will be interesting for young adults.
29. There's now a Sherlock Holmes Hostel in Vladivostok. Images are available at <www.booking.com/hotel/ru/sherlock-holmes-hostel.html>, and the cost is $7.00 a night for a bed in four-bed mixed dormitory room.
30. Shane Peacock's THE BOY SHERLOCK HOLMES is another well-written series for young adults, with a total of six books providing an interesting back-story for Holmes, Moriarty, Lestrade, and Irene Adler; the last in the series was BECOMING HOLMES (Toronto: Tundra, 2012; 245 pp., $9.99), and all of the titles are available as trade paperbacks. Peacock's interesting web-site for the series is at <www.theboysherlockholmes.com>, and there's more about his other work at <www.shanepeacock.ca>.

31. Jan 15 #5: And when did Tom Baker play both Holmes and Moriarty on stage, in the same play? In 1985, in Dublin, in the premiere of Hugh Leonard's "The Mask of Moriarty". There are other actors who have appeared in the role(s) in that play, including Geoffrey Palmer and Paxton Whitehead, and the script's available from Samuel French <www.samuelfrench.com>. But: name another performer who has appeared as both Holmes and Moriarty in an entirely different production.
32. The February issue of Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, continues a long annual tradition of honoring Sherlock Holmes' birthday, with Sherlockian artwork on the cover, an amusing pastiche by Terence Faherty, and reviews by Steve Steinbock of new Sherlockian books.
33. The Museum of London continues to offer intriguing events tied to its Sherlock Holmes Exhibition, including "Sleeping with Sherlock" on Feb. 14 and Mar. 28: the all-night event includes a three-course dinner, talks by detective specialists, comedy performances and improvised story-telling, the secrets of fingerprinting and blood-splatter analysis, grizzly ghost stories in the thick of night, a movie marathon, and a full English breakfast (all for £175.00). Their web-site <www.tinyurl.com/qg68kht> has details on all of the museum's Sherlockian events.
34. Y CYLCH BRITH (a Welsh translation of "The Speckled Band" that was arranged by The Deerstalkers of Welshpool) is now available from Y Lolfa, unofficial printers to the activist Welsh Language Society as a 60-page trade paperback (£3.95) <www.ylolfa.com> and <www.amazon.co.uk>.
35. The December issue of the electronic journal Ripperologist has Adam Woods' interesting article "Sherlock Holmes and the Polish Jew" (which includes a reprint of Sir Robert Anderson's 1903 article "Sherlock Holmes, Detective, As Seen by Scotland Yard"); Anderson was Assistant Commissioner of the London Metropolitan Police, and the Polish Jew was Aaron Kosminski, whom Anderson believed was Jack the Ripper. Woods' article discusses Conan Doyle and Scotland Yard as well as Sherlock Holmes. Ripperologist is devoted to all aspects of Jack the Ripper (who is mentioned in Hornung's story); contact editor Eduardo Zinna at <editorez@yahoo.co.uk> for information on how to subscribe.
36. Alexander Orlov has reported on a new HOLMES in Tajikistan <www.holmes.tj>; it's billed (in Russian) as the first search engine in the country, making it "convenient to look for the right information in your home town in Tajikistan."
37. It has been a long wait for fans of Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes (GARMENT OF SHADOWS was published in 2012), and Laurie R. King's DREAMING SPIES (New York: Bantam, 2015; 352 pp., $26.00) will welcome indeed. Russell and Holmes are en route from India to San Francisco (between events in THE GAME and LOCKED ROOMS), and are diverted to Japan and presented with a mystery that's finally solved only after they return to England; the characters are interesting and the plot both imaginative and complicated. Laurie has an excellent web-site at <www.laurierking.com> that's fun for both newcomers and old hands (you can also subscribe to her newsletter "Between the Lines: The Buzz from Laurie R. King").
38. Jan 15 #6: And what other performer has appeared as both Holmes and Watson on stage in an entirely different production? Kenneth Macmillan, who was seen as both The Great Detective and The Infamous Professor in the ballet "The Great Detective" at Sadler's Wells in London in 1953. Bert Coules has suggested another candidate: Jeremy Brett, in the play written for him by Jeremy Paul, in which Professor Moriarty actually was Sherlock Holmes (or at least "a conjuration of his fevered mind)."
39. "Mr. Holmes" (the film that stars Ian McKellen as an aged Holmes, based on Mitch Cullen's A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND), will be screened at the Berlin International Film Festival in February <www.berlinale.de>, and it should not be long before it's in theaters. And PBS-TV has announced that it will air "Arthur and George" (the television series based on Julian Barnes' novel, with Martin Clunes as Conan Doyle) on "Masterpiece" later this year.
40. Filming has begun on the "Sherlock" special and according to Mark Gatiss, in an interview with Paul Jones of Radio Times, it will "completely" solve the mystery of Moriarty's appearance at the end of the third season. The special may or may not air at Christmas. There's a (very) brief glimpse of Benedict Cumberbatch in BBC One's "Enjoy 2015" trailer available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/lqx2js6>.

41. "Missing since Jan. 4: Gillette Castle. Age 100+. Description: Castle-like and stony." That's the promotion for the Connecticut Humanities Council's "The Great Connecticut Caper" ("12 chapters, 12 authors, 12 illustrators, 1 story"), an imaginative on-line weekly serial that's well worth exploring <www.ctcaper.cthumanities.org>.
42. Anthony Horowitz's publisher reports that THE HOUSE OF SILK (Dec 11 #5) has sold more than 450,000 copies in more than 35 countries, so there will be a wide audience for his MORIARTY (London: Orion, 2014; 310 pp., £19.99) (New York: HarperCollins, 2014; 285 pp., $26.99). They'll not be disappointed: it's a well-written page-turner, finely plotted and with a surprise ending.
43. The story is set after the fateful battle at the Reichenbach, with Holmes and Watson only mentioned; the major characters are Scotland Yard Inspector Athelney Jones, Pinkerton investigator Frederick Chase, and American master criminal Clarence Devereux, and they're accompanied by interesting supporting characters.
44. For completists: the British edition of MORIARTY has extra content (a Sherlockian pastiche "The Three Monarchs"), and a variant sold exclusively at Waterstone's also included a Canonical crossword puzzle; Horowitz did not make a American signing tour, but the U.S. edition with an exclusive laid-in bookmark signed by the author is available the from Mysterious Bookshop <www.themyteriousbookshop.com>.
45. The web-site of The Priory Scholars of NYC now offers a chance to listen to three of the Priory Scholars of Fordham's broadcasts over WFUV in the very old days: "The Priory School" (1969), "The Second Stain" (1970), and "The Bruce-Partington Plans" (1970); go to <www.prioryscholarsnyc.wordpress.com> and click on "Radio Programmes" at the right. You will hear some familiar voices (some of the people who participated still come to the birthday festivities in New York in January).

46. Jan 15 #7: The Norwegian Explorers' "Christmas Annual 2014" has the theme "Pairings" and the authors range from Robert Brusic's thoughts about Sherlock Holmes and Helena Modjeska to Michael Eckman's nice tribute to Baring-Gould's ANNOTATED SHERLOCK HOLMES. Edited by Timothy Reich and Ray Reithmeier, the 50-page booklet can be ordered from Timothy Reich (6809 Pillsbury Avenue, Richfield, MN 55423; the cost is $8.00 postpaid (checks payable to The Norwegian Explorers, please).
47. Laurie R. King's MARY'S CHRISTMAS is an imaginative short story available as an e-story ($2.99) and as a signed 33-page paper copy ($10.00). Russell tells Holmes about one her thoroughly unusual Uncle Jake, and there's more information at Laurie's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/q96d4ko>.
48. The third issue of the resurrected Saturday Review of Literature was published this month, edited by George Fletcher, Jon Lellenberg, Don Pollock, and Phil Shreffler, and with articles that include James B. Saunders' memories of his teenage years with Chris Steinbrunner ("Irregulars of Auld"), Harrison Hunt's tribute to Christ Cella ("Christopher Morley's Beloved Punchinello"), and Derham Groves' report on a project carried out by his architecture students "(Designing the Conan Doyle Mystery Theatre)". $5.00 postpaid from Donald Pollock (521 College Avenue, Niagara Falls, NY 14305).
49. Patrick Gowers died on Dec. 30. He was an accomplished composer, and wrote a guitar concerto for John Williams, a Toccato for organ for Simon Preston, and (certainly most important for Sherlockians) he composed and conducted the splendid music for the Granada "Sherlock Holmes" television series.
50. The Fourth Garrideb is a new Sherlockian society devoted to coin collecting in connection with the Canon; Greg Ruby presides over the society, and he has created an interesting and colorfully-illustrated web-site that covers coins, medals, orders, decorations, wooden nickels, cryptocurrency, tokens, and much more <www.fourthgarrideb.com>.
51. Austin J. McLean ("The London Library") died on Jan. 16. He was the right man in the right place at the right time: as head of special collections at the University of Minnesota Library, he found the funds for and negotiated their acquisition of John Bennett Shaw's collection, and thus was instrumental in creating the wonderful Sherlock Holmes Collections in Minneapolis. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1990.
52. Bill Dorn has compiled a 42-minute DVD "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: A Comparison of Actors in Identical Scenes" with brief scenes from film and television versions of ten of the stories; it's not for sale, but he'll be happy to send copies for use in classroom environments <billdorn@mac.com>.
53. Sherlockian philately: Alexander Orlov has reported that last year Zanzibar issued 16 Cinderella mini-sheets, each with a different photograph of Conan Doyle, framed by an image of Watson (Vitaly Solomin) and Holmes (Vasily Livanov playing chess. Steve Trussel displays images of these and many other Sherlockian and Doylean stamps at his excellent (and colorful) web-site The Philatelic Sherlock Holmes <www.trussel.com/detfic/sholmes.htm>. It should be noted that Cinderellas are not real postage stamps, and that Zanzibar no longer is a country and thus has no postal service.

54. Jan 15 #8 Mike Poteet reported in a message to The Hounds of the Internet that this year is the 50th anniversary of the Broadway premiere of the musical "Baker Street", and Rod Mollise noted that once was included in the catalog of the Tams-Witmark Music Library. And is still is, in case you want to try to suggest that a local theater or school produce the show <www.tams-witmark.com>.
55. The birthday-festivities performance by Andrew Joffe and Paul Singleton at the William Gillette luncheon (Jan 15 #1) was recorded by Greg Oliver Bodine, and he has kindly made it available at YouTube (copyright 2015); you can watch it at YouTube <www.youtube.be/4BoTmQVUEYg>.
56. And if you want to see what things were like in London, the Sherlock Holmes Society of London proudly displays 125 photographs from this year's annual dinner <www.tinyurl.com/mjatsh9>; they're nicely captioned (roll your mouse over the images).
57. The gas-lamp era is has not ended: Michael Bragg notes that NPR's Ari Shapiro reported on NPR's "All Things Considered" on Jan. 15 that British Gas employs five lamplighters to tend to London's 1,500 gaslamps, still working and protected by law, thanks to British Heritage. You can read (and listen to) the story at <www.tinyurl.com/pjkk8nj>.
58. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot" is running at the Little Theatre of Alexandria in Alexandria, Va., through Feb. 7 <www.thelittletheatre.com>. And at the Academy of Performing Arts Playhouse in Orleans, Mass., through Feb. 15 <www.apacape.org>.
59. "The Speckled Band: An Adventure of Sherlock Holmes" (a new play by Timothy N. Evers) is scheduled at the Classical Theatre Company in Houston, Tex., Feb. 4-22 <www.classicaltheatre.org>.
60. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Carrollwood Players Theatre in Tampa, Fla., Feb. 13-Mar. 7 <www.carrollwoodplayers.org>
61. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (by R. Hamilton Wright and David Pichette) is scheduled at the Indiana Repertory Theatre in Indianapolis, Feb. 18-Mar. 1 <www.irtlive.com>.
62. The Frisco Area Children's Theater will present Flip Kobler and Cindy Marcus' new play "Baker Street Irregulars" at the Frisco Discovery Center in Frisco, Tex., Feb. 27-Mar. 7 <www.friscoacts.com>.

63. Alas: printing costs for this newsletter have risen slightly, and the new subscription rates for the ink-on-paper version now are $13.50 (domestic) and $21.50 (international). The electronic version is available (without charge, and with illustrations in color and live URLs) at the Red Circle's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/d8uoo80> as well as at Willis Frick's Sherlocktron <www.tinyurl.com/kl9gcll>.

64. Feb 15 #1: Still more news about last month's birthday festivities in New York: Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, almost certainly the tallest author of a Sherlockian pastiche (MYCROFT HOLMES, due from Titan later this year) attended the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars, and you can read more about it in Jonathan Blitzer's report for The New Yorker at <www.tinyurl.com/mb49798>, Randall Stock kindly notes that if you encounter a paywall, you run a Google search for ["best impression of someone with a low profile"] (you need to include the quotation marks).
65. Blitzer's story appeared in print in The New Yorker on Feb. 2, preceded by Nick Paumgarten's comments on the move of the magazine's offices from its headquarters at 4 Times Square to join the rest of its parent company Condé Nast at 1 World Trade Center. Paumgarten noted that there are "islands of safety" in the Times Square neighborhood, including one that will be familiar to those who fondly remember the Algonquin Hotel: the Red Flame diner, "still sincere in spite of a series of face-lifts."
66. Tim Dedopulos' THE SHERLOCK HOLMES PUZZLE COLLECTION (London: Carlton/SevenOaks, 2011; 288 pp., $5.99) offers 150 enigmas to test your logic, non-Sherlockian but presented by Holmes and others in the Canon. Such as: "I'd like you to consider the following sequence of numbers, Watson. They are 2, 5, 8, 11, 16, 14. What number less than 20 is the next in the line? I assure you that you do not need mathematical aptitude to arrive at the correct answer."
67. The winter issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) honors Conan Doyle's trip to Canada in 1914, and you can request a copy of the newsletter from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada <cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca>.
68. The 2013 Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture was presented at the Library by Bernard Lightman (on "Conan Doyle and the Scientific Naturalists"), and his paper has now been published for members of The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection; a limited number of copies are available if you join the Friends now. Their web-site at <www.acdfriends.org> has PayPal and creditcard capability, or you can contact Cliff Goldfarb (addresses above); the minimum donation of $25.00 brings you three issues of their newsletter and a copy of the 2014 Memorial Lecture (by Lyndsay Faye on "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Storytelling and the Passion of the Narrator").
69. Cliff Goldfarb will deliver the Cameron Hollyer Memorial Lecture this year (on "Arthur Conan Doyle's Waterloo") on June 27, in honor of the 200th anniversary of the Battle, and Canadian actor Robert H. Thomson will present a reading of Conan Doyle's one-act play "Waterloo".
70. Ravelry <www.ravelry.com> is a free knit-and-crochet on-line community and Melissa Ennis has noted their pattern for a "Dancing Men Muff" (there are quite a few other Sherlockian patterns available). Melissa also has found a Sherlock Holmes dog costume pattern available from McCall's (one of their "sewing patterns for today's fashion trends" <www.tinyurl.com/qch3jdc>).

71. Feb 15 #2: It's time for another mention of the delightful web-site "Basil Rathbone: Master of Stage and Screen" maintained by Marcia Jessen, who presents an excellent catalog of his work on stage, screen, radio, television, and records <www.basilrathbone.net>. There are opportunities to listen and view, and there's also a gallery of photographs: the page for the 1940s <www.tinyurl.com/nggdwhh> includes one that shows him with Nigel Bruce and Rupert Hughes, receiving his certificate of membership in The Baker Street Irregulars. The presentation was on Apr. 17, 1944, when Bruce also received a certificate of membership.
72. What number is next in the sequence 2, 5, 8, 11, 16, 14? The answer is 17. Why?
73. Bradford Morrow's THE FORGERS (New York: Mysterious Press, 2014; 242 pp., $24.00) is an imaginative mystery (and thriller) involving collectors, book dealers, forgers, and forgeries that include revelations in letters written by Arthur Conan Doyle; it's a well-written book, with an intriguing plot.
74. Jim Saunders has a proposal for the next Sherlock Holmes movie: Jabez Wilson receives reward money for exposing bank robber Vincent Spaulding, and moves to Indonesia, where he goes into business distilling gin using a special process and recipe; he heats the gin in a huge cauldron, more than 25 feet high, the largest cauldron in the world, and is quite successful, but has to call in Sherlock Holmes when saboteurs try to destroy the cauldron. The name of the movie? "The Giant Vat of Sumatra".
75. David Hale Smith's "Return of the Great American Indie Bookstore" is in the January issue of the in-flight magazine American Way, with a colorful report on how nice an independent brick-and-mortar bookstore can be; you can read the article on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/ph4x8r5>.
76. Michele B. Slung edited two interesting anthologies: I SHUDDER AT YOUR TOUCH (1991) and SHUDDER AGAIN (1993), each containing "22 tales of sex and horror"; the second anthology has stories by Ray Bradbury, Harlan Ellison, J. G. Ballard, and 19 others, according to the dust jacket, and one of the 19 others is Arthur Conan Doyle, whose "The Parasite" is described as a "masterpiece of sexual mesmerism and demonic destruction."
77. The Financial Post had a story (Jan. 30) about Tweed Marijuana Inc., Canada's first publicly-traded pot producer. The company uses "creative and engaging titles for its products," taking cues from "famous people who have worn tweed fabric throughout history." And one of their brands ("Bakerstreet") is named in honor of the street on which Sherlock Holmes lived. Their web-site's at <www.tinyurl.com/nmhn3u>.
78. More than 30 years ago a young Mitch Cullin visited John Bennett Shaw and Dorothy Shaw at their home in Santa Fe and filmed a delightful interview; footage from the visit has now been edited into a 25-minute "Conversation with John Bennett Shaw" <www.vimeo.com/118371969>, kindly reported by Jennie Paton. And yes, that's the Mitch Cullin who went on to write A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (2005), which has been dramatized as "Mr. Holmes" (starring Ian McKellen), due in theaters this year.

79. Feb 15 #3: Ken Ludwig's new play "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" premiered at Arena Stage in Washington to enthusiastic reviews in the press and from local Sherlockians; there's lots of energy and drama, and even more humor, in the script, acting, direction, and set design. The next productions will be at the McCarter Theatre Center in Princeton N.J., Mar. 10-29 <www.mccarter.org>, and at the Old Globe in San Diego, Calif., July 24-Aug. 23 <www.theoldglobe.org>. Recommended.
80. What number is next in the sequence 2, 5, 8, 11, 16, 14? The answer is 17. Why? The numbers are in increasing length when spelled out as words. Two has three letters, five has four, and 14 has eight. The only number less than 20 with nine digits is seventeen.
81. LeRoy Lad Panek offers an interesting survey in his AFTER SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE EVOLUTION OF BRITISH AND AMERICAN DETECTIVE STORIES, 1891-1914 (Jefferson: McFarland, 2014; 214 pp., $40.00); he begins earlier than 1891, continues with a discussion of what's unique about a detective story, and goes on to examine and review the Canon and the best of many authors who helped make the genre so much fun for such a wide and enthusiastic audience. The publisher's at <www.mcfarlandpub.com> (800-253-2817).
82. The next running of The Baker Street Irregulars' "The Silver Blaze" at Saratoga Racetrack in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., is scheduled for Aug. 1; more information is available from Candace Lewis <clewis1880@aol.com>.

83. The owners of Simpson's-in-the-Strand are looking for someone "to revitalize this magnificent space and name," which may well be bad news indeed for those who have fond memories of dining, and dining well, in an establishment that was known to Holmes and Watson (and mentioned in "The Dying Detective" and "The Illustrious Client"). Founded in 1828 as a coffee house and chess club, Simpson's became famous as a properly British restaurant serving properly British food, but that sort of tradition seems to be less important now both to locals and to tourists. You can visit their web-site <www.simpsonsinthestrland.co.uk> for what may be a last look at a true landmark of a vanishing era.
84. There's a sample from the new film "Mr. Holmes" (starring Ian McKellen) at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/otnf6un>. And McKellen has provided a teaser poster at his Facebook page <www.tinyurl.com/orwh2zu>.
85. Stepping Stones School has won final approval of its plan to convert Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, into a school for special-needs children (Sep 14 #6); the main part of the house will be largely preserved and restored, with changes to floor plans to allow for classrooms and bedrooms, and an extension will be built to house studios and other facilities.
86. There are three titles in Christian Klaver's series THE SUPERNATURAL CASE FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Charleston: CreateSpace, 2014): THE ADVENTURE OF THE SOLITARY GRAVE, THE ADVENTURE OF THE INNSMOUTH WHALER, and THE ADVENTURE OF THE LUSTROUS PEARL (each $6.00); we find Holmes and Watson involved with vampires, and with the Esoteric Order of Dagon, and Klaver has a website <www.christianklaver.com> (his personal motto is "writing the fantastic until it bleeds").

87. Feb 15 #4: Further to the item on Col. Percy H. Fawcett and the film based on David Grann's THE LOST CITY OF Z (Dec 14 #2), Benedict Cumberbatch won't be playing Fawcett, and will instead star in the title role in "Doctor Strange". Charlie Hunnam has now been cast as Fawcett; there's no word on whether the film will show Fawcett's meeting with Conan Doyle.
88. Benedict Cumberbatch and Sophie Hunter celebrated Valentine's Day by marrying, at St. Peter and St. Paul's Church in Mottistone on the Isle of Wight.
89. William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" has been restored, and had its world premiere in Paris on Jan. 31; it will be screened next during the San Francisco Silent Film Festival, May 28-June 1, and tickets will go on sale in March <www.silentfilm.org> (don't neglect the link to their "The Gillette Jollification" blog entry). You can also, thanks to the BBC News Magazine, see a three-minute clip from the film at <www.tinyurl.com/n5apa2r>.2
90. The Société Sherlock Holmes de France have published LE GUIDE DU FIM SHERLOCK HOLMES (1916), a 64-page profusely-illustrated discussion of the film and its actors, with articles by Thierry Saint-Joanis and Bernard Oudin; it is almost all in English, and costs €20.00 at <www.sshf.com/boutique.php>, where you can see thumb-nail images showing the results of their splendid research. Recommended.
91. The Beacon Society <www.beaconsociety.com> offers Jan Stauber grants of up to $500 to fund development of programs that will introduce young people to Sherlock Holmes in the U.S. and Canada; the deadline for grant applications is May 1, and details are available at the web-site.
92. Nicely timed to coincide with publicity for Martin Clunes' television series "Arthur & George": a series of thirty Conan Doyle letters pertaining to the Edalji Case <www.tinyurl.com/m5y2h25>, coming to auction at Bonhams in London on Mar. 18. The mini-series is scheduled to air on ITV in Britain in three weekly one-hour episodes beginning on Mar. 2; there's a one-minute trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/mq8d8ct>.
93. And Clunes has told Radio Times (Feb. 16) that he hopes to extend his role as Conan Doyle into a full series; Philippa Braithwaite, Clunes' wife and producer of the mini-series, explained that a longer series could combine real events from the author's life with fictional elements: "We have told only a few months of Conan Doyle's life in 'Arthur & George' so there's so much more there."
94. Adam Zanzie has launched an Indiegogo campaign to raise funds for his thesis project: adapting Conan Doyle's "The Parasite" into a short film; contributors get a copy of the film, and other perks depending on the amount contributed, and you can see a brief trailer at <www.tinyurl.com/lqnt4tz>.
95. Further to the item (Nov 11 #6) on "Sherlock Holmes 4D" (an 11-minute "comedy mystery adventure"), visitors can enjoy the experience at Paultons Park in Hampshire when the park opens for the season on Mar. 20. The film also is being screened at the Allou! Fun Park near Athens in Greece. 4D films combine 3D film with special effects in the theater, and you can see a oneminute teaser of the 3D version of the film at <www.tinyurl.com/nczkmqt>.

96. Feb 15 #5: B. J. Rahn's THE REAL WORLD OF SHERLOCK (Stroud: Amberley Publishing, 2014; 264 pp., £20.00) explores both the character and his creator (and Edgar Allan Poe and Dupin, and Joseph Bell), and the police and the forensic science of the Victorian era, providing an excellent background for exploring the world of the Canon.
97. CONAN DOYLE'S WAR (Stroud: Amberley Publishing; 160 pp., £7.99) is part of Amberley's "Great Writers on the Great War" series, and it's an edited version (omitting details of which units fought where, and when) of the first of the six volumes of his THE BRITISH CAMPAIGN IN FRANCE AND FLANDERS, offering a fine opportunity to see how well Conan Doyle wrote about World War One. The publisher's web-site is at <www.amberley-books.com>.
98. Anthony Horowitz's pastiche "The Three Monarchs" was published only in the British edition of his MORIARTY (Jan 15 #6), but it's available on-line as an e-story ($1.99) for Kindle and Nook and the like.
99. DC Smith has noted a 3-minute YouTube video of Mary Ciccolella's spectacular miniature room-box recreation of the sitting-room at 221B Baker Street <www.tinyurl.com/ku2obwv>, and there are close-up photographs of the room at <www.tinyurl.com/px6tdzr>. I've not heard that anyone has done a miniature of the sitting-room in the "Sherlock" television series, but I'm sure someone will.
100. Congratulations to Graham Moore, who won an Oscar (best adapted screenplay) for "The Imitation Game"; he also is the author of the pastiche THE SHERLOCKIAN (Nov 10 #8), and you can listen to his interview with Scott Monty and Burt Wolder on "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.ihose.co/ihose30>.
101. Brad Keefeaver is the energetic proprietor of Sherlock Peoria <www.sherlockpeoria.blogspot.com> as well as an enthusiastic fan of the television series "Elementary"; see his post for Feb. 5 for information on his new society The Thursday Night Elementals.
102. At long last: you can read the Sherlock Holmes story "Discovering the Border Burghs and, by Deduction, the Brig Bazaar" (first published in 1903 in THE BOOK O' THE BRIG and only recently found by Walter Elliott when a copy of the 48-page pamphlet turned up in his attic). Conan Doyle appeared at the bazaar, which was held to raise funds to replace a wooden bridge that was destroyed by a flood in the town of Selkirk in Scotland in 1902. Read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/kduqaro> (there's a link to the story) and watch a two-minute video at <www.tinyurl.com/mno5kyn>.
103. It should be noted that, even faster than with "The Case of the Man Who Was Wanted" in 1948 (when there was no Internet), people have expressed doubts that the story actually was written by Conan Doyle; Mattias Boström is one of the doubters, based in part on research in what was published about the bazaar in local papers, and you can read his conclusions at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/p5x5sz5>.

Digitized data-bases are a wonderful resource, as one can see in SHERLOCK HOLMES AND CONAN DOYLE IN THE NEWSPAPERS, 1881-1892 (Jan 15 #3), the results of careful research by Mattias and Matt Laffey.

104. Feb 15 #6: Neil Gaiman's TRIGGER WARNING (New York: William Morrow, 2015; 310 pp., $26.99) is aptly subtitled as "short fictions and disturbances"; it's a collection of short stories and poems by a writer whose talents for story-telling allow him to engage his readers with thoroughly imaginative humor and horror; one of the stories is "The Case of Death and Honey" (reprinted from A STUDY IN SHERLOCK: STORIES INSPIRED BY THE HOLMES CANON).
105. "Before being eclipsed by Howard Pyle, Doyle and Holmes were the objects of my obsession, and I still dip into their worlds from time to time," notes Ian Schoenherr, who has an interesting blog devoted to Howard Pyle; recent entries are devoted to Pyle's illustrations for Conan Doyle's poem "A Forgotten Tale" (1895) <www.tinyurl.com/mbmdk5p> and his novel "The Parasite" (1984) <www.tinyurl.com/n6xkg4h>.
106. "PaleyFest Made in NY" (celebrated by the Paley Center for Media in October 2013) included a 38-minute session on "Elementary" with the series' executive producers and leading actors <www.tinyurl.com/qaogbr4>; it's available (with a session on "The Americans") at Amazon <www.tinyurl.com/lg6r7ag>.
107. Shafquat Towheed has edited an interesting edition of THE SIGN OF FOUR (Peterborough: Broadview Press, 2010; 218 pp., $13.95) that offers far more than an arresting cover photograph of an Andaman Islander: there's an insightful introduction that sets the story in context, followed by an annotated version of the story, and five appendixes reprinting extracts from contemporary accounts of events in India, Afghanistan, and the Andaman Islands, and reviews of the newly-published book. It's availfrom the publisher <www.broadviewpress.com>.
108. Benedict Cumberbatch is keeping busy: he'll play the title role in the National Theatre's production of "Hamlet"; previews at the Barbican Theatre in London begin on Aug. 5; all the tickets have already been sold, but the production will be filmed and shown in theaters worldwide in October. Details at <www.tinyurl.com/pdee6b3>.
109. University of Southern Maine media student Kate Tracy's web-series "S(her)lock" (described as "a feminist LGBTQIA positive take on Sherlock Holmes") is underway. You can see her Kickstarter promotion and clips from four of the six episodes on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/o9ufwvp>, and there are posts about the web-series at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog <www.tinyurl.com/lws8gyc> and <www.tinyurl.com/lmvz4wm>.
110. Benedict Cumberbatch as you've never seen him before: on the cover of Radio Times (Feb. 21); actually, on three different covers, with portraits in the styles of Rembrandt, Warhol, and Van Gogh <www.tinyurl.com/nxtucuq>.
111. Alan Howard died on Feb. 14. He had a distinguished career as an actor on stage, screen, and television, and his list of credits includes Theophilus St. James in "The Willow House School" in a BBC television series of Conan Doyle's non-Sherlockian stories (1967) and the Duke of Holderness in the Granada version of "The Priory School" (1986). "The Willow House School" was the BBC's title for Conan Doyle's "The Usher of Lea House School".

112. Feb 15 #7: The Black Phoenix Alchemy Lab specializes in "formulating body and household blends with a dark, romantic Gothic tone" and has introduced a 221B Baker Street line that's inspired by Canonical characters and stories; their web-site's at <www.blackphoenixalchemy.com>. They're affiliated with the Black Phoenix Trading Post which offered (it's out of stock, but there's a waiting list) an "A Study in Emerald Neil Gaiman Pendant" <www.blackphoenixtradingpost.com>.
113. Three non-Sherlockian manuscripts ("The Nightmare Room", "The Parish Magazine", and "Through the Veil") and some Conan Doyle letters will be offered at auction at Swann Galleries in New York on Mar. 19. Read all about it at Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/m4dh2l7>.
114. Lynnette Porter's BENEDICT CUMBERBATCH: IN TRANSITION (Sep 13 #6) was a delightful examination of his work as an actor and his relationship with his fandom, and she now offers BENEDICT CUMBERBATCH: TRANSITION COMPLETED (London: MX Publishing, 2014, 286 pp., $18.95); her research is just as careful, and her reporting covers his recent work on stage, screen, radio, and television, including what's known about some things not yet completed, or even not yet in production. It is an excellent book, and the earlier book still is available; the publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <mxpublishing.co.uk>.
115. Also from MX: P. James Macaluso Jr. uses Legos to illustrate the Canon in full color, his latest being THE BOSCOMBE VALLEY MYSTERY, THE FIVE ORANGE PIPS, and THE MAN WITH THE TWISTED LIP ($9.95 each), with imaginative recreations of Sidney Paget's illustrations for each story.
116. And there's more: ROGUES GALLERY (2014; 232 pp., $14.95) is the latest in Dan Adriacco's series of about Sebastian McCabe and Jeff Cody, his modernday Holmes and Watson, with the sleuths at work in five short stories; Dan has a blog at <www.bakerstreetbeat.blogspot.com> that's interesting, entertaining, and Sherlockian. THE LAST CONFESSION OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, by Kieran Lyne (2014; 206 pp., $14.95), is a retelling of the conflict leading to the battle at Reichenbach Falls, and then an account of Holmes' return to London and his pursuit of a new Jack the Ripper. Kim H. Krisco's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE GOLDEN YEARS (2014; 345 pp., $18.95) has Holmes and Watson in retirement, reunited with Irene Adler and battling a malevolent villain in London and Battle Creek, and then involved in colonial complications with Leander Starr Jameson in South Africa.
117. Fans of Basil of Baker Street may wish to bid on a production two-cell setup showing Basil and Dawson from "The Great Mouse Detective" coming to auction at Heritage Auctions on Apr. 9 <www.tinyurl.com/lcdvexr>.
118. THE LAST AMERICAN VAMPIRE (New York: Grand Central, 2015; 398 pp., $27.00), by Seth Grahame-Smith, is a sequel to his ABRAHAM LINCOLN: VAMPIRE HUNTER (2010) and it offers an interesting look into a thoroughly popular genre; the last American vampire is Henry Sturges, and one of the many famous people he encounters is Arthur Conan Doyle, in London in 1888, while pursuing Jack the Ripper. Special compliments to Elizabeth Connor, who designed the truly imaginative dust jacket, which is on display, along with a video preview of the book, at <www.sethgrahamesmith.com>.

119. Feb 15 #8 The spiritualist Noah Zerdin held a seance at the Aeolian Hall in London in 1934 and made recordings on 26 acetate disks that were discovered by Zerdin's son in 2001; he donated them to the British Library, and it is now possible to listen to the message that Conan Doyle delivered to the seance. Josh Jones posted about the seance to the blog Open Content on May 7, 2014 <www.tinyurl.com/kyzmczr>, and included links both to a recording Conan Doyle made before his death and to the 1934 recording; Steve Cleary's blog at a British Library web-site <www.tinyurl.com/on5k32l> offers more information about Zerdin and the seance.
120. Sherlocked: The Official Sherlock Convention will be held in London on Apr. 24-26, organized in association with Hartswood Films (the production company for "Sherlock") at the ExCel convention center in London; you can sign up at the web-site <www.massiveevents.co.uk/sherlocked> for e-mail messages with more information about the convention.
121. And there's some Sherlockian theater: The Garland Civic Theatre will perform Jaime Robledo's "Watson: The Last Great Tale of the Legendary Sherlock Holmes" in Garland, Texas, Mar. 6-28 <www.gardlandcivictheatre.org>.

122. On the Fly's improvisational "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" is scheduled at the Grace Emily Hotel in Adelaide, Australia, on Mar. 9-11, during the Adelaide Improv Festival <www.onthefly.org.au>.
123. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is being performed at the Curtain Call Theatre in Latham, N.Y., through Mar. 28 <www.curtaincalltheatre.com>. And it's scheduled at the Breckinridge Backstage Theatre in Breckenridge, Colo., Mar. 12-Apr. 4 <www.backstagetheatre.org>.
124. "Sherlock Holmes and the House of Dead Lords" will debut at the Victorian Players Theater in Youngstown, Ohio, Mar. 13-29 <www.victorianplayers.org>.
125. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is scheduled by the Cheyenne Little Theater Players at the Cheyenne Little Theatre in Cheyenne, Wyo., Mar. 13-29 <www.cheyennelittletheatre.org>.
126. Katie Forgette's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Jersey Lily" will be performed at the Mundelein High School Auditorium in Mundelein, Ill., Mar. 27-29 <www.kirkplayers.org>. And at the Dorset Theatre Festival in Dorset, Vt., July 9-25 <www.dorsettheatrefestival.org>.
127. "The bleak tale of a Norfolk village that's slowly falling into the sea" is how the Royal Geographical Society's magazine Geographical began its report (Feb. 12) about what's happening to Happisburgh, and to the Hill House Pub (where Conan Doyle was inspired to write "The Dancing Men"). The Norfolk coastline is eroding, and it's estimated that it would take £15 million to close the gap in protective sea defenses, and that "if the pub's luck holds then it may have another 30 years left before the sea claims it." You can read the story at <www.tinyurl.com/owdecym>.

128. Mar 15 #1: Lyndsay Faye's next book will be THE FATAL FLAME (a sequel to her THE GODS OF GOTHAM and SEVEN FOR A SECRET in her series set 1840s New York), due in May from G. P. Putnam's Sons in May. She offers some insightful thoughts on "The Art of Pastiche" in an interview on Scott Monty's blog "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/putaf72>, and has her own interesting blog at <www.lyndsayfaye.com>.
129. Leonard Nimoy died on Feb. 27. Best known as Mr. Spock on "Star Trek", he wrote two autobiographies, I AM NOT SPOCK (1975) and I AM SPOCK (1995), and appeared as Sherlock Holmes on television in "The Interior Motive" (1975) and on stage in William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1976). It was thanks to Nicholas Meyer, who wrote and directed "Star Trek IV: The Undiscovered Country" (1991), that Nimoy said (as Spock) "An ancestor of mine maintained that if you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, no matter how improbable, must be the truth." He also was the host of the television series "In Search of..." that in 1978 went "In Search of...Sherlock Holmes".
130. And Howard Ostrom has a new essay "Beam Me Up Sherlock" at Ross Foad's "No Place Like Holmes" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/oqv5ljo> with details on the many actors, including Leonard Nimoy, who have been part of the Star Trek and Sherlock Holmes franchises.
131. Three non-Sherlockian manuscripts ("The Nightmare Room", "The Parish Magazine", and "Through the Veil") and some Conan Doyle letters at auction at Swann Galleries in New York on Mar. 19 (Feb 15 #7) all were sold, and with prices nicely above the estimates. You'll find all the details at Randall Stock's "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/m4dh2l7>.
132. There's more news about the recently discovered Sherlock Holmes story "Discovering the Border Burghs and, by Deduction, the Brig Bazaar" (Feb 15 #5): a second copy of THE BOOK O' THE BRIG has been found in Scotland, this one signed on the cover by Conan Doyle. Mattias Boström has provided what he calls "The Final Word on the Lost Sherlock Holmes" story in a long essay at "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" <www.tinyurl.com/qjooldn>, with some interesting information on Conan Doyle's positive and negative reactions to other pastiches.
133. Deadline Hollywood has reported that Sony Pictures TV has sold "Houdini and Doyle" (a ten-episode mini-series) to Fox, ITV, and Shaw Media; the project involves David Shore (creator of "House") and David Hoselton (producer and writer of "House").
134. THE ANGEL OF MONS: A WORLD WAR I LEGEND, by Jerred Metz (Columbia: Singing Bone Press, 2014; 227 pp., $19.95) is a novel about the battle of Mons and its aftermath; the battle of Mons was the war's first major engagement, and there soon were reports of supernatural forces supporting the British army. Metz paints a vivid picture of the battle, and his characters include Malcolm Leckie (who died of wounds received at Mons); the second part of the novel focuses on a seance conducted by Lily Loder-Symmons for Arthur Conan Doyle and his wife (Malcolm Leckie's sister Jean), Sir Oliver Lodge and his wife, and Sherlock Holmes.

135. Mar 15 #2: SOURCES AND METHODS, by Jon Lellenberg (Santa Fe: Hazelbaker & Lellenberg, 2015; 154 pp., $20.00 postpaid to the US) is a companion volume to his BAKER STREET IRREGULAR, his novel about the early days of the BSI (Sep 10 #1), with detailed annotations about the people, places, and events, factual and fictional, in the novel, and a running account of how the novel was written. Available from the publisher (Box 32181, Santa Fe, NM 87594) or by PayPal to <jonlellenberg@gmail.com>.
136. Peter Jacoby has formed a discussion group, called The Napoleons of Crime, that will focus on Moriarty's potential behind-the-scenes role in various high-profile crimes and international incidents prior to May 1891. Their inaugural meeting will be at the Public Library in Princeton, N.J., on May 29, and their web-site's at <www.thenapoleonsofcrime.com>.
137. Fans of Sherlockian and Doylean and other Old Time Radio will be interested in exploring the Times Past web-site <www.timespast.ning.com>, where a wide variety of audio is available to listen to or download; the Groups include a "Definitive Sherlock Holmes Group" and the OTRR Library's a real treasure trove. Try <www.tinyurl.com/mgxp85a> to hear the readings Nigel Stock made for the BBC of nine short stories in 1976 and 1977, and "The Sign of Four" in 1980. There's also Conan Doyle material available, including "The Lost Special" starring Orson Welles (an episode of "Suspense" in 1943).
138. Don Pollock has noted an imaginative new typeface called Sherlock Pro, designed by Kimmy Kirkwood with a variety of ligatures, swashes, glyphs, and other embellishments; go to <www.tinyurl.com/kjldgcj> to see for yourself.
139. The Lost World isn't quite as lost as it used to be, according to a report from Planet Ark (Feb. 18) <www.planetark.org/wen72776>, noted by The Sydney Passengers in their on-line CyberSignals; Venezuela's Mount Roraima now is visited by 3,000 to 4,000 people a year, some of the more affluent arriving by helicopter.
140. Time for another trivia question: name an actor who has played both Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes.
141. Michael Hayes died on Sept. 16. He had a long career as an actor and then as a director; best known for having directed 14 episodes of the Tom Baker "Doctor Who" series, he also directed "The Retired Colourman" in the 1965 Douglas Wilmer series.
142. Ross E. Davies has an interesting article in the latest issue of The Journal of Law ("Giving It Away at The Strand"), discussing the manuscript of "The Golden Pince-Nez" and reprinted a recently-discovered newspaper version of the story published in the N.Y. World in 1911; you can read the article on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/pgooqgj>.
143. The modern Strand Magazine is an interesting successor to the original, and has occasional Sherlockian content; it's published quarterly, and its website <www.strandmag.com> offers links to content from past issues, including (click on "Stories") H. R. F. Keating's amusing homage "Wisteria Lodge" and Barrie Roberts' "The Disappearance of Daniel Question".

144. Mar 15 #3: Name an actor who has played both Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes. Christopher Lee played Mycroft in "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) and Sherlock in "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" and "Incident at Victoria Falls" (1992). But there's more: name an actor who played both Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes in the same production.
145. "Finding Neverland" is a new musical that began previews on Mar. 15, and is scheduled to open at the Lunn-Fontanne Theatre in New York on Apr. 15, with Matthew Morrison as J. M. Barrie and Kelsey Grammer as Charles Frohman; it is based on the film (2004) and is the story of how Barrie was inspired to write "Peter Pan". Conan Doyle had a cameo appearance in the film, but is not listed as a character in the musical, which had its world premiere at Curve in Leicester in 2012, with a reworked version premiering at the American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge in 2014; there's video and audio at the musical's official web-site at <www.findingneverlandthemusical.com>, and a detailed history of the musical is at Wikipedia <www.tinyurl.com/nv2awjy>.
146. Admirers of the Brigadier Gerard will enjoy watching "How the Brigadier Won His Medal" (a 30-minute "Schlitz Playhouse of the Stars" program broadcast by CBS-TV on July 2, 1954) <www.tinyurl.com/ltqbtwz>. Thanks to Greg Ruby, who reported the video at his web-site <www.fourthgarrideb.com>.
147. An official 2-minute teaser for Ian McKellen's film "Mr. Holmes" is available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/kgm723g>. And you'll be able to see the film in theaters starting June 19 in the U.K. and July 17 in the U.S.
148. Gerry Fisher died on Dec. 20. He first worked in British films as a clapper boy in 1946, became an assistant cameraman in 1947, and then went on to a world-wide career as director of photography, with a list of credits that included "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
149. Inspired by the discovery of the Sherlockian parody in THE BOOK O' THE BRIG (Feb 15 #5), Ian Schoenherr has found two early Sherlockian poems written by Charles Joseph Colton and collected in Colton's VOLUME OF VARIOUS VERSE (1899). Read all about it at Ian's blog <www.tinyurl.com/la4ncuz>.
150. It's nice to know that good Sherlockian books find a wide audience: an article in Publishers Weekly (Mar. 6) notes that Pegasus Books has reported that more than 10,000 hardcover copies were sold last year of IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, the fine anthology edited by Laurie King and Les Klinger (Oct 14 #1).
151. Phil Attwell notes the death of Britain's last Victorian: Ethel Lang, the last person to have been born during the reign of Queen Victoria, has died at the age of 114. She had lived independently until the age of 105, when she moved to a nursing home.
152. Gillian Barr has noted Lee Jackson's new book DIRTY OLD LONDON: THE VICTORIAN FIGHT AGAINST FILTH (New Haven: Yale University Press, 2014; 304 pp., $34.20), which doesn't mention Sherlock Holmes, but does offer considerable detail on the world into which Holmes was born, and in which he lived. Lee Jackson was interviewed on "Fresh Air" on National Public Radio on Mar. 12, and you can listen to the 14-minute interview at <www.tinyurl.com/mgz7kdm>.
153. Mar 15 #4: Roger Johnson has published 350 issues of The Sherlock Holmes Society of London's newsletter The District Messenger, and after 32 years at his editorial desk he has handed the excellent newsletter over to Carrie Chandler (who also manages the Society's presence on Facebook and Twitter); current and (all) past issues of the newsletter can be read at the Society's web-site <www.sherlock-holmes.org.uk>, and it always is a grand way to keep up with what's going on in the U.K. and elsewhere.
154. DREAMING SPIES, Laurie R. King's 13th Mary Russell novel (Jan 15 #5) made the N.Y. Times best-seller list, and has been well reviewed; she's now at work on her next novel, THE MURDER OF MARY RUSSELL, due next spring.
155. Howard Ostrom has reported that "Moi Nezhny Liubimyi Detektiv" (1986) now is available at YouTube with English subtitles <www.tinyurl.com/l2lkwac>. "My Dearly Beloved Detective" is a Russian television comedy about the adventures of Shirley Holmes and Jane Watson, who have a detective agency in Baker Street.
156. Congratulations to Patricia Morison, who celebrated her 100th birthday on Mar. 19. She began her acting career in 1935, and her roles included the evil Mrs. Hilda Courtney in Basil Rathbone's "Dressed to Kill" (1946); she has some nice stories to tell, which you can read in her interview in the L.A. Times <www.tinyurl.com/lvkhf88>.
157. "The original BBC Sherlock is back" is the delightful slogan devised by the British Film Institute for its new four-DVD set (region 2 only) with all of the Douglas Wilmer television series from 1964 and 1965 (two of the shows have been reconstructed, since only some of the original footage survived); there are nice added features, and the set costs £39.99 at the BFI's web-site <www.tinyurl.com/maba5df>. It's unlikely (alas) that there will be a region 1 or multi-region version of the set.
158. If you'd like to see a larger image of the BFI's imaginative poster, it's available at the Red Circle's web-site <www.redcircledc.org>. Or you can take the Underground at the Baker Street station, where the poster's up on the walls.
159. They're off and running: The Baker Street Irregulars' triennial running of The Silver Blaze at Saratoga Raceway in Saratoga, N.Y., is set for Aug. 1 (with a brunch and scholarly presentations on Aug. 2). To enroll on their mailing list, contact Lou Lewis <llewis@lewisgreer.com>.
160. They're also off and running at Pimlico Race Course in Maryland, where Greg Ruby has revived The Silver Blaze (Southern Division), set for May 23; you can read all about it at <www.fourthgarrideb.com/silver-blaze> (the deadline for reservations is May 8).
161. Name an actor who has played both Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes in the same production; it's Igor Petrenko, in the last episode ("The Hound of the Baskervilles") of the recent Russian "Sherlock Holmes" series (2013). Petrenko plays Sherlock disguised as Mycroft, but both Sherlock and Mycroft are seen (thanks to trick photography) in a scene near the end of the episode.
162. Mar 15 #5: Barrie Ingham died on Jan. 23. He began his acting career on stage and performed with the Old Vic and the Royal Shakespeare Company, and also appeared in many British and American films and television shows. Sherlockians heard (but didn't see) him when he provided the voice for Basil of Baker Street in "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986).
163. Lyn McConchie's SHERLOCK HOLMES: REPEAT BUSINESS (Rockville: Borgo Press, 2013; 244 pp., $14.99) is a collection of short stories presenting new mysteries brought to Holmes and Watson by clients they know from Canonical cases; her web-site's at <www.lynmcconchie.com>.
164. "The Crime Museum Uncovered" will be the next major exhibition at the Museum of London, opening Oct. 9. Popularly known as the "Black Museum", the Metropolitan Police's Crime Museum was established in 1875 and was (and is) open only to police professionals and invited guests (one of whom was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle). Now everyone will be able to see some of the collection's original evidence from crimes such as the Acid Bath Murders and the Great Train Robbery <www.tinyurl.com/odstl7s>.
165. The Baker Street Babes continue to offer interesting material at their website <www.bakerstreetbabes.com>. There's a weird video parody ("The Case of the Missing Shoulder") posted on Mar. 14, an announcement of a new book by Maria Fleischhack (DIE WELT DES SHERLOCK HOLMES) on Mar. 15, a book review by Ardy the Shakespearean Ukulele on Mar. 20, and much more.

166. Steven Moffat has confirmed what fans of "Sherlock" who have access to the Internet already knew: the Christmas special is going to be Victorian (fans posted photographs taken during on-location shooting that showed everyone in Victorian costume). He also explained to Entertainment Weekly (Mar. 16) that the special won't involve a costume ball or a dream sequence, but is "kind of in its own little bubble." So: no Tardis, and no explanation (until the start of the fourth season) of Moriarty's reappearance at the end of the third season.
167. The series of thirty Conan Doyle letters <www.tinyurl.com/m5y2h25> pertaining to the Edalji Case that came to auction in London Mar. 18 (estimated at £20,000-£40,000) didn't sell. Another item did sell: a copy of THE MEMOIRS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (1894) with Conan Doyle's inscribed calling card, and a typed letter from George Newnes Limited congratulating the winner of a competition in Tit-Bits in 1893; it sold for £1,125 <www.tinyurl.com/l8hyazb>.
168. The three-part mini-series "Arthur & George" aired on ITV in Great Britain this month, starring Martin Clunes as Conan Doyle, and with a script by Ed Whitmore based on the book by Julian Barnes. The script is inventive, and less than faithful to the book as well as to the actual events in the case.
169. WHITECHAPEL'S SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE CASEBOOK OF FRED WENSLEY, OBE, KPM--VICTORIAN CRIME BUSTER, by Dick Kirkby (Barnsley: Pen & Sword Books, 2014; 254 pp., £25.00) is the story of a man who became a police officer in 1888 and spent 25 years in Whitechapel, becoming Chief Constable in 1924, and retiring in 1929; the book offers a detailed picture of Whitechapel and real police work in the Sherlockian era (a rather different view that is found in the Canon). It's published in the U.S. by Casemate ($50.00).
170. Mar 15 #6: Don Libey died on Mar. 14. He was a highly-regarded expert in the direct marketing industry as well as an author and speaker, an enthusiastic Sherlockian. He was the energetic "Buttons" and Directorat-Small of The John H. Watson Society, wrote the inventive THE BIOGRAPHY AND AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Oct 13 #1), and produced two excellent vintages from 221B Cellars. You can read Ariana Maher's nice tribute to Don at the society's web-site <www.johnhwatsonociety.org>.
171. Sherlocked: The Official Sherlock Convention in London on Apr. 24-26 (Feb 15 #8) continues to add to its list of expected guests; the price of tickets ranges from £29 for a one-day pass to £2995 for a VIP pass. Details at <www.sherlocked.com>.
172. Alfred Weiner wants to sell an assortment of Sherlockiana (including a set of 16-2/3 rpm recordings of Basil Rathbone reading four stories, issued by the Audio Book Co. in 1958); he's at <almar@stny.rr.com>, and you can request a copy of his sales list from him.
173. The British company Don't Go into the Cellar continues to tour their "The Singular Exploits of Sherlock Holmes", due at The Place in Bedford on Apr. 4 <www.theplacebedford.org.uk> and elsewhere afterward; you can find information on their shows at <www.dontgointothecellar.com>.
174. The North Platte Community Playhouse will present Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" at the Neville Center for the Performing Arts in North Platte, Neb., Apr. 10-19 <www.northplattecommunityplayhouse.com>. The play's also being performed at the Tent Theatre at Missouri State University in Springfield, Mo., June 25-July 3 <www.tenttheatre.com>.
175. "The Valley of Fear" is scheduled at the Ebenezer Maxwell Mansion in Philadelphia, Apr. 17-19 <www.ebenzermaxwellmansion.org/sherlock-holmes>; it's the fourth in their series of Sherlock Holmes mysteries.
176. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) will be performed at St. Stephen's Theater in Philadelphia, May 28-June 28 <www.lanterntheater.org>. And at the Mountain Playhouse in Jennerstown, Pa., Sept. 15-27 <www.mountainplayhouse.org>. And the Globe Theatre in Regina, Sask., Jan. 20-Feb. 7 <www.globetheatrelive.com>.
177. Mark Jones' new play "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Problem" is scheduled at the Chorley Little Theatre in Chorley (Lancashire), June 15-20; their website's at <www.chorleylittletheatre.com>.
178. Chris Hibbs' "The Curious Case in the Colony" will be performed in the Newman Wine Vaults in St. John's, Newfoundland, July 3 to Aug. 15, during the Shakespeare by the Sea Festival <www.shakespearebytheseafestival.com>.
179. "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of the Crown Jewel" (a new musical by Janet Yates Vogt and Mark Friedman) has been scheduled at the Kalamazoo Civic Theatre in Kalamazoo, Mich., in Oct. 2015 <www.kazoocivic.com>.
180. Apr 15 #1: There were two intriguing Sherlockian celebrations of April Fool's Day this year: one from Minneapolis with a headline announcing "Professor Moriarty's Skull Delivered to the University of Minnesota" <www.tinyurl.com/kwharco>, and the other from Portsmouth reporting "Archive Discovery Proves Sherlock Holmes Was a Real Person" <www.tinyurl.com/qz4pgc9> (with an amusing video at the link at the end of the announcement).
181. There's still time to register for "Lippincott's Legacy" (a literary conference honoring the 125th anniversary of the publication of "The Sign of the Four" and "The Picture of Dorian Gray") scheduled for May 29-31 at the University of Nebraska at Omaha (Oct 14 #4); more information is available at <www.lippincottslegacy.org>.
182. David Fable's THE MURDER OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Studio City: Highflyer Press, 2014; 283 pp., $12.99) begins in 1912, with a London coroner and Dr. Watson examining the body of Sherlock Holmes, and continues with Watson and young Christopher Hudson, the son of Holmes' landlady, investigating a complicated mystery that offers twists and turns, and a new look at the man Watson calls "the perfectly imperfect Sherlock Holmes."
183. British Pathé continues to add material to its web-site archives, which now offer some 90,000 historic clips <www.britishpathe.com>, and a search for [sherlock holmes] and [conan doyle] turns up interesting material. Thanks to Alexander Orlov for the reminder about this delightful resource.
184. The Museum of London's spectacular exhibition "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die" has closed, and if you'd like to see what you missed, or recall what you saw, a Catalogue of the Exhibition will soon be published by the Quatering Press. It was compiled by Nicholas Utechin and Catherine Cooke and has a foreword by Exhibition curator Alex Werner, and is illustrated with color plates. The cost of the 96-page catalogue is $20.00 plus shipping, and you will be able to order it on and after May 11 at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com>.
185. Tom and Marie O'Day report that Hounds of the Baskervilles is a shop that offers "bespoke electric tattooing" and a "traditional barber and shaving parlour" in Singapore; there's a 2-minute video at <www.vimeo.com/72817640> and their web-site's at <www.houndsofthebaskervilles.net>.
186. Betsy Rosenblatt's 70-page article on "The Adventure of the Shrinking Public Domain" (just published in the University of Colorado Law Review) is a detailed discussion of intellectual-property protection for literary characters in general, and of Sherlock Holmes in particular, considering both copyright and trademark protection, and the complicated history of the Conan Doyle copyright. Betsy is the director of the Center for Intellectual Property Law and Whittier Law School, and ends her article with some interesting suggestions, which she has summarized with a nod to the cable that Conan Doyle sent to William Gillette: "Creators should be able to draw on public domain characters with confidence--to marry them, murder them, or do what they like with them." You can read (and download) her article without charge at <www.tinyurl.com/obdc4mx>.

187. Apr 15 #2: THE STRANGE CASE OF DR. DOYLE, by Daniel and Eugene Friedman (Garden City: Square One, 2015; 339 pp., $29.95), is subtitled as "a journey into madness & mayhem," and is written in alternate chapters, offering a biography of Conan Doyle and a description of a tour he led in 1910 along the trail of Jack the Ripper's murders. The tour is invented, but allows the authors to explain their conclusions about the Ripper, and the dust

- jacket's front flap promises: "if you maintain a sharp mind and a keen eye, at the end of your journey you may just uncover a truth you never expected to find." They're certainly correct.
188. "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson will be looking for a rich legacy in Azerbaijan" is the premise of a new comedy "1,000,000 Manat" now being filmed in Baku, according to a report from Alexander Orlov. You can see a photo gallery in Trend Life (Mar. 30) <www.tinyurl.com/o8rrzqk>.
  189. The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" will run through May 10 at the Perot Museum of Science & Nature in Dallas, Texas, and then move to the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., from June 13 to Sept. 7. The exhibition's also scheduled at the Denver Museum of Nature & Science in Denver, Colo., opening Oct. 15; and at the Pacific Science Center in Seattle, Wash., opening Oct. 13, 2016. <www.discoverycube.org> is the web-site for Santa Ana, and <www.sherlockholmesexhibition.com> is the web-site for the exhibition.
  190. James C. O'Leary has an interesting essay on "Canonical Connections in Conan Doyle's 'The Winning Shot'" at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/l44fqbt>; the story was published in 1883 in Bow Bells.
  191. Don Pollock has reported THE CHINA COLLECTORS: AMERICA'S CENTURY-LONG HUNT FOR ASIAN ART TREASURES, a new book by Karl E. Meyer and Shareen Blair Brysac (from Palgrave Macmillan). Don notes that while Meyer is a member of The Baker Street Irregulars, the book does not have a section on Baron Gruner, most likely because of its focus on American collectors.
  192. Dana Richards has discovered the Redbeard Brewing Company in Staunton, Va. (their taproom motto is "small batches of big beers"); they describe their 221 Baker Brown as an English Brown Ale "to crave like a Hostess cupcake" <www.redbeardbrews.com>.
  193. David Harnois has added "The Red-Headed League" to his "I Am Lost Without My Boswell" web-site <www.iamlostwithoutmyboswell.com>; you can listen to or download the dramatized reading, which is done well. "A Case of Identity" is next on his schedule, and you can read Peter Holstrom's interview with David at <www.tinyurl.com/qfxm9th>.
  194. Greg Ruby continues to provide interesting content related to Sherlockian numismatics at The Fourth Garrideb's web-site <www.fourthgarrideb.com>, including a nicely-illustrated discussion of "Where Would Dr. Lysander Starr Have Done His Banking?" And older news of general interest, such as plans by British banks to end the check-clearing system in 2018; according to a spokeswoman for the payments council, "the next generation probably won't even have a checkbook."
195. Apr 15 #3: The DFN Foundation's plans to convert Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, into a school (Dec 14 #6) can now proceed; the BBC reported (Mar. 30) that the Secretary of State will not consider objections raised by the Victorian Society and English Heritage; Norman Stromsoy, the project manager for the school's restoration project, said that Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes enthusiasts could be reassured that Undershaw would be saved, and that its Grade II listing was not in doubt.
  196. A life-size chocolate statue of Benedict Cumberbatch was commissioned by UKTV this month as part of their promotion of a new on-demand channel, and (as might be expected) received a lot of publicity; there's lots of video available at YouTube if you search for [cumberbatch chocolate], including this one <www.tinyurl.com/mea2sv3>, which shows what happened when the 80-pound Belgian chocolate statue was put on display in a London shopping center.
  197. "Sweet pipe tobacco, cherry wood, and fresh rain" is the way Frostbeard Studio aromatically describes its "Sherlock's Study" soy candle ($16.00) <www.frostbeardstudios.com>; it's also available as a set of six tarts ($6.00). If you are wondering about the tarts, you just put one in your electric tart warmer and turn it on. An electric tart warmer may not be what you're thinking it is; Frostbeard advises that it's a "great alternative where candles are prohibited or unsafe."
  198. Plan ahead: "The Misadventures of Sherlock Holmes" is the title of the next conference in Minneapolis, on June 17-19, 2016, sponsored by the Norwegian Explorers of Minnesota, the Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections, and the University of Minnesota Libraries.
  199. The Norman B. Leventhal Map Center at the Boston Public Library has mounted an exhibition of "Literary Landscapes" featuring "maps of imaginary places that have accompanied literature for centuries." One of the maps on display is "The Sherlock Holmes Mystery Map" created by Jim Wolnick and Susan Lewis and published in 1987 <www.tinyurl.com/lfl5cpb>.
  200. The Brambletye Hotel in Forest Row, one of the few hotels to appear in the Canon under its own name, still is an attractive destination for Sherlockian (and other) tourists. Long the home of the Black Peter Bar, the hotel now also boasts a 221 Restaurant <www.brambletyehotel.co.uk>.
  201. Trevor Smith died on Jan. 6. He acted as Trevor Hancock, and began his career on stage in Britain in 1991; he was best known as Kevin Dolan in the television series "Coronation Street", had a small role in Granada's "The Cardboard Box" (1994), and appeared on stage as Selden in the Found Theatre production of Simon Corble's play "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 2007.
  202. The 2015 issue of Beaten's Christmas Annual has been published by The Sound of the Baskervilles of Seattle, with 52 pages of scholarship, quizzes, pastiches, and recipes, as well as news of the society and its members. The cost of the annual is $13.00 postpaid ($18.00 outside the U.S.); checks (in U.S. dollars, please) payable to The Sound of the Baskervilles can be sent to Terri Haugen, 6710 51st Street Court West, University Place, WA 98467.
203. Apr 15 #4: Stan Freberg died on Apr. 7. Sometimes described as "the father of recorded comedy, he launched his career in 1951 with the soap-opera satire "John and Marsha" and went on to stellar performances on records and radio, and in advertising. He played Sherlock Holmes in three episodes of "The Radio Adventures of Dr. Floyd" (created by Grant Baciocco and Doug Price for Dementia Radio) in 2008; you can listen to episodes 708, 709, and 710 at <www.doctorfloyd.com/media/season7>.
  204. An official 2-minute trailer for the UK release of Ian McKellen's film "Mr. Holmes" is available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/k7nse8a>; the film opens there on June 19 (and on July 17 in the U.S.).
  205. Bill Peschel's anthology THE EARLY PUNCH PARODIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Hershey: Peschel Press, 2014; 281 pp., $15.99) is the result of a wide-ranging search through a magazine that was full of Sherlockiana and Doyleana; the contents include not only parodies but also commentary, reviews, and a story by Conan Doyle himself, all annotated by the editor, who has included an amusing excerpt from the autobiography of Mark Twain: an account of Twain's encounter with Dr. Watson. Peschel's web-site's at <www.peschelpress.com>.
  206. Radio Spirits publishes and markets old-time-radio programs, and their website offers an interesting Elizabeth McLeod's "spotlight article" on "The Forgotten Holmes: John Gielgud on the Air" <www.tinyurl.com/nq67btg>.
  207. M. J. Carter's THE STRANGLER VINE (New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 2015; 369 pp., $27.95) is a grand tale set in India in 1837, with interesting heroes and villains; it won high praise from Bernard Cornwell ("an exotic mystery that captivated me"), and according to the publisher contains "sly references to Conan Doyle." And so it does: one of the protagonists is as skilled in observation and deduction as Sherlock Holmes. The novel also offers an interesting and educational look at events that eventually resulted in the Indian Mutiny and Afghan Wars more familiar to Sherlockians and Doyleans. The author's web-site is at <www.mj-carter.com>.

208. Anyone planning to attend the screening of the film at the San Francisco Silent Film Festival may wish to attend a reception hosted by the Scowlers and Molly Maguires at the Firewood Cafe on the afternoon of May 30. There also will be a luncheon at the historic Catch Restaurant at noon on May 31, and the film will be shown at the Castro Theatre at 7:00 pm. Details are available from Cade Deverell <hattydoran221@gmail.com>.
209. Bonnie MacBird has reported on the film's world premiere in Paris: "Gillette was riveting. In motion you see both the gravitas and humor we expect from the character. Though aging and a bit heavy at the time of the filming, he knew his profile was still good and showed it often. The film offered a rare glimpse at Watson's surgery, and although the Watson character was hardly in it, the actor impressed me with his vitality and handsome looks. The storyline was preposterous and some of the acting laughable. But frankly it held up well and was entertaining. I was pleasantly surprised at Gillette. He avoided the melodramatic posing we come to expect from the silent films, and there were a great many subtle and satisfying moments." And Oscar Ross notes that there's an excellent article about the film in Sight & Sound (Apr. 14) <www.tinyurl.com/qywlpmf>.
210. Apr 15 #5: I WAS THE CAT (Portland: Oni Press, 2014; 191 pp., $24.99), a graphic novel written by Paul Tobin and illustrated and colored by Benjamin Dewey, offers the story of Burma, a cat who has spent his nine lives trying to achieve world domination; at one point he says, "Let's talk about Sherlock Holmes," and then explains "First...I wasn't associated with Sherlock Holmes, but rather Moriarty, his nemesis," and "Second...it wasn't actually Moriarty, either, but rather Jonathan Wild, one of the men on whom Moriarty was based." That was in one of Burma's previous lives, of course, and neither Burma nor Wild survives that chapter in Burma's story.
211. Sarah Rosenbaum reports that ThinkGeek offers interesting Sherlockian keychains (and other items) <www.tinyurl.com/o36o5oo>.
212. The new Japanese "Sherlock Holmes" television series featuring delightful puppets designed by Bunta Inone (Mar 14 #7) is being released on DVDs, and Alexander Orlov has reported that three episodes are available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/kbab32l>. That's the link to the first episode; click on "Episodes" at the lower left to see links to all three episodes.
213. Adam Zanzie reports that his Indiegogo campaign to raise funds for his thesis project (adapting Conan Doyle's "The Parasite" into a short film) (Feb 15 #4) has been successful: 48 people donated, with a total slightly higher than his goal of $4,000 <www.tinyurl.com/lqnt4tz>.
214. Big Chief Studios, which produces a series of 1:6 scale Doctor Who figures, has made a pair of licensed figures showing Benedict Cumberbatch and Martin Freeman as Holmes and Watson <www.bigchiefstudios.co.uk>; their Signature Edition (limited to 400 copies, with display placards signed by the actors and a lithographic print by Alice X. Zhang) costs £439.98 for the pair, and the Limited Edition (1,000 copies) costs £339.98 for the pair. You'll find more information (and better illustrations) at io9.com's Observation Deck <www.tinyurl.com/mk7m79d>.
215. "The Secret History of Hollywood: A Modern Guide to the Golden Age of Cinema" is a series of podcasts by Adam Roche, and "The Game Is Afoot!" (Feb. 5, 2015) is a 138-minute documentary about the Rathbone/Bruce films and radio programs; go to <www.tinyurl.com/ptkfmn8> to listen or download. It's nicely done, with some great stories, nicely told.
216. Robert Ryan's DEAD MAN'S LAND (London: Simon & Schuster UK, 2013; 467 pp., £7.99) is a thriller as well as a mystery: World War I has begun, and Dr. Watson, now a major in the Royal Army Medical Corps, is at the front, with wounded to tend and a series of murders to solve, in a story that shows the reader just how terrible trench warfare was; there are heroes and villains and excellent supporting characters, and the story's well-told indeed.
217. And there's a sequel: THE DEAD CAN WAIT (2014; 463 pp., £7.99), with Watson back in England, involved in the project that led to the development of the "land-ship" that's intended to end the stalemate on the Western Front; this time there are politicians as well as heroes and villains, and agents and spies, and (at last) Sherlock Holmes, along with some nice surprises and a cliff-hanger ending. The series will continue with A STUDY IN MURDER, and the author's interesting web-site's at <www.robtryan.com>.
218. Apr 15 #6: Howard Ostrom's "In Search of...Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: A Chronological Reference List of Autobiographies, Biographies, and Quasi-Biographies" is a new annotated compilation, and an excellent demonstration of how much has been written by so many about Conan Doyle; Ross K. Foad has made the file available for download at his "No Place Like Holmes" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/o929622>.
219. Tom Alderman reviewed Dan Simmons' Henry James/Sherlock Holmes pastiche THE FIFTH HEART for the Huffington Post (Apr. 21), noting that there are 18,536 Sherlock Holmes titles on Amazon. "Certainly a strong testament to the enduring quality of the series and the several authors who have kept the series thriving all these years."
220. There's an annual Letters About Literature Essay Contest in which students (grades 4 through 12) write to an author who has changed their view of the world or themselves, and of this year's winners in Minnesota this year was Soren Eversoll, who wrote to Arthur Conan Doyle. Soren became a member of The Norwegian Explorers at the age of 7 and is now 13. His winning letter is available on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/q8fp6ka>.
221. Ross E. Davies' interesting article about "The Regulatory Adventure of the Two Norwood Builders: Sherlock Holmes Crosses Paths with Congress, the President, the Courts, and the Administrative State, in the Press" has appeared in the 2015 Green Bag Almanac & Reader, and it's also nicely available online at <www.tinyurl.com/k3c4wcr>.
222. Thomas Watson's THE TRUE MYSTERY OF HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK (Greentown: Wicked Good Books, 2015; 142 pp., $7.95) actually was written by Alf Dotson to amuse Sherlockian and Shakespeareans; allegedly found in the Jamestown Shakespeare Manuscripts, the story's an account of the involvement of Sherlock Homes James (who in the cover photograph looks remarkably like Robert Downey Jr.) in events later dramatized by William Shakespeare. There also is a contest, with a cash prize offered to the person who reports the most Conan Doyle titles concealed in the text. Details on the contest, and much more, will be found at <www.wickedgoodbooks.com>.
223. "Long Live the Personal Library" is the title of a blog by Gracy Olmstead for The American Conservative (Apr. 21) <www.tinyurl.com/l4cyxjl>, kindly reported by Paul Herbert. It was occasioned by William Gibaldi's "Object Lesson" essay for the New Republic (Apr. 19) <www.tinyurl.com/pok99xn>, and both will be interesting to bibliophiles.
224. One hears of Conan Doyle everywhere: Ian Schoenherr has discovered J. H. A. Gunther's A MANUAL OF ENGLISH PRONUNCIATION & GRAMMAR FOR THE USE OF DUTCH STUDENTS (Groningen: J. B. Wolters, 1899), with many citations from Conan Doyle's writings (Sherlockian and otherwise); the manual is available (and searchable) on-line at <www.tinyurl.com/oqo34cp>.
225. Randall Stock reports that the enhanced version of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust web-site is up and running <www.bsitrust.org>, with historical information about BSI annual dinners (from 1934 through 1951, with more to come), the oral history project (inaugurated with the reminiscences of Russell Merritt), correspondence, memorabilia, and much more.
226. Apr 15 #7: The Proms, the world's largest music festival, was launched in 1895 at the Queen's Hall in London, and this year will include "Sherlock Holmes: A Musical Mind" at the Albert Hall on Aug. 16, saluting "a crime-fighting violin virtuoso who wrote a pioneering study of Dutch sacred music, tussled with a contralto from the Warsaw Opera, and used Offenbach to outwit a pair of jewel thieves" <www.bbc.co.uk/events/egnrzc>. The event will be broadcast live on BBC Radio 3 (and available at the BBC website for 30 days).

227. There was far more to H. F. Heard's "Mr. Mycroft" than is found in A TASTE HONEY (1941), available in a Blue Dolphin reprint (Oct 09 #8). Many have suspected that Mr. Mycroft is really an elderly Sherlock Holmes, and Heard wrote about him in two more novels and two short stories, all now available from Blue Dolphin in REPLY PAID, with a foreword by Paul D. Herbert (2014; 199 pp., $16.95), and THE NOTCHED HAIRPIN, with a foreword by Christopher Pittard (2014; 147 pp., $15.95). Heard was an inventive writer, and had a lot of fun with Mr. Mycroft; Christopher Morley is reported to have said of REPLY PAID: "For tastes that are Baker Street and Irregular, this as good as Mrs. Hudson's curried kedgeree."
228. The 56th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze (the world's oldest and still-active annual Sherlockian horse race) will be held on Oct. 17 at the Hawthorne Race Course; if you'd like to attend the festivities, details are available from Susan Diamond <szdiamond@comcast.net>.
229. The Royal Mail has commemorated the bicentenary of the birth of Anthony Trollope (1915-1892) famous as a novelist, he also introduced the freestanding postbox in 1852, when he was working at the Post Office, and the stamps show his portrait and the first pillar box. And of course there's a Sherlockian connection: "The Great Trollope Mystery", an amusing pastiche that was written by Angela Milne and published in Punch (July 9, 1980), in which she has Holmes analyzing and explaining an apparent error in Trollope's THE WARDEN, in much the same way that Sherlockian scholars and pseudo-scholars have, for so many years, years explained (or explained away) the mistakes and contradictions they've found in the Canon.
230. Scott Monty and Burt Wolder continue their series of podcast interviews for "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" with a discussion with the editors of the latest volume in the Baker Street Irregulars' manuscript series OUT OF THE ABYSS (devoted to "The Empty House"); you can listen to (and download) the conversation at <www.tinyurl.com/pg2aun4>. Scott also reports a new subtitled-in-English version of the amusing Russian animation "Sherlock Holmes and I" (1985) at <www.tinyurl.com/otqdaqe>.
231. "Saturday-Night Theatre: Conan Doyle Investigates" was a 90-minute program broadcast by BBC Radio 4 on May 6, 1972, written by Roger Woddiss and dramatizing Sir Arthur's involvement in the George Edalji case, starring Carleton Hobbs as Conan Doyle. The program has been uploaded to YouTube, and is available at <www.tinyurl.com/masr5c6>. Add Carleton Hobbs to the list of actors who have portrayed both Conan Doyle and Holmes.
232. Apr 15 #8 Roger Johnson notes that Valerie Osment, who designed the imaginative Sherlock Holmes BookBench last year (May 14 #5), has now designed a Sherlock Holmes Dragon for the GoGo Dragons 2015 festival in Norwich <www.gogodragons.co.uk>. GoGo Dragon Sherlock, sponsored by a real estate agency called Watsons, tweets at <www.twitter.com/gogosherlock>.
233. And (as usual) there's theater: Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Pocahontas County Opera House, in Marlinton, W.V., May 15-16 <www.pocahontasoperahouse.org>.
234. "The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes" (a new open-air production by the Chapterhouse Theatre Company) will have its premiere at East Town Park in Haverhill (Suffolk) on June 12 and then go on tour; their schedule's available at <www.chapterhouse.org/show5.html>.
235. The Twin Beach Players will present "Sherlock Holmes and the Most Amazing Case!" (a new play by Matthew Konerth) in North Beach, Md., on June 18-28 <www.twinbeachplayers.com>.
236. The Ottawa Story Tellers will present "The Game's Afoot: Stories of Sherlock Holmes" at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa, Ont., on June 18, 2015 <www.nac-cna.ca>.
237. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) will be performed at the Florida Studio Theatre in St. Petersburg, Fla., July 1-Aug. 2 <www.floridastudiotheatre.org>.
238. David Stuart Davies will present his new one-man show "The Game's Afoot: An Encounter with Sherlock Holmes and Conan Doyle" during the Edinburgh Festival Fringe at the Arthur Conan Doyle Centre, Aug. 12-14 <www.edfringe.com>.
239. Aquila Theatre's touring production of "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" (a new play written by Desiree Sanchez) opens at the Pollak Theatre in Monmouth, N.J., on Oct. 1 and continues on tour until Mar. 20, 2016; details can be found at <www.aquilatheatre.com/touring>.
240. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is due at the Erie Playhouse in Erie, Pa., Oct. 16-Nov. 1 <www.erieplayhouse.org>.
241. "Sherlock Holmes' Adventure of the Red-Headed League" is scheduled by the East Lynne Theater Company at the First Presbyterian Church in Cape May, N.J., on Nov. 6-7, 2015 <www.eastlynnetheater.org>.
242. "Sherlock Holmes & the First Baker Street Irregular" (a new play by Brian Guehring) will be performed at the Rose Theater in Omaha, Neb., Nov. 6-22 <www.rosetheater.org>.
243. Ken Ludwig's "Baskerville: A Sherlock Holmes Mystery" is scheduled by the Philadelphia Theatre Company at the Suzanne Roberts Theatre in Philadelphia on Nov. 27-Dec. 27 <www.philadelphiatheatrecompany.org>.
244. May 15 #1: William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1916) will be released on Blu-ray/DVD by Flicker Alley on Oct. 20, with subtitles in French or English, an original musical score and other added features <www.tinyurl.com/mu8kfrk>, and you can pre-order now from Flicker Alley ($29.95).
245. Criminal Element is an interesting blog, with plenty of Sherlockian content <www.criminalelement.com>. Search for [lyndsay faye] to find "Strangers on a Train, or When Sherlock Met Jane" (in which Lyndsay and Ashley Weaver describe a thoroughly imaginative encounter between Sherlock Holmes and Miss Jane Marple), and for [chad eagleton] to find his discussion of "Sherlock Holmes and the Killer Bees" (about H. F. Heard's A TASTE FOR HONEY).
246. A fine example of outreach: Tim Johnson, the curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota Library, recently paid a visit to the Rushford-Peterson High School to talk to the students, and KIMT-TV had a nice report on the event <www.tinyurl.com/nor7v6w>.
247. The catalog for the Museum of London's exhibition "Sherlock Holmes: The Man Who Never Lived and Will Never Die" (Apr 15 #1) is now available for purchase at <www.bakerstreetjournal.com/london.html>, and Randall Stock has a fine report on the exhibition and on the catalog at his "Best of Sherlock" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/otqkpx>, with some interesting links to follow. The catalog is spectacular, with full-color illustrations of original artwork by Sidney Paget and Frederic Dorr Steele (a rough sketch of Holmes in disguise as an old woman in "The Mazarin Stone"), a bust of Sherlock Holmes sculpted by Frederick L. Wilkins and presented to Conan Doyle in the 1890s, and much more.
248. The Leisy Premiere Theatre, a television series broadcast in Cleveland in 1963 to celebrate the 90th anniversary of the founding of the Leisy Brewing Company, presented full-length feature films and was hosted by Basil Rathbone; you can see him in action at <www.tinyurl.com/mdckrb5>.
249. There's another trailer for Ian McKellen's film "Mr. Holmes" available at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/phju2yg>; the film opens in the U.K. on June 19, and on July 17 in the U.S.
250. John F. Farrell ("The Tiger of San Pedro") died on May 7. He loved music and theater, and for many years wrote reviews for newspapers in the Los Angeles area, and he was an enthusiastic Sherlockian, collaborating with Sean Wright on their SHERLOCK HOLMES COOKBOOK (1976), and presiding over three Sherlockian societies: The Tigers of San Pedro, The Great Hiatus (for Sherlockians who corresponded by foreign translations), and The 140 (for Sherlockians who smoked tobacco). He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1981.

251. "Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery" (the interactive exhibit with much Victorian flavor, and a mystery that visitors can solve) is scheduled at the Science Museum of Minnesota in St. Paul <www.smm.org> from Oct. 14 to Jan. 3, 2016. More information on the exhibit is available at the Wonderworks web-site <www.tinyurl.com/24b4fyy>.

252. May 15 #2: "All the Sherlock Holmes stories were enthusiasms of mine," Agatha Christie wrote in 1966 in a letter to Evelyn B. Byrne; the letter is coming to auction on June 11 at Profiles in History (estimated at $2,000-$3,000) <www.profilesinhistory.com>; Christie's letter was published in ATTACKS OF TASTE (1971), edited by Byrne and Otto M. Penzler, along with letters and essays by other authors on their childhood literary influences (New York: Gotham Book Mart, 1971). Holmes and Conan Doyle also were mentioned by Eric Ambler, Kay Boyle, John Cheever, Ralph Ellison, Christopher Isherwood, Henry Miller, Ogden Nash, and Louis Simpson, but their letters aren't in the auction.
253. Karen Murdock spotted Detective Handswell, created by Chris Whitmore Associates <www.cwa.co.uk/hanswell> for Hull Trains in England; he appears in on-board notices that advise passengers to stay safe, by avoiding accidents with hot drinks, being cautious at level crossings, and standing clear of closing doors.
254. Grant Eustace's ABSOLUTE DISCRETION, published by Calabash Press in 1997, is an interesting novel that is set in Somerset and features a young detective who is visiting from Oxford and calls himself Arthur Vernet. There are nice (and nicely appropriate) echoes from the Canon, and the book is available at Amazon and at Abebooks.
255. "Goodness Gracious Me" was a British 30-minute series broadcast on BBC Radio 4 from 1996 to 1998, and on BBC-2 television from 1998 to 2001; Howard Ostrom notes that there was a "Goodness Gracious Me Reunion Special" that was broadcast on BBC-2 in 2014, with a 1-minute segment ("Everything Comes from India") in which Sanjeev Bhaskar explains to Kulvinder Ghir why "Sherlock" is such a good series <www.tinyurl.com/qz6cpfs>.
256. The awards ceremony of the British Academy of Film and Television Arts included a Radio Times Audience Award to "Sherlock"; it's the only BAFTA on which the public votes, from a list of nominees selected by an expert jury ("Sherlock" beat out "Game of Thrones" and "EastEnders").
257. Nigel Terry died on Apr. 30. He began his acting career on stage in repertory in Britain, went on to perform with the Royal Shakespeare Company, appeared as King John in the film "The Lion in Winter" (1968) and as King Arthur in "Excaliber" (1981), and in many roles on television, including Harold Latimer in Peter Cushing's "The Greek Interpreter" (1968).
258. Neil Gaiman has an official Tumbler, where he recently was asked: "What's the BSI like? Do you all plot world domination behind those doors? Also--if you're allowed to say this out loud--what's your title there?" You can read his answers at <www.tinyurl.com/p62w5nh>.
259. Alphonse Bertillon and his system for identifying criminals are mentioned in two stories in the Canon ("The Naval Treaty" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles"), and the Independent had an excellent story (May 17) about Bertillon <www.tinyurl.com/lm8sbz2>, with mention of an exhibition on "Forensics: The Anatomy of Crime" at the Wellcome Museum in London through June 21 <www.wellcomecollection.org/forensics>.
260. May 15 #3: VICE News (a global news channel founded in 2013) has an interesting on-line interview with Marcel Jaurant Singer, at the age of 94 the last living member of the Baker Street Irregulars. This BSI was the Special Operations Executive, which had its headquarters Baker Street during World War Two (and was sometimes called the "Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare") <www.tinyurl.com/kac3dlv>.
261. Al Gregory has discovered The Sherlockian Violin Society (for Sherlockians who play or appreciate the violin) <www.sherlockianviolinsociety.com>. The web-site includes links to sheet music for the themes for the Jeremy Brett and Benedict Cumberbatch television series.
262. Robert Rietty died on Apr. 3. A British actor best known for his voice, he worked in films and on radio and television, and specialized in voice dubbing; according to his obituary in the Guardian, in the 1970 film "Waterloo" he was heard talking to himself four times while providing no fewer than 98 voices. Credited at Robert Rietty, he acted in the Gielgud/Richardson radio series in 1954, and then in the Hobbs/Shelley radio series (he played Gennaro in "The Red Circle" (1969).
263. Sherlockian who are still writing old-fashioned paper checks will welcome Greg Ruby's report that Sherlock-Holmes-themed personalized checks now are available in four designs, which you can see in full color at the web-site of The Fourth Garrideb <www.tinyurl.com/q8h4jy3>.
264. Some will recall the "five orange peeps" that were sent to Sherlockians in 2003, in a devious plan conceived by the John Farrell and executed by Kevin Reed (Dec 03 #5). Peeps are gooey little marshmallow chicks that have been made for more than 60 years, and they're now theatrical, in a fashion: the Washington Post has held a Peeps Diorama Contest since 2007, and this year one of the more than 400 entries was "The Many Faces of Benedict Cumberpeep", submitted by Pamela Winston and Leonard Bailey, who honored Benedict Cumberbatch's performances as Julian Assange, Alan Turing, Sherlock Holmes, Khan, and Smaug. They didn't win, unfortunately, but they made the top 50, and you can see them all in a slide-show at <www.tinyurl.com/otwe496>. Benedict Cumberpeep is in image #11.
265. Laurie R. King and Leslie S. Klinger's IN THE COMPANY OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: STORIES INSPIRED BY THE HOLMES CANON is one of the nominees for an Anthony Award (best anthology or collection) at Bouchercon 2015 in Raleigh, N.C., Oct. 8-11.
266. Fans of "Sherlock" may enjoy hearing some of the love letters exchanged by Sherlock Holmes and Molly Hooper: there's an 11-minute video of them reading the letters at <www.simongarfield.com>. Okay (spoiler alert): they're actually letters exchanged by Chris Barker and Bessie Moore during the Second World War, published in Simon Garfield's MY DEAR BESSIE: A LOVE STORY IN LETTERS (2015). Some of the letters were read by Benedict Cumberbatch and Louise Brealey (aka Sherlock and Molly in the television series) at the Hay Festival last year (there are two videos at Garfield's web-site, and at YouTube), and for a 45-minute program broadcast by BBC Radio 4 on Apr. 20.

267. May 15 #4: T. S. Eliot's poem "Macavity: The Mystery Cat" has long been a favorite of Sherlockians because of its amusing homage to Moriarty, and a new book suggests a possible source for the name: Eliot went to high school with a boy named Ronald A. MacAvity, as noted by Robert Crawford in his YOUNG ELIOT: FROM ST. LOUIS TO THE WASTE LAND (New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 2015; 512 pp., $35.00).
268. Ruth Rendell died on May 2. She was a noted mystery writer with more than 60 books to her credit, many of them featuring her most famous detective, Chief Inspector Reginald Wexford. She was the Sherlock Holmes Society of London's guest of honor at their annual dinner in 2009, and contributed an interesting introduction to that year's new edition of THE PENGUIN COMPLETE SHERLOCK HOLMES.
269. Gloria Alden's THE SHERLOCK HOLMES MYSTERY CLUB (Willow Knolls Press, 2013; 199 pp., $7.95) has students in a third-grade class involved in an exchange of correspondence with an elderly woman who's in pursuit of jewel thieves; the author's web-site is at <www.gloriaalden.com>.
270. The 2015 edition of the Green Bag Almanac & Reader includes a "new lawyerly edition" of "The Norwood Builder" with annotations by Sherlockians and non-Sherlockians who responded to the journal's request for contributions last year (Oct 14 #4), and other interesting Sherlockian content (together with much non-Sherlockian material such as a selection of "exemplary legal writing" from 2014). It's nicely done indeed, and a few copies of the 662-page volume available without charge to those who send requests (with postal addresses) to Ross E. Davies <rdavies@greenbag.org>. Ross reports that similar attention will be paid to "The Reigate Puzzle" in the next edition; you will find more information about this at <www.greenbag.org>.

271. If you remember the MG as a classy British two-seat open sports car, that's what it used to be: the company was founded in 1924, but the MG marque now owned by SAIC Motor, a Chinese company that has hired Benedict Cumberbatch to help launch the new MG GS <www.tinyurl.com/mhvpj8k>. The commercial has nice Sherlockian echoes.
272. Russian tycoon Alexander Perepilichnyy has died in England under mysterious circumstances; he was a major critic of Vladimir Putin, as was Sergei Magnitsky, who had alleged that Russian officials has carried out large-scale theft and then died in prison in Moscow in 2009 (Nov 13 #3). Perepilichnyy was thought to have died from natural causes, but an autopsy showed traces of a rare plant poison in his stomach and British authorities have launched a full inquest. The rare plant poison was gelsemium, and the British press has noted that Arthur Conan Doyle wrote about gelsemium in the British Medical Journal in 1879, after experimenting on himself with the poison to see if it was effective in treating pain.
273. It is reported (although not confirmed) that BBC Radio 4 will broadcast a dramatization of Laurie R. King's "The Beekeeper's Apprentice" on June 9-12, in four 30-minute episodes; you can check the schedule at the BBC Radio 4 web-site <www.tinyurl.com/otakyuk>. The mini-series was first broadcast in 2000, with Monica Dolan (Mary Russell), James Fox (Sherlock Holmes), and Shaun Prendergast (Dr. Watson).

274. May 15 #5: The Conan Doyle Estate has filed a copyright and trademark lawsuit against Miramax and others, alleging that Ian McKellen's new film "Mr. Holmes" has infringed on the last ten Sherlock Holmes stories still protected by copyright. The lawsuit targets Miramax (the producer of the film), Roadside Attractions (the film's distributor in the U.S.), William Condon (the film's director), Mitch Cullin (who wrote the book A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND, on which the film is based, and shares credit for writing the film's script), and Penguin Random House (which published the book in 2005).
275. The Estate demands a jury trial, an injunction against the release of the film (now scheduled for July 17 in the U.S.), and payment to the Estate of its costs and all profits from the film. You can read the entire 24-page "Complaint for Injunctions and Damages" at <www.tinyurl.com/qdryu5o>.
276. Museum Replicas offers an interesting variety of Sherlockian merchandise, including a Sherlock Holmes statue ($95.00), coat ($65.00), and deerstalker ($19.00), and a Victorian sword cane ($95.00). Box 840, Conyers, GA 30012 (800-883-8838) <www.museumreplicas.com>.
277. Joseph C. Camana died on Apr. 27. He worked as an artist for more than 70 years, in the U.S. Army during World War II and then as a freelance commercial artist, including illustrations for CASES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES, adapted by William Kottmeyer and published in 1947.
278. National Public Radio's "Weekend Edition" (May 3) celebrated Orson Welles' 100th birthday with a 6-minute segment that focused on his work on radio, with (of course) due attention to his appearance as Sherlock Holmes for the Mercury Radio Theatre in 1938 <www.tinyurl.com/npzrdnd>.
279. Barry S. Brown's MRS. HUDSON IN NEW YORK (London: MX Publishing, 2015; 273 pp., $16.95) is the fourth in his "Mrs. Hudson of Baker Street" series, in which Mrs. Hudson does the real detecting, with assistance from Holmes and Watson, this time in a case involving the attempted murder of J. P. Morgan, an encounter with Samuel Clemens, and combat with the Pinkertons. The publisher's web-sites are <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
280. More from MX: THE EGYPTIAN CURSE (2015; 178 pp., $9.95) is the third in a series by Dan Andriacco and Kieran McMullen that stars Enoch Hale, an American reporter in London in 1924 and now a suspect in a murder, which he has to solve himself; his investigation involves P. G. Wodehouse, Leonard and Virginia Woolf, T. S. Eliot, Howard Carter, Agatha Christie, and (eventually). Sherlock Holmes. David Ruffle's HOLMES AND WATSON: AN AMERICAN ADVENTURE (2015; 140 pp., $9.95) brings Holmes and Watson to New York, so that Holmes can lecture at a training academy for the city's police force (and help solve a murder), and to Fall River, where Holmes solves two more murders and has a chance to meet Lizzie Borden and review the records of the murders of her father and stepmother. Daniel D. Victor's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE BARON OF BREDE PLACE (2015; 235 pp., $14.95) is the second in his "Sherlock Holmes and the American Literati" series, presenting a somewhat different version of "Charles Augustus Milverton" that has Stephen Crane as another victim of blackmail, in case that also involved Joseph Conrad and H. G. Wells.
281. May 15 #6: Elliott M. Black has died. He had a long career in engineering and marketing, and was a member of Sherlockian societies in and near Chicago; he also was an avid magician and mentalist (performing as Michael Elliott): he presented "The Sherlock Holmes of Thought" at Bouchercon in Baltimore in 1986, and at the Baskerville Bash during the birthday festivities in 1999, and greatly enjoyed entertaining his fellow Sherlockians.
282. And as always, there's Sherlockian theater, on-going and up-coming: "Holmes and Watson Save the Empire: A Musical Mystery" (by Jahna Beecham and Malcolm Hillgartner) will be produced at the Metro Theatre in Vancouver, B.C., June 17-28 <metrotheatre.com>.
283. Ed. Lange's "Sherlock's Secret Life" will be performed at the Pioneer Playhouse in Danville, Ky., July 21-Aug. 1 <www.pioneerplayhouse.com>.
284. "Impossible" (a new play by Robert Khan and Tom Salinsky about Harry Houdini and Arthur Conan Doyle) is scheduled at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in Scotland, Aug. 5-31 <www.edfringe.com>.
285. The Fringe also will include a presentation by the Ghostwriters of "Adventures of the Improvised Sherlock Holmes" (Aug. 6-30) and David Stuart Davies' solo performance of his "The Game's Afoot: An Encounter with Sherlock Holmes and Arthur Conan Doyle" (Aug. 12-14).
286. Stephen Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" is due at the Magenta Theater in Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 25-Oct. 17 <www.magentatheater.com>. And it will be presented by the Lake Dillon Theatre Company at their theater in Dillon, Colo., Nov. 20-Dec. 13 <www.lakedillontheatre.org>.
287. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (by David Pichette and R. Hamilton Wright) will be performed at the Garvin Theatre in Santa Barbara, Calif., Oct. 16-31 <www.theatregroupsbcc.com>.
288. John Longenbaugh's "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Christmas Carol" is scheduled at the Renton Civic Theatre in Renton, Wash., from Dec. 4 to Dec. 19 <www.rentoncivictheatre.org>.
289. Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot, or Holmes for the Holidays" is scheduled at the Blackfriars Theatre in Rochester, N.Y., from Dec. 11 to Jan. 3, 2016 <www.blackfriars.org>.
290. "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Great Nome Gold Rush" (a new comedy by Joseph Vass) will debut at North Coast Repertory Theatre in Solana Beach, Calif., Jan. 13-Feb. 7, 2016 <www.northcoastrep.org>.
291. "Sherlock Holmes and the West End Horror" (dramatized from Nicholas Meyer's novel by Anthony and Marcia Milgrom Dodge) is due at the Black Box Theatre in Colorado Springs, Colo., Jan. 15-24, 2016 <www.blackboxdrama.com>, and at the Hylton Performing Arts Center on the Prince William Campus of George Mason Univ. in Manassas, Va., Mar. 11-20, 2016 <www.hyltoncenter.org>.

292. Jun 15 #1: William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" had its American premiere in San Francisco on May 31, and was well received by Sherlockians and non-Sherlockians alike. As was the case at the screening Culpeper, Va., on June 13, during the fourth annual "Mostly Lost" conference at the Library of Congress' National Audio-Visual Conservation Center <www.tinyurl.com/o9be5jc>. It is wonderful that the film has been found and can be seen again after so many years, and it's a delight to be able to watch Gillette's performance. His last performance as Holmes was at the McCarter Theatre in Princeton, N.J., on May 12, 1930, which suggests that there's no one left who actually saw him perform live, but now everyone can see him as Holmes on film.

293. Those who enjoyed seeing the film in San Francisco also have a nice lapel pin to commemorate the occasion. There's much to praise about the film, which is a restoration of the four-part serial discovered in Paris, rather than an attempt to recreate the film as originally screened in the U.S. It's grand indeed to be able to see Gillette's underplayed natural acting style, praised so highly in print for more than a century: he doesn't need to show that he's the smartest person in the room, because you can see for yourself that he really is just that. One of the nicest accolades for Gillette, by the way, came from Orson Welles, who said that "it's too little to say that William Gillette resembled Sherlock Holmes; rather, Sherlock Holmes looked exactly like William Gillette." And the film is being screened widely: at William Castle in Hadlyme, Conn., on Sept. 18-20, and quite possibly elsewhere.
294. As noted last month (May 15 #1), the film will be released on Blu-ray/DVD by Flicker Alley on Oct. 20, with subtitles in French or English, an original musical score and other added features <www.tinyurl.com/mu8kfrk>; you can pre-order now from Flicker Alley ($29.95), and it's highly recommended. There has been considerable publicity for the film, both in the press and on-line, and you can read Tim Greer's review (from San Francisco) at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" web-site <www.tinyurl.com/pwxpk6z>. Issue 59 of the blog EatDrinkFilms <www.tinyurl.com/p4b4nrx> offered Thomas Gladysz' interesting commentary on Gillette, with a video trailer that includes a brief glimpse of Paul Singleton as Holmes.
295. And there's a bit more: if you'd like to know what it was like to see William Gillette performing on stage, you can read what Vincent Starrett had to say, in Ray Betzner's blog "Studies in Starrett" <www.tinyurl.com/oxw3rv9>.
296. Finally (perhaps), there's a splendid accompaniment to the film: The Société Sherlock Holmes de France's LE GUIDE DU FILM SHERLOCK HOLMES (1916), a 64-page profusely-illustrated discussion of the film and its actors, with articles by Thierry Saint-Joanis and Bernard Oudin, with press reviews from the original release; it's almost all in English (Thierry has said that he has been asked by members of the Société if he's going to publish a French translation of the book), and costs €20.00 at <www.sshf.com/boutique.php>, where you can see thumb-nail images showing the results of their splendid research. It has been a long time since I've devoted an entire page of the newsletter to anything, but the film and the book are well worth it.

297. Jun 15 #2: The Broadway production of "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time" has won five Tony awards. The play, dramatized by Simon Stephens from Mark Haddon's novel, won for best play, best performance by an actor in a leading role (Alex Sharp), best scenic design (Bunny Christie and Finn Ross), best lighting design (Paule Constable), and best direction (Marianne Elliott).
298. The Practical, But Limited, Geologists (also known as The Friends of Sherlock Holmes) met to honor the world's first forensic geologist with drinks and dinner at the Fadó Irish Pub in Denver on June 3, welcomed by members of Dr. Watson's Neglected Patients. Our next meetings will be on Nov. 4 in Baltimore, and on June 22, 2016, in Calgary.
299. Julie Harris died on May 30. She had a long career as a costume designer in British films, perhaps best-known for her work for The Beatles in 1965, when she said "I must be one of the few people who can claim they have seen John, Paul, George, and Ringo naked." She preferred creating period costumes, and is credited for "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970) and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Sign of Four" (1983).
300. Nicholas Utechin is preparing a short monograph on the British society The Milvertonians of Hampstead, which was founded by Humphrey Morton and Peter Rickard in 1958. Nick is in urgent need of a photograph of Peter Richard, and would welcome hearing from anyone who can help; you can reach Nick at <highfieldfarmhouse@gmail.com>.
301. MYCROFT HOLMES, by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Anna Waterhouse (New York: Titan Books, 2015; 323 pp., $25.99), is set in 1870, when Mycroft, 23 years old, a secretary to the Secretary of State for War, and in love with a beautiful blonde, finds himself involved in a bizarre intrigue that takes him to the Caribbean, where he finds perilous adventure and an interesting assortment of friends and foes.
302. "What Happened After Sherlock Rescued Irene?" was the question Steven Moffat was asked at the "Sherlocked" convention in London in April, and you can read his amusing answer at the Sherlockology web-site: click on the "News & Events" link at <www.sherlockology.com>. The short answer is that he wrote but didn't film a scene that would have ended with Sherlock naked. You can also read transcripts of the opening panel with the creators of the series, and of Benedict Cumberbatch's panel, and there's lots more to be found at this interesting web-site.
303. Tim Dedopulos' SHERLOCK HOLMES' ELEMENTARY PUZZLES (London: Carlton, 2014; 143 pp., £7.99) offers 71 "riddles, enigmas, and challenges," non-Sherlockian but presented by Holmes and others in the Canon.
304. Bill Peschel's anthology THE EARLY PUNCH PARODIES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (Hershey: Peschel Press, 2014; 281 pp., $15.99) is the result of a wide-ranging search through a magazine that was full of Sherlockiana and Doyleana; the contents include not only parodies but also commentary, reviews, and a story by Conan Doyle himself, all annotated by the editor, who has included an amusing excerpt from the autobiography of Mark Twain: an account of Twain's encounter with Dr. Watson. Peschel's web-site's at <www.peschelpress.com>.

305. Jun 15 #3: Further to the report (May 15 #2) on Agatha Christie's letter to Evelyn B. Byrne, Ray Betzner has blogged about the letter from Vincent Starrett that wasn't included in ATTACKS OF TASTE, and about Byrne and Otto Penzler, and about their book and their correspondence with Starrett; you can read all about it at <www.tinyurl.com/qeqbocd>.
306. They're off and running: The Baker Street Irregulars' triennial running of The Silver Blaze at Saratoga Raceway in Saratoga, N.Y., is set for Aug. 1 (with a brunch and scholarly presentations on Aug. 2). For details on how to register, contact Lou Lewis <llewis@lewisgreer.com>.
307. Christopher Lee died on June 7. A consummate actor, he made more than 250 films, often as villains, but also as heroes and supporting characters. He played Sir Henry Baskerville in Peter Cushing's film "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959), Sherlock Holmes in "Sherlock Holmes und das Halsband des Todes" [Sherlock Holmes and the Necklace of Death] (1962), Mycroft Holmes in Robert Stephens' film "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" (1970), and Holmes again in the television films "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" and "Sherlock Holmes: The Incident at Victoria Falls" (1992); he also was the host of the television documentary "The Many Faces of Sherlock Holmes" (1986), and read "The Valley of Fear" for Listen for Pleasure (1993).
308. The Bootmakers of Toronto's annual running of The Silver Blaze at Woodbine Racetrack will be held on July 11 <www.torontobootmakers.com>.
309. It isn't just people who are trying to buy homes that have been affected by the soaring real-estate prices in London: rents are going up as well. Criterion Capital, landlord of the Criterion Restaurant, has increased the annual rent to £850,000 (up from £525,000), and the 140-year-old restaurant has gone into administration [which is essentially the same as filing for bankruptcy]. The restaurant's still open, so you can visit the plaque honoring Watson and Stamford's historic meeting at the Criterion's Long Bar
310. Ron Moody died on June 11. He was most famous as Fagin in the musical "Oliver" on stage in the West End and Broadway and on film (1968), and went on to many roles on stage, screen, and television, including Sherlock Holmes in Leslie Bricusse's "Sherlock Holmes: The Musical" (1988).
311. Marcus Geisser and Helen Dorey were married on May 23 at the Church of St. Cross in Winchester, and have now honeymooned, reporting that "Frau Geisser passed the ultimate honeymoon test: crossing the Splügen Pass successfully and reaching the lovely village of Splügen. For those who have not read the entire Canon, the ultimate honeymoon test will be found in "The Illustrious Client".

312. "I bear warmest felicitations from Her Majesty The Queen, Professor Stephen Hawking, James Bond, Sherlock Holmes, and the entire cast of Downton Abbey. I think that covers all the important people in England." That was the opening of the speech given at Hillsdale College's commencement ceremony this year by Michael Ward (fellow of Blackfriars Hall, University of Oxford, and professor of apologetics at Houston Baptist University), reprinted in the May/June issue of Imprimis (Hillsdale College's readers monthly). The complete speech is available on-line at www.tinyurl.com/nsylo18.

313. Jun 15 #4 There were some familiar names on the Queen's New Year's honors list: Benedict Cumberbatch was appointed CBE (Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire), for services to the performing arts and to charity, and Martin Clunes and Steven Moffat were appointed OBEs (Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire), for services to drama. In case you haven't been watching television, Benedict Cumberbatch plays Sherlock Holmes in the "Sherlock" series co-created by Steven Moffat. and Martin Clunes played Conan Doyle in the mini-series "Arthur & George".
314. Ralph Wroblewski ("Captain Teddy Marvin") died on Apr. 25. He had a long career as a teacher and principal in Catholic high schools in Cleveland, and in 1972 he was a founder and charter member of Mrs. Hudson's Lodgers of Cleveland, and served as their secretary. He received his Investiture from the Baker Street Irregulars in 1976.
315. "Sherlock Holmes: Consulting Detective" was first a board game (Dec 81 #3) and then a CD-ROM disk game (Dec 91 #1), and then a DVD game (Nov 99 #4). Now Flickering Myth has reported www.tinyurl.com/q9tvayk that Zojoi has remastered the three 30-minute games for PC on Steam. The Zojoi web-site for the game is at www.zojoi.com/sherlock.
316. On Oct. 15, 1969, The Times and the Daily Mirror reported (based on a dispatch from Reuters) that Moscow television seemed to think that Dr. Watson was a secret communist, noting that a television program broadcast in the Soviet Union the day before showed Watson reading the Morning Star, a Communist newspaper published in Britain. Alexander Orlov has discovered that the program apparently was a dramatization of "The Second Stain" (part of a longer program titled "Ministers and Detectives"); does anyone have additional information on the broadcast?
317. THE DEAD ASSASSIN, by Vaughn Entwistle (New York: Minotaur, 2014; 338 pp., $26.99) is the second novel in his series taken from "the paranormal casebooks of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle," and it has Arthur Conan Doyle and Oscar Wilde dealing with bizarre murders and a dire plot against the realm in a story that's more science fiction than paranormal. The author's web-site is at www.vaughnentwistle.com.
318. Transformative Works and Cultures (a journal published by the Organization for Transformative Works) has issued a call for papers for a special issue on "Sherlock Holmes Fandom, Sherlockiana, and the Great Game" (to be published in Mar. 2017); the deadline for submissions is Mar. 1, 2016, and you will find more information at their web-site www.tinyurl.com/nckrpor.
319. Patrick Macnee died on June 25. Best known for playing John Steed in the television series "The Avengers", he began his acting career in Britain at the age of 11 on stage in a production of "Henry V" (with a young Christopher Lee), and had a long list of film and television credits, among them Dr. Watson in "Sherlock Holmes in New York" (1976), David Worth (a psychotic former British secret agent who believes he's Sherlock Holmes) in "Magnum, P.I.: Holmes Is Where the Heart Is" (1984), Watson in "Sherlock Holmes and the Leading Lady" and "Sherlock Holmes: The Incident at Victoria Falls" (1992), and Holmes in the television film "The Hound of London" (1993).

320. Jun 15 #5: The spring issue of "For the Sake of the Trust" (the newsletter of the Baker Street Irregulars Trust) has news about the Trust, its new web-site, additions to the Archives at the Houghton Library, and an article by Harvard student George Mills on his research in the Archives for his senior thesis on the BSI as a pioneering fan community. The issue is available both at the Trust's web-site www.bsitrust.org and by e-mail; if you would like to be on the mailing list, send a request to Mike Berdan at editor@bsitrust.org.
321. David B. Pearce ("The Khalifa at Khartoum") died on June 1. He practiced ophthalmology in New York for more than 40 years, and enjoyed the arts, music, literature, sailing, and lacrosse. He received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1977.
322. Randall Stock has revised his "Best of Sherlock" web-site page for Sidney Paget www.tinyurl.com/qg6pdv9; he has added a few non-Sherlockian items, and (far more important) images of original artwork for some of the Sherlockian illustrations, so that one can see how wonderful his original artwork is. You can see much larger full-color images of artwork that was on view at the Museum of London in the spectacular "Catalogue of the Exhibition" that's available for purchase at www.bakerstreetjournal.com.
323. Congratulations to Scott Monty, who has reached the 1,000th entry on his "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog www.tinyurl.com/peb2bvz. The web-site and its podcasts are entertaining, interesting, and informative.
324. "Murder on the Bluebell Line" was a 35-minute program that was broadcast by BBC-1 in 1987; it was based on Charles Blinderman's book THE PILTDOWN INQUEST (1986), and starred Hugh Fraser as Holmes and Ronald Fraser as Watson (Hugh Fraser will be remembered as Hastings in the "Poirot" television series). You can watch the program now, thanks to Alexander Orlov, who has found the program at YouTube www.tinyurl.com/qy9bghe.
325. The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" will run through Sept. 7 at the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., and The Curious Collectors of Baker Street are presenting a Mini-Symposium at the Discovery on July 18, featuring Leslie S. Klinger, Laurie R. King, Bonnie MacBird, and Mary Platt; details at www.ccobs.org.
326. There has been progress on the television series "Houdini and Doyle" (Mar 15 #1). Stephen Mangan has been cast as Conan Doyle, and Michael Weston as Houdini; the executive producer is David Shore (creator of "House"). The ten-part mini-series is scheduled for broadcast next spring on Fox in the U.S., ITV Encore in the U.K., and Global in Canada. According to one report, Houdini and Conan Doyle "grudgingly join forces with New Scotland Yard to investigate inexplicable crimes with a supernatural slant."
327. Bonnie MacBird's ART IN THE BLOOD (London: HarperCollins, 2015; 306 pp., $25.99) takes Holmes and Watson to Paris and to bleak northern England in an attempt to rescue the illegitimate son of a French chanteuse, recover stolen art, and thwart a vicious criminal conspiracy. The author's website is at www.macbird.com, and she has helpfully supplied annotations for the book on-line at www.aitbnotes.com.

328. Jun 15 #6: The spring issue of The Magic Door (the newsletter published by The Friends of the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Reference Library) offers Peter Calamai's report on "Conan Doyle's Journalist Circles", Doug Wrigglesworth's investigation of "Arthur Conan Doyle and the South African War", and other news from and about the collection; copies of the newsletter are available from Clifford S. Goldfarb, 22 Markdale Avenue, Toronto, ON M6C, 1T1, Canada cgoldfarb@sympatico.ca.
329. The "tale in verse" has a long Sherlockian tradition, in the pages of The Baker Street Journal and other publications from the 1940s onward. Edgar W. Smith, Bliss Austin, and many others enjoyed presenting both the Canon and their own stories as poetry, and now Allan Mitchell has written SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE MENACING MOORS (London: MX Publishing, 2015; 122 pp., $8.95), bringing Holmes and Watson back to Dartmoor for

- another case, told almost entirely in poetic quatrains, and with a nice comment in the introduction: "Sherlock is as real as we want him to be." The publisher's websites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
330. Also from MX: Wendy C. Fries' SHERLOCK HOLMES AND JOHN WATSON: THE DAY THEY MET (2015; 302 pp., $18.95) is an entertaining collection of "50 new ways the world's most legendary partnership might have begun," short vignettes ranging from 1879 to 2015. Dick Gillman's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE JULIA MORIARTY TRILOGY (2015; 139 pp., $8.95) collects three stories about Holmes and Watson's confrontation with the evil professor's sister, who is trying to avenge her brother's death. GC Rosenqist's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE PEARL OF DEATH AND OTHER EARLY STORIES (2015; 222 pp., $14.95) offers ten short pastiches.
331. And as usual, there are theatrics to report: Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" will be performed at the Charity Randall Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., July 9-26 <www.kinetictheatre.org>.
332. The Namron Players are presenting "Plays Written by Kids (And Performed by Adults)" in the Andrews Park Amphitheater in Norman, Okla., on July 11-12. One of the plays is reported to feature "Sherlock Holmes rescuing all the penguins from an evil mastermind, even though Sherlock cannot pronounce the word 'penguin' himself." The web-site's at <www.namronplayers.com>.
333. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is scheduled at the Hangar Theatre in Ithaca, N.Y., on July 16-25 <www.hangartheatre.org>. Also at Portland Stage in Portland, Maine, on Jan. 26-Feb. 21, 2016 <www.portlandstage.org>.
334. The Filament Theatre Ensemble will present Jessica Wright Buha's new play "Sherlock Holmes and the Mystery of Portage Park" in Chicago on July 18-19 <www.filamenttheatre.org>; "Sherlock Holmes on bike or on foot, searching for clues in and around Portage Park."
335. Ed. Lange's "Sherlock's Secret Life" will be performed at the Pioneer Playhouse in Danville, Ky., July 21-Aug. 1 <www.pioneerplayhouse.com>.

Jul 15 # 1:

336. There's a nice two-minute trailer for William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1916), due for release in a Blu-ray/DVD set by Flicker Alley on Oct. 20, and you can watch the trailer at Scott Monty's "I Hear of Sherlock Everywhere" blog at <www.tinyurl.com/odlmpow>. If you weren't able to see the film when it was screened in Paris in January and in San Francisco in May, the Red Circle of Washington has arranged for a theater screening on Sept. 26 in Bethesda, Md.; tickets still are available, and you'll find more information at <www.redcircledc.org>.
337. On-line registration for GridLOCK DC in Washington on Aug. 8-9 has closed, but you can also register on-site <www.gridlockdc.org>. People coming from out of town may wish to arrive one day early to attend The Evil League of Ecdysiasts' presentation of "Sherlock Holmes: The Adventure of the Black Cat" <www.blackcatdc.com/shows/burlesque2.html> at 9:00 pm on Aug. 7 at the Black Cat. The promise of the League is "We do the weird stuff... And you can sing along."
338. Sorry about that: William Gillette's last appearance on stage as Sherlock Holmes was not in 1930 (Jun 15 #1), but rather at The Playhouse in Wilmington, Del., on Mar. 19, 1932.
339. It is nice to be able to report that Simpson's-in-the-Strand still is serving its traditional and properly British dinners (although meals cost more than they did when I first dined there some fifty years ago), and it likely will continue to do so. Rumors of possible changes to the restaurant (Feb 15 #3) caused some concern earlier this year, but it appears that management only is seeking to provide late-night and early-morning music in the restaurant's upstairs rooms.
340. Ben Gibson's THE GHASTLY DANDIES DO THE CLASSICS (New York: Penguin Young Readers, 2013; 64 pp., $17.95); spotted by Evy Herzog in a bargain bin at Staples, the classics in the book include Sherlock Holmes (with six pages on "The Dancing Men"), and the artworks imaginative (and you should take a close look at the cover).
341. BBC Radio 4 Extra is broadcasting a "True Crime" series of repeats of older programs, one of which is "Conan Doyle's Strangest Case" (the story of the George Edalji case, first broadcast in 1995, starring Peter Jeffrey as Conan Doyle). You can listen to their programs for a month after they air at <www.tinyurl.com/p5sq7mg>.
342. Richard Johnson died on June 6. He had a long career as an actor on stage, screen, radio, and television, and played Dr. Watson in Charlton Heston's television version of "The Crucifer of Blood" (1991).
343. Willy Werby has created two versions of the sitting-room at 221B, one for display at the restaurant S. Holmes, Esq., in San Francisco, and the other at the Grosvenor Resort Hotel at Disney World in Orlando. Both rooms are now in storage, and she is offering the second room for sale; you can see some nice images of the room at <www.holmesroom.com> (move your cursor to the top of the screen to open captions).
344. Jul 15 #2 "Kevin Spacey Fowler: 5 Fun Facts about the Actor," India.com announced on May 10, and one of those fun facts was: "It is because of Sherlock Holmes that Kevin Spacey got into acting. During a trip to London when he was 10 years old and after seeing a production of Sherlock Holmes, the actor made his decision to be what he wanted to be." The actor turned ten years old on July 26, 1969, and of course one wonders what production that was.
345. Alexander Orlov has reported an interesting video at YouTube: 38 minutes of behind-the-scenes footage from the making of Ian McKellen's "Mr. Holmes" at <www.tinyurl.com/pmjrv6s>; it's a fine look at what's involved in creating a movie. And don't neglect the links to interviews and trailers.
346. "Sherlock Holmes' Fictional Baker Street Home in London Subject to Ownership Mystery" was the headline on a story in The Independent (July 22) on who owns the block of property at 215-237 Baker Street, which includes the site of the former Abbey National, where mail addressed to Sherlock Holmes was for many years answered by Holmes' secretary. A non-governmental organization called Global Witness has reported that the property is included in a portfolio of real estate in London worth L147 million that's owned by someone with ties to Rakhat Aliyev, a former Kazakh secret police chief accused in the European Union of money laundering and murder. You can read the full report at <www.globalwitness.org>.
347. Laurie R. King reports that she has finished work on the next Mary Russell novel, THE MURDER OF MARY RUSSELL, due for publication in April. Laurie's excellent website's at <www.laurierking.com>; scroll down to Laurie's Muttering at lower right and read "This Is Mrs. Hudson?" to see what Mrs. Hudson was wearing in 1875.
348. The Sherlockian Calendar, maintained by Ron Fish and Sue and Ben Vizoskie, is at <www.sherlockiancalendar.com>; it's a helpful list of upcoming Sherlockian events, for anyone who would like to know what's happening when and where; you can contact Ron at <ronf404@aol.com> if you would like to have a meeting or conference listed. And Ron reports that the calendar is now on Twitter as @SianCalendar.
349. Phil Austin died on June 18. The official lead guitarist of the Firesign Theater, he was a co-author and performer on their album "The Giant Rat of Sumatra" (1974), which featured Hemlock Stones and Flotsam. You can listen to the album at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/ob85wsz>.
350. Georges Treville directed and starred as Sherlock Holmes in a series of silent films made by Eclair in 1912, and it's nice indeed that two of these old films have survived: "The Copper Beeches" (24 minutes) has been available for some time, and "The Musgrave Ritual" (18 minutes) was discovered a few years ago. Search for [georges treville] at <www.youtube.com> to see both films.

351. Oscar Ross has spotted a mention of Sherlock Holmes in the lyrics of B. A. Robertson's song "Bang Bang" issued by Asylum Records as a single in 1979. There's a promotional video at YouTube <www.tinyurl.com/psetzwc>, and Sherlockian artwork on the sleeve (which you can see easily at eBay).
352. Jul 15 #3 Adam Frost and Jim Kynvin have created an artistic and interesting graphic analysis of the Canon ("Sherlock Holmes: Examining the Evidence-in Charts"), published in the Guardian on June 30, and well worth examining at the web-site <www.tinyurl.com/pcst3dg>. Don't neglect their presentation of "Other Cases Are Referenced--Which Sound Far More Exciting Than the One We're Reading".
353. Mel Ruiz ("Jack Douglas") died on Feb. 25, 2014. Proud to be a fourth-generation Californian, he had many enthusiasms, including tennis, old movies, nature, photography, and of course Sherlock Holmes. He was a member of the Sherlockian societies in San Francisco, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1988.
354. Anne Martinetti's ALIMENTAIRE, MON CHER WATSON! was published in France in 2010 and is now out of print, but a Google search will turn up copies offered for sale, and it's well worth searching for: it's a delightful French cookbook, with many full-page full-color illustrations, Sherlockian as well as alimentary. The author talks about her book in a three-minute video at <www.tinyurl.com/qfh8ea4>.
355. Further to the report (Feb 14 #6) that CBS had syndicated the first season of "Elementary" about $3 million per episode, WGN America will start airing the series this fall in the cable channel's "Prime Crime" weeknights lineup. There's a trailer for the line-up at <www.tinyurl.com/pcomzsx>.
356. Buckminster Fuller was a protege and good friend of Christopher Morley in the 1930s, and a member of the Three Hours for Lunch Club, the Grillparzer Sittenpolizeiverein, and The Baker Street Irregulars, and he installed one of his Dymaxion bathrooms in Morley's "Knothole" writing studio in Roslyn on Long Island. THE SENSE OF SIGNIFICANCE: THE FRIENDSHIP BETWEEN CHRISTOPHER MORLEY AND BUCKMINSTER FULLER is a splendid tribute to the two men, written by Chris' daughter Louise Morley Cochrane, based on the Morley and Fuller papers and on long taped interviews with Fuller.
357. The 158-page book offers a fascinating look at their relationship, and it has now been privately published by her children as part of the celebration of the 125th anniversary of Morley's birth. A few copies still are available, and are being used to help raise funds for the Knothole: $25.00 for the book and $5.00 for shipping; you can contact Terry and Linda Hunt (516-596-1590) <18goldini95@gmail.com> to see if the book's available, and ask for payment details.
358. And with regard to the Three Hours for Lunch Club, Greg Ruby has posted at The Fourth Garrideb <www.fourthgarrideb.com> with new information about the Club's medal, together with commentary on the club by Christopher Morley.
359. Angela Misri's THRICE BURNED (Fierce Ink Press, 2015; 271 pp., CA$16.99) is the second in her series about the adventures of Portia Adams, a sequel to her JEWEL OF THE THAMES (Apr 14 #3); Portia has discovered that she is the granddaughter of both Dr. Watson and Sherlock Holmes, and that her mysterious guardian is Irene Adler, and continues to develop her talents as a detective. The book can be ordered on-line at <www.amazon.ca> and from the publisher <www.fierceinkpress.storenvy.com>.
360. Jul 15 #4 The DFN Foundation's plans to convert Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, into a school (Apr 15 #3) are continuing: the BBC reported (July 7) that a judge has ruled against an appeal by John Michael Gibson, from the Undershaw Preservation Trust, for a review of the Waverley Council's approval of the Foundation's plans. School project manager Norman Stromsoy welcomed the decision, and said that work on the site is "progressing very well," adding that the vast majority of the building has been maintained. Gibson said that he is taking legal advice on his next steps, and he has applied for an oral hearing in front of another judge.
361. The letter in which Agatha Christie wrote to Evelyn B. Byrne in 1966 that "All the Sherlock Holmes stories were enthusiasms of mine" (May 15 #2) sold for $2,250 (including the buyer's premium).
362. The series of thirty Conan Doyle letters pertaining to the Edalji Case that went to auction at Bonhams on Mar. 18 <www.tinyurl.com/m5y2h25> (Feb 15 #4) with an estimate of L20,000-L40,000 went unsold, but they were bought after the auction by the Portsmouth City Council (for L13,750), and have now been added to the Arthur Conan Doyle Collection. Michael Gunton, the Collection senior archivist, reports that a selection from the letters has been put on display at the Central Library <www.conandoylecollection.co.uk>.
363. Omar Sharif died on July 10. He began his acting career in Egyptian films and went on to stardom in "Lawrence of Arabia" (1962) and "Doctor Zhivago" (1965). He also was a highly-ranked bridge player, and with Charles Goren and then Tannah Hirsch, wrote widely-syndicated bridge columns that occasionally involved Sherlock Holmes.
364. Residents of Widecombe-in-the-Moor are campaigning to block installation of four towering mobile phone masts on Dartmoor, and Norman Cowling, chairman of the Dartmoor Preservation Association, has cited Dr. Watson, who wrote to Holmes that "when you are out upon its bosom, you have left all trace of modern England behind." Landscape enthusiasts point out that the L300,000 in public funding for each mast would give improved mobile coverage to just 47 residences, at a cost of L6,383 per property.
365. MX Publishing has announced a Kickstarter campaign to help cover the cost of creating a three-volume THE MX BOOK OF NEW SHERLOCK HOLMES STORIES with 60 stories whose authors have pledged all their royalties to the renovation of Conan Doyle's home Undershaw by the Stepping Stones school. David Marcum is editing the anthology, and you can contribute to the campaign at the Kickstarter web-site <www.tinyurl.com/nfxkpn>.
366. The Collector's Library <www.collectors-library.com> from CRW Publishing in London offers a lengthy list of titles in cloth-bound pocket-size editions, including the complete Canon in a boxed set of six volumes (L45.00) and as separate volumes: A STUDY IN SCARLET and THE SIGN OF THE FOUR (L7.99), THE ADVENTURES (L8.99), THE MEMOIRS (L7.99), THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES+THE VALLEY OF FEAR (L8.99), THE RETURN+HIS LAST BOW (L8.99), and THE CASEBOOK (L7.99), each volume with an interesting and instructive afterword by David Stuart Davies. THE BEST OF SHERLOCK HOLMES and SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE DARK MYSTERIES (L8.99 each) have introductions by Davies; he also has edited anthologies of crime, detective, and other stories for the Library.
367. Jul 15 #5 It made headlines in Britain when the BBC realized that it had paid thousands of pounds in royalties to a man who had the same name as actor Neil Fitzpatrick, who played John Horner in Peter Cushing's "The Blue Carbuncle" (1968) and died in 2008; the man who received the royalties said he had never cashed the checks, and the BBC said it was trying to contact the dead actor's estate to make amends.
368. Dean Clark recommends Nathan Gelgud's "An Illustrated History of Sherlock Holmes" (and so do I); it's an amusing tribute he posted (July 11) at Word & Film, a blog at the "intersection of books, movies, and television." You will find his post at <www.tinyurl.com/odcvq4j>.
369. Roger Rees died on July 10. He started his acting career on stage with the Royal Shakespeare Company, and went on to win Olivier and Tony awards for his performance in the title role in "The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby"; he had many other roles in film and television, and was Sherlock Holmes in the BBC's radio dramatization of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1988). He also was seen as Sherlock Holmes' friend Alistair Moore in two

- episodes of the CBS-TV series "Elementary" in 2012 and 2014. You can listen to him in "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at <www.tinyurl.com/ogsg78u> (the Crew of the Barque Lone Star offers a long list of Sherlockian radio).
370. The BBC has launched its first trailer for the "Sherlock" Christmas special with some intriguing homages to Granada's "Sherlock Holmes" series; you can watch the trailer, and read about the homages in Paul Jones' excellent article in Radio Times (July 10) <www.tinyurl.com/p5jasdt>. And there's some news from San Diego: Steven Moffat announced at Comic-Con that the Christmas special also will have a theatrical release.
371. Further to the item (Oct 14 #2) about Gerard Marcel Beaudoin III, who used the alias Quentin G. Stanhope (who was a character in Carole Nelson Douglas' "Irene Adler" novels) while he committed theft, identity theft, forgery, and tampering with a witness in Lincoln City, Ore., was sentenced to eight years in prison on July 22 after pleading guilty to seven counts of aggravated theft and ID theft. The judge ordered Beaudoin to serve the sentence without the possibility of parole. Beaudoin said that he planned to pay back his victims after earning a theology Ph.D. while in prison and then working as a college professor, but the judge said that he thought "the likelihood of your paying restitution is very limited."
372. Aubrey Morris died on July 15. He made his stage debut in 1944, performed in the West End and on Broadway, and went on to a long career as a supporting actor in film and on television; he played the Coach Driver in "The Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother" (1975).
373. Marvin Lachman's THE VILLAINOUS STAGE: CRIME PLAYS ON BROADWAY AND IN THE WEST END (Jefferson: McFarland, 2014; 254 pp., $45.00) is a comprehensive survey, organized by subject matter, with an extensive chapter on "Sherlock Holmes: Baker Street on Stage"; the book discusses more than 900 plays that have been produced from the 18th century to the 2013-14 season, and offers a fascinating look at a wide variety of criminous theater. The publisher's web-site is at <www.mcfarlandpub.com> (800-253-2187).
374. Jul 15 #6 Stephen Hunter is a journalist turned author (he won a Pulitzer Prize as a film critic for the Washington Post, and he has now written 18 novels), and his latest is a gripping and often-graphic account of Jack the Ripper's "autumn of terror," offering twists and turns aplenty and an imaginative solution to the mystery. I, RIPPER (New York: Simon & Schuster, 309 pp., $27.99) offers a well-written story, with many appropriate mentions of both Conan Doyle and Sherlock Holmes by characters who have read the just-published A STUDY IN SCARLET.
375. "We have not yet met our Waterloo, Watson," Sherlock Holmes said (in "The Abbey Grange"), and Britain has issued an attractive set of stamps honoring the bicentenary of the Battle of Waterloo. Conan Doyle, it should be noted, was quite familiar with the battle: his story "A Straggler of '15" was published in 1891 and dramatized as "A Story of Waterloo" for Henry Irving, who first appeared in the play in 1894 as Corporal Gregory Brewster, hero of the defense of Hougoumont (which is shown in the first of the six stamps, at upper left).
376. Greg Ruby has an interesting discussion of "2015 Coins and Medals Commemorating The Battle of Waterloo" at the web-site for The Fourth Garrideb; read all about them at <www.tinyurl.com/q6q5wp6>. The Brigadier Gerard also was at Waterloo, and earlier posts about that are at <www.tinyurl.com/ooa5ha4>.
377. John E. Stephenson, who sold Sherlockiana at eBay (as "houndbook") for many year, has retired and moved to Florida, and his sister Peggy Steele now is selling his collection in a series of sales lists, which you welcome to request from her at <elizmoll@comcast.net>; there are lists available so far for lapel pins, tie tacks, cuff links, comics, and coffee mugs, and there are more to come.
378. The Conan Doyle Estate lawsuit against Miramax and others charging that the new film "Mr. Holmes" infringes on the Estate's copyright (May 15 #5) has been settled out of court, according to a report in the Santa Fe New Mexican (July 16). Mitch Cullin, who wrote the book A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (on which the film is based) and shares credit for writing the film script, said on his Facebook page when the lawsuit was filed that it was "an extortion attempt pure and simple, brought on by the desire to make money once the film version of the book came to their attention," and he posted again on July 18, noting that the lawsuit succeeded in holding up the U.S. film tie-in edition of the book, which will appear soon.
379. Jul 15 #7 The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" runs through Sept. 7 at the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., and it's then scheduled at the Denver Museum of Nature & Science in Denver, Colo., opening on Oct. 15; at the Pacific Science Center in Seattle, Wash., opening on Oct. 13, 2016; and then in Sydney, Australia. The web-site for Santa Ana is <www.discoverycube.org>, and the web-site for the exhibition is <www.sherlockholmesexhibition.com>.
380. MY PARTICULAR FRIEND: A CHARLOTTE HOUSE AFFAIR, by Jennifer Petkus (Denver: Mallard Press, 2012; 297 pp., $14.00) offers six stories inspired by Jane Austen and set in Bath during war with Napoleon; Charlotte is a investigator whose deductive style echoes the Canon (and one of the stories has some amusing echoes of P. G. Wodehouse) <www.myparticularfriend.com>.
381. The Fourth Garrideb has scheduled its annual meeting in Chicago on Aug. 11, during the American Numismatic Association's World's Fair of Money; details are available at <www.fourthgarrideb.com>.
382. Susan Rice has reported nice news for those planning to attend the birthday festivities in New York in January: Moran's Restaurant, where the William Gillette Luncheon has been held since 1994, did close, but it has been reborn as the Fillmore Room (named for the San Francisco music hall, rather than the president), and the luncheon will continue to be held there.
383. Further to the review of MYCROFT HOLMES, the pastiche written by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Anna Waterhouse (Jun 15 #2), Alexander Wolff's excellent article "Kareem Abdul-Jabbar as Comfortable as Ever as a Public Intellectual" appeared in Sports Illustrated on July 6 <www.tinyurl.com/ph3b234>.
384. Michael King died on May 27. In the 1970s he and his brother Roger transformed King World Productions into a syndicator of television megahits that they sold in 1999 to CBS for $2.5 billion in CBS stock. Their most popular shows were "Wheel of Fortune", "Jeopardy!", and "The Oprah Winfrey Show", and at one time they owned the rights to the Rathbone/Bruce films; according to his obituary in the N.Y. Times, he once told an interviewer, "I love owning Sherlock Holmes. If anybody wants to run Sherlock Holmes, anywhere in the world, they have to call Roger and me. Isn't that wild?"
385. A page from the manuscript of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" was offered at eBay this month for $169,000 <www.tinyurl.com/o8s2moz>. It's the first page of Chapter XIII, and is listed as leaf H31 in Randall Stock's census <www.bestofsherlock.com/baskervilles-manuscript.htm>.
386. Ian McKellen's "Mr. Holmes" received excellent reviews, with a score of 88% on the tomatometer at <www.rottentomatoes.com>, where you'll find links to 128 reviews by critics. The film also did well at the box office, according to another useful web-site <www.boxofficemojo.com>, with a first-weekend gross of $2.43 million at 361 theaters, excellent for a film that did not "open wide"; Robert Downey Jr.'s "Sherlock Holmes" did open wide, and had a first-weekend gross of $62.3 million at 3,625 theaters. If you read (and remember) Mitch Cullin's A SLIGHT TRICK OF THE MIND (Apr 05 #2), you know that the film-makers made some interesting changes; it's a fascinating book, and there are new tie-in editions with cover art that shows McKellen.
387. Jul 15 #8 The "International Exhibition of Sherlock Holmes" runs through Sept. 7 at the Discovery Science Center in Santa Ana, Calif., and it's then scheduled at the Denver Museum of Nature & Science in Denver, Colo., opening on Oct. 15; at the Pacific Science Center in Seattle, Wash., opening on Oct. 13, 2016; and then in Sydney, Australia. The web-site for Santa Ana is <www.discoverycube.org>.

388. And there's more theater coming up: Brian Clemens' "Sherlock Holmes & the Ripper Murders" opened at the Devonshire Park Theatre in Eastbourne on June 30, and is now touring in Britain <www.tinyurl.com/pyfzcg>.
389. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) is scheduled at the Fortune Theatre in Dunedin from Aug. 8 to Sept. 5, and then will tour in New Zealand <www.fortunetheatre.co.nz>.
390. And at the Kamali Auditorium in Delhi, Aug. 22-23, and the Tata Theatre in Mumbai, Oct. 3-4 <www.in.bookmyshow.com>.
391. Raleigh Welch's new "Sherlock Holmes in the Raven's Court" will be read at the Paper Wing Theatre Fremont in Monterey, Calif., on Aug. 9, during the company's summer play reading series <www.paperwingtheatre.com>.
392. Jeffrey Hatcher's "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Suicide Club" will be presented by the Woy Woy Little Theatre at the Peninsula Theatre in Woy Woy, NSW, Australia, Aug. 14-30 <www.woywoylt.com.au>. And at the Acadia Repertory Theatre in Mt. Desert, Maine, Aug. 18-Sep. 6; their web-site is at <www.acadiarep.org>.
393. Melbourne Steam Theatre has scheduled "Sherlock Holmes: Era's End" (a new play) at the Mooroolback Community Centre in Victoria on Sept. 4-5, and at the Mezzanine in Melbourne on Sept. 18-19 (both in Australia); you can go to <www.facebook.com> and search for [melbourne steam theatre].
394. Steven Dietz's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Adventure" will be performed at the Sunset Playhouse in Elm Grove, Wis., Sept. 10-27; their web-site is at <www.sunsetplayhouse.com>.
395. Charles Marowitz's "Sherlock's Last Case" will be performed at the Colonial Players in Annapolis, Md., Sept. 4-26 <www.thecolonialplayers.org>.
396. Terry McCabe's dramatization of Nicholas Meyer's "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" will be performed at the City Lit Theater in Chicago, Oct. 12-Nov. 15 <www.citylit.org>.
397. I've long described this newsletter as six or more pages of whatever gossip I find appropriate, much of it quite trivial, but most of it Sherlockian or Doylean, and anyone who wants to do a word-search on a large (more than 13-MB) file of all of the text since March 1985 can now do just that, thanks to Steve Mason, who compiled the file, and will update it, and has kindly made it available for download from the Crew of the Barque Lone Star's website <www.dfw.sherlock.org/scuttlebutt-from-the-spermaceti-press>.

398. Aug 15 #1: William Gillette's 1916 film "Sherlock Holmes" will be screened at the Arlington Theatre in Santa Barbara, Calif., on Sept. 13 (accompanied by Dennis James on the theater organ) <www.tinyurl.com/oosoe6p> and at the Chicago International Film Festival, Oct. 15-29 <www.chicagofilmfestival.com>.
399. If you can't get to Santa Barbara or Chicago, and want to see the film in a theater, the way your grandparents or great-grandparents did, there also is the screening in Bethesda, Md., on Sept. 26, conveniently the morning after the next dinner meeting of The Red Circle of Washington; for details (and a link to the box office), go to <www.redcircledc.org>.
400. The three-part mini-series "Arthur & George" aired on ITV in Great Britain in March, starring Martin Clunes as Conan Doyle, with a script by Ed Whitmore based on the book by Julian Barnes; the script is inventive, but less than faithful to the book as well as to the actual events in the George Edalji case. The mini-series is scheduled on "Masterpiece" on PBS-TV beginning on Sept. 6.
401. "I had all the WILLIAM books by Richmal Crompton," John Mortimer recalled, "their covers picturing the hero with his cap and tie askew and his socks like concertina around his ankles. But I didn't really want to read about schoolboys, I had quite enough of them in real life. I much preferred to become the sage of Baker Street, wearing a dressing gown, playing the violin, and shooting the pips out of playing cards stuck up above the mantelpiece. That's from his contribution to THE PLEASURE OF READING, edited by Antonia Fraser, published in 1992, and now in a second (expanded) edition (New York: Bloomsbury, 2015; 345 pp., $18.00); it's an excellent book that allows you to read about how some fine writers discovered reading, and the books that inspired them.
402. THE MYSTERY WRITERS OF AMERICA COOKBOOK (Philadelphia: Quirk Books, 2015; 175 pp., $24.95) is edited by Kate White, who has assembled an assortment of "wickedly good recipes" from MWA members including Laurie R. King ("Mrs. Hudson's Coffee Sheet Cookies"), Ken Ludwig ("Lenore Schneiderman's Gourmet Quiche") and Lyndsay Faye ("Valentine Wilde's Chicken Fricassee"), there also is a sidebar from E.J. Wagner on "The Food Hound of Baker Street".
403. James Carlopio's SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE JULY CRISIS (London: MX Publishing, 2015; 148 pp., $9.95) is a story created with an interesting approach: he has used words, phrases, sentences, and paragraphs taken from the Canon to devise a new pastiche, resulting in a tale told very much in the style of Conan Doyle; some of the plot devices will be familiar, but Carlopio has succeeded in achieving what he calls "creative editing." The author has a web-site at <www.jamescarlopio.com>. And the publisher's web-sites are at <www.mxpublishing.com> and <www.mxpublishing.co.uk>.
404. Also from MX: SHERLOCK HOLMES AND THE SWORD OF OSMAN, by Tim Symonds (2015; 229 pp., $14.95) is set in 1906, with Holmes and Watson in Stamboul hoping to foil an attempt to topple the Ottoman Empire. Dean P. Turnbloom's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE RETURN OF THE WHITECHAPEL VAMPIRE (2015; 230 pp., $16.95) is the final volume in his trilogy about Holmes and Watson and their pursuit of the undead Baron Antonio Barlucci.

405. Aug 15 #2: Zach Dundas' THE GREAT DETECTIVE: THE AMAZING RISE AND IMMORTAL LIFE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 2015; 320 pp., $16.00) is a delightful exploration of the Sherlock Holmes stories and the world of Sherlockians; Dundas, at the age of 13, founded a correspondence society he called The Street Arabs and was published in The Baker Street Journal (Dec. 1988), and his book is entertaining and instructive: a well-written guide that will inform old hands as well as neophytes. Recommended.
406. There's a new line of imaginative vinyl Pop! figurines due from Funko in October: Sherlock Holmes (two versions), Dr. John Watson, Irene Adler, Jim Moriarty, and Mycroft Holmes; from Entertainment Earth <www.tinyurl.com/p67vz73> and the BBC Shop <www.tinyurl.com/nddx5fs> $9.99/L10.99 each.
407. David McLaughlin spoke at the Transatlantic Dialogues conference in Liverpool in July on "Imagined Histories and Intangible Heritages: Walking the World of Sherlock Holmes"; it was a delightful tribute to the travel books written by David L. Hammer, and you can read the paper at his "Travelling Histories" blog at <www.tinyurl.com/pqtdcea>.
408. Flicker Alley, the distributor of the Blu-ray/DVD set of William Gillette's "Sherlock Holmes" (1916) reports that the set will be multi-region.
409. W. E. Dudley ("The Papers of Ex-President Murillo) died on Nov. 14, 1995. Bill worked in industrial security and once wrote that "I am a retired investigator and am sure the Canon led me into that field." He contributed often to The Baker Street Journal, presided over The Travelers for Nevada, and received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1976.
410. "Conan Doyle Sues Own Estate from Beyond the Grave" was the headline on the report from Tweenhauken, Pa., tweeted on June 11 by Burt Wolder; it was the first in a continuing weekly series, and you can read all of the reports at <www.burtwolder.wordpress.com>.

411. "The legendary literary detective comes alive in the Sherlock Holmes Tarot" is the announcement from Aeclectic Tarot <www.tinyurl.com/nzswowe>, noted by Oscar Ross; the cards are colorful and artistic, and the web-site offers links to tarot card meanings and stories. The pack contains 79 Sherlockian cards and a 160-page illustrated guidebook.
412. A major exhibition on "The Power of Poison" opened at the Denver Museum of Nature & Science on July 10 and runs through Jan. 10, 2016; it's reported to be informative and interesting, and of course poisons in the Canon are not neglected <www.dmns.org/the-power-of-poison>.
413. Plan well ahead for "Michael Chabon and Sherlock Holmes" at the Peter Jay Sharp Theater at Symphony Space in New York on Dec. 9; it will be the live recording of "Selected Shorts" (a weekly radio series distributed by Public Radio International and available as a podcast). Chabon, author of THE FINAL SOLUTION: A NOVEL OF DETECTION (2004), "hosts and curates an evening of readings from some of the most sensational and confounding cases of Sherlock Holmes" <www.selectedshorts.org/onstage/detail/8854>.

414. Aug 15 #3: "Call yourself a Cumberfan or a Cumberbitch?" BBC Radio 4 asks. "See how much you really know about bounteous Benedict with our Cumberquiz." It's a brief and amusing quiz, with a link to his performance as the young Rumpole in "Rumpole of the Bailey" <www.tinyurl.com/ouwgu4p>. You may find that the BBC wants you to be in the UK, in which case you can use handy little software such as Hola! <www.hola.com> to be anywhere you want to be.
415. Cumberbatch's performance in the title role in the National Theatre's production of "Hamlet" is reported to be the hottest ticket in London, but you don't need to go to London to see the show: a recording will be screened in theaters in the U.K. and in other countries (including the U.S.) on Oct. 15 and later in the year; details at <www.tinyurl.com/pd2y3h4>.
416. The Royal Mail is installing 50 plaques on postboxes around the United Kingdom, each featuring a popular stamp associated with the area, and one of the postboxes is the one closest to 221B, located at 210 Baker Street at the corner of Melcombe Street; the plaque shows one of the commemorative stamps that honored Sherlock Holmes in 1993.
417. The Australian government is reported to have banned hundreds of mobile and web-based games that have "questionable content" (including "crude humor" and "scary elements"), and according to Ars Technica (June 30), one of the banned games is "Sherlock: Criminal Case" on Google Play. Titles that have been refused classification "cannot be sold, hired, advertised, or legally imported in Australia," but it's far from clear how the ban can be enforced in the modern era of digital distribution. Go to <www.play.google.com> to find the game; you can also search for [sherlock] to find many more games and apps (lots of them free).
418. George Cole died on Aug. 5. He began his acting career on stage in 1939, and became best known for playing Alistair Sim's crooked accomplice Flash Harry in the "St. Trinian's" films in the 1950s and 1960s, and Arthur Daley in the television series "The Minder" (1979-1994). He also played Josiah Amberley in Clive Merrison's "The Retired Colourman" on BBC Radio 4 (1995).
419. Greg Ruby reports that The Fourth Garrideb has issued a medal and a lapel pin, available at the society's web-site <www.fourthgarrideb.com>; if you order quickly you'll also receive one of the society's wooden nickels.
420. The Cresco Times ran a story on July 15 about Sherlock Shrimp: Elementary, My Dear <www.tinyurl.com/ovsagxk>; Sherill and Jeff Ryan own a shrimp farm in Ridgeway, Iowa, where they opened their business last year in a former elementary school. Their logo, which you can see at their Facebook page, also is nicely Sherlockian.
421. It's out of print, but worth looking for: MANAGING THE MYSTERY COLLECTION: FROM CREATION TO CONSUMPTION was edited by Judith Overmeier and Rhoda Harris Taylor for the Haworth Press in 2004, and it includes articles by Victoria Gill ("The Arthur Conan Doyle Collection at the Toronto Public Library") and Timothy J. Johnson ("The Adventure of the Unopened Box: Building the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the University of Minnesota Libraries").

422. Aug 15 #4 THE FIFTH HEART, by Dan Simmons (New York: Little, Brown, 2015; 617 pp., $28.00), is an unusual pastiche, set mostly in gildedage Washington and featuring Sherlock Holmes and Henry James. The mystery involves the death of Clover Adams; a cast of characters that includes Henry Adams, John Hay, Clarence King, Samuel Clemens; and the attempted assassination of Grover Cleveland. And the book is intriguing metafiction, with Sherlock Holmes occasional wondering whether he's really a fictional character in stories written by Watson (or perhaps Conan Doyle).
423. Dan Stashower discovered "Veglock" (British artist Red Scharlach's tribute to the BBC series); obviously she's a candidate for membership in The Pawky Humorists. You can see her artwork (and her puns) at <www.tinyurl.com/99c6n4m> much larger and in full color.
424. Les Klinger has reported J. Redding Ware's PASSING ENGLISH OF THE VICTORIAN ERA: A DICTIONARY OF HETERODOX ENGLISH, SLANG, AND PHRASE [1909]; the book offers 271 pages in which one can explore words and phrases that the author calls "fugitive language," and it's nice indeed that it's all digitized at <www.tinyurl.com/qxulaec>. Sherlockians may be interested to find that the Pink 'un had competitors that included the Brown 'un and the Blue 'un, and there likely will be other discoveries to be made.
425. GridLOCK DC in Bethesda on Aug. 8-9 was an interesting conference, and it's more than likely to repeat next year; about 200 people on hand, with a variety of panels and a fashion show/costume contest (the best of show award went to Basil of Baker Street). Go to <www.gridlockdc.com> to see details on the programming and the conference in general.
426. "It's my understanding that naked women generally don't carry knives" is a great opening sentence for a story. The best opening sentences are those that encourage the reader to continue reading ("To Sherlock Holmes she is always the woman" is a more familiar example), and you will find both the naked woman and the knife at the beginning and at the end of S. G. Browne's LUCKY BASTARD (New York: Gallery Books, 2012; 358 pp., $15.00), reported by Samantha Wolov. The book features Nick Monday, a San Francisco private investigator who's also a luck poacher and has a sidekick who wants to be the Watson to Monday's Holmes. Browne, who also has written about zombie gigolos and alien sex toys, presides over an entertaining web-site and blog at <www.sgbrowne.com>.
427. Karen Murdock found the "221 Bakery Street" web-site ("a place for Sherlock inspired food, drinks, and recipes") <www.sherlockfood.tumblr.com>; scroll down to see Red Scharlach's amusing "Sherl-ices". Beth Gallego also noted an imaginative "221B Bakery Street" T-shirt designed by Themoreiarty at the Qwertee web-site <www.tinyurl.com/noz32bx>.
428. Ray and Joan Betzner visited New Jersey recently and discovered Spermaceti Cove, which turns out to be the only geographic feature with the name Spermaceti in the United States officially recognized by the U.S. Board of Geographic Names; it also was the site of the Spermaceti Cove Life-Saving Station, the first station in the country, erected in 1848. The proprietor of the Spermaceti Press is of course glad that it's so official and historic.

429. Aug 15 #5 Scott Palmer's SHERLOCK HOLMES: THE BASIL RATHBONE YEARS & OTHER FILMS (Bloomington: Xlibris, 2015; 242 pp., $131.99 (hard-cover) $121.99 (softcover) $24.99 (e-book) is a well-illustrated filmography with detailed synopses, thumbnail portraits, and screenshots; there are samples at <www.tinyurl.com/ornb3j6> and <www.sherlockholmesonscreen.com>.

430. J. Devereaux deGozzaldi ("The Speckled Band") died on Aug. 18. Dev was an advertising sales manager for Newsweek, and after retirement he devoted his time to restoring antique cars, sailing, and serving as a part-time member of the board of directors of a bank. He joined The Speckled Band of Boston in 1958, and was for many years its devoted Poker (secretary); he received his Investiture from The Baker Street Irregulars in 1980.
431. THE RIVALS OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: A COLLECTION OF VICTORIAN DETECTIVE TALES, edited by Stefan Dziemanowicz (New York: Fall River Press, 2015; 707 pp., $7.98 at Barnes & Noble), offers an introduction by Leslie S. Klinger and 40 stories (including six Sherlockian satires and homages) published from 1845 to 1916.
432. Underground Toys has a new "Sherlock" articulated action figure, with his violin, skull, and mobile phone, 5 inches high ($19.95 pre-order<www.bigbadtoystore.com>).
433. An "international celebration of Jeremy Brett's life, love, and laugh" is set for Sept. 12 (the 20th anniversary of his death) at Clapham Common (his last home was a penthouse flat with views of the Common), where a com-memorative bench will be dedicated, and tributes paid by his colleagues and friends. And Wyndham's Theatre has offered access that morning to the Royal Circle Bar that morning to view a commemorative plaque and a display of Keith Harding's photographs of Brett and Edward Hardwicke in "The Secret of Sherlock Holmes". Details at <www.tinyurl.com/nk5t4kc>.
434. It is always nice when a Sherlockian society can celebrate one of its founders: Freda Pearce helped mount the Sherlock Holmes Exhibition for the Festival of Britain in 1951 and then (with Jack Thorne, Anthony Howlett, and Colin Prestige) founded The Sherlock Holmes Society of London. She married Tony Howlett, served as president of the Society, and now, at the age of 97 Freda Howlett has written the preface for a book to be published next year in honor of the Society's 65th anniversary.
435. The argument over converting Undershaw, Conan Doyle's former home, into a school (Jul 15 #4) is not over: a High Court judge has granted John Gibson, director of the Undershaw Preservation Trust permission to mount a full judicial review challenging the Waverley Council's approval of the DFN Foundation's plans. Gibson's attorney said that the council had shown a "cavalier disregard" for Undershaw's "irreplaceable" status, and the judge ruled that the complaints were "at least arguable." A Council spokesman said "we are disappointed that the judge has determined that the case is to be heard and a full hearing is to take place, despite the fact that the High Court previously supported the council decision to grant planning permission." A statement from the DFN Foundation said that "we will continue to repair Undershaw and build our school," and that "we trust that the court will throw out this ridiculous case."

436. Aug 15 #6 Dorling Kindersley's Eyewitness Travel Guides have long been a standby for travelers to just about anywhere. Now part of Penguin Random House, DK also publishes a long list of Visual Guides on subjects such as Shakespeare, science, politics, religion, and (now) Sherlock Holmes. THE SHERLOCK HOLMES BOOK (2015; 352 pp., $25.00) has David Stuart Davies and Barry Forshaw as consultant editors, and provides an enjoyable guide to the Canon and to the world of Sherlock Holmes.
437. September will be "Conan Doyle Month" at Groombridge Place, with "Sherlock Holmes and The Valley of Fear" guided tours, a Sherlock Holmes murder mystery and dinner, and "Remembering Conan Doyle" theater evenings; details at <www.groombridgeplace.com>.
438. The British (region 2) Blu-ray/DVD of Ian McKellen's "Mr. Holmes" will be released on Oct. 26. No word yet on when the U.S. release will be.
439. The Second Street Irregulars, are a non-Sherlockian society that describes themselves at their web-site as "armchair sleuths dedicated to solving the Borden Case of 1892." They have annual awards, an official mutton-eaters song, and interesting web-site video <www.secondstreetirregulars.com>.
440. "Both were oddballs who took refuge in detective novels, and they quickly bonded over their mutual love of Sherlock Holmes and the Rover Boys," according to Alexandra Alter's story in the N.Y. Times (Aug. 9) about Harper Lee and Truman Capote, reporting on Greg Neri's novel "Tru and Nelle" due from HMH Books for Young Readers in March (spotted by Ray Betzner).
441. "A luxurious large-scale flock design of a dark-chocolate fleur-de-lys motif within a trellis pattern" is the manufacturer's description of the "Sherlock Wallpaper Ladies' Tank Top" spotted by Pam Weiner at Think Geek ($24.99) <www.tinyurl.com/oyd758m>.
442. Peter L. Stern <www.sternrarebooks.com> is offering some interesting Sherlockiana and Doyleana: copyright editions (duplicates once held by the Library of Congress) of Conan Doyle's WESTERN WANDERINGS (1915), THE EVIDENCE FOR FAIRIES (1921), and THE MARACOT DEEP AND OTHER STORIES (1929); and two archives of correspondence, one of his letters to Major Pond (who managed Conan Doyle's lecture tour of the U.S. in 1894), and the other of letters to H. Greenhough Smith (his editor at The Strand Magazine) in which he praises P. G. Wodehouse's "Psmith" series and discusses THE LOST WORLD.
443. THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (New York: Barnes & Noble, 2014; 416 pp., $10.00) is the latest in the store's colorfully-bound gift editions, with six short stories, "The Hound of the Baskervilles", and 27 illustrations by Sidney Paget.
444. The Arthur Conan Doyle/Sherlock Holmes Symposium at the Newberry Library in Chicago on Oct. 24, starting at 9:00 am, is open to the public with no admission charge; the speakers will be Zach Dundas (author of THE GREAT DETECTIVE) on "Cracking the Casebook" and Tim Johnson (curator of the Sherlock Holmes Collections at the Univ. of Minnesota) on "Is It Always 1895?" There's more information at <www.newberry.org/programs-and-events>.

445. Aug 15 #7 More and more Sherlockian societies now have web-sites, and you will find a comprehensive set of links at Chris Redmond's "web portal about the Great Detective" at <www.sherlockian.net>; click on [fans, societies, events]. You might also click on [the original Sherlock Holmes stories] to see what people have had to say about the Canon (don't neglect "Redmond's Delicate Question" for each story); his links can be weird and wonderful: if you explore "The Hound of the Baskervilles" you will find a link to Laura Lyons as Playmate of the Month.
446. "Masterpiece" repeated the second season of "Sherlock" this month, and the on-line promotion <www.tinyurl.com/p9qeljv> included a selection of video features and an observation game, all possibly still available.
447. Ray Jessel died on July 17. Best known to Sherlockians as one of the authors of the musical "Baker Street" (1965), he had a long list of credits as writer and story editor for television series that included "The Love Boat" and "The Carol Burnett Shows". He attended (and performed at) the annual dinner of The Baker Street Irregulars in 2010. You can hear him perform "A Married Man" at <www.tinyurl.com/qcxmbbv>.
448. The Sherlock Holmes Dragon, designed by Valerie Osment for the GoGo Dragons 2015 festival in Norwich (Apr 15 #8) will be displayed until Sept. 5 and will be auctioned for charity on Oct. 1. There's a larger image of Dragon Sherlock (#54) in a story in the Eastern Daily Press <www.tinyurl.com/qeq4j7h>.
449. The Solitary Runners of Sherlock Holmes is a virtual race club focused on Sherlock Holmes, and its goals include promoting physical activity, giving fans the chance to earn exclusive limited-edition medals, and donating money to worthy charities. Their motto is "Run if convenient...if inconvenient, run anyway," and you can enroll on the society's mailing list with a request to Nea Dodson at <solitaryrunners@outlook.com>.
450. The Vista sports bar Wild Hare in Columbia, S.C., has closed, but it will reopen in the fall as the Irish pub Moriarty's, named after the evil professor, according to an article in the Columbia State (Aug. 15).

451. Adam Christopher's ELEMENTARY: THE GHOST LINE (London: Titan Books, 2015; 319 pp., $7.99) is "based on the CBS television series," with a new story that captures the flavor and style of the series. BLOOD AND INK is due in Feb. 2016, and a third title is planned <www.adamchristopher.ac>.
452. "Sherlock Holmes & the Internet of Things" <www.sherlockholmes.io> is described as an attempt "to build a massive connected crime scene consisting of smart story-telling objects," sponsored by the Columbia University Digital Storytelling Lab for people who want to participate in a "massive connected crime scene, with a global challenge set for Oct. 24-25, according to a story in Variety (Aug. 18).
453. Registration for the 56th annual running of the Chicago Silver Blaze (the world's oldest and still-active annual Sherlockian horse race) at the Hawthorne Race Course on Oct. 17 is now open; details are available from Susan Diamond <szdiamond@comcast.net>.

454. Aug 15 #8 The "How I Got Started" department in the summer issue of Fine Books & Collections has a nice interview with Ray Betzner, who talked about Sherlock Holmes and Vincent Starrett, and the magazine has an excellent web-site at <www.finebooksmagazine.com> (although the interview isn't yet available on-line). Ray's own web-site "Studies in Starrett" also is well worth a visit <www.vincentstarrett.com>.
455. Dramatic news: John Chaffin's "Sherlock Holmes: The Final Problem and The Empty House" is being performed at the Backstage at Chaffin's Barn Dinner Theatre in Nashville, Tenn., through Sept. 12 <www.dinnertheatre.com>.
456. "The Improvised Adventures of Sherlock Holmes & Dr. Watson" (a weekly series) began at the Under the Gun Theater in Chicago on July 9 and will continue through Oct. 29 <www.undertheguntheater.com>; their web-site includes a link to Watson's blog, which recaps previous performances.
457. The Raconteur Radio troupe will perform their radio play "Sherlock Holmes and the Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Kearny Public Library in Kearny, N.J., on Sept. 12 <www.kearnylibrary.org>.
458. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" (the excellent parody by Steven Canny and John Nicholson) will be performed at the Mountain Playhouse in Jennerstown, Pa., Sept. 15-27 <www.mountainplayhouse.com>.
459. Madeleine George's "The (Curious Case of the) Watson Intelligence" will be performed at Theater Wit in Chicago, Sept. 17-Nov. 14 <www.theaterwit.org>.
460. The American Lyric Theater has scheduled "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Fallen Giant" (a new opera by composer Evan Meier and librettist E. M.
